A hawk can spy a lark upon a piece of earth almost exactly the same color at twenty times the distance it is perceptible to a man or dog; a kite soaring out of human sight can still distinguish and pounce upon lizards and field mice on the ground; and the distance at which vultures and eagles can spy out their prey is almost incredible. Recent discoveries and especially Darwin's observations, have inclined naturalists to the belief that birds of prey have not the acute sense of smell with which they were once accredited. There acute sight seems better to account for their actions, and they appear to be guided by sight alone as they never sniff at anything, but dart straight at the object of their desire. Their counterparts in the ocean, however, undoubtedly see and smell equally well, but are more guided by smell than sight. In both sharks and rays the eyes are good, and have a most distinct expression; though since they scent their prey from a distance, and swim up to it with great rapidity, "smell" as Lacepede says, "may be called their real eye." Smell, in Mr. Herbert Spencer's definition, is anticipatory taste, while sight is anticipatory touch; and the manner in which sight, as the dominating sense, is substituted for smell, the higher the evolution of the animal, is remarkably interesting to follow, once the varieties of sight are understood, and both sight and smell are studied in connection with the particular habits of the creature for which they were designed. Turn where we will, sight and organs of sight are everywhere adapted in the most perfect manner to the necessities of the animal world: and in realizing this fact, we realize the truth of the words: "The first wonder is the offspring of ignorance; the last is the parent of adoration.

Steel when hardened, decreases in specific gravity, contracts in length, and increases in diameter.

One of the most important requisites of home-life, and one perhaps most frequently overlooked, is the intimacy that should exist between the parent and the child. This is indeed the foundation on which all good influences may be most securely laid. The control which is obtained through fear, or force, or bare authority, has not abiding in it. As soon as the fear is outgrown or the force removed, its power will pass away. But the influence which is at work where real sympathy and friendship exist between parents and children will abide long after the relation itself is severed, and will enter as a powerful factor into the whole life.

This is a good story of Bishop Wilberforce. The Bishop was travelling on the Great Western railway, in one of the old-fashioned broad-gauge carriages, and was seated at one end of it, when he heard a truculent voice at the other end exclaim, "I would dearly like to meet the Bishop of Oxford. I will be bound I would puzzle him." "Very well," replied the Bishop to the speaker, who had not perceived him, "now is your time, for I am that person." The man was taken aback, but quickly recovering, said, "Well, my lord, can you tell a plain man, a plain way to get to heaven?" "Certainly," replied the Bishop; "nothing is more easy. You have only to turn at once to the right, and go straight forward."

During his many travels through the country Mr. Beecher was in the habit of sleeping in a blanket-bag when in railroad cars and railroad stations at night. The bag consisted of a plush blanket sewed up the side and the bottom, and was used because it kept off the draughts. The distinguished preacher did not disdain to more loudly at times. He was always in search of useful information. At a malt-house in Geneva, New York, while waiting for a train, he astonished the proprietor by his information concerning the various grades of malt, and he once told a nurseryman at Rochester more about trees than the latter had ever thought of. Major Pond, who travelled with him off and on for thirteen years, declares that he was destitute of ambition, and that his leading purpose was to acquire truth and transmit it.

Little Brother Bill.

BY MISS L. HENRY.

"Please buy some cress, a penny jus;
You'll like 'em if you will,
Then I can buy an orange, sir,
For little brother bill.

"You see we're all alone, now, sir,
For father's gone away,
And mother she's in Heaven, sir,—
Least so the folks all say.

"And Bill, he seems so tired like now,
His lips so hot and dry,
And if you'd see 'em hands of his,
'Twould make you almost cry.

"And when I left this mornin', sir,
He looked so tired and white,
I vowed I'd get an orange sir,
If for it I'd to fight.

"They cost a big five cents, you see
I'd like to get him two;
I've never made a cent to-day,
I don't know what I'll do.

It knocks me all to pieces, sir,
To see him lyin' there,
His eyes, like mother's, big and bright
But, oh! so damp his hair.

"Its time I'd been to see him now,
I'm sure he'll feel real bad.
For when I left this mornin' 'deed
A crust was all he had.

"I gathered these this mornin', sir,
They're nice and fresh you see;
I covered them with this wet moss,
And stood beneath this tree.

"You'll take them all? Oh, thank you, sir
How Billy's eyes will shine,
Them oranges will be more to him,
Than any big gold mine.

"Come home with me? yes, if you like,
There ain't much though, to see,
A broken chair and little bed
It just holds Bill and me.

"We use the chair as table, and
The bed is good enough;
For standin' round like this, you know,
It makes a fellow tough.

"Just wait a moment, I'll be back,
They sell the oranges there;
My! won't they be a jolly treat
To spread on Billy's chair.

"Yes; this is where we live sir, wait,
I guess I'll go ahead;
I've always got to lift Bill up,
And let him sit in bed.

"He's gone asleep, I know he's tired.
Here Bill! wake up and see,
I'm 'fraid he's pretty sound this time
Bill! Bill! it's time for tea!"

The stranger moved the lad aside,
And o'er wee Billy bent;
He folded down the wasted hands,
And smoothed the curls unkempt.

Then turned to his companion small,
Whil'st tears stood in his eyes—
"Wee Bill will never wake my lad He's gone above the skies."

The boy gazed at the silent form
His eyes with anguish wild,
Then with a great heart-rending cry,
Sank down beside the child.

The stranger took him to his home,
And o'er him watched with care;
But all in vain, his heart still ached,
Wee Billy was not there

And now they're lying side by side
Within the churchyard gates;
And one there is who pauses there,
And muses as he waits.

And fancies as he silent stands
That he can hear him still:
"Please buy! then I can get an orange
For little brother Bill."

Nesta.

BY ARCHIE MACK.

Away from the busy turmoil of life
Dwelt a couple infirm and old,
Their cheeks were furrowed with many a
Their forms were bent, and gray their hair,
For sorrow had stamped its impress there.
But their hearts were far from cold.

In that hidden nook a maiden fair,
Gifted with beauty rich and rare,
And used to trouble, toil, and care,
Was these old people's stay.
A foundling on their doorstep left,
Of parents, friends, and all bereft,
A pretty babe scarce six months old,
Left there to perish in the cold
One bleak December's day.

These good old people found the child,
And raised her as their own,
And well does she repay their care,
For with a love beyond compare,
This lovely creature, young and fair,
Makes gay their humble home.

Sweet Nesta is a winsome maid,
And counts her labors well repaid
By one endearing glance or word
From grandma, by the fire.
Oh happy, happy is the cot
Where content is the inmates' lot,
Happy the home where love and joy
Lacks mixture with the base alloy,—
Though humble is the cottage roof,
Blithe Nesta is a living proof
That claims of love ne'er tire.

Oh, may sweet Nesta always be
As winsome and as good
As she is now, and then she may Pass on her way without dismay,
From early morn till evening gray,
Nor fear the bad or rude.

Honeymooners Routed Out by Mice

Prince Bismarck's second son seems destined to bring before the world a disciple of the famous Piper of Hamelin. Count Will, who, since his recent marriage has exchanged his lively bachelor apartments for a retired life in some sombre ancestral castle, has had his honeymoon interrupted in the most prosaic manner by a formidable army of mice, which invested the place from cellar to garret, causing the greatest annoyance, and making life absolutely unbearable in the place. In the very height of time, when like the locusts of Pharaoh, "very greivous were they," a man presented himself before the Count and entered into a contract to the effect that he would cause every mouse to disappear as soon as he had been given 100 marks in payment. No sooner said than done; the mice vanished as if by enchantment, but Count Will refused to pay the money, the man soon after demanded his 100 marks on the plea that a servant had still seen a mouse at the stables. After demanding in vain to find the last of his vanished host, the charmer once more demanded, and was refused, payment as long as he could not prove the non-existence of the stable mouse. In despair, he went at last before the magistrates, and his case is now pending. Unfortunately, the castle where Count Will is residing is situated in a very lonely part of the country, where there is but little danger of the terrible revenge of the first famous rat-catcher being repeated.

In business, in politics, in all conceivable life, there are routine courses in which the world moves along without the least need of thinking. If the old ways are good and all right, and no man or woman should change for the mere sake of changing, however, there are obvious imperfections in the old, nobody should maintain the old simply because it is old.

BY ORDER OF THE LEAGUE.

CHAPTER V.

The weeping woman looked up, and beheld the loveliest face she had ever seen. The girl standing before her possessed all the attributes of southern beauty. Her hair, which was long and luxuriant, hung in one thick plait down her back, and lay in careless waves upon a forehead pure as chiselled marble; her face was full, with deep red flashed under the transparent skin; her features exquisitely moulded; whilst her eyes, deep as running water, conveyed an air of pride and power—a sense of passion equally capable of looking implacable hate or fondest love. They were commanding now, as the woman looked up into the stranger's face.

"Who are you?" she asked wonderingly.

"Men call me Isodore," the stranger replied in a voice singularly sweet. "I have no other name. Will you let me look at the coin you have in your hand?"

Never dreaming of refusing this request, the woman handed over the gold piece to the girl, who looked at it long and intently. Her eyes were hard and stern when she spoke again. "Where did you get this?" she asked.

"It was given me to stake at the table. I noticed that it bore some device, and I exchanged it for a coin of my own."

"It has no meaning to you! It is not possible you are one of us?"

"I do not understand you," the woman replied. "It is a curious coin. I have seen one once before—that is all I know of it."

"Listen!" the girl said in a hushed voice. "You do not comprehend what its possession means to you. It is the symbol, the sign of membership of the strongest political Brotherhood in Europe. If it was known to be in your possession, your life would pay the forfeit; it would be regained at all hazards. If one of the Brotherhood knew another had deliberately parted with it, I would not give a hair for his life."

"And he is in danger of his life!" the woman cried starting to her feet. "Give it me, that I may return it to him."

"No!" was the stern reply; "he does not get off so easily. We do not temper the wind thus to traitors.—Woman! what is Hector le Gautier to you, that you should do this favor for him?"

"He is a man and his life is in danger. It is my duty"——

"Mark me!" Isodore replied with stern emphasis. "I have not the eyes of a hawk and the hearing of a hare for nothing. I was opposite you in the saloon, and I know that something more than womanly sympathy prompts you. I saw the struggle in Le Gautier's face; I saw you start and tremble as he spoke to you; I saw you change the coin for one of yours, I saw you weeping over it just now. Woman! I ask again what is he to you?"

Slowly the words came from the other's lips, as if forced from them by some mesmeric influence. "You are right," she said; "for —heaven help me—he is my husband! I am Valerie le Gautier.—Now, tell me who you are."

"Tell me something more. How long has he been your husband?"

"Nine years—nine long, weary years of coldness and neglect, hard words, and, to my shame, hard blows. But he tired of me, as he tires of all his toys: he always tires when the novelty wears off."

"Yes," Isodore said softly, "as he tired of me."

"You!" exclaimed Valerie le Gautier, starting—"you! What! and have you, too, fallen a victim to his treachery? If you have known him, been a victim to his perfidy, then, from the bottom of my heart, I pity you."

"And I need pity."

For a short space neither spoke, as they sat listening to the murmur of the leaves in the trees, broken every now and then by the sounds of play or laughter within the glittering saloon. Isodore's face, sad and downcast for a moment, gradually resumed its hard, proud look, and when she spoke again, she was herself.

"We have a sympathy in common," she said. "We have a debt to pay, and, by your help, I will pay it. Justice, retribution is slow, but it is certain. Tell me, Valerie—if I may call you by your name—how long is it since you saw your husband till to-night?"

"Seven years—seven years since he deserted me cruelly and heartlessly, leaving me penniless in the streets of Rome. I had to live how I could; I even begged sometimes, for he has squandered the little money I brought to him."

"Do you think he knew you to-night?" Isodore asked.

"Knew me?" was the bitter response. "No, indeed. Had he known I was so near, he would have fled from my presence."

"He laughs at us, no doubt, as poor defenceless women. But time will show. I can ever find an hour in the midst of my great work to watch his movements. I have waited long; but the day is coming now.—Would you know the latest ambition of your honorable husband? He intends to get married again. He has dared to lift his eyes to Enid Charteris."

"Hector dares to marry again!" Valerie exclaimed, "and I alive? Oh, I must take vengeance, indeed, for this."

She drew a long breath, shutting her lips tightly. The passion of jealousy, long crushed down, rose with overwhelming force; she was no longer a weak defenceless woman, but a fury, maddened and goaded to the last extremity.

Isodore watched her, well pleased with this display of spirit. "Now you speak," she said admiringly, "and I respect you. All your womanhood is on fire within you to avenge the wrongs of years, and it shall be no fault of mine if they slumber again. Yes, your perfect husband designs to wed again."

"I believe you are a witch. You have roused my curiosity; you must tell me more than this."

"Hector le Gautier is in love," Isodore replied, a world of quiet scorn running through her words, "and, strange as it may seem, I believe true. An English girl—Enid Charteris, with the blue eyes and fair hair —has bewitched him, satiated as he is with southern beauty.—You look surprised! I have the gift of fern-seed, and walk invisible. All these things I know. The Order is to be betrayed when the pear is ripe, and the traitor will be Hector le Gautier. The price of his treachery will enable him to become respectable, and lead a quiet life henceforward with his loving, fair-haired bride. Poor, feeble, calculating fool!" The bitter scorn in these words was undescribable, and round the speaker's lips a smile was wreathed—a smile of placid unrelenting hate and triumph strangely blended.

"It shall never be," Valerie cried passionately, "while I can raise my voice to save an innocent girl from the toils of such a scoundrel!—Yes," she hissed out between her white clenched teeth, it will be a fitting revenge. It would be bliss indeed to me if I could stand between them at the altar, and say that man is mine!"

"He is ours," Isodore corrected sternly; "do not ignore that debt entirely. Be content to leave the plot to me. I have worked out my scheme, and we shall not fail. Five years ago I was a child happy on the banks of my beloved Tiber. It was not far from Rome that we lived, my old nurse and I, always happy till he came and stole away my heart with his grand promises and sweet words. Six short months sufficed him, for I was only a child then, and he threw away his broken plaything. It made a woman of me, and it cost me a lover worth a world of men like him. I told him I would have revenge. He laughed then; but the time is coming surely. I have a powerful interest in the Brotherhood; he knows me by name, but otherwise we are strangers. To-night, I saw my old lover in his company. Ah, had he but known!—Come, Valerie; give me that coin, the lucky piece of gold which shall lure him to destruction. Come with me; I must say more to you."

Mechanically, Valerie le Gautier followed her companion out of the Kursaal gardens, through the streets, walking till they got a little way out of the town. At a house there, a little back from the road, Isodore stopped, and opened the doore with a passkey. Inside, all was darkness; but taking her friend by the hand, and bidding her not to fear, Isodore led her forward along a flagged passage and up a short flight of steps. Opening another door, and turning up the hanging lamp, she smiled. "Sit down," she said, "my sister that is to be. You are welcome."

The apartment was somewhat large and lofty. By the light from the silver lamp, suspended from the ceiling in an eagle's beak, the stranger noticed the room with its satin-wood panels running half way up the walls, surmounted by crimson silk hangings, divided over the three long windows by gold cords; a thread of the same material running through the rich upholstery with which the place was garnished. The floor was paved with bright coloured woodwork of some mysterious design; and heavy rugs, thick and soft to the feet, scattered about sufficent for comfort, but not enough to mar the beauty of the inlaid floor. Pictures on china plates let into the hangings were upon the walls; and in the windows were miniature ferneries, a little fountain plashing in the midst of each. There was no table in the room, nothing whereon to deposit anything, save three brass stands, high and narrow; one a little larger than the rest, upon which stood a silver spirit-lamp, under a quaint-looking urn, a chocolate pot to match, and three china cups. There were cosy-looking chairs of dark massive oak, upholstered in red silk, with the same gold thread interwoven in all. A marble clock, with a figure of Liberty thereon, stood on the mantelpiece.

Isodore threw herself down in a chair. The other woman took in the scene with speechless rapture; there was something soothing in the harmonious place. "You are pleased," Isodore said with a little smile of pleasure, as she surveyed the place. "This is my home, if I can call any place a home for such a wanderer; but when I can steal a few days from the cares of the cause, I come here. I need not ask you if you like my apartments?"

"Indeed, I do," Valerie replied, drawing a long breath of delight. "It is absolutely perfect. The whole thing surprises and bewilders me. I should not have thought there had been such a place in Homburg."

"I will give you another surprise," Isodore laughed, "before the evening is over. I am the princess of surprises; I surprise even the followers who owe me loyal submission."

"Ah! had I such a paradise as this, I should forswear political intrigue. I should leave that to those who had more to gain or to lose by such hazards. I should be content to let the world go on, so that I had my little paradise."

"So I feel at times," Isodore observed with a little sigh. "But I am too deeply pledged to draw my hand back now. Without me, the Order is like an army deprived of its general; besides, I am the creature of circumstance; I am a sworn disciple of those whose mission it is to free the downtrodden from oppression and to labour in freedom's name." As she said these words, the sad look upon her brow cleared away like mist before the sun, and a proud light glistened in the wondrous eyes. Half ashamed of her enthusiasm, she turned to the stand by her side, and soon two cups of chocolate were frothed out of the pot, filling the room with its fragrance. Crossing the floor, she handed one of the cups to her newfound friend. For a moment they sat silent, then Isodore turned to her companion smilingly.

"How would you like to go with me to London?" she asked.

"I would follow you to the world's end!" was the fervid reply; "but there are many difficulties in the way. I have my own living to get, precarious as it is, and I dare not leave this place."

"I permit no difficulties to stand in my way," Isodore said proudly; "to say a thing with me, is to do it. Let me be candid with you, Valerie. Providence has thrown you in my path, and you will be useful to me; in addition, I have taken a fancy to you. Yes," she continued fervently, "the time has come—the pear is ripe. You shall come with me to London; you have a wrong as well as I, and you shall see the height of Isodore's vengeance." Saying these words in a voice quivering with passionate intensity, she struck three times on the bell at her side. Immediately, in answer to this, the heavy curtains over the door parted, and a girl entered.

She was Isodore's image; the same style and passionate type of face; but she lacked the other's firm determined mouth and haughtiness of features. She was what the lily is to the passion-flower. Her eyes were bent upon her sister—for she was Lucrece—with the same love and patient devotion one sees in the face of a dog.

"You rang, Isodore?" she asked; and again the stranger noticed the great likeness in the voice, save as to the depth and ring of Isodore's tones.

"Yes, Lucrece, I rang," the sister replied. "I have brought a visitor to see you.—Lucrece, this lady is Hector le Gautier's wife."

"Le Gautier's wife?" the girl asked with startled face. "Then what brings her here? I should not have expected"——

"You interrupt me, child, in the midst of my explanations. I should have said Le Gautier's deserted wife."

"Ah!" Lucrece exclaimed, "I understand.—Isodore, if you collect under your roof all the women he has wronged and deceived, you will have a large circle. What is she worth to us?"

"Child!" Isodore returned with some marked emphasis on her words, "she is my friend—the friend of Isodore should need no welcome here."

A deep blush spread over the features of Lucrece at these words, as she walked across the room to Valerie's side. Her smile was one of consolation and welcome as she stooped and kissed the other woman lightly. "Welcome!" she said. 'We see both friends and foes here, and it is hard sometimes to tell the grain from the chaff. You are henceforward the friend of Lucrece too."

"Your kindness almost hurt me," Valerie replied in some agitation. "I have so few friends, that a word of sympathy is strange to me. Whatever you may want or desire, either of you, command me, and Valerie le Gautier will not say you nay."

"Lucrece, listen to me," said Isodore in a voice of stern command. "To-morrow, we cross to London, and the time has come when you must be prepared to assist in the cause.—See what I have here!" Without another word, she placed the gold moidore in her sister's hand.

Lucrece regarded it with a puzzled air. To her simple mind, it merely represented the badge of the Brotherhood.

"You do not understand," Isodore continued, noticing the look of bewilderment. "That coin, as you know, is the token of the Order, and to part with it knowingly is serious"——

"Yes," Lucrece interrupted; "the penalty is death."

"You are right, my sister. That is Le Gautier's token. He staked it yonder at Kursaal, giving it to his own wife, though he did not know, to put upon the colour. The coin is in my hands, as you see. Strange, how man becomes fortune's fool!"

"Then your revenge is complete," Lucrece suggested simply. "You have only to hand it over to the Council of Three, or even the Crimson Nine, and in one hour"——

"A dagger thrust will rid the world of a scoundrel.—Pah! you do not seem to understand such feeling as mine. No, no; I have another punishment for him. He shall live; he shall carry on his mad passion for the fair-haired Enid till the last; and when his cup of joy shall seem full, I will dash it from his lips."

"Your hate is horrible," Valeria exclaimed with an involuntary shudder. "I should not like to cross your path."

"My friends find me true," Isodore answered sadly; "it is only my enemies that feel the weight of my arm.—But enough of this; we need stout hearts and ready brains, for we have much work before us."

Three days later, and the women drove through the roar and turmoil of London streets. They were bent upon duty and revenge. One man in that vast city of four or five million souls was their quarry.

CHAPTER VI.

Mr. Varley, Sir Geoffrey Charteris' valet and factotum and majordomo in the baronet's town residence, Grosvenor Square, was by no means devoid of courage; but the contents of the note he was reading in the hall one fine morning early in May were sufficient to put to flight for the moment any vengeful schemes he was harbouring against the wily gentleman who has just quitted the house, and that gentleman no less a person than our old friend Le Gautier.

Timothy Varley was an Irishman, and had been in his youth what is termed a patriot. In his hot blood he had even joined a League for the "removal of tyrants;" but the League, in spite of its solemn form and binding oaths, had died a natural death. At times, however, the recollection of it troubled Mr. Varley's conscience sorely. It was destined to be brought to his mind now in a startling manner.

"G. S. I. You will be at the corner of Chapel Place to-night at nine. A girl will meet you, and show you the way. You are wanted; your turn has come. Do not fail.—NUMBER XI."

Never did Bob Acres, in that celebrated comedy, The Rivals, feel the courage oozing from his finger-tips as did Timothy Varley now. He turned the missive over in his fingers; but no consolation was to be derived from that: and bitterly did he revile the juvenile folly that had placed him in such a position at this time of life.

"It is no sham," he muttered to himself. "God save Ireland—that is the old countersign; and to think of it turning up now! I had forgotten the thing years ago. This comes of joining secret societies—a nice thing to bring a respectable family man to! Now, by the powers! who was Number Eleven? That used to be Pat Mahoney; and a mighty masterful man he was, always ready with his hands if anything crossed him. O dear, O dear! this is a pretty thing. Maybe they want to mix me up with dynamite; but if they do, I won't do it, and that's flat. I suppose I shall have to go."

Giving vent to these words in a doleful tone of voice, he betook himself to his private sanctum. His spirits were remarked to be the reverse of cheerful, and he declined a glass of sherry at luuch, a thing which roused much speculation below stairs.

Punctual to the moment, Timothy Varley stood in Chapel Place waiting for his unknown guide. Just as he was beginning to imagine the affair to be a hoax, and congratulating himself thereon, a woman passed him, stopped, and walked in his direction again. "God save Ireland!" she said as she repassed.

"Amen, not forgetting one Timothy Varley," he returned piously.

"It is well," the woman replied calmly, "that you are here. Follow me!"

"With the greatest of pleasure.—But hark here; my legs are not so young as yours: if we are going far, let us have a cab, and I'll stand the damage."

"There is no occasion," the stranger said in a singularly sweet voice. "We have not such a great distance to travel."

"Not good enough to ride in the same carriage with a gentleman's gentleman," Varley muttered, for he did not fail to note the stranger's refined tones.

His guide led him along Tottenham Court Road, and thence to Fitzroy Square. Turning into a little side-street, she reached at length a door, at which she knocked.

In a room on the first floor, Isodore and Valerie le Gautier were seated, waiting the advent of Lucrece and the stranger. Varley began to feel bewildered in the presence of so much beauty and grace; for Isodore's loveliness overpowered him, as it did all men with whom she came in contact. Scarcely deigning to notice his presence, she motioned him to a chair, where he sat the picture of discomfiture, all traces of the audacious Irishman having disappeared.

"Your name is Timothy Varley?" Isodore said.

"Yes, miss; leastways, it was when I came here, though, if you were to tell me I was the man in the moon, I couldn't say nay to you."

"I know you," Isodore continued, "You were born near Mallow, joined the United Brotherhood thirty years ago, and your Number was Twenty-six. If I am wrong, you will please correct me."

"For goodness' sake, miss—my lady, I mean—don't speak so loud. Think what might happen to me if any one knew!"

"No wonder your countrymen fail, with such chicken-hearts among them," Isodore observed scornfully. "I do not want to do you any harm; quite the contrary. There is an advertisement in to-day's Times. Your mistress is in search of a maid. Is that so?"

Timothy Varley began to breathe a little more freely. "Yes," he answered glibly; "she does want a maid. She must be honest, sober and industrious; ready to sit up all night if necessary, and have a good temper—not that Miss Enid will try any one's temper much. The last girl was discharged"——

"Now, Mr. Varley, I know a girl who must fill that vacancy. I do not wish to threaten you or hold any rod of terror over your head; but I shall depend upon you to procure it for my protegee."

The conversation apparently was not going to be so pleasant. Timothy Varley's mind turned feebly in the direction of diamond robberies.

"Well, miss—that is, my lady—if I may make so bold as to ask you a question: why, if the matter is so simple, don't you write to my young mistress and settle the matter that way?"

"Impossible," Isodore replied, "for reasons I cannot enter into with you. You must do what I ask, and that speedily. —You have a certain Monsieur le Gautier at your house often?"

This question was so abruptly asked, that Varley could not repress a start. "We have," he growled—"a good deal too often, to please me. My master dare not call his body his own since he first began to come to the house with his signs and manifestations.—You see," he explained, "servants are bound to hear these things."

"At keyholes and such places," Isodore smiled. "Yes, I understand such things do happen occasionally. So this Le Gautier is a spiritualist, is he; and Sir Geoffrey is his convert?"

"Indeed, you may say that," Varley burst out in tones of great grievance. "The baronet sees visions and all sorts of things."

"Is it possible," Valerie whispered to her friend, "that Hector has really succeeded in gaining an influence over this Sir Geoffrey by those miserable tricks he played so successfully at Rome?"

"It is very probable," Isodore murmured in reply. "This Sir Geoffrey is very weak in intellect.—Tell me, Mr. Varley," she continued, turning in his direction, "does the baronet keep much of Monsieur le Gautier's company? Does he visit at his rooms?"

"I believe he does; anyway, he goes out at nights, and always comes back looking as if he had seen a ghost. Whatever his game may be—and sure enough there is some game on—it's killing him by inches, that's what it's doing."

"And this change you put down to Le Gautier? Perhaps you are right. And now another question. Is not there another reason, another attraction besides discussing spiritualism with Sir Geoffrey, that takes him to Grosvenor Square?"

Varley so far forgot himself as to wink impressively. "You might have made a worse guess than that," he said. "I am not the only one who can see what his designs are. Miss Enid is the great attraction."

"And she?"

"Hates him, if looks count for anything. —And so do I," he continued; "and so do all of us, for the matter of that. I would give a year's salary to see his back turned for good!"

"Mr. Varley," Isodore said in grave tones, "I sent for you here to work upon your fears, and to compel you, if necessary, to do my bidding. That, I see, is not necessary, for we have a common bond of sympathy. For reasons I need not state here, we have good reasons for keeping a watch over this Le Gautier; but rest assured of one thing—that he will never wed your mistress. I shall hold you to secrecy.—And now, you must promise to get my protegee this situation."

"Well, I will do my best," Varley replied cheerfully. "But how is it going to be done, I really can't see."

"Irishmen are proverbial for their inventive powers, and doubtless you will discover a way.—The new maid is a French girl, remember, the daughter of an old friend. Perhaps you would like to see her?" With a gesture she indicated Lucrece, who came forward, turning to the Irishman with one of her most dazzling smiles. The feeling of bewilderment came on again.

"She!" he cried; "that beautiful young lady a servant?"

"When she is plainly dressed, as suitable to her lower station, she will appear different."

"Ah, you may pull the leaves from the flowers, but the beauty remains to them still," Varley replied, waxing poetical. "However, if it must be, it must; so I will do my best."

Varley's diplomacy proved successful, for, a week later, Lucrece was installed at Grosvenor Square.

(TO BE CONTINUED).

BABY'S BIRTHDAY.

A Beautiful Imported Birthday Card sent to any baby whose mother will send us the names of two or more other babies, and their parents' addresses. Also a handsome Diamond Dye Sample Card to the mother and much valuable information.

Wells, Richardson & Co., Montreal.

SNOW DRIFT THE FAVORITE! THERE IS NO BETTER! BAKING POWDER

The Snow Drift Baking Powder Co., [illegible] ford, On

GOOD LIVE AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY County in Canada. Address, FERRIS & CO., 87 Church St., Toronto.

STAMMERING—And all Impediments of Speech, removed for life. Cure guaranteed. Stammering Specialist. 26 Clarence St., Toronto.

AGENTS AND CANVASSERS wanted, Male or Female, whole or spare time, on salary or commission. Industrial Union of B.N.A., 45 Arcade, Toronto.

A NEW EMERY MOWER SHARPENER—Will sharpen the knife without taking it out. Every farmer will buy it. AGENTS WANTED CLEMENT & CO. TORONTO.

TORONTO CUTTING SCHOOL.—Gentlemen desirous of acquiring a thorough knowledge of garment cutting should apply at once to S. CORRIGAN, 122 Yonge St., Toronto. Terms on application.

THE BOILER INSPECTION and Insurance Company of Canada, Consulting Engineers and Solicitors of Patents, TORONTO. G. C. ROSS, Chief Engineer. A. FRASER, Sec'y-Treas.

BEAVER LINE OF STEAMSHIPS, Sailing weekly between Montreal and Liverpool. RATES OF PASSAGE:—Saloon, Montreal to Liverpool, $40, $50, and $60; Return Tickets, $80, $90, and $100 —according to steamer and accommodation. Intermediate and Steerage at lowest rates. For further particulars and to secure Berths, apply to H. E. MURRAY, General Manager, 1 Custom House Square, Montreal, or to the Local Agents in the different Towns and Cities.

GUELPH Business College, Guelph, Ont. Twelve States and Provinces already represented on the roll of this Institution. To thorough, practical instruction, and the efficiency and success of its graduates, this College owes its popularity. Circulars, giving terms, etc., mailed free. Address M. MacCORMICK, Principal.

GOLD, COMPOSITION GOLD, Antique Bronze, Natural Wood, and other Picture and Room Mouldings, Frames, etc. Paintings, Engravings Etchings, Artotypes, Artists' Materials, Mirrors, etc. Whole-ale and Retail. Trade Catalogue. MATTHEWS BROS. & CO., Toronto.

THE LONDON GUARANTEE AND ACCIDENT CO. (LD: OF LONDON, ENG. Capital, £260,000. Dominion Government Deposit, £55,000. Head Office: 72 King St East, Toronto. Gentlemen of influence wanted in unrepresented districts. A. T. McCORD, Resident Secretary for the Dominion.

Awnings! Decorated Window Shades, &c. Wholesale and Retail, at the CELEBRATED GOLD MEDAL TENT MANUFACTORY, 70 King St. West, Toronto. NATIONAL MANUFACTUR'G CO

SPOONER'S COPPERINE 'Babbitt'—Non-fibrous Anti-friction Box-metal for journal bearings in machinery—Guaranteed copper mixed. Supplies every requirement.—Ask your hardware dealer for it. ALONZO. W. SPOONER, Patentee and Manufacturer, Port Hope.

AGENTS WANTED APPLY TO D. W. BEADLE NURSERY CO. St. Catharines, Ont.

MEAT CHOPPERS. Washing Machines, 3 kinds; Clothes Wringers, 10 kinds; Mangles, 3 kinds. Churns, Carpet Sweepers, and other sundries. HAMILTON INDUSTRIAL WORKS CO., Hamilton, Canada. Send for article wanted, or Illustrated Catalogue.

WEBSTER'S Unabridged Dictionary. A DICTIONARY, 118,000 Words, 3000 Engravings, a GAZETTEER OF THE WORLD, of 25,000 Titles, and a BIOGRAPHICAL DICTIONARY, of nearly 10,000 Noted Persons, ALL IN ONE BOOK. Invaluable in every School and at every Fireside. Contains 3000 more Words and nearly 2000 more Illustrations than any other American Dictionary. G. & C. MERRIAM & CO., Pub'rs, Springfield, Mass.

CONSUMPTION. I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer. Give express and P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto

THE National ELECTRO & STEREOTYPE CO. 23 ADELAIDE ST. E., TORONTO. All classes of fine work. Mfrs. of Printers' Leads, Slugs and Metal Furniture. Send for prices.

FOR ONE CENT FARMERS, who want to settle their family around them. Tenant Farmers, who want a home of their own. Mechanics, wanting big pay. Capitalists, wanting safe investments. Business Men, who want to strike a business boom. Ambitious Men, who want a home and start in life—send postal card with address to J. M. HUCKINS, 96 King Street West, Toronto.

COWBOY'S IMPROVED

CARRIAGE TOPS Are famous for their style, convenience, durability, and cheapness. Buy no other until you see them. All the leading Carriage Builders sell them. Factory: 40 King West, TORONTO.

THE ALBANY STEAM TRAP CO.'S

SPECIAL BUCKET RETURN TRAP.

The Celebrated Hancock Inspirator.
Gresham's Automatic Re-starting Injector.
Morrison's Automatic Sight Feed Lubricator.
Engineers' & Plumbers' Supplies of every description. Send for circulars.
JAMES HORRISON, 75 & 77 Adelaide St. W., TORONTO

Legal.

P. McCullough,
BARRISTER, SOLICITOR, &c.
OFFICE—OVER McFARLAND'S STORE,
MARKDALE.
Money to Loan.

MASSON & MASSON,

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, &c.
OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block, Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week.
J. MASSON, Q. C. S. MASSON. W. MASSON.
N. B.—Private and Company's funds to invest at from 6 to 8 per cent

---

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.
Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.
N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate se curity.

WILLIAM STUART,
KIMBERLEY,
Issuer of Marriage Licences. Money to Loan on Real Estate at low rates.
A few Farms for sale. Terms easy.

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.
DENTIST,

GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at the Markdale House, Markdale, on the 1st and third Wednesday of each month and also at Munshaw's Hotel. Flesherton, the day following the third Wednesday in each month for the prac tice of his profession.

MARKDALE HOUSE,
MARKDALE, - - ONT.
J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

ISAAC STINSON.
Builder and Contractor
In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.
Estimates given. All work guaranteed.
Orders by mail promptly attended to.
329 Residence, MARKDALE.

W. G. RICHARDS,
BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT, Markdale.
1241y.

WEAVING.

Having returned to Markdale, in order to be more convenient for my customers, I beg to announce that I am now prepared to do all kinds of Custom Weaving. Residence old stand, opposite Presbyterian Church.
318 ARCH. BOYD.

R. J. SPROULE,
FLESHERTON.
Conveyancer, Appraiser, Valuator and Money Lender. Deeds, Mortgages, Leases and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice. Charges very low. Apply to
R. J. SPROULE,
Money Lender & Postmaster. Flesherton.

---

6 PER CENT.

Money loaned on Farm or Town Property at west rates of interest. Apply to
R. J. SPROULE,
Conveyancer & Postmaster. Flesherton.

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT 131 con. 3 west of T. & S. Rd. Artemesia. 50 acres, about 25 acres clear of stumps and stones, balance good hardwood bush Five miles from Markdale and four from Flesherton. For further particulars apply to A. S. Thompson. Flesherton P. O. or J. J. Thompson, Orilla.
342 ft

HAGYARD'S
YELLOW OIL
CURES RHEUMATISM

FREEMAN'S WORM POWDERS.

Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure, and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults.

THE ✱ MANDRAKE ✱ AND DANDELION LIVER CURE

HAVE YOU
Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Jaundice, Headache, Dizziness, Pain in the Back, Costiveness, or any disease arising from a deranged liver, DR. CHASE'S LIVER CURE will be found a sure and certain remedy.

NATURE'S REMEDY
The unqualified success of Dr Chase's Liver Cure in Liver Complaint rests solely with the fact that it is compounded from nature's well-known liver regulators, MANDRAKE AND DANDELION, combined with many other invaluable roots, barks and herbs, having a powerful effect on the Kidneys, Stomach, Bowels and Blood.

500,000 SOLD
Over one-half million of Dr. Chase's Recipe Books were sold in Canada alone. We want every man, woman and child who is troubled with Liver Complaint to try this excellent remedy.

SOMETHING NEW. GIVEN AWAY FREE
Wrapped around every bottle of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure is a valuable Household Medical Guide and Recipe Book (84 pages), containing over 200 useful recipes pronounced by medical men and druggists as invaluable, and worth ten times the price of the medicine.

TRY CHASE'S CATARRH CURE. A safe and positive remedy. Price, 25 cents.

TRY CHASE'S KIDNEY AND LIVER PILLS, 25 cts. per box.

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS
N. CHAMBERLIN & CO., Sole Agents, Bradford

Markdale Roller Mill.

FARMERS HAVING No. 1 WHEAT and preferring flour from their own wheat, can get it by bringing twenty bushels or more.

Flour always on Hand

Flour $3.80 to $4.20 per. bbl.

SHORTS, per ton -	$12.00
BRAN, " -	12.00

The highest market price paid for Fall and Spring wheat.
J. W. FORD.

Public Notice.

To all whom it may concern.

I R. L. Stephen the Druggist of Markdale have been appointed agent for JOHNSON'S celebrated Tonic and nervine. JOHNSON'S little liver Pills, and JOHNSON'S all healing White Ointment. The nervine is the very best in the market, in all diseases caused by poverty of blood, for Nervousness, Hysteria, and the PALENESS of Complexion so often noticed in female's, loss of appetite and general debility In conjunction with the Liver Pills, it is the very best for all diseases arrising from Torpid liver or bad stomach.

The White Ointment is the very best in the market for Salt Rheume, Barbers Itch, Pimples. Chafs, Burns, Scalds, and all Skin diseases of a scrofulous nature. Try thesefi n remedies and you will not be disappointed.

For sale at R. L. STEPHEN'S the druggist, Markdale, Ont.

WM. G. GUTHRIE,
Plain & Ornamental Plasterer
MARKDALE.
Arches, Cornices, Centre Flowers, and all kinds of plain and ornamental plastering executed at cheapest rates. Calsomining Lime Washing and Repairs promptly attended to.
330

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of
School Furniture,
Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness, wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P.O.
181 ANDREW McGILL.

MONEY TO LOAN.

ON real estate security, at low rate of interest, no commission charged. Business Strictly Confidential,
J. S. BLACK,
190 Pomona, P. O.

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT No. 24, con. 4, N. D. R. Glenelg, 100 acres, will be sold cheap and on easy terms of payment, for further particulars apply on the premises, or by letter to
J. S. BLACK,
190-tf. Pomona P. O.

Markdale Woolen Mill.

Custom Carding, Weaving, Fulling, Dyeing and cloth dressing, done in a workmanlike manner and on very short notice.

First Class Cotton Warp
supplied at the lowest possible rates.
A call solicited.
Terms strictly cash or wool.
Sept. 28, 1886 F. J. RITCHIE.

IT IS A WELL KNOWN FACT
—THAT—
McCOLL'S
"LARDINE,"
is the best known, and most reliable MACHINE OIL in the Dominion; Farmer's, Thresher's and Mill Owner's, will find it decidedly to their advantage to insist upon getting the "Genuine Lardine" when they ask for it, owing to so much inferior oil being sold under the same name by unscrupulous dealers. We are the sold manufacturers of the "Genuine Lardine" every barrel branded.
McCOLL BRO'S, & CO.
For sale in Markdale at Haskett Bro's, Hardware Store. 347-78

WANTED!

Clean Timothy Seed,
—HIGHEST—
Market Price Paid.
H. PARKER,
DURHAM.

Queen's Jubilee!

MARKDALE TO THE FORE

—A GRAND—EXHIBITION
—OF—GAMES & SPORTS
—IN—
MARKDALE.

Tuesday, May 24th, 1887.

When the following prizes will be awarded to successful competitors:

GAMES & SPORTS!

100 yds. Race	(Professionals only)	1st $5.00	2nd $2.00	3rd $1.00
100 " "	(Amatures only)	3.00	2.00	1.00
200 " "	Open	5.00	2.00
100 " "	Boys' under 15 years	1.00	75	25
100 " "	" " 10 "	1.00	75	25
100 " "	Ladies'	Pair Slippers
¼ mile "	Open	5.00	2.00
½ " "	Silver Cup	7.00	3.00	½ doz. Cabinet Photo's 200
Hurdle Race		2.00	1.00
Potato "		2.00	1.00
Three legged Race		2.00	1.00
Putting 14 lb. Shot		2.00	1.00
Putting 21 lb. Shot		2.00	1.00
Standing Jump		2.00	1.00
Running Jump		2.00	1.00
Running Hop Step & Jump		3.00	2.00	1.00
Running High Jump		2.00	1.00
Three Standing Jumps		2.00	1.00
Boys' Standing Hop Step & Jump		2.00	1.00
Best Step Dancer		3.00	2.00	1.00
Climbing Greasy Pole		3.00
Catching Greasy Pig		2.00
Vaulting with Pole		2.00	1.00

The Calithumpians, under the able leadership of Captain Rossinthebeaux will make their first appearence in Markdale Streets at 11 o'clock, when the following prizes will be awarded to him and his followers:—1st. Worst looking in his crowd $3.00; 2nd $2.00; 3rd $1.00.

BASE BALL.—Markdale team against any other team in County Grey $5.00. Also FOOT BALL $5.00.

Rules and Regulations.

1st. Four to enter, three to start.
2nd. Entrance 10 per cent of first money.
3rd. Entrance to be made with the Secretary not later than 10 o'clock on that day.
4th. Judges decision to be final in all cases.

The Markdale Brass Band will be in attendance throughout the entire day.

This will be the best celebrated day with Games and Sport's ever given north of Toronto, and as Markdale has always been ahead of surrounding towns, they are bound to still keep the lead. So you may be certain there will be no fraud about it, for every game advertised will come off, and prizes all paid in cash.

Come One! Come All! and go no other place but Markdale.

GOOD MUSIC. - - DANCING PLATFORM FREE. - - GATES OPEN AT 12 O'CLOCK.
ENTRANCE TO GROUNDS 10 CENTS.

Return tickets will be issued at single fare from all stations between Winnipeg and Toronto to Markdale.

"GOD SAVE THE QUEEN."

J. E. Marsh, W. N. Haskett, W. J. Benson,
President. Treasurer. Secretary.

COURT OF REVISION.

TOWNSHIP OF GLENELG.

The Court of Revision for the Township of Glenelg, will hold its first sitting for the currant year at the Town Hall on.
SATURDAY, 28TH MAY. 1887.
at 10 o'clock a. m.. The Council will meet for general business at 2 o'clock p. m. the same day.
J. S. BLACK,
Township Clerk.
Glenelg, 12th May, 1887. 349-51

WE WANT!

100 GOOD MEN at once, to sell for the Fonthill Nurseries (largest in Canada over 465 acres) steady employment and no lost time, liberal commission or salary, best advantages; splended outfit furnished free; any pushing man can succeed. Apply for terms to,
STONE & WELLINGTON,
Toronto, Ont.

CANADIAN PACIFIC R. R.

TIME TABLE.
—Markdale Station—

GOING SOUTH.	6.47 a. m.	3.52 p. m.
GOING NORTH.	12.02 p. m.	9.10 p. m.

NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that any person or persons found trespassing or fishing on the farms of the undersigned will be prosecuted according to law without further notice.
Signed:—

John B. Thibaudeau,	Thos. Brady
Edward Brady,	James Brady,
William Brady.	Wm. McCutcheon
John Rhoads,	Geo. Richardson,
Wm. McNally,	George McNally.
James Elliott,	James Kinsey.

COURT OF REVISION.

TOWNSHIP OF EUPHRASIA.

Notice is hereby given that the first sitting, of the Court of Revision of the Assessment Roll of the Township of Euphrasia, in the County of Grey, will be held at the Township Hall, of the said Township in the village of Rocklyn on FRIDAY, 27TH, DAY OF MAY,
next, beginning at the hour of 10 o'clock A. M.
ROBERT DUNLOP,
Tp. clerk.
Clerk's office Euphrasia, April 30th A. D. 1887.

Drs. Sproule & Brodie,
—PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS,—
MARKDALE.
DR. SPROULE'S office Turner's Drug Store.
DR. BRODIE'S office Mathews block.

OFFICIAL NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given to all persons concerned, to have their premises, including waterclosets, stables &c., thoroughly cleaned before the 16th May; also all boxes, barrels, wood or other obstructions, removed off the public road. Parties neglecting to do so will be dealt with according to law.
248-9
E. DAVIS,
S. J. COLEMAN,
A. TURNER, } Trustees.

Notices of Births, Marriages, and Deaths twenty five cents.

MARRIAGES.

CORNEY—NORTH.—In Markdale, on the 10th May, by Rev. G. H. Cornish, Mr. W. S. Corney of Toronto, to Miss Sarah A. North, formerly of this place.

DISTRICT DOINGS.

A SYNOPSIS OF COUNTY AND DISTRICT NEWS FROM OUR EXCHANGES PREPARED FOR STANDARD READERS.

The Irish question: "Are ye Moriarity?"

A Cape Croker school has purchased a 150 lb bell.

Dundalk Council have passed a by-law taxing dogs, and now the public wants the hogs which run at large.—Right you are Herald.

Mr. Dan Kennedy, a popular conductor on the Grand Trunk Railway, has leased the Lemon House, Owen Sound.

Mr. John Kidd of Mono Mills, is 80 years of age, and plowed nearly 20 acres this spring.

What is reported as the first Scotch wedding in Tara was celebrated recently in honor of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Addison.

A Mr. Johns of Owen Sound has been missing since the evening of Sir John McDonald's meeting there in November. The mistery was cleared up last week by his body being found in the river.

"The pin," we are told, has made its way into the highest walks of life. Queer. The pin has but one point in its favor but then it has a level head and lots of brass."

Thornbury is now a town and the following were elected on the 2nd by acclamation:—Mayor, And. Grant. Reeve, Thos, Andrews; Councillors North Ward—W. Patterson, Geo. Wardly, W. Grierson. South Ward S. Alexander,, J. Dibb. East Ward—Raymond, H. Pedwell. A. R. Foster.

A physiologist has launched a theory that woman's fondness for scents is due to her defective sense of smell. It is a matter of evolution. In the early days of his physical and intectual development man had to employ his nose in the pursuit of game, while in woman, engaged in domestic work, the sense of smell was not exercised. It is said that women owing to their defective sense of smell can endure a perfume which is quite overpowering to men.

DIED IN THE GAOL.—Angus Beaton aged 76 years, died in Owen Sound gaol on Wednesday of last week. He was committed to gaol as an imbecile by the Proton authorities in February last. An inquest was held on the body by Corner Cameron on Thursday evening when the Jury rendered the following verdicts: "That the deceased, Angus Beaton, died from general debility.

BABIES AND CHILDREN.—They are always catching cold in their head. Place a small particle of Nasal Balm in each nostril at night, also rub some over the bridge of the nose, and let us know how they are in the morning.

Statistics.

Glenelg Township Assessor has completed his labors for '87 and we get the following from the Roll.

	1886.
Acres Assessed	68257
" Cleared	32840
Ass. of Real Property	660541
" Personal Property	48460
Taxable Income
Total Assessment	709001
Population	3340
Cattle	5471
Sheep	4263
Hogs	1114
Horses	976
Woodland	20802
Swamp	9365
Orchard	313
Fall Wheat	1068
Children 5 to 16	930
" 7 to 13	517
" 16 to 21	377
Births	74
Deaths	19
Names on Roll	937
Ass. Markdale Village	60365

THE POST OFFICE RETURNS.—The report of the Postmaster General states that 211 new post offices were opened in Canada last year. The total postal revenue was $2,468,000 and total expenditure, $3,380,000 showing a net loss of nearly a million dollars. Of the total post office revenue $1,393,600 was collected in Ontario. The deposits in the Post Office Savings banks increased by $1,068,832 last year.

Monthly Fairs.

Orangeville—The second Thursday in month.
Dundalk—Tuesday before Orangeville.
Flesherton—Monday before Orangeville.
Markdale—Saturday before Orangeville.
Durham—Third Tuesday in each month.
Chatsworth—Monday before Durham.
Holland Centre—Saturday before Chatsworth.
Priceville—Monday before Durham.
Hanover—Monday before Durham

Markdale Standard

"HEW TO THE LINE, LET THE CHIPS FALL WHERE THEY MAY."

SEVENTH YEAR.—No. 350. MARKDALE, ONT., MAY 19, 1887. C. W. RUTLEDGE, Proprietor.

Local and Other Items.

Notices in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

NOTICE.—Correspondence, communications, Advertisements, &c., must be in this office by noon on Tuesday to insure publication that week.

30 DAYS!

30 DAYS!

For 30 Days Only, there will be a great discount sale of Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, Silverware, Spex, &c.,

Do not miss it but come early and secure some of the bargains before they are gone. only for 30 days, positively, as we are giving you 25 per cent. off on all cash sales over $1.00. The finest make of Nicol Maple Clock actually selling at RUSSELL'S Noted Jewelery Store for only $2.00, while they are $2.50 to $2.75 elsewhere and the finest assortment of Fine Plated Chains only $1.00, which are generally sold for $2.25 to $2.50. RUSSELL'S is the place you can get bargains, nobody can compete with us. Come and see for yourselves, we will not pay your railway fare give you meals as a catch, but will sell you goods a great deal cheaper than you can get elsewhere and remember the only place to get your Watch repaired properly is at

RUSSELL'S Noted Jewelry Store,

FLESHERTON.

A lengthy letter crowded out this week, but will appear next.

How is clothing and gardening have been the order for two weeks past.

Fishing Tackle all kinds at the Medical Hall, A. Turner, & Co.

Quite a number of maple trees have been planted in the village this spring.

Get your low repairs from Jackson. Old metal taken in exchange.

Asparagus is overdone, and the flies are said to suit us the trout at nibbling.

The mill's wagons are now on the road bright and early in the morning.

Wool! Wool!!—Any quantity wool wanted at S. Hill's.

Goods at Bankrupt price at J. G. Anderson's.

Garden Seeds at Stephen's Drug Store.

Mrs. Vance of Albion has been the guest of Mr. H. McCay recently.

All kinds of house and sign painting done by F. S. Mabee, A call solicited.

All kinds of fruit and ice-cream at Mrs Clement's.

New goods in all goods at the sign of the cross cut.

For building hardware Mabee's is the place: that's if you wish to save money.

Tea, coffee and lunch at Mrs. Clement's on the 24th.

Mr. Vance of Albion visited his brother-in-law H. McCay, Tanner, this week.

Mrs. Clement's is the place for candies and sweetmeats.

Holland Township Court of Revision will be held on the 26th May.

Croquet Sets selling very cheap at Mrs. Clement's.

Butter and Eggs wanted at J. G. Anderson's in exchange for goods.

Euphrasia Township Court of Revision will be held at Rocklyn on Friday the 27th.

Glenelg Council meets as a Court of Revision at the town hall on Saturday the 28th May.

Rejuvenator is a safe and reliable Bitters, in all seasons of the year. Sold by Smith the Barber.

Mrs. J. W. Elliott of Chatsworth visited her sister Mrs. A. Turner this week.

Dr. Sproule is expected home to-day, Parliament having adjourned a week for Queen's Birthday Holidays.

The latest institution or organization we notice in print is the W. O. M. G. or (United Order of Marriageable Girls.)

Look out for J. G, Anderson's new advertisement next week. He has something that will interest you.

Plow Points.—All the standard makes and patterns for sale at Moffat's foundry, three for $1.00 cash.

A number of good second hand Buggies for sale cheap. Also a good Sulkey at W. Mason's Carriage Works, Markdale.

J. G. Anderson has a full line of all goods and is determined not to be undersold. Come and see for yourself.

Forty thousond packages of Rejuvenator Bitters sold in four years by its own merits, sold by Smith the Barber.

Additional names are being added to the list wraning trespassers. Read it and take warning.

J. G. Anderson will sell the balance of his ready made clothing at less than wholesale prices.

Mr. Knight, who has been a salesman in J. G. Anderson's store for nearly a year, left for the Soo this week.

South Grey Teachers Convention will be held in Flesherton on the 2nd and 3rd of June.

1,000,000 doz., of eggs and 2 tons of butter wanted ot Davis' for which the highest market price will be paid.

Mr. Thos. Hill, late of the firm of Hill Bros left on Wednesday for the Western States via Owen Sound, the Soo and Duluth.

A fresh stock of meal's have just been opened at Davis' which will be sold at a very small advance on cost as he will not be undersold.

Remember you can get Bran, Shorts Henfeed the same price at Bensons, as at the mill, it saves you half an hour trouble, give us a call.

Public Verdict."—"That for satisfactory watch work, and reliable watches etc.," the place to go is W. A. Brown's finely stocked Jewelly store, Markdale.

R. O. Whitby has a first class top buggy and a large and beautifully situated park lot for sale at a sacrifice. For particulars apply to John Whitby.

Head Quarters for Buggie Tops, Milk Waggon Springs, or anything in the Carriage line is at Wm. Mason's carriage works.

Thos. Gilray, Esq., reeve of Euphrasia, has 60 acres of wheat sowed. He is an enterprising farmer as well as a good municipal officer.

J. G. Anderson is determined to clear out the whole of his large stock by 1st August and of course will give great bargains.

A stock of hand-made boots, fine and coarse, sewed and pegged, kept on hand so that you can have a good choice; also orders promptly filled, at W. McLeod's.

When in Markdale on the 24th don't fail to call at Jackson's new photo gallery and leave your measure for a picture.

Daddy Stewart, formerly of this place, but now of Hamilton, visited Markdale this week. We are pleased to see the old gentleman looking so well.

Never let the feet become cold and damp, or sit with the back towards the window as these things tend to aggravate any existing hardness of hearing.

Alf. Whitby returned from Providence Bay, Manitaulin, last week, and went to Orangeville this week where he is engaged in painting.

Prolific.—Alex. Smith of Glenelg has a sow which gave birth to 88 pigs inside of twelve months. She raised 84 of them.

Markdale Markets.—Fall wheat 80 to 82 cents; spring wheat 80 to 82; barley 30 to 50; peas 48; oats 28; butter 12 to 12; eggs 10; potatoes 75 per bag; pork 5.40; hides 5.50; wool 20.

J. G. Anderson, has a large stock of prints, muslins, dress goods, parasols gloves, &c., &c., which he is offering away below the regular prices.

The Queen's Birthday will be observed as a Public Holiday as usual in Markdale, yet, we will not refuse a renewal of subscription to the Standard if we should be tempted with such an offer.

Master Walter Turner is home from Toronto School of Medicine for a short time to take his brother A. Turner's place, he being indisposed. We hope soon to see him fully recovered.

Cash buyers will find meat in Sarjeant Bro's meat market as cheap as in any other market in Canada. Prime Bacon, Hams and other smoked and dried meats, as well as all kinds of fresh meats in season.

Rejuvenator Bitters assists nature and removes the cause of disease from the system, by keeping the kidneys, liver, stomach and blood pure, and natures channels free, then you have health. Sold by Smith the Barber.

Davis has constantly on hand a full supply of Ford's and Plewes' flour of the finest quality, if it is not right bring it back and your money will be refunded. Special reduction will be given for large lots.

Notice.—All persons indebted to me either by note or book account are hereby notified to call and settle the same with A. Turner, Markdale, without delay, thus save trouble and expense, T. S. Sproule.

R. O. Whitby took his departure on Tuesday for Toronto. He will be much missed in our village as he was always on hand and gave cheerful assistance to any project in Church or other good movements. We wish him unbounded success in his new field of action.

The weather since the 1st day of May has been delightful and seed has been put in the ground in remarkable good condition. The fall wheat is looking excellent and all nature seems to smile on the labors of the husbandman, causing him to wear a hopeful countenance.

Mr. Miller, the new feed store man, is making commendable efforts to supply the wants of his customers and is doing an increased business from week to week. He has great difficulty in procuring some articles for spring gardening, but if he can't procure them no one else need try.

Davis is to the front, with a new brand of oat meal, the steel cut, try it once and you will use no other, also a fine brand of Corn Meal just to hand, in fact anything in the Provision line may be procured at Davis' at prices which cannot be beaten, and if the trade mean to cut prices, he aint like a fellow that can't stay with them.

The editor of the Thornbury News says:—"The Markdale Standard is introducing a new system of orthography. He spells "calsomine" in this way; "calcimine." If friend Starrett will take the trouble to consult Webster's Unabridged Dictionary (which is the best authority extant) he will find that we are correct.

I have a few chests of that notorious uncolored japan tea left which I have sold at 30c. per lb and it has been pronounced by those who have used it to be better value than any Tea sold in town for the money—probably you ask why we can sell cheaper than those in trade? the answer is simply because we are satisfied with half the profit. W. L. Davis.

To the farmers and the public generally—Consult your interests and purchase your Buggies, Democrats &c., from W. Mason's Carriage Works where you can get a first class article with a written guarantee, as cheap as you can buy factory make rigs from Agents. Be loyal and support home industry.

Mr. Jesse S. Mabee formerly of this place, and his father-in-law, Mr. Geo. Robson of Garafraxa, spent a few days fishing in this vicinity this week.

Special attention is called to W. A Brown's announcement in this paper of a discount sale on the 24th, for one day only,

Miss Searle, Dress and Mantle Maker wishes to inform the ladies of Markdale and vicinity that she is prepared to do all kinds of sewing. Cutting and fitting a specialty; lowest possible prices. Shop, over S. Hills store.

Don't fail to call at Wm. Mason's Carriage Works and see the style and quality of the rig's he builds; he is making a specialty of the Buffalo Road gear the most stylish and durable Buggie built, and prices as low as any one in the country.

Awnings.—S. Hill and W. A. Brown have put up large and handsome awnings this week in front of their stores, Hill's block, which adds much to the appearance besides protecting their goods from damage by the sun. This block has now perhaps the most handsome front in the county.

Why is store goods dearer in the evening than when purchased in day time? enquired one lady of her neighbor: I hear that the clerks say if they can't get out of the shops at seven they will have remmeration for their time and I suppose they keep the extra charges. Indeed that's a very cute idea; I'll go early after this.

As the season is now opened for the sale of Bacon. Benson of the Belfast house is to the fore with a few cases; remember he will not be undersold by any one in the trade and if there is a cut to be given they are the boys that will give it to you, they are dacent little chaps.

Chinese gloss starch is made of two tablespoonfuls of raw starch, one tablespoonful of borax, dissolved in one and a half cups of cold water, Dip the thoroughly dry unstarched cuffs, collars and bosoms of shirts in this, and then roll them up tight and let them remain a few hours in a dry cloth, then rub off and iron.

Three weeks ago an Indian man taught his dog, a very fine bred, well behaved setter, to chew tobacco. Now the dog comes into the house by the back door never scrapes his feet on the mat, never goes to church, is carless at his meals, gets burs in his tail, goes with a lower grade of dogs and it is feared that he is beginning to take an interest in politics.

"Notice" to Farmers. Those that have to buy their "Flour" this summer. Can buy it at Benson's, the Belfast House, the same price as at the mill, and every lb. guaranteed, both Ford's and Plewes' kept on hand. Liberal inducements made on over one barrel lots.

Said to be good for cold.—Hot lemonade, taken just before retiring, is a well known remedy for a cold on its first stages. Everybody, however, is not familiar with the lemon cure for an acute attack of hoarseness, for this purpose, first roast a lemon in the oven, turning it now and then, that all sides may be equally cooked. It should not crack or burst, but be soft all through. while the lemon is still very hot cut a piece from the top, fill it with as much sugar as it will hold and eat on going to bed.

Eggsactly.—Mr. Currie our egg merchant has been in that business 14 years, first in Waterloo County, then in Wellington, later in Dufferin, and the last three years in Grey, and the largest number received from one man in one week during that period was 1857 dozen which was his last weeks, receipts from W. J. McFarland of this village all of which were taken in at his (McFarland's) store in six days.

W. J. McFarland's

—: HOT :—

WEATHER PRICES.

LOOK :- DOWN

this column and see the array of desirable goods to be offered this month at prices which we think were never before quoted for such good goods.

Don't

skip an item, you may find something of great importance to you in this unprecedented list of Honest Bargains.

Read all! It will pay you.

Hat's!

75 Women's Sun Hats 15 cents, worth 50 cents.

48 Men's Hats 20 cents, usual price 50 cents.

150 Boy's 15, 20, 25, 35, and 45 cents.

756 yds. Cashmere 45 inches wide, only 30 cents.

One Case Fine Tweed's all wool suitable for best wear 50 cents. Good value.

112 prs. Men's Lace and Sewed Shoes $1.00.

Lace Curtains!

10 prs. 75 cents.
10 prs. $1.00.
15 prs. $1.50.
10 prs. Colored Muslins newest out $3.00.

Dress Goods!

We have the trade of the County. De Berges 22, 25, 28, up.

75 Peices High Novelties in Greys, Browns, Blues, Grenotes, Black Wool Checks and Cashmerettes, commencing at 10 cents up to the finest. Imported Buttons and Trimmings to match.

100 Men's, Youth's and Boy's Suits, part of a manufacturers stock, will be sold very cheap.

Muslins 6 cents fast colors, stylish, goods. Fine White Lawn 12½, 15, 17, 20 cents.

2762 1 2 yds. Embroideries without exageration the largest assortment and lowest prices to be found anywhere. All our Embroideries 36 inches wide. Allover Laces 36 inches wide. All our Orientals in Cream, White and Fawn.

110 Parisols, great job; commencing at 50 cents. See them.

25 Doz. Women's Hose in Black, Navy Blue Ground and Fawn 15 cents a pair or two pairs for 25 cents.

Cretonnes Imported Direct and pronounced by the ladies Just Lovely.

37 Pieces washing every day Ginghams only 10 cents.

Mourning Goods in great variety.

Gent's Ties, Shirts, Collors, Socks, andunder clothing at correct prices.

25 Doz. large cotton Towel's only 9 cents each. 20 doz. still larger 15 cents.

100 Honey Cans 2 gallons 20 cents.

14 Pieces New Silks in Black and Colored Imported Direct from LONDON ENGLAND.

Our Millinery Rooms

crowded with Novelties and our five young ladies kept on the jump serving customers. Trimming Hats, Bonnets, and Mantle Making. Prices right, styles correct.

A cordial invitation is extended to all to visit our grand display of New Goods.

W. J. McFARLAND,

Direct Importer.

MARKDALE.

GOSSIP ABOUT WOMEN.

The United States colleges contain 18,000 women students.

The Russian School of Medicine for Women is about to be closed.

A society has been organized among Japanese women to cultivate a taste for foreign cookery.

The secret is out that Oscar Wild is a very much hen-pecked husband. Mrs. Oscar believes in home rule, and begins at home.

Mrs. Helen Campbell's forthcoming book, "Prisoners of Poverty," is a truthful account of her personal observations. She is a practical worker among the poor of New York. Her book is mainly an account of women wage-earners, their trades, and their lives.

The Duchess of Albany has signified her return to society by appearing at a recent "drawing-room." Truth says, however, that she was a gloomy figure, and seemed to have arrayed herself for a funeral. The Queen was ablaze with diamonds, and wore six orders, while her royal daughter-in-law, the Princess of Wales, wore four.

The third wife of Johann Strauss leads the great composer through peaceful and happy paths, and altogether theirs is an ideal life. But gossip says he was none the less happy with her predecessors. Perhaps the disposition of the man may have somewhat to do with his perpetual joy; or he may have fallen upon rare good luck in his matrimonial partners.

During the year 1886 the higher classes for girls in St. Petersburg were attended by 743 students, a considerable increase upon the figures in former years. Ever since 1864 it has been possible for women to obtain University degrees in Russia, and in 1870 the ranks of medicine were open to them. Sweden followed the example in a few months, and was therein soon joined by Norway.

Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett is a living refutation of the base slander that literary women make indifferent wives and mothers. She was a penniless and unknown-to-fame English girl when she married the bright young Tennesseean, Dr. Burnett, with whom she has passed a remarkably happy life. They have five children, the eldest of whom is the original of "Little Lord Fauntleroy."

The death of Madame Needham and the sale of her goods at the Hotel Drouet, Paris, made it plain that she shopped industriously. One hundred and fifty day and night chemises, trimmed with Valenciennes and other lace; 70 petticoats in silk, muslin, etc., 40 pairs of garters, 24 corsets, 200 lace handkerchiefs, 40 pantaloons de sole peluche and 105 pairs of silk stockings are among the items on the bill of sale.

Women who are such sworn companions of the needle may sometimes wonder where the deft little instruments which perform their deft stitches are made. The Analyst says that the present production of needles in Redditch, England, if not less than 50,000,000 per week. Pointing of neekles, one of the most delicate of all the operations, is now almost exclusively done by machinery, and so is the cutting, skimming, stamping, eyeing, tempering, counting, heading and tailing, bluing, burnishing, finishing, assorting and stitcking. New and improved machines for all these processes have been successfully introduced during the last twenty years or so, and the latest novelty is the "grooving" machines for making sewing-machine needles.

Of the 5,000 women who hold positions in the various Government departments at Washington only one is considered superlatively beautiful. It is said she is a niece of the United States Minister to England, and that she receives a salary of $900 per year. In person she is as tall and gaceful as these beautiful women need be, which very often is a matter on which judges can't agree, and in roundness of form we are told that she is the sculptor's ideal model. Although the entire Capital docs not sneeze when she takes snuff, it is asserted that half the clerks in the department spend two-thirds of their time watching her graceful movements, and when she starts for the elevator there is a general rush in that direction on the part of chiefs and subordinates too.

India's National Hymn.

"God Save the Queen!" is the national anthem of Hindostan as well as that of Great Britain, Canada and Australia, although the well-known melody has necessarily been somewhat changed in its adaptation to the Hindoo musician.

Our system of musical notation, representing no narrower interval than a semi-tone, is somewhat coarse to the Indian ear, trained to finer divisions of sound, while the tunes of Hindostan, abounding in demi-semitones and thirds of notes, are quite discordant to Western musicians.

Since there was such a difference between the two systems, it became necessary, if adapting the national anthem for the use on Hindoo subjects, not only to translate the words into the leading language of the Indian Empire, but also to change the tune so that it would appeal to the Indians taste, and be withiu the Indian capacity of excution.

Some years ago the London National Anthem Committee called in the assistance of a learned Hindoo, who was both poet and musician,—Sonrindro Mohun Tajore,—and persuaded him to reinder the words of the national hymn into Sanskrit and Bengali, and to fit them to Indian tunes.

Sonrindro fulfilled his commission in such a masterly manner that his versions have taken firm root in the Indian soil.

He adapted four native and highly popular tunes to his words, and composed eleven other melodies, so that all local tastes might be satisfied in having a privilege of choice. "Godsave the Queen!" bears a strong resemblance to a famous old Indian melody called Luma-Jhijhiti, and in a slightly altered form it holds the first place amo Sonrindro's compositions.

Each version has its own appropriate occasion of time and place. One is used only at night, another in the morning; one is devoted to the rainy season, and another intended for street processions. The Hindoos can scarcely complain of a poverty of choice in the musical expression of their loyalty.

Tender Corns.

Soft corns, corns of all kinds removed without pain or sore spots by Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. Thousands testify that it is certain, painless, and prompt. Do not be imposed upon by substitutes offered for the genuine "Putnam's" Extractor. Sure, safe, harmless.

Ancient Want of Cleanliness.

The fact that neatness of person is a habit that is easily lost, if neglect is once allowed, is proved nowadays in a great many individual cases, but it has been proved on a larger scale by the experience of the world after the baths of the ancients went out of fashion.

In the change of the world's habits incidental to the change of religion, and especially with the deserved condemnation of the Roman public baths by the Christian Church, the practice of public bathing came to an end, and that of private bathing, unhappily, became only too rare.

The usages of the generations preceding the present century, in the matter of cleanliness of personal habits, are almost incredible to us. A book recently published, of which Mr. Alfred Franklin is the author, contains some facts regarding the domestic life and social usages of the period from the twelfth to the eighteenth century, which are in a sense instructive, since they show to what a condition even "elegant society" may descend, when the watchful care for personal cleanliness is once abandoned.

The ladies of the seventeenth century very seldom washed their faces. They sometimes dipped a cloth in spirits, and passed it over their faces; and their toilet codes and directions, still extant, prove that they avoided water for the face, because they believed it was destructive to the complexion. As for any other sort of baths, no reference is found to them in these toilet directions, probably for the very good reason that none were ever taken.

That the same ladies seldom washed even their hands seems to be established also. In an old romance a princess says to a young lord of the court, "You see, sir, that my hands are whiter than yours, although it is four days now since I washed them."

This seems to have been a commonplace remark, and treats of a condition of things which was taken quite as a matter of course.

Richelieu was known among the men of the seventeenth century as a man who was to some degree eccentric, from the fact that he was neat in his person. That he is mentioned as a "man who bathed" seems to prove that it was not common for men to "bathe" at that time.

The women of the courts of Louis XIV, and XV. of France powdered their faces incessantly instead of washing them, and built enormous head-dresses upon heads that were never combed. The accounts which are given of some results of this practice are almost beyond belief.

It seems to have taken the people of Europe many centuries to learn what they now know of the need of personal cleanliness, a knowledge which they lost after the destruction of the Roman baths. The people of the European continent of the present day are far from being as scrupulous in this respect as are the English and Americans.

In some countries of Europe an extraordinary neglect of personal cleanliness still prevails among the majority of the people, and disease and pestilence are the result almost as often as they were from the shocking want of cleanliness in the Middle Ages.

Defining a Sleeper.

The fashion we have of saying "steamer," and "cutter," and of using many similar words in a variety of senses, results not so much from the poverty of our language as from our laziness. It is well ridiculed in the following:

A sleeper is one who sleeps. A sleeper is that in which the sleeper sleeps. A sleeper is that on which the sleeper which carries the sleeper while he sleeps runs.

Therefore, while the sleeper sleeps in the sleeper, the sleeper carries the sleeper over the sleeper under the sleeper, until the sleeper which carries the sleeper jumps off the sleeper, and wakes the sleeper in the sleeper by striking the sleeper under the sleeper, and there is no longer any sleeper sleeping in the sleeper on the sleeper.

The Deadly Cigarette.

A warning to boys who smoke cigarettes is conveyed in the death of one of their number in Syracuse., N. Y., last Saturday. Whatever ground there may be for the opinion that moderate smoking does not injure adults, there can be no question about its effect upon boys. It is seen in pinched faces, stunted bodies, and dwarfed intellects. Paste this axiom in your hats, boys who are under 16 years of age: None of you who is an inveterate smoker of cigarettes will ever make a conspicuous success in life.

Sold.

When the Rev. Sam Jones, in Omaha, Nebraska, asked any man present who had never spoken a cross word to his wife to stand up, a round-faced good-natured-looking individual with a beard stood up.

"Thank Heaven, there's one man who never said a cross word to his wife?" said the Rev. Sam.

"I'm a bachelor!" shouted the round-faced man.

A Trying Ordeal.

"I never have tried going without food very many days at a time," observed Sharply to a friend, "but I once went without a drop of water fourteen days."

"Were you out on the plains?" inquired the friend.

"No; I was out on a yachting cruise."

C-h-o-o! C-h-o-o!! C-h-o-o!!!

Don't sneeze, sneeze, hawk, hawk, spit, blow, and disgust everybody with your offensive breath. If you have acrid, watery discharges from the nose and eyes, throat disease, causing choking sensations, cough, ringing noises in head, splitting headache and other symptoms of nasal catarrh, remember that the manufacturers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy offer, in good faith, $500 reward for a case of catarrh which they cannot cure. The Remedy is sold by druggists at only 50 cents.

Berlin University contains 149 American students.

Oft obscure the road that leads to health,
Unmarked by board or sign;
Wisdom avails not, powerless is wealth
To sooth those aches of thine.
But do not despair, with life there's hope,
The cloud conceals the sun;
With Pierce's Favorite Prescription at hand
You life's full course may run.

More truth than poetry in these lines, as thousands of ladies all over the land now blooming with health, testify to the great curative powers of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, adapted by much research and careful study to the happy relief of all those weaknesses and ailments peculiar to females. All druggists.

The Sweetest Girl in School.

"She's the sweetest girl in school"! enthusiastically exclaimed one young miss to another, as they passed down the street together. "Edith is so kind, and gentle, and unselfish, every one likes her. And she has lovely golden hair and pretty eyes. Isn't it a pity her complexion is so bad; it spoils her looks. And then she has such dreadful headaches"! The girls skipped along, but it happened Edith's mother had heard what they said. It set her thinking. What could be done for those headaches and the rough, muddy complexion that was such a trial to her gentle daughter. She recalled what she had read of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and on the spur of the moment she slipped into a drug store and bought a supply. Edith took it faithfully, with the result that it cleared her disordered blood, relieved the headaches, made her skin soft, fair and rosy, and now she is not only the "sweetest girl in school," but the most beautiful.

A counter irritant—A cross salesman.

A CURE FOR DRUNKENNESS,

opium, morphine, chloral, tobacco, and kindred habits. The medicine may be given in tea or coffee without the knowledge of the person taking it, if so desired. Send 6c. in stamps for book and testimonials from those who have been cured. Address M. V. Lubon, 47 Wellington St. East, Toronto, Ont. Cut this out for future reference. When writing mention this paper.

In spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of new clothes. Many are shut out where tailors do not trust.

Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness and Hay Fever.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are cured in from one to three simple applications made at home. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent free on receipt of stamp by A. H. Dixon & Son, 308 King Street West Toronto Canada.

It is the empty heart that aches. The head is different.

People who are subject to bad breath, foul coated tongue, or any disorder of the Stomach, can at once be relieved by using Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, the old and tried remedy. Ask your Druggist.

We are now nearing the season of the year when the Italian monkeys start out to do the country with a man and a hand organ.

LADIES

Who are Weak, Nervous and Exhausted; who feel themselves losing strength; who are pale, delicate and sickly in appearance, suffering from the many complaints peculiar to women—send for and read M. V. LUBON'S Treatise in BOOK FORM on the Diseases of Women. Mailed sealed and secure from observation on receipt of 6c in stamps, UNSEALED FREE. Address, M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. East, Toronto, Ont.

A man of metal is one with a muscle of iron, a pocket lined with tin, speaks with a silvery ring and cheeks of brass.

YOUNG MEN suffering from the effects of early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted; also MIDDLE-AGED and OLD MEN who are broken down from the effects of abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and READ M. V. Lubon's Treatise on Diseases of Men. The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. E. Toronto, Ont.

The trunk lines are most important to persons who travel with heavy baggage. The gripsack line will do for the adventurer.

Whenever your Stomach or Bowels get out of order, causing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, and their attendant evils, take at once a dose of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Best family medicine. All Druggists, 50 cents.

A. P. 333

GOOD LIVE AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY County in Canada. Address, FERRIS & CO., 87 Church St., Toronto.

STAMMERING—And all Impediments of Speech, removed for life. Cure guaranteed. Stammering Specialist. 26 Clarence St., Toronto.

AGENTS AND CANVASSERS wanted, Male or Female, whole or spare time, on salary or commission. Industrial Union of B.N.A., 45 Arcade, Toronto.

A NEW EMERY MOWER SHARPENER—Will sharpen the knife without taking it out. Every farmer will buy it. AGENTS WANTED. CLEMENT & CO. TORONTO.

TORONTO CUTTING SCHOOL.—Gentlemen desirous of acquiring a thorough knowledge of garment cutting should apply at once to S CORRIGAN, 122 Yonge St., Toronto. Terms on application.

BEAVER LINE OF STEAMSHIPS, Sailing weekly between Montreal and Liverpool. RATES OF PASSAGE:—Saloon, Montreal to Liverpool, $40, $50, and $60; Return Tickets, $80, $90, and $100 —according to steamer and accommodation. Intermediate and Steerage at lowest rates. For further particulars and to secure Berths, apply to H. E. MURRAY, General Manager, 1 Custom House Square, Montreal, or to the Local Agents in the different Towns and Cities.

GUELPH Business College, Guelph, Ont. Twelve States and Provinces already represented on the roll of this Institution, To thorough, practical instruction, and the efficiency and success of its graduates, this College owes its popularity. Circulars, giving terms, etc., mailed free. Address M. MacCORMICK, Principal.

TEACHERS and Students, Attention! Special classes during summer holidays, in Shorthand, Typewriting, Book-keeping, Penmanship, etc. Write for full particulars. Canadian Business University and Shorthand Institute, Public Library Building, Toronto. THOS. BENGOUGH, President. CHARLES H. BROOKS, Manager.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED FOR "PLATFORM ECHOES," or Living Truths for Head and Heart, by John B. Gough; his last and crowning life work, brim full of thrilling interest, humor and pathos; bright, pure, and good, full of laughter and tears. It sells at sight to all. To it is added the life and death of Mr. Gough, by Rev. Lyman Abbott. This is the best and fastest selling book of the day. Terms liberal. Write us for full information, circulars, etc. Address, WILLIAM BRIGGS, 78 and 80 King Street East, Toronto.

PATENTS PROCURED in Canada, the U.S. and all foreign countries. Engineers, Patent Attorneys, and experts in Patent Causes. Established 1867. Donald C. Ridout & Co., Toronto.

SPOONER'S COPPERINE 'Babbitt'—Non-fibrous Anti-friction Box-metal for journal bearings in machinery—Guaranteed copper mixed. Supplies every requirement. Ask your hardware dealer for it. ALONZO. W. SPOONER, Patentee and Manufacturer, Port Hope.

Awnings! Decorated Window Shades, &c. Wholesale and Retail, at the CELEBRATED GOLD MEDAL TENT MANUFACTORY, 70 King St. West, Toronto. NATIONAL MANUFACTUR'G CO

AGENTS APPLY TO THE WANTED D.W. BEADLE NURSERY CO. St. Catharines, Ont.

CHURNS. Mangles, three kinds; Cloth Wringers, ten kinds: Washing Machines, 2 kinds. Carpet Sweeper, Meat Choppers, Trucks, and other sundries. HAMILTON INDUSTRIAL WORKS CO., Hamilton, Canada Send for article wanted, or Illustrated Catalogue.

SNOW DRIFT BAKING POWDER THE FAVORITE! THERE IS NO BETTER! The Snow Drift Baking Powder Co., Hamilton, Ont.

Water PURE LIVING STREAM. AUGERS, bore 20 feet per hour. Also Rock Drills—Hand, Horse, or Steam Power. Send for Catalogue. Laidlaw Manufacturing Co., HAMILTON, ONT.

H. Williams, FELT AND SLATE Roofer, Manufacturer and dealer in Tarred Felt, Roofing Pitch, Building Papers, Carpet and Deafening Felt, READY ROOFING, Etc. 4 Adelaide St. E., TORONTO.

Wall Paper MANUFACTURERS. M. STAUNTON & CO., Samples on application. TORONTO ONT.

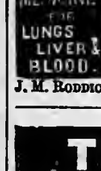
Dairy Salt, FOR BUTTER, ETC. NEW Importations.—Higgins' Eureka, Washington and Ashton Brands, in large or small sacks. Also Rice's Canadian Salt. Write for prices. JAMES PARK & SON, Wholesale Produce Merchants, Toronto.

THE TORONTO SILVER PLATE CO. Manufacturers of the highest grade of SILVER PLATED WARES. Steel Knives, Spoons, Forks, Etc., A SPECIALTY. ALL GOODS GUARANTEED. TORONTO CANADA.

The Perry Cart



TWO SIZES, SURREY AND PHAETON BODIES. The shafts are attached to body by the Perry Compensating Springs. The result of the action of these Springs is no horse-motion in the cart, and no cart-motion on the horse. Descriptive illustration on application. For sale by all carriage makers. CANADA CARRIAGE PARTS CO., TORONTO. Sole Manufacturers for Canada. The Trade only supplied.

BABY'S BIRTHDAY.

A Beautiful Imported Birthday Card sent to any baby whose mother will send us the names of two or more other babies, and their parents' addresses Also a handsome Diamond Dye Sample Card to the mother and much valuable information. Wells, Richardson & Co., Montreal.

JUNE 19, 1885.—For two years my wife's health was run down. She was greatly emaciated and too weak to do anything for herself; she was given up by five doctors, they all passed their opinion that she could not live. She commenced using Dr. Jug's Medicine in December, 1884, and after taking six bottles she was so much improved that she could look after her household duties J. M. RODDICK, Engineer, C. P. R., West Toronto

THE WHITE THRESHING ENGINE OF LONDON ONT FULL SUPPLY FOR 1887

I CURE FITS! When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you. Address DR. H. G. ROOT, Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto.

ASSESSMENT SYSTEM

The Mutual Reserve Fund LIFE ASSOCIATION The largest and most prosperous open Association in the world—desires active representatives in every section of Canada; liberal inducements. It has full Government Deposit, and under the supervision of Insurance Department at Ottawa. Correspondence solicited. Address, J. D. WELLS, General Manager, 65 King Street East, Toronto.

MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO. MANUFACTURE ONLY FINEST Silver Plated Ware Artistic Designs, combined with Unequalled Durability and Finish. HAMILTON, ONT.

PILES Blind, Bleeding, and Itching, effectually cured by the Medical Pile Remedy. Thousands of sufferers can testify to the permanent relief from these external and external remedies. $1.00 per package. Ask your druggist for it, or will be sent by Mail, postage paid. HUGH MILLER & CO., 167 King St. East, Toronto.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships Sailing during winter from Portland every Saturday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via Halifax and St. John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland, Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal, weekly, Glasgow and Boston weekly; and Glasgow and Philadelphia, fortnightly. For Freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's N. F., Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love, Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allan Bros. & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; H. & A. Allan Portland Boston Montreal

SPANISH BLACKING THE KING OF BLACKING · SOLD EVERYWHERE ·

ONTARIO CANOE COMPANY Peterboro', Ont.

MANUFACTUR'S OF ALL KINDS OF CANOES Send 3c. Stamp for Catalogue.

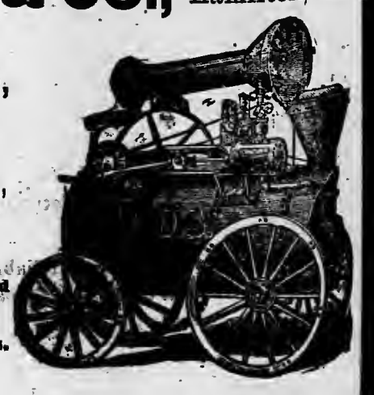
Bicycles SEND AT ONCE FOR LIST of Second-Hand Machines. From $15 Upwards. New Catalogue Ready 1st April. A. T. LANE MONTREAL



The National Electro & Stereotype Co. 23 ADELAIDE ST. E., TORONTO. All classes of fine work. Mfrs. of Printers' Leads, Slugs and Metal Furniture. Send for prices

CONSUMPTION. I have a positive remedy for the above disease; hundreds of thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer. Give express and P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto

J. L. JONES WOOD ENGRAVER 10 KING ST EAST TORONTO.

Farmers and Threshers! USE ON YOUR MACHINERY ONLY THE WELL-KNOWN Peerless Oil NINE GOLD MEDALS Have been awarded it during the last four years. Try also PEERLESS AXLE GREASE, for your Wagons and Horse Powers. Manufactured at QUEEN CITY OIL WORKS, by SAMUEL ROGERS & CO. TORONTO.

L. D. SAWYER & CO., Hamilton, Ont. MANUFACTURERS OF "L. D. S." ENGINES, WOOD, COAL AND STRAW BURNERS, PLAIN AND TRACTION, "Grain Saver" and "Peerless" SEPARATORS. "Pitts" Horse Powers, for 2, 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12 Horses. Tread Powers, for 1, 2 and 3 Eclipse Separators, for Tread & Small Powers. Send for Illustrated Catalogue.

ENT SY Reserve Fu SOCIATION prosperous open —desires active anada; liberal eposit, and under the rtment at Ottawa.
ed. Address,
ELLS,
General Manager,
Street East, Toronto.
RITANNIA CO
TURE ONLY EST
ted Ware,
, combined wi
bility and Finis
ON, ONT.
ES!
hing, effectually cured ckly. Thousands of suffe anent relief from these dies. $1.00 per packag
r will be sent by Mail, pos
R & CO.,
King St. East, Toronto.
Mail Steamships
m Port and every y to Liverpool, and in turday to Liverpool, call mails and passengers
o from Baltimore via Hal Liverpool fortnightly e steamers of the Glasgo and from Halifax, Portland nd during summer betwe ekly, Glasgow and Bosto Philadelphia, fortnightly other information apply ltimore; S. Cunard & Co., chn's N. F., Wm. Thomso en & Co., Chicago; Love rlier, Toronto; Allans ckie, Philadelphia; H. A. ontreal
NISH
F BLACKING
RYWHERE
ANOE COMPANY
Peterboro', Ont.
NDS OF CANOES
alogue.
icycles!
ND AT ONCE FOR LIST
t Second-Hand Machines, rom $15 Upwards.
Catalogue Ready 1st April
. LANE MONTREAL
STEREOTYPE
E., TORONTO.
Mfrs. of Printers' Leads,
Send for prices.
PTION.
e above disease; br its use ntial cure of long standing stance is my faith in its BOTTLES FREE, together n on this disease to any address.
OCUM,
nge St., Toronto ONES NGRAVER
ST. EAST ONTO.
shers!
L-KNOWN ssOil also PEERLESS Horse Powers.
ORONTO.
milton, Ont.

BY ORDER OF THE LEAGUE.

BY FRED. M. WHITE.

CHAPTER VII.

It was a little after five on the following afternoon that Sir Geoffrey walked from his house into the square. He seemed, by his uneasy air, as if he was afraid of having his movements watched, for he stopped, hesitated, and finally walked away quietly in the direction of Upper Brook Street. Calling a hansom, he was driven to one of the quiet approaches, half town, half country, beyond Paddington, where he dismissed his cab. Then he walked quietly on till he reached his destination—a well-appointed though sombre-looking establishment; and there, after some hesitation, he knocked. The room he was shown into was laid out with preparations for dinner; and just as the little clock over the mantle struck the half-hour after six, Le Gautier entered. He greeted his guest quietly, almost coldly, and rang the bell to order the meal. It was a quiet little dinner, really irreproachable in its way—the appropriate wines being perfect, for Le Gautier by no means despised the pleasures of the table, and, moreover, was not the man to spare where he had a purpose to serve.

"Well, Sir Geoffrey," he said, toying with his glass, when the meal had concluded—it was past eight now, and the light was beginning to fail—"do you feel equal to the coming trial?"

"O yes," the baronet replied eagerly, though his face was perturbed and the glass in his hand shook. "Let us get it over; this suspense is killing me. Sometimes I fancy you are playing some devilish art on me. I doubt the evidence of my senses."

"You do not doubt," Le Gautier answered sternly. "Listen!"

The light in the room was fading, and nothing distinctly could be seen save the glimmer of the waning day upon glass and silver. At the moment, the strains of music were heard, low and soft at first, then swelling louder, but always melancholy. It was quite impossible to tell whence it came—it seemed to strike the ear as if the earth was full of the sweet sounds. Suddenly it ceased, and a sigh like a mournful wind broke the stillness.

"It might be my dead brother himself playing," Sir Geoffrey said, in great agitation. "The organ was his favourite instrument. Strange that the music should be so familiar to me!"

"Do you doubt now?" Le Gautier asked. "Does your unbelieving mind still run upon trickery or mechanism, or are you convinced!"

"I must believe," the weak old man replied; "I have no alternative. I put myself in your hands. Tell me what I am to do."

"Your own conscience must guide you, and what the spirits will to-night must be obeyed. It is no question for me to decide; I am merely the humble instrument the medium between one world and another. I dare not advise you. When your nerves are sufficiently braced to meet the dead, I will restore the communication.—Are you afraid?"

"No, no!" cried the baronet; "I am not afraid."

A cold, icy hand touched him on the cheek, and a low voice whispered in his ear the words: "You are!" Trembling, frightened, he rose from his chair; and then suddenly the room was filled with a light, showing the baronet's set face, and Le Gautier's pallid features wearing a sardonic smile. Hardly had the light appeared, when it was gone, leaving the room in double darkness at the change. A yell of harsh, discordant laughter rang out, dying away to a moan.

"What is that, Le Gautier?" Sir Geoffrey asked. "Is this all real, or am I merely dreaming?"

"The spirits laugh at your audacity. You boasted you were not afraid whilst you are trembling in every limb. You dare not say it again!"

"I am alarmed, mystified," he said; "but I am not afraid."

A mocking shout of laughter followed this speech, and the words, "You lie!" as if uttered in chorus, were distinctly heard. A cold hand clutched Sir Geoffrey by the throat, holding him till he could hardly breathe. In his intense agitation, he snatched at a shadowy arm, and suddenly the hand relaxed its grip. Le Gautier struck a match and lighted the candles.

"Are you afraid now?" he asked quietly.

"O yes, yes; anything to save me from that horrid grasp! My throat is aching with the pressure."

Le Gautier looked at the finger-marks calmly. He was acting splendidly, not overdoing the affair in the slightest, and, on the other hand, not appearing altogether indifferent. He was playing for a high stake, and it required all his cunning, all his cool audacity, to win. To the casual observer, he might have been an enthusiastic believer.

"You have seen enough," he commenced quietly, but with an air of the most profound conviction—"you have seen enough to know that the time for delay is past, and the hour for action has arrived. The spirits to-night are incensed with you; they are furious at this delay; and unless you solemnly promise to carry out my proposals, I shall not risk our lives by any manifestation to night."

"What am I to do?" Sir Geoffrey cried piteously. "I put myself entirely in your hands. Tell me my duty, and I promise to follow it."

"So much the better for you," quoth Le Gautier sternly. "Listen! You know I am a member of a great Secret Society. In the first place, you must join that; and let me tell you, your late brother was a member, and took the keenest interest in its movements. You must join!"

"I knew my brother was embroiled in some rascally Socialist plots," said Sir Geoffrey incautiously; "but I really do not see why I"——He stopped abruptly, for the same mournful sigh was heard, and a voice whispered in the air, "Beware!" With increased agitation, he continued; "If that is part of my penance, I must do so; though it is on the strict understanding that I"——

"It is on no understanding at all!" Le Gautier thundered. "Who are you, poor mortal, that you should make stipulations? We must have all or nothing. Take it, or leave it!"

He looked straight across into the other's face, his eyes burning with their intensity. For a moment they sat thus, striving for the mastery. Then Sir Geoffrey looked away. He was conquered.

"Let it be so," he said. "Your will has conquered mine. Proceed, for I see you have something more yet to say."

Again the sigh was heard, and a voice said distinctly: "It is well." The music burst out again triumphant this time. When the last pealing strains died away, Le Gautier continued: "Your brother died at New York, as you know; but at that time, he was on business of the Society. No man had his heart so firmly set upon the cause as he, no man has been so missed. You would never be able to take his place; but you can help us indirectly; you can aid us with what we most need, and that is money. You shall see the shade of Sir Ughtred presently, and hold converse with him; but, on the peril of your life, do not move from the spot where I shall place you."

"Let us go now," Sir Geoffrey cried eagerly. "Why should we waste any more time talking here?"

"Because things are not prepared. The shades from another world do not come forth at a moment's bidding to show themselves to mortal eyes, though the air is full of them now."

Sir Geoffrey looked uneasily around for any traces of these ghostly visitors, though he could see nothing; nevertheless, the idea of a chamber full of supernatural bodies was by no means pleasant.

"Then our pact is complete," Le Gautier continued. "Briefly, it stands thus; I am to show you such things as you wish to see; and in return you become a member of our Brotherhood, swearing to promote its welfare by all the means in your power. Quick! say the word, for I feel the unseen influence upon me."

"Yes, yes—agreed; only show me my brother."

As Sir Geoffrey spoke a change came over Le Gautier's face; the baronet watching him, perfectly fascinated. The medium's eyes grew larger and more luminous, his features became rigid, and he moved like a man who walks in a dream. His gaze was fixed upon the other, but there was no sense of recognition there—all was blank and motionless. He rose from his chair, moving towards the door, his hands groping for it like the action of the blind, and he beckoned to Sir Geoffrey to follow him out along the dark passage.

"Come!" he said in a strange hollow voice—"come with me! The spirits are abroad, and have need of me!"

The room they entered was situated at the back of the house, having a large old-fashioned bay window of the shape and form one sees in the banqueting-room of old country-houses—a long narrow room, draped entirely in black; and the only light in the place proceeded from two small oil-lamps held by white Parian statues. As the twain entered, the draperies were violently agitated, as if by a sudden wind; an icy current seemed to strike them full in the face. A chair, impelled forward by an unseen hand, was pushed across the bare floor, and Sir Geoffrey, at a motion from his companion, seated himself therein. Le Gautier stepped forward toward the window, and lighted a flat brasier, sprinkling some sort of powder upon it, and immediately the room was filled with a dense violet mist, through which the oil-lamps shone dimly. The weird music commenced again, and as it died away, a loud report was heard, and the curtains across the window were wrenched apart, disclosing an open space. As Sir Geoffrey gazed into it, a form began to appear, misty at first then getting gradually clearer, till the watcher saw the figure of a girl, dim and slight, for he could see the woodwork of the window behind, but clear enough to see she was fair and young, with thick masses of long yellow hair hanging over her shoulders, and half hiding her face from sight. There was a look of sadness on the brow.

"You may speak," the strange hollow tones of Le Gautier came through the mist. "If you have any questions to ask, put them; but, at the peril of your life, do not attempt to move."

With the most reverent and holy belief in the reality of the scene before him, Sir Geoffrey gazed at the downcast features. To his diseased mind, he was on the borderland of another world, and the very thought of speaking to the bright vision was full of awe.

"Who are you?" he said at length in tremulous tones. "Let me know who it is with whom I speak."

"I am your better self," the vision spoke; and the voice sounded faint and distant, yet very sweet, like music on the waters. "I am your good spirit, your guardian angel. I stand by you night and day, the presiding deity of the honor of the House of Charteris."

This artful stroke gave the listener confidence and flattered his family pride. "Has every man a spirit such as you?" he asked.

"Every man who is by nature noble—yes. To every one who has courage and genius, one of my sisters belongs. I am the guiding star of your House. I have stood by you and yours in the hour of need. I saw your father die. I saw your brother's deathbed. It is of him you would speak?"

"It is," the baronet cried boldly. 'What of him?"

"You owe him a heavy debt of reparation," the vision continued sadly. "In life, you were not always friends; in death, you were not with him. He left a family. Are you aware of that, selfish mortal?"

"I did not know; I never knew. But it is not yet too late to atone. Tell me where they are, and I will go to them."

"It was too late!" the figure replied in tones of deepest sorrow. "They are dead—dead of neglect; nay, more, starvation. They will not dispute your sway now. While you had flattery and adulation, while you lived in luxury and splendour, your kith and kin lacked bread."

"But surely some atonement can be made?"

"Too late—too late! Nothing can avail them now, no specious sophistry, no outward appearance of remorse. You can atone, though slightly, by completing the work your brother began in life. Know that at your very door, proud man, thousands of your fellow-creatures are starving, ground down by injustice and oppression. You can help to lighten this burden; you can help these men who, poor, and savage as they are, are yet men, and brothers."

"I will! Sir Geoffrey cried eagerly—"I will! Only show me how; and let me see my brother, if only for a brief moment."

The figure replied with a radiant smile. "As for the means, I must leave that to you. But you shall see your brother, if only for a moment.—And now, farewell."

"But stay another minute. I"——

The farewell was repeated, coming to the listener's ears as from afar off, fainter and fainter, as the violet mist rose again, filling the room with dense, fragrant smoke, through which the rigid figure of Le Gautier could be dimly seen erect and motionless.

When the mist cleared away again the figure of a man grew visible. Perfect, yet intangible, he stood there, muffled in a long cloak, and his features partially hidden by a soft, broad-brimmed hat. At this spectacle, Sir Geoffrey's agitation increased, and great drops stood upon his forehead.

"It is he—my brother!" he groaned, starting from his feet; but again the word "Beware!" seemed to be hissed in his ear. "My dear brother, do not look at me like at that. It was no fault of mine, I swear."

The figure answered not, but looking the wretched man in the face, pointed down to his feet, where two thin, emaciated children crouched, evidently in the last stage of disease and starvation.

"What atonement can you make for this?" was asked in the stern tones the listener knew so well. "Man! in the enjoyment of what should, under happier auspices, have been mine, what do you say to this?" He pointed down to the crouching children again, sternly yet sadly.

"Anything," the baronet exclaimed—"anything, so that you do not torture me like this! It is no fault of mine. I did not know. But anything in my power I will do, and do gladly."

"Well for you that you have spoken thus. You shall complete the work I began in life, and the man called Hector le Gautier shall help you with his aid and counsel.—You have a daughter?"

"I have—your niece Enid. What do you know of her?"

"Much; perhaps more than you.—Listen! and interrupt me at your peril. You may have views for her; perhaps she has chosen for herself. Am I right? But this must not be! Hector le Gautier must wed her.

"But I have other views. There is already"——

"Do you dare to cross me?" the vision sternly asked. "Have not I and mine suffered enough at your hands? Promise, or"——

He stopped abruptly, and again the sighing voice whispered "Beware!" In an agony of terror, the baronet looked round; but the dark eyes never seemed to leave him. So frightened was he, so stricken by this cunningly devised display, that he dare not defy the figure standing there before him.

"I promise," he shouted at last—"I promise."

"'Tis well," the vision said. "From this moment, you are free. You will see me no more; but if you dare swerve a hair-breadth from our compact, then you shall find my vengeance swift and terrible. Geoffrey, farewell!"

"But, Ughtred; one moment more—I"——

A deep shuddering sigh broke the silence, and the figure was gone. Almost distracted, Sir Geoffrey rushed forward to the curtains, which had again fallen, but nothing was there. The smoke cleared away, and once again the room was quiet.

Le Gautier opened his eyes, and gradually life and motion came back to him, as he awoke like a man from a trance. "Are you satisfied," he asked, "with what you have seen?"

"Wonderful!" the trembling baronet replied. "It was my brother to the life—the very voice even. You heard the compact?"

"I, my dear Sir Geoffrey? No, indeed," Le Gautier exclaimed in a voice of great surprise. "Recollect, I heard nothing; my faculties were torpid; they formed the medium through which sights and sounds were conveyed to you."

"And you heard absolutely nothing?"

"Absolutely nothing.—But of course, if there happened to be anything which concerned me, you can tell me at your convenience.—And now, I think we have had enough of spirits for one night, unless you would like something to steady your nerves?"

Sir Geoffrey declined the proffered refreshment, pleading the lateness of the hour and his desire to get home. Le Gautier did not detain him; and after a few words, they parted; the one to dwell upon the startling events of the evening, and the other to complete his plans. It was a neat stroke of Le Gautier's to disclaim any knowledge of the conversation, the rather that the delicate allusion to his relations with Enid were mentioned, and besides which, acquitted him from any awkward confidence.

"The game is in my hands," the schemer mused an hour later, as he sat over his last cigar. "Would any one believe that a man of education, I almost said sense, could be such a fool?—Hector, mon ami, you will never starve as long as there is a Charteris in the world. The opportunity has long been coming, but the prize is mine at last;" and with these words, the virtuous young man went to bed, nothing in his dreams telling him that his destruction was only a question of time, and that his life was in the hands of two vengeful women.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

To clean a white goat-skin rug: Wash with warm (not hot) soap-suds. The skin may not seem quite as soft after the washing, but, if the washing is done quickly, the skin well rinsed in cold water, and dried with only moderate warmth, being frequently turned and shaken, the difference will be hardly perceptible.

Sometime ago Bud Trainer, of Tahlequah, I. T., was shot with a 40-calibre revolver by an officer. The ball entered Bud's head above the teeth and just under the nose and lodged at the base of the brain, near the spinal column. Physicians who attended the wounded man pronounced the shot fatal, and declared that probing for the ball would only hasten his death. Bud's mother was not convinced, however, and after the doctors had left she sent for an aged Cherokee medicine man, who had great repute as a conjuror. The red man made a few mysterious passes over the victim's head, chanted a weird incantation and, presto! the ball was found to have reached the skin on the back of Bud's neck, where it stuck out like a small tumor. The Indian then cut the skin with his pocket-knife, and the ball fell to the floor. Trainer is now out of bed and almost well.

Satan's March.

Hurrah for a tramp through the world so wide!
I'll listen to none; for none I'll bide:
But away! away! while yet I may,
Ere I find I've lost the light of day.
I'll jostle the weak as I pass along,
And still their cries with a careless song;
And stifle the thoughts that in me rise
When I hear the beggar's pitiful cries.
I'll tread on the toes of the harmless tramp,
As he pauses to count his earnings scant,
And laugh a merry, jovial laugh,
As I watch him fume at my heartless chaff.
I'll bury the innocent man in crime;
And mock at the skeleton hand of Time;
And on, forever on I'll go,
Till I've thronged the regions of sin below.
Nothing will hinder, none will I heed,
Till I've filled the land with my poison seed,
For under the banner of Satan bold
I'll lay my traps for the poor and old.
I'll help myself to the widows' mite;
And plunder the rich when they're out of sight,
And leave behind my guilty load,
Ere I join the throng on the sinner's road.
I'll sink the ship as she rides the wave,
And sing o'er the noble sailor's grave,
And choke the prayer he fain would breathe,
And smother his words before I leave.
I'll join the postman on his beat,
And turn his steps to a quiet street,
And there I'll stifle his angry shout
As I turn the letters inside out.
I'll scratch from some their tone of grace;
And stuff them each in a different case;
And some will wonder and many weep,
As the puzzles their anxious hopes will greet.
When the days are dull and the wind is bleak,
And my limbs from the cold are stiff and weak,
I'll drop a spark on a mansion fair
And thaw my bones as I mount the stair.
I'll tip from the track the hurrying train,
And bind the brave as they try in vain
To lift the motionless mass from the ground,
And rescue the wounded scattered round.
I'll join the gossiping women's band,
And stir their schemes with a crafty hand,
And rousing their fury high as the lark,
I'll vanish away in the mist and dark.
I'll enter unseen the happy home,
And drop on the shelf contentions bone,
Then gleefully leave when I see they've found
And are sweeping my friendly gift around.
I'll robe myself as a traveller's guide,
And up through the rugged mountain side,
With a friendish laugh, and close behind
I'll follow the traveller old and blind,
And clasp log his trustful hand in mine,
With feverish strength which gives no sign.
I'll guide his helpless stumbling feet
Up through the paths untrod and steep,
And swiftly adown the farther side
I'll watch his feet unhindered slide.
And only my laugh with its mocking ring,
Too late shall a note of warning bring,
I'll draw from the trusting maiden's side
A heart with its love long true and tried,
And low at her feet like a heap of dust
I'll shatter the idols of faith and trust.
And out from the world and its passing throng
I must choose me subjects hale and strong;
Those who will help me hand in hand
To wave my flag over every land.
And far and near to crown with shame,
And hurl those down from the heights of fame
Who have struggled long in the pitiless tide
Of merciless fate and a great world's pride.

Silver Wedding Bells.

With the compliments of the Author to Mr. and Mrs E. S. Cummer, London, Ont.

Silver Wedding Bells, to-night!
Over all the vanished years,—
With what measure of delight,—
With what sorrow, with what tears,
From the fast
Receding past,
Comes a vision of the way
—Leading onward and above—
Since that other "Wedding Day"
With its mystic hope and love.

THEN, the skies were bright and clear,—
Life in roseate colors drest,—
All the future seem'd so near,
With its wealth and well-earned rest;
Not a cloud
Did then enshroud
Any hope or promised cheer;
Gifts and favors, every one,
Everything that heart held dear,
Seem'd so easy to be won.

But in all the years since then Mingled joy and pain have blent
Sorrow oft returned again;
Weary hours, in watching spent,
Brought to grief
But slight relief:
Trusted friends did trust betray;
Blighted hopes—an ill-timed throng—
Made life bitter. All the way
Right seem'd feebler far than Wrong.

Now—this place of vantage gained—
What a vision of surprise!
Hindrances, that gall'd and chained,
All were blessings in disguise;
And the losses,
And the crosses,
And the weary hours of pain
—By the Grace of God, above,—
Are transmitted into gain
In th' alembic of His love.

Not our way but His is best;
All things done by Him are right;
All His pathways lead to rest;
All His nights to clearer light.
Far away
A glorious Day
Breaks upon the Hills of God;
Who, as Maker, Saviour, Friend,
Makes the way, in weakness trod,
In "Eternal Life" to end.

Toronto, May 2nd, 1887. L. A. MORRISON.

Sydney Smith described the future condition of Croker as "disputing with the recording angel about the date of his sins."

The financial market here is often in a very chaotic state. Money is quoted scarce and tight, and when money is tight the banks are very full, as might be expected.

The Cheyenne Indians are said to be eating their ponies. Their ponies must differ materially from the pony of the white man. Here a man drinks a pony frequently with comparative ease.

Higher education has made great advancement in Greece during recent years. The lyceum for girls has a staff of 76 teachers and 1,500 pupils. Illiteracy in the kingdom is rare, even in the out-of-the-way hill countries.

It is reported that a recent fire destroyed the ancestral home of Confucius, and, with it, all its art and literary treasures. The building was erected 600 B. C., and the direct male descendants of the great philosopher have dwelt there for 2,000 years.

It is said that a very ardent republican deputy, M. Raspail, who was banished from France by the third Napoleon' asked the privilege to smash up the monarch's crown with his own hands. An accident prevented his doing so; but the hammer with which the bauble was broken up was presented to him. This is an amusing illustration of the intense hatrid with which Napoleon is remembered by many of the French Republicans.

A curious premonition of death occurred to Isaac Mushrush, a workman who was killed by the explosion of a boiler, near Pittsburg recently. On Sunday, the day before the explosion, he was much depressed in spirits, and told his wife he feared some great calamity. At 2 o'clock Monday afternoon the explosion occurred, and Mushrush was killed. At the same hour, before it was possible for the news of the accident to reach his home, his little child left his play and rushed into the house to his mother, crying, "Oh, mamma, papa is killed, papa is killed."

SOME STORIES OF CATS.

William Tanner, of Eagle Grove, was aroused from sleep the other night by the loud mewing of his cat, which had entered his sleeping-room, jumped on his bed and was clawing the clothing at a great rate. He dashed the animal to the floor and turned over for another nap, but at the same moment he noticed an odor of smoke and going into the hall discovered a vigorous blaze in a back closet. He doesn't know how the fire started, but he feels sure that if it hadn't been for the cat he would have been cremated alive. Tom is now in high favor in the household and dines on the best at the table.

During the mild weather of a couple of weeks ago a Dubuque man let the fire in his furnace go out, but filled the furnace with kindling wood and coal, so that when the next cold snap came along he could start the fire without trouble. The snap appeared in due time, and he lighted the fire without opening the door. A few minutes afterwards an unearthly howling was heard at the register in the sitting-room, and the household cat was pulled out, looking like a wreck of her former self; her hair singed off, whiskers gone and her body covered with burns. Tabby's present quarters are beneath the refrigerator.

Some six months ago Mr. L. C. White, of Norfolk, Va., removed to Stanton. He brought his family by steamer up James River to Richmond and thence by rail to Stanton, a total distance of 276 miles. His wife brought with her a handsome Maltese cat, which disappeared shortly after the arrival of the family in Stanton and could not be found, although search was made for it everywhere. Later on Mrs. White received a letter from her sister, who resides in Norfolk, informing her that the cat had walked into her house a few days before. Mrs. White is very anxious to find out how the animal accomplished the journey.

The cats which are favorites with Toronto girls at present are jet black, pure white and Maltese. One young lady whose father is a well-known manipulator of pork, keeps an enormous maltese installed in luxurious quarters at Oconomone, where the summer residence of the family is situated. Tabby always shows the greatest pleasure when she sees her mistress in summer, and during the entire season always walks with her night and morning like a dog. The cat is unusually intelligent and has been trained to perform many tricks, one of which is to mount a piano stool, bow to the company and pat out a tune on the key-board.

Joseph Messenger, an Ontario farmer, has a cat which he always regarded as a terror to rats and mice, but now he thinks differently. One day, some time ago, while out in the barn, he saw a big rat jump out from a barrel, and on looking in beheld a colony of young rats snugly installed there. As the quickest means of getting rid of the pests the farmer brought out his famous mouser, but to his great astonishment the animal took the rats under her wing and began to treat them as if they were her own offspring. After bringing in some of his friends to witness the curious spectacle Messenger slaughtered them without pity, whereat Grimalkin moaned dolefully.

He Should Have Lied.

"If I'd been little George Washington I'd have lied about cutting the cherry tree," he said as he laid down his school-history.

"You would!" exclaimed the mother. "And why?"

"Well, then it would have been laid to the hired man."

"And then?"

"And then there'd have been the all-firedest fight between him and the old man Washington anybody ever saw! Little George was way off on that cherry tree business."

All in the Family.

A young man and his wife went house-hunting last week.

"We want a flat," said the husband to the first landlord he encountered.

"All right; I have flats to rent. How many are there of you?" asked the landlord.

"Just two flats," was the serene answer.

Misunderstood.

"Do you like lambs?" he asked her in a pastoral voice during a lull in the conversation. They had been discussing the charms of country life.

"No," she answered, "I don't like the meat, but I'm passionately fond of the gravy."

Higher Education.

"Yes, sir; I'm in favor of this higher education for weemin," said a progressive old farmer at a schoolboard meeting.

"I think it's a good thing for 'em, and I'm goin' to have my gals put clean through compound fractions and the first part of gogerfy; and I do' know but I'll let 'em tech a little grammer. I tell you, gintlemen, the world is a-pergressin', an' we've got to pergress with it or git left."

Letting the Cat Out of the Bag.

"Now, children," said a country mother who was going out, "be real good while I'm away, and be sure you don't go near the churn where I hid them nut-cakes."

A Considerate Youth.

Mother to wayward son—"I saw you kissing the servant girl on the stairs."

Wayward son—"That's just about the size of it."

Mother—"Well, ain't you ashamed of your conduct?"

Son—"No, that's the servant girl's privilege, and I don't propose to rob her of it."

Found in a Medicine Chest.

Oh, I come with the roses and summer caloric,
With scents from the woodland and sewer and sea;
I bring with me painkiller, pills paregoric,
Turkish rhubarb, quinine and the anemone;
I robe every valley and meadow in beauty,
With remedies herby and medicines rooty,
Whatever your trouble I've something to suit ye,
For I am the summer time—carol with me.

She Tests Her Art.

Dilby—"Help yourself to a few more of those mushrooms."

Filtrip—"Thanks; but how do I know they're not toad-stools!"

Dilby—"Bless you, if they were, cook would already have been as dead as a door-nail."

Markdale Standard.

C. W. Rutledge, Proprietor.

MARKDALE, MAY. 19. 1887.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—An English member of Parliament advocates the establishment of a penny postage.

—The Canadian Pacific has about completed arrangements for a through connection with Chicago via the Canada Southern and the Wabash.

—At Monday's meeting of the Montreal City Council the site requested by Sir. George Stephen and Sir. Donald Smith for the Royal Victoria hospital, was granted. It is expected that building operations will be commenced without delay.

—The English mint is hard at work on the new coinage to be issued on June 22. A very fine profile of an eldorly queen, modelled by Mr. Bœhm will be used, with varying crowns for the several coins.

—The New York Sun has a plan devised for the capture of Canada in the event of relations continuing "strained," and says that there is in consequence no use in talking about Commercial Union.

—A great conflagration occurred in Quebec on Saturday, destroying the entire block bounded by St. Roch, King, Queen and St. Dominique streets. The loss is estimated at $125,000.

—A company with a capital of five million dollars was organized this week in Kingston by New York capitalists for the development of the iron mines along the Kingston and Pembroke railway.

J. J. C. Abbott, Mayor of Montreal has been appointed Senator; he left Montreal on Saturday evening last for Toronto, where he was sworn in as a member of the Privy Council by the Governor-General, and assumed his duties in the Senate on Tuesday.

About 15,000 people assembled in the Queen's Park, Toronto on Saturday afternoon at the public meeting called to protest against Mr. Wm. O'Brien's mission. Resolutions to that effect and also expressing confidence in the Parliament of the United Kingdom for a wise and just settlement of all questions relating to Ireland were carried almost unanimously.

—Great Britain has had to take over Zululand after all. British people, attracted by the gold discoveries, have been flocking into the Transvaal at such a rate that that territory also is becoming British by mere colonization. The territory which the British Government rightly refused to take at the point of the bayonet is appearently adding itself to the British empire.

USEFUL TO KNOW.—Mrs. John Siddell, of Orton, Ont., was afflicted for years with contraction of the broncial pipes and tightness of the chest. She was cured by the internal and external use of Hagyards Yellow Oil. This remedy cures rheumatism, neuralgia, inflammation, congestion, and all external and internal pains.

Meaford Road.

Milk drawing started last Monday morning.

Arbor day was duly kept by the teacher and pupils of the school. Seeds were sown and trees planted. The Trustees should put up the fence and gates; it would be quite an improvement.

Mr. W. Buchanan Jr. lost one of his horses last week. Cause, inflamation.

William Gilbert got one of his hands badly cut last Saturday while working in the Eclipse steam saw mill. He was cutting slabs with a butting saw Drs. Brodie and McCullough who dressed the wound had to amputate part of one of the fingers.

David Johnston got one of his cows front leg broken last Sunday morning by being chased over a pair of bars by a dog.

Kimberley.

From our own correspondent

John Stafford of this place has formed life partnership with Sarah Mariah Lanton, of Artemesia, and intends going to the United States. John is one of our best citizens.

Fall Wheat is looking very nicely. Seeding is nearly through.

Parties owning land on the flats of Beaver River are applying for money under the Ontario Drainage Act for to clean out the River. This will be a good work if properly done as there is over 2,000 acres of the best land in Ontario in the flats.

I notice in your last paper that at the meeting of the officers of County Institutes held in Toronto, D.R. Ellis of Kimberley shewed his good judgement by seconding a resolution in favor of Reciprocity with the United States. I am sorry T. Kells, of Vandeleur was opposed to that. His argument against it was that there was two much British Blood in him. Mr. Kells is mistaken as to the kind of blood that bothers him, as Britains want free trade or Reciprocity with the world. Next time we send Mr. Kells on such business we will have to bleed him some.

The Crooks Act Commissioners did not give Mr. Condy a license this year. I believe it was a mistake. Mr. Condy will keep a Temperance House.

Fishing is the order of the day. The boys from Meaford and Thornbury visit us often.

BE ON YOUR GUARD

Don't allow a cold in the head to slowly and surely run into Catarrh, when you can be cured for 25c. by using Dr, Chase's Catarrh Cure. A few applications cure insipient catarrh; 1 to 2 boxes cures ordinary catarrh; 1 to 5 boxes is guaranteed to cure chronic catarrh. Try it. Only 25c. and sure cure. Sold by all druggists. 333-83

Walter's Falls.

From our own correspondent.

O Spring, gentle Spring
You're a deuced good thing.

But there. I will not proceed in the attempt to prepetrate a rhyme on the season, for not being in the habit of invoking the muses, and actuated besides, by a wholesome dread of the hapless fate (total extinction by the Editor) of the ordinary spring Bard, you will not be annoyed with any rhapsodies of mine but simply the endeavor to give a truthful record, of good solid, prosaic, practical, material prosperity, as exemplified here, that will likely be welcomed by local residents and may even interest outsiders.

A perfect building mania seems to have broken out here, wonder is it catching, for the air is thick with contemplated buildings, what will be the upshot is hard to say, perhaps be the means of inducing the influx of vast multitudes from various quarters, to become permanent residents, and in due time there will follow inavitably, the vices and misery, ever attendant on great centres of population, I for one, would like to raise my voice to the effect that this passion for building be kept under proper control, in view of the probable deplorable results.

Mr. John Robert Wickham, ex-school Teacher, and now partner of Dr. McLellan in the general sore goods business has put up a handsome residence of veneered brick the first of the kind in this place and which he now occupies.

Doctor McCullough, and Mr. Robert Clark, proprietor of the famous Roller Mill's have both commenced building spacious residences.

Mr. Thomas Campbell has also began to build on his lot, which is conveniant to the river.

Mr. Richard Olmsted, last fall put up a large lumber shed 110 feet in length, which was completed last week.

Mr. David Brown, of the Woolen Mill's, having taken a partner in the business, Mr. George King, they have resolved to put in additional machinery, and will be prepared to do a rushing business in the coming season.

Mr. Wm. Shepherdson the very popular auctioneer, and who has been mainly instrumental, in procuring for us the establishment of Monthly Fairs, has thought proper to settle amongst us, which will certainly be a valuable acquisition to the place, he has already put up a fine stable, and also an enclosure for his celebrated horse.

A Foot-ball Club has been organized here, and play commenced last week, and every evening on the village green, can be witnessed, the inspiriting sight, and sounds of both men and boys, vigorsly engaged in that most exciting of athletic pastimes.

Headache, Biliousness, Dyspepsia and Indigestion relieved and cured at once by Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Try it. Sample free.

Flesherton.

Cheese operations commenced in the Flesherton Cheese Factory on Monday last. This factory opened this season with the largest patronage ever before subscribed 90 patrons have already placed their names upon the roll. The facilities for manufacture is much ahead of any former year. In addition to the old factory, Mr. Stewart has already almost completed a commoidous curing store room 24x36 which makes it now one of the best equipped Cheese factories in this part of the Province.

Queer Courting.

"Saints, sinners and the Beecher family" has been printed as the remark of the late venerable Dr. Todd of Pittsfield, Mass. Possibly the following anecdote of the father, which I have from his eldest son, the Rev. William H. Beecher may illustrate the peculiarities of his family: The old gentleman had lost his second or third wife, and was resolved to marry again. Hence at a family gathering in Cincinnati he said: 'My children, hitherto I have married altogether to suit myself, but now I intend to marry again and am willing to marry to suit you if you can think of any suitable and proper person who will have me." The children put their heads together and concluded that a certain Mrs. Jackson who kept a large boarding house in Boston, and was a member of Edward's church, would make him a capital wife and it was arranged for the Rev. Edward to negotiate with Mrs. Jackson. After waiting a week or so the old gentleman became impatient and started for Boston, driving to Mrs. Jackson's house, called for her, and unfolded at once the object of his mission. The good lady was thunderstruck, protested that she had no idea of Marrying, and couldn't think of such a thing—it was impossible. To all of which the old doctor replied that he was equally surprised. The arrangement had been made in Cincinnati. Edward was to prepare the way, and he had made his arrangements to preach in Andover and Amherst and to attend the May anniversaries, and expected, of course, to take her with him as his wife. At this point the good lady expressed herself as shocking that Edward had never spoken to her on the subject; nor would it have made any difference if he had, for, as to marrying again, she could not and would not—not even the venerable and celebrated Dr. Lyman Beecher! After a moment's pause the doctor said:—"My dear Mrs. Jackson, I am sorry you have so much feeling about it; but I will stay a day or two, and we will talk this matter up," to which the lady responded that her house was full, she had no suitable room for him and could not entertain him. "Oh, never mind, then, "said the doctor, 'I will go round to Edward's and come and take tea with you." And, sure enough, at tea time he was there and sat next to Mrs. Jackson at the table. It was one of those large boarding-houses on Bacon street at which the lady of the house presided as a sort of matron, and to the tea table of which the boarders kept coming and going for two or three hours. Of course the old doctor became impatient, and kept whispering to Mrs. Jackson:—"I want to see you alone!" "I must see you alone!" "Can't you see me alone?" At length Mrs. Jackson left the table with him, and then went to a room by themselves. What then occurred God only knows, but the family story is that the good lady protested, expressed her amazement, and even said: "you must be crazy; the subject is too serious and solmn to be thought of without prayer to God." "Have you not prayed about it?" said the doctor. "Prayed about it? No," said Mrs. Jackson; "have not thought of such a thing," "Let us pray,' was the solemn response of Beecher and they knelt down and prayed. Of course the Almighty was argued with; what a good wife Mrs. Jackson would make him, what a blessing it would be to her; how much good she would do in the holy cause; what a disappointment if she did not marry him. Then observing her to be in a melting mood, he reached out his hand, took hold of her, and said, "Amen," Yes, and Amen it was. The grand boarding house was broken up to the surprise of all Boston, and Mrs. Jackson became Mrs. Lyman Beecher, making him a "capital wife" indeed.—[Cleveland Plaindealer.

ENJOY LIFE.

What a truely beautiful world we live in! Nature gives us grandeur of Mountains, glens and oceans, and thousands o means of enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health; but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up disheartened, discouraging and worn out with diseases, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof that Green's August Flower will make them free from disease, as when born. Dispepsia and Liver Complaint are the direct causes of seventy five per cent, of such maladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the head, Palpitation of the Heart and other distressing symptoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottles, 10, cents Try it.

My First Discount Sale

It will be GENUINE in the fullest sense of the word.

—:FOR:—

ONE • DAY • ONLY

MAY 24TH.

I will sell American Watches, Clocks and Jewellry 25 per cent off every dollar.

This will be a rare opportunity to obtain goods at close cost prices. $1800,00 worth of stock to select from. It will pay to come prepared to take home a fine Watch, Clock or Castor.

A $20 WALTHAM WILL COME AT FIFTEEN DOLLARS.

Goods marked in plain figures. Terms Cash

A pleasure to explain quality and price to all who call.

W. A. BROWN,

The Peoples' Reliable Jeweller,

M-:-A-:-R-:-K-:-D-:-A-:-L-:-E.

MARKDALE CARRIAGE WORKS.

R. McNALLY:—Would hereby announce to the people of Markdale and the public generally that I have moved into my new carriage shop opposite the Markdale House, where I will manufacture every article in the wagon and carriage line, and having long experience in the business and by using first class material, I can guarantee satisfaction to every one who will favor me with their order.

Repairing, Painting and Trimming promptly attended to.

I also make a first class Stone Machine which will lift the stone, carry it to any desired place and leave in position on the fence.

A call respectfully solicited,

R. McNALLY, Proprietor

MARKDALE SASH and DOOR FACTORY.

Having erected and fitted up in every detail a Sash, Door and Plain Factory, containing all the latest and most approved machinery, everything being new, I am now prepared to turn out

Sash, Doors, Blinds, Mouldings, Hollow Battons,

FRAMES, LATH, FENCE PICKETS, &c.,

And everything needed in the building trade, in a manner second to none in Canada, and having engaged superior mechanics in every department, I would now respectfully solicit public patronage.

Every Effort Made to fill Orders Promptly

PINE LUMBER Dressed and Undressed

Direct from North Shore, all sizes, on hand. Plain and Fancy Turning done.

Careful Attention to Orders from a Distance.

303 THOS. McNEA.

IMPORTANT!

TO all users of Machine Oils, don't forget to call on E. S. MABEE, Sign of the Cross-Cut Saw, Markdale, and ask for the CASTOR E. OIL, it is unequalled by any.

The Arora Water White Oil is equal to American for brillance of light.

Empire Oil Co.,

Refiners & Manufacturer's,

349-76 London and Toronto

Editor of the STANDARD.

—Though Mr. Gorsline wishes ...se this correspondence, and I be... he honestly wishes he had never ...d it, I cannot do so until we see ...much his remaining arguments ...worth.

...m pleased to see he has deigned ...d them the the Scripture Read... at last, and am also pleased to ...he has devoted a large portion of ...letter to myself instead of his sub...

Let him remember that it takes ...eckr heap of anecdotes, Latin ...ases and flowery words to over... ...e solid facts. Stern Logic (which ...as stated in his first letter, must ...ly be one of the lost arts) throws ...l things aside.

...fter throwing away the chaff. I ...he has one rather reasonable look... statement regarding the Regula... ...s. He wisely omits the first Re... ...on, viz: Every Public and High ...l shall be opened with the Lord's ...er, and close with the reading of Scripture readings and the Lord's ...ver or the prayer sanctioned by ...Dept. of Education.

...s there anything here forcing the ...ding of Selections, if they were ...pe led to do so the Trustees would ...of had the privelege of taking the ...dings out of the schools.

...do not know Mr. Gorsline's legal ...fications but know the Education ...pt. interpret the Regulations as I ...ed in last letter and that is suffi...nt.

Regulations 286 were made to suit ...request of the representatives of ...various churches who wished to ...ke the Readings obligatory.

My first letter shows that the Se...ions were introduced so secretly ...at nearly all the representatives of ...e clergy and Press including the ...Mail" knew of them personally and ...on some of our leading ministers ...e using them in their families, ...o better way could be thought of ...n introducing them through the ...spector.

...n regard to my insisting that the ...dings contains 2nd Chap. 1st ...ter, he will have to look it up again, ...nd the verses were omitted but ...because they did not suit the ...man Catholics.

...n conclusion it is to be hoped that ...r. Gorsline will always have due re...rence for the word of God, no mat...r under what binding it appears.

T. L. MOFFAT, Jr.

CLIPPINGS.

THE CORN FLEET.—The following ...ls loaded with corn from Chicago ...rived and discharged at the C. P. R. ...rator:—Lake Forest, Lotus, Granger, ...rge J. H. Mason and Manmee ...key. They had on nearly 150,000 ...shels, which has nearly all been ship...d to points in the Eastern States.—[O. ...Advertiser.

WHAT IS IT?—Not a snuff, powder or ...id, but a preparation peculiar to ...elf. Easy to use, pleasant to effect, ...atarrh Balm will positively cure Cold in ...he Head. Catarrh and kindred disorded.

AN OLD OWEN SOUNDER IN LUCK.—The ...ife of Mr. Fred Wade, editor of the ...Timiskaming Free Press, and who at one ...time resided in Owen Sound, has sur...prised her husband by presenting him ...with triplets, two girls and one boy. ...One latter died but the others are doing ...well. Mr. and Mrs. Wade spent their ...honeymoon in Owen Sound last summer. ...—O. Sound Tizer.

TARRAC.—Is the discovery of a lead...ng physician, and after years experi...menting it is now offered you in a per...fected state as a never-failing cure for ...Coughs, Cold and Throat and Lung ...Complaint.

SAD DROWNING CASE.—Wm. Stephens, ...old man about 62 years of age, brother ...to our townsman Mr. Henry Stephens, ...Smith, deliberately committed sucide ...Tuesday evening by jumping off the ...west pier into the river. Mr. John ...Harrison and others who were near ...went to his rescue with a boat, but when ...they got him out life was extinct. No ...particular cause is assigned for the ...rash deed. The old man was rather ...disposed to be melancholy at times, and ...it is thought he committed the deed ...while in this state of mind. No inquest ...was considered necessary.—[O. S. Ad...vertiser.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simiar vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh Asthma and all throat and Lung Affections also a positive and radical cure for nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this receipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Send by mail by addressing with stamp naming this paper W. A. Noyes 149 Powers Block Rochester, N. Y. 24-35 L. O. W.

LOCAL NEWS.

W. Jackson the photographer moved this week to his new gallery.

DR. JUG'S Medicine should be used by every one at this season of the year as it is the best blood purifier in the market and will reinvigorate the frame and prepare it to bear the heats of summer. The pills are justly called the "Little Gems" as they operate without causing either griping or pain and are a sure cure for nervousness, biliousness and other affections of the Liver and Kidneys. Buy them and try them and you won't regret your investment. Sold by Turner & Co., Markdale.

"GRIPS" PREMIUM PLATE.—Grip, Canada's Comic Paper, has just issued a very fine lithographed group of Reform Politicians in Canada. This is a companion group to the Conservative Leaders issued from the same office last year and is the same size, 18 x 26 inches. When framed the pair make a handsome ornament for any library, dining-room or reading room. The portraits are well executed, and the plates are a credit to Canadian enterprise. They are sold seperately for 25 cents each, or a copy of either plate is sent free to any one paying $2 for one year in advance to GRIP, or subscribers sending $1.10 will receive GRIP for six months and their choice of either Reform or Conservative groups. Address, GRIP, Toronto, Ont.

LACROSSE.—A very exciting game of Lacrosse took place in Flesherton on Friday 13th between the juniors of that place and the Markdale juniors. Game was called at 3:30 p. m. the Flesherton scored the first gool in 5 minutes the second which was very exciting and hotley contested was won for Markdale the ball being secured by Anderson and passed to Benson, who with a neat and well delivered throw sent the rubber sphere between the flags; time one hour and a half. After a lapse of ten minutes the game was again resumed in a short time the sphere was sent down to the Flesherton goal, bvt was disputed the mpires disputing, it was finally settled by the captains of the respective clubs in making the next goal the final one which was won by the Flesherton in twenty minutes. After the usual cheers the boys wended their way to Hotel de Mnnshaws, where they were entertained to the contents of a well filled table. Arriving home in due time feeling none the worse over their defeat.—COM.

A contemporary asks: Can any man tell us why it is that so many men want credit when trading at home, and when they pay cash they go away? We have noticed a good many times that the man who takes a Toronto paper pays in advance, while his home paper goes delinquent, as though is was an accomodation to the publisher to send it to him year after year for nothing. We have noticed that Merchants who grudgingly give small orders for printing at home, and then expect to have the bill traded out, will give large orders to canvassers for city offices and pay cash for the same without a murmer. We have noticed that men and women who owe large dry goods bills at home, go abroad and pay cash down for what they get. We have noticed that when men wish to buy a wagon, drag or plow, they generally pay cash down to agents, while their friends or neighbor, is obliged to wait for a more conveniant season. We think this is all wrong. We ought to be just to those who have been accommodating to us, before we are generous to those we do not know.

Church Notes.

J. C. Madill filled Rev. A. Wilson's pulpit last Sunday with acceptance.

The English church premises has received its annual trimming and dressing and shows commendable taste on the part of its officials and Rev. Mr. Ward in particular.

The grounds from the street leading to the main entrance of the Methodist Church have recently been greatly improved by slatted work, and trees planted in front of the property.

The Rev. R. S. Radcliffe of Mt Forest leaves early in June on a three month trip to England.

COLLINGWOOD Methodist District Meeting will be held at Thornbury on the 25th May.

SOUTHERN ASTHMA CURE
DOUBLE TREATMENT IN EACH PACKAGE
INSTANT RELIEF FOR
ASTHMA AND BRONCHITIS
BY MAIL ON RECEIPT OF PRICE
SAMPLES, 25c.; REGULAR SIZE, $1.00
ADDRESS FULFORD & CO., BROCKVILLE, ONT.

THE Reliable JEWELLER
Peoples W. A. BROWN. Ont.
Markdale

HEAD QUARTERS
—FOR—
Books, Stationery, Fancy Goods, Toys, Wall Paper, &c.
Toronto St. next Door to the Mansion House, Markdale.

A. Dinsmore returns his sincere thanks for the very liberal support accorded him since commencing as above, and hopes by strict attention to business and moderate prices to merit a continuance of public appreciation and patronage. Those requiring
WALL PAPERS
would consult their own interest by examining his stock, consisting of over Three Thousand pieces at from 5 to 75c. per Roll. Sunday Schools requiring Liberary Books will find Hundreds to select from and at such FAVORABLE TERMS as are sure to satisfy.
☞ Note the fact.—That until I commenced business there was no such thing as a special discount allowed to Sunday Schools, or if you wanted Books could not get them unless by sending to Toronto or elsewhere, now your wants can be supplied at your Door and at lower prices than Toronto. I therefore with confidence appeal for public support. A full line of School Books, Stationery, &c., always on hand, also agent for the DOMESTIC PAPER PATTERNS. Agent also for The Harden Star Hand Grenade for Extinguishing Fires. ☞ NOTE THE ADDRESS,
A. Dinsmore.

New Tailor.

Will Stoddart, late of England and Jersy City, U. S. begs to inform the citizens of MARKDALE and surrounding community, that he has opened a TAILORING SHOP over Mr. W. J. McFarland's Store, where he is prepared to do all work entrusted to him in the Latest and Nobbiest Styles; as I will inspect all work before leaving the Shop, customers may rely on having work turned out first-class in every particular; trusting that I may receive a fair share of the public patronage
I remain,
Faithfully your's,
WILL STODDART.
Markdale, March 14th, 1887.

New General Provision Store

THE undersigned would hereby respectfully intimate to the inhabitants of Markdale and surrounding country that I've opened up a general Provision store where I intend to keep on hand a general supply of all kinds of provisions such as:—
FLOUR, OATMEAL, CORNMEAL INDIAN CORN, GRASS SEED, OATS, BRAN, SHORTS, CHOPP, SCREENINGS, also a quantity of SEED GRAIN, HAMS, BACON, LARD, &c., in fact everything people want in this line.
Shop one door west of Joe Lamb's Blacksmith shop.
Soliciting a share of public patronage I am respectfully yours,
Jas. Miller
MARKDALE.

COME!
To Stephen's
FOR
Your Carrots, Mangels, and Turnip Seeds, we have the best variety in the market. REMEMBER Our Seeds are FRESH
Oil Cake! Oil Cake!
—OIL—CAKE!
—AT—
Stephen's
DRUG STORE.
Your's Respectfully,
R. L. Stephen.

R. S. Rae, Tailor.
REMOVED.
In returning thanks to my numerous customers for liberal patronage during the past 14 years in which I have done business in Markdale, and soliciting a continuance of the same, I would also intimate that I have removed to my premises on Mill Street, next door to Stephen's Drug Store, and opposite to the Post Office, where I shall be happy to meet all my customers.
Respectfully Yours,
R. S. RAE,
Markdale

Stock Taking SALE
At the Toronto House,
Markdale.
SLAUGHTER PRICES
FOR CASH.
Wm. Brown.

BE SURE & GET YOUR PUMPS,
—FROM—
J. T. QUINN,
MARKDALE,
He makes as good a pump as there is in the market, and at the lowest possible prices, besides it is so convenient for getting repairs besides when buying from a distance.
Have some style about you and support home enterprise by buying from Quinn.

OWEN SOUND
MARBLE WORKS
H. B. HARRISON,
MANUFACTURER OF
MARBLE AND GRANITE
MONUMENTS & HEADSTONES,
Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.
JUST RECEIVED
3 Carloads Finest Variegated Marble
☞ Largest stock in the Dominion to select from. Personally selected at the quarries in Vermont. Will be sold at prices which defy competition.
SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.
N. B.—Beware of Monuments and Headstones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered together, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide the imperfections, and called White Bronze.
H. B. HARRISON

ROBT. ASKIN,
UNDERTAKER,
MARKDALE,
FUNERAL FURNISHINGS
supplied on the shortes notice.
A Splendid Hearse
for hire at modcrate rates.
—All kinds of—
FURNITURE
In Stock at bottom prices.
PICTURE FRAMING
Done on short notice.
ROBT. ASKIN.

WM. BREADNER.
Carpender and Builder
GEORGE ST., MARKDALE.
ALL kinds of building and house carpenter work done in the village or country. Call early before the rush comes. 339-52

FOR SALE.
A Thoroughbred trotting stallion with Pedigree, in good condition nine years old, color dark dapple bay, also his Harness, Cutter and Sulkey, for further particulars apply to.
THOMAS GAWLEY,
338-84 Holland Centre P O.

CARD OF THANKS.
In thanking my customers for their liberal patronage in the past, I have much pleasure in being still able to supply them with the following celebrated machines, viz.
The Watson all-steel two-horse twine Binder.
The Watson Deering Binder.
The Watson Improved Lion Reaper.
The New Humming Mower.
The Humming-bird Mower.
The Watson Daisy Rake.
The Mann Champion Rake.
The Tolton Pea Harvester.
The Mann Broad-cast Seeder and Harrows Combined.
The Champion Combined Drill, Colter & Scott, Oshawa.
The best Plow's and Harrows in the market.
Root Cutters, Grain Crushers, Fanning mills. Land Rollers.
Agent for the Watersou's Co's Machinery and Steam Threshers.
Horse Powers, Wagons Buggies, Democrats, and every implement a farmer requires. Parties reqiring anything in above lines will find it to their advantage to call at my new implement house opposite R. McNally's Carriage works, where Mr. R. Robertson will be pleased to wait on customers in my absence.
J. H. CARSON, Agent
148 61 Markdale.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.
WILL CURE OR RELIEVE
BILIOUSNESS, DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, JAUNDICE, ERYSIPELAS, SALT RHEUM, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, DIZZINESS, DROPSY, FLUTTERING OF THE HEART, ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH, DRYNESS OF THE SKIN,
And every specific of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD,
T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.

AN OCEAN GRAVEYARD

BY J. MACDONALD OXLEY.

I.

It is not more than a mere dot of dry land in an immensity of ocean space, the restlessness of whose hissing surges is so incessant that here might Jeremiah have stood when he said, "there is sorrow on the sea; it cannot be quiet." Sorrow there is, too, right often, and sorrow there has been ever since Sable Island first figured in human history. No other island on this globe can show so appalling a record of shipwreck and disaster.

Now parched beneath the burning rays of an unshaded summer sun, now swathed in chilling robes of mist or snow, ofttimes deluged with torrents of rain, and at all seasons blown upon by the tireless winds, Sable Island, remarkable as regards its position, its shape, its structure, and still more as regards its history, has somehow strangely escaped the notice of those who travel, and remains to this day shrouded in an obscurity no less remarkable. It does not, however, lack for mention in history, and we might well linger a while over the references made to it by various writers during the past three centuries and a half. But of these I have written elsewhere, and my purpose now is rather to recall its unequalled record of disaster, the full extent of which, indeed, can perhaps never be fully known.

A visit to Sable Island can be made only under certain conditions, and these conditions so unfrequently occur that it is no unusual thing for the passage there to be taken in vain. It lies due east from Nova Scotia, at a distance of about eighty-five miles, between the 43d and 14th degrees of N. lat., and the 59th of W. long. To one approaching from the north the island appears to be a succession of low sand-hills, thinly patched with struggling vegetation, having at the west end an elevation of some twenty feet, then gradually rising as you go eastward until they attain the height of eighty feet near the East End light, beyond which they slope away again until then merge into the northeast bar. Its general shape is that of a long, narrow crescent, measuring twenty-two miles from tip to tip, and one mile in breadth at its beat. The time was, as will be presently shown, when these measurements might easily have been doubled, but now each succeeding year finds them surely, steadily decreasing.

Perplexing as are the currents, and bewildering the fogs that beset the island, they are not by any means its worst feature. Far more fruitful of harm are the entangling shallows, which spread out so widely that for many a mile beyond the point where sea and sands meet and mingle there is not water enough to float a small schooner. Thus, at the northeast end on a windy day there may be seen some nine miles of roaring breakers before a depth of six fathoms is reached, and then four miles more of heavy cross-seas leading out to a depth of from ten to thirteen fathoms. At the northwest end the bar extends seaward nearly seventeen miles, after the same fashion, before the water is really deep. So that taking the length of the island and its bars together the scene presented in stormy weather is magnificent and awe-inrpiring beyond all possible powers of description, when in continuous line for over fifty miles the raging waves of the sea, rolling in unchecked from vast oceans spaces, foam out their fury upon the sandbanks, which seem to quake and quiver beneath their overwhelming onset.

The conditions which have been hinted at as prerequisite to effecting a landing upon Sable Island are that the day be fine and the wind securely settled in the south. The only good landing-place is on the north side; and even there the government steamer, which forms the sole connecting link between the island and the outside world, can come no closer than a mile, and must keep a vigilant lookout so that on the first sign of a change in the wind she may weigh anchor and make an offing without delay.

Let us suppose that the halcyon days of July have come, and that we have obtained permission to accompany the Newfield upon one of her regulor supply trips. The midsummer night passes quickly. Our ninety miles of open sea are soon accomplished, and as the morning sun climbs grandly upward from his bed among the eastern waves, his rich red rays crimson the creamy froth that fringes all the shore. We are in luck to-day, for old ocean is at peace with himself, and the south wind blows softly. How rare this is may be imagined from two entries in the superintendent's journal—one, to the effect that there had not been five fine days in four months; the other, that the steamer was eight days in trying to effect a landing. Fine though the day be to get safely ashore is no easy matter, for the long ocean rollers are tumbling in upon the beach with tireless energy, and no ordinary boat may run their gauntlet with impunity. But there is due provision made for this. Hardly has the steamer come to anchor when the beach is dotted with men and horses, one of the broad-beamed, high-stemmed surf-boats peculiar to the island is rapidly drawn on its wide-wheel cart to the water's edge, and after gallantly breasting the breakers comes swiftly towards us. Soon it is alongside, and the crew grasp eagerly at the mail-bags, whose contents will tell them what their friends and the rest of the world have been doing since the steamer's last visit. We are to return with them: and it will be a wise precantion to don our waterproofs and wear our closest-fitting caps, for there are some marine gymnastics before us, which may not improbably result in our undergoing an involuntary baptism that would content the most rigid immersionists ere reaching land. Seated in the stern sheets we look forward to the nearing surf with an anxiety which even the encouragement given by sleek, shining seals bobbing up serenely all about our boat, as if in cheery welcome, does not altogether allay. The crew bend lustily to their oars, and the helmsman standing high in the pointed stern, with loud command and brawny arm keeps the great boat true in her proper course, let the billows buffet her never so roughly, until, riding triumphantly upon the back of a huge combar, she is carried far up the beach and stranded amid a mass of seething waters. To spring from their seats and hold hard the boat, lest it be swept back by the receding wave, is the work of a moment for the dripping oarsmen, and then another foaming breaker, supplemented by a vigorous shove from their stalwart arms, sends their unwieldly craft up high and dry, and the spray-splashed passengers can step out upon terra firma.

The yielding sands do not make easy walking, and we plod slowly up the slight ascent until, going through a short pass between two hummocks, we suddenly emerge upon a scene so utterly different from what has hitherto met our gaze that we are fain to wonder for a moment if it may not possibly be a mirage or ocular delusion of some sort. Before us lies a broad valley, completely shut in from the sea by hills, which rise to right and left, and wave with a wealth of vegetation that is inexpressibly refreshing to eyes already wearied with the monotony of sand and sea. Ranged in an irregular square stand the buildings of the main station—the superintendent's spacious dwelling, where a warm welcome always awaits the new-comer, be he casual visitor or castaway, flanked by quarters for the staff, boat-houses, stores, and other outbuildings, while well-filled barn-yards lend an air of substantial comfort to the whole picture.

After exchanging greetings with the superintendent and his staff, who, delighted with this pleasant break in the monotony of their lives, crowd about us, eager for the latest news, our first thought is to climb the big flag staff and view the landscape from the crow's-nest perched perilously on high. The ascent accomplished, a wonderful panorama lies outspread before us. From beneath our feet the narrow island stretches east and west its bow-like form, holding a shallow lagoon, some eight miles long, in its centre, and presenting many an effective contrast of sandy upland and grassy meadow, bare, bleak beach and richly flowered nook, where fairies might hold their midnight revels. From the foreground, with its group of buildings, the eye roams over to the West End lighthouse, whence the men are now hurrying, pony-back, at the summons of the flag announcing the steamer's arrival. Every sandy peak or verdurous knoll bears some sad tradition. Baker's Hill, Trot's Cove, Scotchman's Head, French Gardens—so many silent records of human suffering. Then turning eastward we see the little burying-ground, nestling in the deep, rich grass, and consecrated to the last sleep of many a victim to the ocean's wrath. Nine miles farther down a telescope makes plain the flag-staff at the foot of the lake, and five miles beyond that the East End light, with its attendant buildings. Herds of wild ponies, jealously guarded by shaggy stallions, graze upon the hillsides, black duck and sheldrake in tempting flocks paddle about the innumerable ponds, while sea-birds fill the air with their harsh chatter, and whole regiments of seals bask in snug content along the sunny beach. Here and there the bleaching ribs of naval skeletons protrude half-buried from the sand, and the whole picture is set in a silver-frosted frame of seething surf.

II.

It does not take many hours to exhaust the sights on Sable Island, but many long nights might be spent around the superintendent's fireside ere the stories and legends he and his men delight in telling would be one-half exhausted. For every foot of the island is haunted ground, and the station dwellings are rich in relics, each one having its own connection with a shadowy and sorrowful past. The supernatural of course plays a leading part in these relations, and if one be but credulous enough, they may have their faith in ghosts revisiting the glimpses of the moon greatly strengthened by the legends of De Lery's heroic Friar, or King Charles's remorseful regicide, of the Pale Lady with the Bloody Finger, and a score of others which cast an eerie halo round this weird spot. I should greatly like to set forth some of them at length, were it not that the authentic annals of the place require all the space at my disposal.

Since the founding of the Humane Establishment, in 1802, a wreck register has been carefully kept, and on its pages may be read to-day the names of more than one hundred and fifty vessels that have come to their undoing on these fatal sands. Once entangled amid the shallows, once stranded upon the bars, and it was all over with the hapless craft, whether she were stately frigate, speedy steamer, clipper ship, or humble fisher's boat. Mr. Simon D. Macdonald, F. G. S., of Halifax, N. S., sometime ago prepared with great skill and care a most interesting chart of Sable Island, indicating so far as possible the exact locality and date of each disaster, as well as the character of the vessel wrecked; and looking at this chart the island is seen to be completely encircled by these grim proofs of its destructive powers.

A hasty glance at some of the more recent wrecks will lend an emphasis to the story told by the chart. In the years 1863 the fine steamer Georgia ended her career on the western bar, fortunately, however, without loss of life; and three years later the steamship Ephesus met with a like experience near the same spot, there being little or no salvage in either case. At the wreck of the schooner Ocean Traveller, in 1870, all the nine men composing her crew were lost. So was it with the Zephyr in 1873; and when the Portuguese Farto went to pieces, in 1875, the captain and two sailors perished. Then, in 1876, the American schooner Reeves found a grave, not only for herself, but for everyone on board; and in 1870 nine passengers were carried away by the billows at the stranding of the State of Virginia. The year 1882 was marked by the destruction of two Norwegian barge, with a loss of life in each case; 1883, by the wreck of the bark Britannia and the loss of thirteen lives; and 1884, by that of the splendid steamship Amsterdam, when three of the passengers paid the forfeit. This last disaster attracted a deal of attention throughout the United States because of some grossly exaggerated reports which were put in circulation as to the brutal treatment alleged to have been received by the unfortunate castaways at the hands of the staff, the simple truth being that a couple of the boat's crew got intoxicated with wine which had been saved from the wreck, and conducted themselves in such a manner as to frighten some of the women and children, for which offence they were severly punished by the superintendent.

It need hardly be said that even the tremendous total of one hundred and fifty-two wrecks falls short of representing the whole truth. On the contrary, for every wreck that is recorded, at least one other never to be known may be safely added. After many a storm do the waves cast up at the patrolman's feet the evidence of some fresh disaster—a shattered spar, an empty hen coop, a fragment of cabin furniture, or perchance a bruised and battered corpse. And then, alas! there must be added the dread work done by the distant bars, from which not even such pathetic tokens as these find their way ashore. The following brief account of a disaster that occurred in December, 1884, will serve to convey some idea of what it means to be wrecked on Sable Island.

The A. H. S. was a French brigantine en route from St. Pierre to Boston with a cargo of fish. Toward evening of December 19th she was caught in a violent snow-storm and hurled upon the West End bar, beginning to break up almost immediately. She had a crew of seven men on board. The thermometer stood at twelve degrees below zero, and the sufferings of the unhappy crew were so terrible that death assumed the guise of a welcome relief. Three were washed everboard when the boat struck, and although the water was strewn with floating debris, they made no effort to prolong their lives. The steward, frenzied with fright and pain, ran to his berth, seized a razor, cut his throat from ear to ear, and then leaped into the boiling surf. The captain, the mate, and the remaining sailor succeeded in reaching the shore on a spar; but they only escaped the terrors of the deep to encounter the still more fearful terror of the frost-king. They could just discern through the blinding snow a faint glimmer from the lighthouse, three long miles away, and they set out toward it. The sand was driven with tremendous force before the gale, and the grains dashed against the faces of the half-frozen men like tiny hail-stones. At length the captain could hold out no longer, and lying down, was speedily frozen to death. A little farther on the sailor, too, succumbed. Left alone in the struggle with death, the mate, fortunately a man of unusual strength, pushed desperately forward. Becoming too weak to stand upright, he took to his hands and knees, and in this fashion, after six hours of suffering such as human beings rarely endure, reached the lighthouse, at two o'clock in the morning, so bruised, bleeding, and frost-bitten that for a time his life hung trembling in the balance.

Another and much earlier wreck deserves attention because of its bearing upon a problem now deeply interesting seafarers the world over. It happened in 1846, and Superintendent Darby is our authority. A wild gale had suddenly sprung up, and he and his men were patrolling the beach, when they descried a large schooner running right down before the storm dead on to the lee shore. The sea was breaking everywhere as far as the eye could reach, and it seemed impossible for any vessel to live in it for a moment; yet on the schooner came, passing breaker after breaker uninjured, the extraordinary thing being that, although the huge waves raised their curled head almost to the top of her mast, and the fall of any of them upon her deck would have crushed her like an egg-shell, not one seemed permitted to touch her. On the contrary, as if by a miracle, the sea became smooth ere it reached her, and she left a shining track behind. After some minutes of thrilling suspense, she was hurled high and dry upon the beach, and every one of her crew rescued uninjured.

Then came the explanation of the strange phenomenon which had so mystified Superintendent Darby. Two large casks filled with fish-oil had been lashed in the fore-rigging, and, securely lashed beside them, two of the strongest sailors in the crew, with long wooden ladles in hand, had been throwing the oil high up in the air, where it was caught by the wind and carried far to leeward in advance of the vessel, spreading over the sea with such effect that, while it was raging, pitching, and breaking all about her, not a barrel of water fell upon the Arno's deck. I believe this may with safety be claimed as one of the earliest recorded instances of the practical application of oil to the troubled waters.

In order to give succor to the shipwrecked, and save such of their property as might not be destroyed, as well as to prevent, so far as possible, the occurrence of losses, the Canadian Government maintains two fine lighthouses and a fully equipped life-saving station at Sable Island. The first step in this direction was taken by the province of Nova Scotia as far back as 1802, voting two thousand dollars a year for the purpose. Little, of course, could be done upon so small a sum; but in 1827 the Imperial Government came to its aid with a like annual amount, which is regularly paid to the present day. Upon the confederation of the Province, in 1867, the care of the island fell into the hands of the Federal Government, and since then hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent upon it. A staff of from eighteen to twenty men is steadily maintained there, two life-boats built after the most approved fashion of the Royal National Life-boat Institution, and a large despatch-boat, have been lately added, the men are drilled regularly in the management of the life-boats and of the rocket apparatus, and complete telephone connection between the lighthouses and the different stations has been established, while a telegraph-cable to the mainland is contemplated in the near future. So that, if it be not already, Sable Island will be soon a life-saving station, whose equipment and capabilities cannot be excelled along the entire Atlantic coast.

III.

A very remarkable feature of Sable Island, and one which surpasses all others in interest and importance in the eyes of navigators, yet awaits notice, to wit, the startling and significant changes which have taken place in its size and position since first it became the subject of surveys and of regular observations. Mr. Macdonald, to whose wreck chart I have already referred, has made a very thorough study of this subject and I am indebted to him for many of the following facts. On the earliest charts of the island, which were compiled from French sources, it was laid down as being forty miles in length and two and one-fourth in breadth. In 1776 a special survey was made under Admiralty instructions, and the length found to be only thirty-one miles and the breadth two miles, while the west end was placed twenty-two miles farther east. Forty-two years later a second survey was made by Lieutenant Burton, and his report took a mile away from the length, but left the breadth the same. Another interval of forty-two years passed, and the Admiralty authorities, having had their attention called to the evident inaccuracy of their charts, had another survey made, which resulted in a still further reduction of the island's area, while the west end was placed two miles more to the eastward. Little more than thirty years have elapsed since then, and yet, accerding to the last Admiralty survey, executed some years ago, the total length is, as we have already seen, only twenty-two miles at best, while the breadth has shrunk to a single mile.

Surprising, in fact almost incredible, as these changes may appear, they are fully proven by the evidence of these whose right to speak is based upon personal observation. When seeking a site for the main station, in 1802, a well-sheltered position was chosen among the sand-hills five miles distant from the west end. Yet in 1814 the superintendent was compelled to move three miles far ther east, as within the four preceding years no less than four miles long had gone entirely from the west end, while on the north side an area equal to forty feet wide and three miles long had been carried away during a single gale. In 1820 another move, this time four more miles eastward, was necessitated. Still the sea steadily advanced as if determined not to be balked of its prey. The two following winters brought them frequent storms which wrought fearful havoc along the western shore, hurling great sand-hills into the surf, and altering the surface in the interior, millions of tons of sand being carried from the beach and strewn over inland valleys, burying vegetation so that hundreds of ponies died for want of food. In 1831 the old station was abandoned and new buildings erected on the broadest and most sheltered part of the island, where they still stand in comparative safety.

The old dwelling of the superintendent was then carried yet another four miles toward the east, end subsequently buried more, where, strange to say, it remained the insatiable maw of the sea only to fall victim to the sand-landen eddies and wickedly about it. Slowly, yet surely, a mound arose, creeping up from three-quarters of the lintel, from floor to peak, until at last the house wholly disappeared, and the sand-hill levelled out innocently above it, leaving no mark to indicate the spot of its sepulture.

For some years Sable Island enjoyed comparative repose, and then the work of destruction began anew with a vigor that made amends for the lost time. The winter of 1881 did tremendous damage, and in addition to the gradual work of the sea great areas were removed at once. In one gale seventy feet by one-fourth of the island departed bodily. A month later this portion of the whole breadth of the island to the west vanished in a few hours. The winter of 1882 was even worse, and was distinguished by the destruction wrought among the buildings, including the West End lighthouse, a splendid structure nearly one hundred feet high, originally erected a mile within the grass hills, on what was thought a perfectly secure site. There was scarcely time to take it hurriedly to pieces ere the foundation upon which it stood was hopelessly undermined, toppled over, and fell into the sea.

The history of the lake, which has been mentioned as occupying a part of the centre of the island, furnishes equally striking evidence of the vicissitudes this much-envied spot has undergone. When first known the lake had an opening on the north shore, which was afterwards closed. A few years later during a terrific storm, the sea broke a channel through the lake's margin, rendering it a convenient harbor for small vessels. But in 1836 a similar tempest closed it again, at the same time imprisoning two American schooners that had run in for shelter. Gradually it became a shoal from the washing down of the surrounding cliffs. Then, during the winter of 1881, a gale opened a gulch toward the south end, which so drained the lake that it is now to some eight miles in length, where it remains. The lake margin forming the north shore was at one time half a mile broad and fifty feet high. To-day it is merely a narrow ridge forming a precarious sea-wall over which the waves break in stormy weather. Should this barrier be removed the demolition of the island will proceed with such increased rapidity that the time may be approximately predicted.

During storms, in addition to the action of waves and currents, the winds ravage the island's surface on their own account, creating a raw spot, that is, where there is no protecting skin of sod, the eddying winds scoup out the loose sand and carry it off with them, so that around the stations the most vigilence is ever exercised to discover the first break in the sod, and patch it carefully before headway has been gained; otherwise the substantial buildings would soon go tottering from their foundations.

To sum up the whole matter in a sentence, Sable Island is being submerged, and is travelling eastward at such a rate that a chart of it, to be accurate, would need to be corrected every few years. It is safe to say that the latest chart obtainable by mariners is some miles at least out of the way. Since the beginning of the present century the island has decreased in length from forty miles to twenty-two in breadth, from two and one-fourth to something less than one; in height, from two hundred feet to eighty, while there has been a variation in the position of the West End of not less than twenty-five miles. With such startling figures as these before us, it is not difficult to forecast its future. Slowly, perhaps, but none the less surely, and defying all the attempts and devices of the feeble man to stay its advance, the time is coming when the victorious waves will fling their triumphant spray high over the last vestige of dry land, and the lights of Sable Island will no longer send their warning gleams across the fatal sands, that will then far more than ever merit the sorrow-laden title of "The Ocean Graveyard."

MUSICAL.

Miss Blanche: THEY SAY THAT IS RUBINSTEIN'S "ANGEL" THAT THOSE PEOPLE ARE SINGING; BUT I DO NOT RECOGNIZE IT WHAT KEY ARE THEY SINGING IT IN?

Prof. Kranskbangski (the famous pianist): TWO FLATS, I SHOULD SAY.

SCIENTIFIC AND USEFUL.

The quality of food given to poultry to some extent affect the flavour of the eggs.

Liquid shoe-dressing: Shellac one pound, alcohol three quarts; dissolve, add of camphor one and a half ounce, lamp black two ounces.

To render wax for artificial flowers, &c., pliable in a cold temperature without altering its whiteness, mix it with a small quantity of the oil of sweet-almonds.

Steel can be decarbonised by placing it in an iron box of pulverised hematite and heating to a low red for a few hours, and may afterwards be recarbonised by again heating in the iron box filled with horn, leather shavings, or pulverised charcoal.

Frost and moisture can be kept off plate glass windows only by keeping the inside air dry, or by an inner sash made tight, so that the air in the window enclosure will be cold, and ventilated from the outside. A partial remedy is to have ventilating openings in the top of the window casing.

The prevention of decay in wood is said to be accomplished by exhausting the sap from the pores and filling them with gutta percha solution, a substance which preserves the wood alike from moisture, water, and the action of the sun. The solution is made by mixing two-thirds gutta perchs to one third paraffin-oil, this mixture being then heated to dissolve the gutta-percha, when it is readily introduced into the pores of the wood.

A good deal is heard from time to time as to the length and strength of the human tongue. It is now stated on the authority of Dr. Macalister, Professor of Anatomy at the University of Cambridge, that, if the fibres contained in a man's tongue were placed end to end, they would reach eight miles, while, if they were all strung together, they would be capable of lifting three hundredweight. The Professor in this way said it was possible to account for some of the manners of "the unruly member."

HEALTH.

Dr. R. C. Fisher's Fasting Cure.

...e many innovations, new departures ...orms in medical science or curative ..., not any, since the introduction of ...pathy, is so marked as that known "Fasting Cure," discovered and now ...ed with almost miraculously effective ... by Dr. Richard C. Fisher, of Wash... D. C. His method of treatment ...near to fulfilling the prophesy that in ...ghtened future, medicine will be dis... with, and nature be allowed to make ...her own processes entirely to rid her... ...f the ills to which, only when her be... ...ws are transgressed, "flesh is heir." ...as during the time when Dr. Fisher ...alking the Larzaretto, in San Francis... ...at he began to seek after some means ...ting the diseased human system into ...ion for the effective action of curative ... After lengthened study and close ...ation of hospital cases his conclusion ...at the desired end could be attained ...by getting a complete control of the ...ive organs, and under that control eli... ...ing from the system the obstructions ... in the way of cure. Further study and ...iment convinced him that this result ...be attained in no other way than by ...mance from food until the body was ...ghly cleansed of the gross and effete ...s which clog liver and intestines and ...the body of adipose deposit. To se... ...his result, however, such a lengthened ...would be required that the patient ...be in danger of the fate of the un... ...horse whose master attempted to ...to live on an oat per diem. Therefore, ...agent must be found by which to sus... ...itality during the eliminating process ...fast. This agent, the Doctor after a ...appily discovered, and his patients by ...three teaspoonfuls per diem of an ...tasteless, and, as he says, exceeding... ...mple liquid are sustained in such ...th during fasts, of from ten to forty ... that they are enabled to attend to ... daily avocations and to walk from ...to ten miles daily.

Fisher's success in mastering chronic ...es of long standing, has been almost ...alleled, and he has made the happy dis... ...y that the fast itself with the accom... ...g steam baths and open-air exercise, ...which he insists, is usually sufficient, ...herself taking advantage of improved ...ions and perfecting the cure.

...as some think, to cure disease is to ...ont devils," and the souls most truly ...son are those confined in disordered ..., then in counteracting abnormal con... ...and undoing the fetters of disease, a ...truly holy work is accomplished. ...l persons with whom the writer has ...ed affirm, and her own experience ...ms the statement, that not only is the ...freed from detrimental conditions and ...ed to health, but tone and vigor are ...to the mind, and the spiritual nature ...ified and uplifted.

...er observing the fast and the subse... ...dietary rules imposed by the Doctor's ...m, it is found that the appetites have ...ned to their normal condition. The ...s of smell and taste become acute. The ...avor of fruits and simple foods is fully ...ed, highly-seasoned and rich viands ...spirituous liquors are distasteful and ...sive. Numerous cases could be cited ...patients have been cured of the tobac... ...bit and of alcoholism, and one amusing ...singular fact is on record of a lady who ...her childhood had been addicted to ...g her nails—even to the quick—who... ...g the period of a twenty-three days' ...discovered that she had relinquished ...d practice, neither has she, since her ...very, resumed it.

...ong the many cures effected since the ...or came to Washington, since Novem... ...last, are three cases of cancer of the ...ach and one of cancer of the tongue. ...e following recent cases of treatment ...given, as fair examples of the practice. ...pronounced case of diabetes the patient ...not only recovered from that distressing ... dangerous malady, there being now ...olutely no sugar in the urine, and all ...r symptoms of the disease having disap...ared, but the sight of one of her eyes, ...ich was entirely lost, has returned. Two ...entoculists, who examined the diseased ...an, affirmed that the vitrous humor was ...efied and that no cure was possible. ...ons desiring further authentication of ...statement can secure it by addressing ...d. E. Brown, Esq., No. 143 Worth ...et, New York City.

...ss Anne Held, a patient now under ...tment for catarrh of more than ten ...rs' standing, recovered the sense of smell ...the fifth day of her fast, it having been ...ly lost for seven years. Miss Held ...ed fifteen days, and is now living upon ...t and bread for a few weeks while the ...e is being perfected.

...r. D. A. Cronan, No. 57 Riggs Market, ...shington, D. C., was afflicted for more ...n two years with a falling sickness, ...ch seized him every day and many times ...ay. He was cured by a ten day's fast. ...Doctor has on his list of cures three ...ilar cases.

...m rheumatism, especially that of the ...onic kind, the cures are simply marvel... ...n reference to one ease, Dr. Krouse, ...physician of excellent standing said ...t Dr. Fisher had done more to cure ...in two days than he had been able to do ...in six months.

...may be excused for saying a few words ...regard to my own case. I had been suf... ...ring them rheumatism for years, and at the ...e of commencing treatment with Dr. ...her was greatly debilitated with malaria. ...had a bad cough and physicians of high ...anding here and in New York found my ...gs badly diseased with tuberculosis. I ...ed ten deys. I attended to my business ...a government desk—every day, and ...alked from two to five miles a day. This ...was January. I am now—April 7th—in ...ter health than I have been in ten years. ...have no rheumatism; my cough is almost ...e, and I believe that the trouble in my ...ngs is steadily decreasing.

Evils of Water Drinking.

Sir Henry Thompson, the great English ...ssful physician, who refuses to treat ...y one in illness who drinks alcoholic bev... ...ages, says, nevertheless, that the only ...uor which is perfectly safe to drink, un... ...ss it has been boiled and filtered, is natu... ...l mineral water. In the shape of a wrig... ...ing worm, invisible to the eye, even when ...ed to the light, and only to be detected ...by the microscope, a water drinker may ...ve given more permanent lodging to a ...ke than ever the hospitable whale gave to Jonah. But an animalcule will grow and thrive in the inside of the indiscriminate water drinker who has swallowed it until it feeds upon his vitals and exhausts his health and strength. The victim wonders why he or she feels so much discomfort in the stomach, loses all appetite for food or else grows ravenous, feels nervous, depressed and incapable of active duty. The unknown and unsuspected reptile stowaway, swallowed weeks or months before, in a glass of impure water, is the cause, and he who doubts the numerous cases on record of inanition, or suspension of life, and apparent death from this cause alone must be incapable of weighing evidence. I have myself known a young girl who died apparently and remained cold and lifeless until put in her coffin, when her mouth opened and a small snake, some few inches long, appeared. A French doctor, who had attended to the case, was, fortunately present, and drew the reptile out with his fingers. After a brief interval, the exhausted girl began to shudder, then opened her eyes and was thus rescued from being buried alive. I heard the story not only from her own lips, but from those of her father and mother, and have not the slightest doubt of its truth. Numbers of similar cases are reported in medical journals. If the mere swallowing of indigestible food will almost deprive a dyspeptic of the use of his limbs and brain, how much more must a living reptile in the stomach paralyze and suspend the functions of the human body.

Another Recipe for Rheumatism.

He who gives the public an effectual cure for so common and crippling a disease as rheumatism is a benefactorto his race. Our correspondent assures us that the following formula, which was obtained from a distinguished physician of extensive practice, has been prescribed by him in no less than twenty-four cases of acute rheumatism, and in every intance effected a radical cure.

RECIPE.

Ferri et Quinia Cit, 3 drachms; Potassa Iodide, 4 drachms; Vin Colch Rad, 1½ ounces; Tr. Cimicifuga, 1½ ounces; Tr. Hyoscyamia, 1½ ounces; Fluid Ext. Stillingia Comp, 1 ounce. Aqua sufficient with foregoing to fill 8 ounce bottle. Dose, two teaspoonfuls in water three times a day.

Should any of our readers using the above prescription, find it efficacious, we should very much like to be advised of it.

What Kind?

A joke sometimes wastes its sweetness on the desert air.

A Boston gentleman was accosted by three waiters at a New York restaurant with, "Soup, sah?"

Turning his spectacles upon them rather severely, the Bostonian demanded, "Is it compulsory?"

"No, sah, I tink not, sah. It's mock turtle!" replied the sable trio.

Broke Loose.

"It's all his fault, your Honor!" exclaimed a wife as she was arrainged in the Police Court the other day.

"Who's fault?"

"My husband's!"

"How's that?"

"Well, sir, he came home half-tight just as I had finished a hard day's work and was making my supper off of cold potatoes. I felt mad and desperate, and he begun to argue about Heaven."

"What did he say?"

"He said there wasn't no such place, nor Hades, either, and he argued the case so well that I believed him."

"And then what?"

"And then, sir, thinking that if that was the case I might as well waltz in and have a good time on earth, I picked up a stick of wood and run the old man all over the neighborhood and made him roar for mercy."

Sentence suspended, owing to mitigating circumstances.

The Facts in Young Smith's Case.

Boarder (to landlord)—"But you let young Smith have his room at $5 a week, and mine is no better than his."

Landlord—"I know it. Smith came to me and said that he couldn't afford to pay more than five, and was so earnest about it that I made an exception in his favor. Besides, his bar bill amounts to $15 a week."

Unconvinced.

Many and strange are the innocent sophistries of childhood in gaining its point. How quickly they learn even to distrust the evidence of their senses! A little girl who was addicted to a prodigal use of sugar upon her oatmeal, had been put upon an allowance of a reasonable number of spoonfuls.

One morning she had been given the specified quantity, but presently asked, "Mamma, may I have just one spoonful more?"

"No, dear."

By-and-by some one noticed that the little girl was sitting sulkily before her untasted plate, and inquired, "Why don't you eat your oatmeal, Kitty?"

"I can't; it isn't sweet enough."

"Nonsense!" said mamma. "Don't be a little fuss-budget. Try a spoonful, and you'll like it."

"But if you only knew how sour it is!" said Kitty, tragically.

Mamma good-naturedly took a spoonful.

"Eat it immediately, dear," she said with decision. "It tastes quite sweet enough."

Kitty obediently took up her spoon, but she had one more remark to make:

"It may taste sweet," she said, resignedly, "but, mamma, it isn't sweet."

Quite Different.

Safe Manufacturer—"The safe was badly burned?"

Mr. Doppenheimer—"Yah, it wash.

Safe Manufacturer—"But the books were not burned?"

Mr. Doppenheimer—"No, dey was not."

Safe Manufacturer—"Ah, that's good! I'll write a statement to that effect for you to sign."

Mr. Doppenheimer—"Dot wash all right. But maybe I better told you dot dose books washn't in de safe. Dey wash at my brudder Isaac's, dree blocks away."

Give Us a Hard One!

"Where is the color line to be drawn?" vociferated a lecturer. That depends a great deal on female fashions. Some ladies draw it at the lips, others at the cheeks, while many stop at the hair because they can't go any higher!

HOUSEHOLD.

How to Paper a Room.

If you have decided to paper your rooms anew, the first thing to be done is to remove the old paper, as several layers of wall paper will be damp with noisome deposits accruing from defective ventilation and will become a source of disease.

The old paper can easily be removed by taking a common whitewash brush and a bucket of water. Wash the wall all over and the paper can be torn off and the wall made perfectly clean again; if this is not done there will be ridges wherever the paper is left on, that will show badly with your new paper, especially if it is a light ground.

Care and discretion should be taken in selecting paper for the places they are intended to be put. Light bed-rooms with white hangings have a chilly aspect which should be avoided; also dark ground papers will give rooms that are not fully lighted a sombre effect which is depressing. For whatever part of the house it is intended it should give it that cheerful and home-like appearance, bearing evidence of the taste of the occupants.

Having your old paper removed and your new selected, you are ready to begin papering. Take a roll of the paper, and having trimmed the right side of it, hold it up to the wall, arranging it so that the pattern will show evenly at both top and bottom and then cut off a length, and use this length as a guide, and match all the rest of it. In cutting the length be careful to have them cut perfectly square across, or it will look badly where it meets the wash board.

You now have your paper trimmed and cut ready to apply. Have ready a whitewash brush, a table or board long enough to take the whole piece in one length, and the step-ladder on which you can stand and reach the top of the wall. Make a paste of wheat flour, quite thin—not thicker than molasses, and as smooth as possible. Apply the paste to the piece of paper, being very particular to have it touch the edges and top and bottom well. Take the piece by the top, raise it off the table and support it with one arm, and put it up to the wall, keeping it entirely clear of the wall until you fasten the head of the sheet and see that it hangs square. Hang it properly at first, and then follow it down from the top, rubbing across it with a clean cloth, so there will be no wrinkles whatever in it. Apply the next piece in the same way, being careful to match the figures so as not to have a white seam showing between the pattern. It is best to cut the paper lengthwise when you reach a corner, matching the figures of course. If you do not wish to take from the height of the room do not put bordering on the bottom of the wall.

Begin papering in the least showy corner—at the side of the mantel or some place not much seen—so when finished if it does not exactly match it will be little seen. This is all there is to be observed in hanging paper, and there is nothing that any one cannot do with a little patience and practice.

Cleaning or "Beating" Carpets.

Carpet cleaning, as ordinarily performed, is literally carpet-beating and does much toward destroying the carpet. The proper way, if one is in the country, is to get a branch of a tree or a young sapling as thick as the butt of an axe handle, and which terminates in a good number of light, whip-like shoots. A beech branch will sometimes be found, which will answer the purpose. It must be trimmed up, and every twig, knot or roughness be removed which could catch in the threads and tear the carpet. Of course, the flatter the upper part is the better, as more of the whips will strike at same time. To clean the carpet, hang it over a line placed so high that the lower edge will clear the ground. Take the big whip in both hands and strike a strong, quick blow. A cloud of dust will fly from the whole space struck, yet the blow will not appear to make very much impression on the carpet itself. The ends of the branch have divided the force of the blow among themselves and each one has made a sharp, quick stroke like that of a riding whip.

If the big besom has been properly selected and the ends have sufficient elasticity, the labor will be small, and the quantity of dirt removed surprisingly large. In this way, carpets can be really cleaned, so that, in handling them afterwards, no sign of dust will be found. The force of the blows is spread out over a large space and the texture of the carpet is not harmed. To perform the same work with a light cane or switch would take hours and is very exhausting, while the fabric would be loosened.

Cooking Receipts.

FROSTING.—Take the whites of the eggs, with powdered sugar and beat to a froth. When the pies are done frost them.

STEWED BROWN BEANS.—Soak over night; put them in cold water and boil until soft; season them with molasses and vinegar according to taste; thicken with flour or corn starch. Serve hot.

MUFFINS.—One quart sifted flour; little salt; one egg; five teaspoonfuls baking powder; mix flour, salt, powder well together; add the egg with about one pint of milk; mix as thick as cake.

LUNCH CAKES.—One cup of green corn pulp, one tablespoonful of sugar and enough fine oatmeal to make the mixture sufficiently stiff to drop it in spoonfuls on the pan. Bake for fifteen minutes and serve cold.

PEA SOUP.—Soak the peas over night; put them in cold water and let them boil; keep skimming; as they boil add cold water; boil a little piece of salt pork with them; season with an onion, cut fine; add a little thyme. Strain and serve.

GERMAN CAKES.—One egg, seven ounces of butter, four ounces of powdered sugar, ten and one half ounces of flour, one tablespoonful of molasses. Mix without the wetting, and roll out; sprinkle cinnamon and sugar on top, roll again thinner, and roll out into little cakes.

INDIAN MUFFINS.—Two cups of corn meal; one cup of flour; one large tablespoonful of butter mixed with the corn meal; put enough milk in to make a batter; one egg; half cup light brown sugar; two teaspoonfuls of royal baking powder mixed with salt and flour. Bake in quick oven.

CURRIED RICE.—Wash a tablespoonful of rice, and boil in salted water rapidly until the grains burst. Do not stir with a spoon while cooking, but shake frequently to prevent sticking. Drain in a sieve; put in a hot dish and pour over it a third of a cup of butter, in which a tablespoonful of curry powder has been mixed.

PICKLED CHICKEN.—Boil four chickens until tender enough for meat to fall from the bones; put meat in a stone jar and pour over it three pints of cold, good cider vinegar and a half of the water in which the chickens were boiled; add spices if preferred, and it will be ready for use in two or three days. This is a popular Sunday evening dish; it is good for luncheon at any time.

EGG BISCUITS.—One quart of prepared flour, a tablespoonful of lard and twice as much butter, a teaspoonful of salt, two cups of milk, the yolks of two eggs, beaten light. Salt the flour and sift it twice in a bowl, rub in the shortening thoroughly and lightly; mix yolks and milk together, and pour into a hole in the flour; work into paste with as little handling as possible; roll into a sheet half an inch thick, cut into round cakes and bake in a floured pan. Eathot.

COCOANUT PUDDING.—Soak the tablespoonfuls tapioca in cold water over night, boil one quart of milk, add the tapioca and boil five minutes, then add the yolks of four eggs, four tablespoonfuls of sugar, three tablespoonfuls of dessicated cocoanut; boil ten minutes; turn into a dish to cool; beat the whites and two tablespoonfuls of sugar to a foam. Spread over the top and sprinkle over a little more cocoanut. Set in the oven to brown slightly.

MACARONI A l'ITALIENNE.—Drop half a pound of the smallest size into salted boiling water. It will be tender in from thirty to forty minutes. Drain and put on a hot dish containing two ounces of butter; sprinkle over three ounces of grated cheese; take a silver fork in each hand and toss the macaroni until the butter and cheese are melted. Season with salt and pepper and pour over it a few tablespoonfuls of any good beef gravy and a cup of tomato sauce.

LEMON PIE.—Take the juice and rind of three good-sized lemons; stir in to tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar in the juice; put a kettle with three cups of water over the fire, when it boils stir in two large tablespoonfuls of corn starch, mixed with cold water; a small piece of butter and the beaten yolks of three eggs; half-cup of white sugar. stir all together in kettle, let boil about a minute, then have the juice ready in a bowl and stir in the boiling mixture; if not sweet enough add more sugar. Have two large-sized pie plates ready with plain crust, fill them up with mixture, place in hot oven and bake for one half hour.

A Feat of Arms.

There is nothing more discouraging than to have the effect of a good story spoiled by some skeptical or frivolous question. For example read the following heart-stirring anecdote:

The Emperor was reviewing a body of infantry, when his eye was caught by a drummer with only one arm, but who was nevertheless still playing.

"Where is your left arm?" said he

"At Solferino, sire."

"You shall have a pension of 400f. from my private purse"

"And if I should leave the other on the road, sire?"

"This," replied Napoleon, pointing to his own rosette of an officer of the Legion of Honor.

"The cross!" exclaimed the soldier, and carried away by a transport of enthusiasm, the new Porsenna, with remaining arm, drew his saber and at one vigorous blow cut it clean off.

The question here is, how he did it?

Blue Blood in the Prussian Army.

Where formerly the regiments o the Prussian Guards had few or no officers, other then of aristocratic extraction, this year's army list shows a marked change, inasmuch as with the exception of the First Infantry Regiment, all the others now have officers taken from the commonalty. The contrary is the case with regard to the cavalry of the Guards, where among the officers the name of only one commoner appears. In the ranks of the infantry of the line, the commoner, in that of the cavalry the aristocratic element predominates. Among fifty-nine generals there is not one commoner, that rank having generally the predicate of nobility attached to it; among 75 lieutenant-generals, there are 8 commoners; of 117 major-generals, 21 are commoners; of 161 colonels of infantry, 48, and of 55 colonels of cavalry only 3 are commoners.

Marrying With a Peck of Meal.

In the year 1867 two persons left Dalkeith for Galashiels, and, not having the requisite funds to get married by a minister, they each took a handful of meal and knelt down facing each other after placing a basin between them. Both then placed their hands full of meal in the basin and mixed it, in token that they "would not sever till death did them part. "After swearing to this effect on a Bible they both rose up and declared themselves man and wife. They afterward returned to Dalkeith where they resided as man and wife, the marriage being considered perfectly legal.

Maud's Ground For Suspicion.

Maud: "Yes, I have sent him back his letters—given him back his ring."

Edith: "And are you happy?"

Maud: "No, I am miserable."

Edith: "Then why did you do it?"

Maud: "Well, pa and ma were so pleased with him that I was afraid we weren't suited to each other!"

Nothing Much.

"Well, anything new around here?" he asked of a girl who was jumping hoop on the corner.

"No, sir. I saw a woman flirting with a man across the road, and two dogs had a fight, and my brother got a licking this morning, but there isn't much going on around here nowadays."

The stylish girls of New York naturally take to fencing, every pretty woman likes to have a foil.

Of Mr. and Mrs. Grote, Sydney Smith said: "I like them, I like them; I like him, he is so ladylike; and I like her, she's such a gentleman."

"How's times?" asked the Moon. "Oh, I manage to keep even," replied the Equinox; "how do you get on this year?" "Oh, I'm the same old Rounder," said the moon, and she went on round.—(Burdette.

HOME AND GENERAL NEWS.

The Queen's Jubilee was celebrated last week with great pomp in Teheran.

It is reported the Afghan rebels have severed communication between Herat and Cabul and Calcutta.

A strange disease, resembling cholera, is raging along the Louisiana border. Several deaths have occurred.

The contract for the extension of the Northern Pacific railway from Dakota to the Canadian boundary has been let.

The Government telegraph line in the North-West is being built west from Battleford to Edmonton with iron poles.

Mayor Roche, of Chicago, the other day appointed John F. Finerty oil inspector of the city, at a salary of $10,000 a year.

Mr. Thomas Guerin, civil engineer in the Public Works Department, fell dead in his office the other day, from heart disease.

The report is reiterated that Mr. Parnell's health is in a critical condition, and that he is no longer fit for active Parliamentary work.

Four Blood Indians have been arrested and taken to Lethbridge, N. W. T., on suspicion of firing upon a mounted policeman recently.

While Mr. Henry Irving was driving in a hansom in London, he was run into by a heavy van and had a narrow escape from a serious accident.

One hundred and eighty-two persons are known to have perished in the mining disaster at Nanaimo, B. C., of whom 107 were white men and the rest Chinese.

Over $35,000 was spent for the champagne luncheon given to those who attended the splendid funeral of the late Duchess of Norfolk, at Arundle Castle the other day.

The cattle-dealers of Manitoba are at loggerheads with the Canadian Pacific railway on the question of rates, and declare they will drive their cattle on foot until rates are reduced.

Divers are at work on the steamer Tasmania, which was wrecked south of Corsica on the 18th ult., and which contains six boxes of jewels belonging to the Maharajah of Jadhpore,

On Saturday a parcel containing five thousand dollars, expressed by the Bank of Ottawa to its branch at Carleton Place, was stolen from the express car while in the station Ottawa.

Two French men-of-war are reported to have been sent to Hayti to enter an official protest against the seizure of Tortuga Island by the British Government in settlement of its claim of about one million dollars against Hayti.

It is reported that six English detectives arrived in St. Louis two weeks ago, and are busy ascertaining the character and extent of the Irish National organization and watching the movements of suspected extremists.

Sir Wm. Young, ex-Chief-Justice, died at Halifax, the other night, aged 88. His last public act was to lay the foundation stone of Dalhousie College new buildings. He was one of Nova Scotia's foremost sons, and one of those who obtained the colonial magna charta of responsible government.

Mr. Carling is being besieged by applicants for the position of manager of the new experimental farm and their political friends, but he has lessened the number of those eager for the position by declaring that the successful candidate must be a practical man having a knowledge of both English and French.

The thirteen counties of the upper Peninsula were all swept by the recent storm in Michigan. In some rich pine fields the trees were mowed down like grass, and millions of feet of pine were destroyed. Houses were unroofed or demolished. Unfinished buildings scattered. Hardly a town or settlement escaped. Only three fatalities are reported. It is estimated the damage will reach $100,000.

Owing to a telegraphic embargo the particulars of a serious accident on the Atlantic & Pacific road, near Dagget station, have just reached us. The east bound passenger train, three hours behind time, rushing across the desert at the rate of forty miles an hour, ran into an arroyo, tho bridge over which had been burned. The engine went over the gap, but the jar threw the fireman out of the cab. The tender went through into the shallow arroyo, forming a barricade against which the cars ran with terrific force. The mail car was turned completely around and the baggage and express car was thrown twenty feet from the track and turned over. Two passenger cars were derailed but the two Pullman cars remained on the track. A scene of frightful consternation ensued. No one believed the passengers in the over turned car would escape death. Fireman Charles Smith was picked up unconscious. His leg was broken, his spine injured and he sustained internal injuries. He is not expected to recover. Seven or eight of the passengers were very badly hurt and quite a number seriously. Mr. E. L. Pippin, mail agent, who was seriously injured in a previous accident, and who was making his first trip since his recovery, was injured about the leg and his foot mashed.

Reading the Finger Nails.

He who has white spots on his nails is fond of the society of ladies, but is fickle in his attachments. He who keeps them well rounded at the tips is a proud man. He whose nails are detached from the finger at the further extremities, and when cut showing a larger proportion of the finger than usual, ought never to get married, as it would be a wonder if he were master of his own house, for short nails betoken patience, good nature, and above all resignation under severe trials.

Nails which remain long after being cut level with the finger end are a sign of generosity. Transparent nails with light red mark a cheerful, gentle and amiable disposition. Lovers with transparent nails usually carry their passion to the verge of madness. If you come across a man with long and pointed nails you may take it that he is either a player of the guitar, a tailor, or an attorney. He who keeps his nails somewhat long, round, and tipped with black is a romantic poet. The owner of very round and smooth nails is of a peaceable and conciliatory disposition. He who has the nail of his right thumb slightly notched is a regular glutton, even nibbling at himself, as, when having nothing eatable at hand, he falls to biting his own finger-nails. And, lastly, he who keeps his nails irregularly cut is hasty and determined. Men who have not the patience to cut their nails properly generally come to grief, most of them commit suicide or get married.

Legal.

P. McCullough.
BARRISTER, SOLICITOR, &c.
OFFICE—OVER McFARLAND'S STORE,
MARKDALE.
Money to Loan.

MASSON & MASSON,

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, &c.
OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block, Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week.
J. MASSON, Q. C. S. MASSON. W. MASSON.
N. B.—Private and Company's funds to invest at from 6 to 8 per cent

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.
Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.
N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate se curity.

WILLIAM STUART,
KIMBERLEY,
Issuer of Marriage Licences. Money to Loan on Real Estate at low rates.
A few Farms for sale. Terms easy.

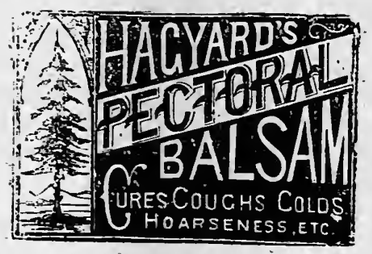
J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.
DENTIST,
GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at the Markdale House, Markdale, on the 1st and third Wednesday of each month and also at Munshaw's Hotel. Flesherton, the day following the third Wednesday in each month for the practice of his profession.

MARKDALE HOUSE,
MARKDALE, - - ONT.
J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

ISAAC STINSON.
Builder and Contractor
In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.
Estimates given. All work guaranteed.
Orders by mail promptly attended to.
329 Residence, MARKDALE.

W. G. RICHARDS,
BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT, Markdale.
124ly

WEAVING.



Having returned to Markdale, in order to be more convenient for my customers, I beg to announce that I am now prepared to do all kinds of Custom Weaving. Residence old stand, opposite Presbyterian Church.
318 ARCH. BOYD.

R. J. SPROULE,
FLESHERTON.
Conveyancer, Appraiser, Valuator and Money Lender. Deeds, Mortgages, Leases and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice. Charges very low. Apply to
R. J. SPROULE,
Money Lender & Postmaster, Flesherton.

6 PER CENT.
Money loaned on Farm or Town Property at lowest rates of interest. Apply to
R. J. SPROULE,
Conveyancer & Postmaster. Flesherton.

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT 131 con 3 west of T. & S. Rd. Artemesia. 50 acres, about 20 acres clear of stumps and stones, balance good hardwood bush. Five miles from Markdale and four from Flesherton. For further particulars apply to A. S. Thompson, Flesherton P. O. or J. J. Thompson, Orilla.
342 ft

HAVE YOU
Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Jaundice, Headache, Dizziness, Pain in the Back, Costiveness, or any disease arising from a deranged liver, DR. CHASE'S LIVER CURE will be found a sure and certain remedy.
NATURE'S REMEDY
The unqualified success of Dr Chase's Liver Cure in Liver Complaint rests solely with the fact that it is compounded from nature's well-known liver regulators, MANDRAKE AND DANDELION, combined with many other invaluable roots, barks and herbs, having a powerful effect on the Kidneys, Stomach, Bowels and Blood.
500,000 SOLD
Over one-half million of Dr. Chase's Recipe Books were sold in Canada alone. We want every man, woman and child who is troubled with Liver Complaint to try this excellent remedy.
SOMETHING NEW. GIVEN AWAY FREE
Wrapped around every bottle of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure is a valuable Household Medical Guide and Recipe Book (84 pages), containing over 800 useful recipes pronounced by medical men and druggists as invaluable, and worth ten times the price of the medicine.
TRY CHASE'S CATARRH CURE. A safe and positive remedy. Price, 25 cents.
TRY CHASE'S KIDNEY AND LIVER PILLS. 25 cts. per box.
SOLD BY ALL DEALERS
E. CHASE & CO., Sole Agents, Shelburne

Markdale Roller Mill.

FARMERS HAVING No. 1 WHEAT, and preferring flour from their own wheat, can get it by bringing twenty bushels or more.

Flour always on Hand

Flour $3.80 to $4.20 per. bbl.
SHORTS, per ton - $12.00
BRAN, " - 12.00
The highest market price paid for Fall and Spring wheat.
J. W. FORD,

Public Notice.

To all whom it may concern.

I R. L. Stephen the Druggist of Markdale have been appointed agent for JOHNSON'S celebrated Tonic and nervine. JOHNSON'S little liver Pills, and JOHNSON'S all healing White Ointment. The nervine is the very best in the market, in all diseases caused by poverty of blood, for Nervousness, Hysteria, and the PALENESS of Complexion so often noticed in female's, loss of appetite and general debility. In conjunction with the Liver Pills, it is the very best for all diseases arrising from Torpid liver or bad stomach.
The White Ointment is the very best in the market for Salt Rheume, Barbers Itch, Pimples Chafs, Burns, Scalds, and all Skin diseases of a scrofulous nature. Try these fine remedies and you will not be disappointed.
For sale at R. L. STEPHEN'S the druggist, Markdale, Ont.

WM. G. GUTHRIE,
Plain & Ornamental Plasterer
MARKDALE.
Arches, Cornices, Centre Flowers, and all kinds of plain and ornamental plastering executed at cheapest rates. Calsomining Lime Washing and Repairs promptly attended to.
330

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of
School Furniture.
Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness, wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.
181 ANDREW McGILL.

MONEY TO LOAN.

ON real estate security, at low rate of interest, no commission charged. Business Strictly Confidential,
J. S. BLACK,
190 Pomona, P. O.

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT No. 24, con. 4, N. D. R. Glenelg, 100 acres, will be sold cheap and on easy terms of payment, for further particulars apply on the premises, or by letter to
J. S. BLACK,
190-tf. Pomona P. O.

Markdale Woolen Mill.

Custom Carding, Weaving, Fulling, Dyeing and cloth dressing, done in a workmanlike manner and on very short notice.

First Class Cotton Warp

supplied at the lowest possible rates.
A call solicited.
Terms strictly cash or wool.
Sept. 28, 1886 F. J. RITCHIE.

IT IS A WELL KNOWN FACT
—THAT—
McCOLL'S
"LARDINE,"
is the best known, and most reliable MACHINE OIL in the Dominion; Farmer's, Thresher's and Mill Owner's, will find it decidedly to their advantage to insist upon getting the "Genuine Lardine" when they ask for it, owing to so much inferior oil being sold under the same name by unscrupulous dealers. We are the sold manufacturers of the "Genuine Lardine" every barrel branded.
McCOLL BRO'S, & CO.
For sale in Markdale at Haskett Bro's Hardware Store. 347-78

WANTED!
Clean Timothy Seed,
—HIGHEST—
Market Price Paid.
H. PARKER,
DURHAM.

Queen's Jubilee!

MARKDALE TO THE FORE

—A GRAND—EXHIBITION
—OF—GAMES & SPORTS
—IN—
MARKDALE.

Tuesday, May 24th, 1887.

When the following prizes will be awarded to successful competitors

GAMES & SPORTS!

100 yds. Race	(Professionals only)	1st $5.00	2nd $2.00	3rd $1.00
100 " "	(Amatures only)	3.00	2.00	1.00
200 " "	Open	5.00	2.00
100 " "	Boys' under 15 years	1.00	75	25
100 " "	" " 10 "	1.00	75	25
100 " "	Ladies'	Pair Slippers
¼ mile "	Open	5.00	2.00
½ " "	Silver Cup	7.00	3.00	½ doz. Cabinet Photo's 200
Hurdle Race		2.00	1.00
Potato "		2.00	1.00
Three legged Race		2.00	1.00
Putting 14 lb. Shot		2.00	1.00
Putting 21 lb. Shot		2.00	1.00
Standing Jump		2.00	1.00
Running Jump		2.00	1.00
Running Hop Step & Jump		3.00	2.00	1.00
Running High Jump		2.00	1.00
Three Standing Jumps		2.00	1.00
Boys' Standing Hop Step & Jump		2.00	1.00
Best Step Dancer		3.00	2.00	1.00
Climbing Greasy Pole		3.00
Catching Greasy Pig		2.00
Vaulting with Pole		2.00	1.00

The Calithumpians, under the able leadership of Captain Rossinthebeaux will make their first appearence in Markdale Streets at 11 o'clock, when the following prizes will be awarded to him and his followers :—1st. Worst looking in his crowd $3.00; 2nd $2.00; 3rd $1.00.

BASE BALL.—Markdale team against any other team in County Grey $5.00. Also FOOT BALL $5.00.

Rules and Regulations.

1st. Four to enter, three to start.
2nd. Entrance 10 per cent of first money.
3rd. Entrance to be made with the Secretary not later than 10 o'clock on that day.
4th. Judges decision to be final in all cases.

The Markdale Brass Band will be in attendance throughout the entire day.

This will be the best celebrated day with Games and Sport's ever given north of Toronto, and as Markdale has always been ahead of surrounding towns, they are bound to still keep the lead. So you may be certain there will be no fraud about it, for every game advertised will come off, and prizes all paid in cash.

Come One! Come All! and go no other place but Markdale.

GOOD MUSIC. - - DANCING PLATFORM FREE. - - GATES OPEN AT 12 O'CLOCK.
ENTRANCE TO GROUNDS 10 CENTS.

Return tickets will be issued at single fare from all stations between Winnipeg and Toronto to Markdale.

"GOD SAVE THE QUEEN."

J. E. Marsh, W. N. Haskett, W. J. Benson,
President. Treasurer. Secretary.

COURT OF REVISION.

TOWNSHIP OF GLENELG.

The Court of Revision for the Township of Glenelg, will hold its first sitting for the currant year at the Town Hall on.
SATURDAY, 28TH MAY. 1887.
at 10 o'clock a. m. The Council will meet for general business at 2 o'clock p. m. the same day.
J. S. BLACK,
Township Clerk.
Glenelg, 12th May, 1887. 349-5i

WE WANT!

100 GOOD MEN at once, to sell for the Fonthill Nurseries (largest in Canada over 465 acres) steady employment and no lost time, liberal commission or salary, best advantages; splended outfit furnished free; any pushing man can succeed. Apply for terms to,
STONE & WELLINGTON,
Toronto, Ont.

CANADIAN PACIFIC R. R.
TIME TABLE.
—Markdale Station—

GOING SOUTH.	6.47 a. m.	3.52 p. m.
GOING NORTH.	12.02 p. m.	9.10 p. m.

NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that any person or persons found trespassing or fishing on the farms of the undersigned will be prosecuted according to law without further notice.
Signed:—

John B. Thibaudeau,	Thos. Brady
Edward Brady,	James Brady,
William Brady,	Wm. McCutcheon
John Rheare,	Geo. Richardson,
Wm. McNally,	George McNally,
James Elliott,	James Gilmore,
Adam Hislop,

COURT OF REVISION.

TOWNSHIP OF EUPHRASIA.

Notice is hereby given that the first sitting, of the Court of Revision of the Assessment Roll of the Township of Euphrasia, in the County of Grey, will be held at the Township Hall, of the said Township in the village of Rocklyn on FRIDAY, 27TH DAY OF MAY,
next, beginning at the hour of 10 o'clock A. M.
ROBERT DUNLOP,
Tp. clerk.
Clerk's office Euphrasia, April 30th A. D. 1887.

Drs. Sproule & Brodie,
—PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS,—
MARKDALE.
DR. SPROULE'S office Turner's Drug Store.
DR. BRODIE'S office Mathew's block.

Monthly Fairs.

Orangeville—The second Thursday in each month.
Dundalk—Tuesday before Orangeville.
Flesherton—Monday before Orangeville.
Markdale—Saturday before Orangeville.
Durham—Third Tuesday in each month.
Chatsworth—Monday before Durham.
Holland Centre—Saturday before Chatsworth
Priceville—Monday before Durham.
Hanover—Monday before Durham

Notices of Births, Marriages, and Deaths twenty five cents.

BIRTHS.

McCAY.—In Markdale, on the 16th inst., the wife of Mr. Hamilton McCay, of a son.
SPROULE.—In Markdale on the 19th inst., the wife of the Rev. R. J. Sproule of a son.

DISTRICT DOINGS.

A SYNOPSIS OF COUNTY AND [illegible] FROM OUR EXCHANGES [illegible] FOR STANDARD READING.

That this world is not bad
Is plainly to be seen,
When one man walks to meet
And another to make

BABIES AND CHILDREN.—[illegible] always catching cold in the [illegible] Place a small particle of [illegible] in each nostril at night, also over the bridge of the nose, [illegible] know how they are in the morning.

The Meaford Mirror may [illegible] into the pork biz.

SUDDEN DISAPPEARANCE.—[illegible] was covered with sores, [illegible] bad blood. By the use of three bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters I was perfectly cured." R. E. Sinclair, Burwell, Ont.

The Collingwood Bulletin is [illegible] by steam power.

AN OPEN LETTER.—I wish I had used B. B. B. sooner, which would have saved me years of suffering with eczema, from which I could get no relief. After I tried B. B. B., which soon cleared away the itching, burning rash that had long distressed me. Mrs. Edwin Hockey Eastern, Passage, Halafax, N. S.

A FAMILY AFFAIR.—There is a man living in the vicinity of Dundalk who has given birth to twenty-one children in twenty-six years.

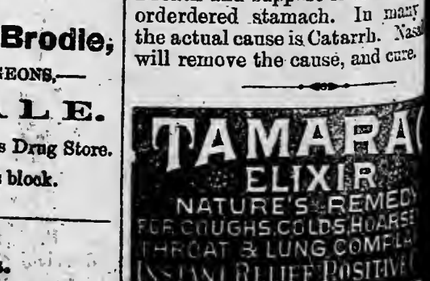
OFF WORK.—"For two years I was not able to work, being troubled with dyspepsia. One bottle of Burdock Blood bitters relieved me; three bottles cured me as well as ever." John A. [illegible] of Farmersville, Leeds Co., Ont.

Dundalk Council has commuted statute labor of that village at 3[illegible] per day, but if not paid by the 1st July $1.00 will be charged and collected with the taxes.

A GOOD TEST.—What every one says must be true, or have some foundation at least, and everyone who has used it, says that Hagyards Pectoral Balsam is a prompt and reliable cure for all various throat and lung troubles, caused by colds, which are always prevalent at this season of the year.

Mr. John Hanbury, formerly of this place but recent years of Rapid City, Man., has been appointed Vice-President of the Brandon and Northern [illegible]

LIABLE TO HAPPEN.—Sudden attacks of colds, sore throat, croup, swollen glands, rheumatism, neuralgia and similar troubles, are very liable to happen the winter and early spring. For prompt remedy there can nothing be had Yellow Oil. "I never feel safe without it," says Mrs. Henry Dobbs, of Bracebridge, Ont.



The C. P. R. steamers Alberta and Athabaska leave Owen Sound every Saturday and the other on Wednesday each week for Port Arthur. The Algoma boat express train from Toronto connects.

Don't use any more nauseous purgatives such as Pills Salts &c., when you can get in Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters a medicine that moves the Bowels gently, cleansing all impurities from the system and rendering the Blood pure and cool. Sold by all Druggists.

A countryman stopped in front of a store attracted by a line of baby carriages. "How much might one of them be," he said to a clerk. "The cheapest one sir." "Fifteen dollars!" he exclaimed. "Why, Great Scott, mister, it only costs me $2 to get married."

DON'T SPECULATE.—Run no risk in buying medicine, but try the great Kidney and Liver regulator, now before the public. Dr. Chase, author of Chase's receipt book. Try Chase's Kiver Cure for all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys, Stomach and Bowels.

MANY PERSONS SUFFER.—From Offensive Breath and suppose it comes from a disordered stamach. In many cases the actual cause is Catarrh. Nasal Balm will remove the cause, and cure.

Post-Office Directory.

MARKDALE.
The P. O. will be opened from 8 o'clock a. m. to 7 p. m. every working day.
Mails closed as follows, viz:
C. P. R., going North, 11:40 a m, and " " South, 3:30 p m, and

TRAVERSTON.
Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday 12:30

HARKAWAY.
Friday, 12:30 noon.

For registered letters and money fifteen minutes earlier than above. P. O. will be open on Holidays from 9 a. m. and half an hour after mails
W. J. McFARLAND, P.

Markdale Standard

"HEW TO THE LINE, LET THE CHIPS FALL WHERE THEY MAY."

SEVENTH YEAR.—No. 351. MARKDALE, ONT., MAY 26, 1887. C. W. RUTLEDGE, Proprietor.

Local and Other Items.

Notices in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

NOTICE.—Correspondence, communications, Advertisements, &c., must be in this office by noon on Tuesday to insure publication that week.

30 DAYS!

30 DAYS!

For 30 Days Only, there will be a great discount sale of

Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, Silverware, Spex, &c.,

Do not miss it but come early and secure some of the bargains before they are gone, only for 30 days, positively, as we are giving you 25 per cent, off on all cash sales over $1.00. The finest make of Nicol Alarm Clock actually selling at RUSSELL'S NOTED JEWELERY STORE for only $2.00, while they are $2.50 to $2.75 elsewhere and the finest assortment of Fine Plated Chains only $1.00 which are generally sold for $2.25 to $2.50. RUSSELL'S is the place you can get bargains, nobody can compete with us. Come and see for yourselves, we will not pay your milage or give you meals as a catch, but will sell you goods a great deal cheaper than you can get elsewhere and remember the only place to get your Watch repaired properly is at

RUSSELL'S Noted Jewelry Store,

FLESHERTON.

FISHING Tackle in great variety at the Markdale Book Store, A. Dinsmore.

Miss JANIE BURNETT was home from Toronto on the 24th.

Fishing Tackle all kinds at the Medical Hall, A. Turner, & Co.

Get your plow repairs from Jackson. Old metal taken in exchange.

For building hardware Mabee's is the place; that's if you wish to save money.

Garden Seeds at Stephen's Drug Store.

Croquet Sets selling very cheap at Mrs. Clement's.

All kinds of house and sign painting done by E. S. Mabee, A call solicited.

All kinds of fruit and ice-cream at Mrs Clement's.

New prices in all goods at the sign of the cross cut.

Mrs. Clement's is the place for candies and sweetmeats.

SOLOMON JONES, of Cape Croker, son of Chief Jones, paid Markdale a visit this week.

A handy and useful article about a house is a wheelbarrow. Jackson has them for sale at $2.50.

Misses SARAH AND TILLY MILLSAP, of Toronto, spent a few days this week with friends in this part.

PLOW POINTS.—All the standard makes and patterns for sale at Moffat's foundry, three for $1.00 cash.

A number of good second hand Buggies for sale cheap. Also a good Sulkey at W. Mason's Carriage Works, Markdale.

A choice assortment of linen window blinds and American wall paper borders at Markdale Book Store, A. Dinsmore.

Rejuvenator is a safe and reliable Bitters, in all seasons of the year. Sold by Smith the Barber.

1,000,000 doz., of eggs and 2 tons of butter wanted ot Davis' for which the highest market price will be paid.

Go to the Markdale Book Store for Base Balls and Bats, Lacrosse sticks and Balls, Croquet sets per 80c. A. Dinsmore.

Miss BELLA JACKMAN, of the Collegiate Institute, Owen Sound, spent the 24th in Markdale with her cousin, W. T. Jackman.

PUBLIC VERDICT."—"That for satisfactory watch work, and reliable watches etc.," the place to go is W. A. Brown's finely stocked Jewellry store, Markdale.

A stock of hand-made boots, fine and coarse, sewed and pegged, kept on hand so that you can have a good choice; also orders promptly filled, at W. McLeod's.

HEAD QUARTERS for Buggie Tops, Milk Waggon Springs, or anything in the Carriage line is at Wm. Mason's carriage works.

A fresh stock of meal's have just been opened at Davis' which will be sold at a very small advance on cost as he will not be undersold.

REMEMBER you can get Bran, Shorts Henfeed the same price at Bensons, as at the mill, it saves you half an honr trouble, give us a call.

CHEAP TRIP.—On the 1st June you can start from any station on the C. P. R. for Winnipeg, return in 40 days, all for $25.00.

MR. GEO. ST. CLAIR WILSON, a cousin of Miss McCall, dressmaker, of Markdale, arrived here from Scotland last week. He landed here just two weeks from the day he embarked.

R. MCNALLY has a number of fine Buggies and Carriages completed, and those who contemplate purchasing such should call and examine before closing a bargain elsewhere.

MRS. JAMES STRUTHERS of Euphrasia handed us a bunch of ripe strawberries of her own growing, last Saturday. This is the first we have seen or heard of this season.

A GRAND Social will be held in the Township Hall, Glenelg, on the evening of may the 30th. Admission 25 cents. Supper free. J. W. Sproule, of Markdale, has kindly lent an organ for the occasion, and good music will be furnished.

Rejuvenator Bitters assists nature and removes the cause of disease from the system, by keeping the kidneys, liver, stomach and blood pure, and natures channels free, then you have health. Sold by Smith the Barber.

MARKRALE MARKETS.—Fall wheat 80 to 82 cents; spring wheat 80 to 82; barley 30 to 50; peas 48; oats 28; butter 12 to 12; eggs 10; potatoes 75 per bag; pork 5.40; hides 5.50; wool 20.

Davis has constantly on hand a full supply of Ford's and Plewes' flour of the finest quality, if it is not right bring it back and your money will be refunded. Special reduction will be given for large lots.

CASH buyers will find meat in Sarjeant Bro's meat market as cheap as in any other market in Canada. Prime Bacon, Hams and other smoked and dried meats, as well as all kinds of fresh meats in season.

"Notice" to Farmers. Those that have to buy their "Flour" this summer. Can buy it at Benson's, the Belfast House, the same price as at the mill, and every lb. guaranteed, both Ford's and Plewes' kept on hand. Liberal inducements made on over one barrel lots.

As the season is now opened for the sale of Bacon. Benson of the Belfast house is to the fore with a few cases; remember he will not be undersold by any one in the trade and if there is a cut to be given they are the boys that will give it to you, they are dacent little chaps.

Davis is to the front, with a new brand of oat meal, the steel cut, try it once and you will use no other, also a fine brand of Corn Meal just to hand, in fact anything in the Provision line may be procured at Davis' at prices which cannot be beaten, and if the trade mean to cut prices, he aint like a fellow that can't stay with them.

S. M. SMYTHE, formerly of Markdale but now of "Peoples Store" Great Bend, Pensylvania. has taken unto himself a partner "for better for worse" in the person of Miss Raith of that place. We wish them happiness and prospertity all along the line.

MISS SEARLE, Dress and Mantle Maker wishes to inform the ladies of Markdale and vicinity that she is prepared to do all kinds of sewing. Cutting and fitting a specialty; lowest possible prices. Shop, over S. Hills store.

DON'T fail to call at Wm. Mason's Carriage Works and see the style and quality of the rig's he builds; he is making a specialty of the Buffalo Road gear the most stylish and durable Buggie built, and prices as low as any one in the country.

Master Tom. Benson of this place left on Friday last for Manitowaning where he will open a Watch and Jewellry store. Tom. is a steady industrious young man, learned the business with W. A. Brown, Jeweller of this place, and we hope to hear of his success in business.

To the farmers and the public generally—Consult your interests and purchase your Buggies, Democrats &c., from W. Mason's Carriage Works where you can get a first class article with a written guarantee, as cheap as you can buy factory make rigs from Agents. Be loyal and support home industry.

The great event of the Qneen's Jubilee will be the Jubilee number of the Montreal Star, a superbly illustrated paper, of twenty-eight pages and two artistic plate supplements. Those who have seen the advance copies say it is magnificent. Something that everybody will want and few can get. It is to be sent by mail for 25 cents. Graham & Co., Montreal, are the publishers.

I have a few chests of that notorious uncolored japan tea left which I have sold at 30c. per lb and it has been pronounced by those who have used it to be better value than any Tea sold in town for the money—probably you ask why we can sell cheaper than those in trade? the answer is simply because we are satisfied with half the profit. W. L. Davis.

THE Rev. Sam. Jones says: "If I wanted to get good, square judgement on something I had done, I would rather go to a newspaper office than to any court of Justice. I know that newspapers probe into men's characters, and the pure need not fear all the presses in America. The way to be safe from socalled newspaper attacks is to be a Christian. The reporters are the best detective force in this country. They have brought more criminals to justice and punctured more shams than all other agencies combined."

DR. JUG's Medicine should be used by every one at this season of the year as it is the best blood purifier in the market and will reinvigorate the frame and prepare it to bear the heats of summer. The pills are justly called the "Little Gems" as they operate without causing either griping or pain and are a sure cure for nervousness, biliousness and other affections of the Liver and Kidneys. Buy them and try them and you won't regret your investment. Sold by Turner & Co., Markdale.

THE MUSICAL JOURNAL.—This is a bright instructive monthly, for all lovers of music, amateurs and professionals, pupil or teacher. It is well printed, ably edited, and adapted to the wants of musical people who seek enlightenment and entertainment. Each number contains 8 pages of new and mostly original Music, and 8 pages Articles, Sketches, Letters and Reports. The publishers seek to cultivate a love for the pure, beautiful and instructive. The subscription price is $1.00 per year. single copies 10c. Address Timms, Moor & Co., Publishers, Oxford Press Toronto, or order though your news agent or music dealer.

ON the 22nd June the day appointed for the celebration of the Queen's Jubilee the Christ Church Sunday School will give a garden party in the grounds of Wm. Lucas when the Operetta Laila will be produced as part of the entertainment. Proceeds in aid of the Library Fund.

The contract for carrying the mail from Durham to Chatsworth has been let to Norman McIntyre of Durham duties to commence 1st June.

USEFUL TO KNOW.—Mrs. John Siddell, of Orton, Ont., was afflicted for years with contraction of the broncial pipes and tightness of the chest. She was cured by the internal and external use of Hagyards Yellow Oil. This remedy cures rheumatism, neuralgia, inflammation, congestion, and all external and internal pains.

A young lady in Artemesia is so very tender-hearted that she refuses to pare the potatoes for her mother. She says she is afraid she might injure their eyes.

BE ON YOUR GUARD

Don't allow a cold in the head to slowly and surely run into Catarrh, when you can be cured for 25c. by using Dr, Chase's Catarrh Cure. A few applications cure insipient catarrh; 1 to 2 boxes cures ordinary catarrh 1 to 5 boxes is guaranteed to cure chronic catarrh. Try it. Only 25c. and sure cure. Sold by all druggists. 333-83

Weather Predictor Wiggins is laying low, probably with the intention of springing on the statement that the 1st of June will this year fall on the day following the 31st of May.—TidBits

ASTONISHING SUCCESS.

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive, at least to try one bottle, as 80,000 dozen bottles were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your druggists about it. Sample bottles to try, sold at 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers, in the United States and Canada.

Little Willie when he first saw his baby cousin gazed on the tiny thing for a moment in awed silence and then whispered: "Mamma, is he a her.?

"Speaking about the Artist who painted fruit so naturally that the birds came and picked at it," said the fat reporter, "I drew a hen that was so true to life that after the stage threw it into the waste-basket it laid there."

MARKET REPORT.—Pens and paper stationary. Cutlery is very dull. Cheese—firm and faiely active. Butter—strong, but inclined to be slippery. Whiskey lively and unsteady. Hops—lively and active. Gunpowder—inclined to be raising. Eggs—opened strong.

THEN AND NOW.—"How styles have changed since I was a girl," said an old lady. "When I was young we used to wear our dresses up to the neck, and gloves with only one button. Now they wear the gloves up to the neck and only one button on the dress."

The Philadelphia "Call" queries "why a man boots his dog and only shoos his hen." It may be because the dog produces bark, while the hen produces eggs; and light shoos, you know, are much safer to use among eggs than heavy boots.

A girl informed her bashful lover of her wonderful improvement in cookery, saying she could make a splendid cake now, and upon asking her favorite she replied:—"One made of flour and sugar with lots of raisins, currants and citron; all be at fully frosted." "That's a wedding cake," he said, "I meant wedding," she replied, bliss and babies were the result.

A man in a car on the C. P. R. thought that he felt a bug crawling on his neck, and gabbed for it. Then there was a scream, and the man found himself clutching the back hair of a woman who had been sitting behind him with her back to his.

W. J. McFarland's

——: HOT :——

WEATHER PRICES.

LOOK : DOWN

this column and see the array of desirable goods to be offered this month at prices which we think were never before quoted for such good goods.

Don't

skip an item, you may find something of great importance to you in this unprecedented list of Honest Bargains.

Read all! It will pay you.

Hat's!

75 Women's Sun Hats 15 cents, worth 50 cents.

48 Men's Hats 20 cents, usual price 50 cents.

150 Boy's 15, 20, 25, 35, and 45 cents.

756 yds. Cashmere 45 inches wide, only 30 cents.

One Case Fine Tweed's. all wool suitable for best wear 50 cents. Good value.

112 prs. Men's Lace and Sewed Shoes $1.00.

Lace Curtains!

10 prs. 75 cents.
10 prs. $1.00.
15 prs. $1.50.
10 prs. Colored Muslins newest out $3.00.

Dress Goods!

We have the trade of the County. De Berges 22, 25, 28, up.

75 Peices High Novelties in GREYS, BROWNS, BLUES, GRENOTES, BLACK WOOL CHECKS and CASHMERETTES, commencing at 10 cents up to the finest. Imported Buttons and Trimmings to match.

100 Men's, Youth's and Boy's Suits, part of a manufacturers stock, will be sold very cheap.

MUSLINS 6 cents fast colors, stylish, goods. Fine White Lawn 12½, 15, 17, 20 cents.

2762 1 yds. Embroideries without exagération the largest assortment and lowest prices to be found anywhere. All our Embroideries 36 inches wide. Allover Laces 36 inches wide. All our Orientals in Cream, White and Fawn.

110 PARISOLS, great job; commencing at 50 cents. See them.

25 Doz. Women's Hose in Black, Navy Blue Ground and Fawn 15 cents a pair or two pairs for 25 cents.

CRETONNES Imported Direct and pronounced by the ladies Just Lovely.

37 PIECES washing every day Ginghams only 10 cents.

MOURNING GOODS in great variety.

GENT'S TIES, SHIRTS, COLLARS, SOCKS, and under clothing at correct prices.

25 Doz. large cotton Towel's only 9 cents each. 20 doz. still larger 15 cents.

100 Honey Cans 2 gallons 20 cents.

14 Pieces New Silks in Black and Colored Imported Direct from LONDON ENGLAND.

OUR MILLINERY ROOMS

crowded with Novelties and our five young ladies kept on the jump serving customers. Trimming Hats, Bonnets, and Mantle Making. PRICES RIGHT, STYLES CORRECT.

A cordial invitation is extended to all to visit our grand display of NEW GOODS.

W. J. McFARLAND,

Direct Importer.

MARKDALE.

HOUSEHOLD.

Cleaning House.

The "time for the singing of birds is hand," and though the young man's fancy may "lightly turn to tho'ts of love," the housekeeper's turn heavily to the house-cleaning question. While advocating cleanliness, this article is not to those who need suggestions as to the best method of proceeding with the necessary work, but to those that, alas! know too well how how to make the home fresh and healthful and sweet, but how to use up the little strength they have gained during the quiet winter months.

The first rule for house-cleaning is this: "Clean only one room at a time." Another excellent rule for the woman who has all of her work to do without hiring any help, is "Clean only one room in a week"—which, being interpreted is, Wait until washing and ironing are out of the way, and do, on Wednesday or Thursday, the single room that can be restored to order before any more heavy work comes to hand. A third rule to the house-cleaner is this: Don't be too smart—"smart" being "Yankee" for ambitious. You may say, "I must have this cleaning done before hot weather," but in this latitude and further north, the months of May and June are the earliest months in which it is safe to dispense with fires upon damp floors, and open the house to the free winds of heaven.

We know of homes where twice every year the destroyer of home comfort enters in, and even rooms that have hardly been entered for three months, are devastated, and scrubbed from floor to ceiling, involving much unnecessary labor. A room that is properly swept from week to week, never needs cleaning but once a year, and unless the room contains a stove or fire of some kind, the carpet will not need to be shaken more than once in eighteen months or two years. This may be rank heresy according to the "Health" column, but the hard-working farmer's wife who has washing, ironing, sweeping, baking, sewing, dairy, poultry and children to care for, with no help to carry on her work, will have more health in her home if she clean only what is necessary, than if she strain every nerve to do what, after all, is very well as it is. Do not even clean on Monday afternoon, because you "have the suds," for Monday's work is sufficient unto itself, unless one has time and strength to lighten the next day's labor by ironing a few plain pieces that do not need sprinkling.

So, all good housewives, before you take down the cheerful base-burner, make your plans in comfort for your spring campaign, and when gentle breezes blow and the sun shines warm and bright, these two elements will not only assist your work, but help you physically, if you do not try to do more than your strength is equal to, even if the tempter Ambition chides or sneers at you for the slowness of your progress. It is the spring cleaning that makes so many farmers' wives unable to bear the "burden and heat of the day" when the summer comes.

The Dish Cloth.

An excellent girl, that for three weeks only worked in our kitchen, surprised us one day with a request for new dish cloths. Formerly the queen regent of the kitchen had used the half-worn dish towels for the purpose, or the cloth flour bags that accumulated. But this rara avis demanded more.

"I can keep two dish cloths a year," she declared, "but I want one for pots and kettles, and a nice one hemmed all around, and with 'D' embroidered in the corner. "Why a 'D?'" inquired we, for her name was Mary, and our surprise dulled our perceptible faculties for the moment. "Why, for dish cloth, to be sure," was her answer. Cruel fate, in the shape of a brother, removed this treasure from our home, but her memory lives with us yet.

A clean dish cloth, hung up to dry when the work is finished, is a sight by which a good worker may be known. Many women who are rapid about their housework, fail in this one particular, and while the dish cloth may be hung up when the work is done, it is by no means always clean. Apropos of materials suitable for dish cloths, an exchange publishes the following, which is worthy of consideration:

"'There is nothing better for dish cloths than old or cheap or part-worn canton flannel. It makes a sensible dish cloth—wrings dry and wipes nicely.'

"Don't do it. At least stop to think of it a moment, and you won't. Old canton flannel that has been worn next the body two or three seasons is not very nice for dish cloths, no matter how clean it is washed. Don't you remember what Beecher said about wrapping butter in the tails of old shirts, when he was an agricultural editor, more than forty years ago? He said he wanted at least to know whose shirts he was eating. No, no. Get always new towels for your dish cloths and dish wipers. No matter how cheap and coarse they are, get them. It's the only dainty way. Don't let any old shirt gussets or drawer legs come near the dishes off which you eat your food. Be particular about whose shirt you are eating."

Original and Tested Recipes.

GRAHAM FLOUR PUDDING.—1 cupful of Graham flour, 1 cupful of sweet milk, 1 cupful of molasses, 1 cupful of chopped raisins, 1 teaspoonful of soda. Steam 3 hours.

CORN MUFFINS.—1 cupful of wheat flour, 1 cupful of corn meal, 1 teaspoonful of soda, 2 teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar sifted with the flour, 1½ cupfuls of milk, 1 egg, 1 tablespoonful of sugar, 1 tablespoonful of melted lard.

FLOUR GEMS.—1 egg, 1 tablespoonful of sugar, 2 tablespoonfuls of butter, 1½ cupfuls of sweet milk, 3 teaspoonfuls of baking powder, 2½ cupfuls of flour. Beat well, have your gem iron hot and buttered. Pour in and bake quick.

CHOCOLATE CAKE.—½ cupful of butter, 1½ cupfuls of sugar, 1½ cupfuls of flour, ½ cupful of milk, 1 teaspoonful of powder, ⅓ teaspoonful of soda dissolved in a little milk, ⅓ cake of chocolate grated in ½ cupful of milk, cool and add to the cake. Flavor with vanilla.

MOLASSES CAKE.—1 cupful of sugar, 1 cupful butter and lard, mixed, 2 cupfuls molasses, 1 teaspoonful ginger, 1 teaspoonful of nutmeg, 1 teaspoonful of cinnamon, ½ teaspoonful of cloves, a little salt, ½ cupful of strong coffee and 2 eggs. Beat all together, add 4 cupfuls of flour, and after mixing well add ½ cup of boiling water, in which 1 teaspoonful of soda has been dissolved. If a few raisins, currants and a little citron are added, makes it nearly as good as fruit cake.

Miscellaneous.

Save the tea leaves for use in sweeping; they will brighten a carpet wonderfully.

Keep an oil can filled at hand for use. A little oil will often improve the working of a wringer, to remove the annoying squeak of a door at once.

Put tea and coffee away in air-tight receptacles as soon as they are brought to the house. They loose much of their flavor by standing uncovered.

In cooking cabbage put a small piece of a red pepper into the pot. It will not only improve the taste of the vegetable, but prevent any harmful result in the eating thereof.

A damp broom is often an excellent thing with which to sweep a carpet after the first dirt has been removed, but a wet broom a very bad one. If dirt and water make mud a wet broom will be the means to spread that compound wherever it travels.

A few forms for use in hanging up clothes may be purchased at any hardware store for five or ten cents, and will keep a garment presentable a great deal longer than when it is hung upon a nail or hook. A man's clothes are almost ruined by hanging in folds, and these forms will preserve the shape of the shoulders and keep out wrinkles.

Sonnet.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S JUBILEE.

What means this shout of joy o'er all the earth?—
A nation's thankfulness! a nation's praise!
From whence the cause that gives such joy its birth,
And o'er the world such great commotion raise?
For fifty years our noble Queen hath stood
The trying ordeal of a nation's crown!
Beloved by all—"Victoria, the good,"
On Freedom smiled—gave Slavery her frown!
E'en through her lonely years of widowhood
She held with dignity a nation's rein:
Was ever Queen so well beloved and good?
Did ever King such lasting homage gain?
Victoria! as Mother, Queen, or Wife,
Thou hast adorned thy pathway all through life!

TORONTO. JOHN IMRIE.

A Last Farewell to Charlie.

BY ARCHIE MACK.

In memory of those by-gone days, which were so bright and gay,
And of those festive scenes of mirth, which never more must dwell
A treasured memory of the past, which looms now through the gray
A ghost-like phantom of lost joy; to all I bid farewell.
Of months a score have yet scarce passed since he did hold my hand,
And gazed into my downcast face with darkly-speaking eyes,
Of words but few he spake to me, yet I could understand
The passion true, too strong for words, to deep for tears that lies.

And with my hand clasped close in his,
With eyes that 'neath his glances fell,
As evening shades drew near, I said
That first farewell, that strange farewell,
That sad farewell to Charlie!

I deemed him true. When rumours wild were whispered in my ear,
I laughed in scorn to think that I would list to such a tale.
But day by day they grew in strength; ah, then a chill, chill fear
Did gather o'er my trusting heart, did turn my young cheek pale!
I've learned, alas! the fatal truth, that youthful fancies wane,
That lovers bend in worship sweet before the nearest shrine.
I've learned that he who said farewell with eyes of passionate pain
Has linked his hand, his heart, his life, with other love than mine.

Then once again, but once alone,
Till sounds the latest, deepest knell
That ends life's struggle; I will say
A sad farewell, a long farewell,
A last farewell to Charlie!

Where Wilt Thou Stand?

Matthew, XXV. 31 to 46.

BY L. A. MORRISON, TORONTO.

When the leaves of the Judgment-Book shall unfold,
And the Earth with its myriad dead shall have roll'd
To the Judgment-Bar. And the Archangel's word
Shall have gathered the Nations before the Lord.
When the Great White Judgment-Throne shall be set;
And the numberless children of Earth are met
To hear from His lips, what the Judge shall declare
Is the perfect reward of the record there:
With thy life-work complete, be it ill or well,
Oh, Brother of mine; Is it Heaven or hell?

When all that engaged us while under the sun,
The thinking, and planning, and toiling is done;
And the light from that Judgment-Throne shall reveal
From the leaves of the Book (which we kept), and seal
That we are, what we are, from what we have been;
The impress on life of each action is seen,
And the future to us forever must be,
The present continued. How clearly to me
The awful conviction, I cannot dispel
That, after that Judgment, 'tis Heaven or hell.

His Second Wife.

In silence she raises
Her low drooping head
To list while he praises
The wife who is dead;
And ever he echoes the old refrain,
"Oh! that was life
With such a wife,
Poor Susan Amanda Matilda Jane!"

She never was idle,
She never would tire;
Her temper could belie,
Her servants inspire.
And ever her virtues he sang again:
"No one could be
Like her to me,
Poor Susan Amanda Matilda Jane!"

She never spent money,
Was ever content;
To have a new bonnet
Would never consent;
Yet summer or winter, or shine, or rain,
Would never stay
From church away
His Susan Amanda Matilda Jane

Was never too early
Was never too late
Her dinner was ready
Or ready to wait.
But ah! he never should see again
With mortal eyes
Such peerless pies—
Poor Susan Amanda Matilda Jane!

Could sew on his buttons,
Darn, back-stitch, and hem,
Each button a picture,
Each darn was a gem.
A vision of beauty, a pearl without stain!
When she was there
His woes to share,
Poor Susan Amanda Matilda Jane!

In silence she listens,
Till sudden there lies
An ember that glistens
Deep down in her eyes.
"To praise her yet farther to me is vain;
No one," quoth she,
"Regrets like me
Poor Susan Amanda Matilda Jane"

Rich Young Women.

As to rich young women, there are numerous good catches in the United States. Miss Elizabeth Garrett, the sister of the President of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad is said to be worth between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000, and she is both bright and business like. The three daughters of Francis A. Drexel, of Philadelphia, are worth $4,000,000, and there is a millionaire girl in Tennessee named Maud St. Pierre who recently purchased 34,000 acres of coal lands, and who has enough business ability to manage her own fortune and a husband as well. One of the richest young ladies in Washington is Miss Jennie Riggs, whose father, George W. Riggs, was a partner of W. W. Corcoran; and there is a Miss Bernice Morrison in St. Louis, who, several years ago, was down on the tax list as being worth $964,990. Miss Clothilde Palms, the Detroit beauty whom Senator Jones in vain tried to woo, is said to be worth $2,500,000, and there is now hardly a city in the United States which has not an heiress or two whose fortune runs high into the hundreds of thousands. Miss Benson, of Philadelphia, inherited $1,500 000 from her father, who was a well-known Philadelphia banker, and Miss Helen Erben, another Philadelphia girl the daughter of a wealthy wool factor, is also worth $1,000,000.

Miss Erben is a fine horsewoman. She drives a spanking pair of bay horses and often a tandem. The Drexel girls are also fond of horses and this is, in fact, their only dissipation. Each of these three four-millionairesses has an Arabian steed which goes like the wind. They ride out from their country seat near Philadelphia as early as 6 o'clock in the morning, and they go galloping around the country until their cheeks are like roses. They are said to be as well posted on horses as veterinary surgeons and they sometimes, it is said, rub down their horses themselves after they come in from a long drive.

Results Tell.

The proof of the pudding is the eating, and the proof of the extraordinary power over pain of Polson's NERVILINE is in using it. Polson's Nerviline never fails to perform wonders in every case of pain. It cannot fail, for it is composed of powerful pain subduing remedies. It goes right to the bottom and pain is banished at once. Nerviline cures all kinds of pain, internal or external. Go to any drug store and get a 10 or 25 cent bottle, and be delighted by its promptitude in doing its work.

"I have observed one peculiar characteristic amongst lunatics," sagely remarked a wag to one of his friends, "They are all great economizers of time; they no sooner go out of their mind than they immediately go in sane."

A young married woman in Iowa goes out every moonlight night and takes long strolls with the ghost of a former lover, who "talks as naturally as he did on earth." Her husband finds it impossible to become jealous of a thing he can't see; so the posthumous love affair makes no trouble.

"How d'ye do, Brother Jones? I hope you are going to give me your vote." "Very sorry, colonel, but I have already promised it to your rival." "Oh, never mind that; In election times promising and keeping are two different things, you know." "If that" so," said Jones, "I'll promise you my vote."

A Boston Girl's Ambition.

Boston Father (to newly graduated daughter): "I am glad that your mind has taken such a turn toward art, for you know that more is expected of you than if you lived in Chicago."

Daughter: "Yes, father."

Father: "And now that you will [illegible] than one way.

Daughter: "Yes, father."

Father: "[illegible] desire that you become notorious as a[illegible]."

Daughter: "Yes, father."

Father: "I have spared neither pains nor expense in your education thus far, but notwithstanding this immense outlay of time and money, if you can think of anything which you believe will add to your equipment for the career which you are about to begin—if you can suggest some other way of refining your taste, please do so. Do you know of anything else?"

Daughter: "Yes, father."

Father: "What is it? Speak out; never mind the expense."

Daughter: "Well, father, I'd like to go this afternoon and see Professor Sullivan thump that yap from the country."

All Things Come to Him Who Waits.

Charley: "My lunch to day only cost me seventy-five cents."

His wife: "That was cheap, dear; what did you have?"

Charley: "Bread and milk."

His wife: "Isn't seventy-five cents a good deal for bread and milk?"

Charley: "Oh, no. Twenty-five cents for the bread and milk and fifty cents to the waiter."

At an Afternoon Tea.

Mrs. Smith: Good afternoon, Mr. Robinson; excuse my left hand.

Mr. R. (who is deaf and thinks she is alluding to the bad weather): Yes, it is rather dirty!

A Question of Legs.

If four hound dogs, with sixteen legs, can catch twenty-nine rabbits, with eighty-seven legs, in forty-four minutes, how many legs must the same rabbits have to get away from eight hound dogs, with thirty-two legs, in seventeen minutes and a half?

ANSWER.

Let the three-legged rabbits, like sensible folks,
Borrow twenty-nine legs from their neighbors.
Then give them a start of a mile and a quarter,
And I'll bet you my hat, if you think that I "oughter,"
That in seventeen minutes—add a half—if you please—
A schoolgirl will give you the answer with ease.

Notes and Queries.

We always know when Spring has come to stay. Not only is our mail crowded with love poems aspiring to meet the public gaze, but there are thousands of vouchers attesting that the spirit of inquiry breaks forth at the same moment that the young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love.

Among the queries of the week we find the following:

1. To what branch of the cattle kingdom does the Parad-ox belong?

2. If, a woman becomes a widow by losing one husband, how many does she have to lose to become a widower?

3. Should a runner wear rubber shoes because he's eraser?

4. If as we recently remarked, Nature is indulging in athletics by having a backward Spring, will she continue them when Summer-sets in?

5. Is the signature to a cheque a signe qua non?

6. Are sugary remarks made from verb. sap?

7. When a lady and gentleman are walking should the lady walk inside the gentleman or vice versa?

8. In view of the editorial we employed on the New York World, is it proper to say "Mr. Pulitzer is a crank, or "Mr. Pulitzer are a crank?"

9. Is Browning or Camera Obscura?

10. Do Bostonians take Buddha on their Brown Bread?

There are no prizes offered, but the editors of this journal will gladly receive and acknowledge answers to the above questions, inasmuch as the learned gentleman who has charge of our Bureau of Information lost his mind before he could reply to these seekers after truth.

A talented lady who lectured before a literary society, speaking of Job and his patience, remarked that all her sympathies went out to Mrs. Job, who had to make the poultices.

A Sermon for Children Too Y[illegible] to Church.

"If I had a leedle boy about[illegible] oldt to come und sit on my k[illegible] eafning und[illegible] me to tell him a s[illegible] shout[illegible] him out right in my [illegible] pegin. Vhell, once upon some[illegible] vas a leedle boy who vhas badt. He[illegible] sugar and preserves, und he tells [illegible] ting avay, und by und by eafry[illegible] his mudder at dot boy und says he [illegible] hung on der gallows. Dot boy's [illegible] hangs down his headt mit shame [illegible] mudder cries all der time, und [illegible] troubles you neafer see. Vhell, [illegible] vhen dis badt boy goes avhay to rob [illegible] womans who lifs all alone in der [illegible] falls down a hill und preaks his leg [illegible] makes him groan und call oudt and [illegible] but nobody comes to help him. In [illegible] dot a big bear mit two leetle cubs [illegible] oudt of her den in de hill und valks [illegible] dot badt boy und says:

"'Vhell, who you vhas?'

"'I vhas Peter Bad.'

"'Und how vhas it you come here?'

"'I vhas going to rob dot oldt w[illegible]

"'Children, come here,' says dot [illegible] bear to her cube, un' vhen dey vhas [illegible] around her she says some more: 'I[illegible] you to know how it vhas. Dis [illegible] tells some lies to his mudder; den he [illegible] some sweet-cake and shugar, like a tief; he goes oudt mit some badt boys und [illegible] apples and peaches; den he shteals [illegible] money from his mudder. Pooty soon he [illegible] a robber, and haf some police looking [illegible] him. If you doan' believe some badt [illegible] vhill come to a badt end shust look here. [illegible] vhas shust as true ash gospel dot der [illegible] peoples doan' lif out half deir days. [illegible] boy vhas goodt he doan' want to rob [illegible] body; he doan' come here und break [illegible] leg. My shildron, dis vhas a sadt [illegible] to you dot der vhay of der transgressor [illegible] hardt, un now fall to und we shall eat [illegible] oop, und pick his pones so clean as a [illegible] whistle.'

"'Und der bears eat him oop?'

"'Yes.'

"'Und he vhas deadt?'

"'Yes.'

"'Und his mudder und fadder [illegible] nefer see him again.'

"'Neafer again?'

"Und some tears came mit my leedle [illegible] eyes, und he creeps a leedle closer to [illegible] und maype der seed sowd in his mind [illegible] dot leedle shtory takes a root petter dan [illegible] der sermons he shall eafer hear in shurch."

How to Read.

To read profitably means more than [illegible] read only the best books. It means to [illegible] the best way, and when a man of so [illegible] culture as Mr. John Morley tells how to [illegible] this we may give his words some atten[illegible] In the course of a recent lecture in Lon[illegible] Mr. Morley said:

I will not take up your time by explaining the various mechanical contrivances as aids to successful study. They are not to be despised by those who would extract the most from books. Many people think of knowledge as of money. They would like it, but cannot face the perseverance and self-denial that go to the acquisition of it, as of money. The wise student will do most of his reading with a pen in his hand. He will not shrink from the useful toil of making abstracts and summaries of what he is reading. Some great men—Gibbon was one and Daniel Webster was another, and the great Lord Strafford was a third—always before reading a book made a short, rough analysis of the questions which they expected to be answered in it, and the conditions to be made for their answer, and whither it would take them. I have sometimes tried this, studied and guarded attention, and I have never done so without advantage; and I commend it to you. I need not tell you that I think that most books worth reading once are worth reading twice, and the masterpieces of literature—and this is a very important fact—are worth reading a thousand times. It is a great mistake to think, because you have read a masterpiece once or twice, or ten times, that you are done with it. Because it is a masterpiece you ought to live with it and make it a part of your daily life. Another practice which I commend to you is that of keeping a commonplace book and transcribing into it all that is striking and interesting and suggestive, or that seems to lead anywhere. And if you keep it wisely and well, as Locke has taught us, you will put every entry under a head, division, and subdivision, which is excellent practice for concentrating your thoughts on the passage and making you alive to its real point and significance.

Social Facts.

Human beings are not born with equal gifts and powers. Wherever there is an upper and middle, there must be an under. The weak must seek the wall and be the stile from which the ambitious strong will vault towards the top. Nor can those appointed by nature for the pyramid's base serve in any other position. To press the wall as little as possible, get all the pay for service that it demands, and make the "best of now and here" is the bound of their possibilities. Without a foundation there can be no superstructure, and the position is as truly honourable as any other, though universal mankind have held it to be less desirable.

If you wish to see a grass widow in clover, watch her when she grabs a rich widower by the arm.

The Princess of Wales has had her daughters taught the complete art of dress-making. The Princess herself understands both its theory and practice, and this is one reason why she is always so perfectly dressed.

"Young man," said an apostle solemnly "do you realize, when you retire at night, that you may be called before the morning dawns?" "Yes, sir," responded the younger man, "I relize it fully. I'm the father of a three weeks old baby."

A Scotchman, having hired himself to a farmer, had a cheese set down before him, that he might help himself. His master said to him: "Sandy, you take a long time to breakfast." "In truth, master," answered he, "a cheese o' this size isna sae soon eaten as ye may think."

The rate of mortality in London during 1886 did not exceed 19.9 per 1,000, and with one exception—viz., the preceding year, when it was only 19.7—was the lowest on record. In the 27 large provincial towns the death-rate averaged 21.8 per 1,000, and ranged from 17.1 in Brighton, 18.2 in Derby, and 18.8 in Hull to 23.8 in Portsmouth and in Liverpool, 25.5 in Blackburn, 26.3 in Manchester, and 28.9 in Preston.

TWO A.M., "ARMED TO THE TEETH, TIGWISSEL ADVANCES TO DESTROY THE FOE WHO HAS AROUSED HIM FROM HIS SLEEP.

HOW FEARFUL THAT A NO. 3 CARPET TACK, COMING IN CONTACT WITH HIS HEEL SHOULD CHANGE AFFAIRS SO SUDDENLY.

BY ORDER OF THE LEAGUE

CHAPTER VIII.

The first act in the drama was about to be played—the puppets all arranged, all acting for themselves, never heeding the hand of fate in it. Hector le Gautier triumphant, but troubled occasionally by the loss of his device, yet trusting to his own good fortune and matchless audacity to pull him through.

The curious in such matters, the idle folks who dream and speculate, had food for reflection in their Times next morning, for on the front sheet on the second column appeared an announcement. It was vague; but one man understood it. It ran:

MOIDORE.—How reckless of you to throw away a life on the hazard of a die. They are all safe but yours. Where is that? In two months you will have to deliver, and then beware of the wrath of the Crimson Nine. It is not too late yet. Under the clock at C. + at nine—any night. Use the sign, and good will come of it.—EASTERN EAGLE.

The Times containing this announcement lay upon Isodore's breakfast-table in Ventnor Street, Fitzroy Square. As it rested upon the table, the words were readable, and Isodore smiled when they caught her eye as she entered. She took up an album from a side-table and turned over the leaves till she came to the portrait of a pretty dark girl of about seventeen. At this she looked long and intently, and then turned to scrutinise her features in the glass. There was nothing coquettish about this—no suspicion of womanly vanity, but rather the air of one who strives to find some likeness. Apparently the examination pleased her, for she smiled again—not a pleasant smile this time, but one of certainty, almost cruelty; and a vengeful look made the eyes hard for a moment.

She turned to the photograph again, and then once more back to the mirrors as if to be absolutely certain of her convictions, that there might be no mistake.

While absorbed thus, Valerie le Gautier entered the room and looked at Isodore in astonishment. "You have a grand excuse," she said archly, "though I did not know that vanity was one of your failings, Isodore."

Isodore blushed never so faintly, not so much by being taken in the little act, as by the appearance of the thing. "It is not on any account of mine," she said; "rather, on yours.—Valerie, look here carefully and tell me if you know that face." She indicated the portrait in the album; and her friend looked at it earnestly.

After a few moments she looked up, shaking her head doubtfully. "No," she replied. "It is a strange face entirely to me."

"Then I have altered since that was taken five years ago."

"Is it possible that innocent, childish-looking face could have once been you?" Valerie asked in unfeigned astonishment.

"Indeed, it is. There is nothing like sorrow and hardship to alter the expression of features, especially of women. Yes, Valerie, that is what I was when I met him. You would not have known me?"

"No, indeed, They might be two different faces."

"So much the better for me—so much the worse for him," Isodore observed without the slightest tinge of passion in her tones.—"Read that paragraph in the Times, and see if you can make anything of it."

"It is Greek to me," Valerie replied, when she had perused the advertisement with a puzzled air.—"Has it any allusion to my—to Hector?"

"To your husband? Yes. He will understand it in a moment, and only be too eager to regain his insignia. There will be a happy union of two loving hearts some night in Charing Cross Station. Little will the spectators know of the passions running riot there." She laughed bitterly as she said these words, and threw the paper upon the table again. She was in a strange mood this morning.

"Then I suppose that C. + means Charing Cross?" Valerie asked, "and you expect Hector to come there?—I do not quite comprehend your plan, Isodore. It will be dangerous to have another in the secret, and I suppose some one will have to meet him."

"Some one will," was the calm reply. "And who, do you think, is the proper one to do that? Who better than his old friend and once passionate admirer, Isodore?"

"You meet him?" Valerie cried. "How daring! Suppose he should recognise you, now then? All your schemes would be thrown to the winds, and we should be defeated. It is madness?"

"You forget I have his badge of membership; besides, I have a duty to perform beyond my own feelings in the matter—my duty to the League. But he will not recognise me after the lapse of years, and I must get to the bottom of his traitorous designs."

"You are reckoning upon certainties, Isodore. Suppose you are wrong—suppose he is, after all, no traitor, and that your ideas are only fancies. How then?"

"He is a traitor—instinct tells me that. Wait and see what Lucrece has to say, when she comes. She is sure to have gleaned some information by this time."

Hot revenge is apt to burn itself out quickly, from its very fierceness; but such hate as this never dies. There was a cool deliberation in Isodore's words which struck her hearer with great force; and much as she herself had suffered, she could not realize a passion such as this. It is probable that had she met her recalcitrant husband, a few words would have obtained for him forgiveness; but she was under the spell now, and her weaker will was swallowed up in a strong one.

"Do you expect Lucrece this morning?" Valerie asked.

"I am expecting her every moment," Isodore replied. "She promised me to come to-day and let me have her report.

They sat in silence for a few moments, when Lucrece entered. She was quietly, almost plainly dressed, and wore an air of extreme meekness.

"You look the character," Isodore said approvingly. "You might have been a menial all your lifetime.—I am all impatience. Begin!"

"In the first place," Lucrece began without further preamble, "I like my situation; and as to my new mistress, to know her is to love her. You have no idea how gentle and thoughtful she is. Now, to begin with her. The dear Hector has a rival, and a powerful one; his name is Frederick Maxwell, and he is an artist. From what I can see, they are engaged.—Isodore, this Maxwell has joined the League, and will be introduced by Salvarini."

"Frederick Maxwell! Carlo's old friend! Poor fool! Le Gautier has tools enough."

"He is a fine handsome Englishman; honor and honesty stamped in every line of his face; just the sort of man to be made useful.—But to continue. Le Gautier is l'ami du famille. He has a wonderful influence over Sir Geoffrey, and has succeeded in fascinating Enid—and she hates him notwithstanding. Isodore, Le Gautier is at his old spiritualistic tricks again."

"Ah!—Tell me something of Sir Geoffrey."

"I am coming to that. Last night my mistress was out very late, not getting home till past one. It has been my habit to wait for her in the back dining-room, and last night I was sitting there in the dark, dozing. I was awakened by the entrance of Sir Geoffrey. I could see his face was ghastly pale, and he kept muttering to himself, and some words at intervals I caught. "I wonder if it was jugglery," I heard him say—"if it was som trick of Le Gautier's?—No; it could not be; and yet, if I am to have any peace, I must fulfil the compact—I must join this Brotherhood And Enid, what will she say, when she knows? What will Maxwell think of me?—But perhaps Le Gautier is already married." I could not catch any more. What do you think of it?"

Isodore was following the speaker so intently, and so ingrossed in her thoughts, that she did not reply for a moment. "You can help us here, Valerie. Tell us what you think."

"Lucrece is perfectly right," Valerie replied. "I have hitherto told you that my husband used to dabble in such things; nay, more, as a conjurer he was probably without a rival. He made a great reputation at Rome before the thing exploded; and indeed, to a weak mind, some of the seances were awe-inspiring."

"It seems to me," Isodore put in reflectively, "that Le Gautier has worked upon Sir Geoffrey's superstitious fears till he has him bound fast enough. And you say he is to join the Brotherhood. Really, I begin to feel an admiration for the man I am pledged to destroy. It is clear that he has promised his daughter to Le Gautier. Is she weak?"

"On the contrary, though she is gentle and tractable, there is much determination of purpose underlying her gentleness."

"You have done wonders in this short time, my sister. But do not relax your vigilance now; let nothing escape you that may be of use to us."

"I must return," Lucrece explained, looking at her watch, "or I shall be missed. I will not fail to bring you such information as falls in my way from time to time."

After she was gone, the women sat quietly for a time, each pondering over what they had heard. The information was not much; but it sufficed to show them in what way the influence over the weak baronet had been obtained, and every detail of Le Gautier's movement might be of use. A wild plan formed itself in Isodore's busy brain, as she sat thinking there. "Why should it not be?" she thought.

"Do you think it would be possible for any one to love me?" she asked.

Valerie looked into the beautiful face and smiled. "How otherwise?"

"Then it shall be so. Valerie, I am going to make Hector le Gautier love me as he never loved woman before!"

CHAPTER IX.

Hector la Gautier, all unconscious of the plot against his safety and peace of mind, sat over his breakfast the same morning. He was on remarkably good terms with himself, for all his plans were prospering, and for him the present outlook was a rosy one. His plans were well laid. He intended to keep his present position in the League, to go to Warsaw if necessary; and now that he had Sir Geoffrey in his hands beyond all hope of extrication, it was easy enough to send Maxwell upon some dangerous foreign mission, where, if he escaped with his life, he would henceforth be an outlaw and a fugitive. Sir Geoffrey, too, had bound himself to join; and with this lever, he could work upon Enid's fears to perfection.

He was in no hurry, he was far too consumate a rogue, too accomplished a schemer, to ruin the delicate combination by any premature move, preferring for the present to renew his forces and calculate his advance, as a chess-player might when he knows the game is in his hands. Then should come the crowning act, by which he should rid himself of the irksome chains which bound him to the League. All his plans were prepared for delivering the leaders into the hands of justice, always with a care to his own escape. As he turned these things over in his mind, he whistled a little air gaily, resumed his breakfast, and opened the broadsheet of the Times to see the news of the day.

Fortune seemed to be smiling upon him, he thought, as he read the mystic announcement in the second outside column. Here was the thing which had caused him so much anxious thought as good as delivered into his hands. Some friend, perhaps, had discovered his loss, and had determined to return it thus. Perhaps—and here he showed his white teeth in a dazzling smile—some fair one, who had taken this way to show her admiration; for Le Gautier was, like most vain men, a great admirer of the sex, and fully impressed with the all-conquering fascination of his manner. He was not the first clever man who has held such opinions, and found, when too late, the fatal error of underrating the power of an injured woman.

He perfectly understood the advertisement. It was not the first time that newspapers had been employed to do work for the League; nor did he hesitate to avail himself of this golden opportunity; He had scarcely finished his breakfast and made up his mind to meet the mysterious Eastern Eagle, when Salvarini entered. He was moody and preoccupied, with a sombre frown upon his face, telling of much inward uneasiness.

"I do not like these new arrangements," he commenced abruptly, in answer to Le Gautier's florid greeting. "There is great danger in them, and they cannot lead to any good results. I shall oppose them."

"Pray, explain yourself, my good Luigi; I am in Cimmerian darkness," Le Gautier replied carelessly. "You are so dreadfully in earnest; doubtless, you view life through the gloomy spectacles of the League."

"It is fatality, madness!" Salvarini replied passionately. "Heaven knows, we have had bloodshed enough. What do you think the last proposal is?—Nothing less than the removal of ministers: dynamite is to be the agent, and a special mission arranged to Rome. Visci—our dear old friend Visci—is doomed!"

"They must be mad," Le Gautier returned calmly. "But tell me, Luigi, what of Visci?" he continued, inspired by a sudden thought. "I pursume you have been holding a Council this morning. Visci used to be a friend of yours. How do they propose to get rid of him?"

"The dagger!" Salvarini answered with great agitation. "Visci was once a friend of mine, as you say, and yours too, for that. Heaven save me from the task!"

"But why need it be you? We have new members, new blood as yet untried. Let them show their mettle now. There is no reason why we should always be in the van of battle. But why this sudden determination?"

"The old story," Salvarini continued bitterly—"private grudges brought in; personal ends to be served where all should be of one accord, all striving for the good of the cause. I am heart-sick and weary of the whole affair. Is our path always to be defiled with innocent blood?"

"So long as I can keep my hand clean, it is nothing to me," Le Gautier replied with a careless shrug; "not that I hold with the present system.—But abandon your Cassandra vein, and be yourself for a moment. See what you think of that, and congratulate me upon a stroke of fortune I have not altogether deserved."

"I congratulate you," Salvarini grimly replied, when he had perused the paragraph. "You always contrive to fall upon your feet. Did I not tell you that night in the Kursaal you would hear of this again? Of course it is a woman. No man would have taken such trouble, especially if he happened to be a Brother," he concluded with significant emphasis.

Le Gautier drew his fingers airily across his throat, intending by this little playful action to allude to his own sudden death. In his petty vanity, he was not altogether displeased that his friend should hint at a conquest.

"Undoubtedly from a woman," he said. "Mark the mystery and romance underlying it all. Some fair dame of the Order, perhaps, who has seen me only to become a victim to my numberless charms.—Luigi, my friend, this little affair promises amusement."

"I might have known that," Salvarini retorted with some little contempt. "I believe you could be turned aside from the most pressing mission by a glance from a pair of melting eyes.—Bah! your thoughts run on such things to the detriment of the Order."

In such a charming situation as you mention, confusion to the Order!—Now, do not look so melodramatic! Pardieu! do you think a man should have no amusements? Now, as a penance, you shall bore me with the order of this morning's proceedings."

"A woman will ruin you eventually."—Le Gautier smiled; the sententious word read the wrong way.—"We had not much transaction this morning, save what I have told you, and the initation of a few members."

"Converts to the noble cause of freedom. Any one I know?"

"Several. Do I understand it is your intention to introduce Sir Geoffrey in person?"

Le Gautier nodded assent; and the friends proceeded to discuss others matters connected with their mission. When Salvarini had left, long and earnestly did Le Gautier sit silently there. Then he rose, and taking a pack of cards from a drawer, began to cut and shuffle them rapidly. He dealt them round six times, bringing the knave of clubs on the same heap each time. He put the cards away; an evil smile was on his face.

"My right hand has not lost its cunning," he muttered. "Frederick Maxwell shall go to Rome, and—— Well, fate will do the rest."

With this human remark, he put on his hat, struggled into a pair of very tight-fitting gloves, and passed out from Hunter Street into the Euston Road; for it is almost needless to say that the house beyond Paddington where we last saw him was not his ordinary lodging, his abode being a much humbler one, as consisted with his limited means; for Hector le Gautier, though moving in good society, and always faultlessly attired, was not endowed with that wealth that smooths so many paths in this vale of tears. Like other men of his class, he contrived to keep his head above water, though how it was done was alike a mystery to himself and his friends.

It was passed two as he turned into Grosvenor Square and up the broad flight of steps which led up to the Charteris' mansion. He had come here with more purposes than one: in the first place to see Enid—this attraction a powerful one; and secondly, to have a talk upon general mattters with the baronet, and perhaps get an invitation to luncheon. Sir Geoffrey he found in the dining-room, just sitting down to his midday meal in solitary state; and in answer to an invitation to join, asked after Enid, who, he learned, had gone with Maxwell and a kindly chaperon to a morning-party at Twickenham. He was, however, too much a cosmopolitan to allow this to interfere with his appetite, so, with a few well-chosen words of regret, he settled himself quietly to his lunch, discussing in turn the weather, politics, the last new beauty, anything—waiting for his host to speak upon the subject nearest his heart. Sir Geoffrey's patience being by this time exhausted, he commenced.

"I think I am free, Le Gautier," he said at length.

The listener affected not to comprehend this enigmatic remark.

"Free from what, Sir Geoffrey?" he asked carelessly. "Is it gout, or headache, or a marvellous bore? Which of these things are you free from?"

"I was thinking of nothing so worldly," was the serious reply. "I allude to the marvellous manifestations recently vouchsafed to me. Since you so kindly showed me through yourself the path of duty, I have felt like a different man. They are gone, I trust for ever. Tell me, do you think there is any possible chance of their recurring?"

"So long as you fulfil your part of the contract, certainly not.—But my dear Sir Geoffrey," the Frenchman continued gaily, "let us have no serious conversation now, I beseech you. Let us forget for the time we are anything but friends. I am too light and frivolous to talk seriously. The last new play, a fresh picture, anything but the supernatural."

Despite this appearance of bonhomie, Le Gautier had no intention of changing the conversation, though it was not his cue to introduce the subject himself; besides, an appearance of good-naturedly yielding to the other's news seemed to tell better, and create a deeper feeling of obligation.

"The longer I put the matter off, the more difficult my task seems to be," the baronet continued, not without hesitation. "Certain restrictions were laid upon me, certain commands given, which I am bound to carry out. If you had heard the conversation my task would be less difficult; but as you did not, I must do my best to explain."

Le Gautier drummed with his fingers upon the table, shrugged his shoulders, and sighed gently, as a man yielding against his will upon the sacred ground of friendship tempered with politeness.

"If you have anything to say, it is perhaps better to say it. But if it pains you, if it gives you the slightest mental agony or discloses family affairs, then, my dear sir, be dumb;" and the speaker glanced out of the window, as if he considered the matter settled.

"But I must tell you. It is impossible I can fulfil my promise without your assistance. In the first place, I am commanded to join your League or Brotherhood; and here, you see, I cannot get any further without your good advice and countenance."

"You distress me," Le Gautier replied mournfully. "I wish that matter could have been settled without such a step being necessary. Our work, though a noble one, is attended at times with great hardship and danger. Think, my dear Sir Geoffrey—think if there is no middle course by which such an action may be avoided."

The speaker created the impression he was most anxious to make. To the baronet, full of his scheme, this advice was unpalatable, the more that, like most spoilt, weak-minded men, he was intensely fond of his own way. He grew stubborn. Le Gautier was perfectly at ease as he studied the other's face.

"I see no middle course. The injunction was very strict. I dare not disobey, if I would. I must become a member of your League, whatever the danger may be; and if called upon, I must take my part in the work. Do you not remember the vision?"

"You forget my state," Le Gautier interrupted softly—"that during the time I heard nothing, comprehended nothing going on around me. My faculties for the time being were torpid."

This adroit interruption only served to increase the baronet's uneasiness. He writhed in his chair, unable to continue.

"And there is another thing," he stammered, "which I must tell you, though I scarcely know how. I daresay you have noticed my daughter?"

"Is it possible to see her and not be conscious of her beauties!" Le Gautier cried—"to be in her presence and not feel the charm of her society! Ah! Sir Geoffry," he continued blandly, throwing out a strong hint, "he will be a happy man who wins the treasure of her heart!"

At this helping the lame dog over the stile, Sir Geoffrey looked grateful. "Has she ever impressed you, Le Gautier?"

"Alas, yes," was the melancholy reply, but with some feeling too, for, as far as he was concerned, the passion was genuine. "Why should I strive to conceal my honest love? I may be poor and unknown, but I am at least a gentleman, and I offer the greatest compliment man can pay a woman—an ardent, loving heart.—But I am rambling; I dream, I rave! That I should aspire to an alliance with the House of Charteris!"

The baronet was somewnat moved by this display of manly emotion, and, moreover, his pride was tickled. The young man evidently knew that what he aspired to was a high honor indeed.

"But, Sir Geoffrey," he continued brokenly, "you will not breathe a word of this to a soul! In a moment of passion, I have been led to divulge the master-passion of my life. Promise me you will forget it from this hour;" and saying these words, he stretched out a hand trembling with suppressed emotion to his host and friend. A good actor was lost to an admiring world here.

"But bless me!" Sir Geoffrey exclaimed, taken aback by this display, and, sooth to say, somewhat irritated that the necessary explanation must come from him after all, "I want you to marry the girl."

"Is it possible, or am I dreaming?" Le Gautier cried in a delirium of rapture. "Do I hear aright? Oh, say these words again!"

Le Gautier was slightly overdoing the thing now, and Sir Geoffrey knew it. "I mean what I say," he added coldly. "You are the man for Enid."

"Who is talking about Enid?" asked a fresh clear voice at that moment, as the subject of discourse, accompanied by her escort, glided into the room. Le Gautier, in love as he was, thought he had never seen her look so fair as she did then, her face slightly tinged with colour, her eyes all aglow with pleasurable excitement. For a moment the conspirators were abashed, and it took all the Frenchman's cool equitable nerve to solve and explain what appeared to be a truly awkward question.

"When we are not with the rose, we love to talk of her," he replied with one of these bold glances for which Maxwell longed to kick him on the spot. "I trust you have spent a pleasant morning?"

Enid answered as coldly as the dictates of breeding would allow. The man's florid compliments were odious to her, and his presence oppressive. Le Gautier, accustomed to read men and face like open books, did not fail to note this.

"I have important news," he whispered to Maxwell, after he had made his graceful adieux to Enid and his host. "I want to say a few words to you, if you happen to be walking my way."

Maxwell answered with studious politeness. "With pleasure," he said. "If you will allow me, I will drive you in my cab."

Enid's quick ears caught the whisper, and a feeling of approaching evil seemed to come over her—a cloud passed over the sun, and, to her fancy, for a moment Le Gautier looked like Mephistopheles tempting Faust. As the two men passed out, she called Maxwell back. "Be careful," she urged. "Beware of that man; he will do you a mischief."

Maxwell smiled down in the pretty fearful face tenderly. "All right, little woman," he answered carelessly. "I shall take care. He is not likely to do any harm to me."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

PERSONAL.

The receipts for the six Patti performances in opera in New York city amounted to almost $70,000.

The Crown Princess of Germany is very benevolent, and her chief delight is in promoting schemes for the education of the unfortunate classes.

The Chinese flag on the French steamer which carried the Chinese Minister and his suit to Europe was borrowed from the Minister himself, the ship not owning one.

On one occasion while he was President Mr. Lincoln left the White House and walked a mile on a hot day in order to speak a good word for a friend who desired an appointment to office.

The Empress of Austria, who is accustomed to wash the feet of twelve old women on Monday-Thursday, was this year obliged, on account of ill health, to forego that ceremony. She made them rich gifts instead.

The superb sword sent to the German Emperor by the King of Portugal had its hilt of solid gold incrusted in every part with diamonds, rubies, sapphires, and emeralds. The Queen made the design after which the jewels were set.

Mr. George Vanderbilt, the youngest son of the late W. H. Vanderbilt, gives much time to the care of the Vanderbilt tomb on Staten Island, and is having the twenty-three acres surrounding it converted into a beautiful park.

Buffalo Bill has on his dressing-table in his tent a striking photograph of Mrs. Cleveland, with her autograph written in a clear firm hand across the bottom. Some of his visitors cannot understand how the President's wife can be so democratic.

The Empress Eugenie is still beautiful. Slender, erect, with a superb figure, her hair not yet white, she is at once recognized as a grandedame. She always dresses in the deepest mourning, and carries the well-known ebony stick.

Mr. P. T. Barnum wishes to keep the skeleton and skin of Jumbo, and therefore has withdrawn his suit against the railroad company for $100,000 damages for killing the elephant. The defendants thought that if they had to pay the money they ought to have the "remains."

A Chinese woman who lately arrived at San Francisco on the steamer City of Peking was registered as Mrs. Leland Stanfort. It seems that her husband had once worked for the Senator, and so she adopted his name. This Mongolian matron looked very portly to the experienced eye of the customs inspector, and an examination showed that the woman had on no less than seven costly suits of silk clothing.

A clergyman, dying, left a widow and two daughters. One of the daughters was an invalid, and the other undertook to provide for the little family. Hearing a number of house-keepers regretting that they could not have nice fresh cakes for breakfast, she called on her friends and took orders for muffins, for the making of which she had a good recipe. The muffins were baked and served promptly in time for breakfast. Her orders increased, and she now has a large establishment and a comfortable income.

Mr. Tatsui Baba, a Japanese gentleman of rank now in the United States, has not been exiled from his country for his political opinions. In his youth he was sent by his feudal lord to England to study the institutions of that country. He zealously pursued his studies, and wrote and published several books, such as his Treaty Revision, and acquired a high reputation. After returning to Japan he rendered valuable services as an editor, lawyer, and orator. His abilities would undoubtedly have procured for him a high government position had not his opinions differed so widely from those of persons in high authority. His style of oratory is colloquial and convincing, practical commonsense running through the whole. A man so brilliant and active could not fail to meet with political enemies who sought to throw obstacles in his path. His present tour with Mr. M. Oishi is to study and investigate the institutions of this country and of Europe as well, and it is expected that his return to Japan will enable him to render more services to patriotic enterprises.

Baby Talk.

"Between the plague of their living, and the fear of their dying, we die daily."—Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe.

A Camden woman looked through twenty-six different novels to find a name for her girl baby, and finally settled on Marier.

The Rev. Dr. Phillips Brooks is in the habit of saying to any mother who admiringly shows him her infant, "Oh, that is a baby," leaving the mother convinced that it is the only baby in the world, and himself utterly uncommited.

When we reflect that every mother has children of surprising genius, it is a matter of serious inquiry where all the ordinary men come from who cross our path in every day life.

"Babies are so expensive," is a common sigh, but it isn't the babies' fault, bless their hearts. They don't cry for twenty-five dollar cradles and seventy-five dollar carriages; they are just as happy in untrimmed garments as in embroideries a yard deep and with valenciennes on every bib. We have heard of babies who took naps in an old-fashioned bread trough, and babies who never had a cradle who grew up as strong and well as if their loving mothers had worn out their eyes and nerves working blankets and afghans and pillow slips to correspond with the cradle carvings and the silver carriage trimmings. Of course, every mother knows her baby is the sweetest and dearest rosebud in the world, and, equally of course, she wants it to be as beautifully adorned as possible, but babies don't need outside garnishing. A well, happy baby is beautiful in print or unbleached muslin at five cents a yard; it is only when we lose the rose and lily fairness of youth, when our teeth fail and our hair is dry and gray that we need to call in the help of the cunning toilet artifices to hide our defects; baby has no defects and the plain dress is the best for him.

It is not a sign of genius when a child begins to talk at a phenominally early age. The boy is as likely to become a Humboldt or Shakespeare who cannot frame a sentence at eighteen months as is he who prattles fluently at that age, and reads in the New Testament when three years old.—Marion Harland.

Markdale Standard.

C. W. Rutledge, Proprietor.

MARKDALE, MAY. 26, 1887.

THE QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY.

The annual celebration has come and gone, being now a thing of the past. In Markdale a long list of games and sports were gone through without any casuality more than what is common. The Calithumpians put in an appearance about 11 o'clock but gave a rather tame exhibition. The Brass Band did excellent service and were liberal in their efforts as well as successful in adding largely to the interest and enjoyment of the day. One of the chief attrrctions was the match between Owen Sound, Base Ball Club and the Markdale Club, which resulted in a victory for the former.

We are unable to procure a list of the prizes awarded this week but will give them next.

BAZAAR.

The Bazaar under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of the Methodist Church, held in G. S. Bowes' office, Mill Street, was well patronized, and the stock was not only fancy and arranged to good advantage for inspection, but was made up of useful articles which sold readily. The refreshment table also did a thriving business realizing together nearly $40.

CONCERT.

The Concert in the evening was one of the best yet given by this Society. There was a full house and an appreciative audience. Dr. Sproule, M. P., occupied the chair with usual ease and dignity—the Dr. makes a capital chairman. The program was well rendered throughout, provoking various vigorous encnores, the following takiug part: The Choir, Miss Mary Large, Mr. Chambers, Mrs. Fox of Toronto, W. A. Brown, Miss Lyons, Miss Christoe, W. J. Benson, Miss Armstrong. Want of time and space compels brevity, though many of those taking part richly deserve a better notice. Proceeds of Bazaar and Concert $80.91.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—Mr. C. F. Smithers President of the Bank of Montreal, died last Friday aged sixty-five years.

—A Montreal firm have already engaged two hundred hands for the manufacture of the finer kinds of paper, as a result of the new duty on the foreign manufactured articles.

—It is understood Messrs. Gladstone and Parnell have decided not to prolong the fight against the Crimes bill beyond the present session. The measure then will become law.

—During the coming summer the Canadian Pacific Railway Company will expend from a million and a half to two million dollars on the Rocky Mountain section of the road in constructing additional snowsheds and other improvements to prevent interruption to the traffic in the winter season.

—Lord Lorne wants the Queen's title changed so as to make it appear that the Queen of England is also the Queen of Canada. It is not likely that Canadians will ever forget that they are subjects of Her Gracious Majesty. If they did forget the fact, we are afraid that the proposed amendment to her title would not serve to revive the memory. But it would be a step towards the acknowledgment of Canada's rights and duties as part of the empire.

—Our neighbors across the line are puzzled to know what to do with their surplus revenue. The Secretary of the Treasurer has announced that for the ten months ending May 1st, the receipts of the Government were $302,000,000, as compared with $275,000,000 for the corresponding period last year. It is estimated that the receipts for the whole fiscal year ending June 30th will be about $370,000,000. After paying all the expences of Government, all the intrest of the national debts, and all the legal requirements, for the liquidation of the debt, there will still be a surplus of about $100,000,000. Hitherto the surplus revenue has been used to pay off the issues of the debt as they expired, but by June 30 all the debt then accured will have been paid, and none will fall due for four years. It has been suggested that the bonds will fall due in 1891, amounting to only $250,000,000, might be purchased now at a premium, but as the holders would probably demand from 10 to 15 per cent., this plan does not meet with much favour. What then is to be done with the surplus of $100,000,000 a year? It is a sad thing to have so much money as to be puzzled what to do with it all.

A JUBILEE ODE.

Old England calls upon her sons
To honor Englands Queen:
Her sons respond, and daughters, too
To keep her memory green,
With loyal hearts and ready hands
The Empire's children stand,
Prepared to do—prepared to die
For Queen and Native Land.

For fifty years our country's flag
Hath born o'er earth and main [ed,
The name of Empress, Queen belov-
With neither spot nor stain;
Long may it bear Victoria's name,
Long o'er us may she reign,
And for our Empire broad and grand
May she new honor gain!

Upon our Queen, our country, flag
God's blessing ever rest,
With peace and plenty everywhere
Her people's home be blest!
God save the Queen, her people pray
From hearts sincere and free
God save our loved Victoria.
And crown her Jubilee!

"I tell you it's a grand thing to have a girl who knows enough to warn a fellow of danger," said a musician at a littlecompany the other evening. "Have you got a sweetheart who does that?' inquired one of the company. "Yes, indeed," replied the L. M., "my Julia's father and mother were laying for me the other night, and when Julia heard my tap at the window what do you think that girl did?" "Can't think," was the chorus. "She just sat down to the piano and sang the inside out of "Old folks at home." You can just bet I didn' call that evening.

Flesherton.

DISTRICT MEETING NOTES—FLESHERTON TO HAVE A PLEASURE PARK, JUBILEE GIFT OF HER FOUNDER—EXTENSION AND BEAUTIFYING OF CEMETERY GROUNDS—WOOLEN MILLS.—

From our own correspondent

The annual district meeting of the Markdale district was held in the Methodist church here on Tuesday and Wednesday the 17th and 18th inst.

The Rev. Geo. H. Cornish chairman of District presiding in a very happy and efficient manner.

At all sessions there was a good attendance of ministers and representative laymen.

A Sabbath School Convention was held on the afternoon of each day when very interesting addresses were delivered, many of our towns people embraced the opportunity of being present at these meetings and expressed themselves as delightful with what they saw and heard.

The fair attendance of the public at the various services and especially at the evening meetings, and the hospitable manner in which the delegates were entertained testified abundantly to the wisdom of selecting Flesherton as the place of meeting. The afternoon and evening meetings of Sabbath School convention on Tuesday were evidently much appreciated—Rev. Mr. Mahood from the old accrostic "watch" made his address very interesting for the Sabbath School children. Next followed Rev. Mr. Shaw who was called upon to fill Rev. R. I. Hosking's place, he being unavoidably absent, altho having no time for special preparations Mr. Shaw delivered a very interesting address—At the evening meeting stirring addresses admirable in tone and matter were delivered by Rev. Dr. Strongman "The relation of the S. School to the church,"

Rev. W. Ayers, "The aim and results of Sabbath school teaching." Rev. G. H. Cornish "Essentials of a successful Sabbath School teacher," all these addresses were instructive and edifying. The church choir rendered several choice selections during the evening.

On Wednesday evening the Rev. Mr. Irwin of Coburg College preached a trial sermon selecting for his text, "Then this Daniel was preferred above the presidents and princes because an excellent spirit was in him" Daniel 6—3—his discourse was interesting and listened to with close attention.

The School Site question in this village is at longth settled to the satisfaction of all concerned pending as it had been, awaiting W. K. Flesher's arrival home. The day after his return he commenced to investigate and inform himself of the wants of the section in selecting of School site.

With his presence and kind co-oporation the trustees had no difficulty in agreeing on bounds of site for new building and play ground and the selection was submitted to the rate papers at a public meeting on Saturday last and approved of. The grounds covers nearly two acres and is pronounced by Mr. Campbell the School Inspector the the finest building site and play grounds in his inspectiorate. The price agreed upon was very moderate Mr. Flesher practically leaving it with the rate payers to say what they thought it was worth and accepted the lowest estimate. in addition, at the same time and meeting he voluntarily offered and presented to the Village the beautiful price of high land south West of the school site for a pleasure ground or Park for the use of the Village a free gift of about two acres of the prettiest price of land in this neighbourhood—Visitors who witnessed the sham fight here last Dominion day will recollect the picturesque ground over which the Red coats advanced when attacking the plumed and painted warriors who took shelter in the bush on the opposite of the River—The new park is now dedicated for the recreation of youth and age, in prepetuity and will add much to the attractions of this natural beautiful locality. The view from the high part of the ground is magnificent. On the opposite or south side of our town the cemetery ground has been enlarged surveyed into plots and otherwise improved and beautified and has a fair prospect of yet becoming the most beautiful cemetery in the county of Grey.

There is quite a boom in building lots here the spring. Considerable has been invested and several lots changed hands within the last few weeks.

W. H. Flesher has again leased the Flesherton Woolen Mills and intends entering extensiyely carding spring weaving and all kinds of manufacture of Canadian Wools.

Mr. N. Campbell has been engaged to superintend the manufacturing department while Mr. Flesher will take charge of the office and attend to the wants and orders of his customers.

Maxwell.

From our own Correspondent.

Seeding operations nearly over.

The dry weather ended in a very heavy thunder shower on Monday: The rain was greatly needed.

Tree planting has had many vataries this spring, a move in the right direction.

Miss Gamey spent a few holidays at home.

Mr. Wm. Reid, also is home from Toronto.

We are glad to see that Mr. Scheniman Mr. Saigeon and Mrs. W. J. Wright, who were ill for so long, are recovering from their illness.

Mr. James Buckingham's brick house is rapidly being built. Messrs. R. and C. P. Heron having charge of the work; We hear that Mr. A. Browmidge is also contemplating the erection of a brick house. Success to these movements.

Mr. Willio Long who has been absent from home since last December arrived home a few days ago. Having been sick he is not very strong but we are glad to see he is improving rapidly.

The injuries caused by the shooting accident in our village a few weeks ago, are now healed and both parties are able to resume work.

Mr. Wm. Grey has invested in bees. Mr. Robert Heron followed suit. We wish success to them in their venture.

Pic-Nic's for the 24th are the order of the day.

News tells us that our esteemed merchant is the recipient of a present called a daughter.

We hear that Mr. Buckingham's barns were burned this week.

Concerning the Sex of Satan.

There is a young woman teaching in one of the city schools who, if her power of persuasion equals her zeal, will work discord among the sexes, annihilate matrimonial prospects and produce a decidedly "bearish" effect on the man market. If she were a dominie at Andover she would be on trial for heresy within a week. A few days ago one of her pupils, a shuffling and droning schoolboy, undertook the herculean labour of parsing this sentence:—"And the devil shall be chained for a thousand years." The outlook was that his satanic majesty's entanglement would begin before the parsing ended. But the boy finally got the devil where no doubt all the listening class and the nervous teacher devoutly wished him. "Da-a-v'l," he drawled, "is a naoun; pro-oper naoun; third person; sing'l'er number, common gen——" "Stop!" screamed the little schoolmaam, "masculine! Always masculine.—[Syracuse Journal.

OFF WORK.—"For two years I was not able to work, being troubled with dyspepsia. One bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters relieved me; three bottles cured me as well as ever." John A. Rappell, of Farmersville, Leeds Co., Ont.

MARKDALE CARRIAGE WORKS.

R. McNALLY:—Would hereby announce to the people of Markdale and the public generally that I have moved into my new carriage shop opposite the Markdale House, where I will manufacture every article in the wagon and carriage line, and having long experience in the business and by using first class material, I can guarantee satisfaction to every one who will favor me with their order.

Repairing, Painting and Trimming promptly attended to.

I also make a first class Stone Machine which will lift the stone, carry it to any desired place and leave in position on the fence.

A call respectfully solicited,

R. McNALLY, Proprietor

MARKDALE SASH and DOOR FACTORY.

Having erected and fitted up in every detail a Sash, Door and Plain Factory, containing all the latest and most approved machinery, everything being new, I am now prepared to turn out

Sash, Doors, Blinds, Mouldings, Hollow Battens,

FRAMES, LATH, FENCE PICKETS, &c.,

And everything needed in the building trade, in a manner second to none in Canada, and having engaged superior mechanics in every department, I would now respectfully solicit public patronage.

Every Effort Made to fill Orders Promptly

PINE LUMBER Dressed and Undressed

Direct from North Shore, all sizes, on hand. Plain and Fancy Turning done.

Careful Attention to Orders from a Distance.

303 THOS. McNEA.

IMPORTANT!

TO all users of Machine Oils, don't forget to call on E. S. MABEE, Sign of the Cross-Cut Saw, Markdale, and ask for the CASTOR E. OIL, it is unequalled by any.

The Arora Water White Oil is equal to American for brillance of light.

Empire Oil Co.,

Refiners & Manufacturer's,

349-75 London and Toronto.

Church Notes.

Rev. Mr. Cornish leaves this week for Galt to attend Conference. The stationing committee meet to-morrow (Friday) and the Conference proper next Wednesday. W. A. Brown is the lay delegate from Markdale Circuit.

The song service in the Methodist Church last Sunday evening was highly appreciated. The Choir deserve great credit for their onerous and successful efforts in supplying the public services with appropriate music: The leader, Mr. Bowes, and organist, Mrs. Hill, especially dseerve the gratitude and support of the congregation for their indefatigable efforts.

Rev. Mr. Hosking will fill Mr. Cornish's pulpit next Sunday morning and Alex. Irwin, son of the late Rev. Wm. Irwin in the evening.

SOOTHING, CLEANSING, HEALING.

It Cures CATARRH, Cold In Head, HAY FEVER.

STOPS Droppings from Nasal passages into the throat and excessive expectoration caused by Catarrh. Sent pre-paid on receipt of price, 50c. and $1. Address FULFORD & CO., Brockville, Ont.

EASY TO USE.

NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that any person or persons found trespassing or fishing on the farms of the undersigned will be prosecuted according to law without further notice.

Signed:—

John B. Thibaudeau,	Thos. Brady
Edward Brady,	James Brady,
William Brady,	Wm. McCutcheon
John Shears,	Geo. Richardson,
Wm. McNally,	George McNally,
James Elliott,	James Stinson,
Adam Hislop,	Robt Graham,
John Webber.

COURT OF REVISION.

TOWNSHIP OF GLENELG.

The Court of Revision for the Township of Glenelg, will hold its first sitting for the currant year at the Town Hall on.

SATURDAY, 28TH MAY. 1887. at 10 o'clock a. m. The Council will meet for general business at 2 o'clock p. m. the same day.

J. S. BLACK,
Township Clerk.

Glenelg, 12th May, 1887. 349-51

WE WANT!

100 GOOD MEN at once, to sell for the Fonthill Nurseries (largest in Canada over 465 acres) steady employment and no lost time, liberal commission or salary, best advantages; splended outfit furnished free; any pushing man can succeed. Apply for terms to,

STONE & WELLINGTON,
Toronto, Ont.

COURT OF REVISION.

TOWNSHIP OF EUPHRASIA.

Notice is hereby given that the first sitting, of the Court of Revision of the Assessment Roll of the Township of Euphrasia, in the County of Grey, will be held at the Township Hall, of the said Township in the village of Rocklyn on FRIDAY, 27TH DAY OF MAY, next, beginning at the hour of 10 o'clock A. M.

ROBERT DUNLOP,
Tp. clerk.

Clerk's office Euphrasia, April 30th A. D. 1887.

Drs. Sproule & Brodie,

—PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS,—

MARKDALE.

DR. SPROULE'S office Turner's Drug Store

DR. BRODIE'S office Mathew's block.

WORKS.

to the people into my new carriage cture every article
nce in the business.
ction to every one attended to.

ift the stone, carry

Proprietor

CTORY.

Door and Plain Fac. achinery, everything

llow Battons,
&c., per second to none in every department, I onage.

rs Promptly Undressed
Fancy Turning done.
istance.

McNEA.

NT!

forget to call e Cross-Cut CASTOR E.

is equal to American for urer's, and Toronto.

REVISION.

OF C[illegible]ENELG.

ision for the Township its first sitting for the Town Hall on.
8TH MAY. 1887.
The Council will meet at 2 o'clock p. m. the

J. S. BLACK,
Township Clerk.
, 1887. 349-5i

VANT!

N at once, to sell for ill Nurseries (largest in es) steady employment
ral commission or salary.
lended outfit furnished n can succeed. Apply for

ELLINGTON,
Toronto, Ont.

REVISION.

OF EUPHRASIA.

iven that the first sitt-Revision of the Assess-nship of Euphrasia, in will be held at the
the said Township in on DAY OF MAY,
e hour of 10 o'clock A.

ROBERT DUNLOP,
Tp. clerk.
rasia, April 30th A. D.

e & Brodie,
ND SURGEONS,
DALE.
Turner's Drug Store
Mathew's block.

To the Editor of the STANDARD.

Flesherton, May 17th 1887.

DEAR SIR.—With your permission will occupy a small space in your r to explain a matter of some im- nce to ourselves and breeders in eral. The pedigree of our colt st in Time," has been found fault because it does not, as some k, give the names of books the bers are taken from, and others e said that it is no pedigree be- se it is too short,

To those who do not understand it wish to say that wherever they find number marked, supposing the to be one [1] it is taken from the adian S. Book and when marked is taken from the G. B. & I. S. B. when not marked in any way should ooked on as very doubtful or stolen. Some may wonder what we mean a stolen No. we mean just this; en a horse is properly registered gets a certificate with his No. age description on, and signed by the of the Association. There are a mber of horses in the country of the e name and similar description, d it is an easy matter for the owner an unregistred horse to steal a num- from one of the same name, and living at a safe distance and very eaky, may give the No: of vol. too, this is seldom done. Now to get a bottom of this by referring to the ferent volumes means considerable uble and expense, but as there is ly one certificate issued for each no. d the owner of the proper horse s it, it is plain to see that the short- and cheapest way of testing the rse one intends using is to see the rtificate and if it is not at hand just en take a guarantee with a penalty not less than $50.00 in case the ner failed to show a genuine certi- cate of registration in either the adian, G. B. & I. or American S. ook (these are the only trustworthy ooks in the world) at a proper time. ad now to show that we mean what e say we agree right here to pay very patron of "Just in Time" $50. we cannot show a genuine certific- te of registration for him in the ydesdale S, Book of Canada.

Let the owner of every honest horse to this and there will soon be an in- rest taken in registered (not pedigrees nly) horses that will corner every and on the road, and we venture to y there has been more fraud in con- ection with the stallion business then er there was in all the shoddy cloth ld in the county.

In regard to pedigree being too hort we have only to say that we did ot think it necessary to trace him back past the numbered dam's as we rove him right from the start; and ney un-numbred names do not look ell in the pedigree of a horse called ure bred.

Now sir we are glad to hear that some are taking an intrest in pedigrees if it is to criticise ours, and we don't think it will be out of place for us to give our opinion on the benefits of breeding from regristred stock, es- pecially horses. A great many has the idea that regrestration of their own stock is something too far away to be worth bothering with; well it only requires four straight crosses to qualify a filly for regristration, and five for a stallion, and is the extra money payed for the use of a high priced stallion not to some extent thrown away if there is not a record kept of every cross. A five cent book is all that is required then take the name of horse, his no. no, of vol. recorded in (no. is very little use with- out vol.) and when mated for second cross do the same and so on till fourth is reached and in a wonderful short time registered fillies will be a common thing here as well as other places. But supposing a person never intends or expects to raise stock elligible for registration, it pays to keep a record as above, in a short time there will be enough heavy horses here to bring in foreign buyers and the Americans will be here as they are now in the older settled parts of Ont. picking up every likely looking filly for breeding pur poses and we think we are safe in say- ing that they pay from ten to seventy five per cent more, according to num- ber of crosses when a straight record can be given? and there is not an- other class of horses in the world that is selling better than heavy Can- adian fillies.

Then there is auther very common mistake made in regard to imported horses. Some seem to have the idea that if a horse is imported he is all right. We say he is all wrong if not a registred horse. We believe there has been more money made by im- ported mongrels into this country than ever there was by imported pure bred horses. Speculators go to the Old Country and buy up a lot of cheap horses bring them here and the simple fact of them being imported secures sales at enormous profits. We would like some one that knows more about it than we do to tell us how such horses as these that are not and cannot be registred in any trustwor- thy book are going to improve our stock; Is it pure blood that is want- ed.

As we wish our customers to know exactly what they are breeding from we publish the following letter which will explain why "Just in Time" has not a no. in the G. B. & I. B. B. as expected; but it will be noticed that this will not interfere with the re- gistering of his stock in any way as no horse bred in this country can receive a no. there.

BEATHIE & BURNETT.

Clydesdale Horse Society.

OF

GREAT BRITAIN and IRELAND

46 Gordon Street,
Glasgow, April 1st 1887.

DEAR SIR.—I am favored with yours of 17th March, and am sorry to have to dissapoint you, but cannot give you a certificate such as you desire. You will requre to enter "Just in Time" either in the American Clydesdale Stud Book, the secretary for which is Mr. C. F. Mills, Springfield, Ill. or the Canadian Clydesdale Stud Book the secretary for which is Mr. Henry Wade, Toronto, "Just in Time" can- not receive a number in the Scotch Stud Book unless it should be the case that altho. foaled in Canada his dam was put to the horse in this Country.

There is nothing amiss with the pedigree of "Just in Time" the only difficulty is that we have a By- Law that no horse can be numbered in the Clydesdale Stud Book unless it be bred in the United Kingdom.

Trusting this explanation will be satisfactory.

I am yours faithfully,
ARCH'D. MACHEILAGE,
Secretary.

Messrs D. & L. McGeachy, Castlemore Ont.

J. G. ANDERSON,

hasn't time to write an advertisement this week but look out for it next, in mean time he will try and find time to attend his numerous customers.

EXPECT BARGAINS IN EVERY LINE.

THE Peoples Reliable JEWELLER

W. A. BROWN.

Markdale Ont.

HEAD QUARTERS

—FOR—

Books, Stationery, Fancy Goods, Toys, Wall Paper, &c.

Toronto St. next Door to the Mansion House, Markdale.

A. Dinsmore returns his sincere thanks for the very liberal support ac- corded him since commencing as above, and hopes by strict attention to business and moderate prices to merit a continu- ance of public appreciation and patron- age. Those requiring would consult their own interest by ex- amining his stock, consisting of over Three Thousand pieces at from 5 to 75c. per Roll. Sunday Schools requiring Liberary Books will find Hundreds to select from and at such FAVORABLE TERMS as are sure to satisfy.

WALL PAPERS

☞ Note the fact.—That until I commenced business there was no such thing as a special discount allowed to Sunday Schools, or if you wanted Books could not get them unless by sending to Toronto or elsewhere, now your wants can be supplied at your Door and at lower prices than Toronto. I therefore with confidence appeal for public support. A full line of School Books, Stationery, &c., always on hand, also agent for the DOMESTIC PAPER PATTERNS. Agent also for The Har- den Star Hand Grenade for Extinguish- ing Fires. ☞ NOTE THE ADDRESS,

A. Dinsmore.

New Tailor.

Will Stoddart, late of England and Jersy City, U. S. begs to inform the citizens of MARKDALE and surrounding community, that he has opened a TAILORING SHOP over Mr. W. J. McFarland's Store, where he is prepared to do all work entrusted to him in the Latest and Nobbiest Styles; as I will inspect all work before leaving the Shop, cus- tomers may rely on having work turned out first-class in every par- ticular; trusting that I may receive a fair share of the public patronage

I remain,
Faithfully your's,
WILL STODDART.

Markdale, March 14th, 1887.

New General Provision Store

THE undersigned would hereby respectfully intimate to the inhabi- tants of Markdale and surrounding country that I've opened up a general Provision store where I intend to keep on hand a general supply of all kinds of provisions such as:—

FLOUR, OATMEAL, CORNMEAL INDIAN CORN, GRASS SEED, OATS, BRAN, SHORTS, CHOPP. SCREENINGS. also a quantity of SEED GRAIN, HAMS, BACON, LARD, &c., in fact everything people want in this line.

Shop one door west of Joe Lamb's Blacksmith shop.

Soliciting a share of public patronage I am respectfully yours,

Jas. Miller
MARKDALE.

COME!

To Stephen's

FOR

Your Carrots, Mangels, and Turnip Seeds, we have the best variety in the market. RE- MEMBER Our Seeds are

FRESH

Oil Cake! Oil Cake!
—OIL—CAKE!
—AT—
Stephen's

DRUG STORE.

Your's Respectfully,

R. L. Stephen.

R. S. Rae, Tailor.

REMOVED.

In returning thanks to my num- erous customers for liberal patron- age during the past 14 years in which I have done business in Markdale, and soliciting a con- tinuance of the same, I would also intimate that I have removed to my premises on Mill Street, next door to Stephen's Drug Store, and opposite to the Post Office; where I shall be happy to meet all my customers.

Respectfully Yours,
R. S. RAE,
Markdale

Stock Taking

SALE

At the Toronto House,
Markdale.

SLAUGHTER PRICES

FOR CASH.

Wm. Brown.

BE SURE & GET YOUR

PUMPS,

—FROM—

J. T. QUINN,

MARKDALE,

He makes as good a pump as there is in the market, and at the lowest possible prices, besides it is so con- venient for getting repairs besides when buying from a distance.

Have some style about you and support home enterprise by buying from Quinn.

OWEN SOUND MARBLE WORKS

H. B. HARRISON,
MANUFACTURER OF
MARBLE AND GRANITE
MONUMENTS & HEADSTONES,
Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.

JUST RECEIVED
3 Carloads Finest Variegated Marble

☞ Largest stock in the Dominion to select from. Personally selected at the quar ries in Vermont, Will be sold at prices which defy competition.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

N. B.—Beware of Monuments and Head- stones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered to- gether, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide the imperfections, and called White Bronze.

H. B. HARRISON

ROBT. ASKIN,

UNDERTAKER,
MARKDALE.
FUNERAL FURNISHINGS
supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse
for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—
FURNITURE
In Stock at bottom prices.
PICTURE FRAMING
Done on short notice.
ROBT. ASKIN.

WM. BREADNER.
Carpender and Builder
GEORGE ST., MARKDALE.

ALL kinds of building and house car- penter work done in the village or country. Call early before the rush comes. 339-52

CARD OF THANKS.

In thanking my customers for their liberal patronage in the past, I have much pleasure in being still able to supply them with the following cele- brated machines, viz.

The Watson all-steel two-horse twine Binder.
The Watson Deering Binder.
The Watson Improved Lion Reaper.
The New Humming Mower.
The Humming-bird Mower.
The Watson Daisy Rake.
The Mann Champion Rake.
The Tolten Pea Harvester.
The Mann Broad-cast Seeder and Harrows Combined.
The Champion Combined Drill, Colter & Scott, Oshawa.
The best Plow's and Harrows in the market.
Root Cutters, Grain Crushers, Fanning mills. Land Rollers.
Agent for the Watersou's Co's Machinery and Steam Threshers.

Horse Powers, Wagon s Buggies, Democrats, and every implement a farmer requires. Parties reqiring anything in above lines will find it to their advantage to call at my new implement house opposite R. McNally's Carriage works, where Mr. R. Robert- son will be pleased to wait on customers in my absence.

J. H. CARSON, Agent
148-61 Markdale.

CANADIAN PACIFIC R. R.

TIME TABLE.

—Markdale Station—

GOING SOUTH.	6.47 a. m.	3.52 p. m.
GOING NORTH.	12.02 p. m.	9.10 p. m.

THE KEY TO HEALTH.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

Unlocks all the clogged avenues of the Bowels, Kidneys and Liver, carrying off gradually without weakening the system, all the impurities and foul humors of the secretions; at the same time Correcting Acidity of the Stomach, curing Billi- ousness, Dyspepsia, Headaches, Diz- ziness, Heartburn, Constipation, Dryness of the Skin, Dropsy, Dim- ness of Vision, Jaundice, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Scrofula, Fluttering of the Heart, Nervousness and General, Debility; all these and many other simi- lar Complaints yield to the happy influence of BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

Sample Bottles 10c; Regular size $1.

For sale by all dealers.

[illegible] & Co., Proprietors

Adventure with Pirates

IN THE CHINA SEA.

Twenty years ago, piracy was more common in China seas than now, and every vessel leaving Hong-kong with opium as a part of her cargo—a fact duly intimated to the pirates on the coast, previous to the ship's sailing, by their agents at that port—ran a very good chance of being boarded by pirates within forty-eight hours of leaving harbor. In the case of such an attack, if the chests were handed over to the pirates, or they were allowed to help themselves to them unresisted, they would generally depart peaceably, or with perhaps merely a playful attempt to set the ship on fire. But in the event of any endeavor on the part of the poor captain to defend his ship and cargo, in most cases sanguinary scenes were enacted, and whole crews massacred, and ships scuttled or burnt.

Some five-and-twenty years ago, the writer, who had previously been chief-officer of an opium-receiving ship at Hong-kong, had subsequently joined the English government service as chief warder of the convict prison on the island, and in that capacity had seen a good deal of the seamy side of the Chinese character; the comparatively lenient punishments of Fanqui (barbarian or European) criminal law, as in force in a British colony, attracting the scum of the Chinese population of the mainland of Kwangtung, making the island of Hong-kong a perfect Alsatia for Chinese thieves, pirates, and criminals of every description, who found the diet and treatment of an English convict prison a heavenly contrast to the drastic and Draconic remedies applied by the Chinese mandarins to the disease of criminality, the number and nature of their punishments exhausting human ingenuity for refinement and excess of torture, even for trivial offences.

Among the prisoners in the Hong-kong convict jail, there was an English able seaman named Kelly, who had been convicted of mutiny and murder of the captain on board an English ship. The captain, it appeared, from the evidence of the loyal of the crew, was a great tyrant, and bullied and half-starved his men; and this fact being considered as somewhat extenuating his crime—Kelly having not actually been the committer of the crime, but accessory before the fact, he keeping watch at the cabin door while his comrade drew a harpoon through the captain while lying asleep in his bunk—Kelly himself was respited when the rope was round his neck and he was on the scaffold, the extreme sentence of the law being carried out in the case of his guiltier comrade. Kelly's punishment was remitted, therefore, to penal servitude for life, and in this way he came under the writer's notice as one of the English convicts of Victoria Jail, Hong-kong.

This fearful experience seemed to have tamed down Kelly into a very quiet, willing, and useful prisoner, and he was accordingly well treated by the prison staff, and was placed, under an armed guard, in a small way of authority over a gang of Chinese prisoners, working on the roads, receiving the privilege of smoking tobacco, and earning a fair number of good-conduct marks towards the remission of a portion of his life-sentence. By his daily contact with Chinese, and being a quick fellow, he soon picked up the Cantonese dialect, and proved useful to the warders as an interpreter. These particulars of Kelly's history are important, as we shall meet him further on in this true narrative of events, taking an important part in its principal scene.

Having been ailing for some time, the duties of my post being very arduous, I procured three months' leave, which I proposed to spend in a trip to the north of China by sea. To the end, I was therefore looking out for a vessel to procure a passage to one of the northern treaty ports, and strolling down the Queen's Road, I came across the shroff or cashier of a Chinese friend of mine, a large merchant on the Praya or seafront, whom I had been able to do several kindnesses to, in the shape of chartering suitable vessels for conveyance of his goods to the north, in return being a welcome guest to his house, and receiving the present of many valuable Chinese and Japanese curios. Tripping gingerly along with his snow-white jacket, full pantaloons, and handsome silk-embroidered pacer-soled shoes, with a palm-leaf fan in one hand, and a dandy English silk umbrella over his head, the shroff, who was quite a Chinese exquisite in his way, greeted me: "Ay yah, taiping (gentleman), I chin-chin you. My piecee master wantshee look see you too muchee; he wantshee one piecee number one ship six thousand piculs, go Tien-tsin side; chop-chop." (In English): "Oh, good-morning, sir. My master would much like to see you; he wants to charter a vessel of six thousand piculs" (a picul is one hundred and thirty-three pounds) "capacity to go to Tien-tsin; load immediately."

"All right, Cupid," I replied. (Cupid was a nickname given the dandy cashier by one of the English captains frequently his master's hong or warehouse). "We will take a chair (palanquin), and see him at once."

We engaged a bamboo chair; and I soon completed the business to Akow's (the merchant's) satisfaction, by chartering for him a Hamburg barque called the Etienne at a reasonable figure; and in return, he arranged with the captain to give me a free passage to Tien-tsin and back.

The Captain I found a hearty, good-tempered Hamburger, looking a thorough sailor, and proving it, and, as I afterwards found, a plucky fellow to boot in our tussle with the pirates later on. I went on board with him to see my berth and have a glass of grog with him and the mate.

"Did Akow tell you that he had six chests of opium for you to take?" I asked the skipper, when we were seated under the poop awning refreshing ourselves.

"No," said the captain, who spoke English fluently; "he did not. I shall be sorry if I have to take it. You remember only last month the attack on the Fiery Cross in the Lyee Moon Pass, and the poor captain shot before his wife's eyes?"

"Too well, I do, captain; and the gunboats haven't got the lorcha yet that did it, either, worse luck; but that lieutenant in the Raccoon is a splendid fellow, and has done a lot to thin them out. In fact, the Jews in the Queen's Road have been pretty near cleared out of watches, the Raccoon's men have had so much head-money to spend ashore.—But, captain," I continued, "the question is simply this: if we are attacked, is it to be fight, or give them the opium?"

"Fight! The insurance does not cover risk by pirates, and I must do my duty to my owners and charterer."

"It is always wise to know one's mind; and you seem to have a fine crew," I replied, glancing at the men rattling down the lower rigging.

"I have," said Captain Hermann, "a first rate crew. Many of them have been with me in different ships for years. There are eighteen of them able seamen, two ordinary seamen, four stout apprentices, two mates; and a boatswain and myself make twenty-eight all told. I have that twelve-pounder carronade there, two dozen muskets and cutlasses; plenty of ammunition; grape, round-shot, and canister for the carronade; and a revolver each for myself and two officers. You see, my owners fitted our magazine for the China Sea."

"And I have a short Enfield and two hundred rounds, and a Lefaucheux revolver with same amount of ammunition; and three hundred hard Mexican dollars in my cash-box, which latter I intend to take to Tien-tsin with me, if messieenrs our friends the long-tails don't get the better of us. If we can carry a good working breeze up to and through Mirs Bay, I think none of their craft are fast enough to overhaul you; but if we get becalmed, which I am Job's-comforter enough to say is very probable at this time of year, we shall very likely receive an uninvited visit of an unpleasant and somewhat exciting character. It is the stinkpots, as they are called, which are the worst feature of piratical attacks."

Stinkpots are round earthenware pots with a lid, filled with a sort of Greek-fire, which, slung with small cords or lanyards, the pirates carry at the mastheads of their craft. When longside the vessel they are attacting, they throw them on to the deck; the pots break, and a suffocating sulphurous liquid and vapour break forth, burning into the flesh if touching it, and suffocating all near it. After demoralising the crew of the vessel attacked by this contrivance, they board with spears and short swords, and endeavour to complete their work.

By this time it was five o'clock, the usual hour for the crew's supper; and the captain took the opportunity of muttering his men, and acquainting them with the fact of its being very probable that having opium on board, the ship might be attacked on her voyage, and asking them if they intended standing by him and his officers in such case. The men, through their spokesman the boatswain, said they of course would, and would like to have a brush with the pirates; but as regards those of the crew who were married, if any of them were killed, they hoped the owner would remember their wives and families. This was the only thing they had to ask.

The captain having fully satisfied them on this point, I called my sampan and went ashore.

Stepping from the boat on landing, I met Mr. Farquar, the governor of the prison, and my immediate superior there. "Here's a case, M——," said the governor "Kelly has escaped from the chain-gang in Wyndham Road, wrenched the musket from the sepoy guard's hands, shot him, and disabled the warder with a heavy blow from the butt, ran off, and is supposed to be in hiding somewhere on the island."

"He speaks Chinese so well, and is such a clever fellow," I replied, "that I shouldn't be at all surprised if he isn't somewhere in Taipingshan" (a low quarter of the town), "among some of his Chinese friends, old convicts, disguised as a Chinaman; if, indeed, he isn't already away in one of the Chinese passenger boats, to land somewhere among the islands and join a pirate lorcha. I expect we shall hear something more of Mr. Kelly's exploits before long. He has been a naval-reserve man, and can handle big guns, and is likely to prove useful to some Macao pirate firm."

"I wish Macao was blown out of the water," said Mr. Farquhar. "It is a den of pirates and men-stealers, and costs this government thousands yearly in dealing with the criminals it manufactures and encourages—Well! so you have got a ship," continued he, when I had mentioned my having secured a passage. "I wish you luck and recovery of your health. Keep clear of the pilongs [pirates] if you can, and get back safe."

A few days afterwards the Etienne was loaded and ready for sea, with six chests of Benares opium in the after-cabin; some crates of fowls and ducks, sundry potted meats, and three casks of English bottled beer; and sent on board very thoughtfully by Akow for my and the captain's benefit.

With a fine leading wind, with royal and all plain sail set, as the Etienne passed Green Island on her northward voyage, Captain Hermann, rubbing his hands, said gleefully to me: "It will puzzle any lorcha to catch her if she keeps this wind.—Heave the log, Mr. Schmidt" (to the chief-mate, who was standing by), "and see what she is doing."

"Nine and a half, sir," said the mate, when the glass had run out and he stopped the line. "She is in capital trim, just four inches by the stern, and a lively cargo."

"The breeze held steadily all that day, during the night, and the forepart of the next; but shortly after mid-day the wind gradually dropped, and at five p. m., we were nearly becalmed, with topmast and topgallant studding-sails and everything set that would draw, stealing along about a mile an hour only, with the dreaded Mirs Bay on our beam, distant about a mile. I had a very powerful pair of marine glasses on board with me, and I stood on the poop looking at some suspicious craft drawn up on the beach, with some dark circular objects at their mastheads, showing out clear under the bright evening skylime.

"They may be only trading craft," I said to the captain, "as they all carry guns and stinkpots for their own protection against pirates; and if what is alleged is true, when trade is dull and freights low, they turn pirates themselves on occasion, displaying a versatity and power of adaptation to circumstances peculiarly Chinese."

Whilst I had been conversing with the captain, the wind had fallen entirely, and the Etienne lay "like a painted ship on a painted ocean," lifting lazily to a slight swell, her sails slatting against the masts, with the slow pitching of the vessel.

"By Jove!" I exclaimed, with my glass levelled again over the poop rail, and directed to the shore, where some vessels were lying, "there is no mistake this time; we are in for it. That black patch you see between the craft and the huts up there consists of about a hundred Chinamen coming down to the beach. I can see what looks like spears and gingals in their hands, and parties of two are carrying long sweeps. They are going to sweep out to us, and we shall have all three of those vessels after us. They will attack us in their usual way—on both sides, and with one vessel in reserve. I hope one of the gunboats is not beyond the hearing of our carronade. You had better load it with a double charge of powder and a heavy wad and fire it."

This was accordingly done, and the lou report rang out over the still water.

The captain, his mates, and myself now consulted together a plan of defence, whilst the men were getting up the ammunition for the carronade and small arms, buckling on their cutlasses, and reloading the gun with grape-shot. It was decided that the carronade should be used directly the vessels came within range; and that, when nearly alongside, all hands should take to the fore, main, and mizzen tops, told off in divisions to each top—the second mate at the fore, the chief at the main, and the captain and myself in the mizzen, with the crew divided equally among the three tops.

I then got up from the after-hold the three casks of bottled beer sent on board by Akow, and started the beer from the bottles into the wash-deck tub, and smashing up the bottles, laid the broken glass in a large heap ready for a certain use described later on. The men were then ordered to put on their long sea-boots.

By this time the pirates had not been idle, and were perceived coming out to us with three lorchas, using their long sweeps or oars, and yelling so loudly we could hear them though half a mile off at least. Their next move was to let drive three shots at us from their broadside guns, evidently fired with very bad powder, as they fell very short and were badly aimed.

The crew of the Etinne were ranged along the port bulwarks, that to which the pirates were approaching, and instructed to divide themselves, and half to man the starboard side at word of command.

As the pirates approached, they fired again with better luck, as a twelve-pounder shot struck the mainmast about twelve feet from the deck, but only slightly wounded it, the shot diverging, passing over to leeward. When at about a hundred yards distant, we fired our carronade with grape at the foremost pirate; and the effect was to make the splinters fly from their bulwarks, and make very apparent gaps in the crowd of Chinamen who literally thronged the decks. As they approached nearer, one of her consorts pulled out from under her stern, so as to cross our bows and board us simultaneously on both sides. Being now within musket-range, the crew were ordered to commence firing, which they did with good effect, my short Enfield doing considerable execution in picking off men who were at the long tiller steering the first lorcha. The first lorcha being now close alongside, the carronade was fired slap into her bows, the broken glass was strewed over the Etienne's decks, and "All hands aloft!" was the order given. The deck was therefore left vacant; and the pirates perceiving we were all aloft, ran alongside without using their stinkpots, thinking they had an easy prey.

Now the scheme of the broken bottles proved its utility. The Chinamen jumped from their vessel's bulwarks on to the Etienne's, and in their fury and excitement, clean on to the broken glass with their bare feet, to stagger about with howls of anguish. The man in command of the lorcha had been driving his men by voice and hand—the latter with a spear in it—to board us, as they seemed to hold back, after so many of them had gone down under our musket-fire; and he now headed a party who were evidently bent upon coming up the rigging and overpowering our party in the mizzen-top by numbers, the same stratagem evidently taking place at the fore and main. As the pirates came crowding up the rat-lines, they were picked off by revolver and musket, and fell like over-ripe fruit from a tree; but, to my dismay, we were now attacked by another crowd coming up the starboard rigging from the second lorcha. They seemed simply insensible to fear, and as one after another was shot down, two or more would take his place.

In spite of all our efforts to prevent them, the leader with two more got into the mizzen-top, and a hand-to-hand fight—cutlass versus China sword—took place. With my revolver in my left and cutlass in the right hand, I parried a cut at my head from the pirate leader, when, suddenly starting back, so that the grasp of his left hand on the rigging seemed almost gone, and he was in danger of falling backward, he exclaimed in good English: "Good heavens, is it you, Mr. M——?"

At a flash I recognized him; it was Kelly in Chinese dress.

"I will save your life, sir, if I can," he said gaspingly, being apparently wounded in the throat; "but the men must have the opium."

"Never! Stand back! Shin down the backstay, or, as true as death, I'll shoot you, Kelly!" I cried.

Calling in Chinese to his men, he sprang on to the topmast backstay, and slid like lightning to the deck, and disappeared down the cabin skylight, evidently to search for the opium.

"I wish one of the gunboats would come up!" I said hurriedly to the Captain, as we were loading and firing our revolvers. "This won't last long."

I had hardly said this, when the sound of a heavy piece of ordnance fired at a distance came booming over the water; and shortly after, the peculiar sound which a high-pressure steamer makes when under steam was faintly heard, and round the point of land astern, steaming at full speed, came Her Majesty's gunboat Raccoon, with her men at quarters, and her sixty-eight pounder trained and manned. The pirates on this scrambled back into their craft, cast off the lashings, and pulled vigorously for the shore. As the Raccoon came under our stern in chase of them, she fired her long gun at one of the lorchas, smashing her stern into smithereens; and her commander hailed us: "Many of you killed or hurt?"

"No!" I hailed back; "none seriously."

"Will come back to you by-and-by," replied he, and steamed on after the lorchas.

The Raccoon succeeded in capturing the whole of the remaining crews of the three lorchas, and sending a party ashore, burnt their huts. One lorcha was set fire to, the other two being towed to Hong-kong and condemned in the Vice-Admiralty Court. Kelly's wound proved fatal to him, when he was on his trial for the several crimes of murder, prison-breaking, and piracy, he having been taken back to Hong-kong in the Raccoon. The captain received a handsome gold chronometer watch and chain from the owners of the opium on board the Etienne, and a substantial present from the underwriters.

Some three months afterwards, the writer returned to his duties at Hong-kong, with his health re-established, and a vivid recollection of his "Adventure in the China Sea."

AMUSING METAPHORS.

An Englishman once asked a son of Erin if the roads in Ireland were good. Pat replied: "Yes; they are so fine that I wonder you do not import some of them into England. Let me see—there's the road to love, strewed with roses; to matrimony, through nettles; to honour, through the camp; to prison, through the law; and to the undertaker's, through physic." "Have you any road to preferment?" asked the Englishman. "Yes, faith, we have; but that is the dirtiest road in the kingdom."

The answer of Apollonius to Vespasian is not without humour and instruction. Vespasian asked him: "What caused Nero's overthrow!" He answered: "Nero could touch and tune the harp well; but in government, sometimes he used to wind the pins too high, sometimes to let them down too low." And certain it is that nothing destroys authority so much as the unequal and untimely interchange of power pressed too far and relaxed too much.

George Stephenson was once asked by a scientific lady what he considered the most powerful force in nature. "Oh," said he in a gallant spirit, "I will soon answer that question: it is the eye of the woman for the man who loves her; for if a woman look with affection on a young man, and he should go to the uttermost ends of the earth, the recollection of that look will bring him back. There is no other force in nature that could do that."

Equally ready with a similitude was the negro who, when giving evidence in court, was asked about the honesty of a neighbour. "I know nothing against him," was the reply; "but if I was a chicken, I would roost high when he was hanging around."

A thoughtful writer describes one-eyed travellers, who see a great deal of some particular class of objects and are blind to all others, and adds: "The Irish jaunting car, in which the passengers sit back to back, is a sort of type of what befalls many tourists in Ireland. Each sees a great deal, and reports faithfully what he has seen on one side of the road, and the other on the other. One will have seen all that is green, and the other, all that is orange."

"A cunning knave can form no notion of a nobler nature," says the same writer. "He is like the goats on Robinson Crusoe's island, which saw clearly everything below them, but very imperfectly what was above them; so that Robinson could never get at them from the valleys; but when he came upon them from the hilltop, he took them quite by surprise."

Ridicule, says a German critic, is like a blow with the fist; wit, like the prick of a needle; irony, like the sting of a thorn; and humour, the plaster which heals all these wounds. All of these qualities may be found in some metaphors.

Man is said to be an animal that has a mania for getting up societies and making himself president If the presidency has been already claimed, he contents himself with the position of treasurer. In the cynical old bachelor's opinion, ideas are like beards—men only get them when they are grown up, and women never have any. It was probably another old bachelor who said: "Nature shudders when she sees a woman throw a stone; but when a woman attempts to split wood, nature covers her head and retires to a dark and mouldering cave in temporary despair." A spinster says old bachelors are frozen-out old gardeners in the flower-bed of love.

To say that a coquette is a rosebush from which each young beau plucks a leaf, and the thorns are left for the husband, is not very complimentary. Compliments are the coin that people pay a man to his face; sarcasm, what they pay him out with behind his back.

A farmer said: "One thing I don't like about city folks—they be either so stuck up that yer can't reach 'em with a haystack pole, or so blamed friendly that they forget to pay their beard."

A rural poet said of his lady-love: "She is graceful as a water-lily, while her breath is like an armful of clover." An American poet wrote a eulogy of Washington, whose glorious life should compose a volume as Alps immortal, spotless as its snows. The stars should be its type, its press the age, the earth its binding, and the sky its page. Truly, some American poets go in for marvels of metaphor.

The Chinese call overdoing a thing, a hunch-back making a bow. When a man values himself overmuch, they compare him to a rat falling into a scale and weighing itself.

A fanatical Sabbatarian writes: "The Sunday newspaper is a crayfish in the dikes of misrule, a crayfish that undermines the banks, behind which the racecourse, the theatres, the saloon, the gambling dens, &c., are roaring for exit." Another newspaper described a fire by saying that the red flames danced in the heavens, and flung their fiery arms about like a black funeral pall, until Sam Jones got on the roof and doused them out with a pail of water.

Gordon Cumming likened an African jungle to a forest of fishhooks relieved by an occasional patch of penknives.

"You look," said an Irishman to a pale haggard smoker, "as if you had got out of your grave to light your cigar, and couldn't find your way back again."

A Russian Revolutionary Conspiracy

For some time there have been rumours of a revolutionary conspiracy widespread among the aristocracy of Russia, having for its object the removal of Czar Alexander III. and the crowning in his stead of the eldest son of Alexander II. by his morganatic wife, the Princess Dolgorouki. Failing in that, the efforts would be centred on putting the young Dolgorouki in succession to the Czar instead of the present Czarevitch, the latter named prince being both an invalid and an imbecile. Young Dolgorouki is a lad of splendid character and attainments, who would at once give Russia a liberal constitutional government. In the eyes of the people there is little or no blemish on his parentage. The Dolgorouki family is one of the oldest and noblest in Russia, its members having been great princes before the Romanoffs were heard of. The present Czar is a Holstein-Gottorp, far more German than Russian.

HOME AND GENERAL NEWS.

Lieut.-Governor Dewdney has returned to Regina after a short visit to Winnipeg.

The first steamship of the Canadian Pacific line has left Hong Kong for British Columbia.

Owing to grave charges alleged against the Montreal city police patrol, the force has been disbanded.

Fire the other morning in St. Roch's suburb of Quebec city, destroyed property to the value of $70,000.

Ten thousand Belgian coal miners are on strike, and as a disturbance is feared troops are ready for an emergency.

By the burning of the Royal Hotel, Boissevan, Man., Duncan G. McBean, a prominent grain merchant of Winnipeg, was burned to death.

Intelligence has been received in Ottawa that the Batoche half-breeds have refused loan of seed grain and will not cultivate their land this year.

Mr. William O'Brien has been elected without opposition member for the North east division of Cork, made vacant by the resignation of Mr. Edmund Leamy.

The miners at the Reserve mine, near Sydney, C. B., are out on strike for an increase of three cents per ton, and fears are felt of a general strike at Cape Breton.

The inquest on the body of an infant found in a girl's trunk in the Albion Hotel in Toronto, resulted in a verdict of wilful murder against Fanny Smith, who is under arrest.

In the new convention between the French and Great Britain it is agreed that the period of the British occupation of Egypt shall be not less than two and not more than five years.

Mr. McNeil has given notice of a bill to amend the Civil Service Act, so that promotion shall not depend upon passing an examination, but upon technical adaptation for the service.

O. Rochette's tannery W. J. Brown's lumber yard, and several buildings on St. Dominique street, Quebec, were destroyed by fire on Saturday; loss $125,000. Very little insurance.

David Lussier and Jos. Lambert, two workers of provisions to the lumber camps of Messrs. Hall, were drowned in the Rivière Chaudiere a day or two ago by the upsetting of a canoe.

It is rumoured that Mr. McShane will shortly resign from the Quebec Cabinet, and that Mr. Hall, the Conservative member for Montreal West, will be asked to take the vacant portfolio.

A company with a capital of five million dollars has been organized in Kingston by New York capitalists for the development of the iron mines along the Kingston and Pembroke railway.

The United States consul at Kingston has forwarded a letter to Washington pointing out the injurious effect of the Inter-State Commerce bill upon the trade of the United States with the Dominion.

The English mint is hard at work on the new coinage to be issued on June 22. A very fine profile of an elderly queen, modelled by Mr. Bœhm, will be used, with various crowns for the several coins.

Patrick Glynn, a C. P. R. yardsman, was run over by a freight train while shunting cars at the Queen's wharf, Toronto, and both of his legs were cut off. He was taken to the hospital, were he died.

Speaking editorially of the project of commercial union between Canada and the United States, the New York Sun says that nothing short of a political union under the United States constitution is the manifest destiny of Canada and the only means by which perfect free trade can be secured.

Between fifty thousand and sixty thousand men are out of work at Chicago, as a result of the building trades trouble. The combined funds of all the unions involved will not support the members for the first week and trouble is feared. The Anarchists are ready to take advantage of the situation.

Michael Doyle, an oiler at the waterworks pump house, Ottawa, was caught in the machinery and had his left leg so crushed that it had to be amputated at the thigh. He remained in the grip of the cog wheel for an hour and a half before the murderous machinery could be raised sufficiently to release him.

The strike of Pictou, N. S., coal miners which began at the beginning of the year and has been mutually disastrous, has finally ended in a compromise, the men agreeing to accept a reduction of six cents per ton in wide working places and thirteen cents in narrow ones. Work in all mines will be resumed to-day.

The old toll bridge spanning the River Avon between Windsor and Falmouth, N. S., was burned on Sunday night. This was the last toll bridge in the province. It was 820 feet long and was built in 1836. The local Government made it free last year and were preparing to rebuild it. Ths fire is believed to be incendiary.

The sealing schooner "Favorite" arrived at New Westminster, B. C., on Saturday and reports that the hull of the steamer "Stephen" was washed ashore at Clazquot Sound; also the bodies, canoes, spears, washed up below Cape Flattery, supposed to be of the schooner "Active," long thought wrecked. All on board perished.

A child named Herny Sims, eight years old, was drowned at the foot of the canal locks, Ottawa, Friday afternoon, having in company with two others fallen in while playing on the edge of the water. Caretaker Allston, of the Rowing club's boat house, which is near by, saved the two, but did not hear that there was a third until too late.

A great swindling scheme, consisting in the pledging of sugar chiefly of the Cordenas refinery, an imaginary concern, has been carried on at Havana for some time past. The swindle was conducted in Havana by the storekeeper and it is stated that he fraudulently obtained from different parties including a bank, from $350,000 to $500,000.

At a conference of citizens in Montreal to discuss the question of protection from floods, a resolution urging the city to grant at once the $178,000 for the construction of a temporary dyke was adopted, and an influential deputation was appointed to proceed to Ottawa to lay before the Government other resolutions adopted by the meeting for the better protection of the city.

HEALTH

Sunshine.

Open the windows, my friend, and let the sunlight in. God sends it as a precious blessing from heaven; but you bar it out with blinds and curtains, as if it were your worst enemy. Throw open the blinds, and let it in. I know you always say it will fade your pretty furniture and carpets; but, my dear friend, the roses it steals from your carpet, it will plant in the cheeks of your children. A few dollars will buy a new covering for your floor, while all the wealth of a Cœsus will not put the glow of health into those pale little cheeks. One of the best investments you can make, is plenty of fresh air and sunshine.

The germs of disease that lurk in the most elegantly-furnished room if kept dark, will vanish away before the bright and cheery sunlight.

Your plants need a sunny window. I heard you saying, only the other day, that you were going to build a conservatory, because your plants did not get enough sun even in the south window; consequently they were pale, and did not bloom well. Yes and the wee human bud that God has intrusted to your care to train into the sweet, healthy bloom of womanhood, is pale too; what are you going to do about the matter? I would suggest a large bay-window for the nursery, in addition to the one small one that now serves for light and ventilation.

Children instinctively feel that sunlight is a golden treasure. I have often seen a baby creep across the floor to catch at a sunbeam that had stolen in through the closed shutters, and was dancing on the carpet. Children love bright things. Make home bright, and they will love it.

There is another kind of sunshine you need to bring into your home. It is the sunshine of smiles. Open the door some dark, gloomy day, and look out; your face is sober and inanimate, reflecting the dull sky. A few hours later you look again. The cloud has passed, and all the world is flooded with sunlight. Involuntarily, you can smile and feel happier.

There is a little poem that says:—

"Mamma's eyes are baby's skies," and it seems very true. If mother is nervous and out of spirits, baby is cross and restless; but if mamma is smiling and sunny, the children are almost sure to reflect the smile. If you would have a happy, healthful home, keep it bright with smiles and sunshine. They will work wonders.

Country Smells.

The city dweller daily washes the grim from his face, and cleans the cinders from his eyes, and longs for a breath of the delicious pure air of the country. His picture of a rural district includes nothing less wholesome than green fields, sunny skies, and fresh breezes, laden with the perfume of flowers; but at this season of the year the reality is often a very different picture. It does not require a very long ride in any country district at the present season to encounter many noisome smells. Here is a great field thickly covered over with half decomposed manure from the barnyard, poisoning the air for half a mile around. Next we see a gardner, engaged in making his cold frames, which he places at the summit of a large heap of fermenting, vile-smelling, green manure. There are, also, plenty of barn-yards, adding their augean perfume to swell the volume of the stench which salutes the nostrils of every passer-by.

Why should not the farmer disinfect his barn-yard and compost heap occasionally with some cheap disinfectant like copperas? Would it injure the value of the manure as a fertilizer? Will some of our farmer friends tell us! and why cannot the gardner spread a layer of dirt over that huge pile of putrefactive material which he erects close to his dwelling and the public road, for convenience of access to his growing plants, to use for a cold frame.

Our country friends must begin to think about cleaning up, and abating some of these nuisances, or we shall cease to think of the country as the land of pure air and health-giving breezes, and shall come to regard the city with its clean, paved streets, and well-laid sewers, as the place where one may breathe the air of heaven in greatest purity. It is already a recognized fact that filth diseases of the class to which typhoid fever belongs, are much more frequent in the country than in sewered cities.

Moldy Walls.

What makes that brown spot on the parlor ceiling? Clean it away as often as you will, it persistently comes back again. What does it mean? Simply this: Your house has the leprosy. If a priest of the time of Moses could look into your house, he would condemn it to be torn down and carried away out of the camp, or burned up. This was one of the wisest of the wise laws formulated by the pioneer sanitarian of all ages, Moses, the Jewish lawgiver. It was far better to sacrifice a house than a life, or many lives, as is often done by these damp and moldy houses. Better look into the cause at once, and remove it. Possibly there is a leak in the roof; or it may be that the dampness from the kitchen condenses upon the walls, and furnishes the requisite conditions for the growth of these fungi. It is a well-established principle that human beings cannot live in health where mold grows abundantly. The two grades of life are antagonistic. Where one flourishes, the other fades.

Poultry-Yards.

A neglected poultry-yard soon becomes one of the vilest of all sources of offense, from a sanitary or an esthetic standpoint. Notwithstanding this fact, which must be too evident to require demonstration, how many of these sources of foul air may be seen and smelled in every country district, and even within the precincts of many towns and villages! It has been pretty clearly demonstrated that much of the so-called malaria which is charged to overflowed ponds, and lakes, and marshes, and low lands, is really manufactured on the premises of the sufferers, by just such fever factories as those referred to. Chickens reared in such pestilential holes as are most chicken coops at this season of the year, are not healthy, and not fit for human beings. Is it not possible, and even probable, that the eggs of such fowls may acquire an unwholesome flavor from their intimate relation to organic filth?

Flowers as Disinfectants.

Nature's wonderful disposition to economize by "killing two birds with one stone," to use a common expression, is not better illustrated in flowers. A beautiful, fragrant flower is not only a thing of beauty and a joy forever," but is an excellent disinfectant as well. It has long been known to scientists that the volatile substances which most flowers emit, are among the best of disinfectants. The chemical changes which they undergo in the atmosphere, develop ozone, which not only destroys foul gases, but is also deadly to germs. This fact accounts for the well-known purity of the air in pine forests. With this fact in mind, it is evidently the duty of every householder to see that there is a good-sized bed of these delightful disinfecting agents growing in the vicinity of his dwelling during the coming months, when the air teems with germs "seeking whom they may devour," or, at least, make sick.

Dishonesty.

Dishonesty in its all forms certainly inflicts much suffering upon those who are cheated, but it also reacts with force upon the knave. Not only does he suffer the remorse of his own conscience and risk the penalties of the law, he must also resign the confidence and respect of his fellow-men; he must submit to be always suspected, always distrusted, always watched. What he has acquired wrongfully is apt to be held loosely and parted with easily. The same tricks that he has used, and perhaps sharper ones, will be used against him, and a general feeling of distrust which he has engendered will in many ways injure him and baffle his endeavours. This is true in cases from the petty meanness which would steal a tram-fare or take advantage of a mistake in change up to the deliberate and wholesale perfidy that speculates on trust-fundsor swindles a corporation.

A New Kind of Nail.

A new kind of nail, for attaching moldings and other light lumber, which leaves no nail-holes, is made with a point at each end and with an outwardly-projecting head or shoulder midway between the points. The nail is first driven into the wood by means of a punch, which straddles the protruding point and bears on the head. When enough have been driven in the molding is placed over the nails and driven down.

A Bloody Affray

is often the result of "bad blood" in a family or community, but nowhere is bad blood more destructive of happiness or health than in the human system. When the life current is foul and sluggish with impurities, and is slowly distributing its poisons to every part of the body, the peril to health, and life even, is imminent. Early symptoms are dull and drowsy feelings, severe headaches, coated tongue, poor appetite, indigestion and general lassitude. Delay in treatment may entail the most serious consequences. Don't let disease get a strong hold on your constitution, but treat yourself by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and be restored to the blessings of health. All druggists.

Full of import—A custom house.

Jenks' Dream.

Jenks had a queer dream the other night. He thought he saw a prize-fighters' ring, and in the middle of it stood a doughty little champion who met and deliberately knocked over, one by one, a score or more of big, burly-looking fellows, as they advanced to the attack. Giants as they were in size, the valiant pigmy proved more than a match for them. It was all so funny that Jenks woke up laughing. He accounts for the dream by the fact that he had just come to the conclusion, after trying nearly every big, drastic pill on the market, that Pierce's tiny Purgative Pellets easily "knock out" and beat all the rest hollow!

"Johnny, I have discovered that you have taken more sugar than I gave you." "Yes, grandma: I've been making believe there was another little boy spending the day with me."

A Woman's Sweet Will.

She is prematurely deprived of her charms of face and form, and made unattractive by the wasting effects of ailments and irregularities peculiar to her sex. To check this drain upon, not only her strength and health, but upon her amiable qualities as well, is her first duty. This is safely and speedily accomplished by a course of self-treatment with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, a nervine and tonic of wonderful efficacy, and prepared especially for the alleviation of those suffering from "dragging-down" pains, sensations of nausea, and weakness incident to women—a boon to her sex. Druggists.

There is something very lady-like about a hand of four queens.

LADIES

Who are Weak, Nervous and Exhausted; who feel themselves losing strength; who are pale, delicate and sickly in appearance, suffering from the many complaints peculiar to women—send for and read M. V. LUBON'S Treatise in BOOK FORM on the Diseases of Women. Mailed sealed and secure from observation on receipt of 6c in stamps, UNSEALED FREE. Address, M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. East, Toronto, Ont.

Always down in the mouth—The fellow who dines on roast goose, as served in a chop-house.

A CURE FOR DRUNKENNESS,

opium, morphine, chloral, tobacco, and kindred habits. The medicine may be given in tea or coffee without the knowledge of the person taking it, if so desired. Send 6c. in stamps for book and testimonials from those who have been cured. Address M. V. Lubon, 47 Wellington St. East, Toronto, Ont. Cut this out for future reference. When writing mention this paper.

Swine were undoubtedly pre-Adamite animals. Even Adam had his spare-rib.

Whenever your Stomach or Bowels get out of order, causing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, and their attendant evils, take at once a dose of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Best family medicine. All Druggists, 50 cents.

With the baseballist the come-bat deepens.

Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness and Hay Fever.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are cured in from one to three simple applications made at home. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent free on receipt of stamp by A. H. Dixon & Son, 305 King Street West Toronto Canada.

It is said that a sermon is always short when preached for the first time.

HEALTH AND MANHOOD RESTORED.—A GENTLEMAN who suffered for years from Nervous Debility, Premature Decay, Wasting Weakness, Lost Manhood, and all the effects of youthful indiscretion, will for the sake of suffering humanity, send free to his fellow-sufferers the recipe and full directions for making the simple remedy by which he was cured. Address J. H. REEVES, 43 Chatham St., Hamilton, Ont.

OLD AGED and OLD MEN who are broken down from the effects of abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for book made M. V. Lubon's Treatise on Diseases of Man. The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. E. Toronto, Ont.

Indians never kiss each other, and no one who has ever seen an Indian can blame them much.

People who are subject to bad breath, foul coated tongue, or any disorder of the Stomach, can at once be relieved by using Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, the old and tried remedy. Ask your Druggist.

A. P. 334

GOOD LIVE AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY County in Canada. Address, FERRIS & CO., 87 Church St., Toronto.

STAMMERING—And all Impediments of Speech, removed for life. Cure guaranteed. Stammering Specialist. 26 Clarence St., Toronto.

AGENTS AND CANVASSERS wanted, Male or Female, whole or spare time, on salary or commission. Industrial Union of B.N.A., 45 Arcade, Toronto.

A NEW EMERY MOWER SHARPENER—Will sharpen the knife without taking it out. Every farmer will buy it. AGENTS WANTED. CLEMENT & CO. TORONTO.

TORONTO CUTTING SCHOOL.—Gentlemen desirous of acquiring a thorough knowledge of garment cutting should apply at once to S. CORRIGAN, 122 Yonge St., Toronto. Terms on application.

THE BOILER INSPECTION and Insurance Company of Canada, Consulting Engineers and Solicitors of Patents, TORONTO. G. C. ROBB, Chief Engineer. A. FRASER, Sec'y-Treas.

AGENTS—Ladies or Gentlemen Wanted—To Canvass for our Subscription Books. Our Standard and popular work, Dr. Withrow's "History of Canada"—a book which ought to be in every library. Our instructive, amusing and soul-touching temperance book, "Platform Echoes," by J. B. Gough. Our complete book of sermons, and autobiography of Sam P. Jones, with a short sketch of the life of Sam W. Small, and three of his special sermons. Our beautiful book of poetry and literature of all ages and all lands, entitled "Golden Thoughts on Mother, Home and Heaven." Our handsome Family Bibles, beautiful illustrations, full of useful and helpful matter for Bible study, besides good clear type and paper. Our terms are liberal. Send for circulars. WILLIAM BRIGGS, Publisher, Toronto.

GOLD, COMPOSITION GOLD, Antique Bronze, Natural Wood, and other Picture and Room Mouldings, Frames, etc. Paintings, Engravings Etchings, Artotypes, Artists' Materials, Mirrors, etc. Whole-ale and Retail. Trade Catalogue. MATTHEWS BROS. & CO., Toronto.

The National ELECTRO & STEREOTYPE CO.
23 ADELAIDE ST. E., TORONTO.
All classes of fine work. Mfrs. of Printers' Leads, Slugs and Metal Furniture. Send for prices.

The Perry Cart

TWO SIZES, SURREY AND PHAETON BODIES.

The shafts are attached to body by the Perry Compensating Springs. The result of the action of these Springs is no horse-motion in the cart, and no cart-motion on the horse.

Descriptive illustration on application. For sale by all carriage makers.

CANADA CARRIAGE PARTS CO., TORONTO.
Sole Manufacturers for Canada.
The Trade only supplied.

J. L. JONES
WOOD ENGRAVER
10 KING ST EAST
TORONTO.

CONSUMPTION.
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer. Give express and P. O. address.
DR. T. A. SLOCUM,
Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto

CONBOY'S

IMPROVED

CARRIAGE TOPS
Are famous for their style, convenience, durability, and cheapness. Buy no other until you see them. All the leading Carriage Builders sell them.
Factory: 407 King West, TORONTO.

THE ALBANY STEAM TRAP CO.'S SPECIAL BUCKET RETURN TRAP.

The Celebrated Hancock Inspirator.
Gresham's Automatic Re-starting Injector.
Morrison's Automatic Sight Feed Lubricator.
Engineers' & Plumbers' Supplies of every description. Send for circulars.
JAMES MORRISON, 75 & 77 Adelaide St. W., TORONTO

ELM CITY HARNESS OIL.
THE MOST SUPERB
HARNESS DRESSING IN THE WORLD
BASED ON NEATSFOOT OIL.
SOLD BY ALL HARNESS DEALERS.

BEAVER LINE OF STEAMSHIPS, Sailing weekly between Montreal and Liverpool. $60, $50, and $40; Return Tickets, $90, $80, and $100 according to Cabin and position of berth. Intermediate and Steerage at very low rates. For further particulars apply at Company's Office, 15 H. E. MURRAY, General Manager, 1 Custom House Square, Montreal, or to the Local Agents in the different Towns and Ports.

GUELPH Business College, Guelph, Ont.
Twelve States and Provinces already represented on the roll of this Institution. To thorough, practical instruction, and the efficiency and success of its graduates, this College owes its popularity. Circulars, giving terms, etc., mailed free. Address
D. MacCORMICK, Principal.

SPOONER'S COPPERINE 'Babbitt'—Non-fibrous Anti-friction Box-metal for journal bearings in machinery—Guaranteed copper mixed. Supplies every requirement. Ask your hardware dealer for it. ALONZO. W. SPOONER, Patentee and Manufacturer, Port Hope.

Awnings! Decorated Window Shades, &c. Wholesale and Retail, at the CELEBRATED GOLD MEDAL TENT MANUFACTORY, 70 King St. West, Toronto. NATIONAL MANUFACTUR'G CO

AGENTS APPLY TO THE WANTED D. W. BEADLE NURSERY CO. St. Catharines, Ont.

THE LONDON GUARANTEE AND ACCIDENT CO. (LD. OF LONDON, ENG.
Capital, £260,000. Dominion Government Deposit, £55,000. Head Office: 72 King St East, Toronto.
Gentlemen of influence wanted in unrepresented districts.
A. T. McCORD, Resident Secretary for the Dominion.

MEAT CHOPPERS. Washing Machines, 2 kinds; Clothes Wringers, 10 kinds; Mangles, 3 kinds. Churns, Carpet Sweepers, and other sundries.
HAMILTON INDUSTRIAL WORKS CO., Hamilton, Canada.
Send for article wanted, or Illustrated Catalogue.

Dairy Salt,
FOR BUTTER, ETC.
NEW Importations.—Higgins' Eureka, Washington and Ashton Brands, in large or small sacks. Also Rice's Canadian Salt. Write for prices.
JAMES PARK & SON,
Wholesale Produce Merchants, Toronto.

ONTARIO CANOE COMPANY Peterboro', Ont.

MANUFACTUR'S OF ALL KINDS OF CANOES
Send 3c. Stamp for Catalogue.

Bicycles!
SEND AT ONCE FOR LIST of Second-Hand Machines,
From $15 Upwards.
New Catalogue Ready 1st April
A. T. LANE MONTREAL.

THE WHITE THRESHING ENGINE OF LONDON ONT.
A FULL SUPPLY FOR 1887.

The Original Wood Cook.
THE MOST PERFECT WORKING STOVE YET INTRODUCED.

Elegant in Design and Finish, Massive in Appearance, A Charm for the Kitchen.

Has the Largest Oven, The Best Fire-Box, Heaviest Castings.

MADE IN 10 DIFFERENT STYLES AND SIZES. FOR SALE BY ALL THE LEADING DEALERS.
MANUFACTURED BY
THE E. & C. GURNEY CO., (L'D), TORONTO.
Dealers who have not yet seen this STOVE should secure the sale of it at once.

Lardine.
THIS SPLENDID MACHINE OIL! Has never failed to take the highest awards wherever exhibited.
It Has No Equal. Farmers, Threshers and Millmen Use No Other.
This Oil keeps the Machinery in first-rate working order, thereby lessening the chances of accidents and breakdowns. To be had of all first-class dealers. Beware of imitations!
Try our 600 Fire Test Cylinder Oil. Harness, Bolt Cutting, Wool and Lard Oil. always in stock.
SOLE MANUFACTURERS OF LARDINE.
McCOLL BROS. & CO., - - TORONTO.

CONFEDERATION LIFE ASS'N.

OUR LAST NOTICE

In this paper referred to the Annual Meeting of the Association. This meeting (being the 15th since the Company was organized) took place on Tuesday, the 12th April, when the following gratifying increases were announced:

PREMIUM INCOME INCREASED FOR YEAR, - $ 96,894.
INTEREST AND RENTS, - - - - - 13,029.
ASSETS, - - $356,375. SURPLUS, 80,234.

$260,420 Were allocated as Profits to Policy Holders. Profits payable on and after May 1st.

J. K. MACDONALD, Managing Director.

SNOW FLAKE BAKING POWDER THE FAVORITE! THERE IS NO BETTER! The Snow Drift Baking Powder Co., Brantford, Ont.

MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO.
MANUFACTURE ONLY
FINEST
Silver Plated Ware.
Artistic Designs, combined with Unequalled Durability and Finish.
HAMILTON, ONT.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships.
Sailing during winter from Port and every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via Halifax and St. John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamships of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal, weekly. Glasgow and Boston weekly; and Glasgow and Philadelphia, fortnightly
For Freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's N. F., Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans Rae & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; H. A. Allan Portland Boston Montreal

FOR ONE CENT
FARMERS, who want to settle their family around them. Tenant Farmers, who want a home of their own. Mechanics, wanting big pay. Capitalists, wanting safe investments. Business Men, who want to strike a business boom. Ambitious Men, who want a home and start in life—send postal card with address to J. M. HUCKINS, 96 King Street West, Toronto.

BABY'S BIRTHDAY.

A Beautiful Imported Birthday Card sent to any baby whose mother will send us the names of two or more other babies, and their parents' addresses. Also a handsome Diamond Dye Sample Card to the mother and much valuable information.
Wells, Richardson & Co., Montreal.

JUNE 19, 1885.—For two years my wife's health was run down. She was greatly emaciated and too weak to do anything for herself; she was given up by five doctors, they all passed their opinion that she could not live. She commenced using Dr. Jug's Medicine in December, 1884, and after taking six bottles she was so much improved that she could look after her household duties.
J. M. RODDICK, Engineer, C. P. R., West Toronto.

I CURE FITS!
When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you. Address DR. H. G. ROOT,
Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto.

Legal.

P. McCullough.

BARRISTER, SOLICITOR, &c.

OFFICE—OVER McFARLAND'S STORE,

MARKDALE,

Money to Loan.

MASSON & MASSON,

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, &c.

OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block, Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week.

J. MASSON, Q. C. S. MASSON. W. MASSON.

N. B.—Private and Company's funds to invest at from 6 to 8 per cent

---

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

WILLIAM STUART,

KIMBERLEY,

Issuer of Marriage Licences. Money to Loan on Real Estate at low rates.

A few Farms for sale. Terms easy.

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.

DENTIST,

GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at the Markdale House, Markdale, on the 1st and third Wednesday of each month and also at Munshaw's Hotel, Flesherton, the day following the third Wednesday in each month for the practice of his profession.

MARKDALE HOUSE,

MARKDALE, - - ONT.

J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

ISAAC STINSON.

Builder and Contractor

In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.

Estimates given. All work guaranteed.

Orders by mail promptly attended to.

329 Residence, MARKDALE.

W. G. RICHARDS,

BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT, Markdale.

1241y

WEAVING.

Having returned to Markdale, in order to be more convenient for my customers, I beg to announce that I am now prepared to do all kinds of Custom Weaving. Residence otd stand, opposite Presbyterian Church.

318 ARCH. BOYD.

R. J. SPROULE,

FLESHERTON.

Conveyancer, Appraiser, Valuator and Money Lender. Deeds, Mortgages, Leases and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice. Charges very low. Apply to

R. J. SPROULE,

Money Lender & Postmaster, Flesherton.

---

6 PER CENT.

Money loaned on Farm or Town Property at lowest rates of interest. Apply to

R. J. SPROULE,

Conveyancer & Postmaster. Flesherton.

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT 131 con 3 west of T. & S. Rd. Artemesia. 50 acres, about 20 acres clear of stumps and stones, balance good hardwood bush Five miles from Markdale and four from Flesherton. For further particulars apply to A. S. Thompson, Flesherton P. O. or J. J. Thompson, Orilla.

342-ft

HAGYARD'S YELLOW OIL CURES RHEUMATISM

FREEMAN'S WORM POWDERS.

Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure, and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults.

HAVE YOU

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Jaundice, Headache, Dizziness, Pain in the Back, Costiveness, or any disease arising from a deranged liver, DR. CHASE'S LIVER CURE will be found a sure and certain remedy.

NATURE'S REMEDY

The unqualified success of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure in Liver Complaint rests solely with the fact that it is compounded from nature's well-known liver regulators, MANDRAKE AND DANDELION, combined with many other invaluable roots, barks and herbs, having a powerful effect on the Kidneys, Stomach, Bowels and Blood. 500,000 SOLD

Over one-half million of Dr. Chase's Recipe Books were sold in Canada alone. We want every man, woman and child who is troubled with Liver Complaint to try this excellent remedy.

SOMETHING NEW. GIVEN AWAY FREE

Wrapped around every bottle of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure is a valuable Household Medical Guide and Recipe Book (84 pages), containing over 200 useful recipes pronounced by medical men and druggists as invaluable, and worth ten times the price of the medicine.

TRY CHASE'S CATARRH CURE. A safe and positive remedy. Price, 25 cents.

TRY CHASE'S KIDNEY AND LIVER PILLS. 25 cts. per box.

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS

E. GOMARSON & CO., Sole Agents, Bradford

Markdale Roller Mill.

FARMERS HAVING No. 1 WHEAT and preferring flour from their own wheat, can get it by bringing twenty bushels or more.

Flour always on Hand

Flour $3.80 to $4.20 per. bbl.

SHORTS, per ton - $12.00

BRAN, " - 12.00

The highest market price paid for Fall and Spring wheat.

J. W. FORD.

Public Notice.

To all whom it may con cern.

I R. L. Stephen the Druggist of Markdale have been appointed agent for JOHNSON'S celebrated Tonic and nervine. JOHNSON'S little liver Pills, and JOHNSON'S all healing White Ointment. The nervine is the very best in the market, in all diseases caused by poverty of blood, for Nervousness, Hysteria, and the PALENESS of Complexion so often noticed in female's, loss of appetite and general debility. In conjunction with the Liver Pills, it is the very best for all diseases arrising from To pid liver or bad stomach.

The White Oin ment is the very best in the market for Salt Rheume, Barbers Itch, Pimples, Chafs, Burns, Scalds, and all Skin diseases of a scrofulous nature. Try these fine remedies and you will not be disappointed.

For sale at R. L. STEPHEN'S the druggist, Markdale, Ont.

WM. G. GUTHRIE,

Plain & Ornamental Plasterer

MARKDALE.

Arches, Cornices, Centre Flowers, and all kinds of plain and ornamental plastering executed at cheapest rates. Calsomining Lime Washing and Repairs promptly attended to.

330

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of

School Furniture,

Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness, wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.

181 ANDREW McGILL.

MONEY TO LOAN.

ON real estate security, at low rate of interest, no commission charged. Business Strictly Confidential,

J. S. BLACK,

190 Pomona, P. O.

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT No. 24, con. 4, N. D. R. Glenelg, 100 acres, will be sold cheap and on easy terms of payment, for further particulars apply on the premises, or by letter to

J. S. BLACK,

190-tf. Pomona P. O.

Markdale Woolen Mill.

Custom Carding, Weaving, Fulling, Dyeing and cloth dressing, done in a workmanlike manner and on very short notice.

First Class Cotton Warp

supplied at the lowest possible rates.

A call solicited.

Terms strictly cash or wool.

Sept. 28, 1886 F. J. RITCHIE.

IT IS A WELL KNOWN FACT

—THAT—

McCOLL'S

"LARDINE,"

is the best known, and most reliable MACHINE OIL in the Dominion; Farmer's, Thresher's and Mill Owner's, will find it decidedly to their advantage to insist upon getting the "Genuine Lardine" when they ask for it, owing to so much inferior oil being sold under the same name by unscrupulous dealers. We are the sold manufacturers of the "Genuine Lardine" every barrel branded.

McCOLL BRO'S, & CO.

For sale in Markdale at Haskett Bro's Hardware Store. 347-73

WANTED!

Clean Timothy Seed,

—HIGHEST—

Market Price Paid.

H. PARKER,

DURHAM.

The Markdale Standard

Is issued every Thursday, by

C. W. RUTLEDGE, Markdale, Ont.,

TERMS—$1 per year in advance; $1.50 if not paid within six months.

Professional and business cards one inch space and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3 MO.
Whole column.....	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
Half column.....	27 00	15 00	10 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00	6 00
Two inch space.....	7 00	4 00
Three inch space	10 00	5 00

Casual advertisements 8 cents per line first insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.

Editorial notices, or notices in local column 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents each subsequent insertion.

Stray animals &c, advertised 3 weeks for $1

No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid except at the option of the publisher.

JOB PRINTING.

THE STANDARD office has a splendid equipment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. All orders filled with dispatch.

Society Directory.

Markdale C. O. O. F. No. 78, meets every alternate Monday evening at 8 o'clock in their Hall, Rae's block. Visiting brethren welcome.

Markdale A. O. U. W. No. 141 meets in their Hall, Rae's block, every alternate Monday evening at o'clock. A visit from brethren of neighboring lodges solicited.

MARKDALE L. O. L. No. 1045 meets in their Hall on Friday on or before full moon each month. Thos. Elliott, Master; W. J. Blakely, Secretary.

Victoria R. B. Preceptory, No. 282, Meets in Lodge Room of Markdale L. O. L. No. 1045, first Friday in each month. Visiting Sir Knights always welcome. Jas. Brodie W. P.; Thos. Elliott, Registrar.

Markdale Church Directory.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

Services every Sabbath at 10:30 a. m. Sabbath School at 2:30 p. m. Prayer Meeting every Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. Rev. A. Wilson, Pastor; A. McFarland, S. S. Superintendent.

CHRIST CHURCH.

Services every Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p m. Rev. Jas. Ward, Incumbent. Sabbath School 2:30. W. J. Ford, Superintendent.

METHODIST CHURCH.

Services every Sunday at 10:30 a. m and 7 p. m. Sunday School at 2:30. Prayer Meeting every Thursday evening from 8 to 9, Rev. Geo. H. Cornish, Pastor; G. S. Bowes, S. S. Superintendent. Ladies' Aid in connection; Mrs. T. Hill, Secretary.

Directory.

MARKDALE VILLAGE OFFICIALS.

Police Trustees—E. Davis, A. Turner, and S. J. Coleman.

Public School Trustees—B. Coleman, J. Lyons, W. A. Brown. B. Coleman, Sec.

COUNTY OFFICIALS.

Judge, H. McPherson, Owen Sound.
Deputy-Judge, S. J. Lane, Owen Sound.
Sheriff, C. H. Moore, Owen Sound.
Clerk of Peace, W. Armstrong, O. Sound.
Clerk, John Gale, Owen Sound.
Treasurer, S. J. Parker, Owen Sound.
County Warden, N, Reid, Owen Sound
Registrar, N., R. McKnight, "
" S., Thos. Lauder, Durham.
Revising Barrister, North, Judge McPherson, Owen Sound.
Revising Barrister, South & East, Judge Lane, Owen Sound.
M. P., North, Jas. Masson, Owen Sound.
M. P., East, T. S. Sproule, M.D., Markdale
M. P., South, Geo Landerkin, M. D., Hanover.
M. P. P., North, D. Creighton, Owen Sound
M. P. P., East, Capt. Rorke, Clarksburg
M. P. P., South, John Blyth, Orchard.

DIVISION COURT CLERKS

No. 1. John Stephens, Owen Sound.
" 2. David Jackson, Durham.
" 3. Thos. Plunkett, Meaford.
" 4. Thos. J. Rorke, Heathcote.
" 5. J. W. Armstrong, Flesherton.
" 6. John McDonald, Chatsworth.

Post-Office Directory.

MARKDALE.

The P. O. will be opened from 8 o'clock a. m. to 7 p. m. every working day.

Mails closed as follows, viz:

C. P. R. going North, 11:40 a m, and 7 p m
" " South, 3:30 p m, and 7 p m

TRAVERSTON.

Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday 12:30 noon.

HARKAWAY.

Friday, 12:30 noon.

For registered letters and money orders, fifteen minutes earlier than above. The P. O. will be open on Holidays from 9 to 9:30 a. m., and half an hour after mails arrive.

W. J. McFARLAND, P. M.

Monthly Fairs.

Orangeville—The second Thursday in each month.
Dundalk—Tuesday before Orangeville.
Flesherton—Monday before Orangeville.
Markdale—Saturday before Orangeville.
Durham—Third Tuesday in each month.
Chatsworth—Monday before Durham.
Holland Centre—Tuesday before Chatsworth
Priceville—Monday before Durham.
Hanover—Monday before Durham.

CLIPPINGS.

Mr. William O'Brien has hurt the cause of Home Rule not a little. In the first place, so far as Lord Lansdowne is concerned, it has been made clear that the Governor-General has the respect of all classes and that only the more irresponsible among even the Irish Nationalists would countenance any attack upon him. It is greatly to the credit of many prominent Irishmen in public life in Canada that with one or two exceptions all stayed away from Mr. O'Brien's meetings. In the second place Mr. O'Brien has enabled the opponents of Home Rule to make effective demonstrations against that movement. Mass meetings of citizens of Toronto under the chairmanship of the Mayor passed what cannot but be regarded as anti-Home Rule resolutions and forwarded them to Lord Salisbury. Thus when Mr. O'Brien attempted to address them the people of Toronto refused to hear him and he had to confess the attempt to make them listen a failure. In other cities Mr. O'Brien was ignored, his audience being extremely small. So far as public opinion has been called forth by Mr. O'Brien's visit, it has been distinctly against Home Rule. Mr. O'Brien was warned by his own friends or, at least by the friends of Home Rule, and it is to be hoped that he will depart from Canada a wiser as well as a sadder man.—[Montreal Witness.

Will the friends and supporters of the liquor interests never be wise? They are showing themselves more and more to be enemies of social order of peace, quietness and decency. Is this wise? Or can they not help it? In this Canada of ours they restore to violence whenever they have a chance. Now it is dynamite; now it is fire raising; now it is robbing and rioting as lately in Woodstock, which claims to be a decent, peace-loving town. What is to be gained by such brutality and blackguardism? If their cause is all right and as it aught to be, such things can only injure it. If it is not all right, such things will only make it more fully to appear to be what it is—Wrong. In the States the saloonkeepers lately murdered a preacher because he preached again their business, More recently in Ohio a physician has been treated in the same fashion. A mose brutal and cold-blooded murder than this latter could not be thought of. What do these people expect to gain by such deings? as a mere matter of fact they are cutting their own throats and covering their calling with infamy and ruin. By their fruits ye shall know them. This pure, is unadulterated barbarism, and proclaims trumpet-tongued what the liquor traffic really is, and what it leads people to commit. As yet, the Canadian liquor sellers and their abettors have not got the length of murder, but they have shown that their thoughts lie all in that direction and they are ready to try even that if it will keep their craft from danger. Of course they are short-sighted in the extreme in fancying that mere ruffianism can help any cause. But then the traffic in one great factor in the manufacture of ruffians, and every creature must act according to its nature. Everything after its kind. A murder or two would do more to send the liquor traffic to its grave than anything that could be thought of.—[Truth.

Practically the Canadian surrender is complete. There is to be done just exactly what the Government at Washington may dictate. Canada stands, cap in hand, saying, "Please take all you wish and welcome, and if there is anything more you would like don't stand upon ceremony. Just let us know and we will be too happy to oblige you." Is this dignified? Is this self-respecting? Is this the way in which a young nation is to assert its manhood and make ready for setting up on its own account? Some are in a very agony of joy over the very humble position which Britain and the Canadian Government have taken. It is so nice, so gentle, so Christian, really! Certainly those who say so would never have stood in Paul's shoes or used Paul's words. "They have beaten us openly uncondemned, being Romans, and now they thrust us away privily! Nay, verily but let them come and fetch us." If this, in sort, is not baseness, what is? And this is the way according to some foolish talkers, in which we are to stand alone, when we are to say goodbye to old Grandmother Britain and set up for ourselves. If we can only manage this with Britain at our back what could we do when Britain had withdrawn. Suppose Canada were independent, and Macdonald, Tupper, and all the rest of them wielded our destiny at Ottawa without ... ity for referring to Downing ... all. What would follow? ... follow. The various local ... of different districts would ... in full force. The Americans ... do their part in fostering ... The seaboard on both oceans ... encouraged by special treaties ... special favors. If they ... have Canada who could prevent ... Disintegration would go on, ... whole thing would gradually ... up and the dream would be ... To Britain the loss of Canada ... be a mighty one. The coal ... and coaling stations, both ... Atlantic and Pacific, would be ... But all that does not seem to ... her. Apparently she would ... ten Canadas rather than quarrel ... the Yankees, and perhaps she ... It is prudent at any rate, even ... it does not look very dignified ... respecting. But what does ... show about the drift? There ... thousands and tens of thousands ... would rather stay as we are, ... cannot shut their eyes to facts. ... adians apparently have no ... feeling and nobody can grow ... order as one might grow potatoes ... [Truth.

Miscellaneous.

W. K. Flesher, Esq., of Flesherton returned from England last week.

Headache, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Indigestion relieved and cured at once by Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Try it. Sample free.

Thornbury will celebrate the Queen's Jubilee on the 21st June.

BABIES AND CHILDREN.—They are always catching cold in their head. Place a small particle of Nasal Balm in each nostril at night, also rub some over the bridge of the nose, and you know how they are in the morning.

A 40 lb sturgeon was netted in Meaford bay at Meaford last week.

SUDDEN DISAPPEARANCE.—"My face was covered with sores, arising from bad blood. By the use of three bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters I was completely cured." R. E. Sinclair, of Burwell, Ont.

E. Rorke has been appointed clerk of the town of Thornbury at a salary of $90 a year.

AN OPEN LETTER.—I wish I had used B. B. B. sooner, which would have saved me years of suffering with eruptions from which I could get no relief until I tried B. B. B., which soon cleared away the itching, burning rash that had long distressed me. Mrs. Edward Hickey Eastern, Passage, Halafax, N. S.

The law cannot make a man moral, but it can make him dreadfully uncomfortably when he is immoral.

A GOOD TEST.—What everyone says must be true, or have some foundation at least, and everyone who has tried it, says that Hagyards Pectoral Balsam is a prompt and reliable cure for all various throat and lung troubles caused by colds, which are always prevalent at this season of the year.

"Grandpa," said Teddy as the gentleman woke from a sonorous after dinner nap, "if you'd give your pain a spoonful of paregoric, don't you think you could put it to sleep too?"

MANY PERSONS SUFFER.—From indigestion, Breath and suppose it comes from a disordered stomach. In many cases the actual cause is Catarrh. Nasal Balm will remove the cause, and cure.

AT A RECEPTION.—Boston Girl—"Let me see Miss De Peyster. What a splendid carriage she has!" Chicago Girl—"Yes, but her coachman is as homely as a hedge fence."

Don't use any more nauseous purgatives such as Pills Salts &c., when you can get in Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters a medicine that moves the Bowels gently, cleansing all impurities from the system and rendering the Blood pure and cool. Sold by all Druggists.

Dundalk is detrmined to raise the morality of the town: The other day a magistrate fined a man $10 for "drunk and disorderly."

DON'T SPECULATE.—Run no risk in buying medicine, but try the great Kidney and Liver regulator, made by Dr. Chase, author of Chasa's receipt book. Try Chase's Kiver Cure for all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys, Stamach and Bowels.

Women are fearful gossips, we know, but if they were not, their husbands would miss a great deal of entertaining information about their neighbors.

LIABLE TO HAPPEN.—Snddden attacks of colds, sore throat, croup, swollen glands, rheumatism, neuralgia, and similar troubles, are very liable to occur in the winter and early spring. For prompt remedy there can nothing ... Yellow Oil. "I never feel safe ... it," says Mrs. Henry Dobbs, of Barrie, Ont.

Markdale Standard

"HEW TO THE LINE, LET THE CHIPS FALL WHERE THEY MAY."

SEVENTH YEAR.—No. 352. MARKDALE, ONT., JUNE 2, 1887. C. W. RUTLEDGE, Proprietor.

Local and Other Items.

NOTICES in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

NOTICE.—Correspondence, communications, Advertisements, &c., must be in this office by noon on Tuesday to insure publication that week.

—: AT :—

RUSSELL'S

—NOTED JEWELERY STORE,—

FLESHERTON,

will be found the most complete stock of Watches, Clocks, Jewelery, Silverware, Spex, &c., in this part of the country.

Call and see those watches they are selling at $12.00 bearing warrants for three and a half years, while other dealers are asking $15.00 for the same article. P. S. Bartlett, 3 oz. coin silver case for $16.00 while they are selling elsewhere for $17.50. Other dealers cannot compete with us and they know it. We cannot help them being annoyed at our terrible low prices; we must give the public the benefit of our close buying.

☞ Just Note a few prices.

A fine Nickle Alarm Clock for actually only $2.00 bearing a warrant for two years. Your choice of over 20 fine plated chains for only $1.60; Just think of it. Fine walnut clocks from $2.35 upward. Brooches, Ear-Rings, Ladies' Chains, Cuff-Buttons, Scarf-Pins, at equally low prices.

Remember if you want your Watch or Clock repaired properly by a workman, Russell's is the only place.

All orders by mail promptly attended to at

RUSSELL'S Noted Jewelry Store,

FLESHERTON.

NEXT Saturday is Markdale Cattle Fair.

GLENELG Council meets on Monday June 13th.

MRS. R. B. CURRIE is spending a month with friends at Elora.

MISS VIC. LYONS went to Toronto on Wednesday to fill a situation.

THE Indians smoke the pipe of peace —an Irish man, a piece of a pipe.

THE Standard will be sent any address the balance of 1887 for 50 cents cash.

Rev. Dr. Aylsworth and wife of Collingwood, celebrated their golden wedding in May.

MISS MARTHA WRIGHT has accepted a situation in Toronto, entering upon her duties two weeks ago.

DON'T fail to read W. A. Brown's new adv. in this issue. He has a choice display of goods in his line, MRS. HARRISTON of Owen Sound was the guest of Mrs. T. Hall her sister in Markdale this week.

Tenders wanted for veneering Orange Valley School House. Read adv. in another column.

SEE what Russell, the Flesherton Jeweller has to say in his new advertisement in another column.

A scuffle took place down town Saturday evening but it wasn't a patch to W. Jackson's Scufflers: every farmer should have one; and his Turnip Sower is the best in the market. Examine them for yourselves.

REV. R. I. HOSKING and E. E. Hicks left on Tuesday to attend Conference at Galt, also W. A. Brown, of Markdale.

THE funeral sermon of Mr. McBroom who died on Tuesday last in Markdale, as also that of the late Mrs. Atkinson, will be preached by Rev. Mr. Wilson in the Presbyterian Church at 10:30 a. m. next Sabbath.

REV. MR. DEMILL, of the Demill Ladies' College, Oshawa, gave us a brief call this week.

MARKDALE MARKETS.—Fall wheat 80 to 82 cents; spring wheat 80 to 82; barley 30 to 50; peas 48; oats 28; butter 12 to 12; eggs 10; potatoes 75 per bag; pork 5.40; hides 5.50; wool 20.

SOUTH Grey Teachers Convention meets to-day ond to-morrow at Flesherton (Thursday and Friday) hence there will be no school those days.

The Dufferin Post has again changed hands, Mungoven Bros are now proprietors in the place recently filled by S. G. Ketchum.

REV. R. I. HOSKING filled Rev. Mr. Cornish's pulpit very acceptably on Sunday morning last, while Alex. Irwin, student, preached to a large audience in the evening.

REV. T. HALL took his departure on Wednesday morning to resume his pastoral charge in Leigh, Iowa. After spending about five weeks with his family in Markdale, and friends in Dundalk and Bruce Co.

MRS. ELIZA L. ATKINSON, one of the pioneers of this place, died last Saturday after a short illness at the age of 82 years. The remains were interred in the Presbyterian cemetery on Sabbath afternoon.

STOWAWAYS.—A number of stowaways were discovered on the steamer Thanemore on leaving Liverpool recently for Quebec; seventeen more were found off the cost of Ireland and put ashore, and when the ship was well out to sea sixteen additional ones were found, all smart lads from 14 to 16 years of age. They were brought to Quebec; their board fare being biscuit and water.

"Notice" to Farmers. Those that have to buy their "Flour" this summer. Can buy it at Benson's, the Belfast House, the same price as at the mill, and every lb. guaranteed, both Ford's and Plewes' kept on hand. Liberal inducements made on over one barrel lots.

OUR brass band is making decided progress under the leadership of Mr. Mason, and their efforts are deservedly appreciated by the citizens. The amount of patience, application and self denial which is required on the part of the band boys in their weekly practice is scarcely thought of by the public, and when we consider that it is gratuitious at that, we must say they have a strong claim on our support.

A remarkable woman died a few days ago at Villa Rica, Ga., aged 92 years. She was a midwife, and during her life she was at the birth of 519 white children and 347 colored, and she never lost one of these or its mother. She was the mother of 10 children, 100 grandchildren, 50 great grand children, 11 great, great grandchildren. For 80 years she was a constant member of the Methodist Church.

LAST Saturday evening while the band played on the market several roughs who were under the influence of liquor appeared among the crowd pouring forth obscene and profane language so that ladies who were present had to make a hasty retreat. We are requested to say that if such a disgraceful exhibition is repeated the guilty parties will be prosecuted.

SNEAKING VAGABONDISM.—In a certain locality in Glenelg exists one of those human serpents known as the pest of the neighborhood. Cowards are proverbially treacherous; but it has been a wise provision of the Creator, that he has denied them ordinary prudence. The villian detects himself, So with the character in question:—if human or other animal being should come to untimely end by paris green or other form of cowardly assassination or slaughter, the scoundrel has left on record, by his own threats, such testimony as would ensure him "a short swift and a long rope."

THE cheap trip to Winnipeg, mentioned last week, is on the 30th June, not the 1st as stated. This will give those who would like to visit the prarie province an excellent opportunity of doing so at a small cost, $25 being the fare from any station on the C. P. R. good to return in 40 days.

DR. JUG'S Medicine should be used by every one at this season of the year as it is the best blood purifier in the market and will reinvigorate the frame and prepare it to bear the heats of summer. The pills are justly called the "Little Gems" as they operate without causing either griping or pain and are a sure cure for nervousness, biliousness and other affections of the Liver and Kidneys. Buy them and try them and you won't regret your investment. Sold by Turner & Co., Markdale.

BUSINESS LOCALS.

TURNIP SEED! TURNIP SEED! At Stephen's Drug Store.

GET 4 lbs Japan Tea for $1 at J. G. Anderson's.

FISHING Tackle in great variety at the Markdale Book Store, A. Dinsmore.

20,000 lbs., wool wanted at J. G. Anderson's. Highest price paid.

New prices in all goods at the sign of the cross cut.

Mrs. Clement's is the place for candies and sweetmeats.

BARGAINS in every line at J. G. Anderson's. See our 25 cent cottonade.

Fishing Tackle all kinds at the Medical Hall, A. Turner, & Co.

THE nicest stock of Embroideries and Incercions in town at J. G. Anderson,s

Get your plow repairs from Jackson. Old metal taken in exchange.

20 lbs raisins for $1 at J. G. Anderson's.

For building hardware Mabee's is the place; that's if you wish to save money.

THE best 10 cent print in the county you will find at J. G. Anderson's.

Croquet Sets selling very cheap at Mrs. Clement's.

All kinds of house and sign painting done by E. S. Mabee, A call solicited.

All kinds of fruit and ice-cream at Mrs Clement's.

ALL wool tweed good patterns 30c., a yd. at M. Richardson & Co's, Flesherton.

NEW subscribers are being added every week to our list, and still ther's room for more.

LARGE quantity of wool, eggs and butter wanted for which highest price will be paid, S. Hill.

READ every word in J. G. Anderson's adv. in another column. There is something there to interest you.

JUST received a nice lot of dress goods which will be sold for 15c., worth 25c., at S. Hill.

COTTONS AND PRINTS, good width factory cotton 8c., a yard and Print for 4c., a yard at M. Richardson & Co's Palace store, Flesherton.

PLOW POINTS.—All the standard makes and patterns for sale at Moffat's foundry, three for $1.00 cash.

A number of good second hand Buggies for sale cheap. Also a good Sulkey at W. Mason's Carriage Works, Markdale.

A choice assortment of linen window bliuds and American wallpaper borders at Markdale Book Store, A. Dinsmore.

Rejuvenator is a safe and reliable Bitters, in all seasons of the year. Sold by Smith the Barber.

1,000,000 dcz., of eggs and 2 tons of butter wanted ot Davis' for which the highest market price will be paid.

CROCKERY, choice, white TEA SETS 44 pieces only $1.95c. a set, at Mr. Richardson & Co's, china Hall, Flesherton.

BARGAINS IN CASHMERES, a new stock of cashmere, in black and colors 36 to 42 inches wide from 20c., a yard up at M. Richardson & Co's Flesherton.

Go to the Markdale Book Store for Base Balls and Bats, Lacrosse sticks and Balls, Croquet sets per 80c. A. Dinsmore.

Turnip Seeds Fresh pure and true to name at the Medical Hall. A. Turner and Co.

PUBLIC VERDICT."—"That for satisfactory watch work, and reliable watches etc.," the place to go is W. A. Brown's finely stocked Jewellry store, Markdale.

HEAD QUARTERS for Buggie Tops, Milk Waggon Springs, or anything in the Carriage line is at Wm. Mason's carriage works.

A fresh stock of meal's have just been opened at Davis' which will be sold at a very small advance on cost as he will not be undersold.

REMEMBER you can get Bran, Shorts Henfeed the samo price at Bensons, as at the mill, it saves you half an hour trouble, give us a call.

Davis has constantly on hand a full supply of Ford's and Plewes' flour of the finest quality, if it is not right bring it back and your money will be refunded. Special reduction will be given for large lots.

CASH buyers will find meat in Sarjeant Bro's meat market as cheap as in any other market in Canada. Prime Bacon, Hams and other smoked and dried meats, as well as all kinds of fresh meats in season.

R. McNALLY has a number of fine Buggies and Carriages completed, and those who contemplate purchasing such should call and examine before closing a bargain elsewhere.

DON'T fail to call at Wm. Mason's Carriage Works and see the style and quality of the rig's he builds; he is making a specialty of the Buffalo Road gear the most stylish and durable Buggie built, and prices as low as any one in the country.

Rejuvenator Bitters assists nature and removes the cause of disease from the system, by keeping the kidneys, liver, stomach and blood pure, and natures channels free, then you have health. Sold by Smith the Barber.

FRESH Millenery received weekly. Ladies don't fail to see this department. Latest novelties always in stock, Miss Love is noted for stylish millinery, S. Hill.

CARPETS! Carpets. Lace Curtains in white, cream and tobac's. We keep the best stock of Gents Furnishing in town. Straw and Felt Hats in the latest shades and shapes. Prices to suit the times, at the Mammoth House, J. G. Anderson.

I have a few chests of that notorious uncolored japan tea left which I have sold at 30c. per lb and it has been pronounced by those who have used it to be better value than any Tea sold in town for the money—probably you ask why we can sell cheaper than those in trade? the answer is simply because we are satisfied with half the profit. W. L. Davis.

To the farmers and the public generally—Consult your interests and purchase your Buggies, Democrats &c., from W. Mason's Carriage Works where you can get a first class article with a written guarantee, as cheap as you can buy factory make rigs from Agents. Be loyal and support home industry.

As the season is now opened for the sale of Bacon. Benson of the Belfast house is to the fore with a few cases; remember he will not be undersold by any one in the trade and if there is a cut to be given they are the boys that will give it to you, they are dacent little chaps.

Davis is to the front, with a new brand of oat meal, the steel cut, try it once and you will use no other, also a fine brand of Corn Meal just to hand, in fact anything in the Provision line may be procure at Davis' at prices which cannot be beaten, and if the trade mean to cut prices, he aint like a fellow that can't stay with them.

Prosperity!

The recent genial showers followed by fine weather makes everyone feel hopeful--and why not? yet it would be foolish to get extravagant and wreckless in business. It will be wisdom rather to step with care and practice economy by purchasing your store goods at

J. G. ANDERSON'S,

Mammoth Dry Goods Store, Markdale. You can get better value, either for cash or trade here then at any House in the County.

☞ Note a few prices.

A Dress Goods for 10 cents worth 15c.

A finer goods for 15 cents worth 22c. other lines equally low. Cashmeres from 25 cents up. Prints and printed Muslins all prices from 6 cents up.

If you want Cottonade at the right price, go to

J. G. ANDERSON'S

25 cent line. Shirtings all prices from 8½ cents up, extra value.

You should see our 10 and 12½ cent prints, they beat everything.

Don't forget to ask for our 7 cent printed Muslins, good width and fast colors.

We have a full range of dress goods at bottom prices, white and cream oriental flouncing and other goods to match.

TWEEDS & SHIRTINGS

extraordinary value.

Ready-made Clothing at prices that cannot be touched. See our $10 suits, good value for $15.

BOOTS & SHOES

at astonishing low prices. Our Ladies' button boot for $1.25, regular price $1.75. Slippers and low lace boots equally low.

Our Men's boots for 90 cents never before sold for less than $1.25. Low Shoes at 75 cents, regular price $1.20.

No trouble to show goods. Call and be convinced.

J. G. ANDERSON,

MARKDALE.

PARTED;

OR,

A MOTHER'S SIN.

BY NORA LAUGHER.

It was a lovely, summer morning. The beautiful trees around the northern outskirts of the "Queen City" were clad in their lovely robes of emerald and the joyful carol of thousands of feathered songsters filled the air.

The happy song of birds resounding through the trees that morning was accompanied by the loud, ringing tones of a manly baritone voice trolling forth, "Oh! to be in Canada—In Canada now."

"How good it seems to be home. After all I think I'll settle down here. A quiet life is best; but as for taking the mater's advice and turning Benedict, I certainly shall not. I am a confirmed old bachelor and likely to remain so."

"In Canada now!" and the loud, cheery tones again echoed through the trees, startling the shy, tawny squirrels.

Guy Monteith was in a happy mood that morning. He had returned to Toronto, the home of his ancestors, the previous day, after years of wandering in foreign lands. Wealthy, courted, this last lineal descendant of the house of Monteith had reason to be joyous.

Ten years ago Rupert Monteith, of the firm of Monteith and Buchannan, the wealthiest stockbrokers in Canada, died leaving "Monteith Place" and all his vast property, situated in and near Toronto, to his only child, Guy, then just of age, and in England studying hard at Cains College, Cambridge.

Leaving College, Guy Monteith joined a fellow-student, Sir Arthur Paget in a lengthy tour of the continent of Europe, thereby acquiring a taste for Bohemian life. He then made a voyage to India, and for the last four years had resided with Lord Paget—Sir Arthur's father—in Calcutta.

During these years "Monteith Place" had seen nothing of its young master.

Mrs. Monteith, a haughty, young-looking American lady of scarcely fifty years, loved nothing in the world better than her only child, and fretted continually at his long absence. Now on his return to Canada her greatest hope was that he might wed the girl she had already chosen for him, Pauline Buchannan, the only child of her husband's late partner, whose marriage dowry would be not less than $750,000 and who, with her chaperone, was then staying for a few weeks at the "Rossin House."

"In Canada now," resounded again through the maple trees, this time startling a slight, girlish figure, clad in white muslin dress, which was gracefully gathered up by a pair of small, dimpled hands to hold a quantity of starry water lillies; but with a startled blush of fright the girl let them fall to the ground.

As Guy Monteith raised his cap he thought the face before him the sweetest he had ever gazed upon. A fair, oval face it was, now tinged with a bright blush like the petals of a rose, and surrounded with a tangle of short, flossy, golden curls and brightened by a pair of bewitching hazel eyes, shaded by long, dark lashes, which drooped low at the earnest gaze of a stranger, as she bowed slightly in answer to his salute and hastily began to gather up her flowers.

Mr. Monteith stooped to help her and then again raising his hat he held out his hand "Gladys—Miss Morville, I mean—pray, forgive me, I did not recognise at first my little friend and playmate. Do you not remember Guy, the noisy school-boy whom your good father undertook to tame and prepare for the college in Europe, and who so ill-requited his trouble? Will you not welcome me home, Gladys?"

Then Miss Morville recognised in the handsome, bronzed, bearded face before her the gay young student, who had been the life and terror of her quiet home; but who had always taken such tender care of the little, motherless Gladys.

They sat down on a fallen tree, for he had much to relate, and found a willing and attentive listener.

The distant chime of a clock told that luncheon was already served at "Monteith Place" and Guy asked permission to accompany Gladys to her home on Bloor street and take luncheon with her father.

That evening as he gave his arm to conduct Miss Buchannan to the Monteith dining room, his mother's eyes dwelt admiringly upon them. "What a handsome pair they will make," she thought, "and there will not be a more wealthy couple in all Canada."

But, alas! Guy was mentally comparing the pale, dark beauty at his side with the winning, dimpling face of golden-haired Gladys, and the comparison was not flattering to Pauline Buchannan.

Alas! for Mrs. Monteith's match-making, her son was irretrievably, hopelessly in love with the penniless daughter of the Toronto schoolmaster.

One evening when Mrs. Morville's old-fashioned garden was laden with the sweet breath of the roses, Guy Monteith asked Gladys to be his wife. The schoolmaster had earnestly begged him to cease his visits, fearing Mrs. Monteith's displeasure at them; but the master of "Monteith Place" was not thus to be reasoned with, and that very evening acquainted his mother of his engagement to Miss Morville.

The anger of Mrs. Monteith was very great, and she firmly refused to call upon Gladys, determining by fair means or foul to put an end to such a foolish entanglement.

"To think that you, Guy, my only child, can be so blind. Pauline Buchannan loves you devotedly, and it is the wish of my heart, as it was of your dear father's, to see you both united, yet you must demean yourself by marrying a common-looking, paltry, soi disant governess. I have no patience, I—"

"Hold. Though you are my mother, I will not brook such words. Miss Morville is a lady in the highest sense of the word and as my affianced wife shall be recognised as such. I do not wish to turn you from the home you love. So long as you live you shall remain here if you wish. I have bought an estate in England—Brackenbury Court in Northamptonshire—a far larger place than this. Gladys and I will live there until you can give her a mother's welcome home to Canada." And Guy walked off through the spacious Montieth grounds in no tender mood towards the haughty woman, his mother.

The following day he received a telegram summoning him hastily to Montreal to the death-bed of a distant relation.

Hastily pencilling a few lines to Gladys, he left the note on the library with strong injunctions to his manservant to see it delivered to Miss Morville that evening.

Mrs. Monteith, entering the room, saw the note lying on the table. "How very much Guy's hand resembles mine," she thought "Ah! I know a way to break off this very foolish engagement and in after years he will thank me for it."

Breaking open the seal Mrs. Monteith, with a scornful curl of the lip, read the tenderly worded epistle that apologised for his few days' absence, substituting instead a few cold lines begging Miss Morville to release him from his engagement to her.

When the schoolmaster entered his sitting-room that evening he was horrified to find poor Gladys lying upon the floor insensible. The cruelly forged letter lay in her hand. Placing her upon a couch he bathed her forehead with some iced water and then the poor child, weeping bitterly, threw her arms around her father's neck and begged him to take her away from Toronto until she could forget the face of the false one who had won her heart only to trample upon it as a broken toy.

That evening Gladys penned a few brief lines to Guy Monteith, telling him their engagement had been a mistake which she much regretted and hoped they might never meet again.

The first train from the Union Station the following morning bore her and her father—who had concluded to leave his school in the charge of his assistant—away on their road to Winnipeg.

Mrs. Monteith hastened to forward Miss Morville's note to her son, supposing rightly that it was—in answer to the cruel one she had forged—to release him from his engagement to her.

Directly Guy received the letter, his kinsman being dead—he returned to Toronto. He did not in the least suspect his mother's treachery. Great indeed was his surprise to hear of Gladys' and her father's departure to Manitoba. He was naturally of a very jealous disposition and Mrs. Monteith, being aware of this, alluded strongly to an imaginary lover of Gladys and tried by all her powers of persuasion to bring about a match between him and Miss Buchannan.

But Guy's life in Toronto, believing Gladys to be faithless, grew unbearable and he determined to again join Lord Paget in India until his wound had healed. Accordingly he bade his servant at once prepare for the journey.

Mrs. Monteith was terribly grieved at this, finding that she could not induce her son to marry Pauline Buchannan and with the painful knowledge of the wrong she had committed—but alas! not daring to confess it—she wept bitterly and offered to write to Miss Morville and welcome her as a daughter if he would only stay.

But Guy would not hear of this, for he believed Gladys to be untrue, and with a heavy heart he journeyed to New York and from there set sail for India, via England.

Gladys Morville, to her father's intense grief, fell ill at her aunt's house at Winnipeg with a violent attack of brain fever in which the burden of her wailing was "Guy—Guy." When able to be removed she was brought home to Toronto; but a perfect wreck of her former self, the lovely rounded cheeks wasted and sunken, the merry, hazel eyes now dim and joyless.

Guy Monteith could not enjoy his Bohemian life with Lord Paget as formerly and after nearly eighteen months' absence, roaming aimlessly about from place to place, he returned to Canada to satisfy himself if Gladys had married her old lover.

The church bells were chiming, for it was Christmas Eve.

His heart was lighter than it had been for months, as almost playfully shaking the heavy snowflakes from his thick seal-skin coat, he entered the gate of the schoolmaster's old-fashioned garden on Bloor street.

As he turned the corner of the little summer arbor—where but little more than eighteen months ago he had asked Glady's to be his wife—now covered with pure, white snow and thickly fringed with icicles, he met the schoolmaster. Regardless of the freezing wind, his gray head was bare and bent down upon his hands as though in great trouble, but an angry, fierce light came into his keen, gray eyes as, with a start of affright he recognized Guy Monteith. He did not take the young man's proffered hand as he enquired eagerly for Glady's and if she were married.

Sweetly and faintly over the snow came the sound of the Christmas bells, but they sounded like a knell to the heart of Grey Monteith as he breathlessly listened for the reply.

"No, Guy Monteith," said the old schoolmaster, with a piercing, heart-rending look in his eyes, "I will take you to her and there you shall have your answer."

Leading the way across the snow into the house and beckoning him upstairs he paused at the door of a white draped chamber and reverently, almost pityingly, bade him enter.

"Here, Guy Monteith, is your answer."

"Oh! my God—dead—my little Gladys, my golden-haired love—dead—dead—" and Guy Monteith, with a wild, heart-broken cry, fell forward on the open coffin senseless.

Mr. Morville sprang towards him, but it was too late, the young master of "Monteith Place" was no more.

* * * * * * * *

A sorrowful-looking, white-haired lady repentingly kneels daily in one of the most secluded of the Toronto churches praying earnestly for forgiveness. She would gladly give her life if it were possible to recall the two broken hearts, caused, alas! by her sin.

People in the North-west

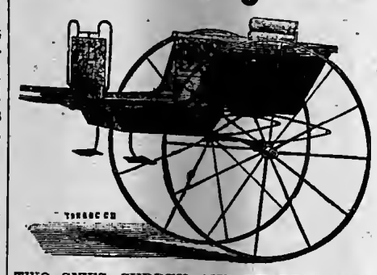
Know from experience that Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor is the only remedy to be relied upon for the extraction of corns. This is the case everywhere throughout the Dominion. Be sure to get Putnam's sure-pop corn cure. At dealers everywhere.

As to Schools.

In Russia there are 32,000 schools having each an average of thirty-six scholars. This is one school to 2,300 inhabitants, at a cost of less than a cent a head of the population. In Austria, with 37,000,000 of inhabitants, there are 29,000 schools and 3,000,000 scholars. The average number at each school is 104, and the cost per inhabitant nineteen cents. In Italy for 28,000,000 there are 47,000 schools. One school for every 600 people, at a cost of seventeen cents a head. The average number of pupils at the schools is forty. In Spain there are 3,000,000 scholars 29,000 schools giving an average of fifty-six in each school, and one school for every 600 inhabitants, as in Italy. The number of schools given for England is 58,000, which is one for every 600 inhabitants, with an average attendance of fifty-two per school, and a cost of thirty-six cents. The Germans have a school for every 700, giving a total of 60,000 schools, with 100 pupils in each and thirty eight cents per inhabitant. France has 71,000 schools, being one for for every 500, with sixty-six in each school. France would, therefore, seem to have more schools than any other great European country. These schools cost the country twenty-nine cents per inhabitant.

200 ACRES FOR SALE—HALTON—½ MILE from Zimmerman Station; 17 miles from Hamilton; 100 is timbered, pine, oak, hardwood; good buildings. W. PROUD, Boyne P.O., Ont.

BEAVER LINE OF STEAMSHIPS,
Sailing weekly between Montreal and Liverpool.
RATES OF PASSAGE:—Saloon, Montreal to Liverpool, $40, $50, and $60; Return Tickets, $80, $90, and $100—according to steamer and accommodation. Intermediate and Steerage at lowest rates. For further particulars and to secure Berths, apply to H. E. MURRAY, General Manager, 1 Custom House Square, Montreal, or to the Local Agents in the different Towns and Cities.



SPOONER'S COPPERINE 'Babbitt'—Non-fibrous Anti-friction Box-metal for journal bearings in machinery—Guaranteed copper mixed. Supplies every requirement. Ask your hardware dealer for it. ALONZO. W. SPOONER, Patentee and Manufacturer, Port Hope.

Awnings! Decorated Window Shades, &c. Wholesale and Retail, at the CELEBRATED GOLD MEDAL TENT MANUFACTORY, 70 King St. West, Toronto. NATIONAL MANUFACTURING CO

H. Williams, FELT AND SLATE Roofer,
Manufacturer and dealer in
Tarred Felt, Roofing Pitch, Building Papers, Carpet and Deafening Felt, READY ROOFING, Etc. 4 Adelaide St. E., TORONTO.

Wall Paper
MANUFACTURERS.
M. STAUNTON & CO.,
Samples on application. TORONTO ONT.

The Perry Cart

TWO SIZES, SURREY AND PHAETON BODIES.
The shafts are attached to body by the Perry Compensating Springs. The result of the action of these Springs is no horse-motion in the cart, and no cart-motion on the horse.
Descriptive illustration on application. For sale by all carriage makers.
CANADA CARRIAGE PARTS CO.,
TORONTO.
Sole Manufacturers for Canada.
The Trade only supplied.

J. L. JONES
WOOD ENGRAVER
10 KING S EAST
TORONTO.

CONSUMPTION.
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer. Give express and P. O. address.
DR. T. A. SLOCUM,
Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto

ONTARIO CANOE COMPANY.
Peterboro', Ont.

MANUFACTURERS OF ALL KINDS OF CANOES
Send 3c. Stamp for Catalogue.

Bicycles!
SEND AT ONCE FOR LIST of Second-Hand Machines,
From $15 Upwards.
New Catalogue Ready 1st April
A. T. LANE MONTREAL

THE WHITE
THRESHING ENGINE
OF LONDON ONT
A FULL SUPPLY FOR 1887

AGENTS WANTED
APPLY TO THE D. W. BEADLE NURSERY CO. St. Catharines, Ont.

Water PURE LIVING STREAM.
AUGERS, bore 20 feet per hour. Also Rock Drills—Hand, Horse, or Steam Power. Send for Catalogue.
Laidlaw Manufacturing Co.,
HAMILTON, ONT.

PILES!
Blind, Bleeding, and Itching, effectually cured by the Medical File Remedy. Thousands of sufferers can testify to the permanent relief from these internal and external remedies. $1.00 per package Ask your druggist for it, or will be sent by Mail, postage paid. HUGH MILLER & CO., 137 King St. East, Toronto.

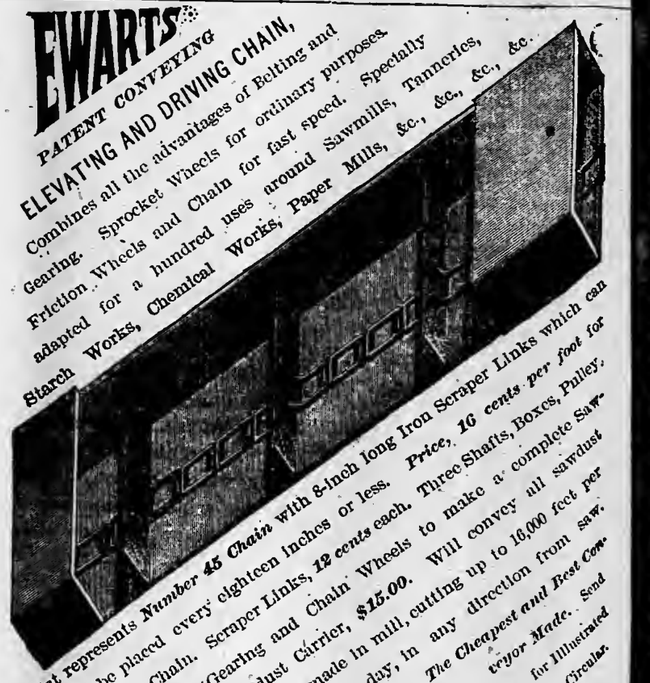
THE TORONTO SILVER PLATE CO.
Manufacturers of the highest grade of
SILVER PLATED WARES.
Steel Knives, Spoons, Forks, Etc.,
A SPECIALTY.
ALL GOODS GUARANTEED.
TORONTO CANADA.

The National ELECTRO & STEREOTYPE Co.
23 ADELAIDE ST. E., TORONTO.
All classes of fine work. Mfrs. of Printers' Leads, Slugs and Metal Furniture. Send for prices.

BABY'S BIRTHDAY.



A Beautiful Imported Birthday Card sent to any baby whose mother will send us the names of two or more other babies, and their parents' addresses Also a handsome Diamond Dye Sample Card to the mother and much valuable information.
Wells, Richardson & Co., Montreal.

L. D. SAWYER & CO., Hamilton,
MANUFACTURERS OF
"L. D. S." ENGINES,
WOOD, COAL AND STRAW BURNERS,
PLAIN AND TRACTION,
"Grain Saver" and "Peerless"
SEPARATORS.
"Pitts" Horse Powers, for 2, 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12 Horses.
Tread Powers, for 1, 2 and 3
Eclipse Separators, for Tread & Small Powers.
Send for Illustrated Catalogue

EWARTS PATENT CONVEYING ELEVATING AND DRIVING CHAIN,
Combines all the advantages of Belting and Gearing. Sprocket Wheels for ordinary purposes. Friction Wheels and Chain for fast speed. Specially adapted for a hundred uses around Sawmills, Tanneries, Starch Works, Chemical Works, Paper Mills, &c., &c., &c., &c.

Cut represents Number 45 Chain with 8-inch long Iron Scraper Links which can be placed every eighteen inches or less. Price, 16 cents per foot for Chain, Scraper Links, 12 cents each. Three Shafts, Boxes, Pulley, Gearing and Chain Wheels to make a complete Sawdust Carrier, $15.00. Will convey all sawdust made in mill, cutting up to 10,000 feet per day, in any direction from saw. The Cheapest and Best Conveyor Made. Send for Illustrated Circular.
THE WATEROUS ENGINE WORKS CO., BRANTFORD, CANADA,
Sole Manufacturers and Proprietors of Canadian Patent.

The Original Wood Coo
THE MOST PERFECT WORKING STOVE YET INTRODUC

Elegant in Design and Finish, Massive in Appearance, A Charm for the Kitchen.
Heaviest Castings.
MADE IN 10 DIFFERENT STYLES AND SIZES. FOR SALE BY ALL THE LEADING H
MANUFACTURED BY
THE E. & C. GURNEY CO., (L'D), TORONT
Dealers who have not yet seen this STOVE should secure the sale of it at once.

Farmers and Threshers
USE ON YOUR MACHINERY ONLY THE WELL-KNOWN
CAPITOL CYLINDER | PEERLESS MACHINE | GOLD MEDAL CYLINDER | STANDARD ENGINE
PeerlessO
NINE GOLD MEDALS Have been awarded it during the last four years. Try also PEER AXLE GREASE, for your Wagons and Horse Powers Manufactured at QUEEN CITY OIL WORKS, by
SAMUEL ROGERS & CO. TORONTO

SNOW DRIFT
THERE IS NO BETTER! BAKING PO
The Snow Drift Baking Powder Co.,
Dairy S
FOR BUTTER, ETC.
NEW Importations—Higgins' Eureka, Ashton and Ashton Brands, in large or small packages. Also Rice's Canadian Salt. Write for prices.
JAMES PARK & SON,
Wholesale Produce Merchants,
MERIDEN BRITANNIA
MANUFACTURE ONLY
FINEST
Silver Plated W
Artistic Designs, combined with Unequalled Durability and
HAMILTON, ONT.

JUNE 19, 1885.—For two years my wife's health was run down. She was greatly emaciated and too weak to do anything for herself; she was attended by five doctors, they all gave it as their opinion that she could not live. She commenced using Dr. Jug's Medicine in December, 1884, and after taking a few bottles she was so much improved that she could look after her household affairs.
J. M. RODDICK, Engineer, C. P. R., West Toronto.

I CURE FITS
When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you. Address DR. H. G. ROOT,
Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toron

DR KIN ing Fow or ry Sa
BUTTER, ETC.
ns —Higgins' Eagle,
Brands, in large or Salt. Write for price
PARK & SON,
e Produce Merchants,
BRITANNIA
FACTURE ONLY NEST Plated War
gns, combined urability and LTON, ONT.
19, 1885.—For two ealth was run down.
emaciated and too weak for herself; she was doctors, they all pass that she could not live.
ced using Dr. Jug's er, 1884, and after he was so much d look after her household eer, C. P. R., West Toronto.
E FITS
ot mean merely to stop them n return again. I mean a ease of FITS, EPILEPSY or g study. I warrant my Because others have failed is ving a cure. Send at once e of my infallible remedy.
It costs you nothing for a dres- DR. H. G. ROOT,
Yonge St., Toronto.
, Hamilton,
&c.
Links which can cents per foot for atts, Boxes, Pulley, a complete Sawanvey all sawdust to 10,000 feet per rection from saw.
apest and Best Con-veyor Made. Send for Illustrated Circular.
FORD, CANADA,
an Patent.
Cool
T INTRODUCED
The Best Ice-Box, the Heaviest Castings,
ALL THE LEADING DEA ), TORONT
nle of it at once.
reshers
WELL-KNOWN lessO ars. Try also GONE and Horse Powe
TORONTO.

CURED BY SHOCK.

Effect of Fright Upon Nervous Diseases.

"You may see a person with gout," says Abernethy in his lectures, "who is almost unable to move with pain; but produce a shock on his nervous system by telling him that the house is on fire and he will scamper off like a lamplighter." Smollett tells us one of his novels of a Captain Lismahago, who went into a house and cried out to an old man who had the gout, "Mad dog! mad dog!" when he jumped up and ran out of the house, and even into a pond of water opposite." In such examples it is immaterial whether the terror arise from a real or imaginary cause, the remarkable though familiar fact is that a strong, mental image or impression infuses new power into the nervous and muscular system. The very fear which in a healthy person may produce excessive muscular contraction—convulsion—will serve to nerve a limb of the cripple podagric just sufficiently to enable him to escape from danger. If it were this all, we could not adduce this occurrence as an illustration of the cure of the gout; an obstacle to locomotion being temporarily overcome but the disease remaining. In the second case, however, advanced in the following illustrations an actual cure would appear to have been effected. "A captain of a British ship of war," says Dr. Rush, "who had been confined for several weeks to his cabin by a severe fit of the gout in his feet, was suddenly cured by hearing the cry of 'Fire' on board his ship. The fact was communicated to me by a gentleman who was a witness of it. Many similar cases are upon record in books of medicine. I shall in another place insert an account of a case in which the cure effected by a fright eradicated the disease from the system so completely as ever afterwards to prevent its return." Here is the case communicated by Judge Rush, the doctor's brother: "Peter Collier, the person cured, is now alive, a watchmaker in Reading, seventy-three years of age, a native of Germany, and a very honest man. The first fit of gout he ever had was about the year 1773, and from that till 1785 he had a regular attack in the spring of every year. His feet, hands and knees were much swollen and inflamed; each fit lasted long and were excruciating. In particular the last fit in 1785 was so severe as to induce an apprehension that it would inevitably carry him off, when he was suddenly relieved by the following accident: As he lay in a small back room adjoining the yard, it happened that one of the sons in turning a wagon and horses, drove the tongue of the wagon with such force against the window, near which the old man lay stretched on a bed, as to beat in the sash of the window and to scatter the pieces of broken glass all about him. To such a degree was he alarmed by the noise and violence that he had instantly leaped out of bed as if that he had ever used crutches, and hastily inquired what was the matter. His wife, hearing the uproar, ran into the room, and to her astonishment she found her husband on his feet bawling against the author of the mischief with the most passionate vehemence.

The Dog's Example.

Johnny was a very careless little boy. He was always losing his playthings and books, tearing his clothes, forgetting errands and making himself and every one else a great deal of trouble. He had a habit of doing things he ought not to do and of going where he ought not to go. He never meant to be naughty; but he didn't take time to think and sometimes his poor mamma almost lost patience with him.

"O Johnnie, Johnnie," she would say, "just look at your feet, all covered with mud! See how you have spoiled my nice clean floor."

Johnny looked very sorry; "O mamma, I didn't mean to, but I didn't think," he said softly.

Mamma shook her head. "That is what you always say. Johnnie, and yet almost every day my floor is tracked with your muddy feet. I'm almost afraid to take you with me to visit Aunt Jane."

"O mamma, do let me go. I will be very careful indeed, indeed, I will," Johnnie promised very earnestly,

"Well," I will try you this time," said mamma, but remember, Johnnie, that if you do not cure yourself of this bad habit Aunt Jane will not be likely to invite you again."

Johnnie promised once more to be careful and he really meant to keep his word; but on the very first day of his visit he forgot them and Aunt Jane's pretty carpet was almost ruined by his shoes which were covered with mud.

"Oh, I am always forgetting!" exclaimed Johnnie in despair.

"You will have to take lessons from my dog," replied his aunt. "Major is not handsome, but I am afraid he must be a better and better behaved than you are in some things. When he first came to live with me he used to come to the house with his muddy paws, but every time he did, so I took a pail of water out on the steps and washed them before allowing him to come in. He has learned to be careful and never gives me trouble now. I often see him go out of his way to cross the street on the crosswalk instead of going through the mud."

Major pricked up his ears and wagged his tail at this praise, but Johnnie hung his head for very shame. At last he stooped down and patted the dog very softly on the head.

"Well, old Major, you needn't think I'm going to be beaten by you," he said; and from that day mamma was never troubled with his dirty shoes.

What Good the Mosquito Does.

A writer claims to have found out the use-ful point of the mosquito. He says: "I found out the real mission of the pest by putting a lot of the wigglers into a hogshead of water and filling another hogshead, into which no wigglers were put. The second lot of water soon became foul, while the first remained sweet, showing that our streams would more often become sources of fever were they not infested with mosquitoes."

"I notice," said a cleryman's wife to her husband, "that it is no longer fashionable for the minister to kiss the bride at the wedding ceremony." "Yes," sadly responded the good man, "many of the pleasant features connected with the wedding ceremony have been discarded, and—" "What's that?" demanded his wife, ominously. "I mean," he stammered, "that the pleasant custom of kissing the bride should have been abolished long ago."

Hope's Whisper.

BY ED. S. CASWELL.

I stood alone on the ocean shore—
The sun had set in the west—
And the moan of the restless waters seemed
To echo the thoughts in my breast—

Those brooding thoughts that, half like despair,
On my soul their shadow cast,
Tenaciously clinging, like moulderingvine,
To the wall of a wasted past.

A past, with its troubling brood of cares
Of sorrow, and shame, and sin,
That echoed the downward tread on the stairs
Of a hopeless "might have been."

Dark gathered the gloom on the face of the sea:
The deeper and darker it seemed
For the golden light of the sinking sun
That late on the waters gleamed.

How like to my life, that light and that shade!
I mused, as memory turned
Her flashing eye on the bygone years
And into their secrets burned.

The hopes and the prospects of brighter youth,
Like the sun with its golden light,
Had faded from view, succeeded full soon
By the shades of a darkening night.

Thus moodily musing, I paced the sands,
And gazed on the waters drear,
Whose ceaseless murmurings rose and fell
Like a dirge on my listening ear.

When, lo! in a moment's rift in the clouds,
And the moon, beaming brightly through,
With its silvery light bathed the face of the night,
Till the shadows receded from view.

And my heart within me was strangely stirred
As I gazed on the glorious scene,
Hope whispered, "Look up to the 'yet to be'—
Not back on the 'might have been.'

"Tho' the sun is obscured in his daily course,
Yet he hath not ceased to shine;
For the moon but reflecteth his beaming rays
In her softened light benign."

So I learned a lesson I shall not forget
As I stood on the shore that night—
Use well thy present, but banish the past,
And the future must needs be bright.

Our Western Valley Home.

BY ARCHIE MACK.

Far, far o'er the dark sullen water is breaking
The gleam of a brighter and happier day,
The storm-clouds are lifting, and sunshine is smiling,
And bathing in brightness our beautiful Bay,
The gray, leaden sky, that so long has o'er-shaded,
And cast a deep gloom o'er our valley so fair,
Is drifting afar, or with blue being rifted,
And softly the breeze stirs the sweet, balmy air.

The white crest of each wave, as shoreward advancing,
Has caught a bright gleam from the king of the sky,
And sparkling with beauty comes nearer and nearer,
To break on the sands, and there, murmuring, die.
All up the fair valley, that smiles like a garden,
With clumps of wild crab-trees sun-kissed into bloom,
The soft morning air, burdened sweet with the fragrance,
Comes whispering of joy and dispelling the gloom.

Afar in the distance, like sentinels guarding
Our dear valley homes from misfortune and woe,
Rise the bold mountain crests, that heavenward towering
Are draped aye and ever in mantles of snow.
At our feet swiftly glides the smooth-flowing river,
That winds down the valley, its goal the wide sea,
And hedging our homes the dim forest lies sleeping,
And nodding, unconsciously, tree unto tree.

The green, waving grass, like the swell of the ocean,
In rhythmical time seems to fall and to rise.
As the light summer breeze carressingly lingers,
Then carries the scent of its bloom to the skies.
Oh, sweet, prairie valley, like dream of a poet,
Swathed and girdled to day with beauty and bloom,
Long, long shalt thou live in my memory, a vision
Of sunshine, that gilded each dark cloud of gloom.

To Chloris.

They are withered now, these flowers,
But they once were dewy green,
Tended by the misty showers
Soft they blushed for long unseen,
Till upon a summer morning,
You, discovering where they grew,
Plucked them and yourself adorning,
Seemed a fair young flower too.

Now they tell me a sad story;
Withered, they until the last
Shall possess a mystic glory
Whispering memories of the past.
How we strolled alone together,
Where the trees extrude to view,
And I faltering asked you whether—
Whether, dear, you would be true.

O'er your lily face the blushes
Hurried as the dawning light
First the dark horizon flushes,
Then invades the gloom of night.
But you answered not, your tresses,
Golden glimering, veiled your face,
As the vine the oak caresses
With inimitable grace.

And these very flowers flushing
Nestled there upon your bosom
As you bent your head all blushing,
Till your white chin touched the blossoms.
Then you tore them off, a token
Of the words you could not say,
And they still preserve unbroken
All the story of that day.

Sunrise!

BY JOHN IMRIE, TORONTO.

Nature rejoices in a thousand ways
When first the morning sunlight westward streams;
To it the birds pour forth their joyous lays
And, singing, wake us from morn's fitful dreams:
Sunward the tender flowers expand and look
With smiling eyes toward thy welcome rays,
While, river, mountain, plain, and purling brook
Sing tunefully in chorus to thy praise!
Oh, blessed sunlight!—emblem of that Light
Which lighteth our dark souls with heavenly love;
May we expand and grow with all our might
As doth the flowers that smile and look above!
Oh, Father! let the light from Jesus' face
Illume our hearts and there His image trace!

Harmony v. Law.

At a trial in the Court of King's Bench between two publishing houses as to an alleged piracy of an arrangement of "The Old English Gentleman," T. Cooke was subpœnaed as a witness. On cross-examination by Sir James Scarlett, the counsel rather flippantly said, "Now, sir, you say that the two melodies are the same, but different. What do you mean, sir?" Tom promptly answered, "I said the notes in the two copies were alike, but with a different accent."

Sir James:—"What is a musical accent?"

Cooke:—"My terms are a guinea a lesson sir" (A loud laugh.)

Sir James (rather ruffled):—"Don't mind your terms here; I ask you what is a musical accent? Can you see it?"

Cooke:—"No."

Sir James:—Can you feel it?"

Cooke:—"A musician can." (Great laughter.)

"Now pray, sir, don't beat about the bush; but tell his lordship and the jury, who are supposed to know nothing about it, the meaning of what you call an accent."

Cooke:—"Accent in music is a stress laid on a particular note, as you would lay stress on a given word, for the purpose of being better understood. If I were to say, You are an ass, it rests on ass; but were I to say, You are an ass, it rests on you, Sir James."

Reiterated shouts of laughter by the whole court, in which the Bench joined, followed this repartee. Silence being obtained, Lord Denman, the judge, with much seeming gravity, accosted the chop-fallen counsel, "Are you satisfied, Sir James?"

Sir James (deep red as he naturally was) had become Scarlett in more than name, and in a great huff, said, "The witness may go down."

Kitchen Physic.

A golden rule is—"A maximum of nutrition with a minimum of digestive force," a typical article by way of illustration being an egg. Albumen, present in both the yolk and white, is rendered practically indigestible when subjected to a severe heat; hence, a fried egg would be no more value to a sick person than an old kid glove. We instance a fried egg because fat is hotter than water, and so the egg is hardened to a greater extent. Here is a digestible way of cooking an egg: Break it into a small cup, slightly buttered, and set this in a saucepan with enough boiling water to come half-way up the cup. Put the lid on, and at once remove the saucepan from the fire to the hob or fender, so that the water is reduced to a lower temperature. In six minutes, more or less, according to the size of the egg, it will be cooked—just set, that is. Slide it on to a piece of toast, or boiled rice if agreeable to the patient. The egg may be cooked in the shell in the same way. The process is then known as "steaming;" five or six minutes is the average time required.

Raw eggs are frequently ordered, as when they can be taken and retained by a sick person they are extremely nourishing, simply, because the albumen not having been hardened is soon digested. Many, however, can not take raw eggs as usually given; that is, beaten up with milk or wine. The following mode is a good one; the appearance of the dish being nice, an invalid will often be induced to try it; it is free from oiliness, and clean to the palate. Put the yoke of an egg into a basin with a teaspoonful of white sugar and a tablespoonful of orange or lemon juice, and beat lightly together with a fork. Put the white on a plate, and add a pinch of salt, then, with a bread-knife, beat it to a stiff froth. Now as lightly as possible, mix all together in a basin; then, as lightly transfer it to a clean tumbler which it will nearly fill if properly made. This must not stand in a warm place, or it soon becomes liquid, and loses its snowy look.

Any fruit-juice can be used in place of orange or lemon, or even brandy, if the doctor has ordered it. Those unaccustomed to beating whites of eggs will find that a pinch of salt is a help, and also a current of air, near the fire or in the open.

Gruel needs care, and it requires long cooking; fine oatmeal should be boiled an hour at least, though twenty minutes is the most some people give. When it is made with water (in cases where milk disagrees) lemon juice, as a flavorer, is perferable to nutmeg, spices being often irritating to the stomach.

Cereals, as a rule, require long cooking for the starch grains to have time to swell. Some kinds, however, in use nowadays, are "steam-cooked" before packing; this kind will not need so long. Arrowroot is often simply mixed with boiling milk or water, then served; but if returned to the fire and simmered for two minutes it is much better. Years gone by this food was regarded as very nutritious; now we know that, as its main element is starch, the nourishment is but little. But it has this to recommend it; it usually agrees, and is readily digested: it is also often very soothing in an irritable condition of the internal organs.

STATISTICS.

The entire total of the Hebrew race on the surface of the globe is estimated at about 6,300,000.

Australasia, as a British possession, includes Australia, New Zealand, Tasmania, a portion of New Guinea, and several small islands between the Indian and Pacific oceans. The area of the entire space is estimated at 3,169,389 square miles, and the population at not less than 3,223,000.

Last year 77 per cent. of the total traffic of the Suez Canal was British— precisely the same proportion as in 1885. The nearest approach to our own marine, with its 2,500 ships of 4,000,000 tons burden, was the French, with 170 ships of less than 500,000 tons. Holland comes next with 120 ships of 220,000 tons, followed by Germany with 153 ships but only 209,000 tons.

The mean production of wine during the last five years in France has been 698,790,875 gallons; in Italy it has been 564,805,620; in Spain 495,000,000; in Austria-Hungary, 425,000,000; in Portugal, 90,000,000; in the German Empire, 83,025,000; in Russia, 78,750,000; in Turkey in Europe, 58,500,000; in Greece, 29,250,000; in Switzerland, 29,250,000; in Roumania, 15,750,000; in Servia, 12,500,000.

Out of a total population of 5,750,000 in Belgium, there are nearly 1,200,000, or 21 per cent., engaged in agricultural pursuits, while fully one third of the people are supposed to be more or less directly interested in the cultivation of the soil. Wages for farm-labourers, without food, vary from 1s. 3d. to 2s. 3d. a day for men, and from 10d. to 1s. 4d. for women. When food is given, men usually receive 1s. and women 7d. The total area of land under cultivation is about 6,681,000 acres.

In 1841, when the population of Scotland was 2,620,000, the total deposits in all the Scotch savings-banks amounted only to about £600,000. Now the sum of £9,000,000 is entered in the names of about 400,000 persons. Only about a ninth of it is invested in the Post-Office Savings-Bank. Both the Scotch and the Irish working-classes prefer the local trustee-banks to those instituted by and managed for the State. While in England those who patronise the latter are in the proportion of 1 in 9, the numbers in Scotland and Ireland are as 1 in 32 and 1 in 40.

The stocks of gold and silver at the principal banks of the world have become immensely large. The Bank of England has locked up some £20,000,000, in coin and bullion, the Bank of France £90,000,000, the Bank of Germany £32,000,000. The amount of gold and silver in circulation in the world was estimated by Mr. Burchard, of the United States Mint, in 1883 at £1,200,000,000, and the amount of fiduciary paper at £800,000,000. There were, however, instruments in circulation—such as cheques, telegraph transfers, &c.—of far greater value than any bank-notes or other paper money, and by the operation of those instruments all calculations as to the money in circulation become insufficient and unsatisfactory as an index of social requirements.

NEW THINGS IN JEWELRY.

Amber hatpins with fancy knot or twist heads are exceedingly popular.

In a display of insect pins a large fly with diamond wings, sapphire body and crocidolite tail was observed.

A very odd necklace of recent design consists of a chain of tiny crabs in oxidized silver, united by wire links.

The Bermuda lily, in delicate enamel and set with a diamond, makes a very handsome pin and pendant combined.

A four-leaf clover in green enamel with diamond centre and long stem of chased green gold, is a novelty in pins.

Silver match-boxes take the following odd forms: A thumb in bright finish, a clam-shell in oxidized finish.

As scarf pins, the small, round or oval ivory paintings of Louis XV., and often surrounded with diamonds, will please a fastidious taste.

Double chains are popular for gentlemen with the watch at one end and a pencil at the other, while from the bar depends a seal or antique coin.

Silver belts, plain or engraved in etched flower and leaf patterns, and belt buckles with gold and silver applied are fashionable and tasty.

Medusa-head scarf pins, in which the faces are carved out of red sand and the snaky locks are represented in gold or oxidized silver are fit companions for the popular sphinx heads.

The last stage of folly is indicated by the appearance) among Darwinians presumably) of the monkey necklace—a string of these ugly creatures fastened together by their tails and claws. The jeweled spider necklace though rarely seen, deserves the same comment.

A handsome moonstone pin and pendant combined consists of a centrepiece of moonstone, with a cherub face carved thereon in low relief and the edges scalloped to resemble a shell. A frame of closely set small diamonds surrounding the whole makes a rich setting for the little picture.

Some very elaborate coral sets have recently been imported from Naples. Exquisitely chiseled rose sprays and amphoræ pendants are the most noticeable features of these sets. A Cupid reclining on a bed of roses forms the bracelet ornament, and the centrepiece of the necklace of the finest set.

The designs of imported watches are copied largely from timepieces worn by court celebrities. The present demand tends towards small watches in bulging cases, with open faces. Enamel and chasing are used considerably. Some of the most popular watch chains for ladies are similar to one which is a favorite with Queen Victoria. They are short with a swivel at one end for the watch while at the other is a small decorated pin, from which depends a short chain terminating in a bell or seal.

One of the most characteristic insect pins of all is a beetle composed mainly of split carbuncle representing the parted wings, while small diamonds in silver settings cover the head and the exposed part of the body. To complete the resemblance horns are frequently added, tipped with diamonds. Buckle and cloak-clasps in antique oxidized finished are considerably worn now, and pretty etched garters floral in and coin designs are seen in great variety. Two new finishes which have recently appeared in these goods deserve notice. The first, in all but colors, is a clever imitaion of alligator skin. The second, which resembles an orange-peel in its pitted surface, consists of a sprinkling of fine bright flakes on a rough and dark oxidized ground.

Sly.

An Arctic voyager gives an amusing description of the Esquimau dogs which accompanied his party. One of them was named Dublin, another Snarley, and two others, Port and Starboard, respectively,—one curling his tail to the right, the other to the left. We extract an account of one of Starboard's characteristic performances, which illustrates once more the familiar truth that dogs have a good deal of human nature about them.

One day the whole ship's company were witness to the means he employed to steal the bone which Joe had given to one of the other dogs. This dog was rather small and somewhat timid, unless Dublin—her natural protector—was there to take her part; but Starboard knew that if he tried to take the bone by force, Joe would interfere in an unpleasant manner with a whip.

So he went to her with a smiling face and a wagging tail, and, leaning against her, began to push her aside in the most friendly way possible. She, not quite understanding this manœuvre, let go the bone, and began snapping and growling in a very threatening manner.

This was what Starboard had expected, apparently, for he instantly lay down on the treasure, and looked about in an unconscious and abstracted manner, as though nothing were farther from his thoughts than the bone.

The other dog sniffed around a little, evidently not understanding the trick, and then walked away, growling in high dudgeon.

Starboard then discovered, to his great astonishment, that he was lying on a bone, and proceeded to pick it with a hypocritical assumption of unconsciousness that must have been extremely offensive to Snarley, who had been an interested spectator of the proceeding, and who expressed his contempt for such tricks by a growl.

Cold words freeze people, hot words scorch them, bitter words make them bitter, wrathful words, make them wrathful. Kind words produce their own image on men's souls; and a beautiful image it is.

The distinctive flavour of honey is altogether regulated by the flora of the bees' feeding-ground; and so much so that what is a delicacy in Scotland cannot be eaten in some other countries without great danger.

Every state of life has its own hardships—the private and peaceful existence of advanced civilisation as well as the life of the soldier or pioneer. They differ in kind, the former having far greater variety and complexity, and the later more certainty and definiteness; but both may be equally expected and prepared for. Indeed the peaceful citizen needs more, not less, of such preparation than does the warrior or the explorer, because he knows not from what quarter or in what form his hardships may come. He needs to gird himself with strength and courage to meet adversity under any of its numerous shapes.

HOUSEHOLD.

"Our Boys."

Why is it that some boys, at a very early age, begin to feel responsibilities, and look forward to taking a man's position, while others seem to think that they are not responsible and society has no claim on them until they become of legal age?

Once raise a boy's ambition, set his mind at work to find out how he may benefit his family and himself; once get him in the train of thought that by his own exertions he may fill the position that some influential man fills in the community where he lives, and the work has gone far toward completion in making him a man. As an illustration of how early in life a boy's mind will turn to the hard practical ways and means of helping to support a family, we instance the experience of a prominent and well-know business man.

His home was in a small village, where his father had succeeded to a well-established business; but love of pleasure, a natural carelessness, and the habit of using intoxicating drink had brought the family down from comparative affluence to abject poverty. The poor, high spirited mother had struggled with all her might to keep the wolf from the door of the little family of three children and a drunken husband. But at last every thing was gone, and they were turned out of their home. They took the refuge offered them by a kind neighbor in an old house that had been used for storage of old articles.

This man, then a boy about ten years old, was his mother's solace and confidant. They talked together, devising how they could succeed in getting food and clothing. The mother was already doing such sewing and washing as she could get from neighbors. The boy went to learn the tailor's trade. He got up in the morning at daylight, sawed and split the wood, built the fire, helped his mother get the scanty breakfast, and then went cheerily and quickly away to his employer's house to take care of the horse, milk the cow and bring in the wood, after which he went to the store, swept it out, built the fire, cleaned up and arranged everything ready for the business of the day. Everything that his activ mind could think of to do to please his employer was done promptly and cheerfully, and it had the effect of making the latter a firm friend of his, who befriended the family and took pains to teach the boy the tailoring trade. From basting the trimmings to plain work on the clothes, and to fine work on the coats, to cutting them out, all came in due time and regular order to this ardent worker, and in six years this boy was called a good workman, earning wages which enabled him to provide quite decently for his mother and sisters.

Onward and upward this boy progressed, from a workman to be a partner. His perseverance, intelligence and energy were such that he steadily enlarged the business, increased the profits, so that, from an exclusively retail house it became a manufacturing establishment, selling ready-made clothing to merchants in the surrounding country. "Our boy" was the head and front of the business in making purchases, and through this means he became the active partner of a large wholesale cloth house in a large city shortly afterward.

The acceptance of the latter resulted in transfering him to a sphere that gave his business talents and energy full scope, and the result of all this has been that he is now, at middle age, head of a large and prosperous manufacturing and wholesale firm, who are marked AA AA, in character, credit and cash. His mother lives with him in a fine mansion (his father having died some years since from dissipation), and his sisters are married to prosperous business men.

Healthful Cooking.

CELERY ON TOAST.—Celery that is not crisp and fresh may be prepared like this: After washing the celery and removing the green leaves, cut in pieces about the same as you do asparagus, then put into boiling water. When it is tender, drain it, lay it on slices of buttered toast, dipped in the water in which the celery is cooked. Add a little butter or thick cream and serve hot.

BRAISED LAMB.—Wash thoroughly a leg of lamb. Put into a pot with very little water, just enough to keep from scorching. It must be watched continuously and when the water boils almost away a little more may be added. The secret of success is to cook the lamb in the least possible quantity of water, letting it brown on the pot but not burn. Serve with the water or gravy in which the meat is cooked.

BAKED MACARONI.—Cook the macaroni broken into small pieces for fifteen or twenty minutes, then put a layer in a baking dish, sprinkle with grated cheese and bread crumbs, add a little thick cream or butter, then another layer of macaroni and more cheese, and so on to the top. Pour over the whole, half a cup of milk, and bake covered. This is considered a very hearty dish and a good substitute for meat.

GRAHAM BISCUITS.—Stir sufficient graham meal into lukewarm water to make a dough stiff enough to mix with a spoon. Knead vigorously on a board for a few minutes, cut into biscuits, and bake quickly in a floured pan. Some persons prefer to sift their flour having it entirely free from bran. Another way to make graham biscuits is to stir into cold graham pudding, graham flour until stiff enough to mold. Roll, cut into biscuits, prick with a fork and bake in a hot oven.

ORANGE PUDDING.—Cut up three large oranges and grate with them a little of the outside peel. Sprinkle well with sugar and let them stand until they have become saturated. Take a pint of rich milk, and the yolks of three eggs, and three quarters of a cup of sugar. Heat it and when very hot add one and one-half tablespoonfuls of corn starch, mixed with a little water. Let it cool, pour over the oranges, add the beaten whites of the eggs on the top, and serve cold.

A checkered career—The life of a chess player.

Sydney Smith once said that there were two modes of judging of anything—one by the test of what has actually been done in the same way before, the other by what we can conceive may be done in that way. Most of the errors in judgment concerning the work of the world come from using only one of these tests without the other.

Markdale Standard.

C. W. Rutledge, Proprietor.

MARKDALE, JUNE. 2, 1887.

IMPORTANCE OF THE PRESS.

The management of the Toronto Industrial Exhibition are always open for improvements. and have in the past shown rare tact and judgement in conducting the business in connection with that show, which is now the greatest annual attraction in the Dominion.

A meeting of representatives of the Toronto daily papers was held in the rooms of the Dominion and Industrial Exhibition last week to consider the question of the erection of a building for the accommodation of the press on the Exhibition grounds. The Exhibition Committee considered such a building a desirable thing and invited those most interested to suggest what would be required. A building, some 30 x 75 feet, to include seperated, rooms for the Toronto dailies a large room with desks for visiting journalists a restaurant, lavatory and other essentals was recommended, and the Exhibition architect will be instructed to design a building which will meet these requirements. Mr. H. J, Hill, the manager and Secretary, also announced that the Exhibition Committee purposed giving a dinner to the press on September 13.

COMMERCIAL UNION.

This question of Commercial Union or Reciprocity, between Canada and the United States is one which will affect in a greater or less extent every citizen of our Dominion, and we are not surprised to see it occupy a prominent place in all our daily and other leading papers. Farmers' Institutes are holding meetings in various parts of the provinces discuss the pros and cons of the question and very properly to. North Grey Farmers' Institute will hold a meeting in Owen Sound tomorrow, June 3rd and Centre Grey at Rocklyn on Friday the 10th.

It is a matter not only of National importance but one which will affect every individual and it is hoped there will be a large attendance at above meetings.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—Sir Alexander Campbell entered upon his duties as Lieut.-Governor of Ontario on the first June.

—The first regular passenger train was run from London to Woodstock on the new line last Monday.

—The stables of the street car Co. in New York were burned last week together with twelve hundred horses, also a number of tenement houses, —The Dominion Senate adopted an address on Monday, congratulating the Queen upon attaining to the fiftieth year of her reign.

—It is estimated that the recent forest fires in the Northern Peninsula of the State of Michigan have caused total loss of Seven million dollars. Eight lives are known to be lost.

—Twenty-seven miles of the Northern Pacific Railway extension from Grand Forks to the Canadian boundary have already been graded, and Pembina will be reached by next November.

—The fifty-eight annual session of the Orange Grand Lodge, embracing within its jurisdiction the Dominion, Newfoundland and the Bermudas, with a total of 1,226 lodges and a membership of about 150,000, met on Tuesday in Belleville.

—The work of digging the foundation of the new Canadian Pacific railway station in Montreal was commenced on Saturday, and tenders for the building will be called for immediately. The bridge at Lachine is expected to be completed by Dominion Day.

—The government was sustained by a majority of 49 on the Manitoba dissalowance vote last week.

—Edward Hanlan was beaten by Jake Gaudaur, formerly of Canada but now of St. Louis, at Chicago last Monday. The race was a hard one and the contest exciting, and was for $5,000 a side and for the championship of America.

—The Bricklayers of Toronto threaten to go on strike in order to secure an advance of half a cent per hour in their wages, or five cents per day of ten hours. If the strike lasts a week, and they then secure their terms, they will have to work over a year and a quarter before they will have made up for the time lost in striking. The Knights of Labor deprecate strikes, and declare they should only be a last resort to secure a greater benefit.

—Lord Landsdowne's reception on his return to Ottawa was a most brilliant and successful affair, far eclipsing the expectations of those who made the arrangements. Over ten thousand people were assembled in Cartier square, where the formal reception ceremonies took place. His Excellency also received an enthsiastic greeting at Perth on his way to the Capital, being met at the station by a gathering of five thousand people and presented with an address of welcome.

BE ON YOUR GUARD

Don't allow a cold in the head to slowly and surely run into Catarrh, when you can be cured for 25c. by using Dr, Chase's Catarrh Cure. A few applications cure insipient catarrh; 1 to 2 boxes cures ordinary catarrh 1 to 5 boxes is guaranteed to cure chronic catarrh. Try it. Only 25c. and sure cure Sold by all druggists. 333-83

Holland Council.

Holland Centre May 26th 1887.

Holland Council met on the above date as a Court of Revision.

Reeve in the chair; members all present.

APPEALS.

John Lyons	Too high on	Real	Estate		Red.	$ 100
Stewart Doyle	"	"	"	"	Roll	Sust.
Stephen Edmunds	"	"	"	"	Red	$ 100
Geo, McCauly	"	"	"	"	Roll	Sust.
Kenneth McDermaid	"	"	"	"	Red.	$ 200
John Hewett	"	"	"	"	Roll	Sust.
M. Pryle	"	"	"	"	"	"
Robert Walter	"	"	"	"	Red.	$ 100
Geo. McInnis	"	"	"	"	"	100
Abel Wright	"	"	"	"	"	100
Robert Bradley	"	"	"	"	"	50
William Bradley	"	"	"	"	"	100
Wm. Love	"	"	"	"	"	adjourned
James Quinn	"	"	"	"	"	Red. $ 100

T. Anderson promisory notes am't not assesable.

B. Young, to have wife's names placed on Roll, changed.

John Middleton	Too high on	Real	Pro.		Red.	$100
James Kirk	"	"	"	"	Roll	Sust.
John McNally	"	"	"	"	Red.	$100
John McCauley	"	"	"	"	"	100
Andrew Freeborn	"	"	"	"	"	100
John Critchkamp	"	"	"	"	Roll	Sust.
Louis Eydt	"	"	"	"	Red	$50
Albert Privat	"	"	"	"	Roll	Sust.
David Jackson	"	"	"	"	Red,	$100
James Foster	"	"	"	"	"	75
Thos. Gill	"	"	"	"	"	200
Geo. King	"	"	"	"	"	75
Fred Evers	"	"	Pers'nl	"	"	150
John Molson	"	"	Real	"	"	150
John Ritchie	"	"	"	"	"	100
William Steele	"	"	"	"	"	100
Thos. Young	"	"	"	"	"	150

Howey—Murray—That the Court adjourn till the 2nd day of June 87.

BUSINERS MEETING.

After Court of Revision council went into general business, Reeve in the chair, members being all present. Minutes of former meeting read and approved.

Shute—Galbraith--That the assessor get an order for $50.—carried.

Galbraith—Shute—That By-law No. 5 for the purpose of enabling Trustees of U. S. S. No. 1 Holland and Sullivan to borrow the amount of four thousand eight hundred dollars, be read 1, 2, 3 times and engrossed on the minutes.

Shute—Galbraith—The bill of J. D. McNab be paid.—Carried.

A bill was presented by the Reeve from Dr. McCullough, Owen Sound regarding medical attendance to Samuel Watson, bill not entertained.

Bill of R. McKnight for registering laid over.

George Delane makes application for culvert on town line.

Council adjourned till the 2nd day of June.

Carson Price,
Clerk.

SOUTHERN ASTHMA CURE

Double Treatment in each Package

Instant Relief for Asthma and Bronchitis

By Mail on Receipt of Price

Samples, 25c.; Regular Size, $1.00

Address Fulford & Co., Brockville, Ont.

W. J. McFarland's

—: HOT :—

WEATHER PRICES.

LOOK DOWN this column and see the array of desirable goods to be offered this month at prices which we think were never before quoted for such good goods.

Don't skip an item, you may find something of great importance to you in this unprecedented list of Honest Bargains.

Read all! It will pay you.

Hat's!

75 Women's Sun Hats 15 cents, worth 50 cents.

48 Men's Hats 20 cents, usual price 50 cents.

150 Boy's 15, 20, 25, 35, and 45 cents.

756 yds. Cashmere 45 inches wide, only 30 cents.

One Case Fine Tweed's all wool suitable for best wear 50 cents. Good value.

112 prs. Men's Lace and Sewed Shoes $1.00.

Lace Curtains!

10 prs. 75 cents.
10 prs. $1.00.
15 prs. $1.50.
10 prs. Colored Muslins newest out $3.00.

Dress Goods!

We have the trade of the County. De Berges 22, 25, 28, up.

75 Peices High Novelties in Greys, Browns, Blues, Grenotes, Black Wool Checks and Cashmerettes, commencing at 10 cents up to the finest. Imported Buttons and Trimmings to match.

100 Men's, Youth's and Boy's Suits, part of a manufacturers stock, will be sold very cheap.

Muslins 6 cents fast colors, stylish, goods. Fine White Lawn 12½, 15, 17, 20 cents.

2762 1 yds. Embroideries without exageration the largest assortment and lowest prices to be found anywhere. All our Embroideries 36 inches wide. Allover Laces 36 inches wide. All our Orientals in Cream, White and Fawn.

110 Parisols, great job; commencing at 50 cents. See them.

25 Doz. Women's Hose in Black, Navy Blue Ground and Fawn 15 cents a pair or two pairs for 25 cents.

Cretonnes Imported Direct and pronounced by the ladies Just Lovely.

37 Pieces washing every day Ginghams only 10 cents.

Mourning Goods in great variety.

Gent's Ties, Shirts, Collors, Socks, and under clothing at correct prices.

25 Doz. large cotton Towel's only 9 cents each. 20 doz. e till larger 15 cents.

100 Honey Cans 2 gallons 20 cents.

14 Pieces New Silks in Black and Colored Imported Direct from LONDON ENGLAND.

Our Millinery Rooms crowded with Novelties and our five young ladies kept on the jump serving customers. Trimming Hats, Bonnets, and Mantle Making. Prices right, styles correct.

A cordial invitation is extended to all to visit our grand display of New Goods.

W. J. McFARLAND,
Direct Importer.
MARKDALE.

MARKDALE CARRIAGE WORKS.

R. McNALLY:—Would hereby announce to the public of Markdale and the public generally that I have moved into my new carriage shop opposite the Markdale House, where I will manufacture every article in the wagon and carriage line, and having long experience in the business and by using first class material, I can guarantee satisfaction to every one who will favor me with their order.

Repairing, Painting and Trimming promptly attended to.

I also make a first class Stone Machine which will lift the stone, and put it to any desired place and leave in position on the fence.

A call respectfully solicited,

R. McNALLY, Proprietor.

MARKDALE SAsH and DOOR FACTORY

Having erected and fitted up in every detail a Sash, Door and Plain Factory, containing all the latest and most approved machinery, everything being new, I am now prepared to turn out

Sash, Doors, Blinds, Mouldings, Hollow Battons

FRAMES, LATH, FENCE PICKETS, &c.,

And everything needed in the building trade, in a manner second to none in Canada, and having engaged superior mechanics in every department, would now respectfully solicit public patronage.

Every Effort Made to fill Orders Promptly

PINE LUMBER Dressed and Undressed

Direct from North Shore, all sizes, on hand. Plain and Fancy Turning done.

Careful Attention to Orders from a Distance.

303 THOS. McNEA.

IMPORTANT!

TO all users of Machine Oils, don't forget to call on E. S. MABEE, Sign of the Cross-Cut Saw, Markdale, and ask for the CASTOR EOIL, it is unequalled by any.

The Arora Water White Oil is equal to American for brillance of light.

Empire Oil Co.,
Refiners & Manufacturer's,
London and Toronto

349-75

WARNING.

ALL persons are hereby warned against fishing on "Sargents Lake," on lot 63 and 64 first west of T. & S. Road, Holland. Any person found trespassing or fishing on said lake or premisses will be prosecuted according to law.

WM. SARGENT

Berkeley May 1887. 352-5

TENDERS WANTED.

Sealed tenders will be received by the undersigned up till noon on Friday June 17th for the veneering with brick, School House No. 2 Artemesia, the contractor to find all the materials. Plans and specifications can be seen at the house of Wm. Burnett. The committee don't bind themselves to accept the lowest or any tender.

Building Committee { JOSEPH BEATY, WM. FLESHER, WM. BURNETT.

NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that any person or persons found trespassing or fishing on the farms of the undersigned will be prosecuted according to law without further notice.

Signed:—

John B. Thibaudeau,	Thos. Brady
Edward Brady,	James Brady,
William Brady,	Wm. McCutcheon
John Shears,	Geo. Richardson,
Wm. McNally,	George McNally,
James Elliott,	James Stinson,
Adam Hislop,	Robt Graham.
John Webber.

WE WANT!

100 GOOD MEN at once, to sell for the Fonthill Nurseries (largest in Canada over 465 acres) steady employment and no lost time, liberal commission or salary, best advantages; splended outfit furnished free; any pushing man can succeed. Apply for terms to,

STONE & WELLINGTON,
Toronto, Ont.

DEATHS.

Atkinson.—In Markdale on the 28th May, Mrs. Eliza L. Atkinson aged 69 years.

McIntosh.—In Markdale on the 31st May, Mrs. Wm. McIntosh, aged 90 years.

CLIPPINGS.

Bears Killed.—A couple of very large bears were last week killed in Sullivan, near Williamsford, (Sauble). One was killed with an axe after rather an exciting tussle, in which a dog was all broken up, and the other bear was shot. Each of the animals weighed over 400 lbs.—[Grey Review.

Burned to Death.—The friends of Mr. Geo. Peterbough, formerly of Glenelg, but lately of Dakota, have just received word of the sad death, of the gentleman named, by being burned in a recent prairie fire. Deceased was the father of Mr. S. Peterbough, of Bentinck, and much respected by all who knew him.—[Grey Review.

The Standard Printing Co. obtained an Act of Incorporation from the Dominion parliament, the other day and will shortly go into operation. It is understood that Mr. L. P. Kribbs, and Mr. D. Creighton, of Owen Sound, will be the managing editors. The need of a leading Conservative paper to replace the Mail, is greatly felt by Conservatives throughout the country. They continue taking the Mail from habit, but will gladly pitch it out when a good substitute is provided. Latterly the World is working its way into favor, and is really the best of the Toronto dailies. If enlarged to the size of the others, it might fill the bill better than a new venture. Kribbs is one of the best sketch writers in Canada, but his balance wheel is hardly heavy enough to edit a leading daily. And Mr. Creighton's own paper, is not brilliant. The Toronto World and the Hamilton Spectator, are the best edited dailies in the Province, and the Bruce Herald is the best weekly.—[Walkerton Herald.

Description.—Pleasing, soothing, healing relieving, curing, is the description of Nasal Balm. which is receiving a national reputation as a cure for Catarrh, Cold in the Head, Hay Fever, etc.

Flesherton.

TROUBLESOME WOMAN CAREFULLY HOUSED—BAND SERENADE—AMONG THE CHURCHES.

From our own correspondent

Rosy Leopard (mother of the unfortunate wife of Cook Teets deceased who met with her untimely death by drowning near Eugenia some three years ago) made considerable noise and caused a little excitement here on Thursday last. Mrs Leopard has been deranged in her mind for some time, and making many ugly threats as to what she would do, found her way to here on Thursday last, entering the Flesherton Hotel she became rather boisterous, when she was suddenly, and rather roughly, ejected from the House, by the proprietor. After in the day she was taken in charge by A. S. VanDusen, Esq., and as she was very unruly he was compelled to present her with a pair of steel bracelets and took her by even train to Owen Sound.

Mr. Will Campbell who has been in the employ of M. Richardson as operator, left on Saturday last to take situation in an office in Port Arthur.

The Flesherton Brass Band serenaded at the dwellings of Messrs. Bentham Beard and Cole, on Saturday evening last and were right royally entertained by all. The new circle Bass is quite an acquisition to the Band.

The Rev. Thos. Watson preached in the Presbyterian church on Friday afternoon last Sacramental Service was held in the same place on Sabbath morning conducted by the pastor, Rev. A. Wilson.

Rev. Mr. Demill of Demill College Ottawa, preached in the Methodist church on Sunday morning last and Mr. H. D. Irwin in the evening.

Dr. Armstrong left here on Tuesday last for St. Paul U. S. where, we understand he intends entering upon the practice of his profession for a time.

The South Grey Teachers asscciation will meet in this village Thursday and Friday this week and an interesting time is expected.

A free lecture by Mr. Tilley and musical entertainment will be given in the Methodist church on the evening of Thursday.

LOCAL NEWS.

May is now past and a more favorable month could not be desired for the country.

Headache, Biliousness, Dyspepsia and Indigestion relieved and cured at once by Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Try a Sample free.

Don't miss the change of advertisement of Wm. Brown in this paper. New goods and low prices are the order at his store.

Asthma cured by the double treatment of Southern Asthma Cure, is a common remark.

HEMLOCK lumber for sale, 12. 14, and 16 ft., long. scantling same length also 2 inch tamarac plank, apply to, G. S. Bowes.

Don't use any more nauseous purgatives such as Pills Salts &c., when you can get in Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters a medicine that moves the Bowels gently, cleansing all impurities from the system and rendering the Blood pure and cool. Sold by all Druggists. tf

In the first draft of stations in Guelph Conference Rev. Mr. Cornish is down for Drayton and Rev. Geo Buggin of Drayton for Markdale.

RELIABLE TESTIMONY.—Mr. John R. Wright, representing Messrs. Evans, Sons & Mason, wholesale druggists, Montreal, says—Nasal Balm cured me of a long standing case of Catarrh after many other remedies failed.

Don't quarrel, keep cool, be good to everybody, laugh and grow fat, and you will get through the summer better than to go to the seaside.

ENJOY LIFE.

What a truely beautiful world we live in Nature gives us grandeur of Mountains, glen and oceans, and thousands o means of enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health: but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up disheartened, discouraging and worn out with diseases, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof that Green's August Flower will make them free from disease, as when born, Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint are the direct causes of seventy five per cent, of such maladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the head, Palpitation of the Heart and other distressing symptoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottles, 10 cents. Try it.

By request of V. Fuller, Esq., President Farmers' Central Institute, a meeting of Centre Grey Farmers' Institute will be held at Rocklyn on Friday the 10th June at 1 o'clock to consider the question of Reciprocity and other business. A large attendance is desirable, Thos. Kells, President; A. Turner, Sec.

TAMARAC.—Tamarac Elixir is a preparation containing great curative properties for Coughs, Colds, Influenza and Throat and lung Complaints.

A Markdale family were much frightened the other night by a horse which got into the house while they were asleep. A kind of night-mare, as it were.

A FREE GIFT.—Around each bottle of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure is a Medicine Guide and Receipe Book containing useful information, over 200 Recipes, and pronounced by doctors and druggists as worth ten times the cost of the medicine. Medicine and book $1. Sold by all druggists.

OUR City Fathers were out yesterday "doing the town" and we may now expect public works to commence in building and repairing sidewalks, extending sewers and drains, improving water works, repairing and renovating the public buildings &c., &c. There are a number of idle men in the town who will be glad to get a job, providing the wages are good and employment light.

B. B. B. STOOD THE TEST.—"I tried every known remedy I could think of for rheumatism, without giving me any relief, until I tried Burdock Blood Bitters which remedy I can highly recommend to all afflicted as I was." Henry Smith Milverton, Ont.

THE AMERICANE AGRICUTURIST AS A "DAILY."—During the continuance of the great Dairy and Cattle show, held in New York City in the second week in May, the American Agaiculturist Monthly, issued a daily paper on the grounds every morning at ten o'clock, of eighteen pages, describing the scenes and incidents from day to day, and presenting illustrations of the various cattle and farm implements as premiums were awarded them, Every number contained from thirty to forty engrayings of crttle etc., etc. It was rather of a novelty for the yetern American Agriculturist, now not far from its fiftieth birthday.

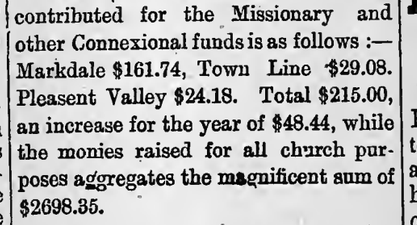
TRY IT.—"What shall I do for this distressing Cough?" Try Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam; it is soothing and healing to the throat and lungs, and loosens the tough mucous that renders breathing difficult or painful.

THE Annual Report of Markdale Methodist Church shows an encouraging increase in the membership and connexional funds. During the year there have been received by letter 25 and on trial 61 making a total of 86, so that after making up for the loss of 40 by removals, deaths &c., there remains a net increase of 46. The present membership is, Markdale 173, increase 29; Town Line Church 55, increase 12; Pleasent Valley Church 37, increase 5. Total 265. The amount contributed for the Missionary and other Connexional funds is as follows:—Markdale $161.74, Town Line $29.08. Pleasent Valley $24.18. Total $215.00, an increase for the year of $48.44, while the monies raised for all church purposes aggregates the magnificent sum of $2698.35.

DOMESTIC ECONOMY,—As a matter of economy it will pay every household to keep a bottle of Yellow Oil on hand for accidents and emergencies, in case of a handy relief, and for wounds, burns, bruises and injuries. Rheumatism, neuralgia, quinsy and many painful diseases treated internally and externally by it often saves large medicine bills.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a similar vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh Asthma and all throat and Lung Affictions also a positive and radical cure for nervous Dability and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases. has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this receipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Send by mail by addressing with stamp naming this paper W. A. NOYES 149 Power's Block Rochester, N. Y.
334-86 E. O. W.



Drs. Sproule & Brodie,

—PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS,—

MARKDALE.

DR. SPROULE'S office Turner's Drug Store

DR. BRODIE'S office Mathew's block.

Fine Watches

Clock's and Silverware,

Dealing

The People Appreciate it.

It illustrates my method of doing business. It means "SQUARE" dealing.

This is what I Practice and Guarantee.

The public will find my stock New, Quality best, Prices close, in American Watches—Clock's etc.

I do practical Watch repairing and Speck fitting.

Goods and work warranted, by the Peoples' Jeweller.

W. A. BROWN,
MARKDALE.

HEAD QUARTERS

—FOR—

Books, Stationery, Fancy Goods, Toys, Wall Paper, &c.

Toronto St. next Door to the Mansion House Markdale.

A. Dinsmore returns his sincere thanks for the very liberal support accorded him since commencing as above, and hopes by strict attention to business and moderate prices to merit a continuance of public appreciation and patronage. Those requiring would consult their own interest by examining his stock, consisting of over Three Thousand pieces at from 5 to 75c. per Roll. Sunday Schools requiring Liberary Books will find Hundreds to select from and at such FAVORABLE TERMS as are sure to satisfy.

WALL PAPERS

☞ Note the fact.—That until I commenced business there was no such thing as a special discount allowed to Sunday Schools, or if you wanted Books could not get them unless by sending to Toronto or elsewhere, now your wants can be supplied at your Door and at lower prices than Toronto. I therefore with confidence appeal for public support. A full line of School Books, Stationery, &c., always on hand, also agent for the DOMESTIC PAPER PATTERNS. Agent also for The Harden Star Hand Grenade for Extinguishing Fires. ☞ NOTE THE ADDRESS,

A. Dinsmore.

New Tailor.

Will Stoddart, late of England and Jersy City, U. S. begs to inform the citizens of MARKDALE and surrounding community, that he has opened a TAILORING SHOP over Mr. W. J. McFarland's Store, where he is prepared to do all work entrusted to him in the Latest and Nobbiest Styles; as I will inspect all work before leaving the Shop, customers may rely on having work turned out first-class in every particular; trusting that I may receive a fair share of the public patronage

I remain,
Faithfully your's,
WILL STODDART.
Markdale, March 14th, 1887.

New General Provision Store

THE undersigned would hereby respectfully intimate to the inhabitants of Markdale and surrounding country that I've opened up a general Provision store where I intend to keep on hand a general supply of all kinds of provisions such as:—

FLOUR, OATMEAL, CORNMEAL INDIAN CORN, GRASS SEED, OATS, BRAN, SHORTS, CHOPP, SCREENINGS. also a quantity of SEED GRAIN, HAMS, BACON, LARD, &c., in fact everything people want in this line.

Shop one door west of Joe Lamb's Blacksmith shop.

Soliciting a share of public patronage I am respectfully yours,

Jas. Miller
MARKDALE.

COME!

To Stephen's

FOR

Your Carrots, Mangels, and Turnip Seeds, we have the best variety in the market. REMEMBER Our Seeds are

FRESH

Oil Cake! Oil Cake!
—OIL—CAKE!
—AT—
STEPHENS
DRUG STORE.

Your's Respectfully,

R. L. Stephen.

R. S. Rae,  Tailor.

REMOVED.

IN returning thanks to my numerous customers for liberal patronage during the past 14 years in which I have done business in Markdale, and soliciting a continuance of the same, I would also intimate that I have removed to my premises on Mill Street, next door to Stephen's Drug Store, and opposite to the Post Office, where I shall be happy to meet all my customers.

Respectfully Yours,
R. S. RAE,
Markdale

TORONTO HOUSE.

I am offering this week Ready-Made Clothing, and

BOOTS & SHOES

—AT—

astonishingly low prices. Persons requiring a summer outfit would do well to see my stock.

Wm. Brown.

BE SURE & GET YOUR PUMPS,

—FROM—

J. T. QUINN,
MARKDALE,

He makes as good a pump as there is in the market, and at the lowest possible prices, besides it is so convenient for getting repairs besides when buying from a distance.

Have some style about you and support home enterprise by buying from Quinn.

OWEN SOUND
MARBLE WORKS

H. B. HARRISON,
MANUFACTURER OF
MARBLE AND GRANITE
MONUMENTS & HEADSTONES,
Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.

JUST RECEIVED
3 Carloads Finest Variegated Marble

☞ Largest stock in the Dominion to select from. Personally selected at the quarries in Vermont. Will be sold at prices which defy competition.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

N. B.—Beware of Monuments and Headstones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered to gether, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide the imperfections, and called White Bronze.
H. B. HARRISON

ROBT. ASKIN,
UNDERTAKER,
MARKDALE,
FUNERAL FURNISHINGS
supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse
for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—
FURNITURE
In Stock at bottom prices.
PICTURE FRAMING
Done on short notice.
ROBT. ASKIN.

WM. BREADNER.
Carpender and Builder
GEORGE ST., MARKDALE.
ALL kinds of building and house carpenter work done in the village or country. Call early before the rush comes. 339-52

CARD OF THANKS.

In thanking my customers for their liberal patronage in the past. I have much pleasure in being still able to supply them with the following celebrated machines, viz.

The Watson all-steel two-horse twine Binder.
The Watson Deering Binder.
The Watson Improved Lion Reaper.
The New Humming Mower.
The Humming-bird Mower.
The Watson Daisy Rake.
The Mann Champion Rake.
The Tolten Pea Harvester.
The Mann Broad-cast Seeder and Harrows Combined.
The Champion Combined Drill, Celter & Scott, Oshawa.
The best Plow's and Harrows in the market.
Root Cutters, Grain Crushers, Fanning mills. Land Rollers.
Agent for the Watersou's Co's Machinery and Steam Threshers.
Horse Powers, Wagon's Buggies, Democrats, and every implement a farmer requires. Parties reqiring anything in above lines will find it to their advantage to call at my new implement house opposite R. McNally's Carriage works, where Mr. R. Robertson will be pleased to wait on customers in my absence.

J. H. CARSON, Agent
148-61 Markdale.

CANADIAN PACIFIC R. R.

TIME TABLE.

—Markdale Station—

GOING SOUTH.	6.47 a. m.	3.52 p. m.
GOING NORTH.	12.02 p. m.	9.10 p. m.

Burdock BLOOD BITTERS.

WILL CURE OR RELIEVE

BILIOUSNESS,	DIZZINESS,
DYSPEPSIA,	DROPSY,
INDIGESTION,	FLUTTERING OF THE HEART,
JAUNDICE,	ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH,
ERYSIPELAS,	DRYNESS OF THE SKIN,
SALT RHEUM,
HEARTBURN,
HEADACHE,

And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD.

P. BURDOCK & CO. Proprietors

FARM.

Notes and Suggestions.

Do not be in too much hurry to plant.

There is a world of labor spent for nothing in piling and forking over manure.

A solution of "Persian insect powder" is in some cases more effectual than the ground article.

As the pasturing season is now well forward we desire to again call the attention of stockmen and especially dairymen to the necessity of providing pure water for stock.

Which is your best cow? Don't know! What do you keep cows for? Milk is it? How much milk must a cow give to make her worth, her keep, and 20 per cent of her cost?

The British dairy farmers' association is going to establish dairy schools which shall train students in the art of making dairy products, and if possible pay its way in selling cheese and butter made from purchased milk.

We only approve of sawing off horns as a necessity. We admit that it is cruel, as we admit that castrating is cruel, or branding, etc. We also think that calfhood is the proper time to do this work, as the tissue, bone formation, and nerves of sensation have not attained growth.

The proper application of manure is a matter of great importance to each farmer, and one that will bear the closest thought and investigation. Different soils require different treatment undoubtedly, and what may be good for one soil may not be best for a different soil.

When scientific agriculture is supported by practical farming, then will a new era dawn upon the tillers of the soil, and progressive farmers will hail with delight the establishment of experimental stations as one of the movements to raise farming from the place of drudgery.

In a discussion on farm economy by members of South Branch, N. H., grange there was quite a difference of opinion. Some thought that true economy demanded the best tools and machinery, others, that it was not economy to purchase new tools as long as the old ones work. All agreed that it was extravagance to fail to properly care for the machinery one might have.

Is there no means of making goats profitable in this country? It is simply because goats breed freely and live without care and yield a rich and delicious milk, that no one can possibly afford to breed and handle on a large scale? Is it possible that these hardy creatures cannot be made to pay in a dairy for cheese-making? If their kids were kept at home they could be made to graze on the roughest ground and would return home to be milked.

Ewes that present signs of scarcity of milk either before or after lambing need special attention, remarks the London Agricultural Gazette. Good lambs are never reared unless they receive a favorable start in life. It is advisable, however, to bring a good flow of milk upon the ewe previous to lambing, not after. A few roots, a little fresh hay, and about one pound of grain, consisting of bran and oats, if fed daily, will produce a wonderfully beneficial effect in promoting the flow of milk in the ewes.

There will be a great increase in the amount of fodder corn sown this year. The advantages of soiling cattle become more and more apparent after a season of draught such as too many of us experienced last year. Good corn fodder is an excellent food with which to piece out dry pastures. With a good supply of such fodder cattle can be kept in the barn during the heat of the day. There they rest in peace, undisturbed by the murderous flies that wear the milk and flesh out of them in the pastures. The labor spent at growing and handling a crop of corn fodder will be well spent.

In feeding corn fodder and straw to milch cows, the deficiency in these will be best made up with bran, and I would add two pounds of good wheat or rye bran, the latter is the better and the cheaper, to make the mixed fodder equal to hay. Then I would mix four pounds of corn-meal and four pounds of bran if the cow would digest it and consume it profitably, and give half of these with cut fodder morning and evening, with fodder alone at noon. Coarse middlings are somewhat richer than bran in starch, hence if middlings are fed, the cornmeal may be reduced to three pounds daily.

Wealth Beneath the Waters.

The memory of the loss of £200,000 of silver and gold will survive the drowning of 1,000 souls in a coup. There was the Lutine, for instance. She was of thirty-two guns, commanded by Capt. Skynner, and she went ashore on the bank of the Fly Island passage on the night of October 9, 1799. At first she was reputed to have had £600,000 sterling, in specie on board. This was afterward contradicted by a statement that "the return from the bullion office makes the whole amount about £140,000 sterling. "If," I find in a contemporary account, "the wreck of the unfortunate Lutine should be discovered; there may be reason to hope for the recovery of the bullion."

In the reign of James II., some English adventurers fitted out a vessel to search for and weigh out the cargo of a rich Spanish ship which had been lost on the coast of South America. They succeeded and brought home £300,000, which had been forty years at the bottom of the sea. Captain Phipps, who commanded, had £20,000 for his share, and the Duke of Albemarle £90,000. A medal was struck in honor of this event in 1678.

There was a very costly wreck in 1767. She was a Dutch East Indiaman and foundered in a storm within three leagues of the Texel, taking down all hands but six and £500,000. The price of four such armadas as that of 1588 went down in the last century alone in the shape of gold, silver and plate. She was the annual register ship, as the term then was, and had in her 500,000 piastres and 10,000 ounces of gold on account of the king, and twice that sum on the merchants' account, making her a very rich ship. She foundered and no man escaped to tell how and when.

In the same year the Dutch lost the Antoinetta, an Indiaman, and with her sank £700,000 besides jewels of great value. The Royal Charter is the most notable instance of the wreck of "treasure" ship that I can just now call to mind. She left Australia with $350,000 in her. Of this sum, says Charles Dickens in his chapter on this dreadful shipwreck in the "Uncommercial Traveler," £300,000 worth were recovered at the time of the novelist's visit to the spot where she had driven ashore.—London Telegraph.

THE LIME-KILN CLUB.

"I knowed an ole man who died de odder day widout religun," said Brother Gardner, as he opened the meeting. "Some of de people who stood aroun' his death-bed an' saw de smile on his face as he sunk away in death could not make it out. He belonged to no church—he worshipped wid no congregation, an' dey wondered dat he died content.

"No, dis ole man has no religun, accordin' to de way Christians put it, but I knowed him long an' well. In de first place, he was honest. All de money in Detroit wouldn't hev bin a temtashun to him. In de next place, he wus forgivin' an' conscienshus; if he wronged anybody he would go down on his knees to make it right.

"Dis ole man paid his honest debts. To him a debt was as sacred as holy writ. He had kind words fur all. Neber was a man so bad dat dis ole man could not say sunthin' good of him. He respected de law: he upheld all dat was moral an' virchus; he was widout envy.

"An as de April sun sunk low in de heabens dis old man's time had come. He said good-bye to de world in a whisper, an' he was not afraid. De settin' sun poured its last beams of glory frew de winder over his ole black face, and it lighted up wid sich radiance dat we stood dar and held our brefs. It was de eand of a man who called no man his pastor an' took no church fur his guide, but when de las' minit' cum de joys of Heaven were so plainly seen in his face dat he shouted fur glory."

"An' so he died, an' sich was de eand fo' what de world calls a sinner. We has got among us heah three score church members an' prayin' men. Ize wonderin' how many of us will sink away to rest as calmly and confidently as dat ole man whose name neber appeared on a church roll. Ize been wonderin' if we doan' pray too much an' hang off about our debts too long; if we doan' sing wid so much zeal dat we havn't got 'nuff left to speak kindly of our nayburs; if we haint so suah of our own salvashun dat we doan' keer about anybody else. Let us look into dis an' find whar' we stand. Dar' am religun an' religun. De sort dat sends a member of dis club down on his knees at de Thursday evenin' pray'r meetin', an' allows him to walk off wid someone else's umbrella heah on Saturday night am a sort I want to keep shet of."

SQUARED HIMSELF.

Greatly to everybody's surprise, Elder Toots had remained wide awake thus far, and he now arose to a question of privilege. He had heard it flung out that he was living with his fifth wife, and that the two indulged in quarrels which disgraced the neighborhood, He desired to submit proofs that she was only his fourth wife, and that they lived in such a perfect state of happiness that he never knew whether his shirt buttons were off or on.

"We doan' keer fur de proofs, Brudder Toots," observed the President; "you hasn't bin offishually charged wid any misconduct befo' de club, an' we kin took no axshun."

"But I desiah to squar' myself, sah."

"You am squared, Brudder Toots, an' kin consider yerself discharged on suspended sentence. Sot down an' go to sleep."

HE MUST GO.

The Secretary then announced that he had been placed in possession of certain sad facts concerning the character and reputation of Brotker Green Smith, an honorary member living in Alabama. Brother Green, who is a licensed preacher of the Methodist church, was sent as a delegate to a conference. The conference adjourned over Sunday, and the members made up a shake purse and bought Brother Green a bag of oats to feed his horse. He slyly placed the oats in his buggy and set out for his home, a few miles away, and when a good brother went after him he was found sowing the seed on fruitful soil. The case was brought before the conference, and it was voted to revoke his license.

"Dar' kin be no queshun 'bout de fack in de ease," said the President, "an' de cognomen of Brudder Green Smith will be erased from our rolls. De rules of dis club will permit a preacher to git de best of de dicker in tradin' off mules, an' we won't go back on him if strange chickens insist on flyin' into his cabin an' wringin' deir own necks, but we can't uphold base ingratitude an' wrank hypocrisy. De branch clubs at Montgomery an' Huntsville will be notified of our axshun, an' should de deposed brudder attempt to visit one of dose lodges he will feel a sawmill hit him.

UNFAVORABLY REPORTED.

Giveadam Jones, Traveling Lecturer and Installator, desired to report on the application of the "Dark Shades" of Henderson, Ky., for a branch charter. He had been down there and made the acquaintance of Setback Johnson, Hardheel Smith, Turkey Davie, 'Possum Williams, and other applicants, and it was his opinion that no branch could be organized to do honour to the parent club. Most of the twenty-eight applicants chewed the meanest kind of plug tobacco, kept fighting dogs and played policy, and two of them were just out of the county jail for larceny. His report was accepted and adopted, and no charter will be granted.

WORKING WELL.

The Committee on Patents and Copyrights, to whom was submitted the query: "What is the Torpedo chicken, and how does it work?" begged leave to report as follows:

"De Torpedo chicken ar' de invenshun of de Hon. Hannibal Hamlin, of Maine. It was invented to decimate de cull'd race. It ar' a fax-simile of a pullet, made of zinc, an' filled wid powder and slugs. When fastened to de roost it so clusly resembles de real bird dat de wisest ole nigger in de bizness can't tell the difference. He strikes a match, reaches out to pull de pullet off de pole, an' dar' am a 'sploshun which shakes de nayburhood an' causes anoder well-known citizen to turn up missin'. As to decimatin' de cull'd race, it hasn't dun it. De alarm was sounded at an airly date, an' de great majority of our people turned from chicken to codfish. Now an' den someole hen-stealer, who can't let bizness die entirely out, am de victim of de Torpedo, but de wise man passes de hen coop afur off an' saves his bacon."

The report was accepted with profound gratitude and admiration, and then the meeting went home.

Speaking of pork and plays, although there is commonly supposed to be no connection between the two, would a small hog's hind leg be a Hamlet?

Rich Men's Sons.

A wealthy broker of New York began life as a farm-hand in New Jersey. He had the craving natural to a poor boy for fine clothes a splendid house, luxury of every kind. To acquire these, he worked hard with brain and body.

As he rose in life, he was thrown in contact with educated men, great financiers, rulers of commerce, artists, teachers, scientific men. His own intellect, strengthened by its work, was bold and broad enough to appreciate them all.

By the time he was fifty, he cared little for physical luxuries which his money could buy for him. His pursuits, apart from his business, were noble and elevating—those which belong to a many-sided, enlightened American, who keeps abreast of his time in its great movements.

His son, on the contrary, was born in the lap of riches. Luxuries, the lack of which urged his father to incessant activity, were as familiar to him as the air and daily sunshine. Fine clothes, rich food, amusements of all kinds, gave him little pleasure; they were matters of course.

He knew no life of which they were not a part. He did not work at school or college. Why should he? Other men worked to make a place for themselves in the world. His place was already made for him. He needed no more millions than his father could give him.

He had literally nothing to do but to amuse himself.

Now, there is but a limited number of amusements in the world, and after a certain time the senses, the nerves, the whole body, grows jaded with each of them.

By the time this young man had reached the age of twenty-five he was as sated with pleasure as a gray-haired debauchee. Cards, wine, sport, travel, bored him; his physical strength was exhausted; his mind, though still immature, was almost imbecile. When a sudden attack of illness carried him out of this world, nobody in it was sorry; himself, perhaps, least of all.

The story of this rich man and his son has been repeated countless times in the lives of our rich men.

The "gilded youth" of our great cities grow weary of balls, of steam yachts, of even the theatres, gambling and drink. Their jaded appetites crave stronger diet.

In the great centres of riches and folly some of them crowd in the small hours of the morning to dens unknown to the police, to see brutal combats between prize-fighters. At a recent fight betwen a woman and a dog, the ring was surrounded by men worth millions.

"The only real sensation I have enjoyed for years," said one of this class lately, "was in China last July, when I saw the executioner chop off five heads in an hour."

At heart, these lads are made of as good, manly stuff as others. They are victims to the popular idea that the sole use of money is amusement. Even when weighted by huge fortune, as Napoleon Bonaparte once wrote to his marshal, "Surely, we should endeavor to do something; to say that we have lived; to leave some impress of our lives upon the sands of Time."

VARIETIES.

Jewelry throughout the East is invariably made of the purest gold and silver. The Oriental does not approve of alloy.

The motto "Dieu et mon droit" was assumed by Henry VI., and has held its ground ever since. It was an ancient English war-cry.

The little sand-martin is the least of the swallows. In the great majority of cases it is the little sand-martin which is the subject of the "early swallow" paragraph of provincial newspapers.

Within a comparatively recent period it was deemed singularly unlucky amongst Scotch fisher-folk of the north-west of Scotland to find a turbot amongst the contents of a haul, and in no circumstances would a skipper permit the ill-omened capture to be taken on board.

The ends of the tube of the Britannia Bridge across the Meni Straits rest on rollers, to permit the advance and recession due to heat and cooling, the length of the bridge varying as much as three inches in the course of twenty-four hours. When the sun shines on one side of the tube, that side becomes longer than the side in shade, and the whole structure curves accordingly.

General Prievalsky estimates the whole population of Central Asia at about nine million, spread over an extent of one hundred and twenty thousand square miles. This insignificant number is accounted for by the physical conformation of the country, four-fifths of which are nothing but desert, and only on the few oases lying at the foot of gigantic mountains is there any soil fit for settled habitation.

The thistle, originally introduced into Australia by an over-patriotic Scotchman, has spread all over the country. At first it was a great terror—even yet this idea has not disappeared. But sheep and cattle, it seems, have learned that the heads of the thistle—the receptacle—are nutty in flavor and nutritious; and in seasons of drought, and consequent vegetable dearth, the much despised thistle, it appears, now annually saves the lives of thousands of cattle and sheep.

Donkey parties are the latest rational amusement of provincial gatherings across the Atlantic. A huge donkey, minus its tail, is cut out of calico, fixed against the wall, and all the company are provided with pins and a calico donkey's tail. Each guest is then blindfolded in turn, placed opposite the figure on the wall, twisted round three times, and left to pin the tail in its right place the donkey. As the blind man scarcely ever hits the right place, the company get plenty of fun out of their game.

Blushes.

Blushing is a disease. No one blushes for shame. While the woman of the world may wear cheeks of marble, the innocent country lass is made red by being looked at. The perjurer tells his story without a change of color; the honest witness is flushed and confused by the lawyer who is hired to suppress truth in courts of justice. Countless roses are said to blush unseen. They are very foolish. Politicians never blush, but they growred in the face over the spirit of the campaign, and claim modesty as an inheritance.

The State of Kansas, which Western pioneers found treeless and a desert, now has more than 20,000,000 fruit-trees and more than 200,000 acres of forest-trees, all planted by its own people.

HEALTH.

"Don'ts for the Sick-Room."

Don't light a sick room at night by means of a jet of gas burning low; nothing impoverishes the air sooner. Use sperm candles or tapers which burn in sperm oil.

Don't allow offensive matters to remain. In cases of emergency, where these cannot at once be removed, wring a heavy cloth—for instance, like Turkish toweling—out of cold water, use it as a cover, placing over this ordinary paper. Such means prevent the escape of odor and infection.

Don't forget to have a few beans of coffee handy, for this serves as a deodorizer, if burnt upon coals or paper. Bits of charcoal placed around are useful in absorbing gases and other impurities.

Don't have the temperature of a sick-room much over sixty degrees; seventy degrees are allowable, but not advisable.

Don't permit currents of air to blow upon the patient. An open fire-place is an excellent means of ventilation. The current may be tested by burning a piece of paper in front.

Don't give the patient a full glass of water to drink from, unless he is allowed all he desires. If he can drain the glass he will be satisfied; so regulate the quantity before handing it to him.

Don't neglect during the day to attend to necessaries for the night, that the rest of the patient and family may not be disturbed.

Don't ask a convalescent if he would like this or that to eat or drink; but prepare the delicacies and present them in a tempting way.

Don't throw coal upon the fire; place it in brown paper bags and lay them upon the fire, thus avoiding the noise, which is shocking to the sick and sensitive.

Don't jar the bed by leaning or sitting upon it. This is unpleasant to one ill and nervous.

Don't let stale flowers remain in a sick chamber.

Don't be unmindful of yourself if you are in the responsible position of nurse. To do faithful work you must have proper food and stated hours of rest.

Don't appear anxious, however great your anxiety.

Don't forget that kindness and tenderness are needful to successful nursing. Human nature longs to be soothed and comforted on all occasions when it is out of tune.

Common Errors.

Do not forget that:

1. Alcoholic drinks do not support physical strength during hot weather.

2. Seasonable weather is never unhealthy.

3. Men and women should not eat the same kind and amount of food, when their manner of life is entirely different.

4. Pie is not essentially indigestible; nor, in general, can the quality of indigestibility be logically affirmed of any article of food absolutely, and apart from a consideration of the digestive capacity of the particular stomach the powers of which are to be tested.

5. Disease does not consist simply in the group of symptoms manifested in the case.

6. Morbid processes are not necessarily destructive, but are sometimes conservative. Disease in some cases may be nature's method in righting a wrong, or overcoming the effects of some disturbing agent. A portion of the clinical picture of a disease is therefore made up of evidences of reaction, as well as of direct morbid action.

7. In the production of true cholera infantum heat does not play the most important part; nor does it furnish the main indication for treatment.

8. Persons are not necessarily well because they feel well; nor does sickness consist in feeling sick.

9. Specifics do not exist in modern medicines.

10. If any one be ill, take drugs and recover, it does not follow that there is any connection between the administration of the remedy and the happy result; nor does the repetition of such cases do more than establish a probability of the remedy doing good in like cases.

11. Even if a patient has had syphilis, it does not follow that every ailment subsequently afflicting him must be syphilitic; nor that he must for every ill take iodides.

12. It is not always necessary to remove insane persons from their homes; though it must be admitted that the percentage of recoveries in hospitals for the insane is much greater among mild and recent cases.

13. The actual years of one's life do not bear any positive relation to the occurrence of senile degeneration.

14. Typical hysteria cannot exist in a perfectly healthy patient, though the essential lesson may not be discoverable by the pathologist.

15. The conditions of modern life in our highest civilization are not the most favorable for the development of a large, healthy and vigorous population.

16. There is no essential difference between sanitary and sanatory science.

Malarial Fever.

Remittent fever is closely related to intermittent. Each depends on the same cause, and each is characterized by frequent subsidence of symptoms, followed by their renewal. The intermissions of the one, however, have a singular regularity, lasting, according to the type of the fever, one, two, or three days.

The subsidence in remittent fevers is only for a few hours,—generally in the morning,—and is much less in degree, as well as in duration. Sometimes it is hardly perceptible.

The symptoms of remittent fever are also more marked. The temperature reaches a higher point, a point at which, in severe cases, the blood is dangerously, and often fatally, changed in its nature. It generally reaches its highest point within a few hours. It is the fever which is so fatally malignant on the west coast of Africa, and prevails extensively in the jungles of India. Its fatality is greatest in hot climates, but its existence is not confined to the tropics, but is found in every malarial region.

The natives of malarial regions are, in the main, liable only to intermittent fever; while persons from abroad are specially liable to remittent, but when they have recovered, are mostly secure against a subsequent attack. Those who have had intermittent fever are liable to it in damp weather, or in a low condition of [illegible] long after removal to non malarious [illegible]. The shorter and less marked are the [illegible] sions, the greater is the danger.

Malarial means bad air. But chemical analysis reveals no difference between malarial and ordinary air. Within a few years, however, a microscopic organism has been discovered in malaral air, which seems to be the cause of the fever. It has been isolated, and when animals have been inoculated with it, they have exhibited all the characteristic symptoms of the disease. The organism is found in patients sick with malaria.

Without doubt these germs—or whatever the poison,—exist in soils rich in decomposing vegetable matter; but they depend for their development on the co-action of heat and moisture. Still, they are often carried by the wind to regions naturally wholly free from them—sometimes up into mountainous regions, and to regions having a sandy, porous soil.

The upturning of soil for cultivation, digging of canals, the building of railroads, the obstruction of natural water-courses, are often followed by malarial epidemics.

The premonitory symptoms are nearly the same as in intermittent fever, but the chilly stage is very much less, often only a slight feeling of chilliness. It is sometimes mistaken for typhoid fever, but the typhoid patient reaches a high temperature much more gradually than one who is afflicted with malaria.

Mr. Beecher's Health.

There is a lesson for many of us in the sudden death of this most famous preacher. More than most men, he both understood the laws of health, and obeyed them. He gave months every year to physical recuperation. He well knew that brain-work exhausted the vital forces far more than manual toil, and that it could not be continued at a high tension from day to day without great danger.

He equally well knew that sunshine in the atmosphere of the soul was as powerful for health and life, as it is the sunlight which kills the death-germs in the outward atmosphere, and he sought to keep himself genial and hopeful to the last.

His ordinary intellectual work, because of his genius, cost him less expenditure of nervous and brain than did that of most mental workers. Almost every organ in his body was in good working order up to the fatal stroke.

Why, then, did he die?

One of the well-known facts of age is a tendency to arterial degeneration. The muscular coat, on which the strength and elasticity of the arteries depend, inclines to become either chalk-like and brittle, or mere fat Such degeneration in the brain is more dangerous than it is elsewhere, for the cerebral arteries are not supported by tough muscle. Every emotion increases the force of the great central pump.

All undue mental activity keeps the cerebral blood-pressure at a high tension, swelling out the arterial walls, if the latter are weakened by fatty degeneration, and searching out every spot that is weaker than others, In such a case, a fatal hemorrhage is liable to occur. The avoidance of unusual excitement and undue brain-work is the sole condition of safety.

Now, we know that Mr. Beecher was working on his "Life of Christ" at a pressure unusual for him in his best days, and the result shows that it was with the "sword of Damocles" hanging by a hair above his head. That book probably killed him.

How to Read the Clouds.

There can be no doubt that those, who observe the clouds can make pretty shrewd guesses as to the weather for the next twenty-four hours. Proverbs relating to the clouds are very numerous, and we give a few of those which are applicable at this time of the year:

Anvil-shaped clouds are very likly to be followed by a gale of wind.

If the sky becomes darker without much rain and divides into two layers of clouds, expect sudden gusts of wind.

Brassy-colored clouds in the west at sunset indicate wind.

If you see clouds going cross wind there is a storm in the air.

When on clear days isolated clouds drive over the zenith from the rain-wind side, storm and rain follows within twenty-four hours.

If the clouds be of different heights, the sky being grayish or dirty blue, with hardly any wind stirring, the wind, however, changing from west to south, expect storm.

Black clouds in the north in Winter indicate approaching snow.

If on a fair day in winter a white bank of clouds arise in the south expect snow.

Small black clouds drifting from the southwest is a sign of rain.

If in Winter the clouds appear fleecy, with a very blue sky, expect cold rain or snow.

If clouds be dark
'Twill rain, do you hark?
If clouds be bright
'Twill clear to-night.

If a layer of thin clouds drive up from the northwest and under other clouds moving more to the south, expect fine weather.

Clouds in the east obscuring the sun indicate fair weather.

If the sky beyond the clouds is blue,
Be glad; there's a picnic for you.

If the clouds at the same height drive up with the wind and gradually become thinner and descend, expect fine weather.

Enough blue sky in the northwest to make a Scotchman a jacket is a sign of approaching clear weather.

When the clouds hang on the mountain side after a rain and the sun shines on top of the mountains the storm is over.

The Barbed Wire Fence

Already the account of cattle being struck by lightning and killed while huddled together near a barbed wire fence during a thunder storm have begun to come in. Losses of this kind have become so numerous of late years that the question of insulating the wires of such fence is not seriously discussed. The humble rail fence is now a thing of beauty nor a joy forever, but it seldom betrays the confidence of a lot of trusting cattle that have assembled together in one of its friendly corners for mutual counsel and support in the hour of trial.

Many a man who thinks he is going to set the world afire finds, to his sorrow, that somebody has turned the hose on him.

BY ORDER OF THE LEAGUE.

CHAPTER X.

Besides the consolation of recovering the precious insignia, the spice of romance in the affair appealed to Le Gautier's natural sentiment. He might, it may be thought, have had something similar made; but it must be remembered that he had no facsimile in his possession; and he knew, or suspected, that the coin bore private marks known only to the Supreme Three. At all hazards, therefore, the device must be recovered, and perhaps a little pleasant pastime enjoyed in addition.

After long cogitation, La Gautier decided to keep the appointment, and in accordance with this determination, walked to Charing Cross the following night. He loitered along the broad stone platform for some time till the clock struck nine, idly speculating upon the people hurrying to and fro, and turning over the books and papers on the bookstall. At a few minutes after the hour he looked up at the clock, and then down again, and his heart beat a shade more quickly, for there, standing by the swinging door leading to the first-class waiting-room, was a long cloaked figure, closely veiled. Walking carelessly in the direction, and approaching, he looked at his watch as he muttered: "Past nine—no sign of the Eastern Eagle."

By way of answer, the mysterious stranger raised her hand to the clasp of her cloak, and there, in the centre of the fastening was a gold moidore.

Le Gautier's eyes glistened as he noticed this. "You wish to see me?" he said at length. "I must thank you for"——

"If your name is Le Gautier," she interrupted, "I do want to say a few words to you.—Am I right, sir?"

Le Gautier bowed, thinking that, if the face matched the voice and figure, he had a treasure here.

"This is no place to discuss this matter. If you can suggest any place where we can hold a few minutes' conversation, I shall be obliged."

Le Gautier mused a momedt; he had a good knowledge of London, but hesitated to take a lady to any place so late. The only suggestion he could make was the Embankment? and apparently this suited his companion, for, bowing her head, she took the proffered arm, walked out from the station, down Villiars Street, and so on to the waterside. Le Gautier noticed how the fingers on his arm trembled, attributing this to natural timidity, never dreaming that the emotion might be a warmer one. He began to feel at home now, and his tongue ran on accordingly. "Ah! how good of you" he exclaimed, pressing the arm lying in his own tenderly—"how angelic of you to come to my aid! Tell me how you knew I was so rash, so impetuous?"

"Men who carry their lives in their hands always are," Isodore replied. "The story does not need much telling. I was in the Kursaal at the time, and had my eyes on you. I saw you detach the insignia from your watchchain; I saw you hand it to a woman to stake; in short, I can put my hand upon it now."

"My protector, my guardian angel! Le Gautier cried rapturously; and then, with a sudden prosaic touch, added: "Have you got it with you?"

Isodore hesitated. If he could only have seen the smile behind the thick dark veil which hid the features so tantalisingly!

"I have not your insignia with me," she said; "that I must give you at some future time, not now. Though I am alarmed for you, I cannot but admire your reckless audacity."

"I thought perhaps you might," Le Gautier observed in a disappointed tone, and glancing at the clasp of his companion's cloak.

"That is mine," she explained, noting his eager look. "I do not part with it so recklessly as you. I, too, am one of you, as you see. Ah, Monsieur le Gautier, how truly fortunate your treasure fell into a woman's hands!"

"Indeed, yes," he replied gravely, a little puzzled, nevertheless, by the half-serious, half-mocking tone at these last words. "And how grateful I am! Pardon me if, in my anxiety, I ask when I may have it?"

"It may be some days yet. It is not in my hands; but be assured that you shall have it. I always keep my promises—in love or war, gratitude or revenge, I never forget.—And now I must leave you."

"But you will at least tell me the name of my benefactor, and when I shall have the great felicity of seeing her again."

"If I disclose myself to you, my secret must be respected. Some time when I know you better, I will tell you more. I live in Ventnor Street, Fitzroy Square. You may come and see me any night at ten. You must inquire for Marie St Jean."

"I will come," Le Gautier exclaimed, kissing the proffered hand gallantly. "Nothing save the sternest duty shall keep me from Fitzroy Square."

"And you will respect my secret? I, too, am on the business of the League. You will guard my secret?"

"On my life?" was the fervid response.—"Good-night, and au revoir."

"On his life," Isodore murmured as she walked rapidly away in the direction of the Temple Gardens.

It was a beautiful night, the moon hanging behind Westminster, and throwing a glowing track along the swift rushing river, dancing like molten silver as it turned and twisted under the arches of Waterloo. It was getting quiet now, save for the echoing footfall from a few hurrying feet or the shout of voices from the Surrey shore. Soft and subdued came the hoarse murmurs of the distant Strand; but Isodore heeded them not. In imaginatien, she was standing under the shadow of the grape-vines, the sunny Tiber down at her feet, and a man was at her side. And now the grapes were thorns, the winding Tiber the sullen Thames, and the hero [standing by her side, a hero no longer, but a man to be despised—and worse. As she walked along, busy among the faded rose-leaves of the past, a hand was laid upon her arm, and Valerie stood before her.

"I thought you were going to walk over me," she said. "I knew you would return this way, and came to meet you.—Have you seen him?"

"Yes, I have seen him; and what I have heard, does not alter my feelings. He is cold and vain, callous and unfeeling as ever. And to think I once loved that man, and trusted him! The poor fool thinks he has made another conquest, another captive to his bow and spear. Under the cover of my veil, I have been studying his features. It is well he thinks so; it will help me to my revenge.—Valerie, he is going to call upon me to-morrow night at ten o'clock."

"But consider what a rash thing you are doing. Beside, how is it going to benefit you or injure him? He will boast of it; he will talk of it to his friends, and injure you."

"Not while I have this," Isodore cried triumphantly, touching the clasp of her cloak.—"Do not you see how he is within my power? Besides, he can give me some information of the utmost value. They hold a council to-morrow night; the business is pressing, and a special envoy is to go to Rome. The undertaking will be one of extreme danger. They will draw lots, but the choice will fall upon Frederick Maxwell."

"How do you know this?" Valerie asked. "I do not understand your mission; but it seems to me that where every man has a stake at issue, it is his own interest to see the matter conducted fairly."

"You may think so; but perhaps you will think differently when I tell you that Le Gautier is, for the evening, President of the Council. It does not need a vast amount of discrimination to see how the end will be. Le Gautier is determined to marry this Enid Charteris; and much as she despises him, he will gain his end if he is not crossed."

"But what are you going to do?" Valerie asked, horrified at the infamous plot. "You will not allow an innocent man to go to his death like this?"

"I shall not, as you say, allow a good man to be done to death," Isodore replied with the calmness of perfect conviction. "The pear is not yet ripe. Le Gautier is not sufficiently hoist with his own petard. This Maxwell will go to Rome; but he will never execute the commission allotted to him; I shall take care of that.—And now, mind you are out ot the way, when Le Gautier comes to-morrow night."

Valerie silently shivered as she turned over the dark plot in her mind. "Suppose you fail, Isodore," she suggested—"fail from over-confidence? You speak of the matter as already accomplished, as if you had only to say a thing and it is done. One would think, to hear you, that Frederick Maxwell's safety, my husband's life even, was yours."

"Yes," she answered calmly; "his life is mine. I hold it in the hollow of my hand."

CHAPTER XI.

In one of those quiet by-thoroughfares between Gray's Inn Road and Holborn stands a hair-dresser's shop. It is a good enough house above stairs, with capacious rooms over the shop; below, it has its plate-glass windows and the pole typical of the tonsorial talent within; a window decorated with pale waxen beauties, rejoicing in wigs of great luxuriance and splendour of colour; brushes of every shape and design; and cosmetiques from all nations, dubbed with high-sounding names, and warranted to make the baldest scalp resemble the aforesaid beauties, after one or more applications. But the polite proprietor of "The Cosmopolitan Toilette Club" had something besides hair-cutting to depend upon, for Pierre Ferry's house was the London headquarters of the League.

As he stood behind a customer's chair in the "saloon" snipping and chatting as barbers, especially if they be foreigners, always will, his restless little black eyes twinkled strangely. Had the customer been a man of observation, he would have noticed one man after another drop in, making a sign to the tonsorial artist, and then passing into an inner room. Salvarini entered presently, accompanied by Frederick Maxwell, both making some sign and passing on. Pierre Ferry looked at the newcomer keenly; but a glance of intelligence satisfied his scruples, and he resumed his occupation. Time went on until Le Gautier arrived, listless and cool, as was his wont, and in his turn passed in, turning to the barber as he shut the door behind him. "This room is full," he said; "we want no more."

Ferry bowed gravely, and turning the key in the lock, put the former in his pocket. That was the signal of the assembly being complete. He wished his customers goodnight, then closing the door, seated himself, to be on the elert in case of any threatened danger.

As each of the conspirators passed through the shop, they ascended a dark winding staircase into the room above; and at the end of the apartment, a window opened out upon another light staircase, for flight in case of danger, and which led into a churchyard, and thence into a back street. The windows looking upon Gray's Inn Road were carefully barred, and the curtains drawn so as to exclude any single ray of light, and talking quietly together were a few grave-looking men, foreigners mostly. Maxwell surveyed the plain-looking apartment, almost bare of furniture, with the exception of a long table covered with a green cloth, an inkstand and paper, together with a pack of playing-cards The artist's scrutiny and speculations were cut short by the entrance of Le Gautier.

To an actor of his stamp, the change of mauner from a light-hearted man of the world to a desperate conspirator was easy enough. He had laid aside his air of levity, and appeared now President of the Council to the life—grave, stern, with a touch of hauteur in his gait, his voice deliberate; and his whole manner speaking of earnest determination of purpose. Maxwell could not but admire the man now, and gave him credit at least for sincerity in this thing.

"Gentlemen," he said, in sonorous tones, "we will commence business, it you please. I shall not detain you long to-night, for I have business of grave importance myself. Will you take your seats?"

The men gathered round the table, drawing up their chairs, Le Gautier at the head, and every eye turned upon him with rapt attention. From an inside pocket he produced a packet of papers and laid them before him. "Brothers," he asked, "what is our first duty to the League?"

"The removal of tyrants!" came from every throat there in a kind of chorus. "And death to traitors!" added one, low down the board.

"You are right, my friend," Le Gautier continued. "That is a duty to which none can yield. I hold evidence in my hand that we have a traitor amongst us—not in the room, I mean, but in our camp. Does any Brother here know Visci, the deputy at Rome?"

The assembly looked one to the other, though without speaking; and Maxwell noted the deathly pallor upon Salvarini's face, wondering what brought it there. The President repeated the question, and looked round again, as if waiting for some one to speak.

"Yes, I know him. He was my friend," Salvarini observed in melancholy tones. "Let us hear what his fault is."

"He is a traitor to the Order," Le Gautier continued; "and as such he must die His crime is a heavy one," he went on, looking keenly at Maxwell: "he has refused to obey a mandate of the Three."

"Death!" shouted the voices in chorus again—"death to the traitor!"

"That is your verdict, then?" the President asked, a great shout of "Ay" going up in reply.—"It is proper for you to see his refusal; we must be stern in spite of our justice. See for yourselves." Saying these words, he passed the papers down the table from hand to hand, Maxwell reading them in his turn, though the whole thing was a whole thing was a puzzle to him. He could only see that the assembly were in deadly earnest concerning something he did not understand. He was destined to have a rude awakening ere long. The papers were passed on until they reached the President's hands again. With great care he burnt them at one of the candles, crushing the charred ashes with his fingers.

"You are all agreed," he asked. "What is your verdict to be?" And like a solemn echo came the one word, "Death!" Salvarini alone was silent, and as Le Gautier took up the cards before him, his deathly pallor seemed to increase.

"It is well—it is just," Le Gautier said sternly, as he poured the cards like water from one hand to the other. "My friends, we will draw lots. In virtue of my office as President, I am exempt; but I will not stand out in the hour of danger; I will take my chance with you."

A murmur of applause followed this sentiment, and the cards were passed round by each, after being carefully examined and duly shuffled. Maxwell shuffled the cards in his hands, quite unconscious of what they might mean to him, and passed them to Salvarini.

"No," he said despondingly; "there is fate in such things as these. If the lot falls to me, I bow my head. There is a higher Hand than man's guiding such destinies as ours; I will not touch them." Saying these words with an air of extremely deep melancholy, he pushed the cards in Le Gautier's direction. The latter turned back his cuffs, laid the cards on the palm of one hand, and looked at the assembly.

"I will deal them round, and the first particular card that falls to a certain individual shall decide," he said. "Choose a card."

"The dagger strikes to the heart," came a foreign voice from the end of the table; "what better can we have than the ace of hearts?" He stopped, and a murmur of assent ran round the room.

It was a thrilling moment. Every face was bent forward eagerly as the president stood up to deal the cards. He placed one before himself, a harmless one, and then, with unerring dexterity, threw one before every man there. Each face was a study of rapt attention, for any one might mean a life, and low hoarse murmurs ran round as one card after another was turned up and proved to be harmless. One round was finished, containing, curiously enough, six hearts, and yet the fatal ace had not appeared. Each anxious face would light up for a moment as the owner's card was turned up, and then he fixed with sickening anxiety on his neighbour's. At the end of the second round the ace was still absent. The excitement now was almost painful; not a word was spoken, and only the deep breathing gave evidence of the inward emotion. Slowly, one by one, the cards dwindled away in the dealer's hands till only seven were left. It was a sight never to be forgotten even with one chance for each; and when the first of the seven was dealt, a simple two, every envying eye was bent upon the fortunate one as he laughed unsteadily, wiped his face, and hastily filled and swallowed a glass of water. Six, five, four: the last to the President, and there only remained three cards now—one for Salvarini, one for Maxwell, and one for the suggester of the emblem card. The Frenchman's card was placed upon the table; he turned it up with a shrug which was not altogether affected, and then came Salvarini's turn. The whole room had gathered round the twain, Maxwell calm and collected, Salvarini white and almost fainting. He had to steady one hand with the other, like a man afflicted with paralysis, as he turned over his card. For a moment he leaned back in his chair, the revulsion of feeling almost overpowering him. His card was the seven of clubs.

With a long sweeping throw, the President tossed the last card in Maxwell's direction. No need to look at it. There it lay—the fatal ace of hearts!

They were amazed at the luckless man's utter coolness, as he sat there playing with the card, little understanding as yet his danger; and then, one by one shaking his hand solemnly, they passed out. Maxwell was inclined to make light of this dramatic display, ascribing it to a foreigner's love of the mysterious. He did not understand it to mean a last farewell between Brothers. They had all gone by that time with the exception of Le Gautier and Salvarini, the latter looking at the doomed man sadly, the Frenchman with an evil glitter and a look of subdued triumph in his eyes.

"Highly dramatic, at anyrate," Maxwell observed, turning to Le Gautier, "and vastly entertaining. They seemed to be extremely sorry for me."

"Well, you take the matter coolly enough," the Frenchman smiled. "Any one would think you were used to this sort of thing."

"I should like to have caught some of those expressions, Maxwell replied. "They would make a man's fortune if he could get them on canvas. What do you think of an Academy picture entitled "The Conspirators?"—And now, will you be good enough to explain this little farce to me?"

His cool, contemptuous tones knocked Le Gautier off his balance for a moment, but he quickly recovered his habitual cynicism. "There will be a pendant to that picture, called "The Vengeance;" or, if you like it better, "The Assassination,"" he replied with a sneer. "Surely you do not think I dealt these cards for amusement? No, my friend; a life was at stake there, perhaps two."

"A life at stake? Do you mean that I am to play the part of murderer to a man unknown to me—an innocent man?"

"Murder is not a pleasant word," Le Gautier replied coldly. "We prefer the expression "remove" as being more elegant, and not so calculated to shock the nerves of novices—like yourself. Your perspicacity does you credit, sir. Your arm is the one chosen to strike Visci down."

"Gracious powers!" Maxwell exclaimed, falling back into his chair faint and dizzy.

"I stain my hand with an unoffending man's blood? Never! I would die first. I never dreamt—I never thought—— Salvarini, I did not think you would lead me into this!"

"I warned you," the Italian said mournfully. "As far as I dared, I told you what the consequences would be."

"If you had told me you were a gang of callous, bloodthirsty murderers, I should not have joined you. I, like every Englishman, am the friend of liberty as much as you, but no cowardly dagger-thrust for me. Do your worst, and come what may, I defy you!"

"A truce to these histrionics," Le Gantier exclaimed fiercely; "or we shall hold a Council, and serve you the same. There are your orders. I am your superior. Take them, and obey. Refuse, and"——He stopped, folded his arms, and looked Maxwell full in the face for a moment; then turning abruptly upon his heel, quitted the room without another word.

Maxwell and his friend confronted each other. "And who is this Visci I am to murder?" the artist demanded bitterly.

Salvarini bowed his head lower and lower till his face almost rested upon his breast. "You know him," he said. "He was a good friend of mine once, and his crime is the one you are contemplating now—disobedience to orders. Is it possible you have not guessed the doomed man to be Carlo Visci?"

"Carlo Visci—my friend, my more than brother? I must be mad, mad or dreaming. Lay foul hands upon the best friend man ever had—the noble-hearted fellow whose purse was mine, who taught me all I know, who saved my life; and I to stab him in the dark because, perchance, he refuses to serve a companion the same! Never! May my right hand rot off, before I injure a hair of Carlo Visci's head!"

"Then you will die yourself," Salvarini put in sadly.

"Then I shall die—death comes only once," Maxwell exclsimed proudly, throwing back his head. "No sin like that shall stain my soul!"

For a moment the two men were silent.

Salvarini broke the silence. "Listen, Maxwell," he said. "I am in a measure to blame for this, and I will do what I can to serve you. You must go to Rome, as if you intend to fulfill your task, and wait there till you hear from me. I am running great risks in helping you so, and you must rely on me. One thing is in your favor; time is no particular object. Will you go so far, for your sake and mine?"

"Anything, anywhere!" burst out the Englishman passionately.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

A Memory of Early Days.

Bane of childhood's tender years,
Swallowed oft with groans and tears,
How it made the flesh recoil.
Loathsome, greasy castor oil!
Search your early memory close,
Till you find another dose:
All the shuddering frame revolts
At the thought of Epsom salts!
Underneath the pill-box lid
Was a greater horror hid,
Climax of all inward ills,
Huge and griping old blue pills!

What a contrast to the mild and gentle action of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, sugar-coated, easy to take, cleansing, recuperating, renovating the system without wrenching it with agony. Sold by druggists.

Madras muslin curtains are selling very low on Denning's drapery tables.

$500 Reward

is offered, in good faith, by the manufacturers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy for a case of catarrh which they cannot cure. It is mild, soothing and healing in its effacts, and cures, "cold in the head," catarrhal deafness, throat ailments, and many other complications of this distressing disease. 50 cents, by druggists.

All the draperies of an elderly woman's dress should be full, and any appearance of scantiness of material must be studiously avoided.

The Correct Time.

There are very few men who do not pride themselves on always having the correct me; and wonderful and delicate mechanisms are devised to enable them to do so. But the more delicate a chronometeris made, the more subject it becomes to derangement, and unless it be kept always perfectly clean, it soon looses its usefulness. What wonder, then, that the human machine—so much more delicate and intricate than any work of Man—should require to be kept thoroughly cleansed. The liver is the main-spring of this complex structure, and on the impurities left in the blood by a disordered liver, depend most of the ills that flesh is heir to. Even consumption (which is lung-scrofula); is traceable to the imperfect action of this organ. Kidney diseases, skin diseases, sick headache, heart disease, dropsy and a long catalogue of grave maladies have their origin in a torpid, or sluggish liver. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, by establishing a healthy, normal action of the liver, acts as a cure and preventive of those diseases.

Plain and barred zephyrs are admirably combined in summer frocks.

A CURE FOR DRUNKENNESS,

opium, morphine, chloral, tobacco, and kindred habits. The medicine may be given in tea or coffee without the knowledge of the person taking it, if so desired. Send 6c. in stamps for book and testimonials from those who have been cured. Address M. V. Lubon, 47 Wellington St. East, Toronto, Ont. Cut this out for future reference. When writing mention this paper.

Brakeman—But don't you think that a dollar and a half a day is rather small pay for eighteen hours, work on the top of a freight car? Superintendent—But you forget that we charge no' ing for traveling. Let's see; you ride some ng like 200 miles daily and it doesn't cost you a cent.

Whenever your Stomach or Bowels get out of order, causing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, and their attendant evils, take at once a dose of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Best family medicine. All Druggists, 50 cents.

THE ASSESSMENT SYSTEM.

Large Insurance Claim Paid—Endorsement of the Mutual Reserve.

Office of W. D. Matthews & Co.,
Grain and Produce Merchants,
Toronto, 11th May, 1887.

J. D. Wells, Esq., General Manager Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association:

Dear Sir—We beg to acknowledge receipt of cheque for Five Thousand Dollars in full of claim under a policy of insurance issued to us by the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association for that amount, as creditors of the late Edwin C. Fisher.

We have much pleasure in bearing testimony to the prompt and satisfactory manner in which this claim has been adjusted, and at the same time to express our confidence in your association. Having an intimate acquaintance with your President and chief officers, we know them to be gentlemen of the highest integrity, and in whose hands we believe the interests of the members of the Mutual Reserve are perfectly safe.

Wishing your association continued success.

Yours truly.
W. D. Matthews & Co.

Editor (to new reporter)—"It is evident from the item that you have had very little experience in newspaper work." Reporter—"What does it say? "You speak of heavy weights' in the coal business—something absolutely unknown."

YOUNG MEN suffering from the effects of early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted; also Middle-aged and Old Men who are broken down from the effects of abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and read M. V. Lubon's Treatise on Diseases of Men. The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. E. Toronto, Ont.

Place the cover over the sugar,
Lay the syrup gently by;
Keep your hats on, oh, ye bald heads,
Soon will come the festive fly.

People who are subject to bad breath, foul coated tongue, or any disorder of the Stomach, can at once be relieved by using Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, the old and tried remedy. Ask your Druggist.

A little jet is necessary in every dressy black toilet that is not mourning.

Read our advertising columns carefully, and when you come to the advertisement of McColl Bros. & Co. read it twice, and then send for a barrel of their lardine if you use machine oil.

The fashionable woods for finishing and furnishing are mahogany, California red, wood, and antique oak.

LADIES

Who are Weak, Nervous and Exhausted; who feel themselves losing strength; who are pale, delicate and sickly in appearance, suffering from the many complaints peculiar to women—send for and read M. V. LUBON'S Treatise in book form on the Diseases of Women. Mailed sealed and secure from observation on receipt of 6c in stamps, unsealed free. Address, M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. East, Toronto, Ont.

Pleasure seekers en route to Montreal—"Look here, my friend, four dollars is a little steep." Coachman—"You ain't payin' it out of yer own money, are ye?"

Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness and Hay Fever.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are cured in from one to three simple applications made at home. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent free on receipt of stamp by A. H. Dixon & Son, 308 King Street West Toronto Canada.

A. P. 335.

GOOD LIVE AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY County in Canada. Address, FERRIS & CO., 57 Church St., Toronto.

AGENTS AND CANVASSERS wanted, Male or Female, whole or spare time, on salary or commission. Industrial Union of B.N.A., 45 Arcade, Toronto.

A NEW EMERY MOWER SHARPENER—Will sharpen the knife without taking it out. Every farmer will buy it. AGENTS WANTED. CLEMENT & CO. TORONTO.

TORONTO CUTTING SCHOOL.—Gentlemen desirous of acquiring a thorough knowledge of garment cutting should apply at once to S. Corrigan, 122 Yonge St., Toronto. Terms on application.

PATENTS PROCURED in Canada, the U S. and all foreign countries. Engineers, Patent Attorneys, and experts in Patent Causes. Established 1867. Donald C. Ridout & Co., Toronto.

TEACHERS and Students, Attention! Special classes during summer holidays, in Shorthand, Typewriting, Book-keeping, Penmanship, etc. Write for full particulars. Canadian Business University and Shorthand Institute, Public Library Building, Toronto.
THOS. BENGOUGH, President.
CHARLES H. BROOKS, Manager.

GUELPH Business College, Guelph, Ont.

Twelve States and Provinces already represented on the roll of this Institution. To thorough, practical instruction, and the efficiency and success of its graduates, this College owes its popularity. Circulars, giving terms, etc, mailed free. Address
H. MacCORMICK, Principal.

MEAT CHOPPERS. Washing Machines, 2 kinds; Clothes Wringers, 10 kinds; Mangles, 3 kinds. Churns, Carpet Sweepers, and other sundries.
Hamilton Industrial Works Co., Hamilton, Canada.
Send for article wanted, or Illustrated Catalogue.

ASSESSMENT SYSTEM.

The Mutual Reserve Fund LIFE ASSOCIATION

The largest and most prosperous open Assessment Association in the world—desires active representatives in every section of Canada; liberal inducements. It has full Government Deposit, and under the supervision of Insurance Department at Ottawa.
Correspondence solicited. Address,
J. D. WELLS,
General Manager,
65 King Street East, Toronto.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships.

Sailing during winter from Port and every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via Halifax and St. John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal, weekly, Glasgow and Boston weekly; and Glasgow and Philadelphia, fortnightly
For Freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; H. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's N. F., Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans Rae & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; H. A. Allan Portland Boston Montreal

Legal.

P. McCullough.
BARRISTER, SOLICITOR, &c.
OFFICE—OVER McFARLAND'S STORE,
MARKDALE.
Money to Loan.

MASSON & MASSON,
BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, &c.
OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block, Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week.
J. MASSON, Q. C. S. MASSON. W. MASSON.
N. B.—Private and Company's funds to invest at from 6 to 8 per cent

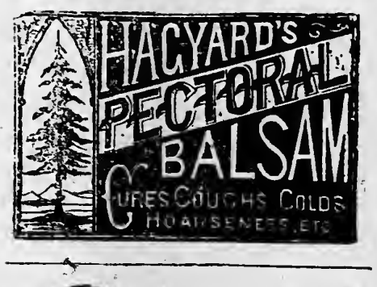
Wm. Brown,
ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.
Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.
N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate se curitv.

WILLIAM STUART,
KIMBERLEY,
Issues of Marriage Licences. Money to Loan on Real Estate at low rates.
A few Farms for sale. Terms easy.

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.
DENTIST,
GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at the Markdale House, Markdale, on the 1st and third Wednesday of each month and also at Munshaw's Hotel, Flesherton, the day following the third Wednesday in each month for the prac tice of his profession.

MARKDALE HOUSE,
MARKDALE, - - ONT.
J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

ISAAC STINSON.
Builder and Contractor
In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.
Estimates given. All work guaranteed.
Orders by mail promptly attended to.
329 Residence, MARKDALE.



W. C. RICHARDS,
BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT. Markdale.
1241y

WEAVING.
Having returned to Markdale, in order to be more convenient for my customers, I beg to announce that I am now prepared to do all kinds of Custom Weaving. Residence old stand, opposite Presbyterian Church.
318 ARCH. BOYD.

R. J. SPROULE,
FLESHERTON.
Conveyancer, Appraiser, Valuator and Money Lender. Deeds, Mortgages, Leases and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice. Charges very low. Apply to
R. J. SPROULE,
Money Lender & Postmaster. Flesherton.

6 PER CENT.
Money loaned on Farm or Town Property at lowest rates of interest. Apply to
R. J. SPROULE,
Conveyancer & Postmaster. Flesherton.

FARM FOR SALE.
LOT 131 con 3 west of T. & S, Rd. Artemesia. 50 acres, about 20 acres clear of stumps and stones, balance good hardwood bush Five miles from Markdale and four from Flesherton. For further particulars apply to A. S. Thompson, Flesherton P. O. or J. J. Thompson, Orilla.
342 ft

HAVE YOU
Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Jaundice, Headache, Dizziness, Pain in the Back, Costiveness, or any disease arising from a deranged liver, DR. CHASE'S LIVER CURE will be found a sure and certain remedy.
NATURE'S REMEDY
The unqualified success of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure in Liver Complaint rests solely with the fact that it is compounded from nature's well-known liver regulators, MANDRAKE AND DANDELION, combined with many other invaluable roots, barks and herbs, having a powerful effect on the Kidneys, Stomach, Bowels and Blood.
500,000 SOLD
Over one-half million of Dr. Chase's Recipe Books were sold in Canada alone. We want every man, woman and child who is troubled with Liver Complaint to try this excellent remedy.
SOMETHING NEW. GIVEN AWAY FREE
Wrapped around every bottle of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure is a valuable Household Medical Guide and Recipe Book (84 pages), containing over 800 useful recipes pronounced by medical men and druggists as invaluable, and worth ten times the price of the medicine.
TRY CHASE'S CATARRH CURE. A safe and positive remedy. Price, 25 cents.
TRY CHASE'S KIDNEY AND LIVER PILLS. 25 cts. per box.
SOLD BY ALL DEALERS
E. GIBSAMMON & CO., Sole Agents, Brantford

Markdale Roller Mill.

FARMERS HAVING No. 1 WHEAT and preferring flour from their own wheat, can get it by bringing twenty bushels or more.

Flour always on Hand

Flour $3.80 to $4.20 per. bbl.

SHORTS, per ton - $12.00
BRAN, " - 12.00

The highest market price paid for Fall and Spring wheat.

J. W. FORD.

Public Notice.

To all whom it may con cern.

I R. L. Stephen the Druggist of Markdale have been appointed agent for JOHNSON'S celebrated Tonic and nervine. JOHNSON'S little liver Pills, and JOHNSON'S all healing White Ointment. The nervine is the very best in the market, in all diseases caused by poverty of blood, for Nervousness, Hysteria, and the PALENESS of Complexion so often noticed in female's, loss of appetite and general debility. In conjunction w th the Liver Pills, it is the very best for all diseases arrising from To pid liver or bad stomach
The White Oin ment is the very best in the market for Salt Rheume, Barbers Itch, Pimples, Chafs, Burns, Scalds, and all Skin dise ases of a scrofulous nature. Try these fine rem edies and yon will not be disappointed.
For sale at R. L. STEPHENS the druggist, Mar kdale, Ont.

WM. G. GUTHRIE,
Plain & Ornamental Plasterer
MARKDALE.
Arches, Cornices, Centre Flowers, and all kinds of plain and ornamental plastering executed at cheapest rates. Calsomining Lime Washing and Repairs promptly attended to.
330

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.
The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of
School Furniture.
Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness, wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.
181 ANDREW McGILL.

MONEY TO LOAN.
ON real estate security, at low rate of interest, no commission charged. Business Strictly Confidential,
J. S. BLACK,
190 Pomona, P, O.

FARM FOR SALE.
LOT No. 24, con. 4, N. D. R. Glenelg, 100 acres, will be sold cheap and on easy terms of payment, for further particulars apply on the premises, or by letter to
J. S. BLACK,
190-tf. Pomona P. O.

Markdale Woolen Mill.
Custom Carding, Weaving, Fulling, Dyeing and cloth dressing, done in a workmanlike manner and on very short notice.

First Class Cotton Warp
supplied at the lowest possible rates.
A call solicited.
Terms strictly cash or wool.
Sept. 28, 1886 F. J. RITCHIE.

IT IS A WELL KNOWN FACT
—THAT—
McCOLL'S
"LARDINE,"
is the best known, and most reliable MACHINE OIL in the Dominion; Farmer's, Thresher's and Mill Owner's, will find it decidedly to their advantage to insist upon getting the "Genuine Lardine" when they ask for it, owing to so much inferior oil being sold under the same name by unscrupulous dealers. We are the sold manufacturers of the "Genuine Lardine" every barrel branded.
McCOLL BRO'S, & CO.
For sale in Markdale at Haskett Bro's Hardware Store. 847-73

WANTED!
Clean Timothy Seed,
—HIGHEST—
Market Price Paid.
H. PARKER,
DURHAM.

The Markdale Standard

Is issued every Thursday, by
C. W. RUTLEDGE, Markdale, Ont.,

TERMS—$1 per year in advance; $1.50 if not paid within six months.
Professional and business cards one inch space and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3 MO.
Whole column	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
Half column	27 00	15 00	10 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00	6 00
Two inch space	7 00	4 00
Three inch space	10 00	5 00

Casual advertisements 8 cents per line first insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.
Editorial notices, or notices in local column 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents each subsequent insertion.
Stray animals &c, advertised 3 weeks for $1
No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid except at the option of the publisher.

JOB PRINTING.
THE STANDARD office has a splendid equipment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. All orders filled with dispatch.

Directory.

MARKDALE VILLAGE OFFICIALS.
Police Trustees—E. Davis, A. Turner, ond S. J. Coleman.
Public School Trustees—B. Coleman, J. Lyons, W. A. Brown. B. Coleman, Sec.

COUNTY OFFICIALS.
Judge, H. McPherson, Owen Sound.
Deputy-Judge, S. J. Lane, Owen Sound.
Sheriff, C. H. Moore, Owen Sound.
Clerk of Peace. W. Armstrong, O. Sound.
Clerk, John Gale. Owen Sound.
Treasurer, S. J. Parker, Owen Sound.
County Warden, N, Reid, Owen Sound
Registrar, N., R. McKnight, "
" S., Thos. Lauder, Durham.
Revising Barrister, North, Judge McPherson. Owen Sound.
Revising Barrister, South & East, Judge Lane, Owen Sound.
M. P., North, Jas. Masson, Owen Sound.
M. P., East, T. S. Sproule, M.D., Markdale
M. P., South, Geo Landerkin, M. D., Hanover.
M. P. P., North, D. Creighton, Owen Sound
M. P. P., East, Capt. Rorke, Clarksburg
M. P. P., South, John Blyth, Orchard.

DIVISION COURT CLERKS
No. 1. John Stephens, Owen Sound.
" 2. David Jackson, Durham.
" 3. Thos. Plunkett, Meaford.
" 4. Thos. J. Rorke, Heathcote.
" 5. J. W. Armstrong, Flesherton.
" 6. John McDonald, Chatsworth.

Post-Office Directory.

MARKDALE.
The P. O. will be opened from 8 o'clock a. m. to 7 p. m. every working day.
Mails closed as follows, viz:
C. P. R., going North, 11:40 a m, and 7 p m
" " South, 3:30 p m, and 7 p m

TRAVERSTON.
Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday 12:30 noon.

HARKAWAY.
Friday, 12:30 noon.

For registered letters and money orders, fifteen minutes earlier than above. The P. O. will be open on Holidays from 9 to 9:30 a. m., and half an hour after mails arrive.
W. J. McFARLAND, P. M.

Society Directory.

Markdale C. O. O. F. No. 78, meets every alternate Monday evening at 8 o'clock in their Hall, Rae's block. Visiting brethren welcome.
Markdale A. O. U. W. No. 141 meets in their Hall, Rae's block, every alternate Monday evening at o'clock. A visit from brethren of neighboring lodges solicited.
MARKDALE L. O. L. No. 1045 meets in their Hall on Friday on or before full moon each month. Thos. Elliott, Master; W. J. Blakely, Secretary.
Victoria R. B. Preceptory, No. 282, Meets in Lodge Room of Markdale L. O. L. No. 1045, first Friday in each month. Visiting Sir Knights always welcome. Jas. Brodie W. P.; Thos. Elliott, Registrar.

Markdale Church Directory.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.
Services every Sabbath at 10:30 a. m. Sabbath School at 2:30 p. m. Prayer Meeting every Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. Rev. A. Wilson, Pastor; A. McFarland, S. S. Superintendent.

CHRIST CHURCH.
Services every Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p m. Rev. Jas. Ward, Incumbent. Sabbath School 2:30. W. J. Ford, Superintendent.

METHODIST CHURCH.
Services every Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday School at 2:30. Prayer Meeting every Thursday evening from 8 to 9, Rev. Geo. H. Cornish, Pastor; G. S. Bowes. S. S. Superintendent. Ladies' Aid in connection; Mrs. T. Hill, Secretary.

Monthly Fairs.

Orangeville—The second Thursday in each month.
Dundalk—Tuesday before Orangeville.
Flesherton—Monday before Orangeville.
Markdale—Saturday before Orangeville.
Durham—Third Tuesday in each month.
Chatsworth—Monday before Durham.
Holland Centre—Saturday before Chatsworth
Priceville—Monday before Durham.
Hanover—Monday before Durham.

To the Members of Centre Grey Farmers' Institute.

GENTLEMEN.—On reading the Kimberely correspondence in the Markdale STANDARD of last week, I find some statements made with a vengeance against myself for voting against a resolution seconded by D. R. Ellis at a meeting of the Provincial Farmers' Institute held in the city of Toronto on the 28th of April last, and for this great sin I am to suffer at the hands of the correspondent. Now I do not purpose loosing time contradicting any of the above statements, but shall give you the motion as it reads, and my reason for opposing it, It was moved in an amendment to a motion which appears in the Mail of the 28th of April, moved by Mr. Hunter seconded by D. R. Ellis, that in the opinion of this Institute a removal of all restrictions on trade between the Dominon of Canada and the United States is desirable either by reciprocity or otherwise as may be agreed upon by the Government of the respective countries and that the officers of the executive committee of this Institute are hereby authorized to take such action on the premises as shall best promote the object of this resolution.

My first objection to this resolution was, that it never had been discussed at any of our Institute meetings therefore I was not prepared to state what you desired regarding the above resolution; Second, I was of the opinion then and still entertain the opinion that the action taken regarding reciprocity and the publicity given to such action throughout the Dominion (and United States) will have a tendancy to thwart a speedy and satisfactory settlement of this very important matter, as the Americans will take advantage of the strong desire expressed in the above resolution as representing the feelings entertained by the agriculturists of this country, therefore this hasty action is only playing into the hands of the Americans and will no doubt cause them to ask for better terms while it is weakening the hands of the Government of Canada to accomplish what they desire to do.

Now supposing the object of Mr. Hunter's resolution was attained it means free trade betweed Canada and United States to all intents and purposes, then how is the revenue to be raised to meet the liabilities of the Dominion while there are these ways only by which it could be raised, first on the rateable property of the Dominion; we think surely this would be objectionable to the farmers especially in Ontario under the present assessment law as amended during the last session of the Local Legislature; secondly by Levying an inland revenue tax on all or whatever part of the articles consumed the Government thought proper to levy. Will you agree to this? we think not. Thirdly by placing a high tariff on all foreign goods almost to the utter exclusion of all commercial intercourse with Great Britain; Do you think gentlemen this country is prepared to do such a thing, as true Britons you will most assuredly say, no we cannot afford to do anything that will cause the old flag of England to desert our shores.

But by the by I wish to remind you further, Mr. Cochran's amendment to the amendment, provides that in case the Government of the Dominion fail to accomplish the end in view, as cited in the amendment, then as a last resort they are to ask the Government of Great Britain to enter into a commercial union with her colonies in regard to food supplies and to impose a protective tariff against all foreign countries; Now I hold this is as much to say that the Government of the Dominion shall make a treaty with United States almost to the exclusion of British trade from our shores, failing to do so, they are to call upon Great Britain to do as above set forth; this I consider would be slighting Great Britain and thus humiliating to the Dominion Government. Under the circumstances I hope to be excused for allowing my British blood to get warm.

Now gentlemen I wish it to be perfectly understood that I am in favor of fair and honorable reciprocity between Canada and the United States such as would not sever our commercial interests with other nations, but there has been too much haste in this matter and too much American dictation with all due respect to our American friends, for I have no prejuice but sincerely hope that the Government of the Dominion will be able to make an honorable and satisfactory settlement with them, but I believe there is a better way of doing so than that proposed,

Supposing our friends across the border are disposed to act fairly with us (and if not it is better to leave them alone) surely a bargain can with them that will be a to both countries. It is they are very anxious about eries and so well they might, little property worth to the about ($7,000,000,) seven dollars annually, well now allow the produce of the forests, mines and fish of the of Canada to go into the the United States without and Canada in return allow purchase bait provision free use of the vast waters on the Dominion of Canada should this not satisfy both then leave the matter with if he cannot do something cannot; More when I meet you.

Yours respectfully,
Thos.
Pres. Centre Grey

Prize List 24th May MARKDALE SPORTS.

100 yard Race (Professionals) H. Newen, 2nd George Butson.
100 yard Race (Amateurs) Hamilton, 2nd H. Hobbs, Butson.
200 yard Race 1st Jno. Wallace Geo. Butson.
¼ mile Race 1st Jno. Wallace, Hamilton, 3rd R. Sproule.
½ mile Race 1st Jno. Elliott Jos. Vick.
Boys' Race (under 10) 1st Bride, 2nd George Dundas.
Boys' Race under 15 1st B. A 2nd Frank Mitchell, 3rd Angus Egg Race 1st Jno. Totten, 2nd Hutton.
Hurdle Race 1st Wm. L. Young Silas Hill.
Standing Jump 1st C. McArthur Robert Sproule.
Running Hop Step and Jump Silas Hill, 2nd Robert Sproule Jas. Miller.
Three Standing Jumps 1st C Arthur, 2nd R. Sproule.
Running Jump 1st Wm. Lyon Frank Porter.
Vaulting with Pole 1st H. Mer Rudd Mathews, 3rd Ben. Carter.
Putting 14 lbs. Shot 1st J. C 2nd N. Cameron.
Putting 12 lbs. Shot 1st N. C 2nd J. Cameron.
Base Ball Match won by Owen Team.
Foot Ball Match won by Team.
Calithumpians 1st Dan. McF and John Bryden, 2nd Ben. Carter Johnny Shay, 4th Jack Boyd.
Climbing Greasy Pole—John Catching Greasy Pig—Angus
Ladies' Race 1st Miss Charlton Hattie Crawford.
Three legged Race 1st Patrick & John Dundas, 2nd Angus Billy Trotter.

The Books have been audited Show a Ballance in the hands the Treasurer, Wm. Haskett, of Any person wishing to see the can do so by calling on the W. J. Benson.

Traverston.

The crops in this vicinity are remarkably promising. Fall wh be a full average yield should season continue favorable. grain of every variety is making progress, while the meadows an abundant yield. Fruit pro be an average crop.

The Grist and Saw Mill's of Bliss are doing a steady bu There is an immense stock of on hand, and several hundred logs in the yard.

Mrs. Delaney continues to a flourshing store trade, which result of fair dealing and mod prices. Her premises have much improved in appearence way of fruit trees adornment fencing; while the tasteful labor pended by Mr. Hunt on the o corner has relieved the corners dingy, sombre aspect it pre a few years ago.

Mr. J. Elder keeps the ringing with the sound of his from early morn till dewy eve yet can't get ahead of his work.

This is an excellent opening good Shoe-maker, as well as this being the centre of a fertile and prosperous sectio country.

Mr. Bliss has had a very fine constructed by your townsman, T. McNea, and the boys are engaged clearing the river of good preparatory to practice the of the oars. We want to kee Amateurs in the "Shade," until have a little practice, and then wive a challenge to Hanlan.

GLEANER.

May 26th, 1887.

Markdale Standard

"HEW TO THE LINE, LET THE CHIPS FALL WHERE THEY MAY."

SEVENTH YEAR.—No. 353. MARKDALE, ONT., JUNE 9, 1887. C. W. RUTLEDGE, Proprietor.

Local and Other Items.

NOTICES in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

NOTICE.—Correspondence, communications, Advertisements, &c., must be in this office by noon on Tuesday to insure publication that week.

—: AT :—

RUSSELL'S

—NOTED JEWELERY STORE,—

FLESHERTON,

will be found the most complete stock of Watches, Clocks, Jewelery, Silverware, Spex, &c., in this part of the country.

Call and see those watches they are selling at $12.00 bearing warrants for three and a half years, while other dealers are asking $15.00 for the same article. P. S. Bartlett, 3 oz. in silver case for $16.00 while they are selling elsewhere for $17.50. Other dealers cannot compete with us and they know it. We cannot help them being annoyed at our terrible low prices; we must give the public the benefit of our close buying.

Just Note a few prices.

A fine Nickle Alarm Clock for actually only $2.00 bearing a warrant for two years. Your choice of over 20 fine plated chains for only $1.60; Just think of it. Fine walnut clocks from $2.35 upward. Brooches, Ear-Rings, Ladies' Chains, Cuff-Buttons, Scarf-Pins, at equally low prices.

Remember if you want your Watch or Clock repaired properly by a workman, Russell's is the only place.

All orders by mail promptly attended to at

RUSSELL'S Noted Jewelry Store,
FLESHERTON.

A stubborn fact—Sarjeants mule.

THURSDAY the 30th June will be Division Court day at Flesherton.

THE Standard will be sent any address the balance of 1887 for 50 cents cash.

THE County Council meets on the 30th June.

MR. THOMPSON, of Port Perry, visited friends in Euphrasia this week.

MISS MARY IRVING, of Manitowaning, is visiting friends in this part.

MRS. W. J. MCFARLAND is visiting friends in Toronto.

MISS LAURA RORKE is on a visit to Toronto and Aurora.

A party of Owen Sounder's Pic-nicked at Bell's Lake on Tuesday last.

A number of fine frame barns are being erected in the vicinity of Markdale this season.

J. M. REYNOLDS, arrived from Gravenhurst last week, and left on Tuesday to fill a situation in Meaford.

FINED.—Mrs. Caswell was last week fined $150, and $19.65 costs for breaking the liquor license law.

W. H. FLESHER of the Flesherton Woolen Mills has something interesting to farmers in this paper; look it up.

MASTER ROBT. DINSMORE left for Toronto on Tuesday last to take a situation in a sash and door factory.

TRUTH gives the most thoroughly independent and common sense editorials of any journal we have the opportunity of perusing.

DR. SPROULE'S expenses in the recent contest for the representation of East Grey in the House of Commons amounted to $225. 70.

A thriving business will be done by implement agents in the sale of binders should the present prospect of an abundant harvest continue.

A very enjoyable moonlight excursion took place Monday night on 'Bell's Lake' per Moffat's steam yacht by a company of Markdale young people.

LOST.—On Monday last, between F. Burton's and Harkaway, a bag of flour and a bag of bran. The finder will please leave word at Harkaway, or this office, and be suitably rewarded; Mathew Patton, Jr., Harkaway.

HERE is a good word for the women: An English statistician has discovered that married men live longer and live better lives than batchelors. Among every 1,000 there are 39 criminals; among married men the ratio is only 18 per. 1,000.

THE various "Farmers' Institutes" throughout the province are holding meetings to discuss the Commercial Union question, and the discussions arrived at so far as we have seen reported are favorable.

MR. W. T. JACKMAN is, we are pleased to say, able to take a drive every fine day, and is improving in health and strength very nicely. We hope to see him e'er long able to resume active duties.

M. & W. ARMSTRONG have been running their cheese box factory night and day in order to keep up with the demand for boxes. They turn out a very superior article.

THOS. WILLISCROFT of Holland Centre is to the fore with harvesting implements of the most approved make, and we bespeak for him an extensive business. Read his adv. in this issue.

WORTH GETTING.—The Jubilee issue of Grip's Own Library will be issued next week. It will be a book of 32 pages, with pictures on nearly every page. Every picture to appear is either original or is being specially re-produced for this issue, and there will be a great demand for it. It will be for sale at all bookstores, or can be had by sending 10 cents direct to Grip Office, Toronto.

ARCHBISHOP LYNCH has issued an order requesting the clergy to inform their congregations that no more dispensations for mixed marriages will be granted when the woman is a non-catholic. The reason given for this is that in such cases the woman cannot be depended on to bring up their children in the Catholic faith.

THE Flesherton Advance is six years old and enters upon its seventh "sonnd in wind and limb" and with hopeful prospects for success and usefulness in future. We view with pleasure the progress made from year to year by Mr. Fawcett in the Advance, and wish him continued prosperity.

J. P. MARSHALL, Dentist, has changed his arrangements for visiting Markdale and will in future be at the Markdale House on Thursday and Friday following the first Monday in each month, and at Flesherton the following day, consequently his next visit will be the 7th and 8th of July and at Flesherton the 9th.

WE regret to learn, that W. J. Shepherdson's fine imported Clydesdale Stallion "Galloway Laird" died two weeks ago from inflamation of the bowels.

DR. SPROULE gives notice of a motion praying that the Governor-General recognize the jubilee year by extending the clemency of the Crown to criminals now incarcerated in the penitentiaries of the country under the following conditions:—(1) Life sentences to be commuted to a reasonable term of years; (2) that all those who have served ten years be set at liberty; (3) that all convicts with a record of good conduct since their incarceration be allowed a remission of ten days for every month's imprisonment since the 1st January, 1887; the whole, as the Doctor politically puts it, in order that this may be a year of rejoicing to those poor unfortunates confined in living tombs.

REMEMBER the meeting of Centre Grey Farmers' Institute at Rocklyn tomorrow (Friday 10th) at 1 o'clock. A large attendance is desired, and will doubtless be in attendance. There is an intimation in some papers that this discussion on Commercial Union may lead to Annexation to the United States. Of course there is no reason why it should yet it is well tolget posted, and then take an unbiased view which will result in an intelligent decision.

THE UNINERSALLY ROBBED—The following bit of condensed wisdom is from the New York Sun:—If country newspaper proprietors were to publish the names of the subscribers who take, read, enjoy and are gratified by, yet refuse to pay for their home papers the reputation of the most communities for moral honesty would depreciate 20 per cent. An editor's labors are seldom esteemed or compensated. A lawyer will give you five minutes' advice on a topic and charge you $5 for it. An editor will give advice on a hundred topics and chrage you five cents a copy for his paper. And very often 5 cents given to an editor would save $5 given to a lawyer. In fact no other business men are so universally robbed and swindled out of their labor and capital as the country newspaper publisher.

The first thing that strangers note in coming into a town is the condition of the streets. If they are straight, clean and have good walks, the stranger is favorably impressed. If the yards that line the streets are neat and well kept, though they may not be expensively decorated, the impression of the thrift of the people and the beauty of the town helps him to decide the question and say, "I will settle down in this town." The officials of the town have their work to do in ordering the streets kept neat and clean and the sidewalk kept in repair. The citizens have their part to do in keeping their door yards clear. Every person has a work to to in making the town presentable, and they should not fail in their duty. This is the way to attract strangers to our midst, and make citizens of them, We wonder if all of our citizens think of this.

SPELLIN.—The editor of the Thornbury News now admits that we were correct in spelling Calcimine, but says he prefers spelling it Kalsomine, which is also proper: He however asks us if Sault is spelled "Soo" in Webster? We think not. "Soo" is not correct but is used especially in American papers and will, we believe, come into general use. In reference to this criticism we feel like encourageing it in a friendly spirit with a view to improvement, there are many words in the English Language that are spelled differently to what they once were, or rather, a shorter way of spelling has become proper and have been introduced into the Standard dictionaries,, and a friendly criticism may be profitable to the publisher as well as our subrcribers. For instance "cheque"—an order for money—is now proper by leaving out "que" and adding "ck" thus "check," also "draught"—an order for money, or "heavy draught" is properly spelled "draft". We may in future give a list of words which have been "corrupted" by being shortened and simplified—and in our humble opinion there is great room yet for improvement in this line.

ASTONISHING SUCCESS.

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive, at least to try one bottle, as 80,000 dozen bottles were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your druggists about it. Sample bottles to try, sold at 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers. in the United States and Canada.

BUSINESS LOCALS.

MOWERS! mowers! for $50 cash at Jackson's. Easy terms to good men.

BUILDING hardware good and cheap at Mabee's.

All kinds of fruit and ice-cream at Mrs Clement's.

GET your door nobs, locks and bells at Mabee's hardware.

Croquet Sets selling very cheap at Mrs. Clement's.

TURNIP SEED! TURNIP SEED! At Stephen's Drug Store.

DOOR nobs in bronze, gilt, nickle and jet, at Mabee's hardware.

WM. WATCHORN has a kiln of first class lime fresh burned and for sale.

Fishing Tackle all kinds at the Medical Hall, A. Turner, & Co.

Mrs. Clement's is the place for candies and sweetmeats.

FISHING Tackle in great variety at the Markdale Book Store, A. Dinsmore.

PLOW POINTS.—All the standard makes and patterns for sale at Moffat's foundry, three for $1.00 cash.

A fresh stock of meal's have just been opened at Davis' which will be sold at a very small advance on cost as he will not be undersold.

REMEMBER you can get Bran, Shorts Henfeed the same price at Bensons, as at the mill, it saves you half an honr trouble, give us a call.

R. MCNALLY is turning out excellent work in wagons and carriages of different kinds.

A number of good second hand Buggies for sale cheap. Also a good Sulkey at W. Mason's Carriage Works, Markdale.

HANDSOME window curtain poles with gold nobs, from 60 cents up at Mabee's hardware.

W. MCLEOD, Shoemaker, left on Wednesday for a trip up the lakes, with an eye to business.

FOR SALE.—W. & J. Anderson of Orange Valley has a good heavy four-year-old horse for sale.

A choice assortment of linen window blinds and American wall paper borders at Markdale Book Store, A. Dinsmore.

Rejuvenator is a safe and reliable Bitters, in all seasons of the year. Sold by Smith the Barber.

1,000,000 dcz., of eggs and 2 tons of butter wanted ot Davis' for which the highest market price will be paid.

JUST received a nice lot of dress goods which will be sold for 15c., worth 25c., at S. Hill.

LARGE quantity of wool, eggs and butter wanted for which highest price will be paid, S. Hill.

Go to the Markdale Book Store for Base Balls and Bats, Lacrosse sticks and Balls, Croquet sets per 80c. A. Dinsmore.

Turnip Seeds Fresh pure and true to name at the Medical Hall. A. Turner and Co.

PUBLIC VERDICT."—"That for satisfactory watch work, and reliable watches etc.," the place to go is W. A. Brown's finely stocked Jewellry store, Markdale.

HEAD QUARTERS for Buggie Tops, Milk Waggon Springs, or anything in the Carriage line is at Wm. Mason's carriage works.

FRESH Millenery received weekly. Ladies don't fail to see this department. Latest novelties always in stock, Miss Love is noted for stylish millinery, S. Hill.

MARKDALE MARKETS.—Fall wheat 80 to 82 cents; spring wheat 80 to 82; barley 30 to 50; peas 48; oats 28; butter 12 to 12; eggs 10; potatoes 75 per bag; pork 5.40; hides 5.50; wool 20.

"Notice" to Farmers. Those that have to buy their "Flour" this summer. Can buy it at Benson's, the Belfast House, the same price as at the mill, and every lb. guaranteed, both Ford's and Plewes' kept on hand. Liberal inducements made on over one barrel lots.

CASH buyers will find meat at Sarjeant Bro's meat market as cheap as in any other market in Canada. Prime Bacon, Hams and other smoked and dried meats, as well as all kinds of fresh meats in season.

R. MCNALLY has a number of fine Buggies and Carriages completed, and those who contemplate purchasing should call and examine before closing a bargain elsewhere.

Davis has constantly on hand a full supply of Ford's and Plewes' flour of the finest quality, if it is not right bring it back and your money will be refunded. Special reduction will be given for large lots.

DR. JUG'S Medicine should be used by every one at this season of the year, as it is the best blood purifier in the market and will reinvigorate the frame and prepare it to bear the heats of summer. The pills are justly called the "Little Gems" as they operate without causing either griping or pain and are a sure cure for nervousness, biliousness and other affections of the Liver and Kidneys. Buy them and try them and you won't regret your investment. Sold by Turner & Co., Markdale.

As the season is now opened for the sale of Bacon. Benson of the Belfast house is to the fore with a few cases remember he will not be undersold by any one in the trade and if there is a cut to be given they are the boys that will give it to you, they are dacent little chaps.

Davis is to the front, with a new brand of oat meal, the steel cut, try it once and you will use no other, also a fine brand of Corn Meal, just to hand, in fact anything in the Provision line may be procured at Davis', at prices which cannot be beaten, and if the trade mean to cut prices, he aint like a fellow that an't stay with them.

I have a few chests of that notorious uncolored japan tea left which I have sold at 30c. per lb and it has been pronounced by those who have used it to be better value than any Tea sold in town for the money—probably you ask why we can sell cheaper than those in trade? the answer is simply because we are satisfied with half the profit. W. L. Davis.

DON'T fail to call at Wm. Mason's Carriage Works and see the style and quality of the rig's he builds; he is making a specialty of the Buffalo Road gear the most stylish and durable Buggie built, and prices as low as any one in the country.

Rejuvenator Bitters assists nature and removes the cause of disease from the system, by keeping the kidneys, liver, stomach and blood pure, and natures channels free, then you have health. Sold by Smith the Barber.

FARMERS!
WOOLEN FACTORY
W. H. FLESHER,
Flesherton, May 30th, 1887.

The Battle of the Windmill.

BY A. R. CARMAN, B. A., PRESCOTT.

Many would deem it undue flattery, and some, perhaps, as rank treason to style William Lyon Mackenzie the Tall, the Washington of Canada. Heirs of the old family compact, whether at law, or by prejudice, can see nothing in him but the red-eyed firebrand, who took up arms against the viceroyalty; and even his warmest champions do a great deal of pedantic hair-splitting over the exact time when he changed from the bold patriot they admire in the Legislature to the black-hearted rebel on Gallow's Hill, whom they are in duty bound to execrate. Some, feeling a debt to reason, make this retrograde conversion a gradual thing; while others, dominated by, perhaps, a higher reason, moved to admire the man to the last possible moment, write down the change as instantaneous—a dark copy of the old Methodistic conversion for the better. Dr. Faustus, on whom His Satanic Majesty foreclosed a mortgage, did not become more suddenly diabolical. However this may be, Mackenzie found Canadians oppressed as peasants in a conquered province, ruled by a Governor who was too often chosen to suit the convenience of Imperial politicians and advised by a council of his own selection, tried by crown judges and coerced by military rule; when Mackenzie fled from the rebel camp on Yonge St. north, some grievances had already been redressed by his exertions and his latest act subsequently caused the Home Government to send Lord Durham here as Governor or commissioner whose famous "Report" became the English textbook on Canadian affairs. Mackenzie found Canada ruled as a dependency, he left her governed as a nation. Never mind how keen and dangerous his knife, he cut her bonds; Washington did nothing more and Tell hardly so much. True the quibbler is right who says had Tell never breathed, Washington remained a British colonel and Mackenzie a Scottish merchant, Switzerland might still be free among her crags, the American Republic great and prosperous and our Dominion the seed-germ of an Empire. But these were the men who under God were chosen to lay mighty hands upon the kaleidoscope of history and turn it round to a brighter and grander combination. "Firebrand" was a favorite epithet among the enemies of Mackenzie, and one they pronounced with much unction, though why it should be considered a derogatory description is among the mysteries of language. Ablaze with zeal he certainly was, and his frequent popular victories at the polls and in the Legislature showed this fervor to be contageous. But, as from the most useful fire sparks may fly full of danger, so when this burning advocate of Canada's wrongs dropped, all aflame, amid the loose tinder that the winds of free emigration scatter through every republic, fires were kindled and conflagrations started that threatened, not merely to burn the rubbish in which it caught, but to scorch and perhaps destroy the edifice against which it was whirled.

During the agitation and the consequent as well as subsequent rebellion in Quebec under Papineau, which was, by the way, an effort to gain much the same privileges as are so vigorously advocated to-day by the Toronto Mail, a great deal of sympathy with these "Patriots," both in Upper and in Lower Canada, was felt by the Americans—especially those lining the border. They seemed to see in this struggle against civil and clerical tyranny, a reflection of their own Revolutionary war, and the bloody contest of 1812 was still near enough to excite their hardest and bitterest feelings against anything regal and British. And, as is characteristically American, their sympathy soon took a substantial form in the organization of secret associations all along the Frontier, known as "Hunters' Lodges." An historian of fair accuracy says:—

"Members of the American Senate and Congress, Governors of States, Generals in the United States Army, and many leading citizens, there and in Canada, were enrolled as office-bearers of the associations, under the name of 'Grand Eagles.' According to the 'Brother Jonathan' newspaper, 60,000 members were sworn to devote life and property for the extirpation of Royal Dominion in North America, and to relieve nations from the absurdities of Monarchy. The Montreal Gazette of 1838 states the number of these lodges to be 1174, the number of members 80,000 and the funds at their disposal $300,000."

The following was the Hunters' oath, by which they were solemnly bound to each other:—

"I swear to do my utmost to promote republican institutions and ideas throughout the world, to cherish them and defend them, and especially to devote myself to the perpetuation, protection and defence of these institutions in North America. I pledge my life, my property and my honor to the association. I bind myself to its interests, and I promise, until death, that I will attack, combat, and help to destroy by all means that my superiors may think proper, every power or authority of Royal origin, upon this continent; and especially, never to rest till the British tyrants cease to have possession or footing in North America, so help me God."

The statements as to the number, size and influential membership of these lodges may well be taken cum grano salis as after events fully show. Had such a mighty organization of "sympathizers" existed along the American border, the attempt at the Windmill would not have been left to the comparative handful under Von Schoultz.

As can well be imagined, after Mackenzie's attempt, Upper Canada was in an uneasy and restless state, which was considerably aggravated by the Caroline episode at Niagara and the plundering and burning of the Sir Robert Peel among the Thousand Islands by "Bill" Johnston's notorious band of desperadoes. The Summer of '38 was spent by our militia literally between the sword and the plow, called from the field to the camp at every new rumor of invasion. In those stage-coach days of no telegraph and semi-occasional mails, false leas were very difficult to combat. Among the Americans it was commonly thought that the Canadian people were ripe for rebellion and would gladly flock to the banner of any person who would make a stand in that country against the oppressive domination of the Crown; while the average Canadian looked upon the "rebel" as a Foreigner and dreaded, under that name, an invasion of his country by the, at that time, cordially detested Yankee revolutionist from the South. A flash from the telegraph would have lightened up the whole matter, but nations then talked with the flash of the cannon. Through the Autumn rumors became thicker and darker, and companies of militia were stationed at all salient points along the frontier. A detachment of the Glengarry militia, under Captain George McDonald, with his brother Angus as lieutenant, was stationed at Fort Wellington, lying at the eastern side of Prescott.

The visitor of to-day, whether he catches his first glimpse of the Fort from the boat or the railway car, sees little but a passable green mound apparently capped with a low, square, gun-house, topped with a rather rusty tin roof. But, if he sware in a gamin-guide by the aid of some small currency, he will be conducted down King St. and directed to climb through an opening in the fence into the "Fort Field." True, there is a gate in the rear directly opposite the only entrance to the Fort, but the barefooted guide seems intent upon impressing the stranger with the insurmountable difficulties that would oppose the capture of "our Fort;" hence he walks him across the rising field that slopes gradually up toward the mound until he stands upon the edge of the "ditch," probably ten feet deep and twenty to thirty feet wide. Just beyond the bottom of the ditch where it begins to rise, is planted a heavy cedar stockade, composed of stakes nine to twelve feet in height, sharpened at the points. While this defense could be easily battered down by modern artillery, at the time of its erection it effectually prevented the carrying of the works by storm—no rifleman could scale that stockade. You have approached the Fort in this way from the west where lies the town; now passing around to the south, you will find the ditch shoots out in the form of a U directly in front of the Fort proper, into which is thrust from the mound a low stone tongue whose sides are slit with port-holes. This can be filled with troops from inside the mound and would prevent the enemy from surrounding the fort in the shelter of the ditch. At this point, if you assure your guide that you seriously doubt whether the entire United States army—and you may as well throw in the navy, it cannot make much difference—could reduce this Prescottonian Gibraltar, he may be appeased and lead you to the vulnerable spot in this harmless old monument of past weakness. Once it could stand a siege of months, now the artillery practice of a half-hour would silence it forever.

Skirting the fort, you find yourself in front of two heavy gates in the stockade, usually defended by a warlike, though harmless cow. Inside the gate you pass under a heavily-guarded archway through the mound into the court around the court proper. This court, probably 75 yards by 50, contains three low, frame buildings that cling about the base of enormous chimneys intended for officers' quarters, and a little to the middle-front stands the fort itself. It is a heavy block of stone masonary about 50 feet square and 20 feet feet high, capped with a massive log storey about 10 feet high and overlapping the stone base a foot all around. The stone work is pierced with a belt of port-holes two thirds of the way up; inside the wooden apex could be made to bristle with rifle-barrels. At each of the four corners of the embankment lie what was once a platform to enable the cannon to fire over the edge of the parapet, which could be run up into the mound by a couple of earthen tramways at the north-east and south-west corners.

About the 5th of November, the meagre township militia was called out and put under charge of captain Fraser (Edwardsburg) and captain D. Jones (Augusta).

These exceedingly raw recruits, not even boasting uniforms, were stationed in a house owned by a Mr. Patton—afterward county Registrar—which stood near the spot now occupied by the Prescott market house. These men were mustered in with the Glengarry militia and drilled as thoroughly as circumstances would allow.

On Sunday, the 11th inst., word was received by the officers that the "Patriots" had embarked on a number of boats—variously stated—and were preparing to make a descent on Prescott with a view to capturing Fort Wellington. That night the men retired to their barracks restless with excitement: the officers had told them nothing, but the unusual stir around "headquarters" warned them that there was work ahead. A little before 2 a. m. the colonel's orderly aroused the bugler, and in a few moments the thrilling notes of the "alarm" startled through the still night air. The men sprang hastily out of their bunks, and while scrambling for their clothes, many a raw farmer lad trembled and shuddered at the possibilities of the next few hours. Veterans would sneer, and many readers will laugh at the idea of these young "gaffers" talking death on the eve of a mere skirmish—but they did do it. Your bronzed veteran, who knows his companions but by their company number, rather likes to tell how "the 18th were wiped out under cannon fire," or that "No. 12"—the next file—"was shot through the brain while lying with him in the trenches." He half-gloats in blood and death as the most vivid background for his own glory—and the dead are strangers to his heart, and often, to his eye. But these young fellows who were hastily dressing amid the shadows of the lantern on that November night, were going to "dress up" in no rank of cold "numbers," but among brothers and cousins and neighbor boys. When a hurtling bullet dropped a man, it did not mean "No. so-and-so killed," it meant "Jim, my old play-fellow, dead;" it meant carrying a bleeding corpse into a familiar hall-way, and laying him down at the feet of old friends; it meant going home after the battle, not to point with exultant pride to the powder-grimmed face and service-stained uniform, but to join a band of simple mourners, and follow a coffin down an oft-trod path and through a love-endeared gateway. The veteran sees nothing but the rush and bravado of battle, the young lads saw a funeral in a neighbor's parlor.

The men soon unstocked their rifles and got into line in front of the barracks, whence they were marched down to the river's edge. About a hundred of them, all told, they were scattered along the banks in small detachments to watch for the enemy. Soon the upper parties descried two schooners lying very close together, floating down the river within a few rods of the Canadian shore. The officers hailed the strangers and were told that one of the boats was in a sinking condition, hence they had lashed themselves together and were seeking to make fast to the wharves at Prescott. Failing in this, or more probably frightened off by the display of troops upon the banks, the boats parted company and drifted off into the darkness.

Had the invaders but known the true state of affairs and understood the meagre proportions of the garrison—less than a hundred armed men—they might easily have forced a landing on that night, plundered Prescott and entrenched themselves in the then strong works of Fort Wellington. While, of course, no stand could have been permanent, it would have cost infinitely more in life and treasure to drive Von Shoultz and his men out of the stockades and parapets of the Fort than it did to frighten them from the bare and tottlish Windmill cone.

The militia were kept under arms all night and in the morning one of the boats was seen anchored about half-way across the river between the Windmill and what is now the O. L. C. depot; while the other was found, by the diligent use of the glass, to be grounded upon the bar at the mouth of Ogdensburg harbor.

The historic "Windmill" stands a mile and a half below Prescott, upon the edge of a modest bluff, not over ten feet in height but immensely craggy withal. It is a conical tower of stone some eighty feet high, now resplendent in white-wash and a red cap. A door on the north side admits to a slim stairway that mounts from story to story to the top. The walls are three feet and a half thick at the bottom but grow smaller toward the upper part, and the occasional windows served as excellent loop-holes.

At dawn on Monday, large crowds of sympathizers gathered along the American shore and pressing the not-unwilling steamer United States into service began landing the garrison at Windmill Point. This was somewhat interfered with by the plucky little gun-boat Experiment, which, carrying two swivels kept up a desultory fire upon the rebels all day; indeed, toward evening, a shot from her small battery beheaded the pilot of the United States who was at his post in the wheel-house. The militia had been helplessly watching these manœuvres since sunrise, far too weak to interfere; and at night Captain McDonald marched his men down upon the plains in the face of a heavy rain storm to guard against a surprise. In the meantime messengers had been dispatched in all directions for help, and that night the steamers Queen and Cobourg brought to the wharf a body of marines and regulars under Lieutenant Johnston, numbering 70 men; 140 men of the 9th Battallion under Lieutenant-Colonel Gowan, arrived during the night. In the morning, Colonel John Crysler marched in with a battallion of Dundas militia amounting to 300 men, and this was soon supplemented by a detachment from the first Grenville militia.

Early in the morning, Colonel Young, an ideal English officer, stern and yet gentle, straight as an arrow and courteously bluff, rode down toward the Windmill and carefully looked over the ground; then riding back, he called the officers about him and in a very few words gave concise and complete directions for the assault. The enemy had not only occupied the mill and several surrounding stone houses, but had utilized the heavy stone fences, that then divided the fields, as breast-works behind which they crouched waiting for the troops to advance. Colonel Fraser took a portion of the Glengarry regiment, 30 marines under Lieut. Parker and a large number of the Dundas and Grenville volunteers and marched them in double file down back of the Fort and by a detour skirting the "Pines"—a wood lying near the railway,—brought his men exactly behind the enemy's position. Col. Young advanced with the remainder directly down the river bank. The battle was opened by the advance of Col. Fraser's brigade—the left wing—who immediately encountered a hot fire from the rebel riflemen posted behind the stone walls; and before the rear files had become engaged at all, wounded and dead friends were carried back from the front through the advancing columns of these callow lads to be laid in a temporary hospital, the residence of a Mr. Wells. The volunteers were marching, wholly unprotected, down a slight incline, making capital targets for the marksmen lying under cover. It was a dark morning and the advancing lines seem fringed with fire, while from fence and house and boulder jets of flame shot out. The volunteers were firing rapidly and well but their shot dropped harmless from stone barriers, while the bullets of the rebels cut through home spun coat or the rarer "tunic" and found no resistance stronger than human bone. It was an unequal fight and our brave lads were simply butchered on the hill side. Nor much better was the flight of the right wing advancing by the river road and exposed to a galling fire from the houses and mill.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

GOOD LIVE AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY County in Canada. Address, FERRIS & CO., 87 Church St., Toronto.

AGENTS AND CANVASSERS wanted, Male or Female, whole or spare time, on salary or commission. Industrial Union of B.N.A., 45 Arcade, Toronto.

CONVERTIBLE WIRE BASKET. BEST SELLING novelty in Canada. Great reduction to agents. Sample by mail thirty cents. CLEMENT & Co., Toronto.

A NEW EMERY MOWER SHARPENER—Will sharpen the knife without taking it out. Every farmer will buy it. AGENTS WANTED. CLEMENT & CO. TORONTO

TORONTO CUTTING SCHOOL.—Gentlemen desirous of acquiring a thorough knowledge of garment cutting should apply at once to S. CORRIGAN, 122 Yonge St., Toronto. Terms on application.

GUELPH Business College, Guelph, Ont. Twelve States and Provinces already represented on the roll of this Institution. To thorough, practical instruction, and the efficiency and success of its graduates, this College owes its popularity. Circulars, giving terms, etc., mailed free. Address M. MacCORMICK, Principal.

BEAVER LINE OF STEAMSHIPS, Sailing weekly between Montreal and Liverpool. RATES OF PASSAGE:—Saloon, Montreal to Liverpool, $40, $50, and $60; Return Tickets, $80, $90, and $100—according to steamer and accommodation. Intermediate and Steerage at lowest rates. For further particulars and to secure Berths, apply to H. E. MURRAY, General Manager, 1 Custom House Square, Montreal, or to the Local Agents in the different Towns and Cities.

AGENTS—Ladies or Gentlemen Wanted—To Canvass for our Subscription Books. Our Standard and popular work, Dr. Withrow's "History of Canada"—a book which ought to be in every library. Our instructive, amusing and soul-touching temperance book, "Platform Echoes," by J. B. Gough. Our complete book of sermons, and autobiography of Sam P. Jones, with a short sketch of the life of Sam W. Small, and three of his special sermons. Our beautiful book of poetry and literature of all ages and all lands, entitled "Golden Thoughts on Mother, Home and Heaven." Our handsome Family Bibles, beautiful illustrations, full of useful and helpful matter for Bible study, besides good clear type and paper. Our terms are liberal. Send for circulars. WILLIAM BRIGGS, Publisher, Toronto.

SNOW DRIFT THE FAVORITE IS BETTER KINGSFLOWER The Snow Drift Baking Powder Co., Hamilton, Ont.

SPOONER'S COPPERINE 'Babbitt'—Non-fibrous Anti-friction Box-metal for journal bearings in machinery—Guaranteed copper mixed. Supplies every requirement. Ask your hardware dealer for it. ALONZO. W. SPOONER, Patentee and Manufacturer, Port Hope.

GOLD, COMPOSITION GOLD, Antique Bronze, Natural Wood, and other Picture and Room Mouldings, Frames, etc Paintings, Engravings, Etchings, Artotypes, Artists' Materials, Mirrors, etc. Whole ale and Retail. Trade Catalogue. MATTHEWS BROS. & CO., Toronto.

Awnings! Decorated Window Shades, &c. Wholesale and Retail, at the CELEBRATED GOLD MEDAL TENT MANUFACTORY, 70 King St. West, Toronto. NATIONAL MANUFACTURING CO

THE LONDON GUARANTEE AND ACCIDENT CO. (LD: OF LONDON, ENG. Capital, £260,000. Dominion Government Deposit, £55,000. Head Office: 72 King St East, Toronto. Gentlemen of influence wanted in unrepresented districts. A. T. McCORD, Resident Secretary for the Dominion.

SPANISH BLACKING THE KING OF BLACKING · SOLD EVERYWHERE ·

The Perry Cart

TWO STYLES, SURREY AND PHAETON BODIES

The shafts are attached to body by the Perry Compensating Springs. The result of the action of these Springs is no horse-motion in the cart, and no cart-motion on the horse. Descriptive illustrations on application. For sale by all carriage makers.

CANADA CARRIAGE PARTS CO., TORONTO. Sole Manufacturers for Canada. The Trade only supplied.

CHURNS. [illegible] kinds; Washing Machines, 2 kinds. Carpet Meat Choppers, Trucks, and other sundries. HAMILTON INDUSTRIAL WORKS CO., Hamilton. Send for article wanted, or Illustrated Cat[illegible]

MERIDEN BRITANNIA MANUFACTURE ONLY FINEST Silver Plated Wa[illegible] Artistic Designs, combined [illegible] Unequalled Durability and F[illegible] HAMILTON, ONT.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steam[illegible] Sailing during winter from Port and every [illegible] and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and [illegible] mer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, [illegible] at Londonderry to land mails and passengers [illegible] Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via [illegible] fax and St. John's N. F., to Liverpool forming [illegible] ing summer months. The steamers of the [illegible] lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, [illegible] Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer [illegible] Glasgow and Montreal, weekly, Glasgow and [illegible] weekly; and Glasgow and Philadelphia, fortn[illegible] For Freight, passage, or other information [illegible] J. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & [illegible] Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's N. F., Wm. [illegible] & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; [illegible] Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allan [illegible] & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; [illegible] Allan Portland Boston Montreal

CONBOY'S

CARRIAGE TOP[illegible] Are famous for their style, convenience, durability and cheapness. Buy no other until you see them. [illegible] the leading Carriage Builders sell them. Factory: 407 King West. TORONTO

THE ALBANY STEAM TRAP CO[illegible] SPECIAL BUCKET [illegible] RETURN TRAP

The Celebrated [illegible] cock Inspirator. Gresham's Automatic Re-starting Injector. Morrison's Automatic Sight Feed Lubricator. Engineers' & Plumbers' Supplies of every description. Send for circulars. JAMES MORRISON, 75 & 77 Adelaide St. W., TORONTO

I CURE FITS! When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my Infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you. Address DR. H. G. ROOT, Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto

Lardine.

THIS SPLENDID MACHINE OIL! Has never failed to take the highest awards where ever exhibited.

It Has No Equal. Farmers, Threshers and Millmen Use No Other.

This Oil keeps the Machinery in first-rate working order, thereby lessening the chances of accidents and breakdowns. To be had of all first-class dealers. Beware of imitations!

Try our 600 Fire Test Cylinder Oil. Harness, Bolt Cutting, Wool and Lard Oil, always in stock.

SOLE MANUFACTURERS OF LARDINE.

McCOLL BROS. & CO., - - TORONTO.

CONFEDERATION LIFE ASS'N.

OUR LAST NOTICE

In this paper referred to the Annual Meeting of the Association. This meeting (being the 15th since the Company was organized) took place on Tuesday, the 12th April, when the following gratifying increases were announced:

PREMIUM INCOME INCREASED FOR YEAR,			$ 96,894.
INTEREST AND RENTS,			13,029.
ASSETS,	$356,375.	SURPLUS,	80,234.

$260,420 Were allocated as Profits to Policy Holders. Profits payable on and after May 1st.

J. K. MACDONALD, Managing Director.

The Original Wood Cook.

THE MOST PERFECT WORKING STOVE YET INTRODUCED.

Elegant in Design and Finish, Massive in Appearance, A Charm for the Kitchen.

Has the Largest Oven, The Best Fire-Box, Heaviest Castings.

MADE IN 10 DIFFERENT STYLES AND SIZES. - - FOR SALE BY ALL THE LEADING DEALERS.

MANUFACTURED BY THE E. & C. GURNEY CO., (L'D), TORONTO.

Dealers who have not yet seen this STOVE should secure the sale of it at once.

RNS.
hines, &c.
Woman Co ated, or Ill
BRITANNIA
FACTURE ONLY NEST
lated Wa rns, combined urability and TON, ONT. al Mail Steam
r from Port and every rday to Liverpool,
Saturday to Liverpool,
nd mails and passen
Also from Baltimore via
., to Liverpool for
The steamers of the
to and from Halifax, a; and during summer
weekly, Glasgow and
and Philadelphia, or other information
Baltimore; S. Cunard &
t. John's N. F., Wm.
Allan & Co., Chicago; Le
Bourlier, Toronto; Allan
Brockie, Philadelphia; H.
Montreal
AGE TOP
tyle, convenience, durability, other until you see them. A ilders sell them.
st. West. TORONTO.
Y STEAM TRAP CO.'S
SPECIAL BUCKET
RETURN TRAP.
The Celebrated Hancock Inspirator.
Gresham's Antomatic Re-starting Injector.
Morrison's Automatic Sight Feed Lubricator.
Engineers' & Plumbers' Supplies of every description. Send for circulars.
JAMES MORRISON,
75 & 77 Adelaide St. W.,
TORONTO
E FITS!
ot mean merely to stop them for a m return again. I mean a radical cease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLng sickness, after which I warrant my remedy Because others have failed is no ving a cure. Send at once for a le of my infallible remedy. Give It costs you nothing for a trial, dress DR. H. G. ROOT,
7 Yonge St., Toronto.
e the highest awards wherexhibited.
n Use No Other.
he chances of accidents and utting, Wool and INE.
TORONTO.
ION
N.
ICE
the Associa-Company ie 12th
g
$ 96,894.
13,029.
S, 80,234.
s to Policy on and after g Director.
Cook.
TRODUCED.
Has the Largest Oven,
The Best Fire-Box,
Heaviest Castings.
HE LEADING DEALERS.
ORONTO.
at once.

HEALTH.

Dandruff.

Simple as the skin appears to be, it is very complicated, and plays an important part in the working of the physical system. Its glands secrete the oil that keeps the surface soft and supple. Another set of its glands pour out a fluid, the evaporation of which enables the body to maintain its proper heat amid the many and sudden changes of the atmospheric temperature. It is one of the eliminating organs for expelling from the system waste and poisonous matter. Its network of nerves is the source of sensations that recognize the presence and qualities of external objects, that is, of the sense of touch.

It consists of three parts. The inmost is the seat of color. The middle, a tough, elastic and fibrous membrane, is the true skin, and is the seat of the nerves of touch. The outermost, a transparent and horny film, is itself wholly without sensation, and protects the sensitive skin below.

The human nail and the horse's hoof are merely modifications of this, which is called the epidermis.

So complicated an organ must be exposed to many ailments. There are nearly fifty, comprising hundreds of varieties, and among them is dandruff or pityriasis, from a Greek word signifying bran.

Says Sir Erasmus Wilson, "Pityriasis is superficial, chronic inflammation of the skin, without exudation, or swelling, but especially characterized by disturbed nutrition of the epidermis, and its desquamation in minute scales. Essentially it is a mild manifestation of eczema, and must be regarded as one of the forms of dry eczema. "It seems to be due to an enfeebled state of the skin, in many cases transmitted by hereditity. It is a trivial affection, and yields readily to treatment, but constantly tends to return. The aim should be to improve the nutritive functions of the skin by the use of general tonics."

Besides this, rub the scalp every night with glycerine, containing a small quantity of carbolic acid, five grains of the acid to an ounce of the glycerine, and wash the head thoroughly in the morning with soap and water. Repeat till the scalp is clean.

Speech-Derangement.

There are several forms of speech derangement, caused by a paralysis of a portion of the brain—the speech centres. They are known by the general term aphasia, which means simply speechlessness. The Medical Record has an interesting paper on the subject, to which he would refer those who care to study the scientific explanation of the matter. We give some of the prominent facts:

There are three forms of aphasia: (1) the sensory, in which the printed words are clear enough to the eye, but convey no impression to the brain; (2) the motor, in which the patient can read and understand the printed words, but cannot utter them, uttering instead unintelligible sounds; (3) the sensory and the motor variously mixed. The following case illustrates the first form. A cultivated woman, being taken with a severe pain above the left temple, was surprised next morning to find herself unable to read a word, although she plainly saw the letters and words, and every object in her room. The largest letters, the headings of the daily paper, were as unrecognizable as the smallest. In about two weeks she began to recover, and could read again with tolerable facility in about three months. This was a case of word-blindness.

A somewhat similar case of word-deafness is reported. A well-educated gentleman, who fully understood what he read, was nevertheless able to utter only gibberish. Thus the sentence, "The Odessa line is again working properly," he read, "The quail lens a puff piff miss corres povety."

The second or motoo aphasia, is the more common form. In this the person may fully understand all that is said to him, and yet be unable to speak or write the word he wishes to; and even if he seeks to express his meaning by gestures, he makes the wrong movements.

In the mixed forms, the patient in some case, cannot speak the words, and yet can write them; in others, he can write, and yet is unable to read his own writing. The power of speech is, in general, however, left unimpaired.

Allied to aphasia is so-called paraphasia. In this disorder, the patient, thinking to use a particular word, uses one not having the slightest resemblance to it. Sometimes he looses a whole class of words, most commonly nouns, and is forced to supply their place by a description, as "what one cuts with," for "scissors," or for "window," "what one sees through."

How You Live.

"If you want to grow lean, cadaverous, and unlovely, excite yourself continually about matters you know nothing about because other people of wrong-doing incessantly and you will find but little time to see any wrong in yourself. We wish here and now to inform all men of irritable dispositions that they will live longer if they only keep cool. If such men want to say, we have nothing to say; snarling will end about as quick as anything we know."

In this emphatic style a contemporary admonishes his readers. His points are well taken, as the experience of every one in daily life will confirm. Living subserviently to the selfish feelings must lower the whole organization; the irritated, disordered mind depresses and degrades the physical functions. Heart, stomach, liver, nerves, can not do their normal work under such mental conditions. They need the stimulus of buoyancy, cheerfulness, and enthusiasm. Hence, it is that good-natured people are as a rule, hearty, cordial people and well. It is sheer folly to encourage a sullen, carping, irritable, terrier-like spirit. One may be unfortunate, subject to many vexations, but it makes the situation worse to worry and brood over it, whereas by exercising the faculties of faith, hope, determination, and even that of wit, he will the easier adapt himself to the situation, and the easier find ways of relief. People are much more ready to help a patient, cheerful man when in trouble, than your long-faced, sodden-faced martyr.

The moral, religious and aesthetic elements are given us for the very purpose of making our life pleasant, and he who does not bring them into use at all times in some way, robs himself of the best means of enjoyment; rejects the most powerful helps towards his advancement in true manhood.

Some Forebodings of Incipient Insanity.

1. Irritability and tendency to take offense.
2. Moroseness and silence, or sometimes fault-finding with servants.
3. Suspicion and jealousy of best friends.
4. Impairment of memory, forgetting hours of meals.
5. Inattention to exercise and state of bowels.
6. Neglect of personal appearance.
7. Altered facial expression, notably in melancholia, with marked furrows.
8. Prominence and brilliancy of corneæ, in hysterical and puerperal mania.

Royal Love of Music.

"The bomb-ridden Czar of Russia beguiles the interims of time while he is not dodging Nihilistic missiles by playing the French horn, with which instrument he is an adept.

On one occasion, while he was the Czarowitz, he played a French horn obligato to a song given by Mme. Nilsson. When His Imperial Majesty last visited Copenhagen he attended a concert in which Nilsson sang the same air, and he was affected to tears by the memories of a time when he could toot his horn in peace, undisturbed by revolutionary subjects and the cares of government. When the late King Victor Emmanuel visited the small cities of his realm one of his first questions always was regarding the condition of the opera-house. If there was none he would suggest and aid in the construction of one, even in towns having no greater population than three thousand inhabitants. I always feel an affection for the King, for he gave me this decoration—the cross of San Maurizio de Lazzaro—after a series of concerts given by Patti in Florence. Victor Emmanuel was a protector of Verdi, and made the composer a Senator, although the composer had no longing for political honors. His son, King Humbert, pays a subsidy of 10,000 francs a year out of his own personal income to the Appollo Theatre of Rome. Ex-Queen Isabella of Spain used to sing very well, but, her voice being no longer fresh, she now has a preference for instrumental music. The Queen of Belgium is very fond of music, and by her efforts she has contributed much to the progress made in musical art in Belgium of late years. The Emperor of Austria disburses over 1,000,000 francs a year to the Vienna Opera-house, it being his idea that his capital should have an Opera-house to rival the Grand Opera of Paris.

An Australian Shark Story.

An adventure with a shark occurred at Black Point, on April 12. On that evening Mr. Justice Boucaut was fishing in his dingey, but without much sport, save in small sharks and dog sharks. Towards evening Mr. Boucaut started for his yacht, sitting in the stern sheets of the dingey, with his yacht master, (Mr. H. Harris,) rowing. One of the sharks which they had hooked, about four or five feet long, having got away by breaking the hook, the Judge was relating to his man that he ought to have followed the advice given him by Mr. Justice Bundey several years ago, never to fish in a dingey at Black Point without a rifle or a bayonet, and was relating or had just related what led to that advice, namely, that he had seen Mr. Justice Bundey's dingey towed about by a shark in that particular spot, when Mr. Boucaut received a very severe blow in the hollow of the back, which knocked him off the seat over the after thwart of the dingey on to the man who was rowing. The paddles were unshipped from the rowlocks and the boat sent forward with a sharp spin. Seizing a paddle and turning round, Mr. Boucaut just saw a large shark disappear with a heavy flap of his tail on the surface of the water, which is thereabouts only 6 or 7 feet deep. Mr. Harris says the creature was as long as the dingey, which is 13 feet in length. Whether the blow which the Judge received came directly from the shark or indirectly through the stern of the dingey he cannot say. Mr. Boucaut's dingey is one of the very best of its size ever built, and the Judge and Mr. Harris are both confident that if they had been in a small 8 foot 6 inch dingey which they sometimes use she must either have been capsized or stove in, in which case the shark would have had a fine picnic.

Running an Engine Under Difficulties.

"It would be no surprise to me," said a locomotive engineer at a Chicago depot the other afternoon, "if the forest fires now raging in Wisconsin and Michigan would burn everything up for miles around. In all the years I have driven an engine in the Northwest I never yet have seen the country so dry. It is seldom that one sees the sides of the track burned over at this time of the year, yet there is scarcely a hundred feet of turf along the rails from Milwaukee to Chicago that is not scorched. In many places the fences have been burned and beautiful lawns ruined. I saw an engineer on the Wisconsin Central in Milwaukee yesterday, and he told me that he had run through a mile of flames on his last trip. The heat was so intense that his signals were destroyed, and the paint on his engine blistered in a hundred places. The windows in the cab were cracked, and the smoke was so dense that the engineer and his fireman were compelled to tie handkerchiefs over their mouths and wear goggles. If the people up North don't have rain within forty-eight hours I predict that the loss will be incalculable and the suffering widespread and terrible."

Contentment.

Many spurn the idea of contentment as involving an idle, aimless condition of mind that is satisfied with things as they are because it has no aspirations for anything better. This mere apathy, however, contains none of the elements of real content. It is a negative, not a positive, lack of energy, ambition, hope, effort, and whatever contributes to human progress. Contentment, on the other hand, is an actual presence, a principle which gives strength and support—which not only does not interfere with energy and effort, but actually prepares the way for them by the peace of mind and serenity it gives.

Delightful Conundrum Put by a Wife.

"My dear," said a wife who had been married three years, as she beamed across the table upon her lord and master, "tell me what first attracted you to me. What pleasant characteristic did I possess which placed me above other women in your sight?" And her brutal lord and master said simply, "I give it up."

FARM.

Care of Animals in Summer.

The Humane Association presents the following suggestions relative to the care of animals during the heated term.

Provide water—fresh, pure water. Think, reader, how you are refreshed by a drink of cool water on a hot day. The lower animals are equally in need of the means of quenching thirst.

The active dog requires drink frequently during the hot day, as does also the cat; and a dish of fresh water should stand where they can have excess to it. Undoubtedly many a dog is driven to madness through lack of water; and the testimony is that hydrophobia is almost unknown in those localities where dogs can drink when they wish.

Every city, village and country town should be liberally supplied with drinking fountains for animals, and they should be so constructed that the smallest dogs can drink from them. No gift to a people confers a greater pleasure than a fountain and that person who turns aside a stream from the field and gives a watering trough to the roadside, or provides a fountain at which man and beast can drink pure, water is truly a public benefactor.

Give the horse frequent opportunity to quench thirst at times when not too much over-heated, and before eating. To drink freely immediately after eating prevents a favorable digestion of food.

Proivde shade. How instinctively we seek the shadow when the sun is pouring its hot rays on the dry and parching earth. If the pasture is not provided with shade trees, in a convenint locality set four, six or eight supports, across which place straw or grass, and thus, in a brief time and with little labor make a shade in which the animals can rest from the heat of of the sun, to the great comfort of themselves ahd benefit to their owners.

Removing the harness from the horses in the hot day when ever you desire to give them a full free rest, and once during the day, preferably at night, a thorough currying and grooming will not only give rest, but will do about as much towards improving the animals conditions as will oats.

Examine the harness on your working team, and you will discover that blinds, check-reins and cruppers are simply torturing contrivances, serving no useful purpose. Take them all off for the convenience of yourself and the comfort of the horses. Keep the stable well ventilated and free from the strong ammonia, which is injourious to the eyes. Assist the animals to protect themselves against flies, feed regularly, hitch in the shade, and remember that the care which will give comfort to the lower animals will make them doubly profitable to their owners, aside from the humane bearing upon the subject.

Setting Waggon Tires at Home.

Every dry summer farmers have more or less trouble with loose wagon tires. When they get loose we go to the blacksmith and he sets them so tight that when wet weather comes the wheels are dished out of shape, causing them to bind in ruts and to run hard, and in a few weeks the wheels are spoiled. If we would have a small boiler made of sheet-iron and set over a stone arch, in which to boil a little linseed oil or gas tar, allowing the pores of the wood to fill up with the substance there would be but little need of taking the wagon from home to get the tires set, wheels would retain their shape and the durability of the wood be increased.

Gas tar might be used extensively by farmers with good advantage. It is cheap and very useful. A coat of it put boiling hot on a leaky roof and then sprinkled with air slacked lime as cement would stop all leaks and become hard as slate. A good coat of hot gas tar or black oil (crude petroleum) in the bottom of a wagon will make it water tight, and much more durable.

Horn and Hoof.

Variety in farm stock is always desirable, as much as variety in cropping. A farm should be self-supporting—breeding its own stock.

Texas claims to have 2,000,000 cows. The important question with the breeders of to-day is the procurement of improved bulls as the foundation of future herds.

Dehorning is good, but breeding to a Galloway bull is better. His progeny seldom have developed horns, but the males sometimes have loose stubbs an inch or two long, mostly covered by hair.

The fact is, it is only a question of time, says a stockman, and not remote either, when we must look to maturing all our steers into good beef on the ranches, or to a large extent in the feeding belt of our own country.

Holstein cattle seem to be giving splendid satisfaction in all parts of the world, says an exchange. If a man desires to buy cattle for milk, butter, cheese and beef, Holsteins fill the bill, no matter where he lives, so he have feed for them.

The American Secretary of the Interior decides that there is no law authorizing the establishment of a new cattle trail through the Chickasaw territory. Indians of the territory levy a tax upon every animal passing through it en route to market or pasture.

With the many excellent breeds of Polled cattle, both beef and milk strains, now in our midst, and the certainty with which they impress their physical peculiarities on their offspring, don't it seem more rational that they should be employed rather than the saw? says a well-known agriculturalist.

An Expert.

Uncle Moses relates an incident: "Dat smart Aleck Pollux were talkin' 'bout de law bin changed. 'No, sah!' sez I. 'Dere ain't no law bin changed 'bout nuttin'. Ain't I bin er tendin' Lyer Har'son's office gwine on thirty year, en ain' I seen dem same law books on de same shelf all de time? No, sah, s'y, ignunt people may think de law done change, but dem whar knows, knows better.'"

"Have you 'Hours of Idleness' here?" the maiden asked, as she sauntered into the bookstore. "No, we haven't, miss," said the youth behind the counter. "The boss is an old skinflint and when we ain't doing any business he keeps us dusting books."

STATISTICS.

It is calculated that the whole mutual trade of the British Empire is to the value of between £250,000,000 and £300,000,000.

In 1882 the total number of brewers licensed for sale, in England, was as much as 16,609; last year the number fell to 14,146. The decrease is chiefly in the small b ewers, those who brewed less than 1,000 barrels.

In Russia 42 per cent. of the surface is clothed with trees; Austria 29 per cent. of the country is forest; in Germany 26 per cent.; in France 19 per cent.; and in Italy 18 per cent. In England nearly all the woods are private property.

The number of emigrants who left Irish ports in 1886 was 63,416, an increase of almost 1,000 as compared with 1885, the number of males being 32,141, an increase of 1,048, and of females 31,275, a decrease of 52. Deducting the number of persons belonging to other countries, the total number of natives emigrating was 63,135.

In 1884 the percentages paid upon the railways in the chief countries of the world were as follows—United States railways paid 4.4 per cent.; England, 4 2; Germany, 4.2; France, 4.1; Australia, 3.9; Spain, 3.8; Scotland, 3.7; Ireland, 3.6; Belgium, 3.5: New Zealand, 3.1; Italy, 2.5; Portugal, 2.5; Russia, 2.2; Denmark, 2.1; Canada, 1.8; India, 5.3; India, 1885, 5.8; or, taking the rupee at 1s. 6., 4.3 per cent.

According to statistics recently published by the French deputy M. Lockroy, as many as 29,000 out of 36,000 communes in France are without either a medical man or a sanitary officer. The death-rate in France from infectious diseases is consequently higher than in many other countries, the deaths from typhoid fever from every 100,000 inhabitants at Marseilles being 149, at Paris 63, while at Brussels they number only 19, in London 17, and at Vienna 14.

The amount of money spent yearly in Britain on foreign cereals and flour forms a very serious item in the national expenditure. The total for 1886 exceeds £43,000,000 sterling; for the previous year it was nearly £53,000,000. The principal expenditure is on wheat, of which, in 1886, 47,404,344 cwt. were puchased at a cost of £17,888,155. The amount paid to America was nearly £10,000,000, or considerably more than half. In 1885 the proportion was very different. Then, as in 1886, the total was close on £10,000,000, but in 1885 the total expenditure on foreign wheat was no less than £24,006,013.

Stations in the colony of Victoria on which smiling homesteads, fine orchards, and other improvements had a few years back existed have fallen into ruin and been deserted owing to the destruction caused by rabbits. Here, where the grass and salt bush in 1875 were sufficient for nearly 700,000 sheep, enough did not grow in 1882 for one-seventh of that number, the loss during the past five years being estimated as at least £750,000 sterling, besides £40,000 decrease to Government in rents, and £20,000 expended in destroying the pests. During the past three years the Government has expended about £30,000 in Victoria on the extirpation of the rabbit, the principal means used being poison, such as phosphorised oats and wheat, arsenic mixed with bran and chaff, and bisulphide of carbon.

The Queen.

The attempts of certain persons and classes in the United States to disparage and reproach the celebration of Queen Victoria's completion of a half-century's term as a sovereign cannot be approved by the great majority of intelligent and reputable American citizens. It is not true, as Mr. Andrew Carnegie asserts, that to speak well of the woman who has occupied the British throne for the last fifty years and to wish her continued life and happiness is to become "the eulogist of monarchy on republician soil." We can very well afford to recognize the unquestionable virtues of a character so conspicuous and so long associated with the march of civilization; and it does not follow that this can be only done at the expense of our patriotism and our devotion to another form of government than which she represents. As a matter of fact, she is a monarch in name only. She has never invited condemnation by the arbitrary and oppressive use of her powers; and it is only simple justice to say that the record of her long reign is without a spot of personal shame, which is more than can be affirmed of any other female ruler in all the history of the world.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Coffee Tree.

Coffee is not a bush, as is popularly supposed but a tree, which, if permitted to grow, will shoot up thirty or forty feet. When properly cultivated it is nipped off about six feet from the ground, thus presentiug a surface from which the berries are easily picked and allowing the main stalk to gain greater strength. The tall shrubs somewhat resemble the magnolias with their shining dark-green leaves—but the starry, snow-white flowers remind one of orange blossoms in all but fragrance. The phenomenon is constantly displayed of buds, blossoms, green and ripe fruit all on the same stem: but though always flowering and developing fruit, the true harvest season is from April to November. When fully matured the berries are dark red, looking precisely like a common variety of sea bean. They turn to a dull brown after having been picked and become almost black by drying.

Worth Ten Dollars a Bottle.

Any person who has used Polson's NERVILINE, the great pain cure, would not be without it if it cost ten dollars a bottle. A good thing is worth its weight in gold, and NERVILINE is the best remedy in the world for all kinds of pain. It cures neuralgia in five minutes; toothache in one minute; lame back at one application; headache in a few moments; and all pains just as rapidly. Small test bottles only cost 10 cents. Why not try it to-day? Large bottles 25 cents, sold by all druggists and country dealers. Use Polson's nerve pain cure—Nerviline.

Publisher—"You think you can canvass for my paper with success?" Applicant—"Oh yes, sir." Publisher—"Then I'll engage you: but for what papers have you canvassed?" "For none, sir." "Eh? why, you gave me to understand you had experience as a canvasser?" "In a pork house, sir; I used to canvass ham."

LATE FOREIGN NEWS.

It is a common practice in France to coat the beams, the joists and the under side of the flooring of buildings, with a thick coating of lime-wash, as a safeguard against fire. It is a preventive of prime ignition, although it will not check a fire when once under headway.

Henry Irving has hit on the happiest possible method of celebrating the jubilee. On the afternoon of June 21 he will throw open his theatre to as many children of the Ragged School Union as can be squered into it, and he will perform for their benefit "The Merchant of Venice." The choice of the play is not the least happy part of this scheme. Both the play and the under-plot of "The Merchant of Venice" partake of the nature of a fairy tale and go straight home to the comprehension and sympathy of childhood.

Wonderful strides are being made in the construction of torpedo boats. The performances of the new Thorneycroft boat built for the Spanish Government are amazing. On three runs over the measured mile last week against the tide, she averaged 26.18 knots, or over thirty miles an hour. In the previous week, with the tide in her favor and a forced draught, she positively accomplished thirty-three and a half miles in the hour. Such a boat has not much to fear from the best British ironclad, which, barring one or two exceptions, average from twelve to thirteen knots; still less from a gunboat of the type of the brand new-Racer, whose maximum speed since she has been in commission is about seven knots.

In Berlin recently there was a birthday party in honor of the eldest son of Prince William, eldest son of the Crown Prince. Among the presents was a small barrel organ from Prince Bismarck. A few days later the 5 year-old heir of the Imperial throne complained to Prince Bismarck that it tired him very much to play the organ, and asked him to play something. The Chancellor complied, and at once began turning the handle, and with so much energy that the sounds of the instrument drew the other members of the Imperial family to the room. The children, delighted, began to dance. Thereupon Prince William, looking at his eldest son, observed to the Chancellor: "There is a future Emperor who already dances to your piping!"

Speaking of Mexico, Edgar Lee Vance says in the Inter-Mountain: "There are thousands of square miles where peonage is a sacred institution, and a 'white man' is as great a curiosity as a hippogriff or unicorn would be. There whole families are wearily grinding away at debts they had no more to do with than the deluge. Some ancestor they never saw or heard tell of drank too much mescal one day, or lost a few dollars at monte, or was tempted to buy a gilded sombrero on credit, and the mischief was done. That they lived in the darkest sort of ignorance and misery goes without saying, else some fine morning they would simply quit being peons, and all the powers that be, at least in Mexico, could not re-establish the old regime."

A terrible outrage on the majesty of the law was perpetrated at the Lewes Assizes, England. Justice Field, when on the bench entered into conversation with the Sheriff on some matter of business. While His Lordship was so engaged, an individual named Bull, described as an agent of the Sheriff, approached upon the other side, and with incredible temerity touched—positively touched—the Judge upon the shoulder. Justice Field, though greatly incensed, retained his presence of mind. He turned and in a peremptory tone bade the officer stand off; and then ordered him never under any circumstance to presume to address him again except by means of affidavits. The punishment was heavy, but none too heavy for the crime—Labouchere.

A Berlin correspondent says: "A wandering cat nearly did last week what the French Generals failed to do in the whole campaign of 1870 71. A stray pussy was in an ace of doing for the old Emperor William, of Germany. The Kaiser generally regales himself in front of his bedroom fire before turning in, with a supper of fried fish. With his usual keenness for economizing time, the old man eats his supper seated on a patent steaming apparatus, which has been ordered by his physicians. A small boiler is placed on the fire, and from this an India-rubber tube conveys steam into a small cell under the patient's chair. While the emperor was eating his supper and enjoying the moist heat of his steam engine a puff of smoke and soot came down the chimney and made him start so violently that the tube was disconnected and the boiling water poured in volumes all over the place. His luck never deserted him, however, and he escaped without a scald, to find eventually that the puff of smoke was caused by a cat, which, attracted by the smell of his fried fish, had rashly attempted a descent of the chimney and had got stuck in the flue.

THE ASSESSMENT SYSTEM.

Large Insurance Claim Paid—Endorsement of the Mutual Reserve.

Office of W. D. MATTHEWS & Co., Grain and Produce Merchants, Toronto, 11th May, 1887.

J. D. Wells, Esq., General Manager Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association.:

DEAR SIR—We beg to acknowledge receipt of cheque for Five Thousand Dollars in full of claim under a policy of insurance issued to us by the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association for that amount, as creditors of the late Edwin C. Fisher.

We have much pleasure in bearing testimony to the prompt and satisfactory manner in which this claim has been adjusted, and at the same time to express our confidence in your association. Having an intimate acquaintance with your President and chief officers, we know them to be gentlemen of the highest integrity, and in whose hands we believe the interests of the members of the Mutual Reserve are perfectly safe.

Wishing your association continued success.

Yours truly, W. D. MATTHEWS & Co.

Fearful Story of Sacrifice.

A strange story of human sacrifice comes from the Madras Presidency. A woman was supposed to be possessed with the devil, and in consequence to have remained barren. Her father consulted an exorcist, who said a human sacrifice was necessary. Accordingly one night the father, the exorcist, and five or six others met and, after some religious ceremonies, sent for the selected victim. He came without suspecting treachery, and was plied with drink until he was senseless, when his head was cut off and his blood, mixed with rice, was offered to some deity. The body was then hacked, so as to deceive the police, and thrown into a tank. The murderers, having been arrested, have made a full confession.

People who are subject to bad breath, foul coated tongue, or any disorder of the Stomach, can at once be relieved by using Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, the old and tried remedy. Ask your Druggist.

Markdale Standard.

C. W. Rutledge, Proprietor.

MARKDALE, JUNE. 9, 1887.

MUTUAL IMPROVEMENT.

There is room for a large and intelligent Mutual Aid society in Markdale while no one will question the need of such. We have in this village as fine a class of young people, male and female, as may be found in any place of its size in the Dominion, yet the general tendancy is to spend their hours of recreation or rest from the active duties of life in idleness, or engage in trifling nonsense; not because it is desired or preferred to something useful and elevating, but rather because there is no means provided for the encouragement of moral and intelectual culture.

In order to secure the greatest success throughout the journey of life, it is very important and necessary that young people determine to cultivate a desire for self improvement and then endeavor to gather from every source avaible lessons of wisdom and instruction. This does not appear natural to all, yet it may by diligence and practice become a pleasure, and one which will never be regretted.

We would suggest that a meeting be called of all who feel an interest in the mutual improvement of either themselves or their friends, young and old, and if favorable, organize into a Society. The usefulness of such a Society if properly conducted cannot be over estimated. A reading room may be in connection, exercises on Letter writing, Hygene, Etiquette. &c, &c., thereby opening up a means of self culture available to all.

CROP PROSPECTS.

The weather has been all that could be desired for Agricultural purposes since the first day of May, consequently all nature smiles on the labors of the husbandman. The seed was sown in good season, and the soil being in a superior state of tilth, the genial showers and warm weather is forcing a spontaneous growth. Fall wheat is heading out and presents a promising appearence Meadows are remarkably good and well forward—in fact the season is fully a week in advance of the average. All kinds of grain looks exceedingly encouraging while the prospects for fruit is above the average. The prospects are indeed hopeful and call forth grateful feelings to the giver of all good.

NEWS NOTES.

—The Dominion Parliament is likely to prorogue on the 18th inst.

—It is now supposed that over two hundred persons lost their lives in the Paris Opera Comique fire.

—The specifications for the railway to the boundary have been prepared and tenders for its construction are being called for by the Manitaba Government.

—A party of Danish farmers with capital has arrived in England en route for the Canadian North-West, and a party of Swedish farmers will also leave for this country.

—Nearly six thousand dollars has been subscribed by the members of Bay of Quinte Conference towards the endowment of Victoria College in connection with the confederation scheme.

—At Saturday's meeting of Guelph Conference resolutions were adopted pledging the Conference to carry out the policy of the General Conference on College Confederation and endorsing a scheme for raising the $450,000 required for Victoria College. More than $10,000 was subscribed by the members of the conference.

—Toronto will celebrate the Queen's Jubilee on the 30th June and 1st July.

—According to the reports of the most reliable statistics the number of failures in business are steadly decreasing in all sections of the country.

—Owing to poor health and at the urgent advice and request of his physician., Hon. Edward Blake has resigned the leadership of his party at Ottawa.

—Last month was the warmest May noted in the records of the Toronto Meteorological Observatory (extending over 47 years), and the driest May in the same period.

EDUCATIONAL.

South Grey Teacher's Association met in convention at Flesherton, on Thursday and Friday June 2nd and 3rd.

Notwithstanding the threatening state of the weather, there was a better attendance of teachers than at any previous Convention.

FIRST DAY.

About 11 a. m. the President Mr. C. Ramage took the chair, and, after the reading of the minutes, gave an address characteristic of that gentleman. Mr. Ramage is undoubtedly the most active, and thorough teacher in the inspectorate. Mr. J. F. Hunter read an interesting paper on "Teachers influence."

The New School History was then torn to shreds by Mr. R. J. Ball, a very fiery little gentleman. This was followed by a discussion on that book, and little was said in its favor.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

An Object lesson on the "Bell" was skillfully taught by Miss Taylor. After which Mr. S. J. Tilly, Director of Teachers Institutes for the Province read a lecture on "Discipline" which should be taken to heart by every teacher in the country. Miss Delmage was indisposed, and Dr. Hixon failed to put in an appearance with his paper on "Hygiene," in lieu of which windows were opened and a good quantity of fresh air admitted.

Next came a paper on "Examinations" by Mr. Wherry Principal of the Durham, M. S. This gentleman takes a great interest in teaching and in written exams. and no doubt does a great deal of work if he practices all he preaches. Inspector Campbell launched forth into 'Temperance in schools' in a way that showed he new what was good for the pupils. In the evening Mr. Tilly gave a lecture on "success in life" which was highly appreciated by the audience.

Those who stayed away from this lecture missed a treat the like of which is seldom heard in Flesherton.

FRIDAY.

Morning Session.—First on the program for the day came Mr. Boyle of Toronto, whose fluent manner of speech and quaint humor, kept the members from relapsing into that apathy, which is so common at Teacher's Associations. He showed the workings of the Educational Society, very clearly to the teachers, and the advisability of the teachers forming some society for the elevation of the members of that most noble profession whose only emolument at present is the knowledge that they are engaged in a noble calling, which goes a very short distance in satisfying the cravings of an empty stomach. A class in grammer was next taught by Mr. Tilly in a way that showed he new how to teach grammer.

"The College of Preceptors," was handled by Mr. Merchant of the Owen Sound Col. Ins. who was clearly not in favor of that body.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The same officers were re-elected, and, judging from their success this time, no fitter officers could be chosen.

"Floral Culture in School and School grounds" was taken up by Mr. Merchant in a manner which was appreciated by all who heard it.

Map Drawing were given by Mr. Dixon, who has retired from the profession but still retains a lively interest in anything pertaining to the advancement of good education. What was to be regretted was, the few questions propounded for the question drawer. The proceedings of the best Convention of the kind held in the Inspectorate, were brought to a close by all present singing "God save the Queen."

Two much praise cannot be given to Mr. Irwin, the secretary, and the people of Flesherton, for the very affable manner in which the teachers from a distance were entertained.

Cor.

W. J. McFarland's

—: HOT :—

WEATHER PRICES.

LOOK - DOWN

this column and see the array of desirable goods to be offered this month at prices which we think were never before quoted for such good goods.

Don't

skip an item, you may find something of great importance to you in this unprecedented list of Honest Bargains.

Read all! It will pay you.

Hat's!

75 Women's Sun Hats 15 cents, worth 50 cents.

48 Men's Hats 20 cents, usual price 50 cents.

150 Boy's 15, 20, 25, 35, and 45 cents.

756 yds. Cashmere 45 inches wide, only 30 cents.

One Case Fine Tweed's all wool suitable for best wear 50 cents. Good value.

112 prs. Men's Lace and Sewed Shoes $1.00.

Lace Curtains!

10 prs. 75 cents.
10 prs. $1.00.
15 prs. $1.50.
10 prs. Colored Muslins newest out $3.00.

Dress Goods!

We have the trade of the County. De Berges 22, 25, 28, up.

75 Peices High Novelties in Greys, Browns, Blues, Grenotes, Black Wool Checks and Cashmerettes, commencing at 10 cents up to the finest. Imported Buttons and Trimmings to match.

100 Men's, Youth's and Boy's Suits, part of a manufacturers stock, will be sold very cheap.

Muslins 6 cents fast colors, stylish, goods. Fine White Lawn 12½, 15, 17, 20 cents.

2762 yds. Embroideries without exageration the largest assortment and lowest prices to be found anywhere. All our Embroideries 36 inches wide. Allover Laces 36 inches wide. All our Orientals in Cream, White and Fawn.

110 Parisols, great job; commencing at 50 cents. See them.

25 Doz. Women's Hose in Black, Navy Blue Ground and Fawn 15 cents a pair or two pairs for 25 cents.

Cretonnes Imported Direct and pronounced by the ladies Just Lovely.

37 Pieces washing every day Ginghams only 10 cents.

Mourning Goods in great variety.

Gent's Ties, Shirts, Collors, Socks, andunder clothing at correct prices.

25 Doz. large cotton Towel's only 9 cents each. 20 doz. still larger 15 cents.

100 Honey Cans 2 gallons 20 cents.

14 Pieces New Silks in Black and Colored Imported Direct from LONDON ENGLAND.

Our Millinery Rooms

crowded with Novelties and our five young ladies kept on the jump serving customers. Trimming, Hats, Bonnets, and Mantle Making. Prices right, styles correct.

A cordial invitation is extended to all to visit our grand display of New Goods.

W. J. McFARLAND,

Direct Importer,

MARKDALE

Massey Agency

Holland Centre.

TORONTO Light Binder steel frame 5 & 6 feet cut

TORONTO MOWER, one and two horse.

MASSEY Harvester

MASSEY MOWER

SHARP'S RAKE.

A full stock of repairs kept constantly on hand for the above machines.

REPAIRS STRICTLY CASH.

Also agent for Hull's patent reversible Hay Carrier, Manufactured by Cockshutt Bro's, St. Thomas, and Fox Pea Harvester, Owen Sound.

THOS. WILLISCROFT, Agent

MARKDALE CARRIAGE WORKS.

R. McNALLY:—Would hereby announce to the public of Markdale and the public generally that I have moved into my new carriage shop opposite the Markdale House, where I will manufacture every article in the wagon and carriage line, and having long experience in the business and by using first class material, I can guarantee satisfaction to every one who will favor me with their order.

Repairing, Painting and Trimming promptly attended to.

I also make a first class Stone Machine which will lift the stone, carry it to any desired place and leave in position on the fence.

A call respectfully solicited,

R. McNALLY, Proprietor.

MARKDALE SASH and DOOR FACTORY

Having erected and fitted up in every detail a Sash, Door and Plain Factory, containing all the latest and most approved machinery, everything being new, I am now prepared to turn out

Sash, Doors, Blinds, Mouldings, Hollow Battens

FRAMES, LATH, FENCE PICKETS, &c.,

And everything needed in the building trade, in a manner second to none in Canada, and having engaged superior mechanics in every department would now respectfully solicit public patronage.

Every Effort Made to fill Orders Promptly

PINE LUMBER Dressed and Undressed

Direct from North Shore, all sizes, on hand. Plain and Fancy Turning.

Careful Attention to Orders from a Distance.

303 THOS. McNEA

IMPORTANT!

TO all users of Machine Oils, don't forget to call on E. S. MABEE, Sign of the Cross-Cut Saw, Markdale, and ask for the CASTOR OIL, it is unequalled by any.

The Arora Water White Oil is equal to American in brillance of light.

Empire Oil Co.,

Refiners & Manufacturer's,

349-75 London and Toronto

WARNING.

ALL persons are hereby warned against fishing on "Sargents Lake," on lot 63 and 64 first west of T. & S. Road, Holland. Any person found trespassing or fishing on said lake or premisses will be prosecuted according to law.

WM. SARGENT

Berkeley May 1887. 352-5

TENDERS WANTED.

Sealed tenders will be received by the undersigned up till noon on Friday June 17th for the yeneering with brick, School House No. 2 Artemesia, the contractor to find all the materials. Plans and specifications can be seen at the house of Wm. Burnett. The committee don't bind themselves to accept the lowest or any tender.

JOSEPH BEATY,
WM. FLESHER,
WM. BURNETT.

Building Committee

Drs. Sproule & Brodie,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

MARKDALE.

Dr. Sproule's office Turner's Drug Store

Dr. Brodie's office Mathew's block.

NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that any person or persons found trespassing or fishing on the farms of the undersigned will be prosecuted according to law without further notice.

Signed:—

John B. Thibaudeau, Thos. Brady
Edward Brady, James Brady,
William Brady, Wm. McCutch
John Shears, Geo. Richar
Wm. McNally, George McN
James Elliott, James Stinso
Adam Hislop, Robt Graham.
John Webber. John Perri

WE WANT

100 GOOD MEN at once, to sell for the Fonthill Nurseries (largest in Canada over 465 acres) steady employment and no lost time, liberal commission or salary best advantages; splended outfit furnished free, any pushing man can succeed. Apply at once for terms to,

STONE & WELLINGTON, Toronto, Ont.

Headache, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Indigestion relieved and cured by Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Sample free.

DISTRICT DOINGS.

SYNOPSIS OF COUNTY AND DISTRICT DOINGS FROM OUR EXCHANGES PREPARED FOR STANDARD READERS.

380,000 bushels of grain was received at Owen Sound port in May the most of which was forwarded per C. P. R. same month,

In Kansas the husband votes and then goes home and holds the baby while the wife votes.

One hundred men are working at the new C. P. R. freight sheds at Owen Sound.

A Good Position in society is not proof against sin. Adam and Eve were the very best people in the world when they were cast out of Eden.

Shelburne is taking steps to have a High School established there.

Fond Mother: Well, Bessie, now that you have seen your Cousin Walter, what do you think of him? Did he leave a pleasant impression?—Bessie: Oh, yes, mamma. He kissed me.

The Orangeville Woolen Mill, owned by Clarry & Robinson, was destroyed by fire Friday night. The building and machinery were insured for $20,000, and the stock for $14.000. About seventy hands will be thrown out of employment.

If Cheese comes after meet, what comes after cheese?—A mouse.

Joseph Rorke, Esq., M. P. P. has been gazetted Major of the 31st battalion.

B. B. B. stood the test.—"I tried every known remedy I could think of for rheumatism, without giving me any relief, until I tried Burdock Blood Bitters which remedy I can highly recommend to all afflicted as I was." Henry Smith Milverton, Ont.

"Did you hear of the accident to Hill?", 'Why no! what happened him?" "Well he fell from his lady's favor, and broke his engagement,"

Try it.—"What shall I do for this distressing Cough?" Try Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam; it is soothing and healing to the throat and lungs, and loosens the tough mucous that renders breathing difficult or painful.

"Madam," said the tramp, "I'm hungry enough to eat raw dog." "Well," she replied, kindly suiting the action of the word, "I'll whistle up some for you." The tramp left, taking his appetite with him.

Domestic economy,—As a matter of economy it will pay every household to keep a bottle of Yellow Oil on hand for accidents and emergencies, in case of a handy relief, and for wounds, burns, bruises and injuries. Rheumatism, neuralgia, quinsy and many painful diseases treated internally and externally by it often saves large medicine bills.

The Mayor of Philadelphia celebrated Queen Victoria's birthdeyby closing a low dive that had been given her name. With the Queens strict notions regarding home life and what constitutes more rectitude, the Mayor could have done nothing more to her honor or that would have given her greater pleasure.

Don't use any more nauseous purgatives such as Pills Salts &c., when you can get in Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters a medicine that moves the Bowels gently, cleansing all impurities from the system and rendering the Blood pure and cool. Sold by all Druggists. ti

"I have been married now," boasted a prosy old fellow, "more than sixty years, and have never given my wife a cross word." "That's because you never dared, uncle," said a little nephew who lived with them. If you had, auntie would have made you jump.

Worth remembering.—Mrs. T. Doan, of Harrietsville, Ont., was for a long time troubled with neuralgia of the stomach. Failing to find benefit from physicians, she tried Burdock Blood Bitters, from which she found speedy relief, to which she testifies, hoping it may prove beneficial to others. Many physicians recommend B. B. B.

A good deal is said about the ability of young wives to cook. The ability of young husbands to provide them with something to cook ought not to be left out of the question,

Weather probabilities.—It is probable that in the breaking up of winter we shall have much damp sloppy weather, when rheumatism, neuralgia, sore throat and other painful complaints will prevail. Hagyard's Yellow Oil is the popular household remedy for external and internal use. Its curative power is truly wonderful.

Isn't it singular that the product of still should make men so noisy?

A Valuable discovery.—F. P. Tanner, of Neebing, Ont., says he has not only found B. B. B. a sure cure for dyspepsia but he also found it to be the best medicine for regulating and invigorating the system that he has ever taken. B. B. B. is the great system regulator.

CLIPPINGS.

Mr. Joseph Symington, who has held the position of station agent here for the past ten years, has been promoted to the station of the C. P. R. at Galt, one of the best stations on the line, and left on Wednesday to enter upon his duties. Mr. Symington has been a faithful servant of the company, and popular and obliging with the public. While we are pleased to learn of his success we regret to have him remove from among us. Mr. Lanigan, of Myrtle, is Mr. Symington's successor.—[Dundalk Herald.

The storm of the 23 ult., caused much damage to property in the vicinity of Walter's Falls. Trees were blown across the roads in many places, barns were unroofed and in some instances blown entirely down. Mr. Jeff Artley, of Euphrasia, had his barn blown down killing a steer and injuring other cattle Wm. Norton and Geo. Hays' barns, in Holland, were unroofed, together with several others in the neighborhood.—[Chatsworth News.

Mr. McKinnon. of Durham, Grey county stopped over here on Sunday. He was on his way to Calgary, N. W. T., with a carload of as fine a lot of horse flesh as has passed through here this season. There were fourteen horses valued at $3,000.—[Fort William Journal.

Honor Roll.

Honor Roll for S. S. No. 5 Holland. 4th Reader.— Bertha McKennitt, Ellen Gawley, Thos. Deaver. 3rd Reader.—Lizzie Clarke, Martha Freeborn, Maggie Lackey. 2nd Reader Sr.—Sara Mathews Lizzie White, John Hamilton. 2nd R'dr jr.—Mary Lackey, Robt Freeborn, Nancy White. Part 2nd—Dorcas Deaver, Mary White, Frances Mathews. Part I,—Ethel Hewitt, David Virtue, Emma Lackey.

L. A. Smith
Teacher.

BE ON YOUR GUARD

Don't allow a cold in the head to slowly and surely run into Catarrh, when you can be cured for 25c. by using Dr, Chase's Catarrh Cure. A few applications cure insipient catarrh; 1 to 2 boxes cures ordinary catarrh 1 to 5 boxes is guaranteed to cure chronic catarrh. Try it. Only 25c. and sure cure Sold by all druggists. 333 83

Honor Roll.

Honor Roll of S, S. No. 7 Holland for June.

4th class.—Jennie Erwin, Mary Jackson, Mattie Bailey. Sr. 3rd class.—Jennie Jackson, Ada Roulston, John Fitzgerald. Jr, 3rd class—Joseph Hampton, Kate Jackson, Sarah Stewart. Senior 2nd class—Annie Crowther, Thomas Spears, Francis Freeborn. Jr. 2nd class.—Maggie Erwin, Janie Campbell, Mary Campbell. Sr. Part I.—Johnnie Armstrong, Charles Doyle, Paron Ireton. Jr. Part II.—Renninah Freeborn, Susannah Hutton, Eliza Crowther. First.—May Ireton. Harold Hutton, Mathew Fritzgerald.

E. S. Moor.
Teacher.

A Free Gift.—Around each bottle of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure is a Medicine Guide and Receipe Book containing useful information, over 200 Recipes, and pronounced by doctors and druggists as worth ten times the cost of the medicine. Medicine and book $1. Sold by all druggists.

Our Wives.

Ruskin, in speaking of the wife, says:—"A judicious wife is always nipping off from her husband's moral nature little twigs that are growing in the wrong direction. She keeps him in shape by pruning. If you say anything silly, she will affectionately style you so. If you declare that you will do some absurd thing, she will find some way of preventing you from doing it. And by far the chief part of all the common sense there is in the world belongs unquestionably to women. The wisest thing a man commonly does are those which his wife counsels him to do. A wife is a grand wielder of the moral pruning knife. If Johnson's wife had lived there would have been no hoarding up of orange peel, no touching all the posts in walking along the street, no eating and drinking with disgusting velocity. If Oliver Goldsmith had been married he never would have worn that memorable and ridiculous coat. Whenever you find a man whom you know little about oddly dressed, talking absurdly or exhibiting eccentricity of manner, you may be sure that he is not a married man; for the corners are rounded off, the little shoots pared away in a married man. Wives have much more sense than their husbands. The wife's advice is like the ballast that keeps the ship steady.

Fine Watches

Clock's and Silverware,

Dealing

The People Appreciate it.

It illustrates my method of doing business. It means "SQUARE" dealing.

This is what I Practice and Guarantee.

The public will find my stock New, Quality best, Prices close, in American Watches—Clock's etc.

I do practical Watch repairing and Speck fitting.

Goods and work warranted, by the Peoples' Jeweller.

W. A. BROWN,
MARKDALE.

HEAD QUARTERS

—FOR—

Books, Stationery, Fancy Goods, Toys, Wall Paper, &c.

Toronto St. next Door to the Mansion House Markdale.

A. Dinsmore returns his sincere thanks for the very liberal support accorded him since commencing as above, and hopes by strict attention to business and moderate prices to merit a continuance of public appreciation and patronage. Those requiring

WALL PAPERS

would consult their own interest by examining his stock, consisting of over Three Thousand pieces at from 5 to 75c. per Roll. Sunday Schools requiring Liberary Books will find Hundreds to select from and at such FAVORABLE TERMS as are sure to satisfy.

☞ Note the fact.—That until I commenced business there was no such thing as a special discount allowed to Sunday Schools, or if you wanted Books could not get them unless by sending to Toronto or elsewhere, now your wants can be supplied at your Door and at lower prices than Toronto. I therefore with confidence appeal for public support. A full line of School Books, Stationery, &c..always on hand, also agent for the DOMESTIC PAPER PATTERNS. Agent also for The Harden Star Hand Grenade for Extinguishing Fires. ☞ NOTE THE ADDRESS,

A. Dinsmore.

New Tailor.

Will Stoddart, late of England and Jersy City, U. S. begs to inform the citizens of Markdale and surrounding community, that he has opened a TAILORING SHOP over Mr. W. J. McFarlaud's Store, where he is prepared to do all work entrusted to him in the Latest and Nobbiest Styles; as I will inspect all work before leaving the Shop, customers may rely on having work turned out first-class in every particular; trusting that I may receive a fair share of the public patronage

I remain,
Faithfully your's,
WILL STODDART.

Markdale, March 14th, 1887.

New General Provision Store

THE undersigned would hereby respectfully intimate to the inhabitants of Markdale and surrounding country that I've opened up a general Provision store where I intend to keep on hand a general supply of all kinds of provisions such as:—
FLOUR, OATMEAL, CORNMEAL INDIAN CORN, GRASS SEED, OATS, BRAN, SHORTS, CHOPP, SCREENINGS. also a quantity of SEED GRAIN, HAMS, BACON, LARD, &c., in fact everything people want in this line.

Shop one door west of Joe Lamb's Blacksmith shop.

Soliciting a share of public patronage I am respectfully yours,

Jas. Miller
MARKDALE.

COME!

To Stephen's

FOR

Your Carrots, Mangels, and Turnip Seeds, we have the best variety in the market. REMEMBER Our Seeds are

FRESH

Oil Cake! Oil Cake!
—OIL—CAKE!
—AT—STEPHENS
DRUG STORE.

Your's Respectfully,

R. L. Stephen.

R. S. Rae,  Tailor.

REMOVED.

In returning thanks to my numerous customers for liberal patronage during the past 14 years in which I have done business in Markdale, and soliciting a continuance of the same, I would also intimate that I have removed to my premises on Mill Street, next door to Stephen's Drug Store, and opposite to the Post Office, where I shall be happy to meet all my customers.

Respectfully Yours,
R. S. RAE,
Markdale

=TORONTO HOUSE.=

I am offering this week Ready-Made Clothing, and

BOOTS & SHOES

—AT—

astonishingly low prices. Persons requiring a summer outfit would do well to see my stock.

Wm. Brown.

BE SURE & GET YOUR PUMPS,

—FROM—

J. T. QUINN,

MARKDALE,

He makes as good a pump as there is in the market, and at the lowest possible prices, besides it is so convenient for getting repairs besides when buying from a distance.

Have some style about you and support home enterprise by buying from Quinn.

OWEN SOUND
MARBLE WORK

H. B. HARRISON
MANUFACTURER OF
MARBLE AND GRANITE
MONUMENTS & HEADSTONES
Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.

JUST RECEIVED
3 Carloads Finest Variegate Marble

☞ Largest stock in the Dominion select from. Personally selected at the quarries in Vermont. Will be sold at prices which defy competition.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

N. B.—Beware of Monuments and Head stones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered together, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide the imperfections, and called White Bronze.

H. B. HARRISON

ROBT. ASKIN,
UNDERTAKER,
MARKDALE,
FUNERAL FURNISHINGS
supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse
for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—
FURNITURE
In Stock at bottom prices.
PICTURE FRAMING
Done on short notice.
ROBT. ASKIN.

WM. BREADNER.
Carpender and Builder
GEORGE St., MARKDALE.
ALL kinds of building and house carpenter work done in the village or country. Call early before the rush comes. 339-52

CARD OF THANKS.

In thanking my customers for their liberal patronage in the past. I have much pleasure in being still able to supply them with the following celebrated machines, viz.

The Watson all-steel two-horse twine Binder.
The Watson Deering Binder.
The Watson Improved Lion Reaper.
The New Humming Mower.
The Humming-bird Mower.
The Watson Daisy Rake.
The Mann Champion Rake.
The Tolten Pea Harvester.
The Mann Broad-cast Seeder and Harrows Combined.
The Champion Combined Drill, Colter & Scott, Oshawa.
The best Plow's and Harrows in the market.
Root Cutters, Grain Crushers, Fanning mills. Land Rollers.
Agent for the Waterson's Co's Machinery and Steam Threshers.

Horse Powers, Wagon's Buggies, Democrats, and every implement a farmer requires. Parties reqiring anything in above lines will find it to their advantage to call at my new implement house opposite R. McNally's Carriage works, where Mr. R. Robertson will be pleased to wait on customers in my absence.

J. H. CARSON, Agent
148-61 Markdale.

CANADIAN PACIFIC R. R.

TIME TABLE.

—Markdale Station—

Going South.	6.47 a. m.	3.52 p. m.
Going North.	12.02 p. m.	9.10 p. m.

THE KEY TO HEALTH.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

Unlocks all the clogged avenues of the Bowels, Kidneys and Liver, carrying off gradually without weakening the system, all the impurities and foul humors of the secretions; at the same time Correcting Acidity of the Stomach, curing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Headaches, Dizziness, Heartburn, Constipation, Dryness of the Skin, Dropsy, Dimness of Vision, Jaundice, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Scrofula, Fluttering of the Heart, Nervousness and General Debility; all these and many other similar Complaints yield to the happy influence of BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

Sample Bottles 10c; Regular size $1.

HOUSEHOLD.

Hints for Housekeepers.

Windows can be cleaned perfectly and easily as follows: powder a little whiting, mix it to a smooth paste with just enough cold water to moisten, rub it all over the glass with a soft rag, and then polish it off with a large dry clean cloth or piece of chamois. For cleaning white paint, put a tablespoonful of ammonia in a basin of water, and rub the paint with a rag wet in it; stains can be removed by using any kind of sapolio on a wet rag, but it must be remembered that this takes off the paint with the stain; flannel is the best cloth for cleaning paint. To clean the dark wood-work of floors use a damp dusting cloth and then a dry one, or lightly brush the paint with a feather duster when it is only dusty. Painted floors imply the use of rugs; these should be lightly shaken every day if they are small, and brushed with a small broom daily when they are too large to be frequently shaken.

Druggets used to protect the carpets of dining-rooms should be kept clean in the same way. Curtains at the windows should be lightly shaken every morning when the windows are opened, and shades dusted with a feather brush. Upholstered furniture should be brushed with a soft brush every day, and leather rubbed with a soft cloth.

Mirrors can be polished with a soft cloth wet with a few drops of ammonia. The sun should not be allowed to fall on mirrors, because its rays affect the metallic coating on the glass. The rag wet with ammonia will easily clean the plated door knobs and any metal trimmings about the fireplace; also silver or plated salvers used at the table. Japanned trays can be polished with a little powdered whiting or dry flour, all of it being rubbed off with a soft cloth. Thus, it will be seen, an active, tidy girl can always keep her room absolutely clean by making it tidy every morning.

A little ammonia or washing soda in hot water, with soap and a soft cloth, will clean dishes well, and they should be thoroughly dried with clean soft towels. Many persons always wash glasses in cold water, without soap. Never pour hot water into a glass unless it contains a spoon; this will serve as a conductor for the heat off the water; and lessen the risk of breakage.

If all glass and china, when it first comes into the house, is put into a large boiler full of cold water, and gradually brought to the boiling-point, the subsequent chance of breakage is diminished. Ivory handles on knives should not be wet; the blades of steel knives should be washed before they are scoured with fine brick-dust on a wet cork or rag.

Soda in hot water will clean silver; all polishing soaps and powders simply scratch a bright surface upon it. When silver is not in constant use, keep it entirely wrapped in tissue-paper. A little olive oil rubbed on steel knives prevent rust. Keep a lump of washing soda in the sink, and flush it with hot water after washing dishes. Wash the dish towels after using them, with hot water and soap or soda, and dry them in the air; wash and dry the dishcloths also.

How to Cook Eggs.

The advisability of cooking more eggs and less meat as the warm weather approaches is well understood by most housekeepers but the manner of cooking varies too little. Do not always boil or fry an egg; try an omelet even at the risk of making a failure of the first one. Serve eggs, however cooked, in the prettiest dish you can afford and let no trace of their presence linger about the table from one meal to another. The following directions may be of profit to some of our readers:—

Baked Eggs.—Break the eggs carefully into a buttered pie plate. Sprinkle a little salt and pepper over them and also add a few bits of butter. Bake in a quick oven. Remove as soon as the white of the egg is cooked and serve in the same dish.

Curdled Eggs.—Pour boiling water on to the eggs and set the dish containing them on the back part of the stove or where the water will keep warm. Let them stand ten minutes. The white and yolk will be cooked alike and will be more digestible, than when boiled in the ordinary way.

Dropped Eggs.—Fill a pan with boiling water slightly salted. Lay in muffin rings and into each turn an egg. As soon as the white is set take the egg and ring up with a skimmer. Cooked in this way they are not broken or irregularly shaped as when dropped into the water without the rings.

Poached Eggs.—Five eggs, one tablespoonful of butter, one level teaspoonful of salt, one-quarter cup of milk and a very little pepper. Beat the eggs well, add salt, pepper and milk. Melt the butter in a small bright tin and pour in the eggs; set the pan n another of boiling water and stir constantly until the egg becomes a creamy mass when it is done and should be served at once.

Plain Omelet.—Two eggs, four tablespoonfuls of milk, one-quarter teaspoonful of salt, one-half tablespoonful of butter. Beat the yolks until creamy, add the milk and salt, and last the whites beaten to a stiff froth. Melt the butter in a small, smooth frying pan and pour in the mixture; it should begin to bubble at once. Cook about four minutes, slipping the knife under it now and then to prevent burning. When the top begins to set, fold it over and turn it on to a small hot platter.

Codfish Omelet.—Shred very finely a pint bowl of codfish, cover with cold water and cook half an hour in a covered sauce-pan. When tender, drain off the water; beat three eggs and stir them into a pint of milk and pour over the fish. Rub a piece of butter the size of an egg into a heaping tablespoonful of flour; stir into the fish and milk. Cook until it thickens and serve in a covered dish.

How to Keep Meat in Summer.

Summer, as housekeepers know, is the time when it is difficult to hang meat long enough to be tender without its becoming tainted. The joint should be securely bound with stinging nettles, then hung up in a canvas bag. Another simple way is to moisten a clean cloth with malt vinegar, and wrap it round the meat; while a third plan, easily carried out by country residents, consists in covering the meat with buttermilk, which must be renewed every second day.

Buttermilk is said to be good for soaking old game, hares especially, which can be made tender by the treatment. The same authority is loud in the praise of salicylic acid, "which has no injurious effect on the system, while the antiseptic properties are great." To prepare it, put a dram into a wine bottle, and fill up with luke-warm water. Meat just commencing to putrefy should be brushed over with this at intervals of a few minutes for half an hour, then washed in warm and lastly in cold water. Dry well before cooking if it is to be roasted. Another way to use the acid is to dissolve a quarter of an ounce in a pint of cognac. Two ounces of this solution may be added with advantage to each quart of liquid used for preserving fruits. Another use—soap the papers for laying on jam in the solution; those that touch the preserves, we mean, not the outer wrappers.

Joints of meats will keep good, even in the hottest weather, for a month, if plunged into boiling fat, when cool wrapped in straw and sewn in canvas bags, then hung in a cool place. Venison is said to be delicious if sprinkled, while fresh, with a mixture of charcoal, ginger, pepper and pimento, all in powder, afterward sewn up and buried six feet in the ground, where it may be left for three. It must be washed before cooking at a brisk fire. Salt should never be put on meat to be hung, it has such a hardening tendency.

Perhaps few things are purer and more efficacious than a weak solution of permanganate of potash for restoring game, meat or poultry already tainted. How often will a few hours work the mischief in sultry weather, the meat changing to such an extent as to appear almostirremediably spoiled. However, by washing in the fluid it can be sweetened. As long as the liquid changes color—that is, loses its pink tint and becomes greenish brown—it must be renewed. When it ceases to change color the meat will do. After this treatment it is more suitable for braising, boiling or stewing than for roasting and baking, although it may be so treated if well dried and floured.

USEFUL AND SUGGESTIVE.

To remove proud flesh, pulverize loaf ugar and alum very fine and apply it to the part effected.

An ink that will write on glass can be made from ammonium fluoride dissolved in water and mixed with three times its weight of barium sulphate.

A stiff paste of glycerine and red lead will be found useful in making a joint air or gas proof. It is used at the joint between the neck and cap of the flasks for generating oxygen gas.

To remove paper labels from old bottles, wet the face of the label with water, and hold it for an instant over any convenient flame. The steam penetrates the label at once, and softens the paste.

A Shop Hint.—It has been discovered that drill points heated to a cherry-red, and tempered by being driven into a bar of lead, will bore through the hardest steel or plate glass without perceptibly blunting.

Steadying a Plumb-Bob.—A simple and easy way of steadying a plumb-bob is to merely, after getting the line in position, drop the plumb in a can of water. The water offers resistance to the swaying of the line.

When the burners of kerosene lamps become clogged, put them in a basin of hot water, containing washing soda, and let them boil for a few minutes. This will make them perfectly clean and almost as bright as new.

Potato is used to clean steel pens, and generally acts as a pen-wiper. It removes all ink crust, and gives a peculiarly smooth flow to the ink. Pass new pens two or three times through a gas flame, and then the ink will flow freely.

To Harden Tools.—A. E. Tucker claims that he has successfully edged grooving tools for chill rolls by dipping the actual cutting portion in mercury. No more of the steel than is actually necessary should be dipped, as, while imparting extreme hardness, it naturally makes the body of the tool extremely brittle.

Substances in the Eye.—Everybody has experienced the pain and annoyance of "something getting into the eye." What should be done when this happens? In the majority of cases, if the sufferer has the patience to close the eye gently, and keep it immovably closed for from five minutes to a quarter of an hour, the offending particle will be safely and painlessly washed away by the tears which the eye will naturally shed.

The Pharmaceutische Rundschau gives this recipe for an excellent disinfectant: Four pounds of crude sulphate of iron or two pounds of sulphate of copper are dissolved in hot water, to which two ounces of sulphuric acid are added. Mix with the solution while still hot eight ounces of carbolic acid, filter and fill in bottles. When this powerful remedy cannot be applied in its fluid state dry sawdust thoroughly moistened with it may be scattered over the floor of a dark room or other places to be disinfected.

Hard and Soft Emery-Wheels.—Hard, close-grain emery-wheels do not cut so rapidly as soft, loose ones, from the fact that the particles in the hard stone compact, and the edges wear slightly before breaking, while in the soft wheel the cement wears first, and more rapidly, presenting new cutting edges to the work, which when but slightly worn will pull out of the wheel on account of this increased friction surface fresh sharp edges replacing them. This is proved by the fact that the fastest-cutting wheels are the softest.

Killed By a Spider's Bite.

Fritz Kibitz, one year and eight months old, was playing about the floor of his home at 650 Fifth street, in New York, about four o'clock on Saturday afternoon, when suddenly he began screaming. His mother ran to him and saw a big spider on his left hand. The little fellow held the hand up and acted as though he was in great pain. Mrs. Kibitz killed the spider, and, observing a small red mark on the child's hand, concluded that the spider had bitten it. She applied some lotion, but the child still continued its cries. A few hours later a small red lump appeared on the hand, which kept spreading until the swelling extended to the arm. A physician was called in and measures were taken to stop the spread of the poison. His efforts were unsuccessful, and on Sunday the child's arm almost to the shoulder was badly swollen. The little fellow suffered great agony, and cried incessantly until Sunday night, when he died. The spider was described as having a small drab body.

His Wife's Queer Little Laugh.

A Montreal business man's wife has been away on a visit to the old home in another city. He has lived during her absence ostensibly at home, but really has been living on porterhouse steaks at the hotel, and had just been elected president of a new whist club in which he had a young red-cheeked girl for a partner, and while of course he deeply regretted the enforced absence of his own dear wife he was managing to get along without pining away very rapidly. The other night he and his roseate partner had just swept the board. They had had a thirteen-trick hand, and the rest of the table was nowhere.

The Montreal man went home at half-past ten. Things looked just the same. He composed himself to write his customary letter, beginning: "It is now half-past eight o'clock. I have just come in from my work on the books. I am awfully tired, dear, ahd miss you so much. I don't want to hurry you home, and I want you to stay as long as you feel like it this time, for I shall not want to let you leave me again, etc., etc."

He finished the letter and stamped and directed it, and then took a look at the starlit evening, and thinking he would finish his cigar (he never used to smoke in the house) walked out to the corner. When he got back he heard a rustle in the dining-room and looked in. The light had been moved. There was a head bending over the light. His wife's smiling face looked up out of the radiance beneath the shade and greeted him. She was reading the letter. His heart dropped down his trousers' leg. He felt like death. "I'm reading a charming letter from you," said she. "So kind of you! It sounds like those you used to write before we were married." The lady read it through and then read it aloud.

"If she'd only 'a got mad I'd been all right," said the Montreal man Tuesday; "but she didn't—she laughed. Every one of my yarns twisted her up, and she laughed until it made me sick. I never got such a roast, and the worst of it is I've lost all of my reputation for veracity If I say I have been making up a trial balance at the office and it keeps me late, she draws that laugh on me and I wilt. It's terrible. I feel meaner every day. If it keeps on I'll have to fix it up with a sealskin cloak."

After the Honeymoon.

His pretty little pigeon and
His dainty little dove,
His bird of paradise she was
When he began to love.

Oh! then he said her singing it
Was sweeter than the lark's;
And made all sorts of similar
And sillier remarks.

He said she was his dearie, and
He said she was a duck;
He said she was a nightingale,
His charming little chuck.

But things are changed since they were wed,
All's not couleur de rose;
She "chatters like a magpie," and
Her "voice is like a crow's."

When she pours out her soul in song,
He'll wish her at the deuce;
And if she dares to speak a word,
It's "Oh, you are a goose!"

"Love in a cot," their motto was,
But, oh, the truth it stings!
Tho' she is just as bird-like still,
'Tis love alone has wings.

She Only Wanted to Know.

"Mamma!" said a little eight-year-old in the presence of that lady's new venture in the fatherly line for her daughter, "what makes you have so many names?"

"What do you mean, my dear? I have only got one name."

"Why, when I first knew you your name was Mrs. Wilson, then you was Mrs. Waters, and now you're Mrs. De Blinks," explained Sallie.

"Yes! that's simple enough, my dear. I married your father and was Mrs. Wilson. Then I married Mr. Waters, and then I married your papa here and became Mrs. De Blinks."

Sallie (thoughfully)—"I wonder what your name will be next."

De Blinks is also thoughtful.

Mac's Point of View

Sportsman, trying a greyhound: "That dog won't do at all, Mac. It never smelled the hare." Mac: "Well, I don't know. It's a good dog—a ferry good dog—shust ass good a dog ass you'll maype get; but the hare wass in an awful hurry!"

Not so Bad.

(Scene—Highlandman's Cross, Broomielaw. Dramatis personæ: Donald and Dugald.)

Donald—Is it pe possible? Is sat you, Tugalt? Man it's a lang langt time sin I'll didna sat ye pefore.

Dugald—Och, aye, Tonalt, lad. Man, did ye'll ken I've got marit?

Donald—Marit?

Dugald—Aye, marit, and what for no?

Donald—That's goot.

Dugald—Na; not so goot neithers.

Donald—Aye; whey's sat?

Dugald—Oh, she's got a dreadful temper.

Donald—Aye; that's pad.

Dugald—Na; na sa pad neithers.

Donald—Aye; whey's sat?

Dugald—Man, she has sillars and we poucht a house.

Donald—Och, aye man; that's goot.

Dugald—Na; not so goot neithers.

Donald—Aye; whey's sat?

Dugald—The hoose wis burnt.

Donald—Och, man, that's pad, pad.

Dugald—Na; not so pad neithers.

Donald—Whey's sat?

Dugald—Man, the wife wis purnt wis it, and she'll got tae insurance sillars to her nainsell, forpy.

A Paying Business.

Very Young Man: You wouldn't think it, but I've just paid seventy thousand dollars in cash for a house, all made by my own pluck and perseverance.

Young Lady: Really! What business are you in?

Very Young Man: I'm a son in-law.

A Political Difficulty.

"Let us elect to our halls of legislature," shouted an eloquent candidate, "men who are endowed with common sense."

A momentary pause here for the sentiment to be applauded when a voice came from the gallery: "But you can't get such men to run!"

A PALACE PRISON.

The Russian Czar's Retreat, the Castle of Gatschina.

A St. Peteraburg correspondent writes: The palace of Gatschina so much spoken of lately, can not be compared with such castles as Versailles, Sans-Souci, or Schoubrunn. It has nothing of the artistic embelishment of the one, the historical memories of the other, or the landscape beauty and comfort of the third. Situated in the middle of a wide and desert plain, it has no pretty surroundings, and built without luxury its exterior does not make an imposing impression. The reason that, in spite of this, it has been chosen as a residence by the Czar since his accession to the throne is no doubt that it lies nearest to the capital, and is so isolated and capable of isolation, that with the application of all the means in which Russia is richer than most countries, the approach of unwished-for individuals can be prevented: Gatschina lies between Zarskoje-Selo, and the roads from each of those places to the Imperial Palace, which have private court railway stations, are placed under particular supervision, and may not be used except by the court. A high wall incloses the park, in the centre of which is the police and this wall is protected by patrols, which never leave the outer circle nor the park itself for one moment out of sight. The entrance was, and is, only permitted by special order. The head of the Imperial security-police, General Tschwerin, and the head of the Imperial headquarters, General Richter, guard the palace with especial care, so that the isolation of Gatschina is considered so perfect that the Royal family can abide there in absolute peace. Though the superintendence is so strict, it is said that the inhabitants of the palace are not, and must not be aware of it. Their pleasure and comforts are not impaired by it; and all the amusements that could be agreeable to the Emperor and his family—drives, hunts, riding and rowing, evening parties, theatrical representation, &c.—can be partaken of. Adjoining the well-tended park is an extensive wood—like the park, surrounded by a wall and guarded. In the park itself are two lake-like basins of water; the palace contains splendid saloons, and two colonnades which afford agreeable promenades in bad weather; all this aids in preventing the inhabitants from feeling anything of the anxious and never-tiring supervision held over them, and the want of more charming surroundings.

Sometimes the Emperor and the Empress leave the castle and its region, and make excursions to the nearest country palaces or to St. Peteraburg, on which occasion all large escorts are avoided. The Emperor refuses to drive in the company of police, but the authorities still are zealous in taking all necessary measures to avoid accidents. Sometimes the Royal family inhabit Peterhof, but always return to Gatschina. Peterhof is more magnificent, Oranienbaum prettier, but Gatschina is considered safer and quietier. For many years before the accession of Alexander III. the palace had been unused; he caused it to be restored and comfortably furnished. It has been seldom spoken of and scarcely more was known of it than that the Imperial hounds were kept there. The Gatschina race was celebrated, and a dog from the Imperial pack was very valuable, but people cared little for the castle and park. Still Gatschina has its history. Peter the Great made a gift of it to his favorite sister, Natalis; Catherine II. gave it to her favorite, Orlow, who furnished it at great expense, and built additional edifices, by which, after the plans of the Italian architect, Rinaldi, it received quite a different form. After Orlow's death the Empress rebought it from his family, and gave it to the Archduke Paul, who inhabited it for some length of time. The palace forms a long square, at each corner of which is a stately tower. The dwelling rooms are in three stories. The colonnades run along the sides, and the pillars are of Finland marble. The rooms are not architecturally beautiful, but are adorned with valuable pictures and sculpture from the Imperial Hermitage in St. Petersburg, from the Anitschkow Palace, and from the Winter Palace. The views are limited by the park and wood, which, however, have been beautifully laid out by the celebrated St. Petersburg landscape gardener.

A New Pet for the Baby.

From Florida comes a suggestion in answer to the question, "How shall I amuse the baby?" Give him a baby alligator to play with. The little creatures are great pets with children, who are not afraid to take them in their hands and to their bosoms, or lay them against their cheeks with loving caresses as they would a doll or pet kitten.

They are a cheap plaything, costing but 75 cents, and are very moderate in their wants. A small tub, half filled with water, and a board laid slanting wise—with one end in the water, upon which they can creep up and sun themselves—and twice a week a bit of beef the size of an English walnut, is all they require to sustain existence comfortably. A cheap pet, and a charming one, the children think, who every year take hundreds of them North in perforated boxes. The first possession of them is a great delight to their small owners, who in their extravagant admirations take them out of their boxes in the hotel rooms and allow them to run about freely.

The lively little reptile, with his cunning head uplifted and black eyes peering curiously about, has a trick of darting suddenly and disappearing instantaneously, under the most careful watching. He has also a fondness for a warm berth, and is more than likely to turn up, upon search, in the folds of baby's frock, or if the infant be asleep, cozily nestled about the little ones neck, with his pointed head rooted under the plump chin. Should baby chance to waken he will laugh and coo and clutch at his slippery cradle mate, who will slip away from the little fingers as if they were greased. Children have no repugnance to the young "gater;" on the contrary, they love them and encourage their familiarities and are never tired of watching their droll, secretive ways.

"I often tell my husband," smiled Mrs. Jones to Dumley, whom Jones brought home unexpectedly to dinner, "that if he will bring gentlemen to dinner without letting me know a little beforehand, he must not be disappointed if everything isn't just as it should be." "Oh, I beg of you, my dear madame, not to think of apologizing," responded Dumley, with profuse politeness; "I have eaten worse dinners than this I assure you, and," he added, "I've eaten some pretty poor dinners, too."

VARIETIES.

The Russian Line soldier's pay equals a farthing a day in time of peace, and as much again in time of war.

A Chinese gentleman always sends a present of geese to the lady of his choice, as they are looked upon as the emblems of conjugal fidelity.

It is at the sources of the Chindwin, a western branch of the Irrawaddy, that the famous amber and jade mines are which have supplied China with these much-prized stones for centuries.

The coal consumed annually by the Grand fleet—about three hundred and [illegible] thousand tons—if built as a wall four feet high and one foot thick, would reach from the Land's End to John o' Groat's House.

"Kid-glove" oranges are grown in Florida, commonly so called because, when peeled, they are so dry that one can eat them while wearing kid gloves without damaging the latter in the least. The oranges are small and aromatic in flavor.

In Westphalia the peasants, on hearing the cuckoo for the first time, roll over and over on the grass in order to insure themselves against lumbago for the rest of the year. This is considered all the more likely to happen if the bird repeats his cry while they are on the ground.

The fox-terrier at one time was an indispensable adjunct to a hunt-kennel, and did good service in drawing coverts. The animals were in reality small earth-hounds, and it was the desire of old huntsmen to obtain them as near alike to the larger hounds in marking as possible.

Persians have one never-failing subject of conversation—their health. The pleasure of talking about the weather is denied to them; for, as eleven months out of the twelve are fine in Persia, the subject does not present sufficient variety. But a Persian, to whatever class of society he may belong, is never tired of talking about his ailments, real or supposed.

The average cost of wheat in nine of the principal centres of production in India during the four years ending 1884 was about a halfpenny per pound, as compared with 0.97d. per pound in the United Kingdom, and 0.85d. in the United States. India wheat at the place of production is therefore much cheaper than in either the United States or in our own country.

Palestine possesses a remarkable salt mountain situated at the south end of the Dead Sea. The length of the ridge is six miles, with an average width of three quarters of a mile, and the height is not far from six hundred feet. There are places where the overlying earthy deposits are many feet in thickness, but the mass of the mountain is composed of solid rock-salt, some of which is as clear as crystal.

The turnip-flea has the proud distinction of being by far the most destructive insect to turnip and swede crops of any in the long list of their enemies. It is on record that a crop was sown three times over, and was cleared off each time by the turnip-flea. As may be inferred from its name, it is an accomplished jumper. It can jump eighteen inches, or about two hundred and sixteen times its own length.

Hebrew maidens must have been fortunate beyond other women, for they enjoyed the privileges of leap-year every six months. From a lecture on Jewish courtship, delivered by Mr. I. Abrahams, it appears that, though the men usually did the wooing, twice a year the Jewish damsels went in procession to the vineyards, where some sang such engaging ballads as "Young men, look not to beauty, but to piety!"—while others, the more beautiful, retorted with "See how fair we are! Choose your bride for beauty."

The manufacture of glass in Europe is mostly carried on in France, Britain, Belgium, Germany, and Austria-Hungary, each country having its own specialty. Britain is celebrated for its flint-glass, which excels that of any other country. Belgium takes the lead in window-glass, which is exported to all countries. Germany excels specially in table glass, mirrors, and colored vases. It is also celebrated for its ruby glass. Austria—or rather Bohemia—rivals France as regards form and diversity of pattern, and beats Germany in the color and purity of its glass.

A Five Hundred Pound Turtle.

Sanner Brothers, commission merchants, Baltimore, received recently one of the largest, if not the largest turtles ever shipped to this city It is of the trunkback species and weighs about 500 pounds. It was caught Thursday at Gloucester Point, York River. The turtle became entangled in some nets running out from the shore and could not free itself. It was hauled in by ropes. About a dozen men were needed to put it in the wagon. The Messrs Sanner had it turned over on its back on the lower floor of their store, where it was viewed by many people. It is said this turtle is the third of its kind ever seen here. It measures nearly seven feet from the head to the tip of the tail. The shell, which is smooth and shaped like a trunk and not so hard that it will yield to pressure by the hand, at the broadest part, is three feet wide. The color on the back is black, under the belly it is spotted with white. The two immense fin-like appendages growing out on either side near the head, when stretched out measure across nearly seven feet. The fins at the tail are smaller, and the tail is short. The head is very large, and the eyes in keeping with the proportions of the other parts. At the thickest part the head is probably nine inches in diameter. The back resembles black leather or hard rubber. A pure loggerhead turtle is white, but a trunk-head is black. If he is not disposed of soon a tank will be made for the curiosity, where he can have salt water and enjoy a square meal of fish or other food, if he will eat.

A physician in New York city is said to have the following inscription on his billheads: "A patient's gratitude to his doctor is a part of his disease, and is most declared when the fever is highest, cools off during convalescene and entirely disappears with the complete return to health. Office prescriptions and attendance strictly cash."

"Pat, you've been drinkin' again." Beggin' yer pardon, but I've not, sor." "Pshaw! Your breath convicts you; what would you think if you should come into my room hereand be greeted with unmistakable evidences of the fumes of whiskey?" "O'id think, sor, it'd be moighty indecent of ye not to be lavin' the decanther there a gintleman ood hilp 'imself."

BY ORDER OF THE LEAGUE

BY FRED. M. WHITE.

CHAPTER XII.

Coolly, as it the whole transaction had been a little light recreation, and untroubled in conscience, as if the fatal card had fallen to Maxwell by pure chance, instead of base trickery, Le Gautier turned his steps in the direction of Fitzroy Square. It was a matter of supreme indifference to him how whether Maxwell obeyed the dictum of the League or not; indeed, flat rebellion would have suited his purpose better, for in that case he would be all the sooner rid of; and there was just a chance that the affair with Visci might end favourably; whereas, on the other hand, a refnsal would end fatally for the rash man who defied the League. Men can face open danger; it is the uncertainty, the blind groping in the dark, that wears body and mind out, unstrings the nerves, and sometimes unseats reason. Better fight with fearful odds, than walk out with the shadow of the sword hanging over one night and day. The inestimable Frenchman had seen what defiance to the League generally came to; and as he reviewed his rosy prospects, his bright thoughts lent additional flavour to his cigarette. Nevertheless, his heart beat a trifle faster as he pulled the bell at the quiet house in Ventnor Street.

Adventures of this sort were nothing novel to him; but he had something more at stake here than the fortunes of the little blind boy and the light intrigue he looked for. Miss St Jean was in, he found; and he was shown up to her room, where he sat noting the apartment—the open piano, and the shaded waxlights, shining softly—just the proper amount of light to note charms by, and just dim enough to unite confidences. As he noted these things, he smiled, for Le Gautier was a connoisseur in the graceful art of love-making, and boasted that he could read women as scholars can expound abstruse passages of the earlier classics, or think they can, which pleases them equally. In such like case, the Frenchman was about to fall into a similar error, never dreaming that the artistically arranged room with its shaded lights was a trap to catch his soul. He waited impatiently for the coming fair one, knowing full well that she wished to create an impression. If such was her intention, she succeeded beyond expectation. With her magnificent hair piled up upon her small shapely head, and its glossy blackness relieved only by a single diamond star, shining like a planet on the bosom of the midnight sky, with a radiant smile upon her face, she came towards him. She was dressed in some light shimmering material, cut low upon the shoulders; and around the corsage was a wreath of deep red roses, a crimson ribbon round the neck, from which depended a diamond cross. She came forward murmuring a few well-chosen words, and sank into a chair, waiting for Le Gautier to recover.

He had need of time to recover his scattered senses, for, man of the world as he was, and acquainted with beauty as he was, he had never seen anything like this before. But he was not the sort to be long taken aback; he raised his eyes to hers with a mute homage which was more eloquent than words. He began to feel at home; the dazzling loveliness threw a spell upon him, the delicious mystery was to his liking; and he was tete-a-tete.

"I began to think I had failed to interest you sufficiently last night," Isodore commenced, waving her fan slowly before her face. "I began to imagine you were not coming to take pity on my loneliness."

"How could you dream such a thing?" Le Gautier replied in his most languishing voice. His pulses began to beat at these sweet words. "Did I not promise to come? I should have been here long since, but sordid claims of business detained me from your side."

"It must have been pressing business," Isodore laughed archly. "And pray, what throne are you going to rock to its foundations now?"

Had Le Gautier been a trifle less vain, he would have been on his guard when the conversation took so personal a turn; but he was flattered; the question betokened an interest in himself. "How would it interest you?" he asked.

"How do you know that it would not? Remember, that though I am bound by no oath, I am one of you. Anything connected with the League, anything connected with yourself, cannot fail to interest me."

The words ran through Le Gautier's frame like quicksilver. He was impulsive and passionate; these few minutes had almost sufficed to seal his thraldom. He began to lose his head. "You flatter me," he said joyously. "Our business to-night was short; I only had to choose an avenging angel."

"For Visci, I suppose?" Isodore observed with some faint show of interest. "Poor man! and upon whome did the choice fall?"

"A new member, curiously enough. I do not know if you are acquainted with him: his name is Maxwell."

"May he prove as true to the cause as—you are. I have never had the fortune to be present on one of these occasions. How do you manage it? Do you draw lots, or do you settle it with dice?"

"On this occasion, no. We have a much surer plan than that. We take a pack of cards; they are counted, to see if they are correct; then each man present shuffles them; a particular one represents the fatal number, and the president of the assembly deals them out. Whoever the chosen one falls to has to do the task in hand."

"That, I suppose, must be fair, unless there is a conjurer presiding," Isodore observed reflectively.—"Who was the president to-night?"

"I myself. I took my chance with the others, you must understand."

Isodore did not reply, as she sat there waving her fan backwards and forwards before her face. Le Gautier fancied that for a moment a smile of bitter contempt flashed out from her eyes; but he dismissed the idea, for, when she dropped the fan again, her face was clear and smiling.

"I am wearying you," she said, "by my silly questions. A woman who asks questions should not be allowed in society; and should be shut away from her fellow-creatures, as a thing to be avoided. I am no talker myself, at least not in the sense men mean.—Shall I play to you?"

Le Gautier would have asked nothing better than to sit there feasting his eyes upon her matchless beauty; but now he assented eagerly to the suggestion. Music is an accomplishment which forces flirtation; besides which, he could stand close to her side, turning over the leaves with opportunites which a quiet conversation never furnishes. Taking him at his word, she sat down at the instrument and commenced to play. It might have been brilliant or despicably bad, opera or oratorio, anything to the listener; he was far too deeply engrossed in the player to have sense alive to the music. Perfectly collected, she did not fail to note this, and when she had finished, she looked up in his passionate face with a glance melting and tender, yet wholly womanly. It took all Le Gautier's self-command to restrain himself from snatching her to his heart in his madness and covering her dark face with kisses. He was reckless now, too far gone to disguise admiration, and she knew it. With one final crash upon the keys she rose from her seat, confronting him.

"Do not leave off yet," he urged, and saying this, he laid his hand upon her arm. She started, trembling, as if some deadly thing had stung her. To her it was a sting; to him, the evidence of awaking passion, and he, poor fool, felt his heart beat faster. She sat down again, panting a little as from some inward emotion. "As you please," she said. "Shall I sing to you?"

"Sweeter than the voice of the nightingales to me!" he exclaimed passionately. "Yes, do sing. I shall close my eyes, and fancy myself in paradise."

"Your imagination must be a powerful one.—Do you know this?"

Isodore took a piece of music from the stand, a simple Italian air, and placed it in his hands. He turned over the leaves carelessly, and returned it to her with a gesture of denial. There was a curious smile upon her lips as she sat down to sing, a smile that puzzled and bewildered him.

"Do you not know it?" she asked, when the last chords died away.

"Now you have sung it, I think I do. It is a sentimental sort of thing, do you not think? A little girl I used to know near Rome sang it to me. She, I remember, used to imagine it was my favourite song. She was one of the romantic schoolgirls, Miss St Jean, and the eyes she used to make at me when she sang it are something to be remembered."

Isodore turned her back sharply and searched among the music. If he could only have seen the bitter scorn in the face then—scorn partly for him, and wholly for herself. But again she steeled herself.

"I daresay you gave her some cause, Monsieur Le Gautier," she said. "You men of the world, flitting from place to place, think nothing of breaking a country heart or two. You may not mean it, perhaps, but so it is."

"Hearts do not break so easily," Le Gautier replied lightly. "Perhaps I did give the child some cause as you say. Pardieu! a man tied down in the country village must amuse himself, and a little unsophisticated human nature is a pleasant chance. She was a little spitfire, I remember, and when I left, could not see the matter in a reasonable light. There is still some bitter vengeance awating me, if I am to believe her words."

"Then you had best beware. A woman's heart is a dangerous plaything," Isodore replied. "Do you never feel sorry, never experience a pang of conscience after such a thing as that? Surely, at times you must regret?"

"I have heard of such a thing as conscience," Le Gautier put in airily; "but I must have been born before they came into fashion. No, Miss St Jean, I cannot afford to indulge in luxuries."

"And the League takes up so much of your time. And that reminds me. We have said nothing yet about your insignia. I may tell you now that it is not yet in my hands; but I shall obtain it for you. How bold, how reckless you were that night, and yet I do not wonder! At times, the sense of restraint must bear heavy upon a man of spirit."

"Thank you, from the bottom of my heart," Le Gautier fervently exclaimed. "You are too good to me.—Yes," he continued, "there are times when I feel the burden sorely—times like the present, let me say, when I have a foretaste of happier things. If I had you by my side, I could defy the world."

Isodore looked at him and laughed, her wonderful magnetic smile making her eyes aglow and full of dazzling tints.

"That could not be," she said. "I would have no divided attentions; I would have a man's whole heart, or nothing. I have too long been alone in the world not to realise what a full need of affection means."

"You should have all mine!" Le Gautier cried, carried away by the torrent of his passions. "No longer should the League bind me. I would not hesitate to betray it!"

"Hush, hush!" Isodore exclaimed in a startled whisper. "You do not understand what you are saying. You do not comprehend the meaning of your words. Would you betray the Brotherhood?"

"Ay, if you but say the word—ten thousand Brotherhoods."

"I am not bound by solemn oath like you," Isodore replied sadly; "and at times I think it could never do good. It is too dark and mysterious and too violent to my taste; but you are bound in honour."

"But suppose I was to come to you and say I was free?" Le Gautier asked hoarsely. "To tell you that my hands were no longer fettered—what words would you have to say to me then—Marie?" He hesitated before he uttered the last word, dwelling upon it in an accent of the deepest tenderness. Apparently, Isodore did not notice, for her eyes were sad, her thoughts evidently far away.

"I do not know what I should say to you—in time."

"Your words are like new life to me," Le Gautier exclaimed; "they give me hope and strength, and in my undertaking I shall succeed."

"You will do nothing rash, nothing headstrong, without telling me. Let me know when you are coming to see me again, and we will talk the matter over; but I fear without treachery you never can be free."

"Anything to be my own master!" he retorted fervently.—"Good-night, and remember that any step I may take will be for you." With a long lingering pressure of the hand and many burning glances, he was gone.

Isodore heard his retreating footsteps echoing down the stairs, and thence along the silent street. The mask fell from her face; she clenched her hands, and her countenance was crossed with a hundred angry passions. Valerie entering at that moment, looked at her with something like fear.

"Sit down, Valerie," Isodore whispered hoarsely, in a voice like the tones of one in great pain, as she walked impatiently about the room, her hands twisted together convulsively. "Do not be afraid; I shall be better presently. I feel as if I want to scream, or do some desperate thing to-night. He has been here, Valerie; how I sustained myself, I cannot tell."

"Did he recognise you?" Valerie asked timidly.

"Recognize me? No, indeed! He spoke about the old days by the Mattio woods, the old times when we were together, and laughed at me for a romantic schoolgirl. I nearly stabbed him then. There is treachery afloat; his plan is prospering. As I told you it would be, Maxwell is chosen for the Roman mission; but he shall never do the deed, for I shall warn Visci myself. And he was my bro——Visci's friend!"

"But what are you going to do now?" Valerie asked.

"He is a traitor. He is going to betray the League, and I am going to be his confidant. I saw it in his face. I wonder how I bear it—I wonder I do not die! What would they say if they saw Isodore now!—Come, Valerie, come and hold me tightly in your arms—tighter still. If you do not have a little pity, my poor heart will break."

Long and earnestly did Salvarini and Maxwell sit in the latter's studio discussing the events of the evening, till the fire had burnt down to ashes and the clock in the neighboring steeple struck three. It was settled that Maxwell should go to Rome, though with what ulterior object they did not decide. Time was in his favor, the lapse of a month or so in the commission being a matter of little object to the League. They preferred that vengeance should be deferred for a time, and that the blow might be struck when it was least expected, when the victim was just beginning to imagine himself safe and the matter forgotten.

"I suppose I had better lose no time in going?" Maxwell observed, when they had discussed the matter thoroughly. "Time and distance are no objects to me, or money either."

"As to your time of departure, I should say as soon as possible," Salvarini replied; "and as to money, the League finds that."

"I would not touch a penny of it, Luigi—no, not if I was starving. I could not soil my fingers with their blood-money.—What do you say to my starting on Monday night? I could get to Rome by Thursday at the latest.—And yet, to what good? I almost feel inclined to refuse, and bid them do their worst."

"For heaven's sake, do not!" Salvarini implored. "Such a thing is worse than folly. If you assume a readiness to fulfil your undertaking, something may turn up in your favour."

Maxwell gazed moodily in the dead ashes, and cursed the hot-headed haste which had placed him in that awful position. Like every right-minded man, he shrunk with horror from such a cowardly crime.

"You will never attain your ends," he said "Your cause is a noble one; but true liberty, perfect freedom, turns against cold-blooded murder; for call it what you will, it is nothing else."

"You are right, my friend," Salvarini mournfully replied. "No good can come of it; and when reprisals come, as they must, they shall be swift and terrible.—But Frederick," he continued, laying his hand on the other's shoulder, "do not blame me too deeply, for I will lay down my own life cheerfully before harm shall come to you."

Maxwell was not aware that Sir Geoffrey Charteris was a member of the League, as Le Gautier had taken care to keep them apart, so far as business matters were concerned, only allowing the baronet to attend such meetings as were perfectly harmless in their general admiration of the philanthropic schemes and self-denying usefulness of the Brotherhood; nor was it the Frenchman's intention to admit him any deeper into its secrets; indeed, his admission only formed part of the scheme by which the baronet, and through him his daughter, should be entirely in the Frenchman's power. The cards were sorted, and once Maxwell was out of the way, the game was ready to be played. All this the artist did not know.

With a heavy heart and a foreboding of coming evil, he made the simple preparations for his journey. He had delayed to the last the task of informing Enid of his departure, partly from a distaste of alarming her, and partly out of fear. It would look more natural, he thought, to break it suddenly, merely saying he had been called to Rome on pressing business, and that his absence would not be a prolonged one. Till Saturday, he put this off, and then, bracing up his nerves, he got into his cab, and was driven off rapidly in the direction of Grosvenor Square. He was roused from his meditations by a shock and a crash, the sound of two plunging horses on the ground—roused by being shot forward violently, by the shouts of the crowd, and above all, by the piercing scream of a woman's voice. Scrambling out as best he could, he rose to his feet and looked around. His cab had come violently in collision with another in the centre of Piccadilly. A woman had attempted to cross hurriedly; and the two cabs had swerved suddenly, coming together sharply, but not too late to save the woman, who was lying there, in the centre of an eager, excited crowd, perfectly unconscious, the blood streaming down her white face, and staining her light summer dress. A doctor had raised her a little, and was trying to force some brandy between the clenched teeth, as Maxwell pushed his way through the crowd.

"Nothing very serious," he said, in answer to Maxwell's question. "She is simply stunned by the blow, and has sustained, I should say, a simple fracture of the right arm. She must be moved from here at once.—If you will call a cab, I will take her to a hospital."

"No, on!" Maxwell cried, moved to pity by the pale fair face and slight girlish figure. "I am mainly responsible for the accident, and you must allow me to be the best judge. My cab, you see, is almost uninjured; put her in there, and I will tell you where to drive."

They lifted the unconscious girl and placed her tenderly on the seat. There were warm hearts and sympathetic hands there, as you may notice on such occasions as these, and there was a look of feeling in every face as the cab drove slowly away.

"Go on to Grosvenor square," Maxwell instructed the man. "Drive slowly up New Bond Street. We shall be there as soon as you."

They arrived at Sir Geoffrey's house together, considerably astonishing the footman, as, without ceremony, they carried the sufferer in. Alarmed by strange voices and the shrieks of the servants, who had come up at the first alarm, Enid made her appearance to demand the meaning of this unseemly noise; but directly she heard the cause, as coherently as Maxwell could tell her, her face changed, and she became at once all tenderness and womanly sympathy.

"I knew you would not mind, darling," he whispered gratefully. "I hardly knew what to do, and it was partly my fault."

"You did quite right. Of course I do not mind. Fred, what do you take me for?" She knelt down beside the injured woman there in the hall, in the presence of all the servants, and helped to carry her up the stairs.

Lucrece looked on for a moment, and then a startled look came in her face. "Ah!" she exclaimed, "I know that face—it is Linda Despard."

Enid heard these words, but did not heed them at the time. They carried the girl into one of the rooms and laid her on the bed. At a sign from the doctor, the room was cleared, with the exception of Enid and Lucrece, and the medical man proceeded to look to the broken limb. It was only a very simple fracture, he said. The gravest danger was from the shock to the system and the wound upon the forehead. Presently, they got her comfortably in bed, breathing regularly, and apparently asleep. The good-natured doctor, waving aside all thanks, left the room, promising to call again later in the day.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

It's Always the Way.

"Didn't I tell you so?" said a gentleman to an acquaintance whom he chanced to meet on the street; "it's always the way." "What's always the ways?" inquired a mutual friend of the two men who happened along just then. "Why, just this," replied the first speaker: "you see Smith, here, the last time I met him he had one of the worst coughs you ever heard. He complained of a loss of appetite, of night-sweats, of low spirits and other unmistakable premonitory symptoms of consumption. I told him to get a supply of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery at once. He did so and look at him now! Did you ever see a healthier looking man? The 'Discovery' has snatched thousands from consumptives' graves. I knew it would cure Smith. It's always the way."

Bustles are so big they make dresses shorter in the back. Not a pretty style, but it is a fact for all that.

She Broke the Engagement

because she saw that he had ceased to love her. Her beauty had faded, her former high spirits had given place to a dull lassitude. What had caused this change? Functional derangement; she was suffering from those ailments peculiar to her sex. And so their two young lives drifted apart. How needless, how cruel! Had she taken Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription she might have been restored to health and happiness. If any lady reader of these lines is similarly afflicted, let her lose no time in procuring the "Favorite Prescription." It will give her a new lease of life. Sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, of perfect satisfaction in every case, or money refunded. See guarantee on bottle wrapper.

The mania for tight sleeves is over. The waist is the objective point of the tight squeeze in dress now.

We ought not to be too anxious to encourage untried innovations in cases of doubtful improvement. For a quarter of a century Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy has been before the public and passed through the severest test and is pronounced the most reliable remedy for that disagreeable malady. Thousands of testimonials of its virtues. 50 cents per bottle. By druggists.

A duck of a bonnet often makes a goose of a woman.

YOUNG MEN suffering from the effects of early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted; also MIDDLE-AGED and OLD MEN who are broken down from the effects of abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and READ M. V. Lubon's Treatise on Diseases of Men. The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. E. Toronto, Ont.

When a man makes complaint that the times are too hard to make a living, isn't it much like a liver complaint?

A CURE FOR DRUNKENNESS,

opium, morphine, chloral, tobacco, and kindred habits. The medicine may be given in tea or coffee without the knowledge of the person taking it, if so desired. Send 6c. in stamps for book and testimonials from those who have been cured. Address M. V. Lubon, 47 Wellington St. East, Toronto, Ont. Cut this out for future reference. When writing mention this paper.

The cause of so many defeats in the battle of life is because men try to fight the ought-to-be's instead of the what is army.

Whenever your Stomach or Bowels get out of order, causing Biliousness. Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, and their attendant evils, take at once a dose of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Best family medicine. All Druggists, 50 cents.

A widow may not be much of a gardener but she always has an idea that she can raise orange blossoms from weeds.

LADIES

Who are Weak, Nervous and Exhausted; who fee themselves losing strength; who are pale, delicate and sickly in appearance, suffering from the many complaints peculiar to women—send for and read M. V. LUBON'S Treatise in BOOK FORM on the Diseases of Women. Mailed sealed and secure from observation on receipt of 6c in stamps, UNSEALED FREE. Address, M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. East, Toronto, Ont.

The more you puff a cigar the smaller it becomes. And that is the way with some men.

Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness and Hay Fever.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are cured in from one to three simple applications made at home. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent free on receipt of stamp by A. H. Dixon & Son, 306 King Street West Toronto Canada

A. P. 336.

THE BOILER INSPECTION and Insurance Company of Canada,
Consulting Engineers and Solicitors of Patents,
TORONTO.
G. C. ROBB, Chief Engineer. A. FRASER, Sec'y-Treas.

Dairy Salt,
FOR BUTTER, ETC.
NEW Importations.—Higgins' Eureka, Washington and Ashton Brands, in large or small sacks. Also Rice's Canadian Salt. Write for prices.
JAMES PARK & SON.
Wholesale Produce Merchants, Toronto.

COMPOUND OXYGEN—THE CONSERVATOR of health, the enemy of disease; heals the Lungs, Re-builds the Broken Down Constitution of young and old. Home treatment, sufficient for two months, Inhaler and all complete, sent by express for $12. Moved my office from 73 King West to 41 King East. MRS C. STIDMAN FIEROE. Four years established in Toronto. 32 Office Treatments for $18. Send for circular.

AGENTS APPLY TO THE WANTED
D.W. BEADLE NURSERY CO.
St. Catharines, Ont.

The National ELECTRO & STEREOTYPE Co.
23 ADELAIDE ST. E., TORONTO.
All classes of fine work. Mfrs. of Printers' Leads, Slugs and Metal Furniture. Send for prices.

ONTARIO CANOE COMPANY
Peterboro', Ont.

MANUFACTUR'S OF ALL KINDS OF CANOES
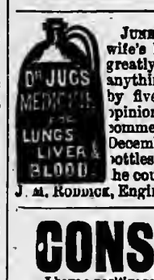
Send 3c. Stamp for Catalogue.

BABY'S BIRTHDAY.

A Beautiful Imported Birthday Card sent to any baby whose mother will send us the names of two or more other babies, and their parents' addresses Also a handsome Diamond Dye Sample Card to the mother and much valuable information.
Wells, Richardson & Co., Montreal.

FOR ONE CENT



FARMERS, who want to settle their family around them. Tenant Farmers, who want a home of their own. Mechanics, wanting big pay. Capitalists, wanting safe investments. Business Men, who want to strike a business boom. Ambitious Men, who want a home and start in life—send postal card with address to J. M. HUCKINS, 96 King Street West, Toronto.

Bicycles!

SEND AT ONCE FOR LIST of Second-Hand Machines,
From $15 Upwards.
New Catalogue Ready 1st April
A. T. LANE MONTREAL.

THE WHITE THRESHING ENGINE OF LONDON, ONT. A FULL SUPPLY FOR 1887.

J. L. JONES
WOOD ENGRAVER
10 KING ST. EAST
TORONTO.

JUNE 19, 1885.—For two years my wife's health was run down. She was greatly emaciated and too weak to do anything for herself; she was given up by five doctors, they all passed their opinion that she could not live. She commenced using Dr. Jug's Medicine in December, 1884, and after taking six bottles she was so much improved that she could look after her household duties.
J. M. RODDICK, Engineer, C. P. R., West Toronto.

CONSUMPTION.
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer. Give express and P. O. address.
DR. T. A. SLOCUM,
Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto

Ontario Pump Co'y,
TORONTO, ONTARIO.

Geared Windmills For Driving Machinery, Pumping Water, etc. From 1 to 40 horse power.

Tanks—Round or Square. Capacity from 12 to 2,855 barrels.

17 Sizes.
PUMPING WINDMILLS
from 8 to 30 ft. diameter.

I X L FEED MILL.
The cheapest, most durable and perfect Iron Feed Mil ever invented.

PUMPS.
Both Iron and Wood, Force and lift. We will guarantee our Deep Well Pumps to beat any other pump in the market.

We manufacture the most complete line of HAYING TOOLS, —SUCH AS—
Hay Carriers, Horse Hay Forks, Pulleys, Floor Hooks, Etc., in Canada.
We stand ready to GUARANTEE OUR STANDARD HAYING is he best in the market.

Legal.

P. McCullough.

BARRISTER, SOLICITOR, &c

OFFICE—OVER McFARLAND'S STORE,

MARKDALE.

Money to Loan.

MASSON & MASSON,

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, &c.

OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block, Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week.

J. MASSON, Q. C. S. MASSON. W. MASSON.

N. B.—Private and Company's funds to invest at from 6 to 8 per cent

---

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate se curitv.

WILLIAM STUART,

KIMBERLEY,

Issues of Marriage Licences. Money to Loan on Real Estate at low rates.

A few Farms for sale. Terms easy.

NOTICE.

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.

will visit Markdale for the practice of his profession on Thursday and Friday following the first Monday in each month, and at Flesherton the following day, Saturday.

MARKDALE HOUSE,

MARKDALE, - - ONT.

J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

ISAAC STINSON.

Builder and Contractor

In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.

Estimates given. All work guaranteed.

Orders by mail promptly attended to.

329 Residence, MARKDALE.

W. C. RICHARDS,

BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT. Markdale.

124ly

WEAVING.

Having returned to Markdale, in order to be more convenient for my customers, I beg to announce that I am now prepared to do all kinds of Custom Weaving. Residence old stand, opposite Presbyterian Church.

318 ARCH. BOYD.

R. J. SPROULE,

FLESHERTON.

Conveyancer, Appraiser, Valuator and Money Lender. Deeds, Mortgages, Leases and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice. Charges very low. Apply to

R. J. SPROULE,

Money Lender & Postmaster. Flesherton.

---

6 PER CENT.

Money loaned on Farm or Town Property at lowest rates of interest. Apply to

R. J. SPROULE,

Conveyancer & Postmaster. Flesherton.

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT 131 con 3 west of T. & S, Rd. Artemesia. 50 acres, about 20 acres clear of stumps and stones, balance good hardwood bush. Five miles from Markdale and four from Flesherton. For further particulars apply to A. S. Thompson, Flesherton P. O. or J. J. Thompson, Orilla.

342 ft

FREEMAN'S WORM POWDERS.

Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure, and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults.

HAVE YOU

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Jaundice, Headache, Dizziness, Pain in the Back, Costiveness, or any disease arising from a deranged liver, DR. CHASE'S LIVER CURE will be found a sure and certain remedy.

NATURE'S REMEDY

The unqualified success of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure in Liver Complaint rests solely with the fact that it is compounded from nature's well-known liver regulators, MANDRAKE AND DANDELION, combined with many other invaluable roots, barks and herbs, having a powerful effect on the Kidneys, Stomach, Bowels and Blood. 500,000 SOLD

Over one-half million of Dr. Chase's Recipe Books were sold in Canada alone. We want every man, woman and child who is troubled with Liver Complaint to try this excellent remedy.

SOMETHING NEW. GIVEN AWAY FREE

Wrapped around every bot of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure is a valuable Household Medical Guide and Recipt Book (84 pages), containing over 800 useful recipes pronounced by medical men and druggists as invaluable, and worth ten times the price of the medicine.

TRY CHASE'S CATARRH CURE. A safe and positive remedy. Price, 25 cents.

TRY CHASE'S KIDNEY AND LIVER PILLS. 25 cts. per box.

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS

E. T. HAMILTON & CO., Sole Agents, Brantford

Markdale Roller Mill.

FARMERS HAVING No. 1 WHEAT and preferring flour from their own wheat, can get it by bringing twenty bushels or more.

Flour always on Hand

Flour $3.80 to $4.20 per. bbl.

SHORTS, per ton - $12.00
BRAN, " - 12.00

The highest market price paid for Fall and Spring wheat.

J. W. FORD.

Public Notice.

To all whom it may con cern.

I R. L. Stephen the Druggist of Markdale have been appointed agent for JOHNSON'S celebrated Tonic and nervine. JOHNSON'S little liver Pills, and JOHNSON'S all healing White Ointment. The nervine is the very best in the market, in all diseases caused by poverty of blood, for Nervousness, Hysteria, and the PALENESS of Complexion so often noticed in female's, loss of appetite and general debility. In conjunction w th the Liver Pills, it is he very best for all diseases arrising from To pid liver or bad stomach

The White Oin ment is the very best in the market for Salt Rheume, Barbers Itch, Pimples, Chafs, Burns, Scalds, and all Skin diseases of a scrofulous nature. Try these fine remedies and you will not be disappointed.

For sale at R. L. STEPHEN'S the druggist, Markdale, Ont.

WM. G. GUTHRIE,

Plain & Ornamental Plasterer

MARKDALE.

Arches, Cornices, Centre Flowers, and all kinds of plain and ornamental plastering executed at cheapest rates. Calsomining Lime Washing and Repairs promptly attended to.

330

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of

School Furniture.

Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness, wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.

181 ANDREW McGILL.

MONEY TO LOAN.

ON real estate security, at low rste of interest, no commission charged. Business Strictly Confidential,

J. S, BLACK,

190 Pomona, P, O.

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT No. 24, con. 4, N. D. R. Glenelg, 100 acres, will be sold cheap and on easy terms of payment, for further particulars apply on the premises, or by letter to

J. S. BLACK,

190-tf. Pomona P. O.

Markdale Woolen Mill.

Custom Carding, Weaving, Fulling, Dyeing and cloth dressing, done in a workmanlike manner and on very short notice.

First Class Cotton Warp

supplied at the lowest possible rates.

A call solicited.

Terms strictly cash or wool.

Sept. 28, 1886 F. J. RITCHIE.

IT IS A WELL KNOWN FACT

—THAT—

McCOLL'S

"LARDINE,"

is the best known, and most reliable MACHINE OIL in the Dominion; Farmer's, Thresher's and Mill Owner's, will find it decidedly to their advantage to insist upon getting the "Genuine Lardine" when they ask for it, owing to so much inferior oil being sold under the same name by unscrupulous dealers. We are the sold manufacturers of the "Genuine Lardine" every barrel branded.

McCOLL BRO'S, & CO.

For sale in Markdale at Haskett Bro's Hardware Store. 347-73

WANTED!

Clean Timothy Seed,

—HIGHEST—

Market Price Paid.

H. PARKER,

DURHAM.

Prosperity!

The recent genial showers followed by fine weather makes everyone feel hopeful--and why not? yet it would be foolish to get extravagant and wreckless in business. It will be wisdom rather to step with care and practice economy by purchasing your store goods at

J. G. ANDERSON'S,

Mammoth Dry Goods Store, Markdale. You can get better value, either for cash or trade here then at any House in the County.

☞ Note a few prices.

A Dress Goods for 10 cents worth 15c.

A finer goods for 15 cents worth 22c. other lines equally low. Cashmeres from 25 cents up. Prints and printed Muslins all prices from 6 cents up.

If you want Cottonade at the right price, go to

J. G. ANDERSON'S

25 cent line. Shirtings all prices from 8½ cents up, extra value.

You should see our 10 and 12½ cent prints, they beat everything.

Don't forget to ask for our 7 cent printed Muslins, good width and fast colors.

We have a full range of dress goods at bottom prices, white and cream oriental flouncing and other goods to match.

TWEEDS & SHIRTINGS

extraordinary value.

Ready-made Clothing at prices that cannot be touched. See our $10 suits, good value for $15.

BOOTS & SHOES

at astonishing low prices. Our Ladies' button boot for $1.25, regular price $1.75. Slippers and low lace boots equally low.

Our Men's boots for 90 cents never before sold for less than $1.25. Low Shoes at 75 cents, regular price $1.20.

No trouble to show goods. Call and be convinced.

J. G. ANDERSON,

MARKDALE.

DEATHS.

KING—In Collingwood, on the 4th inst., Henry King formerly of this place, aged 63 years.

Holland Council.

Holland Centre, June 2nd 1887.

Minutes of former meeting read and corrected.

In the case of Mr, Love adjourned from last meeting, Moved by Mr. Howey, sec by Mr. Galbraith that assessors valuation of Mr. Love's property be sustained.

Moved by Mr. Murray, sec by Mr. Shute that M. Pryle's assessment on personal property be reduced $50.

Moved by Mr. Shute, sec by Mr. Galbraith that the Reeve and Clerk be a committee to look over the assessment roll and see that all the land in the township is assessed.

Moved by Mr. Galbraith, sec by Mr. Murry that this Court stand adjourned till next meeting.

BUSINESS MEETING.

Members all present, Reeve in the chair.

Minutes of former meeting read and corrected.

Shute—Howey—That the Clerk notify the Township Clerk of Sullivan to appoint arbitrators to meet the assessor to Equalize the rate in U, S. S. No. 1 Holland and Sullivan and to name the time for meeting.

Galbraith—Murry—That the account of C. W. Rutledge be paid.

Murry—Shute—That the account of John McDonald be paid (being Court house rent) and that the clerk notify the Sullivan council.

Shute—Howey—That the communication from Mr. Ramage with regard to repairing Conger's Side Road be laid over till next meeting of council.

Murray—Howey—That no more than 5 days be allowed to each pathmaster for overseeing and doing all the work necessary for a pathmaster and the rest of his labor be, if he should have more than 5 days, put in the same as any other Road work.

By-law No. 8 was read 1, 2 and 3 times.

Shute—Galbraith—That the clerk issue an order on the Treasurer for $450 in favor of trustees of S. S. No, 4 being money partly counted in error and that the clerk ask S. S. No. 11 to pay their part of it.

SATURDAYS MEETING.

Holland Council met for the transaction of business, Reeve in the chair; minutes of former meeting read and approved.

A communication was read from Mr. Cameron with regard to changing road beat.

Daniel Taylor applies for a road scraper.

Shute—Murray—That By-law 8 be read 1, 2 and 3 times.

Galbraith—Murray—That we reconsider the propriety of changing the arrangements of the Road Division between No. 3 Side Road and Arnott. Galbraith—Howey—That By-law No. 7 for the appointing of of Road Masters, Fence viewers &c., be read 1, 2 and 3 times and engrossed in the minutes.

Galbraith—Shute—That if it be possible to make the road on the original survey for road on what is known as Deviation on 50 side road for the sum of sixty dollars or less we prefer having it done in that way.

Shute—Galbraith—that the council act as road commissioners for the year as follows:—No. 1 ward Dr. Oldham, No. 2 Mr. Howey, No. 3 Mr. Murray, No 4 Mr. Galbraith, No, 5 Mr. Shute.

Treasurer reports funds on hand $1568,22,

Howey—Galbraith—That we grant $125, to each ward for road purposes.

Galbraith—Murray—That the code of By-laws now prepared for the guidance and instructions of Township officers and others be read 3 times and engrossed on the minutes.

Shute—Murray—That the By-law regarding the running at large of animals, also the one appointing Pathmasters &c., get one insertion in three of the local papers.

Galbraith—Howey---That the Reeve and Deputy Reave each take a man with them to examine the town line on behalf of the township.

Shute—Murray—That we adjourn till the 9th July 1887.

CARSON PRICE
Tp. Clerk.

SOOTHING, CLEANSING, HEALING.

It Cures

CATARRH, Cold in Head, HAY FEVER.

STOPS Droppings from Nasal passages into the throat and offensive expectoration caused by Catarrh. Sent pre-paid on receipt of price, 50c. and $1. Address FULFORD & CO., Brockville, Ont.

EASY TO USE.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN A. IRWIN [illegible] are visiting their son J. J. Irwin [illegible] of this place, Wheezing, gasping, suffers from asthma receive quick and permanent relief by using Southern Astama Cure. Sold by Druggists or by mail on receipt of price.

To the farmers and the public generally—Consult your interests and purchase your Buggies, Democrats &c., from Mason's Carriage Works where you can get a first class article with a warranty guarantee, as cheap as you can buy factory make rigs from Agents. Be loyal and support home industry.

CANADIAN CLIMATE.—The Canadian Climate is particularly productive of Cold in the Head and Catarrh. In fact Catarrh to-day is more prevalent than any other disease. The discovery of Nasal Belm places within the reach of all a certain mean of cure.

A Loyal Outburst of Music in the Dominion Parliament.

OTTAWA, June 6.—The House has witnessed a rare scene. Sir John read the beautiful address passed in the Senate to the Queen on this jubilee occasion, and had made a few pertinent remarks, Mr. Laurier, had uttered a brilliant eulogy on the Queen. The Speaker had put the question of concurrence of the Commons in the Senate's address, the House had passed it unanimously, and was preparing to pass to other business, when a member arose and began singing "God Save the Queen." The members rose. The galleries followed suit, and all, including the press gallery, joined with great enthusiasm in singing the National Anthem.

The following is the final [illegible] for Markdale Circuit.

MARKDALE DISTRICT.

Markdale, George Buggin; Flesherton, J. Walker, Shilton; Dundalk, W. Strongman, LL. B., Ph. D., R. C. [illegible] who shall reside at Corbetton: Eugenia, J. S. Corcoran, D. Auld, shifted to Toronto; Priceville, Wm. Oatman, Holland Centre, A. Thibadeau; Walkerton Falls, R. Johnston, James Enright, Euphrasia, R. I. Hosking. Geo. Bugg chairman; Dr. Strongman, financial secretary.

Holland Centre.

From our own Correspondent.

REMOVED.—The C. P. R. Co., have removed our esteemed Station Agent Mr. Stephenson. He left on Saturday last we trust for a better station. He has been very obliging and kept the office in excellent shape during his stay in this station. We hope his successor will merit similar respect and esteem at the hands of our citizens.

Holland Council met on Thursday as a Court of Revision. There were not many present and we believe the assessment was not changed materially. They met again on Saturday for general business.

Two cows were killed on the R. here last week by a train.

Our new constable is having a desirable effect on the quarrelsome element.

Rev. A. Thibadeau returned last week from Conference which was held at Galt.

Crops in this district are very promising and a heavy hay crop now certain.

Church Notes.

Rev. Jas. Hannon of Kincardine, has been elected President of Guelph Conference, and Rev. J. E. Howell, M. A. Seaforth, Secretary.

The Rev. Mr. Wilson preached an appropriate and able sermon to a large congregation last Sabbath morning in the Presbyterian Church on the occasion of the death of Mrs. Atkinson and Mrs. McBroom of this village.

Orangeville Presbytory will meet in that town on the 12th July.

The Quarterly Board of Eglinton Mission have given their esteemed pastor, Rev. R. I. Hosking, leave of absence for three months, and he with H. leaves on Thursday the 16th and will sail for England on the 23rd inst. We wish him a pleasant trip and safe return.

The Methodist people have made considerable, and much needed, improvements to the Church property this week. Mr. Bowes is deserving of more than the thanks of the congregation for his indomitable perseverance and valuable assistance in such matters.

Guelph Conference of the Methodist Church just closed reports an increase of membership for the year of 1,[illegible] also an increase in the Missionary fund of over $2,000 and of $500 in the Educational fund.

THE contract for the erection of the English church at Berkeley is let to Thos. Abbott, builder and contractor of that place. The building is to be veneered with brick and completed by next fall.

Markdale Standard

"HEW TO THE LINE, LET THE CHIPS FALL WHERE THEY MAY."

SEVENTH YEAR.—No. 354. MARKDALE, ONT., JUNE 16, 1887. C. W. RUTLEDGE, Proprietor.

Local and Other Items.

Notices in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

NOTICE.—Correspondence, communications, Advertisements, &c., must be in this office by noon on Tuesday to insure publication that week.

—AT—

RUSSELL'S

—NOTED JEWELERY STORE,—

FLESHERTON,

will be found the most complete stock of Watches, Clocks, Jewelery, Silverware, Spex, &c., in this part of the country.

Call and see those watches they are selling at $12.00, bearing warrants for three and a half years, while other dealers are asking $15.00 for the same article. P. S. Bartlett, 3 oz. coin silver case for $16.00 while they are selling elsewhere for $17.50. Other dealers cannot compete with us and they know it. We cannot help them being annoyed at our terrible low prices; we must give the public the benefit of our close buying.

☞ Just Note a few prices.

A fine Nickle Alarm Clock for actually only $2.00 bearing a warrant for two years. Your choice of over 20 fine plated chains for only $1.60; Just think of it. Fine walnut clocks from $2.35 upward. Brooches, Ear-Rings, Ladies' Chains, Cuff-Buttons, Scarf-Pins, at equally low prices.

Remember if you want your Watch or Clock repaired properly by a workman, Russell is the only place.

All orders by mail promptly attended to at

RUSSELL'S Noted Jewelry Store,

FLESHERTON.

Mowers! Mowers! for $50 cash at Jackson's Easy terms to good men.

Mrs Ed. Rutledge of Fort William is down on a visit.

Turnip Seed! Turnip Seed! At Stephen's Drug Store.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Wright visited friends at Markdale this week.

Door nobs in bronze, gilt, nickle and jet, at Mabee's hardware.

Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Coleman are visiting friends in Leeds County.

The Orangeville Post is a live fearless paper, and improving at that.

Mrs. Clement's is the place for candies and sweetmeats.

See the adv. in another column of the sale of 'Christie's Foundry' Owen Sound.

Croquet Sets selling very cheap at Mrs. Clement's.

Building hardware good and cheap at Mabee's.

All kinds of fruit and ice-cream at Mrs Clement's.

Get your door nobs, locks and bells at Mabee's hardware.

Special attention directod to J. G. Anderson's 10c. print.

The Standard will be sent any address the balance of 1887 for 50 cents cash.

See J. G. Anderson's 50c. White and Regatta Shirts, regular price 85c.

Miss Julia Pickell is home to Markdale from St. Louis, Misscuri.

Wm. Sargent, Berkeley, has a quantity of seed buckwheat for sale.

If you want pure Paris Green, go to Haskett Bro's.

Paris Green pure at the Medical Hall, A. Turner & Co.

Messrs. Shears, Carson, and Woodland, of Durham, spent Sunday last in Markdale visiting friends.

Mr. Harris, Inspector, was in Markdale this week arranging with our liquor dealers for a "Jubilee."

Handsome window curtain poles with gold nobs, from 60 cents up at Mabee's hardwate.

No use talking. J. G. Anderson's Tea 4 lbs. for $1.00 is the best value in the county.

The annual meeting of the Synod of Toronto Diocese, Anglican Church, opened in Toronto on Tuesday.

If its Dress Goods you want you can get better value at J. G. Anderson's than at any other house.

Chatsworth, and Owen Sound, Volunteers passed through Tuesday to annual drill at Niagara.

J. G. Anderson's 25c. cottonade is generally sold at 30c. in other places.

J. W. and Mrs. Whitby and Minnie Wilson, of Providence Bay, Manitoulin are down on a visit.

Turnip Seeds Fresh pure and true to name at the Medical Hall. A. Turner and Co.

1,000,000 doz., of eggs and 2 tons of butter wanted ot Davis' for which the highest market price will be paid.

For Sale.—W. & J. Anderson of Orange Valley has a good heavy four-year-old horse for sale.

A number of good second hand Buggies for sale cheap. Also a good Sulkey at W. Mason's Carriage Works, Markdale.

The Acton Free Press shows commendable taste and ability in its make-up and matter.

A cow entered the house of J. D. McNab in Owen Sound last week and did dirty mean tricks in the parlor.

Cigars! Cigars! lovers of a good Havana cigar will fine that Benson has the finest cigar in town, sold by the box.

A communication from Hawkwstone is crowded out this week together with a quantity of other matter.

Head Quarters for Buggie Tops, Milk Waggon Springs, or anything in the Carriage line is at Wm. Mason's carriage works.

Irish Lake Pic-Nic,—The eleventh annual, Jubilee Pic-Nic, will be held at the Irish Lake on Tuesday the 28th June. Further particulars next week.

A fresh stock of meal's have just been opened at Davis' which will be sold at a very small advance on cost as he will not be undersold.

Harvest tools, the largest stock, the best makes, and at prices so low that you will be surprised, at Haskett Bro's.

Remember you can get Bran, Shorts Henfeed the same price at Bensons, as at the mill, it saves you half an hour trouble, give us a call.

The Oshawa Scyths are acknowledged by all to be the best in the market; you can get them at Haskett Bro's.

Miss Vic. Lyons did not go to Toronto to take a situation, as we stated two weeks ago, but on business, and has returned. We mis-understood her.

Markrale Markets.—Fall wheat 82 to 82 cents; spring wheat 80 to 82; barley 30 to 50; peas 48; oats 28; butter 12 to 12; eggs 10; potatoes 75 per bag; pork 5.40; hides 5.50; wool 20.

R. McNally has a number of fine Buggies and Carriages completed, and those who contemplate purchasing such should call and examine before closing a bargain elsewhere.

Lime.—P. Harris of New England, lot 6, con. 6 Euphrasia, has on hand a large quantity of fresh burnt lime for sale at the kiln or will be delivered at reasonable rates.

Cash buyers will find meat in Sarjeant Bro's meat market as cheap as in any other market in Canada. Prime Bacon, Hams and other smoked and dried meats, as well as all kinds of fresh meats in season.

Our Little Ones for June came to hand last week, replete with sensible illustrations, stories and poetry for the children. It is a gem. Send 15 cents for a copy to Russell Pub, Co., Boston.

Rejuvenator Bitters assists nature and removes the cause of disease from the system, by keeping the kidneys, liver, stomach and blood pure, and natures channels free, then you have health. Sold by Smith the Barber.

The Farmers Advocate comes to hand every month replete with valuable matter for the husbandman. It is always true to name "The Farmers Advocate" and has taken a thorough independent stand on all questions.

Davis has constantly on hand a full supply of Ford's and Plewes' flour of the finest quality, if it is not right bring it back and your money will be refunded Special reduction will be given for large lots.

Reports from all sources are unanimous in saying that crops in Manitoba and the Territories never looked better since the country was settled. Farmers and business men never felt more confident of good crops than they do at prrsent.

Don't fail to call at Wm. Mason's Carriage Works and see the style and quality of the rig's he builds; he is making a specialty of the Buffalo Road gear the most stylish and durable Buggie built, and prices as low as any one in the country.

Mr. JohnBoland, of Artemesia, pulled four stocks of fall wheat on the 30th May which measured 38 inches. Of course Mr. Boland is one of the best farmers in the township, yet this is a remarkable growth for that time of year.

Nose broken.—A boy of about 9 years, son of James Henry of this place, was struck by a ball while watching a game in the agricultural grounds last week and had his nose broken. He lies in a precarious condition but will likely recover.

The Berkeley Presbyterian Sunday School will hold their annual pic-nic in the grove at Berkeley on June 21st. A lecture will be given by Mr. A. G. Jansen Thelogical Student, Williamsford, and Berkeley on "Experience and Life among the Dutch in Holland, Europe."

"Notice" to Farmers. Those that have to buy their "Flour" this summer. Can buy it at Benson's, the Belfast House, the same price as at the mill, and every lb. guaranteed, both Ford's and Plewes' kept on hand. Liberal inducements made on over one barrel lots.

To the farmers and the public gener l-ly—Consult your interests and purchase your Buggies, Democrats &c., from W. Mason's Carriage Works where you can get a first class article with a written guarantee, as cheap as you can buy factory make rigs from Agents. Be loyal and support home industry.

As the season is now opened for the sale of Bacon. Benson of the Belfast house is to the fore with a few cases; remember he will not be undersold by any one in the trade and if there is a cut to be given they are the boys that will give it to you, they are dacent little chaps.

A Garden Party will be held at the home of Mr. Jas. Foster, back line east, on Friday evening the 17th (to-morrow.) Teams will be furnished to convey those who wish to attend from the village and will leave W. A. Brown's Jewellry Store from 7 to 8 o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

Mr Andrew Fogerty s pushing his fine brick residence forward rapidly. He has the stone work about complete and it is a fine job. Something novel is the mixing of morter by horse power attracts the attention of many thus saving a lot of heavy work. He has also dug a well beside the new house and erected a large stable on the premises this season.

The Town Line (Methodist) Sabbath School anniversary picnic and tea will be held on Wednesday the 29th June in the grove opposite the Church. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Admission 25 cents, junior schollars free. Proceeds for new library and other necessary requirements.

Since the new daily mail between Durham and Chatsworth has been established, mail matter for Durham and neighboring offices will be meiled from Markdale P. O. on the C. P. R. north instead of south and if mailed before 11:30 a. m. will reach Durham the same day.

Mr. Whitby offers his beautiful farm for sale as may be seen in another column. This is a handsome farm in a good locality and in a fine state of cultiyation fit for all kinds of machinery to run full speed without fear of injury. Mr. W. is retiring from farming consequently he wishes to dispose of his place.

Davis is tc the front, with a new brand of oat meal, the steel cut, try it once and you will use no other, also a fine brand of Corn Meal just to hand, in fact anything in the Provision line may be procured at Davis' at prices which cannot be beaten, and if the trademean to cut prices, he aint like a fellow that an't stay with them.

J. P. Marshall, Dentist, has changed his arrangements for visiting Markdale and will in future be at the Markdale House on Thursday and Friday following the first Monday in each month, and at Flesherton the following day, consequently his next visit will be the 7th and 8th of July and at Flesherton the 9th.

The Christ Church Sunday School Garden Party will take place on Tuesday, June 21st, in the grounds of Wm. Lucas, Esq. The beautiful operetta "Laila" will from part of the entertainment. Proceeds in aid of Library fund of S. School. Admission 25c. Children 15c. Gate open at 7 o'clock p. m.

I have a few chests of that notorious uncolored japan tea left which I have sold at 30c. per lb and it has been pronounced by those who have used it to be better value than any Tea sold in town for the money—probably you ask why we can sell cheaper than those in trade? the answer is simply because we are satisfied with half the profit. W. L. Davis.

Moffat Bro's of the Markdale Foundry are going into the Stove Manufacturing quite extensively. They are making a line of cook stoves which we believe cannot be excelled, and a special feature in them is that they are heavy and substantial, a point which is very rare now-a-days. They are meeting with a ready sale, and we bespeak for them an extensive and prosperous business.

The Dominion Exhibition.—We have received a copy of the Prize List, just issued for the Dominion Exhibition, which is this year to be held at Toronto in conjunction with the Annual Industrial Fair, from the 5th to the 17th September next. Any of our readers who may desire a copy can obtain one by dropping a post card to Mr. H. J. Hill, the Secretary, Toronto.

Dr. Freeborn, who has lately returned from an extended tour of the Hospitals of Great Britain and the Continent, has now decided to cast in his lot amongst us, and we have no doubt, from his card which appears in our columns, that his professional attainments are such as will merit him a share of public patronage. The Dr. also served with Gen. Middleton as Surgeon through the late North-West Rebellion.

The Markdale "Stars" and Blantyre "Knockers" played a friendly game of base ball on the ground of the latter last Monday resulting in a victory for the former by 17 to 11 innings. A sumptuous repast was furnished by Mrs. Baily at the expense of the defeated team, after which all separated well satisfied. A return game is to be played in Markdale next week.

50 years ago.—A fac-simile of the Coronation Number of The Sun newspaper (Londou, England) printed fifty years ago, and now published in commemoration of Her Majesty's Jubilee, containing a graphic narration of incidents connected with the Coronation Ceremony, together with interesting anecdotes relative to the Coronation of all the English Kings and Queens from the time of William the Conqueror to King William the Fourth: this can be had at A. Turner & Co's for 10 cents.

Jubilee Jollities.—The Jubilee issue of Grip's Own Library, entitled Jubilee Jollities, has just been issued and is having a very large sale. In addition to a fine double page cartoon, there are two full page cartoons, the words and music of a popular song by John Imrie, "Queen Victoria's," and pictures on almost every page of the book. The price is only ten cents, and it may be had at all bookstores, or will be sent on receipt of price by the publishers. Address Grip, Toronto, Ont.

Dr. Jug's Medicine should be used by every one at this season of the year as it is the best blood purifier in the market and will reinvigorate the frame and prepare it to bear the heats of summer. The pills are justly called the "Little Gems" as they operate without causing either griping or pain and are a sure cure for nervousness, biliousness and other affections of the Liver and Kidneys. Buy them and try them and you won't regret your investment. Sold by Turner & Co., Markdale.

The Witness Jubilee Edition, well printed on good paper, is to hand, price 10 cents, and with the great Jubilee Picture, 50 cents, also a cheaper edition, printed on ordinary paper, for five cents. The number contains 12 large pages, with over 100 portraits and other illustrations. There is a history of Her Majesty's reign; sketches of canadian statesmen; a fully illustrated history of the Royal Arms and other interesting articles; forming a work of reference with regard to the history of our times in Great Britain and Canada. For sale by all news dealers.

Accident.—On Saturday last Mr. B. Coleman had been for a drive with a young horse and buggy, and when returning, his two little girls aged 6 and 4 years met him at the gate for a ride. they all rode to the barn and while unhitching, the girls being still in the buggy, the colt took fright and ran the rig over a gang plow upsetting it and pitching the girls forcibly out; they were picked up and carried to the house and Medical aid called in when the younger one was found to have one bone of her wrist broken and otherwise scratched but not seriously; the other was stunned so that she did not speak for several hours being thrown out on her head. The horse broke loose from the buggy and ran to the village, half a mile, where it was caught none the worse. The girls are recovering.

FARMERS!

Don't forget there is good work done at the Flesherton

WOOLEN FACTORY

Customers are finding out it is to their advantage to deal with us, our Prices are Low and Our Goods are Reliable and notwithstanding price being cut so close on account of hard times, I intend to reduce the manufacturing prices in nearly every branch, viz., CARDING, SPINNING, WEAVING, &c., &c. Give us a trial and see for yourself.

W. H. FLESHER.

Flesherton, May 30th, 1887.

The Battle of the Windmill.

BY A. R. CARMAN, B. A., TORONTO.

(Concluded.)

At this point, Col. Fraser drew off a portion of his line partly as a ruse, but principally to preserve it from annihilation. The brave young fellows protested against even this retreat but fell back with the obedience of veterans. A portion of the rebels, thinking the troops in full rout, charged after them recklessly, but soon found their mistake when surrounded and repulsed, to be afterwards captured in detail. Having thus reduced the enemy's force by some fifty to sixty men—their boldest spirits too—the volunteers again returned to the attack and charging at the "double-quick," heedless of flashing rifles, whistling bullets and falling men, drove the rebels from fence to fence, each one stubbornly contested, until they were forced to find shelter in the mill and adjacent houses. Perhaps, at this juncture, the machine veteran would have retired and waited for reinforcements; but brutal war had touched these lusty fellows with his blood-red wand and they fought no more for success but for revenge. Kin, comrades, had been struck down before their eyes and borne, bleeding and struggling, back to die. Their manhood cried out for vengeance and the brute within them tapped the rifle, sniffed the powder and pointed to the foe. And they went—and many of them never came back. The "Partriots" were again entrenched in fortifications particularly impervious to rifle-balls, and picked off the volunteers at their pleasure from the windows of the houses and mill. During the afternoon, an old barn that had afforded shelter to the troops, was burned by the enemy; and thus being entirely without protection, they withdrew, grimly and silently, to await the arrival of artillery. And all through the fading afternoon and late into the starless night, these men lay, soaked through, along the low walls that had sheltered the rebels during the morning and kept up an irregular spattering of musketry at the beleaguered foe which was as spasmodically returned.

In the morning, Col. Young sent a flag of truce to bring in the wounded, who had lain on the field all night, and bury the dead; and the rebels, taking advantage of this same sweet gift of Peace to her burly brother, War, gave the corpses nearest the Mill decent burial. This was the last truce between the beleaguered forces; when the flag had been withdrawn and the spiteful spitting of small arms resumed, there was no quiet again until Von Shoultz lay, handcuffed, in prison.

Wednesday, Thursday and Friday morning were spent in waiting, keeping up meanwhile a pretence at fight by means of a sporadic and intermittent firing from both sides, generally harmless and always wasteful. Both parties were looking for reinforcements; the rebels expected swarms of their fellow "deliverers of Canada" to join them and make this stand at Prescott the nucleus of a new Republic, while Col. Young and his staff were awaiting guns of sufficient calibre to reduce the solidly built stone houses occupied by the enemy; and the rebel hope was not without foundation. Thousands had gathered on the American shore, whence they openly encouraged and at times cheered the efforts of the invading forces. Eloquent and fiery orators harranqued immense assemblages in Ogdensburg, urging them to cross over and help their "brethren" throw off the "tyranny of British rule;" and, indeed, they were restrained from doing so with great difficulty, and then, not because of the injustice of the act but by its probable failure. General Winfred Scott, whom the American Government had dispatched to the frontier for this very work, put before them the folly of endeavoring to free Canadians who were evidently satisfied with their lot and begged them not to bring disgrace upon American arms; "for," he added, "I tell you plainly, that no body of undisciplined citizens, however numerous, can stand for ten minutes the charge of a single regiment of British regulars."

This sympathy with the "patriots" was not confined to the rabble, by any means, for one Isaac Ellwood, as member of the Board of Supervisors—a sort of county council—then in session at Canton, moved that the Board adjourn to enable its members "to rescue that Spartan band of patriotic friends" who were fighting against "the advocates and minions of British tyranny and oppression" at "Windmill Point, near Prescott." This motion, however, was tabled to be reworded, which was never done.

At one time during the temporary absence of the Experiment up the River, a small steamer, aptly named the Paul Pry, came over from Ogdensburg and urged the defenders of the Mill to get on board and make their escape, during the respite, to the American shore; but Preston, being a fiery revolutionist, persuaded the "Patriots" that large reinforcements were hurrying to their support, and that they had but to hold on a little longer when they could disperse the handful of opposing troops, at which the Canadians would flock gladly to their banner hailing them as deliverers and honoring them as leaders. Unfortunately, the garrison were flattered by this roseate picture, and, dreaming of future fame and power, determined to stay; but the highest that "adoring Canadians" ever raised any of them was to the "drop" of the scaffold. This Preston King afterwards paid what some would call a debt to the Fates by tying two bags of shot about his neck and drowning himself off a New York pier.

On Friday morning, the dark, heavy clouds that had hung over this battle-ground all week, like a pall, broke apart, here and there, letting the sun shine fitfully in through the ever-changing rifts. The brave boys were wearied with their week's work and watching, and exasperated at the result. Since the sullen withdrawal on Tuesday afternoon, they had done nothing but crowd around Windmill Point, firing a futile shot now and then, watching the smoke-puffs at the windows and then listening for the "twang" of the bullet; and several times when a comrade raised himself too far above his stoney shelter, they had seen the blood dash from his forehead, and then watched him roll over on the ground, limp and still. Horrible rumors had spread through the ranks of ill-treatment of prisoners and mutilation of the dead. Two women, Mrs. Taylor and her daughter, were captured by the rebels in a hotel near the Mill, the ruined walls of which are standing in broken desolation by the road-side, to-day. Nothing absolutely certain was known at this time, but stories of frightful ill-usage were whispered about among the men; and a scout, crawling near the beleaguered houses under the cover of night, discovered the dead body of Lieut. Johnston hanging naked and horribly mutilated from the limb of an oak a little to the west of the mill. These facts infuriated the soldiery and they gave vent to a shout that bordered on savage exultation, when, at a little after twelve on Friday, three steamers were descried ploughing down the river, doubtless bearing the long-expected reinforcements. Presently they arrived at the wharves, when the 83rd regiment of the line disembarked, followed by a detachment of the Royal Artillery, armed with three 24-pounders. The vessels—the Brockville, the William IV. and the Cobourg—were mounted with light cannon and steamed off down the river to take part in the final assault. The 83rd, accompanied by the artillery corps, deployed into a strong position on the rising slope to the rear of the Windmill—a little farther north than the ground occupied by Col. Fraser on Tuesday—and opened a heavy cannonade upon the conical mill and the surrounding stone houses, so long held by the invaders. This fire was immediately echoed from the boats on the river, and shot after shot from both sides ploughed into this nest of rebels. After barely a half-hour's bombardment, a white flag was floated from the top of the mill; but in spite of this cry for truce, the cannonade thundered on.

Critics have been very severe upon this point, condemning the British troops in sentences aglow with red-hot adjectives. They have been described as "brutes" and "barbarians," when their only crime lay in being too human It requires a machine to move with perfunctory exactness; and while the "regular" soldier—whose very heart fibres are replaced by steel—could fight all week without an emotion and at the command "cease firing" drop his rifle to his side as if you had touched a spring in an automaton, these young men had looked upon every death as a murder, upon the mutilation of Lieut. Johnson as ghoulish, and upon the reputed foul usage of two defenceless women as fiendish, and in their mad rage they viewed this flag of truce as an intervention of that very "machine" law which would set these "devils" scot-free; and remembering their dead comrades in a dozen homes, they fired on. It was wrong, but it was the same instinct that leads a man to protect a friend and prosecute the wretch who would violate his home. If self-preservation is the first law of nature," just retaliation makes a good second. "But the officers," you say. Most of them were of the Militia, some having borne dead to their own homes; and the sternest veteran was only too glad to teach this daring band of marauders a lesson, hoping by their fate to chill any further dangerous enthusiasm across the border.

The clouds had sullenly closed up the rifts of the morning, hurrying and deepening the dusk of the early evening. The batteries on the hillside roared on, and what had under the sunlight been puffs of smoke, now became lurid jets of flame. The large boats steamed up and down the current keeping up an irregular fire upon the mill; and, under the orders of Col. Young, the men were now creeping nearer the beleaguered houses. The rebel fire had well-nigh ceased, but now and then a flash from one of the darkened windows told that some fellow had shot in sheer desperation at a moving shadow. Presently the scouts were joined by practically the whole line, and the "creep" became a formal advance. A detailed description of the fight at this stage is simply impossible. The cannonading was reduced to an occasional shot, and the work left to the volunteers. As they surrounded a house, the rebels fled back to the next one, exchanging a few shots in the melee; and the troops rushed into the place, securing in a few moments anything worth saving at such a time, set fire to the remainder which soon became a blazing, crackling mass of flame. This was repeated at each of the other houses until the rebels were all driven into the Windmill except some few who endeavored to crawl away down the sloping bank of the river and thus through the lines, but to be seized by perhaps not the gentlest of captors. The finding of the dead body of Mrs. Taylor in the cellar of her hotel and her daughter lying wounded—the lower jaw being literally blown off—did not do much to soften the anger of the troops; and they gathered around the ill-fated Mill preparing for the final assault under the ghastly light of burning houses which lit up the scene, revealing many a dead comrade and wounded sufferer, and flashing out, red and lurid, against the dark waters and darker sky. Just then the door was flung back at the bottom of the mill and out there stepped into the fitful light a solemn procession of unarmed men. The "Patriots" had surrendered at discretion. They were immediately seized by the troops, each man pinioned between the soldiers and marched up prisoners to Prescott. A moment's search showed that the chief, Von Shoultz, was not among the number, and after the mill had been ransacked in vain, he was found hiding with a few others in the low bushes that grew in great profusion along the base of the bluff on which the mill stood. He was brought up under the glare of the blazing buildings and stood pinioned and helpless but hardly conquered, tall, slim and swarthy, a man who had left the tyranny of Poland for the broad freedom of America and found it tame. At the whisper that Canadians were in the old struggle to throw off oppression, the hot blood in his veins, fired by the fight of a dozen generations against despotism surged from his heart to his brain, bidding him go and help them; and he went. Ill-advised? Yes, but true-hearted and when the Patriot, Von Shoultz was led off the crest of Windmill Point and up to the headquarters of Col. Young (the residence of a Mr. Gainsford, now standing on the corner of Centre and Henry Sts., Prescott), it would be well for the historian to follow him; but this paper was not written to falsely flatter the actors in this scene. We have excused the fierce favor of the young volunteers, we can condone the desire of the officers to inflict severe punishment upon the invaders as a warning to any would-be imitators; but we cannot smooth over the brutality, the indecency, the quintessence of meanness, shown by the human harpies who flocked over the blackened and blood-be-sprinkled ground as soon as the bullets had ceased flying and all danger was past. For the credit of our service, we are glad to say there were few of them volunteers. Every rifle and vestige of arms that could be found were carried off. The dead bodies of the invaders, that lay in mute appeal upon the ground, were heartlessly stripped of every article of clothing. Capt. Plumb, who was engaged with Dr. Scott in drawing the wounded up to the town hospital, says that on Saturday morning he counted thirteen dead rebels lying nude about the mill; and the same gentleman is authority for the statement that some farmers in vicinity wore clothes torn from these bodies, that must still have been bleeding and warm, for four years after the battle. Even the prisoners were deprived of their hats, boots and coats—and this must have been, at least, winked at in official quarters; and when being taken out of their temporary goal in Prescott for transshipment to Kingston, an eye witness describes the scene as brutal in the extreme. The poor fellows were pinioned in a helpless manner and then flung several feet upon their faces into a cart—a writhing mass of bruised humanity. During the search about the mill, one refugee was found hiding under a barn and ruthlessly shot dead there. These were acts of deliberate cruelty and incarnate selfishness and must not be mentioned in the same breath as the heart-full cry for revenge that the sight of coffined friends sent welling up through lusty young throats.

Now, in a few words, let us crowd together the statistics of the battle for the information of the student. The "Patriots" must have numbered between 250 and 300, of these some 60 odd men were captured during the battle and 110 surrendered on Friday night. The exact number of the killed and wounded was never ascertained, but various authorities put the killed at different figures between 40 and 70; numbers are known to have escaped through the fields and across the river during the fight. The official British return shows:—officers, killed 2; wounded, 4; men, killed 11; wounded 63. The officers killed were Lieut. Johnston, 83rd, and Lieut. Dulmage, 2nd Grenville Militia. The officers wounded were, Lieut.-Col. Gowan, 9th Provisional Battalion, slightly; Lieut. Parker, Royal Marines, slightly; Lieut. Parlow, 2nd Dundas Militia, severely; and Lieut. McDonald, Glengarry Highlanders, slightly.

The rebel prisoners were all tried before the general courts martial in the spring of '39 for treason and sentenced to be hanged. In most cases, however, the sentence was commuted to transportation to Van Dieman's Land, but, unfortunately, the gallant Von Schoultz met his death upon the scaffold. His execution was well-nigh a necessity as a warning; but, as Britain mourned when Major Andre was hanged as a spy, all lovers of the brave and chivalrous deeply regretted the fate of Von Shoultz.

Reform in Morocco.

Reform is carried with a high hand in Tangiers. No public meetings are necessary no long speeches need be made in the city councils. As soon as the mind of the Sultan of Morocco is settled, upon any question, he merely indicates the course which it is desirable that his subjects should pursue, and, if they do not take his forcible hints, woe be unto them! Recently, the faithful of Tangiers were informed, after the morning prayers held in all the mosques, that their sovereign has determined to forbid the sale or purchase of all intoxicants, especially of tobacco, snuff and "kief," a preparation of kemp. Think of cutting off a Moor from the privilege of his pipe!

That his highness was in grim earnest was speedily made to appear; for, a few hours after the promulgation of the decree, two soldiers, found smoking kief, were put in irons and cast into prison. Many of the townspeople, who had not even heard of the edict, were soundly bastinadoed for disobeying its provisions, and certain old smorkers, who could not at once break themselves of their bad habits, were cast into prison, with the pleasant prospect of being flogged ignominiously through the streets.

The shop in which intoxicants had been sold were closed, and large quantities of kief were burned in the market-place. Processions of ragamuffins paced the streets, exhalting the wisdom of the Sultan's proclamation, and hooting the snuff-stained handkerchiefs which they carried upon long poles.

Such arbitrary measures may seem too extreme, even in so good a cause, but the Sultan has reason for severity. Tobacco is not strictly allowable for believers in the Koran, and kief is the inseparable companion of Moslem degeneracy. It is against this article that the new crusade, if we may so characterize a Mohammedan agitation, is directed.

It is one of the most insiduous of narcotics, suppyling its victim with celestial visions and beatific serenity for a time, and ending by dominating his soul and body, like a tyrannical master.

Swallowed a Menagerie.

M. D'Orbigny, a traveller who was passing through Guiana, in South America, was, when encamped one night in the edge of a wood, awakened by what he took to be the cries of a man in distress. He listened, and heard, following each other in great rapidity, what seemed to be a scream of terror and despair, then a supplication, and then a cry as of one dying. The traveller leaped from his couch, seized his gun, and hastily woke his Indian guide.

"Come, this instant!" he cried. "There is some one being murdered in this thicket. Let us go to his assistance."

Thereupon the cries were repeated, and the Indian listened. He burst into a laugh.

"What do you mean?" asked the traveller.

"That, sir," said the guide, "is the tion-tion bird, perched on a limb somewhere in the neighborhood. It is only a piece of mockery. Presently you will hear him laugh."

And, then, in fact, a wild shout as of laughter rang out on the night-air.

The tion-tion is a sort of American mocking-bird, which has an extraordinary gift of imitation. It is also a bird of great beauty of plumage. It is sometimes called the "yellow-neck." Its feathers are of lively colors and its tail is brilliant and spreading. The natives use its feathers to decorate their hats with on feast-days, and turn their head-gear into golden crowns in appearance.

The bird mimics almost every sound he hears, and imitates the speech of men as successfully as the parrot does. The inhabitants of Guiana assert that he can imitate faithfully the accent of the English, French, and Spanish. Natural sounds and the cries of animals of every sort he reproduces very cleverly. The story is told of a negro who saw and heard the tion-tion for the first time, and who exclaimed after the bird had gone through his long list of imitations of animals, "Ha! him eat a whole menagerie!"

Three things that never become rusty—the money of the benevolent, the shoes of the butcher's horse, and a woman's tongue.

Angel or Demon.

BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

You call me an angel of love and of light,
A being of goodness and heavenly fire,
Sent out from God's kingdom to guide you aright
In paths where your spirit may mount and aspire.
You say that I glow like a star on its course,
Like a ray from the altar, a spark from the source.

Now list to my answer; let all the world hear it;
I speak unafraid what I know to be true;
A pure, faithful love is the creative spirit
That makes women angels. I live but in you.
We are bound soul to soul by life's holiest laws,
And if I am an angel, why, you are the cause.

As my ship skims the sea I look up from her deck,
Fair, firm at the wheel shines love's beautiful form:
And shall I scorn the bark that last night went to wreck,
By the pilot abandoned to darkness and storm?
My craft was no stancher; she too had been lost
Had the wheelman deserted or slept at his post.

I laid down the wealth of my soul at your feet
(Some woman does this for some man every day).
No desperate creature who walks in the street
Has a wickeder heart than I might have, I say,
Had you wantonly misused the treasures you won,
As so many men with heart riches have done.

This fire from God's altar, this holy love flame,
That burns like sweet incense forever for you,
Might now be a wild conflagration of shame
Had you tortured my heart or been base or untrue.
For angels and devils are cast in one mould,
Till love guides them upward and downward, I hold.

I tell you the women that make fervent wives
And sweet, tender mothers, had fate been less fair,
Are the women that might have abandoned their lives
To the madness that springs from and ends in despair,
As the fire on the hearth, which sheds brightness around,
Neglected may level the walls to the ground.

This world makes grave errors in judging these things,
Great good and great evil are born in one breast.
Love horns us and hoofs us or gives us our wings,
And the best could be worst, and the worst could be best,
You may thank your own worth for what I grew to be,
For the demon lurked under the angel and me!

A Mystery.

BY GRACE DENIO LITCHFIELD.

Life held in her hands a measure,
And swung it lightly and low;
And she said, "I will see if my pleasure
Does not outweigh my woe."
And she gathered all stingless laughter,
All loves that were lasting and sure,
All joys that left memories after,
All wealth that was wingless and pure;
She gathered all sunlight and starlight,
All thornless and fadeless flowers;
She gathered the faint light and fair light
Of pangless and perfect hours;
She gathered all glimpses elysian
That never had blasted the soul,
All hopes that had held to fruition,
All talents that won to the goal,
All wisdom that never had saddened,
All truths that never had lied,
All ambition that never had maddened,
All beauty that satisfied.

And she flung them all, all in her measure,
But they nothing outbalanced the pain;
And she said, "I must add yet a treasure,
The kindest and best in my train."
And she reached out and took Death, and laid it,
All restful and calm on the scale;
Yet pain, as before, still outweighed it:
And she sighed as she said, Could this fail?
Then she reached up to merciful Heaven,
Took down, and flung over earth's strife,
A little pale hope, all unproven—
The hope of a measureless life:
Flung it down with a doubting and wonder,
With question and touch of disdain;
When lo! swift the light scale went under;
Life's woe was outweighed by Life's gain.

Oh! strange! Oh! most strange! If the measure
Of all mortal days be but woe,
Compared with their acme of pleasure
(Life mused as she hung the scale low),
Why, then, should it lengthen earth's sorrow?
Why magnify Death's consequence
To believe in a timeless to-morrow?
And Life held the scale in suspense.

Somewhere.

BY ALFRED COPEL SHAW.

Somewhere the wind is blowing,
I thought as I toiled along
In the burning heat of the noontide,
And the fancy made me strong.
Yes, somewhere the wind is blowing,
Though here, where I gasp and sigh,
Not a breath of air is stirring,
Not a cloud in the burning sky.

Somewhere the thing we long for Exists on earth's wide bound,
Somewhere the sun is shining
When Winter nips the ground.
Somewhere the flowers are springing,
Somewhere the corn is brown,
And ready unto the harvest
To feed the hungry town.

Somewhere the twilight gathers
And weary men lay by
The burden of the daytime,
And wrapped in slumber lie.
Somewhere the day is breaking,
And gloom and darkness flee;
Though storms our bark are tossing,
There's somewhere a placid sea.

And thus, I thought, 'tis always,
In this mysterious life,
There's always gladness somewhere
In spite of its pain and strife.
And somewhere the sin and sorrow
Of earth are known no more,
Somewhere our weary spirits
Shall find a peaceful shore.

The Mineral Production of the Dominion.

Minerals.	Nova Scotia.	New Brunswick.	Ontario.	British Columbia.	Quebec	N. W. Territories.	Total.
Coal	Tons. 1,502,511*	Tons. 555	Tons.	Tons. 320,636	Tons	Tons. 50,000	Tons. 1,879,802
Gold	$464,140	.....	.....	$903,000	.....	.....	$1,367,140
Gypsum	Tons. 125,753	Tons. 23,908	Tons. 5,000	Tons.	.....	.....	Tons. 154,661
Iron Ore	44,383	12	4,000	500	.....	.....	48,000
Manganese Ore	427	1,951	.....	.....	.....	.....	2,378
Copper Ore	.....	90	7	.....	5,504	.....	5,231
Silver Ore	.....	20	Barrels 375,000 600,000	.....	.....	.....	Barrels. 375,000 600,000
Salt	.....	.....	61	.....	.....	.....	81
Petroleum (crude)	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....

What Was Wrong With Him.

At a mission-hall in Pollokshields the clergyman's wife was kindly questioning at the close of a meeting a woman whose husband had been long ailing. "What is his trouble, Margaret?" said she. "Weel, ye see, mem, it's no very muckle o' ony kin' o' trouble. It is jest a kin' o' general ability."

CONDENSED LOVE STO

Two gypsies were married at M... recently. When the bridegroom ... if he took the woman to be his w... he answered: "Just as you say." ... the ceremony the man went out of ... and the woman out of another, and ... not appear to be in the least ... each other.

Jim Shanks, a young farm-hand ... esee County, Mich., was smitten ... charms of a pretty school ma'am in ... lage, and asked her one evening if ... escort her to an entertainment. She ... ed the invitation rather curtly, ... the enraged gallant smashed all the ... in the school-house. He was arrest... fined for his reprehensible conduct.

A Rockford, Ill., paper says that ... ago old 'Squire Ephraim Sumner, a ... settler of Rockford County, once ... across the Pecatonica River in the ... ther and walked in his wet clothing ... miles to marry a young couple. All ... he got was 50 cents; and when he ... ed the bride and said "God bless ... children," he trudged back to the F... with the well-earned coin in his pocket ... swam the stream to get home.

Will Oakey and Lois Fritz, of Er... away to get married, but were closely ... sued by the girl's father. At Morris ... young couple were refused a license ... the girl was only seventeen years old. ... then drove to Fulton, where a license ... again refused them. As they were ... Fulton in despair the angry father ov... the young couple in a terrible rage. ... would-be-bride promptly threw her ... around his neck and pleaded her ca... well that the old gentleman not only ... gave her, but actually helped them to ... licensc and to get a preacher to tie the...

An interesting case in the court at ... was recently settled by compromise. ... and well-to-do farmer had set his heart ... a fair young widow whom he used to see ... casionally when he came into town, but ... too bashful to court her. He thereupon ... fered a handsome young fellow $100 to ... the courting for him, the money to be ... as soon as the parson had tied the ... The ceremony was duly performed, but ... check was not forthcoming, and hence ... suit. When the case came up for trial ... old squire realized that discretion, though ... cost $100, was better than public ridi... and paid the money to the successful ... monial negotiator.

Jabez Hall, an aged and respected ... living near Mariana, Ark., advertised ... wife some time ago and the answers ... so numerous that he was at a loss how ... choose. He has since settled the ma... however, by a very neat and satisfac... expedient. He gave each applicant a ... ber, and, writing the numbers on sep... cards, put them in a box and shook ... up well. Then he blindfolded his ... grandchild and had her draw a card ... the box. He is now corresponding with ... lady to whom the card had been allo... and it is possible that a wedding will ...

STORIES ABOUT MONEY.

A farmer of Posey county, Ind., ... could not be induced to put his trust ... banks, paid taxes for many years on $9... in cash, which he declared he had ... for safe keeping on his farm. He died ... short time ago without disclosing the hi... place of the treasure, and his administra... has been unable to solve the problem. ... is being assisted, though, by nearly ... entire population of the county, to j... from the number of persons who prowl ... the premises at night armed with lant... and spades.

While he was ploughing for last season's ... corn crop Mr. W. F. Young, of Old Tow... lost two certificates of deposit for $100 ... and a twenty dollar bill. They were wra... ped in a piece of tissue-paper, and although ... he hunted for the wad for the rest of ... day Mr. Young was unable to find it. Last ... week, while chopping up some cornstalks ... for fodder, he found the money hidden ... the roots of one of the stalks. The paper ... covering of the valuable little bundle ... rotted away, but the contents were entirely ... uninjured.

Sam Crofter, a Georgia cracker, and his ... family recently took possession of an aban... doned cabin which had stood for years with... out a tenant at the foot of a hill in Chamber... County, Ga. While they were putting the ... place in order they found a number of old ... coins in the chinks and crannies of the wall... and while fixing up the well they unearthed ... from beneath a cross-beam an iron pot fill... to the brim with silver and gold. The amount ... of the coin was about $1,000 and none ... of the pieces was dated later than 18... Several earrings and finger rings of gold ... were also found in the interstices of the ... well.

Judge Wellborn, of Gainesville, Ga., has ... an old Spanish coin that was found in the ... Coosa gold mine, five miles southeast of ... Blairsville, at a depth of twenty feet below ... the surface. It is of copper, somewhat ... larger than an old-fashioned cent-piece, and ... is very much worn from attrition. Enough ... is left of the inscription, however, to show ... that it is a coin of the early part of the sixteenth ... century, and it is supposed to have ... been brought to America by De Soto's fol... lowers. This is considered a strong link in ... the testimony going to show that De Soto ... and his band of adventurers passed through ... the northern part of Georgia and worked the ... mines there for gold.

Although it is said that only four silver ... dollars of the coinage of 1804 were issued by ... the American Government they seem to be ... plentiful enough. John A. Pearson, of In... dianapolis, has one for which Raymond, ... the actor, offered him $800 not long before ... his death. Another one is owned by three ... citizens of Jerseyville, Ill., who gave a tra... velling man $100 for it a few days ago and ... were afterwards offered $500 for it in St. ... Louis. Still another is in the possession ... of a San Francisco man and there are said ... to be one or two in New York. It is interesting in connection with this to note that a ... counterfeiter recently arrested in Pittsburg ... was found to have several silver dollars of the ... 1806 issue, the figure 6 in which had been ... changed to 4.

Where Ignorance Was Bliss.

"I beg your pardon, sir," said the waiter, to a guest who had about half finished his breakfast of soft boiled eggs, "but those eggs don't seem fresh. I'll bring some others."

"I thig you're bistagen, waider," replied the guest. "I cad daste anythig wrog abound 'em."

ENSED LOVE

es were married
Then the bridegroom
e woman to be his
: "Just as you say,"
y the man went out of an out of another, and o be in the least

s, a young farm-hand, of Mich., was smitten with retty school ma'am in ed her one evening if he an entertainment. She tion rather curtly, whe allant smashed all the house. He was arrested reprehensible conduct.

l, Ill., paper says that re Ephraim Sumner, a Rockford County, once catonica River in the cold ked in his wet clothing y a young couple. All cents; and when he had
and said "God bless you, trudged back to the Pa
-earned coin in his pocket, am to get home.

and Lois Fritz, of Erie, arried, but were closely irl's father. At Morrison were refused a license be nly seventeen years old.
Fulton, where a license them. As they were lea air the angry father over ple in a terrible rage.
e promptly threw her eck and pleaded her cau old gentleman not only actually helped them to get a preacher to tie the ng case in the court at H ettled by compromise. An farmer had set his heart ridow whom he used to see en he came into town, but court her. He thereupon me young fellow $100 to or him, the money to be parson had tied the was duly performed, but forthcoming, and hence he case came up for trial lized that discretion, though s better than public ridicu money to the successful ma tor.

an aged and respected plan riana, Ark., advertised for e ago and the answers w hat he was at a loss how as since settled the matte very neat and satisfacto
e gave each applicant a n ing the numbers on separa
n in a box and shook the en he blindfolded his li
I had her draw a card fr is now corresponding with t
the card had been allotte le that a wedding will resul

ES ABOUT MONEY.

Posey county, Ind., wh induced to put his trust i xes for many years on $9,0 he declared he had buri
ng on his farm. He died without disclosing the hidin asure, and his administrato le to solve the problem. H ed, though, by nearly th ion of the county, to judge
r of persons who prowl abou t night armed with lantern ploughing for last season's

V. F. Young, of Old Town, ates of deposit for $100 each llar bill. They were wrap f tissue-paper, and although he wad for the rest of the was unable to find it. Last opping up some cornstalks found the money hidden in of the stalks. The paper valuable little bundle had t the contents were entirely a Georgia cracker, and his took possession of an aban ch had stood for years with he foot of a hill in Chambers hile they were putting the hey found a number of old ks and crannies of the walls up the well they unearthed ross-beam an iron pot filled silver and gold. The amount s about $1,000 and none

as dated later than 1835.
and finger rings of gold in the interstices of the ru, of Gainesville, Ga., has oin that was found in the e, five miles southeast of lepth of twenty feet below is of copper, somewhat d-fashioned cent-piece, and rn from attrition. Enough cription, however, to show f the early part of the six-and it is supposed to have America by De Soto's fol-considered a strong link in ing to show that De Soto dventurers passed through of Georgia and worked the old.

said that only four silver nage of 1804 were issued by vernment they seem to be
. John A. Pearson, of Inne for which Raymond,
him $800 not long before r one is owned by three ville, Ill., who gave a tra-for it a few days ago and offered $500 for it in St.
her is in the possession
o man and there are said
New York. It is interest-with this to note that a ntly arrested in Pittsburg several silver dollars of the ure 6 in which had been orance Was Bliss.

lon, sir," said the waiter,
d about half finished his boiled eggs, "but those fresh. I'll bring some bistagen, waider," replied

cad daste anythig wrog

HOUSEHOLD.

Moth.

BY AUNT EVA.

At this season of the year, the careful housewife feels a motherly interest in this subject, lest this little insect damage her children's clothing during the coming summer.

The word moth when properly used embraces a large number of the smaller butterflies.

But in this form it does no harm; it has no teeth, takes no nourishment and has but a brief existence. Yet this moth lays her eggs in our goods and from those eggs comes the tiny worm which often disturbs the equanimity of the household.

There are several kinds of moth that annoy the careful housekeeper. The tinea vestianella finds its home in clothing, tinea granella in carpet, tinea pellionella in fur and tinea crinella in hair.

These Tineans, in their winged state, lay their eggs mostly in the spring, during the months of April, May and June, depending somewhat upon the locality and season. The eggs hatch out in about fifteen days. And the little worms begin to gnaw the substance about them, the fragments of which they generally use in making for themselves cases by fastening them together with silk and in which they move freely, and as they grow they enlarge these covers by adding to the ends and by gores set into the sides. In this warm jacket they live until spring, when they come out with wings and fly away to seek crevices, folds, dark closets or other undisturbed places where they can find a kind of material suited to the purpose for housing their young, and here they lay their eggs which soon make a colony of destructive moth rooms.

Now the way to prevent damages is to put away such things as we do not use during the summer where the moth miller cannot find them This should be done in the spring as soon as they are not needed to wear, into cotton or linen or paper bags.

Care must be taken that the bags have no rent or hole where a tiny moth may creep in.

We prefer heavy unbleached muslin as this is strong and durable and may be bought in remnants at low prices. A bag may be placed in a trunk, box or shelf, and the goods packed in smoothly, the bag sewed up at once, and be assured no moth will find its way into it.

If everything is made clean, repaired and each persons clothing packed separately, with each bag labelled, naming all that is in it and to whom it belongs, it will afford the housewife real pleasure to find the things as she may need them in the fall. All woolens and furs, even though not valuable, if not in use should be thus carefully packed away as is not to provide a harbor for these pests. The carpets in use should during the spring, months be swept carefully and often in all the corners and under the furniture.

If moths do get into the carpets place a wet cloth over and iron with a hot iron; they cannot survive such treatment.

The cloth linings of carraiges and chairs may be protected by being sponged with a solution of corrosive sublimate in alcohol not strong enough to leave a white stain on a black feather.

There are several other insects that trouble clothing, but we think none of them will find their way through a strong muslin bag. The writer has been successful in the use of this plan for a number of years, and never feels the least anxiety after her goods are carefully brushed, cleaned and packed away for the summer and never opens them until needed for use.

Children's Toys.

Toys are so perishable in material that nearly every home is full of battered and broken playthings, which sooner or later find their way to stove or ash heap. No greater waste of money, unless it be that spent for candy, is on record than that which is wasted upon the wooden and tin playthings, which last as long and give as much pleasure as a soap bubble. A writer gives a new idea which we have not before met with. It is as follows; Mothers too often make the mistake of satiating their children with too great a variety. As soon as a child tires of one toy, for example, there is another substituted, and discontent is the certain result. The mother of four children, of whom the oldest was eight and the youngest two, told me that she had never had any trouble in amusing them, because they were taught to play a variety of plays with the least possible number of toys. She feared confusion of interests if each child had a special set of toys; and on this account gave to one a doll, with the necessary belongings, and a few other toys—each possessing almost precisely the same things.

The finer toys were understood to be mother's property, and were kept in a cupboard apart. These were only lent to the children on special occasions. There was always rejoicing when mamma's toys were brought out, each child vying with the other as to behaviour, so that the treasures could be kept as long as possible. Books for painting with colored crayons were an important adjunct, as, when tired of play, the children were always ready to paint. The older children were taught that they must devise some play for the younger ones, and thus a happy time was the rule in the nursery. "Sweetness and light" are powerful adjuncts in the nursery ethics.

Tested Recipts.

COFFEE ICE PUDDING.—Pound two ounces of fresh roasted coffee in a mortar, but do not reduce them to powder. Put them into a pint of milk with six ounces of loaf sugar; boil up, then leave it to get cold, strain it on the yolks of six eggs in a double saucepan, and stir over the fire till the custard thickens. When quite cold, work into it one and a half gills of cream whipped to a froth, freeze it, lay it in a plain mould, and set ice round as wanted.

ICE PIPE BREAD OF PIEDMONT.—The dough is leavened and is formed of the finest sifted flour, lightly salted, and kneaded into a stiff paste in a wooded bowl, which is covered and left for two hours to rise. Then it is rolled out and cut in pieces as thick and long as a stout finger. These pieces are laid side by side on a moistened paste-board. Let them stand to rise another hour; then take up each piece by the two ends and gently draw it out about two or three feet in length. Arrange them on the oven shovel, which must be sprinkled with unsifted meal, and transfer them to the oven. A short time will bake them, when they must be cooled and kept in a dry place to become crisp. The secret of success with them is perseverance.

Simple Desserts.—Many housekeepers look upon all desserts in the light of luxuries, others draw the line at dishes that call for eggs. Now, some dessert dish, if properly made, should form a part of every dinner, if fruit is not to be served. Even with fruit, some people require sugar. When no dessert is provided, a greater quantity of meat and vegetables must be eaten to satisfy the demands of Nature. For some this is all right, but for the majority of people a certain amount of sugar and starch is necessary. Children should not be deprived of this kind of food. Even for the poor it is economical to provide a simple dessert. In arranging for a dinner, plan a light dessert when the rest of the meal is to be substantial. On the other hand, when the main part of the dinner is to be light, let the dessert be hot and substantial. For example, if the first part of the meal consists of cold meat and vegetables, or a hash and one vegetable, serve an apple pudding for dessert. A good one can be made of a pint of flour, prepared as for cream-of-tartar biscuit, rolled thin, and filled with pared and quartered apples, then steamed for two hours, and served with molasses or sugar sauce. Or, the apples may be put into a stewpan with a little water and sugar, or a little molasses, stewed for a few minutes, covered with the biscuit dough, and cooked for about ten minutes longer. No sauce will be needed with this pudding. Nothing could be cheaper, and it will be very palatable and wholesome. Apples may be added to boiled sago or tapioca, with a pleasing result. Soak a cupful of either tapioca or sago in three cupfuls of cold water over night; then cook it in a double boiler for half an hour. Add to the contents of the boiler one cupful of sugar; half a teaspoonful of salt, and two quarts of pared and quartered apples. Bake in a pudding dish for an hour and a quarter. Cool slightly, and serve with or without sugar and cream or milk. These puddings are so simple that they will not even hurt an invalid.

The Uses of Lemons.

Lemonade is not only a luxury, but exceedingly wholesome. It is a good temperance drink.

The juice of half a lemon in a glass of water, with sugar, will frequently cure a sick headache.

If the hands be stained, there is nothing that will remove the stain bettter than a lemon or a lemon and salt.

After the juice has been squeezed from the lemon the refuse can be used for the purpose.

Lemon juice and sugar, mixed very thick, is useful to relieve coughs and sore throats. It must be very acid as well as sweet.

Lemon juice is also a very good remedy for rheumatism and the so-called biliousness of spring. In the latter case the juice should be taken before breakfast. The pulp may also be eaten, avoiding every particle of skin.

Mendacious and Cowardly is the trick by which the Canada Life Assurance Company endeavors to show its "surpassing advantages" in the following terms:—

"Percentage of total cash profits given by each company to the premiums paid to each, during the years 1870 to 1886, inclusive:—

Canada Life.....36.5 per cent.
Mutual Life of New York..22. 6 per cent.
New York Life.....18. 9 per cent.
Ontario Mutual.....14. 2 per cent."

The dabbler in comparisons has herein far surpassed himself. We challenge him to support his figures by Government returns. Even if correct, the comparison(!) is the device of a trickster, intended to deceive and not to instruct.

Observe and note how it is done:—

The Canada Life began business in 1847 and in 1870 was in its 23rd year, having many of its 10, 15 and 20 payment life policies fully paid up and yielding annuities, while the profits or surplus on its older life poicies were or should have been nearly or quite eighty per cent. of the premiums. This was a favorable point at which to begin a comparison with a company just writing its first policy. The intelligent public will not fail to appreciate herein the surpassing dishonesty of the company which makes so glaring an exhibition of itself!

Now, if the Canada Life will compare their percentage of surplus during their first seventeen years of business with ours DURING A LIKE PERIOD, or if they will compare results under similar policies during the years 1870 to 1886 inclusive, we will guarantee to make them tired of the comparison business. What have they to say? THE ONTARIO MUTUAL LIFE.

Waterloo, Ont.

A Husband's Startling Prediction.

"Sure, Bridget," said Pat, of Kerry Patch, to his wife. "You disgust me with your pettyfogying. I hate a miser, I niver was one meself and I don't want any in my family if I can help it. If you go on the way you are, and hoarding up every little cint you get, the first thing you know you will die like the fellow who was at the City Hospital some time ago."

"And how was that, Pat?"

"Sure, he starved himself all his life, and when he died they found $20,000 in greenbacks sewed up in the seat of his pants."

"And do you mane to say that when I die they'll find a lot of greenbacks sewed up in the seat of my—"

"Now, Bridget, ye heard what I said, and, as the old saying goes, "Shakespeare never repeats."

Exchange of Ideas.

Tin-Tun-Ling, a famous Chinese adventurer who died a few weeks ago, was in Paris during the siege. One day, as he was passing along the street, two heroes, whose military costume consisted of a dingy red stripe down their black trousers, said in his hearing, "Bah—that Chinese would be doing better if he were in Peking just now!" "And you, gentlemen, if you were in Berlin," he at once returned, and then passed on.

An Aunt's Confidence.

"I don't much like my aunt, Lady A.," remarked Miss P. to her confidential friend. "Don't you, dear? How is that?" "Oh, she says such odious things!" "Indeed!" "Yes. Why, what do you think I overheard her saying to mamma only yesterday, in her self-sufficient way? 'Rose, my love, why don't you get those girls of yours married? They're an ugly lot, and won't improve by keeping.'"

HEALTH.

A Word About Medicines.

If drugs are curative, some well-defined relation must exist between them and the disease they cure, or are supposed to cure. The task of showing what this relation is, must develope upon those who use them, or who advocate their use. If any one is sick, because he or she has not taken drugs, or remains sick for the same reason, the rational conclusion is that he ought to take them and get well.

But no advocate of drug taking of any pretensions to intelligence and sound judgment, claims that the want of drugs, or abstinence from them is ever properly to be considered as entitled to a place among the causes of disease. People get sick from bad habits of living; they eat and drink; breathe and sleep, work and rest, and do many other things without any regard to the physical, mental or moral laws to which they are subject. Whatever is the style of their set, or of the clique or coterie to which they belong, no matter how high or how low it may be in the social scale is accepted as a rule of thought and of action. If this rule prescribed the use of alcohol or tobacco; of opium, betelnut or hasheesh; of tea, coffee or cocoa,; of cayenne pepper or mustard; of animal-flesh or animal-fats; of oysters, clams, frogs or any other article of food; drink or dissipation, it is used; and its use is defended with a zeal worthy of a better cause. The same remark applies with equal force to the use, and defence of the use, of drug medicines. It has not been and can not be proved that the sick need them. What is and has been taken as proof of their utility, will not bear the test of critical observation or of sound logical reasoning. Is it here claimed that people take medical prescriptions and get well? People also get well without taking them. Many take them and get worse. Chronic invalids abound who know—whose medical advisers have told them—that their afflictions have been greatly aggravated, if not wholly caused, by what was at the time considered scientific medication Every careful student of the nature and causes of disease well knows that the victims of indigestion, of inebriety, of insomnia, of insanity and of a long list of functional and orgaoic disturbances may trace the origin of their physical and mental troubles to the use of drugs, for the removal of ailments which, with reasonably good nursing, might have been more sucessfully removed. Who dares to assert that the slave to alchol, to opium, or to tobacco, to chloral, bromide, cocaine or any other like thing would not be any the better for never having used them, if it is undeniable that at the time the results appeared to justify their use? The history of such enslavement, in no small proportion of cases, points to the administration of these drugs professionally, as the first step towards the fearful goal where all is wreck and ruin. If the wise and good men of the profession could be induced to inform themselves more fully, and could fix a just estimate upon the results of their work in undesirable directions, could they with an approving conscience assume the fearful responsibility that attaches to it? Many of them, as will hereafter appear, have shown increasing weakness of faith, and have given it expression in language that cannot be misunderstood or misinterpreted. The changes so constantly taking place in medical theories, and in medical practice, illustrate the shallowness of the boast that medicine is a science. The principles of all true science are immutable. The assumed facts of medicine are constantly undergoing mutations. No intelligent physician would now wish, if he dared, or dare if he wished, to go back to the ideas and methods of fifty or even twenty-five years since, much less to those of five hundred or a thousand years. In a single decade of what is called "progress" we should hear the practice of the present styled old and stale. The theory of cure by the use of drugs continues to enchain the professional and non-professional masses. "New remedies" are introduced and heralded as reliable specifics for almost all the disorders to which flesh is heir. They are adopted, trusted and used. They are eulogized by medical societies, and spread broadcast by the aid of medical literature. It seems as if nothing can be successfully urged against them. But in a few years, or at most a few decades of years, they drop out of use if not out of memory. Such is the history of medical progress.

"Washerwoman's Hand."

There is hardly a more intractable disease than chronic rheumatism. Year after year, with now and then an interval of relief, it goes on, not directly shortening one's days, but not seldom making its victim wish them shortened.

There may be a possibility of a permanent cure, but prevention is not only far better than cure, but is more practicable, because, in most cases, nothing more is necessary than to avoid exposure which may be avoided.

The joints are the usual points of attack—sometimes those of the ankle, sometimes those of the knee, the shoulder, the wrist, or the fingers. The attacks, however, are not at random; they are aimed at those joints which are overworked.

For this reason, they often attack the wrist and fingers of washerwomen, the tendency thither being greatly increased by the violent changes of temperature to which these parts are subjected, and that, too, at a time when the whole body is heated by exercise, and when, therefore, the joints are in a specially susceptible state.

Not only do these joints become exceedingly painful, and thus interfere with needed sleep, but the hand at length becomes deformed.

The disease is a great affliction in the case of professional washerwomen; for the bread of their children, and too often that of a lazy and drunken husband, depends on their work. But a great number of other women are exposed to it.

We have now chiefly in mind the tens of thousands of heads of families who are liable to bring this affliction on themselves.

They do their own washing, and do it, necessarily, in addition to their other work. These energetic but excessively imprudent women, on washing day, rush from hot to cold, and from cold to hot, without a thought of harm. They go with irritated joints and open pores from the steaming washtub to the ice-cold clothes-line. Coming back to the kitchen, they scrub the floor, and hasten the dinner over the cookstove. Is it a wonder that multitudes of our choicest wives and mothers suffer from what the doctors call "the washerwoman's hand?"

Our necessary ailments are numerous enough, without adding to them a painful and deforming trouble, which can be avoided with due care.

Wrinkles.

Wrinkles are due to the gradual wearing away of flesh under the cuticle. Why does it wear away? Because the facial muscles have either too little or the wrong kind of exercise. It will be observed that wrinkles usually take a downward course. This is due to the wrong kind of exercise. What exercise? Why, the washing and wiping of the face, to be sure. Reverse the process, and, instead of rubbing the face down in washing and wiping, always rub upward. This will have the effect of counteracting the tendency of the flesh to depart from under the cuticle, and will keep the face free from wrinkles. It is rather an awkward habit to acquire at first, but perseverance will make it second nature, and the result is worth many pains. This exercise is designed particularly for the benefit of the eyes and the upper portion of the cheeks. Then, for the middle and lower portion of the face, where hollowness rather than wrinkles is often noted, another plan must be taken. The facial muscles are subjected to very slight activity in the ordinary exertions of eating and drinking. To fill the cheeks out round and plump it is necessary to develop the muscles there. These muscles are very slight at the best, and any special effort well directed will increase them in capacity and size. An excellent exercise for this purpose is this: Take a piece of soft leather—kid or chamois skin will do—and put the end of it between the teeth; then chew gently upon it for several minutes, taking care not to raise the teeth from the leather. If the teeth are raised it will bring into play only the ordinary muscles of mastication, whereas the purpose is to develop those that are seldom used. One who tries this method will find the cheek going through a queer action that is anything but graceful and pretty; nevertheless, it is immensely effective and will restore to its youthful plumpness even the most hollow cheek. Try it faithfully and you will be convinced.

People who are subject to bad breath, foul coated tongue, or any disorder of the Stomach, can at once be relieved by using Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, the old and tried remedy. Ask your Druggist.

Men of smallest soul are men of largest arrogance.

YOUNG MEN suffering from the effects of early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted also MIDDLE-AGED and OLD MEN who are broken down from the effects of abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and read M. V. LUBON'S Treatise in BOOK FORM on the Diseases of Women. Mailed sealed and secure from observation on receipt of 6c in stamps, UNSEALED FREE. Address, M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. East Toronto, Ont.

I interpret moderation as synonymous with duty. You may apply this philosophy to wine, desire for riches, or lobster salad.

Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness and Hay Fever.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are cured in from one to three simple applications made at home. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent free on receipt of stamp by A. H. Dixon & Son, 308 King Street West Toronto Canada

A. P. 337.

PATENTS For Sale—Illustrative descriptive Catalogue free. R Chamberlin, Toronto.

GOOD LIVE AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY County in Canada. Address, FERRIS & CO., 87 Church St., Toronto.

AGENTS AND CANVASSERS wanted, Male or Female, whole or spare time, on salary or commission. Industrial Union of B.N.A., 45 Arcade, Toronto.

CONVERTIBLE WIRE BASKET, BEST SELLING novelty in Canada. Great reduction to agents. Sample by mail thirty cents.
CLEMENT & Co., Toronto.

A NEW EMERY MOWER SHARPENER—Will sharpen the knife without taking it out. Every farmer will buy it. AGENTS WANTED.
CLEMENT & CO. TORONTO.

PATENTS PROCURED in Canada, the U.S. and all foreign countries. Engineers, Patent Attorneys, and experts in Patent Causes. Established 1867. Donald C. Ridout & Co., Toronto.

TEACHERS and Students, Attention! Special classes during summer holidays, in Shorthand, Typewriting, Book-keeping, Penmanship, etc. Write for full particulars. Canadian Business University and Shorthand Institute, Public Library Building, Toronto.
THOS. BENGOUGH, President.
CHARLES H. BROOKS, Manager.

CONSUMPTION.
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer. Give express and P.O. address.
DR. T. A. SLOCUM,
Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto

SNOW DRIFT THE FAVORITE! THERE IS NO BETTER! BAKING POWDER
The Snow Drift Baking Powder Co., Brantford, Ont

GUELPH Business College, Guelph, Ont.
Twelve States and Provinces already represented on the roll of this Institution. To thorough, practical instruction, and the efficiency and success of its graduates, this College owes its popularity. Circulars, giving terms, etc., mailed free. Address
M. MacCORMICK, Principal.

COMPOUND OXYGEN—THE CONSERVATOR of health, the enemy of disease; heals the Lungs, Re-builds the Broken Down Constitution of young and old. Home treatment, sufficient for two months. Inhaler and all complete, sent by express for $12. Moved my office from 73 King West to 41 King East. MRS. C. STIDMAN FIEROE. Four years established in Toronto. 32 Office Treatments for $18. Send for circular.

BEAVER LINE OF STEAMSHIPS,
Sailing weekly between Montreal and Liverpool.
RATES OF PASSAGE:—Saloon, Montreal to Liverpool, $40, $50, and $60; Return Tickets, $80, $90, and $100—according to steamer and accommodation. Intermediate and Steerage at lowest rates. For further particulars and to secure Berths, apply to H. E. MURRAY, General Manager, 1 Custom House Square, Montreal, or to the Local Agents in the different Towns and Cities.

135 ACRES EXCELLENT LAND FOR sale. Lot 9, Con. 23, McGillivray, Middlesex Co.; clay loam; 100 acres clear; good frame buildings, orchard, spring creek, gravel road 3½ miles to Parkhill Town; price $5,000, $1,000 down, balance 6 per cent. interest Rare bargain, immediate possession.
100 ACRES—Lots 34, 35, Con. 2, South Durham Road. Artemesia, Grey Co.: 20 acres clear; $1,200, $200 down, balance 6 per cent.
DR. McTAGGART, London, Ont.

Awnings! Decorated Window Shades, &c. Wholesale and Retail, at the CELEBRATED GOLD MEDAL TENT MANUFACTORY, 70 King St. West, Toronto. NATIONAL MANUFACTUR'G CO

AGENTS APPLY TO THE WANTED D.W. BEADLE NURSERY CO. St. Catharines, Ont.

CARPET SWEEPERS Mangles, 3 kinds, Washing Machines 2 kinds; Clothes Wringers, 10 kinds. Churns, Meat Choppers, Trucks, and other sundries.
HAMILTON INDUSTRIAL WORKS CO., Hamilton, Canada.
Send for article wanted or Illustrated Catalogue.

Water PURE LIVING STREAM. AUGERS, bore 20 fee per hour. Also Rock Drills—Hand, Horse, or Steam Power. Send for Catalogue.
Leidlaw Manufacturing Co.,
HAMILTON, ONT.

H. Williams, FELT AND SLATE Roofer,
Manufacturer and dealer in
Tarred Felt, Roofing Pitch, Building Papers, Carpet and Deafening Felt, READY ROOFING, Etc. 4 Adelaide St. E., TORONTO.

Dairy Salt,
FOR BUTTER, ETC.
NEW Importations.—Higgins' Eureka, Washington and Ashton Brands, in large or small sacks. Also Rice's Canadian Salt. Write for prices.
JAMES PARK & SON.
Wholesale Produce Merchants, Toronto.

PILES!
Blind, Bleeding, and Itching, effectually cured by the Medical Pile Remedy. Thousands of sufferers can testify to the permanent relief from these internal and external remedies. $1.00 per package. Ask your druggist for it, or will be sent by Mail, postage paid. HUGH MILLER & CO.,
167 King St. East, Toronto.

Wall Paper
MANUFACTURERS.
M. STAUNTON & CO.,
Samples on application. TORONTO ONT.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships.
Sailing during winter from Portland every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via Halifax and St. John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal, weekly, Glasgow and Boston weekly; and Glasgow and Philadelphia, fortnightly
For Freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's N. F., Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans Rae & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; H. A. Allan Portland Boston Montreal

Royal Dandelion Coffee.
A Delicious and nourishing Breakfast Beverage, contains a proportion of German Dandelion Root, which acts medicinally on the Liver and Stomach, purifying the blood and invigorating the system. Prepared only by ELLIS & KEIGHLEY,
TORONTO.

JUNE 19, 1885.—For two years my wife's health was run down. She was greatly emaciated and too weak to do anything for herself; she was given up by five doctors, they all passed their opinion that she could not live. She commenced using Dr. Jug's Medicine in December, 1884, and after taking six bottles she was so much improved that she could look after her household duties.
J. M. RODDICK, Engineer, C. P. R., West Toronto.

Bicycles!
SEND AT ONCE FOR LIST of Second-Hand Machines,
From $15 Upwards.
New Catalogue Ready 1st April
A. T. LANE, MONTREAL.

I CURE FITS!
When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you. Address: DR. H. G. ROOT,
Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto.

Markdale Standard.

C. W. Rutledge, Proprietor.

MARKDALE, JUNE. 16. 1887.

NEWS NOTES.

—Rev. Dr. Potts has been unanimously elected President of Toronto Conference.

—The Berlin Post, reviewing the political situation, concludes that Europe will enjoy a quiet summer.

—Guelph conference will meet next year in Seaforth on the first Thursday in June.

—The Lieutenant Governor of Ontario has proclaimed the 21st June as a public provincial holiday in honor of the Queen's Jubilee.

—The contract for the construction of the North-West Central railway has been signed, and one hundred miles of the road are expected to be completed by the fall.

—Hundreds of pauper emigrants have recently been sent out to America from the Old Country assisted by the British Government. The American authorities are determined that theirs shall not be made a dumping place for those who are likely to be a Public Charge and have returned several score, not even permitting them to land.

—The Church of England Army is only about five years old, yet it has reached very large proportions and is countenanced and encouraged by the highest Anglican dignitaries. In the course of the past year 30,000 out-door meetings were held in connection with it, and as many in-door ones. The aggregate attendance at these meetings was estimated at five millions of persons while 3500 converts were confirmed. The income, mostly made up of working men's pence, amounting to £12.000.

—There seems to be a prospect that the old party lines are going to be badly broken on the commercial union or reciprocity question. So far the advocates of unrestricted intercourse with the United States have been principally strong protectionists, who were probably Conservatives. The Mail and the Globe are alike in favor of the scheme, and several other strong Conservative journals are among its upholders. On the other hand, the opponents of reciprocity have been principally the interested manufacturers and their organs.

Maxwell.

From our own Correspondent.

Beautiful weather.

Crops are growing very fast.

Our boys still continue to torment the speckled trout in the river. They bite very well but the musquito bites are more numerous.

Three of our village boys are intending to be volunteers this year.

Miss Preston is visiting friends in Nottawa.

Rev. W. Ferrier went to Toronto last Tuesday, to attend Conference.

Mr. Campbell, Inspector of Public Schools for S. Grey, visited our school last Monday. He is the right man in the right place.

The Court of Revision for Township of Osprey met here on 31st May, no important business was done.

MARRIED.—On Wednesday, 8th inst., by the Rev. J. Ward, Mr. T. Hamlin, of Toronto, to Miss Mary, daughter of Mr. Mathew Spofford. The happy couple left for Toronto on the afternoon train. Long life and happiness.

Mr. and Mrs. McLlroy. of Toronto, are visiting friends in Maxwell.

We are sorry to say that Mrs. R. Maxwell, is lying seriously ill. We hope soon to see her restored to health.

The County Meeting of the Orange Lodges met here on Wednesday the 9th inst. We understand that there is also to be a district meeting this ensuing week.

Vesper Council No. 284, Royal Templars of Temperance held a most successful open meeting on the 3rd inst. The interest is increasing and we have every prospect of maintaining an excellent Council.

At the District Council R. T. of T. held in New England, last Tuesday. Vesper No. 284, was represented by four members. They reported an excellent meeting. By unanimous vote of the Council it was decided to hold the next District Council in Maxwell, on Tuesday, Sept. 6th, 1887.

NATURE MAKES NO MISTAKES.—Naure's own remedy for bowel complaints, cholera morbus, cholic, cramps, vomiting, sea sickness, cholera infantum, diarrhœa, dysentery, and all diseases of a like nature belonging to the summer season, is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, which can be obtained of all dealers in medicine.

Holland Centre.

From our own correspondent.

The schollars of School Section No. 7, Holland Centre, will hold their annual pic-nic in Lilburn's grove on the 24th June. A good attendance is expected as pin-nic's are scarce this season.

Mr. John Sargent is starting to build a new house in place of the one which was burned. The new building will be 42 x 55 feet.

One of Mr. John Sargent's Spring Colt's was badly injured Tuesday last, one of his horses being tied in its stall and by some means pulled down the stall, part of which fell on the colt cutting an ugly gash.

Mr. John Ferris entered an action against Mr. Holmes his neighbor for assaulting his wife. The case is being tried in Owen Sound to-day Tuesday.

DISTRICT DOINGS.

A SYNOPSIS OF COUNTY AND DISTRICT DOINGS FROM OUR EXCHANGES PREPARED FOR STANDARD READERS.

BE ON YOUR GUARD

Don't allow a cold in the head to slowly and surely run into Catarrh, when you can be cured for 25c. by using Dr, Chase's Catarrh Cure. A few applications cure insipient catarrh; 1 to 2 boxes cures ordinary catarrh 1 to 5 boxes is guaranteed to cure chronic catarrh. Try it. Only 25c. and sure cure Sold by all druggists. 333 83

The brick work on the new High School at Mt. Forest is completed.

A FREE GIFT.—Around each bottle of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure is a Medicine Guide and Receipe Book containing useful information, over 200 Recipes, and pronounced by doctors and druggists as worth ten times the cost of the medicine. Medicine and book $1. Sold by all druggists.

Melancthon District L. O. L. have decided to celebrate at Shelburne next 12th July.

Don't use any more nauseous purgatives such as Pills Salts &c., when you can get in Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters a medicine that moves the Bowels gently, cleansing all impurities from the system and rendering the Blood pure and cool. Sold by all Druggists. tf

An unknown man jumped off the Pacific near Presque Isle on Monday last and drowned himself. His body was not found.

CHOLERA INFANTUM.—That terrible scourge among children may be sppdily cured by Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. All forms of bowel complaints, nausea and vomiting, from an ordinary diarrhœa to the most severe attack of Canadian cholera, can be subdued by its prompt use. It is the best remedy known for children or adults suffering from summer complaints.

If you are good, you know it; if you are bad, everybody knows it.

A PROFESSIONAL OPIFION.—Rev. F. Gunner, M. D., of Listowel, Ont., says regarding B. B. B., "I have used your excellent Burdock Componnd in practice and in my family since 1884, and hold it No. 1 on my list of senative remedies. Your three busy B's never sting weaken or worry."

Which is the worst sinner, the man who can sing and wont, or the man can't and will?

A LIVING MIRACLE.—"My infant daughter was taken ill with cholera infantum, the doctor said she could not live. The Reverend Wm. McWilliams would not allow her head to be lifted when he babtised her, she was so weak. Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry gave immediate relief. She is a living miracle, hale and hearty. Since that time (7 years) our house has never been without that remedy." * * * * From statement of George Johnston, Hardwood, Ont.

EASY TO USE.

SOOTHING, CLEANSING, HEALING.

It Cures CATARRH, Cold in Head, HAY FEVER.

STOPS Droppings from Nasal passages into the throat and excessive expectoration caused by Catarrh. Sent pre-paid on receipt of price, 50c. and $1. Address FULFORD & CO., Brockville, Ont.

W. J. McFarland's

—: HOT :—

WEATHER PRICES.

LOOK :- DOWN this column and see the array of desirable goods to be offered this month at prices which we think were never before quoted for such good goods.

Don't skip an item, you may find something of great importance to you in this unprecedented list of Honest Bargains.

Read all! It will pay you.

Hat's!

75 Women's Sun Hats 15 cents, worth 50 cents.

48 Men's Hats 20 cents, usual price 50 cents.

150 Boy's 15, 20, 25, 35, and 45 cents.

756 yds. Cashmere 45 inches wide, only 30 cents.

One Case Fine Tweed's all wool suitable for best wear 50 cents. Good value.

112 prs. Men's Lace and Sewed Shoes $1.00.

Lace Curtains!

10 prs. 75 cents.
10 prs. $1.00.
15 prs. $1.50.
10 prs. Colored Muslins newest out $3.00.

Dress Goods!

We have the trade of the County. De Berges 22, 25, 28, up.

75 Peices High Novelties in GREYS, BROWNS, BLUES, GRENOTES, BLACK WOOL CHECKS and CASHMERETTES, commencing at 10 cents up to the finest. Imported Buttons and Trimmings to match.

100 Men's, Youth's and Boy's Suits, part of a manufacturers stock, will be sold very cheap.

MUSLINS 6 cents fast colors, stylish, goods. Fine White Lawn 12½, 15, 17, 20 cents.

2762 yds. Embroideries without exageration the largest assortment and lowest prices to be found anywhere. All our Embroideries 36 inches wide. Allover Laces 36 inches wide. All our Orientals in Cream, White and Fawn.

110 PARISOLS, great job; commencing at 50 cents. See them.

25 Doz. Women's Hose in Black, Navy Blue Ground and Fawn 15 cents a pair or two pairs for 25 cents.

CRETONNES Imported Direct and pronounced by the ladies Just Lovely.

37 PIECES washing every day Ginghams only 10 cents.

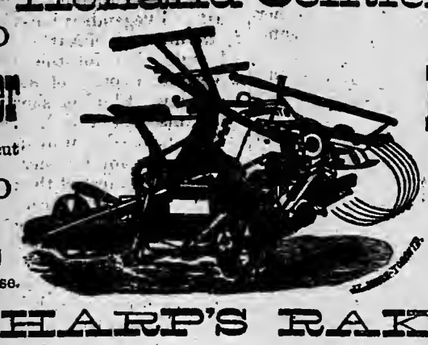
MOURNING GOODS in great vaziety.

GENT'S TIES, SHIRTS, COLLORS, SOCKS, andunder clothing at correct prices.

25 Doz. large cotton Towel's only 9 cents each. 20 doz. still larger 15 cents.

100 Honey Cans 2 gallons 20 cents.

14 Pieces New Silks in Black and Colored Imported Direct from LONDON ENGLAND.



OUR MILLINERY ROOMS crowded with Novelties and our five young ladies kept on the jump serving customers. Trimming Hats, Bonnets, and Mantle Making. PRICES RIGHT, STYLES CORRECT.

A cordial invitation is extended to all to visit our grand display of NEW GOODS.

W. J. McFARLAND,
Direct Importer.
MARKDALE.

Massey Agency,

Holland Centre.

TORONTO Light Binder steel frame 5 & 6 feet cut

TORONTO MOWER, one and two horse.

MASSEY Harvester

MASSEY MOWER.

SHARP'S RAKE.

A full stock of repairs kept constantly on hand for the above machines

REPAIRS STRICTLY CASH.

Also agent for Hull's patent reversible Hay Carrier, Manufactured by Cochrane Bro's, St. Thomas, and Fox Pea Harvester, Owen Sound.

THOS. WILLISCROFT, Agent.

MARKDALE CARRIAGE WORKS.

R. McNALLY:—Would hereby announce to the people of Markdale and the public generally that I have moved into my new carriage shop opposite the Markdale House, where I will manufacture every article in the wagon and carriage line, and having long experience in the business and by using first class material, I can guarantee satisfaction to every one who will favor me with their order.

Repairing, Painting and Trimming promptly attended to.

I also make a first class Stone Machine which will lift the stone, carry it to any desired place and leave in position on the fence.

A call respectfully solicited,

R. McNALLY, Proprietor

MARKDALE SASH and DOOR FACTORY.

Having erected and fitted up in every detail a Sash, Door and Plain Factory, containing all the latest and most approved machinery, everything being new, I am now prepared to turn out

Sash, Doors, Blinds, Mouldings, Hollow Battons

FRAMES, LATH, FENCE PICKETS, &c.,

And everything needed in the building trade, in a manner second to none in Canada, and having engaged superior mechanics in every department, would now respectfully solicit public patronage.

Every Effort Made to fill Orders Promptly

PINE LUMBER Dressed and Undressed

Direct from North Shore, all sizes, on hand. Plain and Fancy Turning done.

Careful Attention to Orders from a Distance.

303 THOS. McNEA.

IMPORTANT!

TO all users of Machine Oils, don't forget to call on E. S. MABEE, Sign of the Cross-Cut Saw, Markdale, and ask for the CASTOR E. OIL, it is unequalled by any.

"AURORA"

WATER WHITE OIL,

is equal to American for brillance of light.

Empire Oil Co.,
Refiners & Manufacturer's,
349-75 London and Toronto.

WARNING.

ALL persons are hereby warned against fishing on "Sargents Lake," on lot 63 and 64 first west of T. & S. Road, Holland. Any person found trespassing or fishing on said lake or premisses will be prosecuted according to law.

WM. SARGENT

Berkeley May 1887. 352-5

TENDERS WANTED.

Sealed tenders will be received by the undersigned up till noon on Friday June 17th for the veneering with brick, School House No. 2 Artemesia, the contractor to find all the materials. Plans and specifications can be seen at the house of Wm. Burnett. The committee don't bind themselves to accept the lowest or any tender.

Building Committee { JOSEPH BEATY, WM. FLESHER, WM. BURNETT.

Headache, Biliousness, Dyspepsia and Indigestion relieved and cured at once by Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Try it. Sample free.

NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that any person or persons found trespassing or fishing on the farms of the undersigned will be prosecuted according to law without further notice.

Signed:—

John B. Thibandeau,	Thos. Brady
Edward Brady,	James Brady,
William Brady,	Wm. McCutcheon
John Shears,	Geo. Richardson,
Wm. McNally,	George McNally,
James Elliott,	James Stinson.
Adam Hislop,	Robt Graham.
John Webber.	John Perkins.

WE WANT!

100 GOOD MEN at once, to sell for the Fontbill Nurseries (largest in Canada over 465 acres) steady employment and no lost time, liberal commission or salary, best advantages; splended outfit furnished free; any pushing man can succeed. Apply for terms to,

STONE & WELLINGTON,
Toronto, Ont.

Holland Council.

BY LAW NO. 7.

...r the purpose of appointing overseers of ...ways, pound keepers and fence viewers ...e township of Holland.

1. That the persons hereafter mentioned ... be and are appointed overseers of high... for the respective divisions opposite ... names.

1	James Dudgeon.	No. 28	Duncan Matheson
2	Rich'd Green.	" 29	Wm. Foster.
3	Robert McClure.	" 30	D. C. Taylor.
4	John Charleston	" 31	Thos. Stafford.
5	Wm. S. Williscroft.	" 32	John Aitkins.
6	James Bridget.	" 33	Robt. Mustard.
7	Chris. Lepsik.	" 34	A. F. D. Lee.
8	Joseph Byers. jr.	" 35	Donald McClean.
9	Joseph Byers. sr.	" 36	John Henry
10	Donald Smith	" 37	Angus McCloud.
11	Martin McClean.	" 38	Geo. McCauley.
12	Ed. Watt.	" 39	R. J. Welwood.
13	John Baird.	" 40	W. J. McClean.
14	W. G. Murray.	" 41	James Adams.
15	John Miriam.	" 42	Wm. Dixon.
16	Geo. C. Sinclair.	" 43	David Connell.
17	James Page.	" 44	James Henderson.
18	Henry Anderson.	" 45	James Bruce.
19	W. J. Eagle.	" 46	James Wallace.
20	Wm. Hampton.	" 47	Chris. Hammill.
21	Thos. Jackson.	" 48	Thos. Heughes.
22	James Laird.	" 49	Wm. Daymadd.
23	Geo. Holland.	" 50	Rich's Olmstead.
24	Thos. Armstrong.	" 51	James Lemon.
25	Alex Kirton.	" 52	Geo. Ptolomy.
26	James Brennan.	" 53	Thos. Neely.
27	Henry Sparrow.	" 54	Wm. Lyons.
		" 70	A. Freeborne.
55	Wm. McKay.	" 71	Geo Walker.
56	Geo. Mackey.	" 72	Ed. Delanty.
57	Hugh Mercer.	" 73	Sam Hannah.
58	Rich. Shunn.	" 74	Frank Troughton.
59	Robert Clark.	" 75	Issaac Irwin.
60	Robert Carter.	" 76	John McCurry.
61	Thos. Sargeant.	" 77	John Hamilton.
62	Mark Abby.	" 78	Pat Gillen.
63	R. J. Boyd.	" 79	W. J. Jackson.
64	James Walker.	" 80	Thos. Sanderson.
65	Robert Campbell	" 81	F. Burton,
66	Jos. Jackson Sr.	" 82	Audrew Irwin.
67	Anson Stevenson	" 83	Ed. Downey.
68	Rich'd McKenuit	" 84	Arch. Garie.
69	Peter Bateman.

That the following persons shall be Pound ...epers.

John H. Burchill; Thos. Tuck; Mark Abby; ...artin Sommers; Elisha Hanbury; John Fritz...rald; Geo. McInnis; John Baines; Thos. Neely ...in Waters.

That the following persons shall be Fence ...iewers.

Christopher Hammill, John Southerland, ...eo. Murray, Thos. Troughton, Wm. McKay ...r. James Frazer, John Baird, Abel Wright, ...ich'd Waters, Peter Gesege, Joseph Beirnes, ...J. Boyde, James Wright, Martin Dimmi, ...ohn Mennis, Chas. Debie, 4th. That this By-law shall come into ...rce and take effect from the date and pass...g thereof.

Done in open council this 3rd day of June ...87.

BY-LAW NO. 4.

To permit certain animyls from running at ...rge to settle the heights and description of ...awful fences,

Whereas it is necessary and expedient to ...ass a By-law for the purpose of preventing ...ertain animals running at large.

Be it therefore enacted by the corporation of the township of Holland.

1st. That it shall not be lawful for the following named animals to run at large within the limits of the said corporation (viz) horses of any description or age, bulls or bull calves over six month old, sheep of any description, boars of any age, pigs of every description, and breechy animals of every description and every animal shall be held to be breachy within the measury hereof that shall at any time when not pursued by a dog or dogs or otherwise have leaped over or thrown down a fence not less than four and one half feet high.

2nd. Any animal mentioned in the preceeding section of this By-law may be impounded in any of the public pounds of the said corporation by any person residing therein and who has suifered or fears to suffer damages by any such animals so running at large and it shall be the duty of any pound keeper within the said corporation to receive any such animal when so brought to be impounded by any such party as aforesaid and impound the same whether any such person makes claims for damages or not and such pound keeper shall be allowed to receive claim and recover from the owner or owners of such animals or retain out of the proceeds of the sale thereof the following fees and shall be guided in the performance of his duties by the provisions of the 355 section of the municipality institutes Act of Upper Canada 29-30 vic. cap 51,

1st. For receiving and impounding each such animal or litter of pigs 25c;

2nd. Necessary food and water and attendance per day of 24 hours of time in proportion for each cow, calf, bull, steer or ox horse, 50c. pigs under 50 lbs live weight 25c, over 50 lbs 50c, and it shall be a preliminary or necessary condition and in no case more than six hours after the impounding of any such animal as being breechy the party impounding the same to furnish the pound keeper with a written affidavit taken before some magistrate or justice of the peace having jurisdiction with the said corporation in which shall set out a clear description of the animal and the time place when such animal committed the breach as herein before set forth and also distinctly negative the fact of the animal being pursued at the time of committing such breach and the pound keeper shall preserve such affadavit and reserve in addition to all other fees and charges the sum of 25c, from the owner of such animal or retain the same out of the proceeds out of the sale thereof and pay the same to the party impounding.

Providing always it shall not need a second affadavit for the same animal but such animal shall be liable thereafter to be impounded at any time when found running at large and the pound keeper shall if no damages are claimed or paid to the party impounding recover from the owner or retain out of the proceeds of sale not less than fifty cents each time impounded after the first and pay the same to the treasurer of the corporation within ten days and in default of such payment by the time and in the manner aforesaid the pound keeper shall be held to have fraudulently embezzled the same and shall be liable to prosecution thereof.

This by-law shall take effect from and after the passing thereof.

Passed in open council the 2nd day of June 1887.

DR. OLDHAM, Reeve.
CARSON PRICE, Clerk.

Glenelg Council.

COURT OF REVISION.

Town Hall Glenelg, May 28th 1887.

Council met this day as a court of Revision, all the members present. The Reeve in the chair. Appeals heard and the Assessment Roll amended as follows, William Keys, and Donald Cameron, entered as joint tenants for lot 17, con. 2 N. D. R. instead of Christiana McNab. John McTaggart entered as owner for lot 53, con 2, N. D, R. Angus McInnis entered as owner for lot 25, con. 4, N. D. R. Angus Beaton entered as owner for lot 21, con. 2 N. D. R. John McCoskerry entered as tenant for lot 4, con. 1. S. D. R. William Steadwell entered as owner for lot 1, con. 12. Hugh McKay, entered for tenant for lots 7 1st & 2nd div. of 10 con. 1 E. G. R, John W. Ford entered as owner for north end of lot 97 con. 2, S. W, T. & S. R. Norman McLellan, Archibald McLellan, Paul Nelson, Jr. Donald McLachlan and James Hislop entered as land holder's sons. Court adjourned to June 13th.

After the adjournment of Court of Revision the council met for general business, all the members present, the Reeve in the chair. Minutes of former meeting read and confirmed.

Dunsmore—McMillan—That the clerk be instructed to procure a book for the purpose of recording all By-laws of this township, in, and to be known as the "Township By-law Book"—Carried.

Lamb—McMillan—That the account of C. W. Rutledge of $25.00 for printing and stationary be paid.—Carried.

McMillan—Lamb—That the Treasurer receive $9,07 for lots 24, and north ½ of 25, con. 7, and $22,56 for lot 26 con. 10 being arrears of Taxes, and that the clerk instruct the County Treasurer to erase the Taxes on said lots.—Carried.

Dunsmore—McMillan—That Wm. Fallice be paid $2.00 for 2 cords of wood delivered at Hall.—Carried.

Williams—Dunsmore—That the assessor be paid $75,00 the amount of his salary.—Carried.

By-laws 249 & 250 commuting statute labor and appointing pathmasters was passed through all their stages and ordered to be engrossed on the minutes.

Williams—Dunsmore—That the sum of $10 be granted to Charles McArthur to procure provisions and seed a he is in poor circumstances by reason of sickness.—Carried.

J. H, Bliss waited on council and put in a claim of $125. the value of a horse accidently drowned in Travers-mill pond.

Williams—Lamb—That the Reeve, deputy Reeve and Mr. Dunsmore be a committee to inquire as to the corporations liability for Mr. Bliss' claim for damages, and to get legal advice in the matter if thay think it necessary, and report at next meeting of council. —Carried,

Council adjourned to June 13th.

J. S. BLACK,
Clerk.

AUCTION SALE!

AT

Christie's Foundry.

THE undersigned has received instructions from W. KOUON, Trustee of the Estate of D. Christie, Iron Founder and Implement Mannfacturer, Owen Sound, to sell by PUBLIC AUCTION at the FOUNDRY in Owen Sound, in lots to suit purchasers, on Thursday, 23rd June,

1887, all the Implements now in Stock, and which cosists of

MOWERS, REAPERS, TIGER HAY RAKES, PLOUGHS, GANG PLOUGHS, FANNING MILLS,
HORSE POWERS,
SEPARATORS,

(All new and manufactured of the best materials, and in the most careful manner.) as well as all loose manufactured and unmanufactured articles on the premises.

Liberal Credit on purchases over $10.

WILLIAM BEATON,
Auctioneer.

See large bills for full particulars, or send card for sale bill to W. KOUON.

Owen Sound, June 7th, 1887.

DANGER.—There are some who pay but little or any attention to a cough or cold, and say let nature take its course. This is just the time nature should have assistance. The lungs are threatened. Assist them with Tamarac Elixir.

Fine Watches

Clock's and Silverware,

Dealing

The People Appreciate it.

It illustrates my method of doing business. It means "SQUARE" dealing.

This is what I Practice and Guarantee.

The public will find my stock New, Quality best, Prices close, in American Watches—Clock's etc.

I do practical Watch repairing and Speck fitting.

Goods and work warranted, by the Peoples' Jeweller.

W. A. BROWN,
MARKDALE.

HEAD QUARTERS

FOR

Books, Stationery, Fancy Goods, Toys, Wall Paper, &c.

Toronto St. next Door to the Mansion House, Markdale.

A. Dinsmore returns his sincere thanks for the very liberal support accorded him since commencing as above, and hopes by strict attention to business and moderate prices to merit a continuance of public appreciation and patronage. Those requiring

WALL PAPERS

would consult their own interest by examining his stock, consisting of over Three Thousand pieces at from 5 to 75c. per Roll. Sunday Schools requiring Liberary Books will find Hundreds to select from and at such FAVORABLE TERMS as are sure to satisfy.

☞ Note the fact.—That until I commenced business there was no such thing as a special discount allowed to Sunday Schools, or if you wanted Books could not get them unless by sending to Toronto or elsewhere, now your wants can be supplied at your Door and at lower prices than Toronto. I therefore with confidence appeal for public support. A full line of School Books, Stationery, &c., always on hand, also agent for the DOMESTIC PAPER PATTERNS. Agent also for The Harden Star Hand Grenade for Extinguishing Fires. ☞ NOTE THE ADDRESS,

A. Dinsmore.

New Tailor.

Will Stoddart, late of England and Jersy City, U. S. begs to inform the citizens of MARKDALE and surrounding community, that he has opened a TAILORING SHOP over Mr. W. J. McFarland's Store, where he is prepared to do all work entrusted to him in the Latest and Nobbiest Styles; as I will inspect all work before leaving the Shop, customers may rely on having work turned out first-class in every particular; trusting that I may receive a fair share of the public patronage

I remain,
Faithfully your's,
WILL STODDART.

Markdale, March 14th, 1887.

New General Provision Store

THE undersigned would hereby respectfully intimate to the inhabitants of Markdale and surrounding country that I've opened up a general Provision store where I intend to keep on hand a general supply of all kinds of provisions such as:—

FLOUR, OATMEAL, CORNMEAL INDIAN CORN, GRASS SEED, OATS, BRAN, SHORTS, CHOPP, SCREENINGS. also a quantity of SEED GRAIN, HAMS, BACON, LARD, &c., in fact everything people want in this line.

Shop one door west of Joe Lamb's Blacksmith shop.

Soliciting a share of public patronage I am respectfully yours,

Jas. Miller
MARKDALE.

THE PLACE

TO GET

PURE PARIS GREEN

AT

Stephen's Drug Store.

THE

PLACE

TO GET THE BEST GRADE

OF

Hellobore! Hellobore!

AT

Stephen's Drug Store.

THE

Place to get Stanley's Spectacles which are the best at

Stephen's Drug Store.

Pure Cream of Tarter, Tested Baking Soda, and Pure Spices of all kinds.

R. L. Stephen.

R. S. Rae, Tailor.

REMOVED.

In returning thanks to my numerous customers for liberal patronage during the past 14 years in which I have done business in Markdale, and soliciting a continuance of the same, I would also intimate that I have removed to my premises on Mill Street, next door to Stephen's Drug Store, and opposite to the Post Office; where I shall be happy to meet all my customers.

Respectfully Yours,
R. S. RAE,
Markdale

=TORONTO HOUSE.=

I am offering this week Ready-Made Clothing, and

BOOTS & H OE

AT

astonishingly low prices. Persons requiring a summer outfit would do well to see my stock.

Wm Brown.

For Sale or to Rent.

ONE of the best farms in Artemesia township, being lots 115 and 116 third range west of T. & S. Road, three miles from Markdale, comprising 100 acres, over 80 of which is cleared and in good state of cultivation, well fenced, young and old orchard, watered with never failing spring and good well, brick house, good carriage house and stable and two log barns. Possession will be given after harvest. For further particulars apply on the premises to,

JOHN WHITBY,
Markdale, P. O.

MIRACULOUS.—"My Miraculous Cure was that I had suffered from kidney disease for about two years, was off work all that time. A friend told me of B. B. B., I tried it, and am happy to say that I was cured by two bottles." Wm. Tier, St. Marys, Ont.

OWEN SOUND

MARBLE WORK

H. B. HARRISON

MANUFACTURER OF

MARBLE AND GRANITE

MONUMENTS & HEADSTONES.

Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.

JUST RECEIVED

3 Carloads Finest Variegate Marble

☞ Largest stock in the Dominion select from. Personally selected at the quarries in Vermont. Will be sold at prices which defy competition.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

N. B.—Beware of Monuments and Head stones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered to gether, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide the imperfections, and called White Bronze.

H. B. HARRISON

ROBT. ASKIN,

UNDERTAKER,
MARKDALE,
FUNERAL FURNISHINGS
supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse
for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—

FURNITURE

In Stock at bottom prices.

PICTURE FRAMING

Done on short notice.

ROBT. ASKIN.

WM. BREADNER.

Carpender and Builder

GEORGE ST., MARKDALE.

ALL kinds of building and house carpenter work done in the village or country. Call early before the rush comes. 339-52

CARD OF THANKS.

In thanking my customers for their liberal patronage in the past, I have much pleasure in being still able to supply them with the following celebrated machines, viz.

The Watson all-steel two-horse twine Binder.
The Watson Deering Binder.
The Watson Improved Lion Reaper.
The New Humming Mower.
The Humming-bird Mower.
The Watson Daisy Rake.
The Mann Champion Rake.
The Tolten Pea Harvester.
The Mann Broad-cast Seeder and Harrows Combined.
The Champion Combined Drill, Colter & Scott, Oshawa.
The best Plow's and Harrows in the market.
Root Cutters, Grain Crushers, Fanning mills. Land Rollers.
Agent for the Watersou's Co's Machinery and Steam Threshers.

Horse Powers, Wagon's Buggies, Democrats, and every implement a farmer requires. Parties reqiring anything in above lines will find it to their advantage to call at my new implement house opposite R. McNally's Carriage works, where Mr. R. Robertson will be pleased to wait on customers in my absence.

J. H. CARSON, Agent
148-61 Markdale.

CANADIAN PACIFIC R. R.

TIME TABLE.

—Markdale Station—

GOING SOUTH.	6.47 a. m.	3.52 p. m.
GOING NORTH.	12.02 p. m.	9.10 p. m.

Burdock Blood Bitters

WILL CURE OR RELIEVE

BILIOUSNESS, DIZZINESS,
DYSPEPSIA, DROPSY,
INDIGESTION, FLUTTERING
JAUNDICE, OF THE HEART,
ERYSIPELAS, ACIDITY OF SALT RHEUM, THE STOMACH,
HEARTBURN, DRYNESS
HEADACHE, OF THE SKIN,
And every species of disease arising from Disordered Liver, KIDNEYS OR STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD.

T. MILBURN & CO., TORONTO.

LOTTIE AND COTTIE.

A FAIRY TALE.

BY MAUDE L. RADFORD.

Lottie and Cottie were two little girls. They were twins and looked exactly alike. Both had red cheeks and lips, great, grey eyes, and a braid of brown hair hanging down their backs, generally tied with blue ribbon.

They were good little girls, too, but of course, like every one else they had their faults. Their greatest fault was that of wishing unreasonable things. Sometimes, course, they wished for things which would be of benefit to themselves and others, but generally they wished foolishly.

One day, they were looking out of the window watching the fleecy clouds roll across the blue sky. Presently they saw a flock of birds fly by.

"Oh!" said Lottie, "I wish I were a bird."

"So do I," answered her sister. "What kind of a bird would you like to be?"

"I should like to have a yellow body, green wings, pink feet, red beak and blue tail."

"Oh!" said Cottie, "I should like the same as you, only I had rather have a blue beak and red tail."

"How splendid it would be!" exclaimed Lottie.

Now it happened that a good fairy lived near these little girls, and, as she took an interest in all children, and especially in good ones, she often used to observe how Lottie and Cottie acted.

She did not know much, however, of that very bad habit of theirs—wishing. Now, she determined to grant them each a wish, but, as she could not go herself to give it, she sent her waiting maid, Rose-bud-blooming.

Now Rose-bud-blooming, being a rather lazy young fairy, delayed somewhat on the way to the house of our children.

Ah! Rose-bud-blooming, why did you not arrive a little sooner, and when Lottie was wishing to be happy, clever and rich, grant her those wishes? But Miss Rose-bud-blooming flew into the room just after that desire had been uttered, and sat her lazy little self down upon a cushion and waited for the utterance of the next wish. It was that one regarding the birds, and the young fairy flew towards the little girls, touched them on their heads with her wand, and flew away again.

The next moment two little girls felt themselves grow smaller and smaller and smaller, and then their arms grew into wings, and they found themselves turned into two little birds, one with a blue beak and red tail and the other with a red beak and blue tail.

"My goodness!" exclaimed Lottie.

"Is that you Lottie?" asked her sister.

"Yes," answered Lottie, "is it not jolly? We are little birdies now." "I should think we were. Let us fly out of the window."

So two little birds singing loudly flew up, up towards the clouds. They passed a great many people they knew. School-mates, who cried out, at the sight of their brilliant plumage, and their own brother, who tried to catch them, intending to bring them home to themselves.

But they eluded his grasp, and flew on, on, on past hills and valleys and rivers, and then they flew towards home again.

Tney perched themselves on a bough to rest.

"My goodness!" said Lottie, "it's getting late."

"Yes," responded Cottie, a little dolefully, it must be confessed, "I'm a little hungry."

"Oh! I am terribly hungry."

"We are birds and don't know how to get any food. What shall we do?"

"Go home," sobbed Cottie.

"We can't. They won't know it's us."

"Oh, dear me!"

"If once I got home I would never wish a foolish wish again. Never! Never!"

"Neither would I," responded Cottie.

Then the poor little things began to sob again. Oh! Rose-bud blooming, if you could have seen them!

Now it happened that this was the day on which the good fairy reviewed her animals, and as she was returning home, she heard some one sobbing, and saw the two birds.

She listened to their conversation, and immediately knew that they were the children to whom she had granted the wish.

"Ah!" she said, "I think that this lesson will cure them."

"Now, birds," she said to the children, "Now, birds, will you ever wish a foolish wish again?"

"Never! Never!"

"Well, then, become two children again," answered the fairy, touching them with her wand.

Immediately the birds vanished, and Lottie and Cottie stood by each other.

"Remember your promise!" sang the fairy, as she flew away.

"Thank you, we will!"

And the children kissed each other, and, let me add, kept their promise to the fairy.

The Bride Race in a Canoe.

The damsel, in Singapore, is given a canoe and a double-bladed paddle, and allowed a start of some distance. The suitor, similarly equipped, starts off in chase. If he succeeds in overtaking her she becomes his wife; if not, the match is broken off. . . . It is seldom that objection is offered at the last moment, and the race is generally a short one. The maiden's arms are strong, but her heart is soft and her nature is warm, and she soon becomes a willing captive. If the marriage takes place where no stream is near, a round circle of a certain size is formed, the damsel is stripped of all but a waistband, and given half the circle's start, and if she succeeds in running three times round before her suitor come up with her she is entitled to remain a virgin; if not, she must consent to the bonds of matrimony. As in the other cases, but few outstrip their lovers.

What Edith Thought of It.

Alonzo: "Dearest Edith, candour compels me, on the eve of our wedding, to confess that I am a——" Edith, in consternation: "Not a married man?" Alonzo: "No; but a womanbulist." Edith more calmly: "And is that all, dearest? That should not separate us or give us concern. Why, papa was brought up an old-fashioned Methodist, and mamma has always been a close-communion Baptist, and they've got along very well together!"

Slavery in Brasil.

Brazil has the unenviable distinction of being the only Christian nation in which slavery now exists, though it is to be hoped that the recent measures taken for its abolition will, in no very long time, remove the stain from her escutcheon.

At first, the Indians were enslaved by the Portuguese settlers, under the flimsy pretext of desiring to Christianize them. Their captors used to call the expeditions against them, "going into the forests to rescue Indians."

When this practice was finally prohibited, the planters supplied the places of the natives by negroes from the west coast of Africa. These slaves were brought over in great numbers without opposition, until Portugal acknowledged the independence of Brazil in 1825. Then, to the lasting honor of the new State, one of the first acts of its ruler was to sign a treaty with England for the suppression of the slave trade.

The Government, however, had not the means to carry the treaty into effect, and the importation of blacks accordingly continued, notwithstanding the urgent and oft-repeated protests of England, and the efforts of her cruisers. The disgrace to his country from this persistent violation of the treaty was keenly felt by Dom Pedro II., when he began to reign.

But the remonstrances of the boy Emperor—he was only a lad of fifteen at this time—had little effect. The slave trade continued to flourish for more than ten years longer, when the extreme vigilance of the English men-of-war, who pursued slavers into Brazilian harbors, and cut them out from under the guns of their forts, together with the outbreak of the yellow fever, attributed by the terrified people to a freshly landed cargo of slaves, at last put an end to the traffic.

By one of the provisions of the treaty, all negroes brought over after a certain year were to be free, and the English Minister at Rio de Janeiro was now instructed to demand the release of those who were illegally held in bondage. All his efforts were in vain, although the Emperor again exerted his influence on the side of right and humanity. Still, they were not wholly without effect, since the agitation of this question aroused an opposition to slavery in Brazil, which was greatly strengthened by various circumstances.

The chief of these circumstances were the Emancipation Proclamation of President Lincoln, and the necessities of the Paraguayan War, which led to the freeing of all slaves who joined the army. At this time, the Emperor gave his personal slaves their liberty, and many of his subjects followed his example.

These acts awakened the wildest hopes in the slaves, and to every remotest plantation the glad tidings of coming freedom penetrated. Whenever on a holiday the Emperor appeared, the roads were lined with grateful negroes, who falling upon their knees, imploring blessings from heaven upon their redeemer as he passed. Whittier caught the enthusiasm and sang with prophetic fire of the noble-minded ruler:

"Crowned doubly by man's blessing and God's grace,
Thy future is secure;
Who frees a people makes his statue's place
In Time's Valhalla sure."

At length, in 1871, the long-looked-for emancipation bill was passed; but bitter was the disappointment of the slaves and their friends to find that it only declared that the children of slaves born after this time should be free at twenty-one, and established a fund for the purchase of the freedom of slaves.

Accordingly agitation was begun for a more radical measure, especially in the northern provinces, where the slaves are comparatively few in number, with such success that by 1883 emancipation had become the one absorbing national issue. Both parties were agreed in their desire to put an end to it, but were divided as to the means by which this should be brought about.

The next year a government emancipation bill having been defeated by a very small majority in the Chamber of Deputies, it was determined to appeal to the people, if such a term has any meaning in a country where, out of a population of about thirteen millions, the voters number only about a quarter of a million.

As soon as the elections were over, the Emperor called together both houses for the purpose of acting on this matter. Another emancipation bill was introduced and, after some debate, passed, becoming a law September 28, 1885.

By its principal provisions all slaves over sixty-five years are unconditionally freed; the emancipation fund is largely increased; and a valuation of slaves according to ages is made, these values to diminish annually six per cent.

The advocates of this measure assert that, by its action, slavery will cease in Brazil in 1892. Other careful observers, however, are not so hopeful, though none doubt the final triumph of freedom. It is certain to be ardently desired that the day, when it does come, may find still on the throne the enlightened ruler who, when a boy, struck the the first blow which loosened the shackles of his subjects.

Questions.

What is life? Go, ask the tramp,
Who begs from day to day;
And he will tell you 'tis a cramp,
That squeezes breath away.

What is life? Inquire of clown,
Who laughs within the ring;
And he will lay the maxim down,
It is a serious thing.

What is life? The miser ask,
And he will answer, 'tis
A golden sun 'neath which to bask,
Grasping the horde that's his.

What is life? Go, ask the bard,
Who sings the song to men;
And he will tell you 'tis most hard,
As dark as sin's own den!

What is life? Ask the Divine,
Whose strength is spent in preaching;
And he will answer that its twine,
Is e'en beyond his reaching.

Thus life's a book we all must read,
But who can criticise it?
'Tis full of puzzles, problems, greed,
And trickery underlies it.

Strictly True

In every respect and attested by the testimony of thousands that Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor is a sure and Painless cure for corns. The claim that it is just as good made by those endeavoring to palm off imitations for the genuine only proves the superiority of "Putnam's." Use only Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. Sure safe, painless.

FARM.

The practice of condensing and canning milk, instead of manufacturing it into butter, is stated to be spreading extensively in Ireland.

An Ohio farmer says that last year he raised 300,000 cabbages, and kept the flea beetles away at a cost of a single dollar. His method is to pour a gallon of spirits of turpentine into a barrel of land plaster, and when the plaster is dampened all through, as it will be in a few days, spread it broadcast over the field. It is better than lime or ashes, and may be applied when the plants are not wet with rain or dew.

For the present condition of depression in British agriculture, leading statesmen like Gladstone, and leading agriculturists like Reed and Pell, are earnestly urging the people to turn their attention in a greater degree to the rearing and marketing of poultry, believing it will be more remunerative than wheat farming, etc., while a full supply raised at home will keep in the country the millions of money now paid to foreigners for eggs.

The first pound, or the first 100 pounds, of beef, mutton or pork is the most costly. The greater the weight an animal can be made to attain in the shortest period of time the smaller the cost per pound proportionately. It requires no more labor to feed a steer weighing 2000 pounds than it does to feed a steer weighing 1000 pounds. The cost of production does not depend solely upon the amount of food consumed, but upon the food, shelter and labor.

A New Tax.—The Russian Minister of Finance has hit upon a novel expedient for raising additional revenue. He proposes to tax hen's eggs, the amount fixed being a quarter-kopeck on each egg laid, or about a third of a penny. Only the first twenty eggs laid by each hen, however, are to be liable to the tax. As there are said to be 100,000,000 hens in Russia, a quarter-kopeck on each of the twenty eggs laid by each hen will, it is estimated, produce a revenue of 5,000,000 roubles—a very substantial sum. Ducks are to count the same as hens, but turkeys lay such large eggs that the Minister is in doubt whether the tax upon them should not be heavier. The subject is receiving his "serious consideration."

The Farmer's Case.—A writer in the Quarterly Review takes the ground that the English farmer has really nothing to fear from the competition of the wheat-growers in the United States, Russia, Australia or Canada; that his only formidable competitor is the Indian peasant. This proposition, which at first glance appears somewhat startling, is supported with a mass of facts and figures, which we at least are wholly unable to controvert. The reviewer's thesis is that of late wheat has been grown at a loss in all the exporting countries with the single exception of India. The average value of the English wheat crop of late has been about £8 stg. per acre—to say nothing of price, the average yield in England is nearly 29 bushels per acre, against 12.3 in the States—so that if the game of beggar-my-neighbour is to go on, the English farmer is sure in the end to outlast his American rival.

Not Long a Policeman.

Policeman—"Give me a pint of peanuts, aunty, and there's five cents for you."

Aunty—"Hiven bliss ye, sorr! I see yez are a new man on the foorce."

Query.

A young lady dreamed the other evening that she was out riding, and that the horse was running away. She jumped and fell from the bed to the floor, bruising her shoulder. Might this, so to speak, be called a case of being thrown from a nightmare?

The Schoolmaster at Home.

Schoolmaster: "Well, Bobby, my little fellow, what is your eye for?" Bobby: "Seein' wi'." Schoolmaster: "And your ear?" Bobby: "Hearin' wi'." Schoolmaster: "And your nose, Bobby?" Bobby, after a pause: "For takin' the cauld wi'."

"Don't Marry Him!"

"He is such a fickle, inconstant fellow, you will never be happy with him," said Esther's friends when they learned of her engagement to a young man who bore the reputation of being a sad flirt. Esther, however, knew that her lover had good qualities, and she was willing to take the risk. In nine cases out of ten it would have proved a mistake; but Esther was an uncommon girl and to every one's surprise Fred made a model husband. How was it? Well, Esther had a cheerful, sunny temper and a great deal of tact. Then she enjoyed perfect health and was always so sweet, neat and wholesome that Fred found his own home most pleasant, and his own wife more agreeable than any other being. As the year passed and he saw other women of Esther's age grow sickly, faded and querulous, he realized more and more that he had "a jewel of a wife." Good health was half the secret of Esther's success. She retained her vitality and good looks, because she warded off feminine weaknesses and ailments by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Big hats are rarely beautiful this season.

The Old Silver Spoon.

How fresh in my mind are the days of my sickness,
When I tossed me in pain, all fevered and sore;
The burning, the nausea, the sinking and weakness,
And even the old spoon that my medicine bore.
The old silver spoon, the family spoon,
The sick-chamber spoon that my medicine bore.

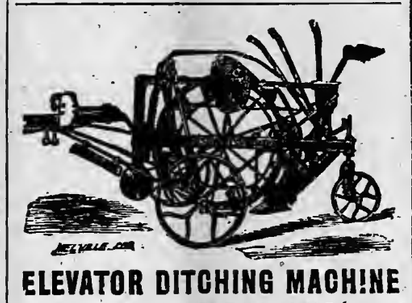
How loth were my fever-parched lips to receive it,
How nauseous the stuff that it bore to my tongue,
And the pain at my inwards, oh, naught could relieve it,
Though tears of disgust from my eyeballs it wrung,
The old silver spoon, the medicine spoon,
How awful the stuff that it left on my tongue,

Such is the effect of nauseous, griping medicines which make the sick-room a memory of horror. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, on the contrary, are small, sugar-coated, easy to take, purely vegetable and perfectly effective. 25 cents a vial.

There is an immense competition among corset manufacturers at the moment in their efforts to supply a corset that meets the requirements of the tailor-cut costume.

Don't hawk, hawk, and blow, blow, disgusting everybody, but use Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

Small combs and fancy pins are worn all over the high coiffure.



SPOONER'S GOPPERINE (Patented) For Friction Bearings of metal for journal bearings in machinery—Guaranteed copper mixed. Supplies every requirement. Ask your hardware dealer for it. ALONZO. W. SPOONER, Patentee and Manufacturer, Port Hope.

MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO.
MANUFACTURE ONLY
FINEST
Silver Plated Ware.
Artistic Designs, combined with Unequalled Durability and Finish
HAMILTON, ONT.

THE TORONTO SILVER PLATE CO.
Manufacturers of the highest grade of
SILVER PLATED WARES.
Steel Knives, Spoons, Forks, Etc.,
A SPECIALTY.
ALL GOODS GUARANTEED.
TORONTO CANADA.

DUCHESS

DRESSING.
A PERMANENT BLACK POLISH
ESPECIALLY ADAPTED FOR LADIES & CHILDREN'S FINE SHOES.

ELEVATOR DITCHING MACHINE
FOR UNDERDRAINING.
One man with The Elevator Ditching Machine can do more work than thirty men with spades.
Manufactured by WM. RENNIE, TORONTO.

THE WHITE THRESHING ENGINE
OF LONDON, ONT.
A FULL SUPPLY FOR 1887

J. L. JONES
WOOD ENGRAVER
10 King St East
TORONTO.

ASSESSMENT SYSTEM
The Mutual Reserve Life Association
The largest and most prosperous open Assessment Association in the world—desires active representatives in every section of Canada; liberal inducements. It has full Government Deposit, and under the supervision of Insurance Department at Ottawa.
Correspondence solicited. Address,
J. D. WELLS, General Manager,
65 King Street East, Toronto.

The Perry Carriage

TWO STYLES, SURREY AND PHAETON BODY.
The shafts are attached to body by the Perry Compensating Springs. The result of the action of the Springs is no horse-motion in the cart, and no cart-motion on the horse.
Descriptive illustrations on application. For sale by all carriage makers.
CANADA CARRIAGE PARTS CO.,
TORONTO.
Sole Manufacturers for Canada.
The Trade only supplied.

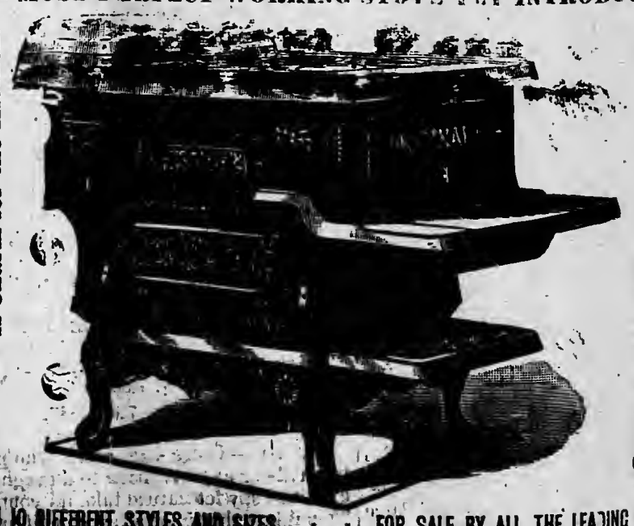
The National Electro & Stereotype Co.
23 ADELAIDE ST. E., TORONTO.
All classes of fine work. Mfrs. of Printers' Leads, Slugs and Metal Furniture. Send for prices.

ONTARIO CANOE COMPANY
Peterboro', Ont.

MANUFACTUR'S OF ALL KINDS OF CANOES
Send 3c. Stamp for Catalogue.

BABY'S BIRTHDAY.

A Beautiful Imported Birthday Card sent to any baby whose mother will send us the names of two or more other babies, and their parents' addresses. Also a handsome Diamond Dye Sample Card to the mother and much valuable information.
Wells, Richardson & Co., Montreal.



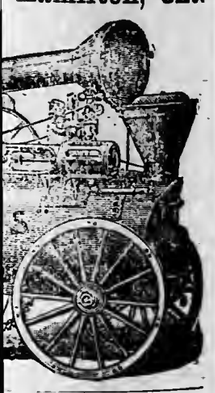
MAY APPLE BLOOD SYRUP
THE GREATEST DISCOVERY
of the present age for
Regulating the Bowels, and Curing all Blood, Liver and Kidney Complaints.
A PERFECT BLOOD PURIFIER.
A few in Hamilton who have been benefited by its use:—
[illegible] St. Kenilal, 12 Roberts St., cured of Erysipelas of 2 years' standing; Robert Cornell, 24 South St., daughter cured of Epileptic Fits after 6 years' suffering; Jennie Birrell, 55 Walnut St., cured of Weakness and Lung Trouble; John Wood 95 Cathcart St., cured of Liver Complaint and Biliousness, used only 3 fifty-cent bottles; Mrs. J. Beal, 6 Augusta St., troubled for years with Nervous Prostration, two small bottles gave her great relief. Sold at 50c. & $1.
F. F. DALLEY & CO., Proprietors.

L. D. SAWYER & CO., Hamilton, Ont.
MANUFACTURERS OF
"L. D. S." ENGINES,
WOOD, COAL AND STRAW BURNERS,
PLAIN AND TRACTION,
"Grain Saver" and "Peerless"
SEPARATORS.

"Pitts" Horse Powers, for 2, 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12 Horses.
Tread Powers, for 1, 2 and 3
Eclipse Separators, for Tread & Small Powers.
Send for Illustrated Catalogue

Farmers and Threshers!
USE ON YOUR MACHINERY ONLY THE WELL-KNOWN

PeerlessOil
NINE GOLD MEDALS Have been awarded it during the last four years. Try also PEERLESS AXLE GREASE, for your Wagons and Horse Powers.
Manufactured at QUEEN CITY OIL WORKS, by
SAMUEL ROGERS & CO. TORONTO.



The Original Wood Cook.
THE MOST PERFECT WORKING STOVE YET INTRODUCED.

Elegant in Design and Finish,
Massive in Appearance,
A Charm for the Kitchen.
Has the Largest Oven,
The Best Fire-Box,
Heaviest Castings.
MADE IN 10 DIFFERENT STYLES AND SIZES. FOR SALE BY ALL THE LEADING DEALERS.
MANUFACTURED BY
THE E. & C. GURNEY CO., (L'D), TORONTO.
Dealers who have not yet seen this STOVE should secure the sale of it at once.

MENT al Reserve SSOCIATION
st prosperous
orld—desires of Canada; liberal t Deposit, and epartment at icited. Address,
WELLS,
General Manager
ng Street East, Toronto.
erry Cart

EY AND PHAETON BODIES
hed to body by the Perry Conhe result of the action of them otion in the cart, and no cut-ions on application. For sale
RRIAGE PARTS CO.,
TORONTO.
Manufacturers for Canada.
plied.

E ST. E., TORONTO.
ork. Mfrs. of Printers' Leads,
iture. Send for prices.
CANOE COMPANY
Peterboro', Ont.

LL KINDS OF CANOES
r Catalogue.
BIRTHDAY.
l Imported Birthday Card sent whose mother will send us the or more other babies, and their resses Also a handsome Dia-ample Card to the mother and le information.
rdson & Co., Montreal.

THE GREATEST DISCOVERY
of the present age for
REGULATING THE BOWELS, AND CURING ALL BLOOD, LIVER AND KIDNEY COMPLAINTS.
A PERFECT
BLOOD PURIFIER.
A few in Hamilton who have been benefited by its use:—
..ET St., cured of Erysipelas
Robert Cornell, 24 South St., ...ptic Fits after 6 years' suffer-Walnut St., cured of Weak-
; John Wood 95 Cathcart St, nt and Biliousness, used only
rs. J. Beal, 6 Augusta St, th Nervous Prostration, two reat relief. Sold at 50c. & $1.
LLEY & CO., Proprietors.
Hamilton, Ont.

eshers!
ELL-KNOWN essOil
Try also PEERLESS and Horse Powers.
TORONTO.
Cook.
NTRODUCED.
Has the Largest Oven,
The Best Fire-Box,
Heaviest Castings.
THE LEADING DEALER
TORONTO.
f it at once.

BY ORDER OF THE LEAGUE.

BY FRED. M. WHITE.

CHAPTER XIII.

For a time, Enid stood looking at the suf-er sadly, and wondering where the friends the poor girl might be. Gradually, as e scene came back to her, she remembered
e words of Lucrece, and turned to her.
Lucrece, did I hear you say you knew is poor woman?"
"Indeed, yes, miss. Three years ago, in aris, Linda and I were great friends—what ou English call "chums." She was an tress at the "Varieties"—a clever player;
t she could not rise. Jealousy and a bad sband prevented that. Poor Linda, she e all the talent!"
"Strange that you should know her; but ill fortunate. Perhaps, through you, we y be able to discover where her friends
e."
"Poor child! she has no friends.—But sh! See! she has opened her eyes."
The sufferer was looking wildly around.
e tried to rise but the pain and weakness re great, and she sank back with a deep ttering sigh. As she collected her sen-—"Where am I?" she asked faintly.
How did I come here?"
"Do not distress yourself," Enid said
tly. "You are quite safe you had an ac-dent, and they brought you here."
For a moment the girl closed her eyes.
I remember now. I was knocked down a cab. But I am better now. Let me t up. Where is my boy?" she continued
"What has become of my boy?"
"Do not trouble yourself about your ild," Enid said soothingly, marvelling at one apparently so young should be a other. "He shall be well cared for.
ll us where he is, and he shall be brought you."
"You are so good—so good and beautiful!
ou will find a card in my jacket-pocket ere to send for him. Tell me, bright gel of goodness, what is the name they ew you by?"
"My name is Enid Charteris," she reed, smiling a little at the theatrical ch, earnest though it was—"I must not you talk any longer. The doctor was y strict about that."
At the mention of the name, the sick won became strangely agitated, so much so t Enid was alarmed. "Am I in Grosv-or Square? Are you the daughter of Sir offrey Charteris?"
"Yes, yes. But you really must be quiet w."
But instead of complying with this reest, the stranger burst into a fit of hys-ical crying weeping and sobbing as if r heart would break. "Miserable won that I am!" she cried, "what have I ne? Oh that I could have known be-re!"
Enid looked at Lucrece in alarm. The reak was so sudden, so unexpected, at for a moment they were too startled to eak.
"She is unhinged by the shock," Enid ispered. "Perhaps if you were to speak er, it would have a good effect."
"Yes, madam. But if I may be allowed make a suggestion—I should say it was tter if you left the room for a time. She s some likeness to you, or fancies she es, to some one. She knows me; and if u will leave for a short time I will try d soothe her."
"I think you are right, Lucrece. I will me in again presently, when she has be-me quieter."
Directly Enid quitted the apartment, crece's whole manner changed from the olced domestic to the eager sympathetic end. She bent over the bed and looked wn in the suffering woman's eyes. "Lin-
! do you not know me? It is I, Lucrece!"
"You—and here? What is the meaning this, and in the dress of a servant? Tell
," she continued eagerly. "You are not e of his friends in pay, to help his vile hemes?"
"I do not know who he is. I am here for good purpose—to protect my mistress m a great harm."
"Ah, then, you are no friend of Le Gau-r's. Do you ever see him? Does he me here often? Do you know what he is er?"
Lucrece started. "What do you know of Gautier?"
"What do I know of him? Everything at is bad, and bitter, and fiendish! But he ll not succeed, if I have to sacrifice my e to aid the beautiful lady who has been kind to me."
"You are not the only one who would," crece quicky answered. "Tell me what know."
"I did not know then how good d noble she is.—My head is queer d strange, Lucrece; I cannot tell you now.
morrow, perhaps, if I am better, I will you everything. I am glad now that brought me here."
Meanwhile, Maxwell was pacing about e drawing-room, having entirely forgotten
e unfortunate woman in his own perplex-
. He had been there perhaps half an ur, when Enid entered. She was not too ngrossed to notice the moody, thoughtful own upon his face.
"What a sad thing for her, poor woman!"
said.—"How did it happen, Fred?"
"Poor woman?" Maxwell asked vaguely.
How did what happen?'
"Why, Fred, what is the matter with u?" Enid exclaimed with vague alarm.
How strange you look! Surely you have forgotten the poor creature you brought re not more than half a hour ago?"
Maxwell collected himself by a violent fort. "I had actually forgotten. I was inking of something else.—Enid, dear, I going away?"
"Going away! Any one would think, m the expression of your face and the ne of your voice, you were never going to turn. Where are you going?"
There was a very considerable chance of not returning, he felt, and he smiled at e grim idea. "I am not going far—at st not very far, in this age of express ains and telegraphs. I wish I could take u with me, darling; for I am going to a ace you have often longed to see—I am ing to Rome."
"To Rome? Is it not very sudden?
ou never told me before."
"Well, it is rather sudden. I have not known it long. You see, I could not tell u a thing I was ignorant of myself."
"I wish you were not going," Enid said reflectively, "I have a feeling that some evil will come of this. And yet I suppose you must go. It is business of your own, Fred?"

Maxwell hesitated. He could not prevaricate with those clear truthful eyes looking up so earnestly to his own. The soul of honour himself, he could not forgive the want of it in others; but he temporised now.
"Well, not exactly my own," he stammered, trying to make the best of a bad case, "or I would not go. It is a secret, which I cannot tell even you; but I shall not be long away."
"A secret which you cannot tell even me," Enid repeated mechanically. "Then it must be something you are very much ashamed of."
"Indeed, it is not," Maxwell began eagerly, hesitated, and stopped. After all, she was right. It was a secret, a terrible, shame ful secret, against which all the manliness in him revolted. For a time he was silent, hanging down his head for very shame, as the whole force of his position came upon him. For the first time, he realised where his rashness had led him, and what he was about to lose.
Enid looked at him in amazement, strangely mixed with a terrible and nameless fear. "Fred!" she cried at length, white and trembling, "you are going away upon the mission of that awful League! You cannot deny it.—O Fred! Fred!"
He tried to soothe her as she lay sobbing in his arms, but to no avail. The most fervent promises and the most endearing words she heeded not, crying that he was going from her never to return; and her fears were strengthened when he mournfully but firmly declined to speak of his mission. Presently, when she grew a little calmer, she raised her wet cheeks to him and kissed him. She was pale now, but confident, and striving with all the artifices in her power to persuade him from his undertaking; but tears and prayers, threats even, could not avail.
He shook his head sadly. "I would that I could stay with you, Enid," he said at length, holding her close in his arms; "but this much I can tell you—that I dare not disobey. It is as much as my life is worth."
"And as much as your life is to go," echoed the sobbing girl. "What is life to me without you? And now this thing has come between us, parting us perhaps forever!"
"I hope not," Maxwell smiled cheerfully.
"I trust not, darling. My time away is very short; and doubtless I shall not be called upon again for a time—perhaps never."
Enid dried her eyes bravely and tried to smile. "Good-bye, Fred," she said broken-ly; "and heaven grant that my fears are groundless! If anything happened to you,
I believe I should die."
"I shall come back, darling—And now, good-bye, and God bless you."
After he was gone, Enid threw herself down upon the lounge and wept.

. . . . . .

Le Gautier's star was in the ascendant. His only dangerous rival would soon be hundreds of miles away on a hazardous mission, out of which, in all human probability, he could not come unscathed, even if he escaped with life; a prospective father-in-law wholly in his power; and a bride in posse, upon whose fears he could work by describing graphically her father's danger, with, the moral, that it would be her duty to her parent to wed his preserver, Le Gautier.
This, in fine, was the pretty scheme the wily adventurer had sketched out in his busy brain, a scheme which at present looked like being brought to a successful issue.
Another source of congratulation to this inestimable young man was the progress he was making with the fair stranger, known to him as Marie St. Jean. By the time a fortnight had passed, he had been in Vent-nor Street more than once, and quite long enough to feel a passion stronger than he had ever experienced before. It was absolutely dangerous to him, he knew, to be with her so often; but like the moth and the candle, the attraction was so great that he found it impossible to keep away not that he lost his head for a moment, though he well knew that Marie St. Jean could turn him round on her finger; but he had formed his plans even here. The first step was to betray the League—the scheme was not quite ripe yet, and the news of Maxwell uncertain—and then take Marie St. Jean for a tour upon the continent. There would be plenty of time to return and marry Enid afterwards without any unnecessary bother; for he had already made up his mind that Miss St. Jean was too proud to show her wrongs to the world.
On the Monday afternoon following Maxwell's departure, Le Gautier turned his steps in the direction of Grosvenor Square, feeling on good terms with himself and all mankind. His schemes were prospering hugely. It was clearly useless, he determined, to hesitate any longer; the blow must be struck, and the sooner the better for all parties concerned. With this intention up-most in his mind, he trippingly ascended the steps of Sir Geoffrey's house and knocked.
He found the baronet in the library, engaged as usual over some volume of deep spiritualistic research; the thing had become a passion with him now, and every spare moment was spent in this morbid amusement. He was getting thin and haggard over it, and Le Gautier thought he looked very old and careworn as he watched him now.
"You have come just in time," he cried, placing a paper-knife in the book and turning eagerly to Le Gautier. "I have a passage here that I am unable to understand.
Listen to this."
"I have something more important to speak of," Le Gautier interrupted. "I have something more pressing on hand than that attractive subject. Sir Geoffrey, next week I am summoned to Warsaw."
The baronet began to feel anxious; he knew perfectly well what was coming, and, like all weak men, he dreaded anything like evil. The part he had to play was a despicable one, and he feared his daughter's angry scorn. Like a recalcitrant debtor, he began to cry for time, the time that never comes. "So you informed me last week," he replied, twisting a paper-knife in his hands uneasily. "I hope you will have a pleasant journey. How long do you expect to be detained there?"
"I cannot tell; it depends upon the amount of business to be done. I may be away six weeks; but, at the very least, I do not see how I can get back to England under the month."
Sir Geoffrey's face lighted, in spite of his air of regret. Le Gautier noticed this; nothing escaped the ken of those keen black eyes.
"And when you return, we will complete our little arrangements," Sir Geoffrey exclaimed cheerfully. "No hurry, you know, no haste in such matters as these; and, referring to our previous conversation, we cannot be too careful in treading such uncertain ground. Enid"——
"Precisely," Le Gautier interrupted.
"With all due deference to your opinion,
there is need of action, which is a very different matter from that raw haste which your poet tells us is half-sister to delay. I must have something definite settled before I left England."
"'Pon my honour, you know, you young men are very hasty," the baronet fidgeted;
"there is no controlling you. In my time, things were quite different; men professed a certain deference to women, and did not take so much for granted as you do now"—
"Sir Geoffrey," Le Gautier interrupted again, "things change; men alter; but perfect love is the same for all time. I love your daughter, and would make her my wife."
In spite of the baronet's feeble-mindedness, there was always something in the Frenchman's higher flights which jarred upon his nerves, a sense of insincerity, a certain hollow, grotesque mockery, which pained him. The last word struck upon him like some chords played out of tune.
Still the spell was upon him; he had nought to do but obey.
"We perfectly understand that," he replied, "and therefore need say no more about it. You have my promise; indeed, how can it be otherwise with the memory of that awful manifestation before me? And the word of a Charteris is sufficient. But I do think, Le Gautier, that you are pushing this thing too far."
"Let the depth of my love excuse my impetuosity;" and again the words struck harshly on the listener's ears. "Surely the excuse is a good one. I am leaving England shortly; and before I go, I must—nay, I will have an answer to the question which affects my happiness so deeply. It is only fair, only just that I should know my fate."
Sir Geoffrey speculated feebly what he was to do with a man like this. "But have a little patience; let me prepare her for your proposal."
"Which you will promise to do, and put off day after day, as a man does who has an unpleasant task to perform. No, Sir Geoffrey; I do not wish to conduct my wooing second-hand. There is no time like the present; my motto is "Now." I do not ask you to help me; but before I leave this house; it is my intention to speak to your daughter."
In sheer desperation, not unmixed with a little irritation, Sir Geoffrey rang the bell and desired the servant to conduct Le Gau-tier up-stairs. The thing must come sooner or later, he knew; and so long as he was not asked personally to interfere, he did not so much mind, though he was not unconscious of sundry twinges of conscience as his arbitrary visitor disappeared.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Women Who Work for Their Husbands.

If a man is a real man it is safe for a woman to continue earning wages after she is married, but I think that there are hundreds of men to-day, yes, thousands, who have been ruined because they were not compelled to support their wives. If a man who earns small wages marries a woman capable of earning as much as himself there are nine chances out of ten that he will develop extravagant habits because of the added income of his wife. If they could agree and hold to the decision that they should live on the husband's income and let the earnings of the wife accumulate as capital for a buisness in which they both could engage it would be well; but their earnings would probably be largely dissipated in personal adornment, the passion for which, especially among the middle classes, is the bane of the American people. There is one class of women wage earners to whom I have given much attention who suffer considerably through their own ignorance. I refer to the married women who work in factories, or at home, making underclothing and other articles, and who supplement their husbands' wages in order to cover their own deficient knowledge of housekeeping. Such women were wage earners before they were married, and never had an opportunity to learn how to manage a house, so that after marriage they have to earn money to supply their want of knowledge, not only of cooking, but of sewing.
Such women buy ready-made clothes for themselves and their children, which, of course, are not so durable as could be had for the same money if they made them themselves. Not knowing how to economize in cooking they spend more money in that way than they should. Out of 300 women wage earners I visited in tenement houses only five claimed that they were able to make bread and only one really did make it. Only two were able to cut and make garments for themselves and their children. I think that these women are all conscious of their deficiencies, but they do not know how to overcome them. They have some spare time, but they waste it. Their cooking is of the most primitive and unwholesome description, and their meals are supplemented with beer, which is looked upon as just as much of an article of dietas

An Unexpected Suggestion.

"Say, Gaddersby," said Mr. Smith, as he came into the fish store with a lot of tackle in his hand, "I want you to give me some fish to take home with me. Kind o' fix 'em up so that they'll look as if they've been caught to-day, will you?"
"Certainly, sir," said the grocer. How many?"
"Oh, you'd better give me three or four bass. Make it look decent in quantity without appearing to exaggerate, you know."
"Yes, sir. But you'd better take whitefish, hadn't you?"
"What makes you think so?"
"Oh, nothing, except that your wife was down here early this afternoon and said if you dropped in with a fish-pole over your shoulder and a generally woe-begone look, to have you take white fish, if possible, as she liked that kind better than any other."
Mr. Smith took whitefish.

Three things as good as their better—dirty water to extinguish fire, an ugly wife to a blind man, and a wooden sword to a coward.

DETACHED THOUGHTS.

By Signor Max.

The point of jokes is sometimes blunted by contact with thick skulls.

Oh! youth, thou lovest greatly, believest utterly and knowest darkly.

It is the refuge of common-place men to call him a crank who quits the beaten track of prejudice or omits the rabble's prudence.

What I shall be I cannot even guess; but that I shall never cease to be is to me no less certain than that we at this moment are.

The world is a huge sponge saturated with unhealthful sentimentalities that ooze and drip and make us everywhere uncomfortable.

What an essential and wise despotism that of the stomach is! Fancy yourself standing at the marriage altar in a spasm of indigestion!

I used to be troubled with doubt whether the man of absolute content was fool or philosopher, but that was before I learned that absolute content is only another name for the normal stomach.

The coming of death in a small community is an event of momentous import, in which every survivor is profoundly concerned. That is one of the beauties of pastoral life, and its highest value, I think.

It is fitting to make the chapter of youth in the Book of Life a poem. The dull unexpressiveness of common phrase may serve the historian and the buyer of hogs, but he who would write the Epic of Youth must plume his wings for lofty flight.

To the man of large vision life presents itself from many points of view; but as a rule man sees nothing except those things which lie within the narrow strip that is bounded by two lines drawn straight from the outer corners of his eyes to the horizon.

The most delightful poser I know is the beautiful young woman who has a pleasant suspicion of her beauty, but who loves life for its joys; who is at youth's period of careless irresponsibility, and who regards with squealing admiration everything that belongs to the category of good clothes.

If ever I should have an idea on the subject of eternal life, I imagine it would be somewhat to the effect that I was floated into this port by wind and waves that were rather too strong for me to think of opposing, and that when the tide and the wind change I shall be floated into some other port, the latitude and longitude of which I have not yet figured out.

I have seen a monkey gravely wearing a gold-laced court dress, but when he turned his tail moved me to laughter. It would be vanity in me to assert that I could equal the monkey in climbing a tree. He fills his appointed place in the Scheme; and why should I be so intolerant as to demand that he cut off his tail in order that he look a little more like me?

A White Woman Out of Place.

Out of 1,500 convicts, white and black, in the Georgia Penitentiary, there is only one white woman, Isabella Rooney, sent up for life from Clay County. She is a young woman about 22 years old, and is confined at the Chattahoochee camps. The crime for which this woman is serving out sentence grew out of a difficulty between her family and a neighbor's, in which the members of each joined promiscuously. The scrimmage resulted in the murder of one of their neighbors. This woman's brother has since expiated the crime on the gallows and her mother has died in jail. It is thought by many that there has been sufficient punishment for the crime, and that the woman ought to be pardoned. A movemnt has been instituted to make a strong appeal to the Governor for executive clemency.

A Revolutionary Puzzle.

The following is taken from a collection of odd rhymes and curious stories. It can be read in three different ways. First, read the whole as it is written; second, read downward on the left of the comma in the middle of each line; third, read the lines downwards on the right of the comma. By the first reading the revolutionary cause is condemned, by the other two it is praised:

"Hark! hark! the trumpet sounds, the din of war's 'larms,
O'er seas and solid grounds, doth call us all to arms,
Who for King George doth stand, their honors soon shall shine.
Their ruin is at hand, who with the Congress join.
The Acts of Parliament, in them I much delight.
I hate their cursed intent, who for the Congress fight,
The Tories of the day, they are my daily toast,
They soon will sneak away, who independence boast,
Who non-resistant hold, they have my heart and hand,
May they for slaves be sold, who act the Whiggish part.
On Mansfield, North and Bute, may daily blessings pour Confusion and dispute, on Congress evermore;
To North and British lord, may honors still be done
I wish a block and cord, to General Washington.

Love and Dinner.

George Sampson was firmly resolved to know his fate that very night.
"Miss Clara," he began tenderly, "you are not quite your usual self this evening."
"No, Mr. Sampson," the girl replied, "I am suffering from acute indigestion."
So he postponed knowing his fate until a more favorable opportunity.

Of no Interest to Him.

Mrs. Guzzleheimer, the wife of the eminent brewer, was reading the evening paper:
"Vat vas der news mit dot paper ouid?" asked Mr. G., who drops into English occasionally.
"I see der hopc rop vas going to be a pad failure this year already," replied the lady.
"Vell," said the eminent brewer, "off you can'd find more interesting news as dot, den I goes to schleep mit myself ouid.
And in five minutes he was snoring.

People of Unexceptionable Taste.

The man who pronounces your dinner absolutely faultless. The photographer who says you are really one of the finest subjects he ever had. The visitor who remarks that your boy is the handsomest little fellow he ever saw, and that he bears a striking resemblance to you. The acquaintance who regrets that he has not your exquisite artistic taste. The individual who always laughs vociferously at your puns. The tailor who says it is a pleasure to make a suit for a man with a figure like yours. The lady whom you overhear whisper to a friend that you are the handsomest man that she knows.

HOME AND GENERAL NEWS.

Emperor William caught a cold during his visit to Kiel and he is now confined to his apartments.

The Governor-General and Lady Lansdowne will go on a fishing trip to Metapedia at the close of the session, afterwards visiting the citadel at Quebec.

A special says emigration to British North America is still increasing. In May, 7,723 persons emigrated thither, against 5,299 in May last year.

The operatives of the Montreal Cotton Company's mill at Valleyfield, numbering over five hundred, are on strike, with no likelihood of a speedy settlement.

It is reported the Sultan of Morocco has confiscated hidden treasure to the value of ninety-five million pounds sterling, discovered in the palace of the deceased Vizier at Rabal.

During a circus performance at Neschen, a Russian town, on Sunday evening, a storm blew off a portion of the roof, causing the pendant lamps to pour blazing petroleum on the heads of the spectators. A panic resulted and three hundred persons were injured.

A daring robbery was perpetrated the other morning in the Montreal postoffice, a package containing from twenty-five to thirty registered letters being abstracted through the wicket of the registry office while the clerks' backs were momentarily turned. The thief got safely away with his booty, and so far no clue has been obtained.

Major Jarvis, in command of the mounted police at Regina, has received information of the capture of one of the half breeds named Racette who was implicated in the killing of Hector McLeish at Wolseley, and that a report had been received from Fort Qu'Appelle that a whole gang had been captured by a settlers' vigilance committee, but the latter report has not been confirmed.

The latest "lions" of Paris are nine negro chiefs with unpronounceable names. They have been brought from the African coast by an enterprising contractor. The object is to show them the sights of the French capital, and then to get them to sign an agreement with M. de Lesseps to engage their tribes to work on the Panama Canal. They are all horribly tattooed, and wear ivory bracelets. They speak English.

A terrific explosion of nitro-glycerine occurred the other day a few miles from Duluth, Minnesota, where upward of four tons of this substance were stored. The site of the building was blown out to the depth of 40 feet, and the largest piece of building found is ten inches long. A three-inch cast-iron pipe was twisted round a tree, and bits of iron and wood were found a mile from the spot. Every window pane in eight houses within half a mile was broken.

The vein of gold discovered a few days ago at Mattawa turns out to be even more valuable than at first reported, it being found to extend to a great distance, and to become much richer than at first noticed. The vein crosses beneath the Ottawa River and enters the mountains on the north side in Quebec province. An assay which has been made shows the quartz to be exceedingly rich in the precious metal. Large exploring parties have started out to search the district for gold, and all the moneyed men in the vicinity have made investments.

THEY CAPTURED THE CUBS.

But Had a Fierce Struggle With the Mother Tiger Afterward.

One fine summer evening in India, a few young officers arranged that they should start out early next morning for a tiger hunt. The sun was just peeping over the horizon, giving the sky the first tinge of golden light, when our young officers, mounted on an elephant, started on their expedition. They were four in number, accompanied by a good number of natives, and fully equipped for the pleasent but dangerous sport. They had tracked the jungle for a considerable time when one of the natives discovered the footprints of a tiger. They followed this until they arrived at a large cave surrounded by thick brushwood and tall Indian grass. They fired into the mouth of this cave, but only a feeble growl was heard which one of the natives said was that of a baby-tiger. At this moment it struck one of the young officers, why should they not and capture the young alive? This was a difficult task to accomplish, besides no one cared to do it. The officers then drew lots as to who would enter the cave, and it fell to the youngest, a man named Vincent Barry. They procured torches made out of Indian grass, and with two natives Barry entered the cave. They found three cubs which he secured with traps, and escaped with only a scratch. But he was barely out when a growl (not of a baby tiger this time) a deep fierce growl, startled them, and they perceived at no great distance from them a tigress advancing slowly with a short elastic tread. A hasty council of war was held, and it was agreed that they should divide themselves into two parties, and alternately fire a volley on the foe. On came the tigress, the officers waited for her with rifles cocked, ready to fire. But to their great surprise she only saluted them with a growl of displeaure, and walked straight to the cave, which she entered. In a few moments the men heard most mournful sounds issuing from the cave. Suddenly the tigress rushed out with a roar that and sprang upon the nearest native. Suddenly every rifle was fired, but the balls only wounded and enraged the beast. Then the men rushed upon her with their hunting knives, and a deadly struggle ensued. After a minute or two another roar was heard, and an enormous tiger with flaming eyes was seen approaching. Vincent Barry, the best shot of all there, loaded his gun and shot the new foe through the heart. In the meantime the cubs had broken their bonds and rushed to the aid of their dying mother. The tigress was killed at last with one of the cubs. It was pitiful to hear the cries and moanings of the young tigers as they walked round and round the body of their dead mother. The poor native was badly injured by the tigress and had to be carried by his comrades. With great difficulty the cubs were torn away from their mother. The tiger and tigress were brought home on the elephant amid general rejoicings of the natives at the death of the "man eaters."

GO INTO THE CAVE

MADE THE GROUND TREMBLE,

Jas. S. Freeborn,

—M. D., Ch. M. L. K. & Q. C. P. I.—

Doctor of Medicine and master of Surgery Victoria. Univ. Licentiate of King's and Queen's College of Physicians in Ireland. Member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Ont. Formerly acting Surgeon of B. Battery, R. C. A. Quebec. Late resident of the Rotunda Lying in Hospital, Dublin.

—OFFICE—

STEPHEN'S DRUG STORE.

Drs. Sproule & Brodie,

—PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS,—

MARKDALE.

DR. SPROULE'S office Turner's Drug Store

DR. BRODIE'S office Mathew s block.

Legal.

P. McCullough.

BARRISTER, SOLICITOR, &c

OFFICE—OVER McFARLAND'S STORE,

MARKDALE.

Money to Loan.

MASSON & MASSON,

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, &c.

OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block, Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week.

J. MASSON, Q. C. S. MASSON. W. MASSON.

N. B.—Private and Company's funds to invest at from 6 to 8 per cent

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate se curitv.

WILLIAM STUART,

KIMBERLEY,

Issuer of Marriage Licences. Money to Loan on Real Estate at low rates.

A few Farms for sale. Terms easy.

NOTICE.

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.

will visit Markdale for the practice of his profession on Thursday and Friday following the first Monday in each month, and at Flesherton the following day, Saturday.

MARKDALE HOUSE,

MARKDALE, - - ONT.

J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

ISAAC STINSON.

Builder and Contractor

In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.

Estimates given. All work guaranteed.

Orders by mail promptly attended to.

329. Residence, MARKDALE.

W. G. RICHARDS,

BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT, Markdale.

1241y

WEAVING.

Having returned to Markdale, in order to be more convenient for my customers, I beg to announce that I am now prepared to do all kinds of Custom Weaving. Residence old stand, opposite Presbyterian Church.

518 ARCH. BOYD.

R. J. SPROULE,

FLESHERTON.

Conveyancer, Appraiser, Valuator and Money Lender. Deeds, Mortgages, Leases and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice Charges very low. Apply to

R. J. SPROULE,

Money Lender & Postmaster, Flesherton.

HAVE YOU

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Jaundice, Headache, Dizziness, Pain in the Back, Costiveness, or any disease arising from a deranged liver, DR. CHASE'S LIVER CURE will be found a sure and certain remedy.

NATURE'S REMEDY

The unqualified success of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure in Liver Complaint rests solely with the fact that it is compounded from nature's well-known liver regulators, MANDRAKE AND DANDELION, combined with many other invaluable roots, barks and herbs, having a powerful effect on the Kidneys, Stomach, Bowels and Blood. 500,000 SOLD

Over one-half million of Dr. Chase's Recipe Books were sold in Canada alone. We want every man, woman and child who is troubled with Liver Complaint to try this excellent remedy.

SOMETHING NEW. GIVEN AWAY FREE

Wrapped around every bottle of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure is a valuable Household Medical Guide and Recipe Book (84 pages), containing over one useful recipes pronounced by medical men and druggists as worth dollars, and worth ten times the price of the medicine.

DR. CHASE'S CATARRH CURE. A safe and positive remedy. Price, 25 cents.

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS, 25 cts. per box.

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS

A. Chamberlain & Co., Sole Agents, Toronto

Markdale Roller Mill.

FARMERS HAVING No. 1 WHEAT and preferring flour from their own wheat, can get it by bringing twenty bushels or more.

Flour always on Hand

Flour $3.80 to $4.20 per. bbl.

SHORTS, per ton - $12.00

BRAN, " - 12.00

The highest market price paid for Fall and Spring wheat.

J. W. FORD.

Public Notice.

To all whom it may concern.

I R. L. Stephen the Druggist of Markdale have been appointed agent for JOHNSON'S celebrated Tonic and nervine. JOHNSON'S little liver Pills, and JOHNSON'S all healing White Ointment. The nervine is the very best in the market, in all diseases caused by poverty of blood, for Nervousness, Hysteria, and the PALENESS of Complexion so often noticed in female's, loss of appetite and general debility. In conjunction w th the Liver Pills, it is he very best for all diseases arrising from Topid live r or bad stomach

The White Oinment is the very best in the market for Salt Rheume, Barbers Itch, Pimples, Chafs, Burns, Scalds, and all Skin diseases of a scrofulous nature. Try these fine remedies and you will not be disappointed.

or sale at R. L. STEPHEN'S the druggist, Markdale, Ont.

WM. G. GUTHRIE,

Plain & Ornamental Plasterer

MARKDALE.

Arches, Cornices, Centre Flowers, and all kinds of plain and ornamental plastering executed at cheapest rates. Calsomining Lime Washing and Repairs promptly attended to.

330

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of

School Furniture.

Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness, wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.

181 ANDREW McGILL.

MONEY TO LOAN.

ON real estate security, at low rate of interest, no commission charged. Business Strictly Confidential,

J. S. BLACK,

190 Pomona, P, O.

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT No. 24, con. 4, N. D. R. Glenelg, 100 acres, will be sold cheap and on easy terms of payment, for further particulars apply on the premises, or by letter to

J. S. BLACK,

190-tf. Pomona P. O.

Markdale Woolen Mill.

Custom Carding, Weaving, Fulling, Dyeing and cloth dressing, done in a workmanlike manner and on very short notice.

First Class Cotton Warp

supplied at the lowest possible rates.

A call solicited.

Terms strictly cash or wool.

Sept. 28, 1886 F. J. RITCHIE.

IT IS A WELL KNOWN FACT

—THAT—

McCOLL'S

"LARDINE,"

is the best known, and most reliable MACHINE OIL in the Dominion; Farmer's, Thresher's and Mill Owner's, will find it decidedly to their advantage to insist upon getting the "Genuine Lardine" when they ask for it, owing to so much inferior oil being sold under the same name by unscrupulous dealers. We are the sold manufacturers of the "Genuine Lardine" every barrel branded.

McCOLL BRO'S, & CO.

For sale in Markdale at Haskett Bro's Hardware Store. 847-78

FRESH TURNIP SEEDS.

FRESH PARIS GREEN.

FRESH HELLEBORE.

AT

H. Parker's,

DRUGGIST and SEEDSMAN,

Durham.

Prosperity!

The recent genial showers followed by fine weather makes everyone feel hopeful--and why not? yet it would be foolish to get extravagant and wreckless in business. It will be wisdom rather to step with care and practice economy by purchasing your store goods at

J. G. ANDERSON'S,

Mammoth Dry Goods Store, Markdale. You can get better value, either for cash or trade here then at any House in the County.

☞ Note a few prices.

A Dress Goods for 10 cents worth 15c.

A finer goods for 15 cents worth 22c. other lines equally low. Cashmeres from 25 cents up. Prints and printed Muslins all prices from 6 cents up.

If you want Cottonade at the right price, go to

J. G. ANDERSON'S

25 cent line. Shirtings all prices from 8½ cents up, extra value.

You should see our 10 and 12½ cent prints, they beat everything.

Don't forget to ask for our 7 cent printed Muslins, good width and fast colors.

We have a full range of dress goods at bottom prices, white and cream oriental flouncing and other goods to match.

TWEEDS & SHIRTINGS

extraordinary value.

Ready-made Clothing at prices that cannot be touched. See our $10 suits, good value for $15.

BOOTS & SHOES

at astonishing low prices. Our Ladies' button boot for $1.25, regular price $1.75. Slippers and low lace boots equally low.

Our Men's boots for 90 cents never before sold for less than $1.25. Low Shoes at 75 cents, regular price $1.20.

No trouble to show goods. Call and be convinced.

J. G. ANDERSON,

MARKDALE.

NOTICE.

WM. SARGENT, Glenelg, has a Durham Bull for [illegible] at his farm seven miles from Markdale. Terms on application. 847-5

Markdale, June 15th, 1887.

We the undersigned Merchant's in the village of Markdale, hereby agree to close our respective places of business on Tuesday the 21st June, 1887, and to observe the same as a public holiday, in honor of the Queen's Jubilee, and because it is generally understood that that day will be regarded as a holiday throughout the Dominion.

Signed { W. J. McFARLAND. SOLOMON HILL. WM. BROWN. HASKETT BRO'S. J. G. ANDERSON. E. S. MABEE.

Euphrasia Statistics.

From the assessment returns for the township of Euphrasia the following interesting statistics are culled:—

Value of real estate	$1,507,360
" personal estate	43.500
Number of ratepayers	870
" births	75
" deaths	14
" cattle	4,312
" sheep	2,990
" hogs	1,147
" horses	1,220

Mr. S. H. Breese of Chatsworth wants all the children of that village to congregate at his residence on the 21st June, Queen's Jubilee, when he will celebrate the day by giving each child a cent for every year since they were born.

Honor Roll.

Honor Roll of S. S. No. 6, Glenelg, for May.

4th Class.—Lizzie White, Maggie Whyte, Mary Symmes.

3rd Class.—Robbie Burnett, James Wiggins, Alphens Murray.

2nd Class.—Robbie Whyte, Luther Torry, Johnnie Symmes.

II Part Sen.—Eddy Burnett, Mary E. Norris, George Symmes and Stuart Wright.

II Part Jr.—Maud Walker, Jessie Duncan, Herbert Walker.

I Class.—Arthur Wiggins, Lizzie Symmes, Walter Bell.

A. J. WHYTE, Teacher.

ENJOY LIFE.

What a truely beautiful world we live in Nature gives us grandeur of Mountains, glen and oceans, and thousands o means of enjoy ment. We can desire no better when in perfect health; but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up disheartened, discouraging and worn out with diseases, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof that Green's August Flower will make them free from disease, as when born. Dispopsia and Liver Complaint are the direct causes of seventy five per cent, of such maladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the head, Palpitation of the Heart, and other distressing symptoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottles, 10 cents. Try it.

A BUSINESS LETTER.

T. Milburn & Co., Tilsonburg, March 15th, 1887

Sirs,—Please ship at once three dozen bottles B. B. Bitters. Best selling medicine in the shop. Sold seven bottles to-day. Yours truly C. Thompson.

The above sample is but one of hundreds of similar expressions regarding the popularity of B. B. B.

Church Notes.

Rev. A. Watson, Babtist, of Flesherton and Priceville, took Rev. A. Wilson's work last Sabbath.

At Saturday's session of the Presbyterian General Assembly, the reports of the various colleges were presented and adopted, as was also a motion endorsing the work done by the educational institutions and the proposal to raise a Jubilee fund of $250,000 for an additional endowment of Queen's University.

Disgusting catarrh.—A gentleman from Montreal writes:—For years I have been greatly annoyed by catarrh. It caused severe pain in the head, continual discharge into my throat, and very unpleasant breath. By a thorough use of Nasal Balm I was completely cured.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a similar vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. Noyes, 820 Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y. 394-26 E. O.

Centre Grey Farmers' [illegible]

A meeting of the above Institute held at Rocklyn on 10th inst. suant to the call of the President.

The meeting was presided over by the President Thos. Kells, Esq. very fair attendance was present. President explained that the object of the meeting was to consider and accept or reject the resolutions passed by the Centre Farmers' Institute at a meeting held in Toronto on the 28th of April. They numbered five and the first read as follows:

"That this meeting desires to place on record the opinion that the Dairy Industry of Canada can be best raised to the position it ought to occupy by the establishment of Creameries in Canada, and that every encouragement is due to the Ontario Creamery Association in their efforts to improve and establish creameries throughout Canada."

A short discussion arose on the resolution, Messrs Myles and Pickell contending that the people of the country had not sufficient knowledge of the Creamery businsss to give the resolution unqualified support, and that the management and working of Creameries was too expensive and cumbersome to be profitable to the farmers of this part.

Messrs Pickell, T. B. White, and Ellis spoke in favor of the resolution which was adopted.

Second resolution "That it is the opinion of this meeting that the tariffs and classification of the Railroads as they now exist are prejudicial to the interests of the farmers of this country and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Secretary of the railway commission."

This resolution was unanimously adopted without discussion.

Third Resolution "That in the opinion of this meeting the appointment of a practical man as Commissioner of Agriculture who could devote his entire time and attention to his department would be beneficial to the agricultural interests of this Province it being distinctly understood that this resolution does not redect in any way on the present Minister of Agriculture."

After a short desultory discussion this resolution was adopted.

Fourth Resolution. "In the opinion of this meeting the best means to adopt to constitute a removal of all restrictions on trade between the Dominion of Canada and the United States is desirable, either by reciprocity treaty or otherwise as may be agreed upon by the two respective countries, and that the officers and executive committee of the Institute are authorized to take such action in the premises as may best promote the object of this resolution in the event of fair reciprocity being granted, and that this Institute shall memorialize the Dominion Government to suggest to the Government of Great Britain the expediency of entering into a commercial union with her colonies in regard to food supplies, and imposing a protective tariff against foreign countries."

This resolution was the subject of a lengthy discussion.

Mr. T. B. White opened the debate in a short speech stating that he was opposed to all protective policies and as the latter part of the resolution indicated the adoption of a protective policy he would oppose the resolution. Mr. R. R. Ellis followed in a vigorous speech in favor of the resolution, explaining at some length the benefits farmers would derive from reciprocity. Mr. Jos. Rorke M. P. P. took the floor dwelling on the extensive character of the resolution and reviewing the different treaties of the country shewing that it was the fault of the United States and not the Dominion of Canada that we do not enjoy reciprocity at present, consequently he would oppose the resolution. Mr. Thos. Myles spoke strongly in favor of the resolution denouncing the protective principle as being entirely wrong, although he did not agree that the benefits to be derived by farmers from reciprocity would be so large as claimed by Mr. Ellis. The President followed going strongly against the resolution explaining some of the disadvantages our farmers would experience by the "removal of all restrictions," citing the efforts put forth and monies expended by Canada in the past to secure fair reciprocity with the States. He took particular objection to the latter part of the resolution showing what a humiliating position the Dominion Government would be placed in by appealing to Great Britain after failing to make terms again with the States. Another objection raised by the speaker was that the adopting of the resolution would be opening the way to annexation and as a true Britisher he felt it his duty to strongly oppose such movements.

Mr. Thorp, Wright favored the resolution in support of the removal of all trade restrictions he complained of the great trouble, annoyance and expense now experienced by travellers on account of the Custom House and the [illegible] regulations connected therewith.

Thos. Gilray Esq., Reeve of Euphrasia, strongly deprecated the action of the Institute in taking up these questions, stating that they were certainly of a political character and as such were entirely beyond the scope of the Institute to deal with such. Mr. Gilray was first president of the Institute and quoted from the constitution to shew that any matter savoring of politics must be rapidly excluded from discussion in the Institute; The original inention and purpose of the Institute was the discussion of farming and management with kindred matters. On motion of Mr. Thorp Wright seconded by Peter Smith the first clause only of the resolution was adopted by a vote of 18 to 15.

The fifth and last resolution. "It is the opinion of this meeting that in case the grant given by the Ontario Government does not suffice to defray the expenses of this meeting and of the delegates attending the same, the latter should be allowed to bear their own expence, but that the matter should be borne by the various Institutes represented by the representatives have attended this meeting."

This resolution was adopted without discussion and meeting closed.

How doth the little busy bee
Improve each shining minute.
By catching on to every scent,
And scooping all there's in it.

Markdale Standard

"HEW TO THE LINE, LET THE CHIPS FALL WHERE THEY MAY."

SEVENTH YEAR.—No. 355. MARKDALE, ONT., JUNE 23, 1887. C. W. RUTLEDGE, Proprietor.

Local and Other Items.

NOTICES in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

NOTICE.—Correspondence, communications, Advertisements, &c., must be in this office by noon on Tuesday to insure publication that week.

—: AT :—

RUSSELL'S

—NOTED JEWELERY STORE,—

FLESHERTON,

will be found the most complete stock of Watches, Clocks, Jewelery, Silverware, Spex, &c., in this part of the country.

Call and see those watches they are selling at $12.00 bearing warrants for three and a half years, while other dealers are asking $15.00 for the same article. P. S. Bartlett, 3 oz. coin silver case for $16.00 while they are selling elsewhere for $17.50. Other dealers cannot compete with us and they know it. We cannot help them being annoyed at our terrible low prices; we must give the public the benefit of our close buying.

Just Note a few prices.

A fine Nickle Alarm Clock for actually only $2.00 bearing a warrant for two years. Your choice of over 20 fine gilted chains for only $1.60; Just think of it. Fine walnut clocks from $2.35 upward. Brooches, Ear-Rings, Ladies' Chains, Cuff-Buttons, Scarf-pins, at equally low prices.

Remember it you want your Watch or Clock repaired properly by a workman, Russell's is the only place.

All orders by mail promptly attended to at

RUSSELL'S Noted Jewelry Store,

FLESHERTON.

POTATO bugs are a heavy crop.

ROB. MCLEOD is down from Manitoulin.

GREY County Council is in session this week in Owen Sound.

A glorious shower of rain came on Sunday morning; just what was wanted.

STRAWBERRIES are coming to market freely; they are a fine crop.

MASTER JOSH DODDS arrived from Manitoba last week.

MR. H. E. MELTON of Toronto spent Sunday with friends here.

THANES for Traverston correspondence; keep on D. D. D.

DUNDALK is offering $400 in prizes for their Dominion Day Celebration.

MR. JAMES SULLINAN of Glenelg is visiting friends in Kansas.

DUNDALK Turf Club will accept thanks for complimentary Press badge.

R. O. WHITBY was in town over Sunday. He returned to the city on Tuesday.

THE Irish Lake pic-nic will be held on the South-east side of the lake this year, in Mrs. Martin's grove.

MRS. MOTT from Chicago is spending a few weeks with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Steer of this place.

THE Thornbury Standard has declared that annexation is what is wanted, and as what will better the financial condition of the masses,

MR. JOHN MARSHALL and wife of Painley and Mr. Malcolm McConachy of Chesley visited Mr. John McCallum of Euphrasia last week.

NEITHER wine, ale, porter, brandy nor cornets have ever been manufactured in Japan. They make nothing there to get right on.

THE Rev. Mr. and Mrs Farlie, Mr. W. J. and Mrs. Elliott and Mrs. Cap. McDonald of Chatsworth visited Markdale on Tuesday last.

TRAINS are running every hour in the day over this line: They don't even stop for Sunday. Last Sunday there must have been ten or a dozen trains passed through.

THE summer meeting of the Fruit Growers' Association of Ontario will be held in Collingwood on the 29th and 30th June. A program may be seen at this office.

W. G. RICHARDS of this village has been awarded the contract for the building of the fine new School house at Flesherton; this is sufficient to guarantee a speedy and first class job.

AT the Orange District Meeting held at Flesherton recently it was decided to celebrate the coming "twelfth" at Owen Sound—providing acceptable railroad accommodation could be secured. Failing this, the celebration will take place in Flesherton.

"THE MAPLE LEAF FOREVER."—MRS. Dickey of Eushrasia, left at our sanctum this week the largest maple leaves we have seen, one of which measured twelve and a half inches in diameter three different ways.

MR. T. HILL returned last week from a trip via—Owen Sound, Sault Ste Marie, Devils' lake, Dak; St. Paul and Minneapolis, Soo City, Nebraska & Iowa; and home via Chicago Sarnia and London. He was not impressed sufficiently by anything or place to leave Markdale just yet.

MR. W. MCLEOD of the Boot & Shoe store has pulled up stakes and left for Thessalon, North Shore, where he has purchased property and will open a general shoe store and Harness, Trunk and Valice establishment. Mc. is an industrious man and stays close to business and will no doubt make his mark in that thriving village. We wish him success in his new field of action.

WE notice in the report of the Provincial Schools of Art Examinations recently held, that in the Owen Sound School, Geo. C. Bowes, of this village stands at the head of the list of 75 successful competitors. He also received a teachers certificate for primary drawing, only one besides him in the whole number having won that distinction. George may justly feel proud of his success.

SOMETHING NEW,—Outsiders frequently wonder where the railroads obtain proper return for some of the ingenious but costly methods adopted in advertising their lines. One of the latest to attract our attention is a nicely bound 64-page book entitled, "What to Do," containing descriptions and the correct rules of a large number of games suitable for parlor or lawn, which has been issued by the Passanger Department of the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railroad, and will, we understand be fordwarded postpaid upon receipts of 8 cents by C. H. Warren, general Passenger Agent, at St. Paul. It is a book that would ornament almost any table and interest both old and young.

THE Garden Party at James Foster's on Friday evening of last week was postponded owing to the inclemeucy of the weather, and came off on Monday evening, when a pleasant sociable and we doubt not, profitable time was spent. The refreshments were good and the ice-cream excellent; the bar consequently well patronized. Mr. Foster has an admirable place for a garden party and besides, he and his family did all in their power to make it an enjoyable affair, They were also ably assisted by the friends on the east line. Markdale was well represented and came home pleased with their evening outing. The National Anthem was heartily sung before breaking up and three cheers for the Queen given. Proceeds $17.00 net.

QUEEN'S CASE.—On Monday evening last Dennis Calaghan of the 13th line Glenelg was arrested and tried before Justice Brown for belaboring George Walker, son of Mr. Francis Walker also of Glenelg. It appears the two young men got into an altercation in reference to the drawing powers of Walker's horses, while working on the road at Statute Labor. Calaghan got angry and struck Walker over the head with a shovel leaving him in an unconcious state from which he did not rally for several hours, and is yet in a critical condition. The case was adjourned until Friday to see whether Walker injuries were likely to prove fatal.

GEO. PLEWES, of Creemore spent this week with his brother Angus.

MRS. MCBROOM and children left on Tuesday for Scotland.

MRS. A. PLEWES returned last week from a visit to Edgar. Simcoe.

MRS. J. M. LOTT, of Edgar, is visiting her brother Mr. Angus Plewes.

IN cutlery we have some very fine goods to choose from; see them, at the sign of the cross cut.

ANYTHING you may want in the hard ware line can be had at prices that give satisfaction, solid full lines, and prices right, Mabee the hardware.

FULL lines in scythes, snaths, rakes forks and general harvest goods. The, best make, only kept in stock at Mabee's hardware.

CITZIENS would be doing a good act if they would see that all weeds on their premises were cut before going to seed.

THE Great Northern Transit Co. of Collingwood have an advertisement of their line of steamers in another column. This route up the lakes is perhaps the finest for scenery as well as physical help for invalids, and others in Canada.

A GARDEN PARTY will be held in Mr. Rae's garden on Friday evening, July 1st, under the auspices of the Ladies Aid Association of the Presbyterian Church.

THE annual Methodist Sabbath School pic-nic at Walker's appointment will be held in Mr. Wm. Ewart's grove near the church on July 1st. A collection will be taken up in of the S. School. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

A meeting in the interest of temperance waspartially arranged under the auspices of the District Council of Grey, R. T. of T. to be held in Markdale on the evening of the 28th inst., but has been postponed to a later date of which due notice will be given.

THE Town Line (Methodist) Sabbath School anniversary picnic and tea will be held on Wednesday the 29th June in the grove opposite the Church. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Admission 25 cents, junior schollars free. Proceeds for new library and other necessary requirements.

SO FAR, THE CENTRAL FARMERS' INSTITUTE of Ontario and sixteen county institutes have taken up the question of commercial union, and in every instance it has been approved of almost unanimously. In some instances the farmers have pledged themselvas to do all in their power to secure the adoption of the policy they approve, and there can be no question that if they mean what they say and vote away from their party allegience on this question they can carry commercial union, as far as Canada is concerned, without the least trouble. The Quebec Liberals appear to be prepared to take up the cause, and Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Manitoba have long wanted almost nothing else. If the Ontario farmers are not prepared, however to act independently of party ties, their resolutions are only an expression of opinion.

What the British Empire is to come to by and by it would be difficult to say. Scarcely a year passes but there are additions made to its area compared with which the island of Cyprus is a mere flea bite. Last year Upper Burman and Bechuana Land were absorbed, and very little was said about the transaction, though the area thus quietly disposed of would make a country double the size of France. A few weeks ago the greater part of Zululand in South Africa has also been absorbed, to say nothing of the immense island of New Guinea and other places as they happen. A great fuss is made when the French or the Germans go in for the same game. But the operations of these are on a very small game compared with those of Britain. The comforting reason is of course always at hand, Britain annexes from motives of sheer benevolence! but others, it is to be feared, for reasone not quite so lofty! Ahem! A very convenient way of accounting for things!—[Truth

TURNIP SEED! TURNIP SEED! At Stephen's Drug Store.

Paris Green pure at the Medical Hall, A. Turner & Co.

SCYTHES, Forks, Rakes and Snaths very cheap; call and see them. S. Hill.

THE cheapest scythes the largest and the best make (Oshawa) is at Haskett Bros.

Turnip Seeds Fresh pure and true to name at the Medical Hall. A. Turner and Co.

CIGARS! CIGARS! lovers of a good Havana cigar will fine that Benson has the finest cigar in town, sold by the box.

A few splendid tweed suits left; will clear them out at 7.50. Mens all wool coats ot $3.50 worth $4.00, 4.50 and $6. They are great value. S. Hill.

THE largest stock of Frames and Moulding ever opened out in Markdale just to hand, and selling very cheap at the new Photo Gallery.

CLEARING out Millinery novelties and dress goods at reduced prices. Ladies bring your butter and eggs and see for yourselves. S. Hill.

R. MCNALLY has a number of fine Buggies and Carriages completed, and those who contemplate purchasing such should call and examine before closing a bargain elsewhere.

LIME.—P. Harris of New England, lot 6, con. 6 Euphrasia, has on hand a large quantity of fresh burnt lime for sale at the kiln or will be delivered at reasonable rates.

HAY is a heavy crop and Haskett Bros have enough scythes to cut it. Prices away down far below what others call rock bottom. We have the goods and must sell them; call and be convinced.

J. P. MARSHALL, Dentist, has changed his arrangements for visiting Markdale and will in future be at the Markdale House on Thursday and Friday following the first Monday in each month, and at Flesherton the following day, consequently his next visit will be the 7th and 8th of July and at Flesherton the 9th.

Jubilee Pic-Nic.

The eleventh annual pic-nic of the Priceville and Glenelg congregations R. C. Church, will be held at the Irish Lake, Artemesia, on Tuesday the 28th June. A special feature in the program will be a contest between Flesherton and Markdale brass bands for a cash prize of $15. A gentlemans Dressing Case will be awarded the one taking the greatest number of votes, the candidates being the hotel keepers of Durham, Priceville, Flesherton and Markdale. Band competition at 3 o'clock.

NASAL BALM.—The only medicine in the market that will immediately cure Cold in the Head, and permanently cure Catarrh, Hay Fever, etc.

To the Editor of the STANDARD.

SIR.—I read with pleasure your article on "Mutual Improvement," and am strongly convinced that every village might have one with great profit to the young people. It is of the greatest importance that right principles be incutcated by the youth, and while we all know the tendency to vain—if not evil—habits in youth, every means should be used by co-operative efforts toward forming right principles which would prove a blessing to indiyiduals through life as well as on the community in which they move. As yon intimate, such a Society could include moral, physical, intelectual and social improvement, and might be a means of developing latent talent which would otherwise be lost to the world.

I hope others may give their opinion on the subject and also that it may not stop until a number of live prosperous Societies may be organized as a result.

Yours truly,
EBENEZER SARJEANT,
Hawkstone, Ont.

A BUSINESS LETTER.

T. Milburn & Co., Tilsonburg, March 15th, 1887

Sirs,—Please ship at once three dozen bottles B. B. Bitters. Best selling medicine in the shop. Sold seven bottles to-day. Yours truly C. Thompson.

The above sample is but one of hundreds of similar expressions regarding the popularity of B. B. B.

Tobacco for Boys.

Boys, do not try to learn to use tobacco. Stop and let us consider the matter. Why should you wish to learn? O, because Harry uses it, that is your reason. Well, does it do Harry any good? You don't know as it does. Very well then, let us consider the reason against its use. In the first place it is injurious to the health, it is also expensive and moreover filthy Now how do the ayes and nays balance? Don't for a moment imagine that it is a smart thing to do, Any fool can learn to use it, but it sometimes takes a smart boy to have the amnliness to refuse to do as his silly mates are doing. By this I do not wish to be understood as saying only fools use tobacco, but I do say there is nothing smart or manly in learning to use it. Nothing smart, but the other thing that people designate, as "smarty."

I have nothing severe to say to those who have become confirmed in the habit of using the weed, for habit is as remoreseless as a pair of handcuffs, but I have no patience with the beginner who will nauseate himself and suffer the torture of accustoming himself to the use of it, when he would be a thousand times better without it. We hear every day of cases of heart disease aggravated by the use of tobacco; of that horror, smoker's cancer. and now comes a report from London of blindness from same case. Here is what a London paper says on the suject:—

"Tobacco blindness is becoming a common affliction. At the present there are several persons under treatment for it at one London hospital. It first takes the form of color blindness, the sufferers who have smoked themselves into this condition being quite unable to distinguish the color of a piece of red cloth held up before them. Sometimes the victim looses his sight altogether. Although smoking is to a large extent the cause of the malady, heavy drinking is also partly responsible."—[The Housekeeper.

AS SWEET AS HONEY is Dr. Low's Pleasant Worm syrup, yet sure to destroy and expel worms.

Euphrasia Council.

The Council met on 1st June 1887, for the purpose of completing the new arrangement concerning road divisions and inspecting the road lists as prepared by the clerk.

Members all present.

Each road list was minutely examined, and a few changes made therein.

A petition signed by Wm. Stewart Esq., and 28 others in reference to the draining of Beaver river Valley was laid over until next regular meeting of council.

A money order was issued in favor of James Cook, for $10,00 payment for plank, and covering bridges on 7th line at lot 25.

Mr. Boyd was instructed to get the 9th line repaired at lots 16 & 17.

Council adjourned,

R. DUNLOP,
Clerk.

FARMERS!

Don't forget there is good work done at the Flesherton

WOOLEN FACTORY

And we are doing all in our power to please. Customers are finding out it is to their advantage to deal with us; our Prices are Low and Our Goods are Reliable and notwithstanding price being cut so close on account of hard times, I intend to reduce the standing price being cut so close on account of hard times, I intend to reduce the manufacturing price being cut so close on account of hard times, I intend to reduce the manufacturing price in nearly every branch, viz., CARDING, ROLL-CARDING, SPINNING, WEAVING, &c., &c. Give us a trial and see for yourself.

W. H. FLESHER.

Flesherton, May 30th, 1887.

HEALTH.

Rheumatism.

Rheumatism is among the most common of all diseases, this is especially true during the fall and winter months, owing to the skin being frequently chilled, pores closed, capillary circulation diminished, thus throwing more work on the kidneys, which soon fail to perform this extra amount of work, and thereby become weakened and diseased; and in this condition they fail to eliminate the acid from the blood, which accumulates in the system and vitiates the muscles and nerves.

Rheumatism is classified as acute, chronic, rheumatic gout, articuilar and mercurial rheumatism.

Acute rheumatism appears in the joints, one or more at a time. It is manifested by redness, pain and swelling, the suffering is intense. It is liable to attack the heart, suddenly producing a painful and dangerous complication, aften causing death in a few hours, as was the case with the wife of an ex-official of Chicago, a short time since. Only last week I was called to visit, a lady suffering with acute rheumatism, six hours later I was called in haste to make a second visit, I found my patient suffering intensely hands clasped over the heart and struggling for breath, the disease had gone to the heart, and for three hours it was difficult to tell which would gain the mastery—at the fourth hour victory was assured, and my patient was resting comfortably.

My treatment for this severe attack was :

Fl. Ex. Australian fever tree leaves	3 Drachms.
" " Cramp Bark	3 Drachms.
" " Black Cohosh	2 Drachms.
Tinct Lobelia	1 Drachm.
" Capsicum	½ Drachm.

With enough simple syrup to fill a four ounce vial. A teaspoonfnl was given in hot water every thirty minutes. Also spirits of lavender compound, a teaspoonful every thirty minutes, alternating with the above prescription—externally, the following liniment was applied :

Fl. Ex. Mullien leaves	6 Drachms.
" " Black Cohosh	6 Drachms.
Tinct. Lobelia	½ Ounce.

Every hour, also, cloths wrung out of hot water, and changed frequently until relieved.

To treat rheumatism successfully, we must open all the secretory organs; the liver, kidneys and skin must be kept active, and an alterative course pursued. An infusion made from leaves of the Australian fever tree, is almost a specific in this disease, owing to its stimulating properties, when the secreting organs are kept active. For the liver the Physio-Medical liver pills have a fine action.

Take for the kidneys :

Fl. Ex. Juniper Berries	½ Ounce.
" " Dwarf Elder	½ Ounce.
Simple Syrup	3 Ounces.

Take a teaspoonful every two hours.

For the skin, the Medicated Hot Air Baths (see advertisement in last issue, also in this,) have no equal—the above treatment, if followed vigorously, never fails to relieve in from three to five days.

J. E. C.—aged 25 years—carpenter; employed to treat him for acute rheumatism. It had attacked every joint, excepting the left wrist and hand, he was not able to move a muscle without excruciating pain. He was carried from the bed and put into the Medicated Hot Air bath for half an hour when he came out of the bath he walked back to bed without aid. On the following day, he was assisted into the bath, and came out of it free from pain and walked alone to his bed; in five days he was on the street, and in ten days able to resume work.

Mental Diseases.

The Boston Medical and Surgical Journal publishes a monthly report on the progress of medical science, drawn from the different home and foreign publications. We present from a recent report some facts on mental disease, which are of popular interest.

Unconsciousness enters into the generally accepted definition of epilepsy. While this unconsciousness is a symptom of the disease in the vast majority of cases, there are some exceptions. The following is a case in point :

A married woman of thirty-two years had occasional epileptic attacks of the usual convulsive kind; but more frequently when seized, she would scream, turn pale, cry out, jump from the bed and run about the room, acting absurdly and, at times, violently. On one seizure she bit her husband. On coming out of the attack, she asked if she had done this. At another time, she threw the inkstand at her mother's head, and fully recalled the fact herself with much sorrow.

It is believed that attention in this direction would show a considerable number of such cases. The matter may have important and legal bearings, inasmuch as epileptics who commit deeds of violence are held to be irresponsible on the ground of their unconsciousness.

In the form of insanity generally known as monomania—but for which the term paranoia is now preferred,—the person shows signs of mental unsoundness only on particular subjects, or under special conditions.

Many persons who are thus partially unsound are attracted to this country from Germany and Italy, and readily pass as sane until long after their arrival, and rear families disposed to insanity. The proportion of such persons of German and Italian parentage, found in our asylums, is double that in the asylums of their ancestral country.

One of the latest medical opinions in regard to the use of chloral may be useful in this connection. Dr. Savage, of the celebrated insane asylum at Bethlem, England, has seen so many disastrous results from the drug that he fears its introduction has done more harm than good.

He says, "It is the first thing now taken by a man of intellect who is overworked, and is eagerly sought by the nervous fashionable lady; it is the temporary prop to the drunkard; and to the doctor, in many cases, it is the means of keeping a troublesome patient quiet."

General Hints.

For Hiccough.—Hold the breath.

For Despondency.—Take a swallow of vinegar.

For Inflammatory Rheumatism.—Eat one or two raw lemons, daily.

For Diarrhœa.—Take boiled milk and castor oil, also brandy and raw eggs.

For many forms of kidney difficulty, a tea made of peach leaves is a sure cure.

To disinfect a house, fumigate by burning sulphur or tar; then whitewash and paint.

Eye Water.—For inflammed eyes, use the juice of the strawberry after being strained and settled.

A vegetable acid, such as lemon juice, or cider, is said to be a sure specific for most cases of scarlet fever.

A mote may be removed from the eye, or the pain at least alleviated, by putting a grain of flaxseed under the lid.

A tea made of chestnut leaves, and drank in the place of water, is said to have cured many obstinate cases of dropsy.

A tea made of ripe or dried whortleberries, and drank in the place of water, is a speedy cure for many forms of scrofulous difficulties.

Turpentine, in doses of twenty or thirty minims, will not only remove the headache, but produce in a wonderful manner, a soothing influence.

Oil of cinnamon will cause the disappearance of warts, however hard, large, or dense they may be. The application gives rise to neither pain nor suppuration.

When the nose threatens to bleed excessively, it can sometimes be arrested by putting the feet in hot water, or by applying a mustard plaster between the shoulders.

Earache.—Take a bit of cotton-batting, put upon it a pinch of black pepper, gather it up and tie it, dip it in sweet oil, and insert it in the ear. Put a flannel bandage over the head to keep it warm. It will give immediate relief.

Any kind of a bath, or any other process that will produce a general perspiration, and thus bring about a reaction, will cure a cold. Simply inhaling fresh air largely, by deep inspirations, is sufficient to nip an incipient cold in the bud.

The very simple remedy of common salt has cured many cases of fever and ague. A teaspoonful taken in water, and a teaspoonful deposited inside each stocking, next to the foot, as the chill is coming on. This comprises the whole of the treatment.

Cure for Dandruff.—Make a preparation of one ounce of flour of sulphur and one quart of water, agitate the mixture at frequent intervals for a few hours, then pour off the clear liquid, and saturate the head with this every morning. In a few weeks every trace of the dandruff will disappear, and the hair will become soft and glossy.

What to do in Case of Bleeding.

When blood is flowing from a wound, it is necessary that it be stopped, or it may result in one's death. If it is a small wound, the blood may be stopped by pressing on the part. If it be arterial blood, a bandage should be drawn very tightly around the limb, just above the wound, so as to allow the blood to coagulate, and thus check its flow; if the blood should be from a vein, the same should be applied just below the wound; the bandage may be made tighter, by slipping a stick underneath the wrapping and twisting tightly. We can tell whether the blood is from an artery or vein, by its color, and by the manner of its flow. Arterial blood is a bright red, and flows in jets; venous blood is dark red, and flows in a steady stream.

Use of Globes.

An English traveller was greatly surprised to find the run from Panama to Valparaiso longer than that from Bergen to the Straits of Gibraltar. When he was a schoolboy he had learned his geography from maps, and the maps had shown Europe on a larger scale than that on which this continent was represented. It is all right that the pupil's own continent, state, or kingdom should be represented more fully that other parts of the world; it is that portion of the globe with which he needs to be the most familiar. To show more of the towns, the road, the streams, and the hills, it is necessary that the map be drawn to a larger scale.

If we tried to put all the place and objects which we might want to show in our own county, for instance, upon a map drawn to the same scale as that upon which we show the main features only of a continent, the county map would be so crowded and confused that nothing could be distinguished.

On the other hand, if we wanted to show a continent on the same scale as a county, the map would be required a larger sheet of paper than we could procure or handle.

In order to correct the erroneous impressions we get from these maps which are drawn to different scales, we must either travel or correct the error by the use of a globe. The latter method is the easier if not the more agreeable of the two. It can be adopted at once, now that paper globes are so cheap that they can be afforded in every family and school. Another difficulty with maps, which is almost as serious as that arising from the use of different scals and one that cannot be remedied, results from the attempts to show a spherical surface upon a plane. We may teach the pupil how to correct the errors of the map but the brighter the pupil the more distinct will be the impression he has of the apparent situation of places, and this impression can never be over come.

Take the maps on Mercator's projection, and they distort the features of the earth as our own features are distorted when we look into a curved mirror.

The first lessons in geography should be given upon the globe, and the use of it should be continued through all the pupil's course.

Orderly Boys.

The simple matter of a boy's being trained to be orderly may seem of very slight moment in determining the happiness or unhappiness of his future home, but at least every housewife with a careless husband will appreciate its importance in practical living. A lad accustomed to have his sisters or the servants pick up whatever he chooses to leave about will come some day to be a constant vexation to the tidy soul of his spouse, when he might almost as easily have been taught to aid rather than to destroy the neatness and order of his home. The mother who allows her son always to consider his own interests and never to feel that the comfort and wishes of those about him are his affair is preparing a husband who will some day render miserable through sheer thoughtlessness any sensitive woman who links her destiny with his.

A little girl was not feeling well and it was thought that she might be about to have the chicken-pox. She went to bed laughing at the idea, but early the next morning went into her parents' room, looking very serious and said: "Yes, it is chicken-pox, papa; I found a fedder in the bed."

The Fish Fakers.

At early morn my slumbers break,
Dreams take fast flight and I awake
From sleep so sweet;
A doleful, dismal, wailing cry:
"Fish! All alive. Oh! won't you buy?"
On Jarvis street.

Ere five more minutes I have lain
The fiendish wretch is here again
Cries to repeat;
Or, if not he, it is another,
Leather lunged just like his brother,
On Jarvis street.

At last they're gone. I nestle down,
From off my brow departs the frown—
Till my ears greet
Their yell again, which makes me start,
And there is murder in one heart
On Jarvis street.

Gentle Woman's Revenge.

Husband and wife had had a little tiff. He buried his nose in a morning paper while she gazed out the car window with persistent intentness. Thus an hour and thirty miles passed. A lady entered the car. Husband dropped his paper and looked at her admiringly.

"Ah," said he, "that's a fine woman. And a widow, too. Don't you think she's handsome?"

"Yes, rather. You seem to like widows."

"Indeed I do. They're just charming."

Husband evidently thought this would pique his partner. But it didn't.

"Alfred," said she, tenderly, and placing her hand softly on his arm, "Alfred, I guess I was in the wrong a little while ago, when I became angry at you, and I'm sorry, so sorry. Will you forgive your little wife?"

"Certainly. Don't say another word about it."

"And you will grant a little request I have to ask of you, hubby dear?"

"Of course. Anything that lies in my power."

"You say you think widows are so charming?"

"Yes, I did say so, but——"

"Then make me one; that's a good husband mine. Oh, I shall be so happy."

The Omission Should Have Spoiled the Story.

"Here," said the city editor savagely to the new reporter, who had just handed in his notes, "you have made a fatal omission in this account of the elopement of a white woman with a negro."

"What is that?" asked the reporter.

"Why, you infernal ninny, you neglected to say that she was 'the beautiful daughter of a wealthy citizen.'"

"But she isn't," protested the new reporter. "She's a regular old hag—ugly as sin, ignorant as a mule, and the daughter of a rag picker."

"Young man," replied the city editor, in a slow and solemn tone, "you had better pick up your traps and skip for awhile, and when we decide to cut loose from time-honored customs and sacred legends we'll let you know. Meanwhile this journal will continue to insert the words 'beautiful and accomplished' in all elopement articles."

The Ice Cream Season.

The ice-cream season is now fairly under way, hence it is not too early for ice-cream chestnuts to begin to put forth leaves, as it were.

The softer sex is supposed to have an inordinate partiality for ice-cream. There is a story told of a woman who in stating her case to a divorce lawyer said: "I never cared much for him. I married him because he kept an ice-cream parlor, and he basely deceived me three months later by selling out and going into the hardware business."

It is useless for the impecunious but susceptible young man to talk about how many people have been poisoned by ice-cream. On the other hand, the lady who is annoyed by too many admirers can thin them out by going for ice-cream. It is more genteel to run a young man off by the ice-cream slide than to hurt his feelings by asking him to stay away. In Boston one day last summer a girl fainted right in front of an ice-cream saloon. She got madder than a hop when they carried her nearly a block away to a drug store. It cannot be denied that frozen lacteal nourishment congeals the sexes in a powerful bond of sympathy and union.

In aristocratic circles it is not considered au fait for the gentleman to take the larger plate of ice-cream, and to order one ice cream with two spoons is not regarded as in good form.

How Billiards Affected Him.

"Why," asked a Toronto young man of Miss Mountjoy, with whom he was practicing on the board of green cloth, "why should billiards completely alter my disposition?"

"And how, may I ask, does billiards alter your disposition?"

"Well, you see, when I'm playing billiards I never kiss if I can help it, whereas—"

"Whereas at other times you never kiss if anyone else can help it."

A Human Brute.

Col. Yerger returned home very late and in a demoralized condition.

"Here you are again," said Mrs. Yerger, as she met him at the head of the stairs.

"Yeah, my dear, here I am," replied the Colonel, meekly.

"You are a brute. Here it is twelve o'clock. It will be almost daylight before I get through telling you what I think of you. Here I have to lose my sleep on your account, and I'll feel bad all day to-morrow. You are a vagabond on the face of the earth, etc., etc., etc."

Christians in the United States.

The Independent has compiled a statistical account of the churches of Christ in the United States, showing the number of their communicants to be as follows: Episcopal polity—Methodists, 4,346,516; Roman Catholics, 4,000,000; Episcopalians, 430,531; Moravians. 10,686—total Episcopal, 8,787,733 Congregational polity—Baptists 3,682,007; Congregationalists, 436,379; Christian Union, 120,000; Friends, 105,000; Adventists, 97,711; Methodists, 18,750; miscellaneous, 60,565—total congregational, 4,520,412. Presbyterian polity—Presbyterians, 1,082,436; Lutherans, 630,830; Reformed, 259,974; Methodists, 167,392; German Evangelical, 125,000; Mennonites, 80,000; Church of God, 45,000—total Presbyterian 2,710,632.

A WONDERFUL EMPEROR.

An Englishman's Description of an Audience with the Emperor of Austria.

The Englishmen who attended this morning's audience at the palace obtained an insight into the methods by which the Emperor of Austria retains such a strong hold over the affections and loyalty of his subjects. The ante-chamber of the audience-room was crowded with Generals and noblemen who had come to thank His Majesty for promotions or decorations. But mingling with these were authors, inventors, professors, widows and orphans seeking pensions, and a number of very poor men and women who had petitions to present. There are few countries in which persons of this last category would ever get a chance of seeing thier sovereign; but in this Empire anybody who has anything reasonable to ask of the Emperor is sure of an audience. On one or two days a week His Majesty receives all comers who have applied to be received, and he receives them alone. Every applicant takes his turn. A master of the ceremonies opens a door, the visitor walks in and finds himself face to face with the Emperor, who is unattended. The door closes, and the petitioner may say to the Emperor what he likes. There is no Chamberlain or Secretary to intimidate him. The Emperor stands in a plainly furnished study, in undress uniform, without a star or grand cordon, and he greets everybody with an engaging smile and a good-natured gesture of the hand which seems to say, "There is no ceremony here. Tell me your business, and if I can help you I will."

This is a truly imperial way of receiving. It impresses everybody with the fatherliness of the Emperor. The Emperor of Austria has a penetrating eye and a quick, catching manner. By a glance he makes people feel at home, and by a word he draws from them what they have to say. Then he gives his own answer, straight out and fearlessly, but generally with an acquiescing smile, and whatever he promises is faithfully performed. There is nothing petty or evasive in him. He is a monarch who replies by "yes" or "no," but always with so much courtesy that the humblest of his subjects receives from him at departing the same bow as he vouchsafes to ambassadors. A most lovable trait in him is that whenever he sees anybody nervous at his presence he makes the audience last until, by his kind endeavors, the nervousness has been completely dispelled. This sufficiently explains His Majesty's extraordinary personal popularity, so great that it forms a most solid bond of union between races which, but for an Emperor like Francis Joseph, could not live together.

How The Czar Travels.

The Czar's recent visit to the Cossacks was made with the most unaccountable haste. He went with the Empress and the heir apparent a distance of 1,500 wiles to remain scarcely forty eight hours, and hurried through the various ceremonies and institutions of the town of Novotcherkack with such unaccountable haste that the attendant officials were nearly worn out. To make such enormous preparations for a visit of scarceiy two days appeared hardly worth while; but the labor of preparation in Novotscherkask was a mere nothing when compared with the extraordinary measure of precaution taken over the whole distance of railway traversed by the Imperial trains, including the lines of four distinct railway companies. Sentinels paced warily on each side of the line; night bivouacs were pitched there and there among the trees; every one of the houses and huts close to the line, including those of the pointsmen and guards, was occupied by officers or men. Cossack horse men, as soon as the Cossack territory was entered, dashed along at full speed, in pursuance of orders, by the side of every passenger or goods train. A line of special constables, appointed from all the villages along the route, stood beyond the infantry guards and prevented even any stray animal from approaching too near. Every bridge and culvert was strongly guarded. Such, in short, were a few of the accompanying features of the Imperial progress The whole business of the railways has been completely thrown out of gear in consequence and the collieries in the Cossack province have been unable to get any coal transported for more than a fortnight.

Poor Old Grandma.

In many a home grandma is a bright and winning presence, but even where she is the opposite—stiff, unsympathizing, and querulous, none the less should she be surrounded by an atmosphere of loving observance, for her failings are the concomitants of age and impaired faculties. This attention should not be the perfunctory performance of an inculcated duty, but the outflow of a kind heart and generous nature. Sometimes a certain outward respect is rendered before strangers, but often the old lady is treated by the juniors as a superfluous member of the family—something like the fifth wheel of a coach—and is shown intentional disrespect. She is made the butt of ridicule, and the target of scorn; but she is also made use of when there is any service she can render. Dissociated from all the interests and affections of the home—neither consulted, confiided in, nor referred to—she waits patiently the end. It is sad to see an old person so full of melancholy mistrust of the kindly intentions of others as to be uncertain whether her presence at a pleasure party is really desired; it is the result of the treatment to which she has been long subjected, and which has taught her to feel herself of no value to any one. How eager she is to be loved by the grand-daughter, who is like what she was at that age, to know something of her pleasures and her hopes. But the young ladies call this chronic curiosity, and will not gratify it.

An Apology For Armies.

The objectors to the existence of armies base their main argument on the supposition that soldiers are the embodiment of the principle of force, and imagine that if they were got rid of a reign of peace would ensue. Their syllogism is: War is an evil; war is waged by soldiers; therefore, if soldiers were abolished an evil thing would go with them. But they have first to prove that soldiers alone can make war. On the contrary, the most terrible and destructive invasions have been those not conducted by regular armies. The hordes of Zenghis Khan, the barbarians who overran the decaying Roman Empire, grown luxurious and unwarlike; the tribes of Central Asia which so long made any civilization impossible, were not regular armies, and if it be said hat we should let such people as the Kafirs the Zulus, the Sikhs, the Mahrattas, Burmese, go their own way in answer is that it is not General chants, who first interfere with the aggressive spirit which has to put down is not that of has to put down is not that of Bagdad. It is somewhat incongruous talk of peaceful triumphs of commerce, ing that every step made by invariably either preceded or the use of arms. The freedom of was gained by fighting, and the of the British Empire places its English bayonets. Armies are cause of war, but the regulation reduction to its mildest terms.

A Ticket-of-Leave Baronet.

Not long ago a thin, little old with clean-shaven face and closely threadbare frock coat, was to be be the weather wet or fine, in the hood of the Stock Exchange. Who where he came from no one knew, simple reason that he belonged to generation and was in the hey-day youth and good fortune when the race of our young men were reposing dles or imbibing the contents of He was always smiling and only to happy too take lunch with generous enough to "stand" a He never appeared to do anything ular, but, in a quiet way, he continued a little money now and again by "tips" concerning probable fluctuations the financial market. Where he his information was a mystery, but vice generally turned out correct, reward took the shape of a few a pound or two, according to the of the transaction he had been instrumental in bringing to a conclusion.

That this city celebrity, who, by was familiarly known as "Mr. Clifford" exceedingly poor, there could be no of doubt, and this supposition was confirmed at his death, which took a squalid neighborhood in the east end this man was no other than Sir Clifford who at one time, was one of the "bucks" the metropolis. His downfall was caused by his killing a man in a drunken for which indiscretion he suffered penitude. After passing a good many in one of Her Majesty's prisons he a ticket-of-leave, but his friends refused have anything to do with him, and of boon companions who had helped his money in former days were either had forgotten him. Thus it came to that he gradually sank lower and until he reached that condition of ous respectability known as "shabby teel"—[London News.

An English Journalist with the Mahdi.

A telegram to the Daily Chronicle Cairo, Monday, says:—Two Syrians Arab have recently reached Cairo from durman, and they state that the European who escaped from the disaster near El is not Mr. Vizetelly, But Mr. O'Donovan the intrepid war correspondent. According to the report of the Syrian patriarch, has also arrived here from Omdurman. European who is at that town is an Italian journalist, who speaks French and Arabic Turkish, and has travelled a deal in Abyssinia and Asia Minor. He is employed as sort of secretary to the Mahdi, who consults him on all points connected with the dressing of letters and memorials intended for "English reading," also on subjects of political European interest on which Abdullah Khalifa wishes to be informed. His secretary dresses in Arab costume, and performs with wonderful success to the natives and customs of of the Mahdi. From descriptions given of this adventurous Englishman it certainly appears that he resembles Mr. O'Donovan than Mr. Vizetelly.

A "grinding monopoly:" A union of hand-organ men

Turkey has ordered the construction of a man-of-war to cost $7,500,000.

A schoolmaster at Lodi, whipped three girls because they turned up their noses at him.

He that is choice of his time will also be choice of his company and choice of his actions.

A lie is like a brush heap on fire; it is easier to let it burn out than to try to extinguish it.

A really great character without imagination is inconceivable, but no man who resigns himself to be ruled by it can be truly great.

Mamma: "Gracious, child! What on earth are you doing?" Little Lady: "I'm watering the flowers on mamma's new bonnet. They looked so dreadfully dry."

According to a recently published list, parsley was the only vegetable eaten in the time of Queen Elizabeth. The favorite game was pigeons, trout, chicken, veal and rabbits.

In London the average salary of 329 masters in Board schools is upwards of £200, but of 381 masters in voluntary schools it is slightly over £152. So also with regard to female teachers—633 mistresses in Board schools are paid an average £192, and those in voluntary schools upwards of £88. In fact, in the last fifteen years, since the Elementry Education Acts came into force, these salaries have increased between 10 and 15 per cent.

"I am so busy," said young Softly Sophmore, "I have no time to think." "I'll let you have plenty of time," said the professor, coldly, "but isn't there something else you need to do thinking with?" And so long, long after recitation when it was too late, young Softly bethought him that he should have said "Yes, but you have more of that to spare, professor." Thus often the brightest thoughts and happiest inspirations side track and wait for a signal and fail to get there.

The brutal conduct of the United States authorities towards certain Canadian fishermen piratically seized by them on the high seas, some six hundred miles from land, is in strange contrast to the extreme consideration shown to American fishermen, who, in boldful contempt of law, were found trespassing on Canadian waters. It will always be so, suppose, between big countries and little ones till the millennium. If Secretary Manning wishes a fit place for applying his principles he can easily find one without transgressing the rules of international diplomatic courtesy. We certainly admire the calmness with which our Parliament discusses this series of outrages to which we remember no parallel in recent history.

...Y ORDER OF THE LEAGUE.

BY FRED M. W[illegible]

CHAPTER XIV.

...e Gautier followed the footman into the ...wing-room, where Enid was engaged ...h some visitors—three tall showy-looking ..., with an extremely vivacious mother. ... Gautier stood looking out of one of the ...dows, and noticed with satisfaction their ...ention of a speedy exit. For some mo... the visitors remained chattering, and ..., after a profusion of compliments, ac...panied by much laughter, their volumin... skirts were heard switching down the ...d staircase. It has often been a mat... of speculation as to whether a man can ... in love with two women at the same ...e; but without going into this delicate ...stion, it is possible to imagine a man ... a penchant for two women, though the ...eriment probably would be attended with ...t hazard and danger. Le Gautier forgot ... dark-eyed Marie, as he gazed upon Enid's ...er charms.

"You have heard nothing of Maxwell?" ...ked after a pause in the desultory con...sation. "A strange thing he does not ...te. Many men would imagine that such ...ing is not altogether an accident; there ... occasions when a little absence from the ...e of man is desirable, Miss Charteris."

"Many men, as usual, would be wrong," ...id answered coldly. "You should not ...ld your want of charity by these general... Monsieur le Gautier, though perhaps ... have derived benefit from these absences ...rself, you seem to understand the sub... so thoroughly."

Enid was angry at his cool insolence, and ...fled to his want of taste by a little plain ...guage herself; and her random shaft ...t home.

"You are severe; but really, while sorry ... Maxwell, there is something in it which ...mforting to me. Can you not guess ...t I mean?"

Enid Charteris, though guileless and pure ...woman can be, had not mixed with the ...t world for nothing. She had had suit... enough to know what a proposal was, ...above all things she dreaded one from ...man. Some instinct told her he would ... dangerous enemy. "You speak in rid...," she said calmly. "I have not been ...ated to the language of diplomacy. ..., explain yourself."

"Then I must be more explicit. Max...ll's absence rids me of a dangerous rival. ...he is away, the path is all the smoother ...re. Need I tell you, Miss Charteris—...l—that I love you? Surely you must ...e known that for a long time past. While ...ier was in the way, I sealed my lips; ...I can restrain myself no longer now."

"It would be affectation not to under...nd you," Enid replied with a calmness ...t boded ill for Le Gautier's success. "I ...m sorry to hear it. If you are wise, you ...ll not put me to the pain of a refusal."

"I will take no refusal," Le Gautier burst ...t passionately; "for I swear that if you ...not mine, you shall wed no other man. ...ll, you must, you shall be mine! You ...look upon me coldly now, but the time ...l come when you shall love me well ...ugh."

"The time will come when I shall—love—...!" The bitter scorn in these words stung ...Gautier to madness, stirring up a desper... passion in his veins, now that the prize ...med like slipping from his grasp. He ...t her feet on his knees. "Hear me!" ...claimed passionately—"only listen to ... Enid. I have vowed that you are the ...y woman I have chosen—the only girl I ...ld really love. Such love as mine must ...t a return some day; only try; only give ... little chance of hope."

"If you are a man, you will rise from ...s absurd position. Who am I, that you ...uld kneel to me? You must take my ...l for it; and if you have any considera... for my feelings, you will change the ...ject."

"And this is your absolute and final de...sion?"

"Yes, it is my absolute and final deci...n."

Le Gautier rose to his feet, pale but ...ring, and there was a darkly evil look ...n his white set face. When he spoke ...s his words were cold and incisive. ..."Consider, before you wilfully make an ...my of me." He uttered the words with ...w sibilation. "I have made you an ...er—the highest compliment I could pay, ...e you have scornfully rejected it. The ...st favor you ask from me you may seek ...on your knees."

"And to what purpose, sir, shall I ask a ...or from you?"

"For your father," Le Gautier answered ...ckly, though his tones were deep and ...urgent. "You have guessed that Maxwell ...s gone away on a dangerous mission. ...y should not Sir Geoffrey be chosen in ...s turn? And if so, who can save him? I, ...ector le Gautier, and no other man."

"And by whose evil counsel has my poor ...ther been dragged into your infamous ...otherhood?—By yours alone! He would ...e a happy man now, if he had never known ...!"

"On the contrary," Le Gautier interrupt...d. "I tried to save him. He has joined ...is own wish. You do not credit my ...rds. Go and ask him now if my words ...e not true, and that, if it is not his dearest ...sh that you should become my wife."

"He might think so," Enid answered ...ntily; "but he does not wish it in his ...art. Monsieur le Gautier, if you are a ...ntleman, you will cease this discussion. ...e subject is painful to me." She stood ...re, looking at him coldly and scorn...lly.

But her very iciness only served to in...me the warmth of his passion. "I can...ot!" he exclaimed. "I will not cease! ...ve years, ever since I first met you at ..., I have never ceased to love you. ...se do anything in reason; ask me any ...ng; but to forget you is impossible!"

"I am sorry for you," Enid said gently, ...ed a little by the ring of genuine pas...n in his voice—"I am sorry; but it can...be. I do not break my pledges so light...y, even if I wished to do so."

"Which you do not," Le Gautier bitter...remarked. "I do not care. I am des...rate now. You despise and scorn me; ...t I will not be rejected thus. If you will ...be my wife for my sake, you must for ...r father's and the honour of your house."

He stopped abruptly, for, standing in the ...or was Sir Geoffrey, his face pale, and ...s whole aspect downcast and degraded to ...pitiable degree.

Enid turned to her father eagerly. "Did you hear those words?" she asked. "Can it be possible that you—that I—that the honour of our house is in any man's hands? Can it be your wish, father, that I—I—should form an alliance with Monsieur le Gautier! Speak, and show him how mistaken he is!"

But Sir Geoffrey never spoke. His head sank lower upon his breast. For the first time, he realised the sacrifice he had imposed upon his daughter, and so he stood there, an Englishman no longer, but a poor enfeebled, shamefaced old man.

A wild feeling of alarm took possession of Enid as she saw this thing. "Why do you not speak?" she demanded. "What cause have you to hesitate in indorsing my words?"

Still the baronet never spoke, never raised his head.

Enid ran swiftly to his side and threw one arm round his shoulder. She could feel the spasm that struck him as he encountered her touch. "Father," she asked in a dull, even voice, "does your silence mean that he is right?"

"Yes, my dear child; he is right. There is no alternative."

There is a providence which helps us in such times as these, a numbness of the senses that for a time deadens pain. Enid's voice was very calm, as she turned to Le Gautier, standing there trying to disguise his triumph. "I do not know what all this means," she said. "I do not understand whence you derive your power. I cannot think now. For his sake," she continued, pointing to her father, "I consent."

Le Gautier sprang forward; but she repelled him with a glance.

"Listen to my conditions," she continued. "I have said I consent; but I warn you that if there is any loophole for escape from you, I shall take it. You are going away, you say. Nothing must be done till your return, and then the contract shall be fulfilled. Now, go."

When Lucrece entered the room a few moments later, she found her mistress lying unconscious upon the floor. Looking out of the window, she saw the slim figure of Le Gautier disappearing in the distance, and smiled. He was smiling, too, as he walked away. Nothing remained now but only the final interview with Marie, and to regain possession of the lost moidore. A few weeks at Warsaw, and then——

CHAPTER XV.

Maxwell had been gone a week now, and no tidings of him had reached England, save one letter to say he was in Rome. As Le Gautier turned away from Grosvenor Square his heart one glow of triumph, he determined that, come what may, the artist should never see England again. When he returned from Warsaw, he calculaced that, through Marie St. Jean's assistance, all information concerning the League would be in the hands of the police, freeing him from any further bondage, and throwing all the odium and danger on her. Full of these schemes, he arrived at his lodgings. A telegram was lying on the table. He took it up mechanically, and tore it open. The contents were terse: "Visci died this morning from heart disease." Le Gautier was wild with rage. Here was a pretty combination, he thought. Nothing now to detain Maxwell in Rome. The victim had fallen by a higher Hand than that of man, and Maxwell was free.

As a Head Centre of the Order, Le Gautier wielded much power, and even now he did not despair, with the command of nearly all the desperadoes in Rome at his command. He had only to get Maxwell arrested in Rome on some false charge and carried to the mountains; and there after a little delay and a packed meeting of the League—shot. Desperate men such as Le Gautier especially with such a prize in their grasp, do not long hesitate over such a trifling matter as a human life, and he trusted to his own good luck and native audacity to pull him through.

It was getting dark the same night as he despatched a telegram to Rome, and then turned in the direction of Fitzroy Square. He was as eager to see Isodore as he had been to encounter Enid in the afternoon, and looked forward not only to a pleasant evening but a remunerative one.

She did not keep him long waiting in the drawing-room ere she sailed in all smiles and welcome. She was looking radiantly beautiful to-night; there was a deeper flush on her face, and a glitter in her glorious eyes not usually seen there—signs of a loving welcome, Le Gautier imagined in his egotistical way. There was, besides, a warmth in her manner and a gladness in the pressure of her hand which inspired him, and sent an electric thrill coursing through his veins.

"You are looking more transcendently lovely than usual, Marie!" he exclaimed with a fervour unusual even to him. Every time I see you, there is some additional charm in you to note."

"It depends upon whether the observing eye is a prejudiced one," she replied with a caressing smile, which brought him at once to her side. "You say that now, Hector. How long will you continue to think so?"

"As long as I have power to think at all—as long as memory serves me. I shall remember you to the last day of my life."

"I believe you will," Isodore smiled bewilderingly. "And yet, strange as it may seem, the time will perhaps come when you will wish you had never seen my face."

"You are more than usually enigmatical to-night, Marie. You are a puzzle to me. I do not even know who you are. Tell me something about yourself, and why are you living in this solitude here."

"No; not to night; but, as I have often promised you, I will tell you sometime. I will tell you who I am before you go away; and then, when your curiosity is satisfied, you will leave me."

"Never!" Le Gautier exclaimed passionately. "Leave you!—the only woman I ever saw that I could really love. Leave you, Marie! How can you entertain the bare idea!"

He would have approached her nearer, but she waved him gently but firmly aside. The distance she kept him fanned his passion all the more. "Tell me something about yourself," she said. "That is a topic which never fails to interest me. How about the League, this Maxwell's journey Has he accomplished his mission yet?"

"He is not likely to, now. Visci is dead! —Gracious powers, Marie! what ails you? Are you ill?"

Isodore uttered a sharp exclamation, and then pealed forward in her chair. Her face was white and drawn, her lips trembled. Gradually her bosom ceased to heave so painfully, and she turned to Le Gautier with a white wan smile, though he could see the fan still trembling in her hands. "It is nothing," she said with an effort. "I am subject to these attacks of the heart, and any news of sudden death always affects me so.—Do not look distressed; it is past now."

"There is nothing in the name to cause you any distress?" Le Gautier asked suspiciously.

"I have heard the name before, if that is what you mean. Tell me all you know of this Carlo Visci."

"I did not say his name was Carlo,' Le Gautier observed, somewhat sharply. "I can tell you nothing more. When I reached home this afternoon, I had a telegram to say he was dead."

"And this Maxwell, what of him? I suppose he will return home now?"

"He has been somewhat dilatory in obeying orders. No; he will not return. He will be detained at Rome for the present."

"Tell me why you hate this Englishman so."

Le Gautier started. "How do you know I hate him?" he asked. "I have never said so."

"Not in so many words; but in gesture and look, when you speak of him, your actions are eloquent, my friend. He has crossed your path. Ah, well, I like a good hater. Maxwell will suffer yet."

"Yes," Le Gautier exclaimed involuntarily, "he will."

Isodore rose and walked to the piano, where she sat for a moment striking the chord idly. "When do you go to Warsaw?" she asked.

"I have six days remaining to me—Marie, the time has come when we must no longer delay. The pear is ripe now; all my plans are matured. I have only to hold up my hand and the League will vanish."

All this time, Isodore played on softly, musingly, the music serving like the accompanimant of a song to force the speaker's voice. As he stood there, and she answered him, she never ceased to play the soft chords.

"Then you have everything prepared?"

"Yes, everything is ready." He drew a low seat to her side, and seated himself there. "All the names are made out, the whole plot prepared."

"And you propose to hand them over to me. It is a great compliment; and I suppose I must take them. I would run greater risks than this for your sake and—my own."

She took one hand from the ivory keys and held it out to him. Drawing a packet from his pocket, he gave it to her. She thrust it in her bosom, and ran her fingers over the keys again,

"All is there, I suppose," she asked, "down to the minutest detail, everything necessary to betray the League and pull it up root and branch? You have taken good care to shield yourself, I presume?"

"Of course.—And now, to talk of more pleasant things. You know I am going away in a few days; and when I return, I shall expect to find myself perfectly free."

"You may depend upon me. I will do all I can for you."

Le Gautier looked up sharply—the words were coldly, sternly uttered, but the quiet placid smile never left her face.

"How strangely you speak! But oh, Marie—my Marie, the only woman I ever loved, you will stand by me now, and help me, for both our sakes! Look at me, and say you will do what I ask!"

"Isodore looked down, smiling brightly. "Yes, I will do what you ask," she said. "And so you really love me?"

"Passionately and sincerely, such as I never expected to love woman yet."

"I am glad to hear you say that," Isodore replied with a thrill of exultation in her voice. "I have waited and hoped for the time to come; but never in my wildest dreams did I look for this."

"With your nobleness and beauty, how could it be otherwise? I should be more than man—or less—if I looked upon you unmoved."

"Then, for the first time for years, I am happy."

Le Gautier started to his feet rapturously. He did not understand her yet; he thought the soft earnest words all for him. He would have caught her there and then in his eager arms, but again she repulsed him. "No, no!" she cried; "I have not proved you yet. Let things remain as they are till you return again to England."

How strange, Le Gautier thought vaguely, that she should use words so similar to those of Enid to a precisely similar plea. Despite his passion, he had not thrown all prudence to the winds.

"You had better leave me now," Isodore continued—"leave me to think and dwell over this thing."

"But what about my badge of membership? I dare not leave England without that."

"I had almost forgotten it in this interesting conversation. It is not in my possession; it is in Paris. You have a meeting of the League before you go for final instructions. Come to me after that, and you shall have it. I am going to Paris to-morrow, and will bring it with me."

"You are a witch!" Le Gautier exclaimed with admiration. "You seem to know as much as the mysterious Isodore, that Princess who never shows herself unless danger besets the League. If she is the wonder men who have seen her say she is, they stand in dire need of her now."

"Beware how you talk so lightly of her—she has the gift of fernseed. At this very moment she may know of your perfidy."

"Perfidy is a hard word, my queen, and sounds not prettily.—And now, good-night. And you will not fail me?"

"I will not fail you," Isodore replied with the stern inflection Le Gautier had noticed before, and marvelled over. "I never fail."

"A woman, and never fail."

"Not in my promises. If I make a vow or pledge my word, I can wait five years or ten to fulfil it.—Good-night. And when we meet again, you will not say I have belied my contract."

When Valerie entered some minutes later, she found Isodore with firm-set face and gleaming eyes. "My brother is dead," she said quietly. "Poor Carlo! And he loved me so fondly at one time. Now he can never know."

"Dead!" Valerie exclaimed. "You do not mean to say"——

"That Maxwell killed him!—No. His heart has been failing for years, long before I left Rome; his life was not worth an hour's purchase. But I have no time to mourn over him now. Let me see if I can do a little good with my useless occupation. I start for Rome to-morrow."

Valerie looked at her friend in stupid astonishment.

"I cannot explain to you now. Maxwell is free to return home. As you know, it means destruction to Le Gautier's plans, if he does. I dared not press him too closely to-night; but Maxwell will be detained in Rome, in all probability by Paulo Lucci, till some charge can be trumped up for his destruction. But Lucci and his band dare not cross me; my power is too great for that. To-morrow, I leave for Rome, and pray heaven that I may not be too late!"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Humbug.

Barnum said "The American People like to be humbugged." This may be true in the line of entertainment, but not where life is at stake. A man with consumption, or any lingering disease, looking Death in the face and seeking to evade his awful grasp, does not like to be trifled with. So with confidence we place before our readers Nature's great remedy, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a sure relief for that long train of diseases resulting from impure blood, such as Consumption, Chronic Nasal Catarrh, Liver Complaint, Kidney Disorder, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Scrofula and General Debility. Time-tried and thoroughly tested, it stands without an equal! Any druggist.

Ostrich tips and plumes are seen on some very large dressy coaching hats.

"Not Bulk, but Business"!

is the way a Western man put it in expressing to a friend his complete satisfaction in the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets. So small and yet so effectual, they bid fair to supplant entirely the old-style pill. An ever-ready remedy for Sick and Bilious Headache, Biliousness, Constipation and all blood disorders. Mild in action, wonderful in effect! Put up in vials, convenient to carry. Their use attended with no discomfort! These sterling merits account for their great popularity.

Mikado reed and bead portiers grow more and more in fashionable favor.

She scolds and frets,
She's full of pets,
She's rarely kind and tender;
The thorn of life
Is a fretful wife—
I wonder what will mend her?

Try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Ten to one, your wife is cross and fretful because she is sick and suffering, and cannot control her nervousness when things go wrong. Make a healthy woman of her and the chances are you will make a cheerful and pleasant one. "Favorite Prescription" is the only remedy for woman's peculiar ailments, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. See guarantee on bottle wrapper. Large bottles, $1. Six for $5.

The upright jabot on the front of the hat is the ruling style of trimming.

YOUNG MEN suffering from the effects of early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted also MIDDLE-AGED and OLD MEN who are broken down from the effects of abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and read M. V. Lubon's Treatise on Diseases of Men. The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. E. Toronto, Ont.

Preserved green corn on a cob, in large glass jars, looks delicious and shows progress in "canning."

People who are subject to bad breath, foul coated tongue, or any disorder of the Stomach, can at once be relieved by using Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, the old and tried remedy. Ask your Druggist.

There is one furnace that melts all hearts—love; there is one balm that soothes all pain—patience; there is one mediciue that cures all ills—time; there is one peace that ends all strife—death; there is one light that illuminates all darkness—hope.

A CURE FOR DRUNKENNESS,

opium, morphine, chloral, tobacco, and kindred habits. The medicine may be given in tea or coffee without the knowledge of the person taking it, if so desired. Send 6c. in stamps for book and testimonials from those who have been cured. Address M. V. Lubon, 47 Wellington St. East, Toronto, Ont. Cut this out for future reference. When writing mention this paper.

The output of the locomotive works of the country now averages from thirty-six to forty engines per week.

The Rev. Dr. John Hall says that heaven is to be a place of mental activity where all the problems of science will be answered

Whenever your Stomach or Bowels get out of order, causing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, and their attendant evils, take at once a dose of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Best family medicine. All Druggists, 50 cents.

An amateur once asked Liszt how to play the piano with soul. The genial master replied: "You must first of all have a soul."

LADIES

Who are Weak, Nervous and Exhausted; who feel themselves losing strength; who are pale, delicate and sickly in appearance, suffering from the many complaints peculiar to women—send for and read M. V. LUBON'S Treatise in BOOK FORM on the Diseases of Women. Mailed sealed and secure from observation on receipt of 6c in stamps, UNSEALED FREE. Address, M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. East Toronto, Ont.

Jay Gould's brother, Abraham, is the supply agent of the Missouri Pacific railroad at St. Louis, and a plain, hard-working citizen.

Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness and Hay Fever.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are cured in from one to three simple applications made at home. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent free on receipt of stamp by A. H. Dixon & Son, 308 King Street West Toronto Canada.

Henry J. Raymond once said: "There are very few things in this world worth getting angry about, and they are precisely the things which anger does not help."

A. P. 338.

PATENTS For Sale—Illustrative descriptive Catalogue free. R. Chamberlin, Toronto.

GOOD LIVE AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY County in Canada. Address, PERRIS & CO., 87 Church St., Toronto.

AGENTS AND CANVASSERS wanted, Male or Female, whole or spare time, on salary or commission. Industrial Union of B. N. A., 45 Arcade, Toronto.

TORONTO CUTTING SCHOOL.—Gentlemen desirous of acquiring a thorough knowledge of garment cutting should apply at once to S. CORRIGAN, 522 Yonge St., Toronto. Terms on application.

ANOTHER NOVELTY.—Goldman's Spoiskler and Atomizer. All the rage in the States. Agents wanted. Sample by mail 45 cents. CLEMENT & CO., Toronto.

THE BOILER INSPECTION and Insurance Company of Canada,
Consulting Engineers and Solicitors of Patents,
TORONTO.
G. C. ROSS, Chief Engineer. A. FRASER, Sec'y-Treas.

COMPOUND OXYGEN—THE CONSERVATOR of health, the enemy of disease; heals the Lungs, Re-builds the Broken Down Constitution of young and old. Home treatment, sufficient for two months, Inhaler and all complete, sent by express for $12. Moved my office from 73 King West to 41 King East. MRS C. STIDMAN FIEROE. Four years established in Toronto. 32 Office Treatments for $18. Send for circular.

GOLD, COMPOSITION GOLD, Antique Bronze, Natural Wood, and other Picture and Room Mouldings, Frames, etc. Paintings, Engravings, Etchings, Artotypes, Artists' Materials, Mirrors, etc. Wholesale and Retail. Trade Catalogue. MATTHEWS BROS. & CO., Toronto.

GUELPH Business College, Guelph, Ont.

Twelve States and Provinces already represented on the roll of this Institution. To thorough, practical instruction, and the efficiency and success of its graduates, this College owes its popularity. Circulars, giving terms, etc., mailed free. Address
M. MacCORMICK, Principal.

BEAVER LINE OF STEAMSHIPS,
Sailing weekly between Montreal and Liverpool.
RATES OF PASSAGE:—Saloon, Montreal to Liverpool, $40, $50, and $60; Return Tickets, $80, $90, and $100—according to steamer and accommodation. Intermediate and Steerage at lowest rates. For further particulars and to secure Berths, apply to H. E. MURRAY, General Manager, 1 Custom House Square, Montreal, or to the Local Agents in the different Towns and Cities.

AGENTS—Ladies or Gentlemen Wanted—To Canvass for our Subscription Books. Our Standard and popular work, Dr. Withrow's "History of Canada"—a book which ought to be in every library. Our instructive, amusing and soul-touching temperance book, "Platform Echoes," by J. B. Gough. Our complete book of sermons, and autobiography of Sam P. Jones, with a short sketch of the life of Sam W. Small, and three of his special sermons. Our beautiful book of poetry and literature of all ages and all lands, entitled "Golden Thoughts on Mother, Home and Heaven." Our handsome Family Bibles, beautiful illustrations, full of useful and helpful matter for Bible study, besides good clear type and paper. Our terms are liberal. Send for circulars.
WILLIAM BRIGGS, Publisher, Toronto.

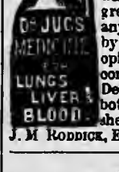
THE LONDON GUARANTEE AND ACCIDENT CO. (LD: OF LONDON, ENG.
Capital, £260,000. Dominion Government Deposit, £55,000. Head Office: 72 King St East, Toronto.
Gentlemen of influence wanted in unrepresented districts.
A. T. McCORD,
Resident Secretary for the Dominion.

SPOONER'S COPPERINE 'Babbitt'—Non-fibrous Anti-friction Box-metal for journal bearings in machinery—Guaranteed copper mixed. Supplies every requirement. Ask your hardware dealer for it. ALONZO. W. SPOONER, Patentee and Manufacturer, Port Hope.

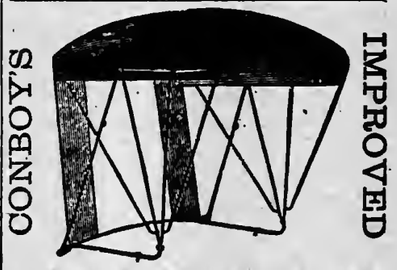
CARPET SWEEPERS Mangles, 3 kinds, Washing Machines 2 kinds; Clothes Wringers, 10 kinds. Churns, Meat Choppers, Trucks, and other sundries.
HAMILTON INDUSTRIAL WORKS Co., Hamilton, Canada.
Send for article wanted or Illustrated Catalogue.

Dairy Salt,
FOR BUTTER, ETC.
NEW Importations.—Higgins' Eureka, Washington and Ashton Brands, in large or small sacks. Also Rice's Canadian Salt. Write for prices.
JAMES PARK & SON.
Wholesale Produce Merchants, Toronto

THE ALBANY STEAM TRAP CO.'S SPECIAL BUCKET RETURN TRAP.



The Celebrated Hancock Inspirator.
Gresham's Automatic Re-starting Injector.
Morrison's Automatic Sight Feed Lubricator.
Engineers' & Plumbers' Supplies of every description. Send for circulars.
JAMES MORRISON,
75 & 77 Adelaide St. W.,
TORONTO



Bicycles!
SEND AT ONCE FOR LIST of Second-Hand Machines,
From $15 Upwards.
New Catalogue Ready 1st April
A. T. LANE MONTREAL.

THE WHITE THRESHING ENGINE OF LONDON, ONT. A FULL SUPPLY FOR 1887

JUNE 19, 1885—For two years my wife's health was run down. She was greatly emaciated and too weak to do anything for herself; she was given up by five doctors, they all passed their opinion that she could not live. She commenced using Dr. Jug's Medicine in December, 1884, and after taking six bottles she was so much improved that she could look after her household duties.
J. M RODDICK, Engineer, C. P. R., West Toronto.

CARRIAGE TOPS
Are famous for their style, convenience, durability, and cheapness. Buy no other until you see them. All the leading Carriage Builders sell them.
Factory: 407 King West, TORONTO.

CONSUMPTION.
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer. Give express and P. O. address.
DR. T. A. SLOCUM,
Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto

J. L. JONES
WOOD ENGRAVER
10 KING S. EAST
TORONTO

Markdale Standard.

C. W. Rutledge, Proprietor.

MARKDALE, JUNE. 23. 1887.

QUEEN'S JUBILEE.

Tuesday last was observed as a public holiday by the business men of Markdale.

A heavy rain fell in the forenoon which however passed off and the afternoon was beautiful.

BASE BALL MATCH.

A return match between the Blantyre Knockers and Markdale Stars was played on the beautiful Agricultural grounds and was witnessed by a number of our citizens, who manifested a deep interest in the play. The game was very friendly though hotly contested resulting in a victory for the "Stars" by 17 to 12 runs in nine innings. The home team provided a luncheon at the Markdale House after which the visiting Club took their leave highly pleased with the treatment they received.

GARDEN PARTY.

The English Church S. S. garden party held at the residence of Wm. Lucas, Esq., was largely attended and much enjoyed. Mr. Lucas has a beautiful place for such a party, and the large number present thoroughly enjoyed themselves. The "operetta" Laila was well played and received the applause of the company.

The grounds were well lit with Chineese Lanterns; the ice-cream bar was well patronized and all passed off pleasant and satisfactorily.

With the exception of the above our village was exceeding quiet.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—The Queen's Jubilee was celebrated in a most enthusiastic manner all over the Empire and also in other Lands.

—A young man named James Coutts was killed and two gunners seriously injured by a premature discharge while firing a royal salute from the connon.

—The Presbyterian Review—published in Toronto by the Presbyterian News Co.—is enlarged and very much improved, being now the cheapest denominational newspaper for its size in Canada.

—The Toronto Mail has recently been giving interesting illustrated sketches of various towns and their leading business men and business places, Churches, Schools &c. Their tarvelling agent was in Owen Sound last week on that business.

—Manitoba is moving with the times. Following the example of the older provinces, the Legislature has passed an amendment to the municipal act, giving to all females who are property holders whether married or not the right to vote at municipal elections. This is but an act of justice. Women who pay taxes should have the same right s amen.

—The question of "Sabbath Observance" has engaged the attention of the various Church "parliaments" recently, and the arguments have been logical, forcible and decisive in the direction of enforcing a strict observance of the "day of rest." The laws of nature, as well as experience and the commands in Scripture all say it is good, profitable and right to rest the seventh day.

—The various annual Assemblies of the different denominations which have been convened in numerous parts of the Dominion recently have given no uncertain sound on the prohibition question, and though the fight against the great evil—the liquor traffic—is a hard one, and its supporters unscrupulous, yet the prohibition sentiment is growing, and will—it is hoped—ere long be sufficient to sweep the curse from our land.

—The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of Canada met in Winnipeg last week. Their next annual meeting will be held in June at Halifax.

—The C. P. R. Steamer Athabaska ran upon a smooth sloping rock near Cove Island last week during a heavy fog. Messengers were sent to Tobermorey where a boat was secured which took the passengers (some 75 persons) on to Owen Sound. The vessel was laden with 30,000 bushels wheat, part of which was thrown overboard. The boat was released from her perilous condition some days after with the assistance of a tug, and arrived at Owen Sound on Monday last none the worse.

—Canon Demoulin, Rector of St. James' Church, Toronto, after touching logically on the moral and religious aspects of Sunday Street Cars—in the course of a sermon recently wound up the following pertinent paragraph;—"We have said nothing of the argument about Sabbath desecration. No work which is really promotive of men's physical. mental and moral well-being can be desecrating whenever or wherever it is performed. Even under Judaism, "the Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath."

Berkeley

From our own correspondent.

James Gillespie strained his leg while peeling tanbark recently.

Joseph Gawley caught a Crane last Sunday. He let it go again and it went south.

There has been considerable weather this week and strong indications for more.

Meaford Road.

Mr. Thos. Dunlop has raised his new frame barn; Messrs W. Shores and D. Graham were the captains. Shores and his men came out ahead; no accidents.

The Trustees have gotten the fence around the school grounds repaired and a new pump in the well.

It has been decided to have the annual picnic in connection with the Sabbath School here, at "Bells Lake" on Dominion Day.

The Rev. Mr. Ayers will preach his farewell sermon in the Wesley Church next week.

Mr. R. Buchanan has disposed of several hay forks through this Township which he and Mr. Brodie are now busy putting up.

Mr. A. Johnston has purchased the old Hall farm.

Traverston.

Business has been exceptionally lively in Traverston during the past few weeks. Mr. Wm. Carney has been busy repairing the saugeen bridge, It is now completed and has been inspected by members of the council, who pronounced it an excellent sample of engineering skill.

Messrs Bliss and Elder have shipped during the past week. several thousand feet of lumber to the Massey Co. Toronto.

Mr. Archie Robinson, met with a severe accident on Wednesday last; while engaged in loading lumber on the cars at Markdale, one of the cars moved away, causing Mr. R. to fall on his back across the rail, thereby giving his back a bad wrench. At latest accounts he is progressing favorably, Building prospects are good this season. The stone work of Mr. I. Elder's barn is nearly completed and the framers will soon commence work.

Mr. D. Sweeny also intends building, in the near future. he has the lumber drawn on the ground for the purpose of building a dwelling house.

Mr. Bliss's excursion boat, "The Moonlight Wanderer" has been idle for some time in consequence of a lack of fuel, and the rocky cliffs no longer echo with her sonorous toots.

Our Chemist is at present grappling with the theory, that limestone can be used as a substitute for coal; if his researches terminate satisfactorily, the placid bosom of the saugeen will be ruffled once more by this nocturnal wanderer.

DAVID DANIEL DANK.

PARIS green strictly pure, to be had at Mabee's hard ware.

W. J. McFarland's

HOT

WEATHER PRICES.

LOOK DOWN

this column and see the array of desirable goods to be offered this month at prices which we think were never before quoted for such good goods.

Don't

skip an item, you may find something of great importance to you in this unprecedented list of Honest Bargains.

Read all! It will pay you.

Hat's!

75 Women's Sun Hats 15 cents, worth 50 cents.

48 Men's Hats 20 cents, usual price 50 cents.

150 Boy's 15, 20, 25, 35, and 45 cents.

756 yds. Cashmere 45 inches wide, only 30 cents.

One Case Fine Tweed's all wool suitable for best wear 50 cents. Good value.

112 prs. Men's Lace and Sewed Shoes $1.00.

Lace Curtains!

10 prs. 75 cents.
10 prs. $1.00.
15 prs. $1.50.
10 prs. Colored Muslins newest out $3.00.

Dress Goods!

We have the trade of the County. De Berges 22, 25, 28, up.

75 Peices High Novelties in GREYS, BROWNS, BLUES, GRENOTES, BLACK WOOL CHECKS and CASHMERETTES, commencing at 10 cents up to the finest. Imported Buttons and Trimmings to match.

100 Men's, Youth's and Boy's Suits, part of a manufacturers stock, will be sold very cheap.

MUSLINE 6 cents fast colors, stylish, goods. Fine White Lawn 12½, 15, 17, 20 cents.

2762 1/2 yds. Embroideries without exageration the largest assortment and lowest prices to be found anywhere. All our Embroideries 36 inches wide. Allover Laces 36 inches wide. All our Orientals in Cream, White and Fawn.

110 PARISOLS, great job; commencing at 50 cents. See them.

25 Doz. Women's Hose in Black, Navy Blue Ground and Fawn 15 cents a pair or two pairs for 25 cents.

CRETONNES Imported Direct and pronounced by the ladies Just Lovely.

37 PIECES washing every day Ginghams only 10 cents.

MOURNING GOODS in great variety.

GENT'S TIES, SHIRTS, COLLORS, SOCKS, and under clothing at correct prices.

25 Doz. large cotton Towel's only 9 cents each. 20 doz. still larger 15 cents.

100 Honey Cans 2 gallons 20 cents.

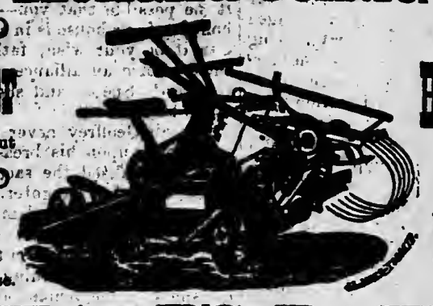
14 Pieces New Silks in Black and Colored Imported Direct from LONDON ENGLAND.

OUR MILLINERY ROOMS

crowded with Novelties and our five young ladies kept on the jump serving customers. Trimming Hats, Bonnets, and Mantle Making. PRICES RIGHT, STYLES CORRECT.

A cordial invitation is extended to all to visit our grand display of NEW GOODS.

W. J. McFARLAND,



Direct Importer,

MARKDALE.

Massey Agency

Holland Centre.

TORONTO Light Binder steel frame 5 & 6 feet cut

MASSEY Harvest

TORONTO MOWER, one and two horse.

MASSEY MOWER.

SHARP'S RAKE.

A full stock of repairs kept constantly on hand for the above machines.

REPAIRS STRICTLY CASH.

Also agent for Hull's patent reversible Hay Carrier, Manufactured by Cochrane Bro's, St. Thomas, and Fox Pea Harvester, Owen Sound.

THOS. WILLISCROFT, Agent.

MARKDALE CARRIAGE WORKS.

R. McNALLY:—Would hereby announce to the people of Markdale and the public generally that I have moved into my new carriage shop opposite the Markdale House, where I will manufacture every article in the wagon and carriage line, and having long experience in the business and by using first class material, I can guarantee satisfaction to every one who will favor me with their order.

Repairing, Painting and Trimming promptly attended to.

I also make a first class Stone Machine which will lift the stone, carry it to any desired place and leave in position on the fence.

A call respectfully solicited,

R. McNALLY, Proprietor

MARKDALE SASH and DOOR FACTORY

Having erected and fitted up in every detail a Sash, Door and Plain Factory, containing all the latest and most approved machinery, everything being new, I am now prepared to turn out

Sash, Doors, Blinds, Mouldings, Hollow Battons

FRAMES, LATH, FENCE PICKETS, &c.,

And everything needed in the building trade, in a manner second to none in Canada, and having engaged superior mechanics in every department, would now respectfully solicit public patronage.

Every Effort Made to fill Orders Promptly

PINE LUMBER Dressed and Undressed

Direct from North Shore, all sizes, on hand. Plain and Fancy Turning done.

Careful Attention to Orders from a Distance.

303 THOS. McNEA.

IMPORTANT!

TO all users of Machine Oils, don't forget to call on E. S. MABEE, Sign of the Cross-Cut Saw, Markdale, and ask for the CASTOR E. OIL, it is unequalled by any.

"AURORA"

WATER WHITE OIL,

is equal to American for brillance of light.

Empire Oil Co.,

Refiners & Manufacturer's,

349-75 London and Toronto.

WARNING.

ALL persons are hereby warned against fishing on "Sargents Lake," on lot 63 and 64 first west of T. & S. Road, Holland. Any person found trespassing or fishing on said lake or premisses will be prosecuted according to law.

WM. SARGENT

Berkeley May 1887. 352-5

TENDERS WANTED.

Sealed tenders will be received by the undersigned up till noon on Friday June 17th for the veneering with brick, School House No. 2 Artemesia, the contractor to find all the materials. Plans and specifications can be seen at the house of Wm. Burnett. The committee don't bind themselves to accept the lowest or any tender.

Building Committee { JOSEPH BEATY, WM. FLESHER, WM. BURNETT.

Headache, Biliousness, Dyspepsia and Indigestion relieved and cured at once by Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Try it. Sample free.

NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that any person or persons found trespassing or fishing on the farms of the undersigned will be prosecuted according to law without further notice.

Signed:—

John B. Thibaudeau, Edward Brady, William Brady, John Shears, Wm. McNally, James Elliott, Adam Hislop, John Webber, Thos. Brady, James Brady, Wm. McCutcheon, Geo. Richardson, George McNally, James Stinson, Robt Graham, John Perkins.

WE WANT!

100 GOOD MEN at once, to sell for the Fonthill Nurseries (largest in Canada over 465 acres) steady employment and no lost time, liberal commission or salary, best advantages; splended outfit furnished free; any pushing man can succeed. Apply for terms to,

STONE & WELLINGTON,

Toronto, Ont.

BULLETIN X.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE:

GUELPH, JUNE 1, 1897.

WEEDS.

JAMES FANTON, M. A., F. G. S., PROFESSOR OF NATIONAL HISTORY AND GEOLOGY.

At a period in Canadian farming when much exchange of seed is taking place I have thought it expedient to say something about weeds, with special reference to two which have come under my notice last season, and were reported as being new in the districts from which they were sent for identification.

Any plant out of place is really a weed even if it does possess considerable beauty. Some plants are so frequently out of place that they have been always known as weeds, such as the thistle, chickweed, bindweed, etc.

In Ontario we have somewhere about 150 species of plants commonly known as weeds, and of these nearly 100 have been introduced from Europe. Every year adds a few more foreigners, and if farmers are not more vigilant in watching against these unpleasant intruders our Province will soon be overrun.

There is no doubt weeds are on the increase in Ontario, both in number and species. This may be accounted for by the comparative indifference of many farmers to the growth of weeds on the roadside, as well as to the practice which now prevails of procuring a change of seed from other districts. The reproductive power of these pernicious plants will be better understood when the reader examines the results of observations on their seed-bearing capitabilities.

In each case following the seeds are from a single plant: purslane, 500,000; burdock 400,328; cockle, 3,200; mustard, 31,000 Canadian thistle, 42,000; ox-eye daisy, 9,600 chess, 3,500; mallow, 16,500. When we consider this productive power and the vitality some possess, together with the peculiar mode by which many are distributed, the surprise is that we are not more overrun than we are especially when unfortunately located near careless or indifferent farmers.

Weeds are largely distributed by the following means:

1 Along with grain obtained from other district.

2 Animals carrying seeds attached to their bodies.

3 By the wind, where seeds are supplied with structures which enables them to be blown about.

4, Threshing machines carrying seeds from farm to farm.

5 Renting farm for a short time to men who are indifferent to the condition in which they leave the place, better or worse, and usually, worse than they found it.

6 Manure from city stables.

With such odds against him a farmer who desires to keep his fields clean must be vigilant, industrious and painstaking. However if he observes the following hints he will succeed in destroying weeds:

1. Cultivate the land thoroughly.
2. Watch the roadsides and fence-corners.
3. Never allow the weeds to seed.
4. If possible, never allow weeds to have the benefit of sunlight: this can be effected by constant and thorough cultivation, and will soon result in a clean farm.
5. Secure the co-operation of fellow-farmers.

A knowledge of the nature of weeds becomes of importance in destroying them. Annuals living but a year, bear many seeds and when young are weak and tender, such as sheperd's purse, mustard, cockle, pennycress, wild oats, chess, ragweed, chickweed, sow thistle.

Biennials continue two years and usually have a tap-root. Unless these plants are cut below the surface, cutting increases their vigora. Wild carrot, blueweed, burdock and mullein are biennials.

Simple perennials continue from year to year and will re-appear till the root is utterly destroyed, of which are the ox-eye daisy, mallow, chicory, bindweed, sorrel and campion.

Creeping perennials are more or less jointed in the roots, each joint capable of growing if separated. Continued cultivation and smothering from light are necessary to kill these, among which are Canadian thistle, couch grass, toadflax, milkweed and sow thistle (perennial.)

Sonchus arvensis (perennial sow thistle) has made its appearance in the neighborhood of Stratford, from which the specime sent to the college came. It is considered a troublesome weed in the old country, and belongs to a class the representatives of which are very difficult to destroy on account of the creeping rootstock already referred to. Like all members of the order Compositæ it produces many seeds. It bears a close resemblence of the common sow thistle, having a flower not unlike that of the dandelion, but the flower stalk, especially near the flower, is quite hairy. This weed being a perenial is likely to prove far more troublesome than the annual sow thistle and consequently should be kept under.

Thlaspi arvense (pennycress) has appeared in the vicinity of Almonte. It belongs to the order Cruciferæ and is closely allied to the mustard. It is well known along the Red Riverdr as French weed and in that country has become a nuisance, having in some cases almost completely overrun the fields. No doubt from [illegible] once, before it gets a foothold. The following description may be of service to identify it: pods round, flat, with [illegible] deep notch; leaves oblong, narrow shape at the base, toothed, smooth; flowers white and very small; plant about a foot high. It derives its name pennycress, from the size and shape of its seed vessels, which resemble silver pennies. Though found to some extent in Quebec, it is scarcely seen in Ontario Its introduction should be looked upon with suspicion for (bearing many seeds) it will soon spread if not kept under and prove here as troublesome a weed as it has in Manitoba.

ASTONISHING SUCCESS.

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive, at least to try one bottle, as 80,000 dozen bottles were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your druggists about it. Sample bottles to try, sold at 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in the United States and Canada.

SOUTHERN ASTHMA CURE
INSTANT RELIEF FOR
ASTHMA AND BRONCHITIS
BY MAIL ON RECEIPT OF PRICE
SAMPLES, 25c.; REGULAR SIZE, $1.00
ADDRESS FULFORD & CO., BROCKVILLE, ONT.
DOUBLE TREATMENT IN EACH PACKAGE

NOTICE.

WM. SARGENT, Berkeley, has a Durham Bull for service at his farm seven-eighth bred. Terms on application. 354-57

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT 131 con 3 west of T. & S. Rd. Artemesia, 50 acres, about 20 acres clear of stumps and stones, balance good hardwood bush. Five miles from Markdale and four from Flesherton. For further particulars apply to A. S. Thompson, Flesherton P. O. or J. J. Thompson, Orilla. 342-ft

6 PER CENT.

Money loaned on Farm or Town Property at lowest rates of interest. Apply to
R. J. SPROULE,
Conveyancer & Postmaster, Flesherton.

Collingwood and Georgin Bay Line.

Royal Mail,

In connection with the Northern and North-Western R'ys, and the Grand Trunk R'y.

Str. PACIFIC, Captain P. M. Campbell.
Str. ATLANTIC. Captain R. D. Foote.
Str. NORTHERN BELLE, Capt. W. J. Bassett.

The fine new Steamers "PACIFIC" & "ATLANTIC" will run as follows during the season (weather permitting.)

Leaving Collingwood at 1 p. m.; Meaford at 3 p.m.; Owen Sound at 8 p. m.; and Wiarton at 11:45 p. m.; every

Wednesday and Saturday.

For Killarney, Manitowaning, Little Current, Kagawong, Gore Bay, Spanish River, Serpent River, Algoma Mills, Blind River, Thessalon, Bruce Mines, Hilton, St. Joseph's Island, Garden River, and Sault St. Marie.

The Saturday Steamer only will call at Cockburn Island.

MACKINAW.—During the summer season the above steamers will continue the trip on to the Island of Mackinaw making six full days of a round trip at a cost of $12.00 only including meals and berth.

For information as to freight and fares. Appply to any Agent of the above Railways, the Pursers on board the steamers, or to the Great Northern Transit Co., Collingwood.

THOS. LONG, Secretary. CHAS. CAMERON, Manager.

BE SURE & GET YOUR PUMPS,
—FROM—
J. T. QUINN,
MARKDALE.

He makes as good a pump as there is in the market, and at the lowest possible prices, besides it is so convenient for getting repairs besides when buying from a distance.

Have some style about you and support home enterprise by buying rom Quinn.

When you cannot rest from Asthmatic troubles, Southern Asthma Cure will at once relieve. Double treatment in each package.

Fine Watches
Clock's and Silverware,
Dealing
The People Appreciate it.

It illustrates my method of doing business. It means "SQUARE" dealing.

This is what I Practice and Guarantee.

The public will find my stock New, Quality best, Prices close, in American Watches—Clock's etc.

I do practical Watch repairing and Speck fitting.

Goods and work warranted, by the Peoples' Jeweller.

W. A. BROWN,
MARKDALE.

HEAD QUARTERS

—FOR—

Books, Stationery, Fancy Goods, Toys, Wall Paper, &c.

Toronto St. next Door to the Mansion House, Markdale.

A. Dinsmore returns his sincere thanks for the very liberal support accorded him since commencing as above, and hopes by strict attention to business and moderate prices to merit a continuance of public appreciation and patronage. Those requiring

WALL PAPERS

would consult their own interest by examining his stock, consisting of over Three Thousand pieces at from 5 to 75c. per Roll. Sunday Schools requiring Liberary Books will find Hundreds to select from and at such FAVORABLE TERMS as are sure to satisfy.

Note the fact.—That until I commenced business there was no such thing as a special discount allowed to Sunday Schools, or if you wanted Books could not get them unless by sending to Toronto or elsewhere, now your wants can be supplied at your Door and at lower prices than Toronto. I therefore with confidence appeal for public support. A full line of School Books, Stationery, &c., always on hand, also agent for the DOMESTIC PAPER PATTERNS. Agent also for The Harden Star Hand Grenade for Extinguishing Fires. NOTE THE ADDRESS,

A. Dinsmore.

New Tailor.

Will Stoddart, late of England and Jersy City, U. S. begs to inform the citizens of MARKDALE and surrounding community, that he has opened a TAILORING SHOP over Mr. W. J. McFarland's Store, where he is prepared to do all work entrusted to him in the Latest and Nobbiest Styles; as I will inspect all work before leaving the Shop, customers may rely on having work turned out first-class in every particular; trusting that I may receive a fair share of the public patronage

I remain,
Faithfully your's,
WILL STODDART.
Markdale, March 14th, 1887.

New General Provision Store

THE undersigned would hereby respectfully intimate to the inhabitants of Markdale and surrounding country that I've opened up a general Provision store where I intend to keep on hand a general supply of all kinds of provisions such as:—

FLOUR, OATMEAL, CORNMEAL INDIAN CORN, GRASS SEED, OATS, BRAN, SHORTS, CHOPP, SCREENINGS. also a quantity of SEED GRAIN, HAMS, BACON, LARD, &c., in fact everything people want in this line.

Shop one door west of Joe Lamb's Blacksmith shop.

Soliciting a share of public patronage I am respectfully yours,

Jas. Miller
MARKDALE.

THE PLACE
—TO GET—
PURE PARIS GREEN
—AT—
Stephen's Drug Store.
—THE—
PLACE TO GET THE BEST GRADE
—OF—
Hellobore! Hellobore!
—AT—
Stephen's Drug Store.
—THE—
Place to get Stanley's Spectacles which are the best at
Stephen's Drug Store.

Pure Cream of Tarter, Tested Baking Soda, and Pure Spices of all kinds.

R. L. Stephen.

R. S. Rae,  Tailor.

REMOVED.

In returning thanks to my numerous customers for liberal patronage during the past 14 years in which I have done business in Markdale, and soliciting a continuance of the same, I would also intimate that I have removed to my premises on Mill Street, next door to Stephen's Drug Store, and opposite to the Post Office; where I shall be happy to meet all my customers.

Respectfully Yours,
R. S. RAE,
Markdale

TORONTO HOUSE.

I am offering this week Ready-Made Clothing, and

BOOTS & HOE
—AT—

astonishingly low prices. Persons requiring a summer outfit would do well to see my stock.

Wm Brown.

For Sale or to Rent.

ONE of the best farms in Artemesia township, being lots 115 and 116 third range west of T. & S. Road, three miles from Markdale, comprising 100 acres, over 80 of which is cleared and in good state of cultivation, well fenced, young and old orchard, watered with never failing spring and good well, brick house, good carriage house and stable and two log barns. Possession will be given after harvest. For further particulars apply on the premises to,

JOHN WHITBY,
Markdale, P. O.

MIRACULOUS.—"My Miraculous Cure was that I had suifered from kidney disease for about two years, was off work all that time. A friend told me of B. B. B., I tried it, and am happy to say that I was cured by two bottles." Wm. Tier, St. Marys, Ont.

OWEN SOUND
MARBLE WORK
H. B. HARRISON
MANUFACTURER OF
MARBLE AND GRANITE
MONUMENTS & HEADSTONES
Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.

JUST RECEIVED
3 Carloads Finest Variegate Marble

☞ Largest stock in the Dominion select from. Personally selected at the quarries in Vermont. Will be sold at prices which defy competition.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

N. B.—Beware of Monuments and Headstones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered together, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide the imperfections, and called White Bronze.

H. B. HARRISON

ROBT. ASKIN,
UNDERTAKER,
MARKDALE,
FUNERAL FURNISHINGS
supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse
for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—
FURNITURE
In Stock at bottom prices.
PICTURE FRAMING
Done on short notice.
ROBT. ASKIN.

WM. BREADNER.
Carpender and Builder
GEORGE ST., MARKDALE.

ALL kinds of building and house carpenter work done in the village or country. Call early before the rush comes. 339-52

CARD OF THANKS.

In thanking my customers for their liberal patronage in the past. I have much pleasure in being still able to supply them with the following celebrated machines, viz.

The Watson all-steel two-horse twine Binder.
The Watson Deering Binder.
The Watson Improved Lion Reaper.
The New Humming Mower.
The Humming-bird Mower.
The Watson Daisy Rake.
The Mann Champion Rake.
The Tolten Pea Harvester.
The Mann Broad-east Seeder and Harrows Combined.
The Champion Combined Drill, Colter & Scott, Oshawa.
The best Plow's and Harrows in the market.
Root Cutters, Grain Crushers, Fanning mills. Land Rollers.
Agent for the Waterson's Co's Machinery and Steam Threshers.

Horse Powers, Wagons Buggies, Democrats, and every implement a farmer requires. Parties reqiring anything in above lines will find it to their advantage to call at my new implement house opposite R. McNally's Carriage works, where Mr. R. Robertson will be pleased to wait on customers in my absence.

J. H. CARSON, Agent
148-61 Markdale.

CANADIAN PACIFIC R. R.

TIME TABLE.

—Markdale Station—

GOING SOUTH.	6.47 a. m.	3.52 p. m.
GOING NORTH.	12.02 p. m.	9.10 p. m.

THE KEY TO HEALTH.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

Unlocks all the clogged avenues of the Bowels, Kidneys and Liver, carrying off gradually without weakening the system all the impurities and foul humors of the secretions; at the same time Correcting Acidity of the Stomach, curing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Headaches, Dizziness, Heartburn, Constipation, Dryness of the Skin, Dropsy, Dimness of Vision, Jaundice, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Scrofula, Fluttering of the Heart, Nervousness and General Debility; all these and many other similar Complaints yield to the happy influence of BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

Sample Bottles 10c; Regular size $1.

For sale by all dealers.

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, Toronto.

THE LIME-KILN CLUB.

In view of the recent disastrous explosions and conflagrations in different sections of the country, the Committee on Personal Safety and Non-injury have recommended the following rules to members of the club.

"Doan' scratch a match on yer leg onless prepared to jump ober de nighest fence.

"If you know dat a biler am gwine to explode, drap down on de ground an' keep yer mouf shut.

"Any pusson who smokes a clay pipe in bed should kiver de bowl with a piece of ole bootleg an' hire somebody to keep him awake.

"There should be no smoking in the vicinity of the club wood-box. Wood boxes am liable to explode at any moment, an' when dey does de scene of ruin an' desolashun am' nuff to appall de stoutest heart.

"Paradise Hall am liable to take fire any eavenin' when a meetin' ar' in progress. In case a fire ar' diskivered de outer guard should notify de inner guard. Dis latter gem'lan should quietly notify de Keeper of de Red Doah. Dis pusson should softly menshun de fack to de Keeper of de Sacred Relics, an' he in turn should enter de lodge room an' place de matter befo' de President.

"We recommend dat seben two-gallon jugs, each one full of water, be placed in de aunty-room as a precaushun.

"Also, dat de insurance on de hall be increased to sich a figger dat, in case it burns up an' Samuel Shin, Pickles Smith an' Judge Chewso ar' consumed wid it, deir loss will be our gain.

"We would furder recommend dat de janitor be supplied wid some sort of hand fire extinguisher. We doan mean anythin' costly an' elaborate, wid a picture of De Soto diskiverin' de Mississippi River painted on de side, but sunthin' combinin' utility an' cheapness."

On motion of Giveadam Jones the suggestions were adopted, and he then offered the following RESOLUTION :

Resolved, Dat dis Lime-Kiln Club, believin' dat de present styles of hand fire extinguishers ar' too complex, an' hev too much back-ackshun, hereby announce its willingness to incourage de inventive genius of de kentry by offerin' de sum of $50 to any pusson who shall invent a portable extinguisher hevin' de followin' merits :

1. Must wake up de folks when a fire breaks out.
2. Must be self-actin' an' hev no cog-wheels to git out o' order.
3. Must act as a thermometer when deir ar' no fire.

Must be cheap, strong an' simple, wid nuffin' about it to mildew or throw out the germs of yaller fever.

On motion of Col. Pompeii Parker the resolution was accepted, and the janitor was ordered to put all the matches in Paradise Hall into a pail of water every night before leaving.

A CLOSE CALL.

Judge Melancholy Smith then arose in quest of information. At one of the regular meetings last winter he made a motion in regard to a new treaty with Rhode Island Uncle Reuben Short seconded the motion. Offset Peters substituted an amendment. Astronomy Jackson supported the amendment. The President then laid the whole matter on the table and put to vote a resolution declaring that the Chinese must go. The Judge had been puzzled ever since that evening. He had carefully examined all the legislative proceedings, stated the matter to three different butchers, and had come to the conclusion that the President was wrong. He would like to ask what manual Brother Gardner used in deciding parliamentary questions.

"Judge Smith, does you reckon dat dis cha'r has time to fool around wid manuals?" severely replied the President. "It doan' make any difference to dis club what Shakspeare, Milton, Byron or any odder man writ. Dey writ fur white folks. Dey writ when times war' different. We go by de great constitushun of de United Staits. Under dat sacred dockerment dis cha'r can put a resolushun on de table or under it. He kin put de moshun or suppress it. He kin lay an amendment on de clock-shelf, or carry it home in his vest pocket. Does dat informashun satisfy you?"

"Y-yes, sah!"

"Werry well. De cha'r would kindly advise you to post yourself. Dar' am no occashun fur any pusson in dis kentry who kin read to remain in ignorance of what am going on around him. Resume yer seat, Brudder Smith, an' de fackt dat dis cha'r doan' fine you six hundred dollars for disturbin' de meetin' orter make you feel happy fur de next six weeks."

A QUESTION DECIDED.

The Hon. J. L. M. Johnson, Secretary of the Saw-Buck and Cordwood Association of Colored Gentlemen of Augusta, Ga., submitted the following.

"At de last meeting of dis association an effort was made by certain members to pass a resolushun to de effect dat a wood-sawyer should be looked upon by society simply as a carpenter temporarily out of a job at his trade. The vote on the resolution war' a tie, an' it war' agreed to leave de matter to de Lime-Kiln Club fur settlement."

"If a man who saws wood am to be looked upon as a carpenter out of a job said Brother Gardner in reply, "den de pusson who digs in de ditch may be regarded as a wood-sawyer who hain't got any woodpile to work at jist at present. De queshun am as broad as it ar' long, an' de pussons who voted fur de resolutions am evidently too high-toned fur de business of shovin' a buck-saw. Dey should git deirselves 'lected to de Legislachur."

OWING TO THE BREED.

A communication from the Secretary of the State of Ohio contained the inquiry: "Has the Lime-Kiln Club any statistics going to prove that only a certain breed of hogs can be raised in the State of Georgia? If so, what breed is it, and why is this thus?"

"Doorin' my trip frew Gawgia las' fall," said the President as he filed the letter away, "I saw but one breed of hogs. Dey was known as de Knife-Blade breed. Dey war' long, thin, wild-lookin' animals, all legs an' snout, an' de way dey disappeared from de view of a cull'd man would have made a fox ashamed of his gait. I made inquiries concernin' de hog an' his looks, an' inside of three days war' perfecktly satisfied dat he either had to be built that way or with a pa'r of wings. Any odder breed of hogs would hev bin in de cull'd man's pork bar'l inside of a week. If I war' gwine down to Gawgia to raise hogs I should lengthen the legs of de present breed about six inches mo', make 'em a leetle thinner in de body, an' calkerlate on deir bein' able to leap ober a fence or squeeze threw a knothole about fo' seconds too soon to be caught by de hind leg. De water pail will now be emptied of its contents as a precaushun agin spontaneous combustion, de key will be firmly nailed down, an' we will go home an' let de kentry run han-hazard fur a full week."

Our Queen.

Jubilee Ode to Her Majesty, Queen Victoria.

BY WILLIAM MATTHEWSON CLARK.

Fomoured Victoria, our beloved Queen,
Whose virtuous life adorns the British throne.
Tho' touched by grief thy tender heart hath been,
Think not thou hast been left to weep alone.

When Death, with all-relentless power, came near
And severing life's most sacred social tie,
Thine honored Consort, to thy heart most dear,
Transplanted to a fairer clime on high.

Full many a heart among thy social peers,
In deepest sympathy thy sorrows share,
While we in humbler walks have brought our tears
And borne thy cause before the Lord in prayer.

Full many a soul who kindred sorrow bears,
And of life's bitterest cup hath drank a part,
Hath felt the anguish of thy falling tears,
And shared the sadness of thy widowed heart.

And when the unwelcome messenger returns,
To claim the gentle Alice as his prize,
A sympathetic world in concert mourns—
A universal flag at half-mast flies.

Again the sorrow echoing knell is heard,
Again thy tender heart in grief is crushed;
The pale-horsed messenger unsheathes his sword,
And Leopold's gentle voice in death is hushed.

Again the echo of thy sorrow thrills
Each loyal heart throughout thy vast domain:
Again each loyal head is bowed, and fills
Each eye with sympathizing tears again.

These crushing griefs of thy erst happy reign,
Which cast their shadows o'er thy local sphere,
With all the ills that follow in their train,
But prove there's no abiding city here.

Yet while in retrospect o'er fifty years,
We trace thy life through scenes of joy and pain,
In gratitude we wipe the falling tear,
In memory of the blessings of thy reign.

When first the tidings of thy royal call,
At early dawning reached thy youthful ear,
First regal act, before His throne to fall,
And offer up thy charge to God in prayer.

When in the twilight of the morning shade,
That fervent, consecrative prayer arose,
Then Britain's corner stone was firmly stayed,
Secure beyond the reach of envious foes.

And while o'er Europe revolution sweeps,
And Monarch's from their lofty seats descend,
Thy throne's foundation still secure He keeps,
And wider still thy Empire's bounds extend.

Until thy reign, in humble trust begun,
So round the world asserts its gentle sway,
That o'er thy widening realm the rolling sun
His beams diffuse throughout revolving day.

Obedient millions wait for thy command,
The distant isles in thee their sovereign greet;
While haughty India bows to kiss thy hand,
And lays her jewelled sceptre at thy feet.

When power satanic nerves the murderous hand,
And base attempt upon thy life is made,
Around thy pathway guardian angels stand,
And spread their sacred pinions o'er thy head.

Let those who doubt the existence of a God,
Ascribe thy life to chance, or changeless fate;
Our God, who parts the sea by Moses' rod,
Our God, who did the universe create;

Whose watchful eye observes the sparrow's fall,
Whose hand directs the rolling orbs of light,
By whom our very hairs are numbered all,
Diverts that deadly bullet in its flight.

Thou art immortal till thy work is done,
Thou hast from God a mission to fulfill;
His hand, who placed thee on the British throne,
Still guards thy sacred life from every ill.

Revered Victoria! dear, thrice-honored name,
It thrills each loyal heart with honest pride;
And children's children shall rehearse thy fame,
Nor shall the lapse of time its lustre hide.

That name to each true British heart endeared,
By native virtues seeking no display;
Thy noble life on memory's mount hath reared
A monument that will not soon decay.

That name, revered, before the world shall stand—
The tender mother, gentle, loving wife,
Not only Queen, but Woman, true and grand—
New lustre shedding on our social life.

Long may the Crown of Britain grace thy head,
Long may thy hand the British sceptre bear!
Long o'er the realm may Peace her pinions spread,
Beneath the magic of thy gentle care.

And when at last thy work on earth is done,
And other hands shall grasp the reins below,
May'st thou obtain a mansion near the Throne,
And glory's diadem adorn thy brow.

Grandma.

BY ROBIN B. TRAVERSE.

Seated one day in her easy chair,
A dainty cap on her snow white hair
Her gold-rimmed glasses astride her rose,
Was grandma, knitting her winter hose.

As I sat and watched that dear, kind face,
Where Father Time left many a trace,
I wondered why it was wrinkled so,
And asked her if I would ever grow

Wasted and thin and bent with age.
"Oh yes," said grandma, "a certain page
Of your life, dear child, for you will hold
The fruits of age. You will grow old.

"And the golden locks that crown your brow
Will p'raps be whiter than mine are now,
And those little cheeks, so round and fair,
Will bear the impress of time and care.

"And those bonny eyes, so wondrous bright,
Will lose their lustre; that step so light
Will heavy grow as the years roll on,
And the freshness of youth will all be gone.

"The past holds all there was once for me,
Its memories cover my childhood's glee,
The days of my youth are buried there
With the happy smiles I used to wear."

She sighed, and the tears began to flow
As she peeped at the days of long ago,
And poor old grandma could not refrain
From wishing that she were young again.

More Mind, More Madness.

It is in no way surprising that insanity should seem to increase in races or classes which are being intellectually stimulated by education. There is always in every community a proportion of brains which, being brought into action, will break down. This proportion doubtless diminishes as the community is elevated, and in a very few generations the result of culture may—probably will—be to develop a better stock, looking at the people as a whole; but at the outset of the educationary process and in the generation first taught, the immediate result must be a considerable number of wreckings. This general principle is applicable to all races, peoples, and classes, and it explains why the first effect of trying to elevate the negroes has been to produce an apparent increase of insanity among them.

Those who have Tried it Say

The best proof of the great power of Polson's Nerviline over every kind of pain is obtained by the use of a 10 cent bottle. Nerviline requires no puffing; every bottle tells its own story. It cannot fail, for it is a combination of the most powerful pain-subduing remedies known to medical science. Nerviline is equally useful in external or internal pains. Try the great remedy. Ten cent bottle at any drug store. Large bottles only 25 cents.

THE ENERGETIC SMALL BOY.

The five-year-old son of Sheriff McClung, [illegible] was stolen for the four-year-old daughter of Henry Sills, a neighbor, and persuaded her to elope with him. They were captured in a village near by and taken home, but a day or two later they again eloped. Young McClung is now living on bread and water in his father's attic.

Johnny Stewart, a young Georgia lad, while roaming through the Okefinokee Swamp, met a panther face to face. Before the animal could spring at him the lad dropped to the ground and lay there as if dead. The beast pawed him over but did not harm him, and then covered the lad's body with leaves and loose brush. Then the panther left, and the local paper says that Johnny was not slow to follow his example.

Little Barney McMahon, the seven-year-old son of a prominent citizen of San Bernardino, Cal., shadowed a couple of thieves who were prowling about in the bush near his father's ranch, a few miles out of the city, and, after discovering the spot where they had secreted a mass of stolen plunder, mounted a horse, rode to town and notified his father. He then guided officers to the robbers' hiding place and the stolen property was recovered. The citizens are making up a purse for little Barney to show their appreciation of his detective ability.

John Beyman, of Akron, is only ten years old, but he is already an accomplished thief and has been in jail several times. His most recent exploit was the robbery of the tills of four stores in one afternoon, from which he secured $85. For this he was taken to the lockup, stripped of his clothing and placed in a cell in solitary confinement. During the night he escaped by squeezing his small body through the bars and, breaking into a clothing store, stole a new suit of clothes and robbed the money drawer. He was again captured, however, and is now under lock and key.

The cave at Hannibal, Mo., which Mark Twain made famous in his story of Tom Sawyer is still an object of curiosity to visitors, and excursion parties frequently come from up and down the river to explore it. Recently two bold boy bandits, aged twelve and fourteen years respectively, came down from Palmyra armed to the teeth, and, entering the cave while the guides were off duty, made ready to hold it by force and arms against all intruders. Building a bonfire just within the entrance, they retired to the dark recesses of the cavern to await developments. The developments came quickly enough in the shape of volumes of dense smoke, which choked and blinded the bold outlaws. They speedily lost their bearings, and during the entire night groped about on hands and knees, hungry and cold and thoroughly wretched. In the morning guides entered the cave and released them from their unwelcome captivity.

An Old Scottish Superstition.

Old Scottish people, or those conversant with the superstitions and customs of the country, are well aware of the efficacy of the cure which the ass was supposed to have wrought in the case of whooping-cough, and the following incidents will be read with interest:—One afternoon recently a curious display of superstition occurred at Maryhill, within view of the police office. Measles and whooping-cough are prevalent amongst children in the burgh at present, and a travelling candyman and rag-gatherer, with a cart drawn by an ass, drew up in front of a row of houses known as "Pirrat's Row," a little off the highway. Two children living in the quarter are suffering with whooping-cough. It has not transpired what compensation the proprietor of the ass received for the superstitious use made of it, in the belief that it would cure the children of the cough, but after a short conversation the mothers of the children took up a position on each side of the ass. One woman then took one of the children and passed it through below the ass's belly to the other woman, the child's face being towards the ground. The woman on the other side caught hold of the child, and, giving it a gentle somersault, handed it back to the other woman over the ass, the child's face being turned towards the sky. The process having been repeated three times, the child was taken away to the house, and then the second child was similarly treated. While this was going on two other children were quickly brought to undergo the magical cure. In order that the operation may have its due effect the ass must not be forgotten, and at the close of the ceremony each mother must carry her child to the head of the animal and allow it to eat something, such as bread or biscuits, out of the child's lap. This proceeding having been performed in turn by the four mothers, the prescribed course was concluded. When in began there were not many people present, but before it was finished quite a crowd of spectators had gathered. From inquiries made afterwards, it seems the mothers are thoroughly satisfied that their children are the better of the enchantment.

THE ASSESSMENT SYSTEM.

Large Insurance Claim Paid—Endorsement of the Mutual Reserve.

Office of W. D. MATTHEWS & Co., Grain and Produce Merchants, Toronto, 11th May, 1887.

J. D. Wells, Esq., General Manager Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association.:

DEAR SIR,—We beg to acknowledge receipt of cheque for Five Thousand Dollars in full of claim under a policy of insurance issued to us by the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association for that amount, as creditors of the late Edwin C. Fisher.

We have much pleasure in bearing testimony to the prompt and satisfactory manner in which this claim has been adjusted, and at the same time to express our confidence in your association. Having an intimate acquaintance with your President and chief officers, we know them to be gentlemen of the highest integrity, and in whose hands we believe the interests of the members of the Mutual Reserve are perfectly safe.

Wishing your association continued success.

Yours truly, W. D. MATTHEWS & Co.

"Why haven't I a 600-acre farm as well as that man riding by in his carriage?" yelled a red-nosed Anarchist orator, as he glared at the crowd. "Because he saved $600 and bought his farm when it cost him $1 an acre, and you poured your $600 down your throat!" responded a man on the back seat, and the orator asked no more conundrums.

Buxom widow: "Do you understand the language of flowers, Dr. Crusty?" Dr. Crusty (an old bachelor): "No, ma'am." Widow: "You don't know if yellow means jealousy?" Dr. Crusty: "No, ma'am. Yellow means billiousness."

SNOW DRIFT THE FAVORITE
THERE IS NO BETTER
BAKING POWDER
The Snow Drift Baking Powder Co., Brantford, Ont.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships

Sailing during winter from Portland every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via Halifax and St. John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland, Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal, weekly. Glasgow and Boston weekly; and Glasgow and Philadelphia, fortnightly.

For Freight, passage, or other information apply to J. Johnmacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's N. F., Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans Rae & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; H. A Allan Portland Boston Montreal.

MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO.
MANUFACTURE ONLY
FINEST
Silver Plated Ware.
Artistic Designs, combined with Unequalled Durability and Finish.
HAMILTON, ONT.

PEARL PEN AND PENCIL STAMP
WITH NAME 50C
Postage 6 Cts. Extra

FINGLEY & STEWART M'F'G CO.
TORONTO, ONT.
Please mention this Paper when writing.

MAY APPLE BLOOD SYRUP

THE GREATEST DISCOVERY of the present age for REGULATING THE BOWELS, AND CURING ALL BLOOD, LIVER AND KIDNEY COMPLAINTS.

A PERFECT BLOOD PURIFIER.

A few in Hamilton who have been benefited by its use:—Mrs. M. Russell, 182 Wellington St., cured of Erysipelas of 2 years' standing; Robert Cornell, 24 South St., daughter cured of Epileptic Fits after 6 years' suffering; Jennie Birrell, 55 Walnut St., cured of Weakness and Lung Trouble; John Wood 95 Cathcart St., cured of Liver Complaint and Biliousness, used only 3 fifty-cent bottles; Mrs. J. Beal, 6 Augusta St., troubled for years with Nervous Prostration, two small bottles gave her great relief. Sold at 50c. & $1
F. F. DALLEY & CO., Proprietors.

AGENTS APPLY TO THE N.W. READLE
Awnings! Waterproof dew Wholesale tail, at CREATED GOLD MEDAL TENT MANUFACTORY, 70 West, Toronto. NATIONAL MANUFACTURE

Royal Dandelion Coffee
A Delicious and nourishing Breakfast Beverage, contains a proportion of German Dandelion Root, acts medicinally on the Liver and Stomach, purifies the blood and invigorating the system. Prepared only by ELLIS & KEIGHLEY,
TORONTO.

ELEVATOR DITCHING MACHINE
FOR UNDERDRAINING.
One man with The Elevator Ditching Machine can do more work than thirty men with spades.
Manufactured by WM. RENNIE, TORONTO

BABY'S BIRTHDAY.
A Beautiful Imported Birthday Card sent to any baby whose mother will send us the names of two or more other babies, and their parents' addresses. Also a handsome Diamond Dye Sample Card to the mother and much valuable information.
Wells, Richardson & Co., Montreal.

The National ELECTRO & STEREOTYPE Co.
23 ADELAIDE ST. E., TORONTO.
All classes of fine work. Mfrs. of Printers' Leads, Slugs and Metal Furniture. Send for prices.

ONTARIO CANOE COMPANY
Peterboro', Ont

MANUFACTUR'S OF ALL KINDS OF CANOES
Send 2c. Stamp for Catalogue.

I CURE FITS!
When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you. Address DR. H. G. ROOT,
Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto.

Lardine.
THIS SPLENDID MACHINE OIL! Has never failed to take the highest awards wherever exhibited.
It Has No Equal. Farmers, Threshers and Millmen Use No Other.
This Oil keeps the Machinery in first-rate working order, thereby lessening the chances of accidents and breakdowns. To be had of all first-class dealers. Beware of imitations!
Try our 600 Fire Test Cylinder Oil. Harness, Bolt Cutting, Wool and Lard Oil, always in stock.
SOLE MANUFACTURERS OF LARDINE.
McCOLL BROS. & CO., - - TORONTO.

CONFEDERATION LIFE ASS'N.
OUR LAST NOTICE
In this paper referred to the Annual Meeting of the Association. This meeting (being the 15th since the Company was organized) took place on Tuesday, the 12th April, when the following gratifying increases were announced:

PREMIUM INCOME INCREASED FOR YEAR, -	$ 96,894.
INTEREST AND RENTS, - - - - -	13,029.
ASSETS, - - $356,375. SURPLUS,	80,234.

$260,420 Were allocated as Profits to Policy Holders. Profits payable on and after May 1st.
J. K. MACDONALD, Managing Director.

The Original Wood Cook.
THE MOST PERFECT WORKING STOVE YET INTRODUCED.
Elegant in Design and Finish, Massive in Appearance, A Charm for the Kitchen.

Has the Largest Oven, The Best Fire-Box, Heaviest Castings.
MADE IN 10 DIFFERENT STYLES AND SIZES. FOR SALE BY ALL THE LEADING DEALERS.
MANUFACTURED BY
THE E. & C. GURNEY CO., (L'D), TORONTO.
Dealers who have not yet seen this STOVE should secure the sale of it at once.

APPLY TO THE
...W. BEARDMORE & CO.
ST. CLEMENTS
...gs!
...dew
...Whitening and Fa...
...ball...
T MANUFACTORY, 79 King S...
ONAL MANUFACTURED O...
...delion
Coffee.
...ing Breakfast Beverage, ...
...rman Dandelion Root, which ...
...Liver and Stomach, purifying ...
...ting the system. Prepared ...
KEIGHLEY,
ONTO.

CHING MACHINE
ERDRAINING.
evator Ditching Machine
n thirty men with spades
M. RENNIE. TORONTO.
BIRTHDAY.
Imported Birthday Card sent hose mother will send us the r more other babies, and their ses. Also a handsome Dia-pple Card to the mother and nformation.
ison & Co., Montreal.
...O & STEREOTYPE ...
ST. E., TORONTO.
... Mfrs. of Printers' Leads, ...
... Send for prices.
CANOE COMPANY
Peterboro', Ont

KINDS OF CANOES
atalogue.
FITS!
...ean merely to stop them for a ...turn again. I mean a radical
... of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALL-
...udy. I warrant my remedy
...ause others have failed is no
...g a cure. Send at once for a
... my infallible remedy. Give
...costs you nothing for a trial,
DR. H. G. ROOT,
...ange St., Toronto.
the highest awards where-
...ibited.
Use No Other.
...e chances of accidents and
...itting, Wool and
...NE.
TORONTO.
...ION
...N.
...CE
the Associa-
Company
...e 12th
$ 96,894.
13,029.
80,234.
... to Policy
...n and after
...g Director.
Cook.
TRODUCED.
Has the Largest Oven,
The Best Fire-Box,
Heaviest Castings.
...E LEADING DEALERS.
ORONTO.
...at once.

HOUSEHOLD.

Method.

If a mother desires her daughters to make the best of their coming future, she will teach them, by example, the observance of order and method. I say by example, because she can never teach them by precept alone; she must be a living example of the results flowing from the performance of every duty in its due season. By method alone, and only by method, can a busy housewife win any portion of leisure for study, thought and self-improvement.

If the mother of daughters will stop to ask herself some such questions as the following—namely, Am I making the best possible use of my time? Is this the best hour to do the task I am now engaged in, or would it be better for me to do some other? Is what I am doing likely to produce any good results? If not, what shall I do to bring forth some fruit for future as well as present good? Am I doing the best I can do with my powers, and am I by my example bringing up my children in the way that will be wisest for them to follow? Or, am I doing anything with a set purpose beyond preparing food and clothing and cleaning house; and am I doing that with any wise method?

If a woman cannot answer these self-put questions satisfactorily, then she may be sure she is not acting wisely nor well by herself or her children. I have often heard women criticised severely for being too methodical and too strict in their requirements in the matter of service from their children or from hired servants, and I have so often heard others condemned for a total want of system, allowing everything to be done or omitted at haphazard. Of the two, I prefer the woman with too much method to the woman without any, for at least there is some hope of good work from her, independent of good living, because she has leisure, that great blessing from which so many good things may follow. It is both reasonable and proper to desire and secure leisure and recreation; indeed, every one who performs his or her duties in the best manner deserves both; but there is a vast difference between wasted time and leisure, and also between idle pleasure and recreation. Neither an idle or an unsystematic person can know the beauty or meaning of leisure or recreation; that is reserved for the methodical hard worker.

If any thinking person will ponder on the ways of two families widely differing from each other as to their manner of conducting their households, or letting the household run itself, the balance of opinion of that thinking person will, I am sure, be struck in favor of the housekeeper who conducts her household, and against that housekeeper who lets her house run itself at sixes and sevens.

It is never too late to learn, runs an old proverb; but the clause might be added, provided one is willing to learn; and this holds true with the housekeeper. The great trouble, however, is to get people to think and to conquer rooted habits, and this furnishes one of the most powerful reasons why mothers should examine their own ways, remedy their own deficiencies, and make themselves fit to be instructors by example. A mother may preach and preach about order, but if she has no idea of it in the way of practice her preaching will be in vain. A daughter is very likely to follow in the footsteps of her mother. If her mother never has a place for anything or a regular time for duties, and consequently no genuine leisure, the daughter will in time run her household in the same manner, losing one half of her valuable time, trying vainly to catch up with the lost hours.

Choice Receipts.

Aunt Jenny's Rusks.—One pint of milk, one teacupful of butter, one cup of sugar, one cup of yeast, mix stiff, and set it in a warm place to rise three hours.

Molasses Candy.—One cup of molasses, two cups of sugar, one tablespoon of vinegar a little butter and vanilla; boil ten minutes; then cool it enough to pull.

White Cake.—One and one-half cups of sugar, one-half cup of butter, whites of four eggs, two-thirds of a cup of milk, one teaspoon of baking powder. Bake in loaves.

Cocoanut Drops.—To one grated cocoanut add half its weight of sugar and the white of one egg, whip to a stiff froth; mix thoroughly and drop on white buttered paper or tin sheets. Bake fifteen minutes.

Egg Sauce.—Work a tablespoonful of flour into half a cup of butter, pour over it one-half cup of boiling water, when smooth add a cup of hot milk; let it simmer five minutes, then add two hard boiled eggs, chopped fine. Season with salt and pepper.

Chocolate Caramels.—Two cups of brown sugar, one of molasses, one cup of chocolate grated fine, one cup of boiled milk, one tablespoon of flour; butter the size of an English walnut, let it boil slowly, then pour on flat tins to cool; mark off while warm.

Strawberry Syrup.—Take ripe strawberries, crush them in a cloth, and press the juice from them; to each pint of it put a pint of simple syrup, boil gently for one hour, then let it become cold and bottle it; cork and seal it. To serve reduce to taste with water, set it on ice, and pour in small tumblers. Raspberry syrup is made in this way.

Lemon Syrup.—Take the juice of twelve lemons, grate the rind of six in it, let it stand over night, then take six pounds of sugar, and make thick syrup. When it is quite cool strain the juice into it, and squeeze as much oil from the grated rind as will suit the taste. A tablespoonful in a goblet of water will make a delicious drink on a warm day.

Sponge Cake Pudding.—Butter a pudding mold; fill the mold with small sponge cakes or slices of stale plain cake that have been soaked in a liquid made by dissolving one-half pint of jelly in a pint of hot water. Make a sufficient quantity of custard to fill the mold, and leave as much more to be boiled in a dish by itself. Set the mold, after being tightly covered, into a kettle and boil one hour. Turn out of the mold and serve with some of the other custard poured over it.

Chocolate Cake.—One-half cup of butter one cup of sugar, and one-half cup of flour, one-half cup of milk, two eggs beaten separately, one teaspoonful of cream of tartar, one-half teaspoonful of soda and two and one-half tablespoonfuls of chocolate. Dissolve the chocolate over the steaming teakettle in a saucer, beat into it a little of the cake mixture, then beat it into the whole of the cake mixture. Flavor with vanilla, and beat it briskly just before putting into the oven. It makes one large loaf. If desired darker in color, put in more chocolate.

Corned Beef.—Put corned beef into cold water to boil. It takes out the excess of salt while putting it into hot water makes it hard and tough. Keep it closely covered while boiling to prevent the loss of nutriment in steam. Cook slowly till the bones will fall out, then pack the meat in a deep dish, mixing well together the lean and fat in proportion. Next let the liquor get cold and remove the fat that rises, which may be used as drippings for frying; then boil down this broth till there is just enough, when poured over the meat, to fill in the spaces between the pieces. Lay over the whole a flat cover that will fit into the dish, put on a heavy weight and allow to stand till cold.

Around the House.

Squeaking Hinges.—A drop of kerosene or sweet oil, a little candle tallow, or a slight application of soap, will stop the squeak of door-latches or chairs.

When your cane-seat chairs begin to wear out, mend the break the best you can by weaving in cords, or if very bad, replace with a piece of canvas securely tacked on; put on a generous layer of cotton batting or curled hair, and cover with a piece of any kind of upholstery goods, an embroidered pattern, crazy patchwork, or a large "log-cabin" block. Finish the edge with furniture gimp, and fringe if desired. The back may be finished with a similar panel.

The following is described as a pretty way to make vestibule curtains: Cut white tarletan enough larger than the glass to admit of an inch wide hem all around. Cut from large figured cretonne, of satin finish, flowers, leaves and butterflies if possible. Make a thin starch paste and paste the figures on the tarletan in sprays and wreaths. Turn on the wrong side and press until dry with a flatiron. The light shines through them and they have the effect of being painted.

Out of a discarded carpet of large size, enough that is bright and clean can often be got to make a square or rug for the centre of the room; then the floor around can be stained with walnut or cherry stain. This fashion of rug and stained floor is in every way desirable in summer time. It gives a cool, refreshing, artistic appearance to the room. It does away with the dust constantly arising from an all over carpet, for the rug can be taken out of the house and beaten clean whenever necessary. Unfortunately some floors are too rough and poor to be stained. In that case take the good parts of the old carpet to cover around the sides of the floor, and buy for the centre of the room one of the "squares" that come for that purpose.

PEARLS OF TRUTH.

Sir Andrew Clarke defines health as that state in which the body is not consciously present to us—the state in which work is easy and duty not overgreat a trial, in which it is a joy to see, to think, to feel, and to be.

Life needs for its happiness, and character for its stability, a definite aim, energetically and regularly pursued. Whatever monotony there is in that is itself an element of happiness which men cannot afford to do without. It gives security, confidence, and trust in themselves and in each other. It gives zest to life and makes relaxation possible and pleasurable.

As the pleasure the year finds in rhyme is said to arise from it as recurrence at measured periods, from the gratified expectation that at certain intervals certain effects will be repeated, so it is in life; the recurrence of the things that are the same or similar, the content in the fulfilment of expectations so familiar and so gentle that we are scarcely conscious that they were formed, have a harmony and a charm, and often make the only difference between life's poetry and its prose.

Nearly every intelligent youth knows something of his own bias. He knows whether he is inclined to be hasty or phlegmatic, idle or diligent, frugal or extravagant, selfish or generous. If, according to this knowledge, he will cultivate assiduously those qualities in which he is deficient, seeking opportunity for their exercise and resolutely bringing them to the front whenever they fall into the rear, he will acquire an ever-increasing power of self control that will go far towards establishing and strengthening a well-balanced and harmonious character.

How the London Coster Takes His Pleasure.

With a few exceptions this peculiar race who, with their families in London, certainly number 150,000, and some claim 200,000, are ignorant. Unlike the British workman, they rarely or never read. They frequent the galleries of the theatres in their respective quarters of London, and guy the performers with cat-calls and ejaculations. I have seen them hanging half over the gallery of a Whitechapel theatre, with coat and waistcoat off, and hat on and sleeves turned up, now watching a double shuffle with rapt attention, now cheering the actors with "Go it, my tulip," "Speak up, my gal," "Light up the moon." Again they are urging on the attendant fiddlers with "Faster, you catgut scrapers," as the sailor dancing a hornpipe becoms more violent in his gyrations.

If the curtain is delayed you may expect "Pull up that 'ere winder blind" from the younger costers in the gallery. In many cases the singers ask for a chorus from the "gods," and sometimes add by way of a joke, "and now for a regular Hexeter 'All touch." The gallery is convulsed.

Lyra Hibernica.

Me darlin', I sind ye dhis letther,
To loosen the luve in me heart,
An' break the bellegherent fetther
What kape s us so woldely apart;
Me pin puts the wurds on the pahper
So fasht I can't kape it in ink,
And Cupid, the lad's cu a cahper—
Now—phwat do ye think?

He's blistered me sore wid his arrow,—
I'm shlowly expirin' away!
He hoides in me hod an' me barrow,
An' faix he is cum there to shtay.
O think, Biddy dear, in phwat danger
Me loife ivry day has to run,
To foight wid this therrible shtranger
Phwat carries a gun!

Now ye are the wan, me dear Biddy,
To set all this throuble aroight.
He'll not foight wid you,—if he did he Wad call ye swate names in the foight.
So, swate darlin', Biddy McGuinnis,
Soy yis, an' it's married we'll be;
An' that's a most beautiful Finis
For Cupid an' me.

LATE FOREIGN NEWS.

In the Reichstag a bill has passed its second reading abondoning Trieste and Brindisi and substituting Genoa as a port of call for German steamers running to China and Australia.

It is reported that Prince Bismarck has promised the Pope his moral support in claiming the Leonine City and the stretch of territory to Civita Vecchia as a basis for reconciliation with Italy.

The Russian government threatens to prohibit the use in Lutheran churches of prayer books and hymnals printed in the German language. The suppression of German teaching in the Dorpat University is imminent.

Professor Esmark, who married Henrietta, aunt of Princess William, has been ennobled, though previously ignored by the royal family. It is surmised that he owes his ennoblement to his skill as a surgeon, as his services are desired for the Crown Prince.

A German professor says he has discovered that the Egyptians made beer before the time of Moses. There is nothing new about that. The trade mark of Bass ale is a red pyramid, as all who are acquainted with the bottled article know. What does that mean if not that the Egyptians drank Bass' ale and painted the pyramids red hereafter?

Lord Tennyson's severe attacks of poetry have culminated in gout, and he is to spend June in the Stella, coasting down Devonshire and Cornwall. To Lewis Morris, the author of "The Epic of Hades," as the Laureate's under study, has in consequence been assigned the task of writing the inaugural ode on the foundation of the Imperial Institute.

The Rev. E. Walpole Warren, who is to assume Rectorship of Holly Trinity Church in New-York, will not leave England until September. He is very much like his father, the genial author of "Ten Thousand a Year," in his appearance and manner, and will make a notable addition to the American pulpit. His ministry at Holy Trinity, Lambeth, has been eminently successful.

In Paris everybody says the Rouvier Ministry is likely to tumble within a month, but nobody is able to guess what combination of votes in the Chamber will effect this. The basis of this belief seems to be the unexpected quiet of Gen. Boulanger and his crowd. Wisely or not, this is taken to be a sign of self-assured strength, the manifestation of which is only deferred in order to be made more striking then it comes.

The effacement of Gen. Boulanger is taking some eccentric forms. A pipemaker at Metz has been arrested for exposing for sale pipes made in imitation of the General's head. The authorities did not look upon them as pipes of peace and confiscated his stock in trade. The most popular French song for half a generation, "Returning from the Review," which wound up with a rousing chorus, "Vive le General Boulanger," has been prohibited by the Censors unless the name of the ex-Minister is eliminated.

Years ago it became apparent that the Kaiser William was an extremely unsatisfactory man to predict about, and this has become such a superstition now that all his ailments and signs of failing are discounted by the theory that he is not susceptible to ordinary ills. Yet he is under the weather, and it is daily expected that we shall learn that his visit to the East has been abandoned. There is an undercurrent of persistent rumors that the Crown Prince is worse than announced, and that his visit to the jubilee ceremonies is a cloak for a desperate chance that the English climate and the softness of the air may help his trouble.

The news from Tonquin is very alarming. An epidemic of cholera is making havoc among the troops; but there was so much trouble at home and so much public discontent brewing beneath the surface of apathetic indifference, that the Government neglected to cause an alarm until there was no means of concealing the malady of M. Bihourd the successor of Paul Bert. When the Government was interviewed by some of the influential members of the press, M. Fallieres preserved his veracity and the obligations of the situation by stating simply that the condition of affairs in the delta of the Red River was no worse than last year. The immediate result must be the sending out of fresh troops and new victims, and the tempest will break forth when the financial discussion comes up before the Deputies. This will take place apparently as soon as the squabling permits the election of a President of the Council in place of M. Rouvier. The two candidates are M. Deluris-Montaud and M. Degauches, the latter an extreme Radical who was notoriously prominent in his opposition to the formation of the present Ministry.

It is the pleasure of all well constituted minds to believe that the war scare is over for a year at least. It is not an infallible rule that the year which gets on into the solstice without bloodshed will finish peacefully, as witness the experience of 1870; but the tendency to such tranquil faith is perennially strong. For a moment, very little is heard of the Czar, who so long was painted as the one implacably warlike figure on the horizon. He is left now to shiver at the spectres of Nihilism during what time he is not fretting over the hopless malady of his wife's favorite sister, the Duchess of Cumberland, and the presumably distracted state of Bulgaria, which for such a lengthened period kept Europe in a broil of expectancy but is now forgotten altogether. Nothing seems to come of the troubles in Alsace, and in fact, the whole war cloud of two months ago has so completely cleared away that journalists, who must wrangle about something, are driven to go back about 12 years and squabble over an old abortive plot of Radowitz and Gortschakoff for their amusement.

The late revelations of the supplanting of English workmen in all trades by Germans, Poles, Dutch, and Swiss have created widespread indignation and suffering among the laboring classes. Baking in London is almost entirely in the hands of Germans, The English waiter, Robert, will ere long be as extinct as the dodo, a fossil under the avalanche of French and Swiss. Many thousands of poor Dutch have swamped the shoe making trade in East London. Sons of wealthy German families come in shoals to take positions in English business houses at nominal rates, and evict the poorly paid English clerk. The English sawdust floored chophouse gives place to the Italian restaurant. New-Zealand mutton supplants the Southdown and the American sugar-cured the Yorkshire ham. No wonder the cry of "England for the English" is growing, when every day the native becomes smaller and the foreigner is ever gaining. "When are we to adopt the American example?" asks the Globe. "We utterly receive every foreigner who chooses England for his country, but the dregs of American emigration."

Sacred Cats.

Accustomed as we are to look on cats simply as domestic pets, it may seem strange to us that they should have been regarded by any people as objects of extreme veneration and respect. Yet this was the case amongst the ancient Egyptians. The sacred animals of these people are numerous, and great was the care bestowed upon them; but none were held in more esteem than our humble friend the cat.

It was revered as an emblem of the moon, on account of the different spots upon its body, its activity during the night, and a variety of other reasons.

Little is known distinctly of the worship accorded to any of the sacred animals, or birds, but it is certain that they were kept by the people of Egypt at great expense, and that more attention was given to them than to any other members of the household. In case of fire the greatest exertions were put forth to save them, whatever might become of the other valuable property in the house.

It is even related that during a great famine, which prevailed at one time over all the land, when hunger proved too much for the finer feelings of the Egyptains and they devoured each other, not a man was known to touch or taste one of the sacred animals.

Indeed the severest penalties followed on the slightest injury done to any of them.

If a man killed any of these creatures on purpose he was put to death. If he did so unwittingly, the case was sometimes referred to the priests for decision; but if he were the means of killing a hawk, an ibis, or a cat, whether intentionally or not, he died without mercy.

Nor were the cats less respected after their death then during their lifetime.

If one died, the whole family to which it belonged devoted itself to mourning the sad event, and prayed and fasted for several days.

The body was almost always embalmed, in very much the same manner as human remains were treated, and the costliest funerals took place, very often the cat-mummy being carried from remote parts of the country to be buried at the sacred city of Bubastis.

Even at this day, cats are as numerous in Cario as dogs, and although many of them are homeless they are still kindly treated by the natives, and there is even a royal foundation for such of them as are destitute. The reason given by the people themselves for the partiality they evince for these animals is, that their prophet Mohammed was supposed to be exceedingly fond of them.

It is, however, just possible that one may be right in regarding it as a relic of the extreme veneration and esteem in which they used to be held by the ancient Egyptians.

Longevity.

When mankind receives the wise raising and training that is expended on horses and cattle, the Scriptural limit of three score and ten will be removed to at the five score. It has been estimated that the normal longevity of an animal is five times its period of growth. This rule gives a lion twenty, a dog ten, a camel forty, and a horse twenty-five years. Men's twenty years of growth, by this calculation entitles him to one hundred. The French chemist Chevreul, of Paris, has reached his hundredth year, with a vigor and clearness of intellect undimmed, and in a world comparatively ignorant of the highest laws of life; and while he is at present an extreme, it is indicative of what is possible to all, under better training and a greater degree of enlightenment. Other extremes have gone many years beyond this. Noah Raby, of Plainfield, New Jersey, is 114, and supports himself by his work in the summer, and looks like a man of eighty.

Longevity has its basis in the higher faculties. Women, having feebler bodies, but stronger moral natures, rank higher in longevity than men. Of sudden deaths there are seven times more of men than of women. The life force organizes a body in accordance with its own character, and this vital force is affected by its environments, in the nature of education, air, food and motives. The human body is a tenement, of which life is the builder. We shall not easily be released from the influence of any false opinion into which we have been educated, but we can continue to make heroic and noble struggles, and thereby enjoy increasing hopes.

A Sepoy Soldier Runs Amuck.

A shocking tragedy occurred at Kurrachee, India, on the 20th of last month. A Sepoy of the Twentysixth Native Infantry having got possession of fortyrounds of ammunition, ran amuck through the lines at 1 o'clock in the morning. He first shot two Sepoys who were asleep in the barrack veranda. The alarm was immediately sounded and the regiment turned out, but nothing could be done till daylight, when detachments were sent in various directions to search for him. Meanwhile the murderer had proceeded to the soldiers' bazar and had shot four shopkeepers who were sleeping outside their houses. He then went to the plain behind the infantry lines and shot five cartmen. When he found that the regiment had turned out, he took refuge in a stone inclosure, whence he fired many rounds. The Colonel called for volunteers to rush in upon him, and two Sepoys responded. When they got within six yards of him he shot himself through the heart. The eleven men whom he had shot were killed on the spot or died in a few hours.

A Lively Visitor.

Frank Muldoon occupies a cabin on his claim three miles above Vance, W. T. On returning from work one night he found that something had been in his cabin and strewn things around promiscuously. He supposed the intruder to be a dog, but the next evening on approaching the house a panther ran out of it, taking in in his mouth a side of bacon. That night the animal was heard by Muldoon but not seen. On the following day Muldoon took his gun with him to work, leaving the house securely fastened, but on returning in the evening a racket inside was evidence that Mr. Panther was at his evening meal. Investigation showed he had torn off several boards from the back of the house. Muldoon shouted to bring him out, and in a moment his head appeared at the hole, when Muldoon shot him in the neck. The wound was fatal, but did not cause death until the panther had spattered his blood all over the house and demolished everything in it.

STATISTICS.

In 1875 Ceylon could export only 1,400 lb. of tea. In 1885 the quantity exported amounted to 4,350,000 lb.

While the average annual quantity of wine produced in the whole of France for the years 1880 to 1884 was 728,254,758 gallons, the production for the last-named year was 765,175,972 gallons.

The value of the paraffin industry of Scotland is estimated to be over £2,500,000 a year. In 1871 she raised only 800,000 tons of shale to be employed in oil-manufacture, and produced from it 25,000,000 tons, and the supply of lamp-oil to 62,712 000 gallons.

The number of live-stock in Great Britain on June 4 last was as follows: Cattle 6,646,785, which show increases of 0·7 per cent. and 6 per cent. upon the two previous years. In all other creatures the numbers show a steady reduction since 1884—as follows: Sheep, 16,176,410, the diminution being respectively 2·2 and 1·3 per cent.; lambs 9,344,924, being reductions of 6·5 and 3·5 per cent.; and pigs, 2,221,557, being reductions of 7·6 per cent. upon last year and of 14 per cent. upon 1884.

The nominal strength of the Russian Army is 2,000,000 men on a war footing, and nearly 800,000 on a peace footing. The effective strength of the French Army under colours is about 510,000 soldiers; but in time of war, including all reserves; it amounts to a total of 3,750,000 men. In 1884 the German Army, on a peace footing, consisted of 430,000 privates and nearly 20,000 officers; while on a war footing the total strength amounts to 1,500,000 privates and 36,000 officers, exclusive of the Landsturm. The Austro-Hungarian Empire shows 270,000 men and 17,500 officers upon a peace footing, and can muster 1,050,000 private and 32,000 officers in the time of war.

Beer and Whiskey Drinking in the United States.—The consumption of beer in the United States in 1885 was greater than ever before. No less than 642,000,000 gallons were consumed. Reckoning the population at 59,257,090, the consumption of beer appears to have been 10·83 gallons for every inhabitant, babies included. Considering that a large part of the population does not consume beer this seems to imply an enormous consumption by those who do, and yet, since those who use beer at all certainly consume as much as half a pint daily, they would at that rate get rid of 23 gallons each. Apparently the consumption is about equivalent to a pint a day for halt the adult population. The increase in the consumption of whiskey was 1,606,108 gallons, which makes the consumption for the year 70,763,010 gallons, or 1·19 gallon per capita.

Degrading Hospitality.

The fashion of degrading hospitality to utilitarian uses is one of the most powerful causes of the decline in the grade of social standards. When people are invited from political influence; when hospitality is made a bribe in matters mercantile, pecuniary, or pertaining to social advancement; when the fashion reporter is given the entree of a house in recompense for advertising; when, in a word, hospitality is made an affair of barter, its dignity quickly disappears. The man who extends social favours to people from whom he wishes substantial returns degrades his own hospitality so that it ceases to be an honour, and he is left with nothing to offer his friends except the worthless imitation of a noble institution.

A Curious Clock.

A correspondent describes a clock recently patented in France, in imitation of a tambourine, on the parchment, head of which is painted a circle of flowers corresponding to the hour figures of ordinary dials. On examination, two bees, one large and the other small, are discovered crawling among the flowers. The small bees run rapidly from one flower to another, completing the circle in an hour, while the large one takes twelve hours to finish the circuit. The parchment surface is unbroken, and the bees simply laid upon it, but two magnets, connected with the clockwork inside the tambourine, move just under the membrane, and the insects, which are of iron, follow them

Good Enough for the Pig.

A poor Irishman was standing in the door of his little cabin, clothed with corduroy breeches and gray stockings.

A pig was playing inside with his children. A passing Englishman said to him: "My good fellow, why do you allow that pig in your house?"

"Hasn't the house every accommodation that a reasonable pig could require?" answered Pat.

Certainly.

Young physician—"How are you getting on this morning?"

Patient—"I hardly know; pretty slow, I fancy."

Y. P.—"Did you take the prescription I left?"

"Oh, yes."

Y. P.—"Feel any worse?"

"No-no."

Y. P., decidely—"Ah; I must change the prescription."

A Good Bird Dog.

"Say, didn't you tell me when you sold me that dog that he was a bird dog."

"Yes, that's what I said."

"Well you swindled me. That dog won't hunt."

"I didn't say he would hunt. He's a bird dog. Cook the birds for him. That's the way he likes them best."

He Stood High.

"How about this young man that comes so often to see you, Millie?" said the old gentleman to his daughter.

"Why he's very nice and entertaining, papa, I'd like to have you meet him."

"Very likely. But what is his position? Does he stand high in society?"

"Oh, yes indeed, papa. He is six feet two."

A Very Knowing Dog.

"Is that your dog?" the new customer asked of the barber.

"Yes, sir."

"He seems quite fond of watching you cut hair."

"Oh, it's not that, sir. Only sometimes the scissors slips, sir, and takes a little bit off a gent's ear."

Jas. S. Freeborn,

—M. D. Ch.; M. L. K. & Q. C. P. I.—

Doctor of Medicine and master of Surgery Victoria. Univ. Licentiate of King's and Queen's College of Physicians in Ireland. Member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Ont. Formerly acting Surgeon of B. Battery, R. C. A. Quebec. Late resident of the Rotunda Lying-in Hospital, Dublin.

—OFFICE—

STEPHEN'S DRUG STORE.

Drs. Sproule & Brodie,

—PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS,—

MARKDALE.

Dr. Sproule's office Turner's Drug Store

Dr. Brodie's office Mathew s block.

P. McCullough.

BARRISTER, SOLICITOR, &c

OFFICE—OVER McFARLAND'S STORE,

MARKDALE.

Money to Loan.

MASSON & MASSON,

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, &c.

Offices—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block, Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week.

J. Masson, Q. C. S. Masson. W. Masson.

N. B.—Private and Company's funds to invest at from 6 to 8 per cent

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate se curitv.

WILLIAM STUART,

KIMBERLEY,

Issuer of Marriage Licences. Money to Loan on Real Estate at low rates.

A few Farms for sale. Terms easy.

NOTICE.

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.

will visit Markdale for the practice of his profession on Thursday and Friday following the first Monday in each month, and at Flesherton the following day, Saturday.

MARKDALE HOUSE,

MARKDALE, - - ONT.

J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

ISAAC STINSON.

Builder and Contractor

In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.

Estimates given. All work guaranteed.

Orders by mail promptly attended to.

329 Residence, MARKDALE.

W. C. RICHARDS,

BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT, Markdale.

1241y

WEAVING.

Having returned to Markdale, in order to be more convenient for my customers, I beg to announce that I am now prepared to do all kinds of Custom Weaving, Residence old stand, opposite Presbyterian Church.

318 ARCH. BOYD.

R. J. SPROULE,

FLESHERTON.

Conveyancer, Appraiser, Valuator and Money Lender. Deeds, Mortgages, Leases and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice. Charges very low. Apply to

R. J. SPROULE,

Money Lender & Postmaster. Flesherton.

HAGYARD'S YELLOW OIL CURES RHEUMATISM

FREEMAN'S WORM POWDERS.

Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure, and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults.

MANDRAKE DANDELION LIVER CURE

HAVE YOU

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Jaundice, Headache, Dizziness, Pain in the Back, Costiveness, or any disease arising from a deranged liver, Dr. Chase's Liver Cure will be found a sure and certain remedy.

NATURE'S REMEDY

The unqualified success of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure in Liver Complaint rests solely with the fact that it is compounded from nature's well-known liver regulators, Mandrake and Dandelion, combined with many other, invaluable roots, barks and herbs, having a powerful effect on the Kidneys, Stomach, Bowels and Blood. 500,000 SOLD

Over one-half million of Dr. Chase's Recipe Books were sold in Canada alone. We want every man, woman and child who is troubled with Liver Complaint to try this excellent remedy.

Something New. Given Away Free

Wrapped around every bottle of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure is a valuable Household Medical Guide and Recipe Book (84 pages), containing over 200 useful recipes pronounced by medical men and druggists as invaluable, and worth ten times the price of the medicine.

Try Chase's Catarrh Cure. A safe and positive remedy. Price, 25 cents.

Try Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills. 25 cts. per box.

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS

E. GOMARDON & CO., Sole Agents, Gradford

Markdale Roller Mill.

FARMERS HAVING No. 1 WHEAT and preferring flour from their own wheat, can get it by bringing twenty bushels or more.

Flour always on Hand

Flour $3.00 to $4.30 per. bbl.

SHORTS, per ton - $12.00

BRAN, " - 10.00

The highest market price paid for Fall and Spring wheat.

J. W. FORD.

Public Notice.

To all whom it may concern.

I R. L. Stephen the Druggist of Markdale have been appointed agent for Johnson's celebrated Tonic and nervine. Johnson's little liver Pills, and Johnson's all healing White Ointment. The nervine is the very best in the market, in all diseases caused by poverty of blood, for Nervousness, Hysteria, and the Paleness of Complexion so often noticed in female's, loss of appetite and general debility. In conjunction w th the Liver Pills, it is he very best for all diseases arrising from Topid live r or bad stomach

The White Oinment is the very best in the market for Salt Rheume, Barbers Itch, Pimples, Chafs, Burns, Scalds, and all Skin diseases of a scrofulous nature. Try these fine remedies and you will not be disappointed.

or saleatR. L. STEPHEN'S the druggist, Markdale, Ont.

WM. G. GUTHRIE,

Plain & Ornamental Plasterer

MARKDALE.

Arches, Cornices, Centre Flowers, and all kinds of plain and ornamental plastering executed at cheapest rates. Calsomining Lime Washing and Repairs promptly attended to.

330

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of

School Furniture.

Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness, wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.

181 ANDREW McGILL.

MONEY TO LOAN.

ON real estate security, at low rate of interest, no commission charged. Business Strictly Confidential,

J. S, BLACK,

190 Pomona, P, O.

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT No. 24, con. 4, N. D. R. Glenelg, 100 acres, will be sold cheap and on easy terms of payment, for further particulars apply on the premises, or by letter to

J. S, BLACK,

190-tf. Pomona P. O.

Markdale Woolen Mill.

Custom Carding, Weaving, Fulling, Dyeing and cloth dressing, done in a workmanlike manner and on very short notice.

First Class Cotton Warp

supplied at the lowest possible rates.

A call solicited.

Terms strictly cash or wool.

Sept. 28, 1886 F. J. RITCHIE.

IT IS A WELL KNOWN FACT

—THAT—

McCOLL'S

"LARDINE,"

is the best known, and most reliable Machine Oil in the Dominion; Farmer's, Thresher's and Mill Owner's, will find it decidedly to their advantage to insist upon getting the "Genuine Lardine" when they ask for it, owing to so much inferior oil being sold under the same name by unscrupulous dealers. We are the sold manufacturers of the "Genuine Lardine" every barrel branded.

McCOLL BRO'S, & CO.

For sale in Markdale at Haskett Bro's Hardware Store. 847-78

FRESH TURNIP SEEDS.

FRESH PARIS GREEN.

FRESH HELLEBORE.

AT

H. Parker's,

DRUGGIST and SEEDSMAN,

Durham.

The Markdale Standard

Is issued every Thursday, by

C. W. RUTLEDGE, Markdale, Ont.,

Terms—$1 per year in advance; $1.50 if not paid within six months.

Professional and business cards one inch space and under, per year, $4.

	1 yr.	6 mo.	3 mo.
Whole column	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
Half column	27 00	15 00	10 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00	6 00
Two inch space	7 00	4 00
Three inch space	10 00	5 00

Casual advertisements 8 cents per line first insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.

Editorial notices, or notices in local column 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents each subsequent insertion.

Stray animals &c, advertised 3 weeks for $1

No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid except at the option of the publisher.

JOB PRINTING.

The Standard office has a splendid equipment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. All orders filled with dispatch.

Directory.

MARKDALE VILLAGE OFFICIALS.

Police Trustees—E. Davis, A. Turner, and S. J. Coleman.

Public School Trustees—B. Coleman, J. Lyons, W. A. Brown. B. Coleman, Sec.

COUNTY OFFICIALS.

Judge, H. McPherson, Owen Sound.
Deputy-Judge, S. J. Lane, Owen Sound.
Sheriff, C. H. Moore, Owen Sound.
Clerk of Peace, W. Armstrong, O. Sound.
Clerk, John Gale, Owen Sound.
Treasurer, S. J. Parker, Owen Sound.
County Warden, N. Reid, Owen Sound
Registrar, N., R. McKnight, "
" S., Thos. Lauder, Durham.
Revising Barrister, North, Judge McPherson, Owen Sound.
Revising Barrister, South & East, Judge Lane, Owen Sound.
M. P., North, Jas. Masson, Owen Sound.
M. P., East, T. S. Sproule, M.D., Markdale
M. P., South, Geo Landerkin, M. D., Hanover.
M. P. P., North, D. Creighton, Owen Sound
M. P. P., East, Capt. Rorke, Clarksburg
M. P. P., South, John Blyth, Orchard.

DIVISION COURT CLERKS:

No. 1. John Stephens, Owen Sound.
" 2. David Jackson, Durham.
" 3. Thos, Plunkett, Meaford.
" 4. Thos. J. Rorke, Heathcote.
" 5. J. W. Armstrong, Flesherton.
" 6. John McDonald, Chatsworth.

Post-Office Directory.

MARKDALE.

The P, O. will be opened from 8 o'clock a. m. to 7 p. m. every working day.

Mails closed as follows, viz:

C. P. R., going North, 11:40 a m, and 7 p m
" " South, 3:30 p m, and 7 p m

TRAVERSTON.

Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday 12:30 noon.

HARKAWAY.

Friday, 12:30 noon.

For registered letters and money orders, fifteen minutes earlier than above. The P. O. will be open on Holidays from 9 to 9:30 a. m., and half an hour after mails arrive.

W. J. McFarland, P. M.

Society Directory.

Markdale C. O. O. F. No. 78, meets every alternate Monday evening at 8 o'clock in their Hall, Rae's block. Visiting brethren welcome.

Markdale A. O. U. W, No. 141 meets in their Hall, Rae's block, every alternate Monday evening at o'clock. A visit from brethren of neighboring lodges solicited.

Markdale L. O. L. No. 1045 meets in their Hall on Friday on or before full moon each month. Thos. Elliott, Master; W. J. Blakely, Secretary.

Victoria R. B. Preceptory, No. 282, Meets in Lodge Room of Markdale L. O. L. No. 1045, first Friday in each month. Visiting Sir Knights always welcome. Jas. Brodie W. P.; Thos. Elliott, Registrar.

Markdale Church Directory.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

Services every Sabbath at 10:30 a. m. Sabbath School at 2:30 p. m. Prayer Meeting every Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. Rev. A. Wilson, Pastor; A. McFarland, S. S. Superintendent.

CHRIST CHURCH.

Services every Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p m. Rev. Jas. Ward, Incumbent. Sabbath School 2:30. W. J. Ford, Superintendent.

METHODIST CHURCH.

Services every Sunday at 10:30 a. m and 7 p. m. Sunday School at 2:30. Prayer Meeting every Thursday evening from 8 to 9, Rev. Geo. H. Cornish, Pastor; G. S. Bowes. S. S. Superintendent. Ladies' Aid in connection; Mrs. T. Hill, Secretary.

Monthly Fairs.

Orangeville—The second Thursday in each month.
Dundalk—Tuesday before Orangeville.
Flesherton—Monday before Orangeville.
Markdale—Saturday before Orangeville.
Durham—Third Tuesday in each month.
Chatsworth—Monday before Durham.
Holland Centre—Saturday before Chatsworth
Priceville—Monday before Durham.
Hanover—Monday before Durham

DISTRICT DOINGS.

A SYNOPSIS OF RECENT DISTRICT DOINGS FROM OUR EXCHANGES PREPARED FOR STANDARD READERS.

BE ON YOUR GUARD

Don't allow a cold in the head to slowly and surely run into Catarrh, when you can be cured for 25c. by using Dr. Chase's Catarrh Cure. A few applications cure insipient catarrh; 1 to 2 boxes cures ordinary catarrh 1 to 5 boxes is guaranteed to cure chronic catarrh. Try it. Only 25c. and sure cure Sold by all druggists. 883-88

Dundalk will have horse races on Dominion Day.

A Free Gift.—Around each bottle of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure is a Medicine Guide and Receipe Book containing useful information, over 200 Recipes, and pronounced by doctors and druggists as worth ten times the cost of the medicine. Medicine and book $1. Sold by all druggists.

Flesherton will celebrate Dominion Day by athletic games.

Don't use any more nauseous purgatives such as Pills Salts &c., when you can get in Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters a medicine that moves the Bowels gently, cleansing all impurities from the system and rendering the Blood pure and cool. Sold by all Druggists. ti

Mr. Symington, who was recently promoted from Dundalk station to Galt, was last week prensented by the citizens of Dundalk with an address and a gold headed cane, also Mrs. S. with a silver cake basket. At the same time and place Mr. S. was presented with an address and "Chief Ranges's" Jewel by the Foresters of that village.

Cholera Infantum.—That terrible scourage among children may be speedily cured by Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. All forms of bowls complaints, nausea, and vomiting, and an ordinary diarrhœa to the most severe attack of Canadian remedy known for children or adults suffering from summer complaints.

There are just two pleasing things in connection with the present season's emigration to Canada. It is fifty pe cent, above the corresonding time las year, and the character of the emigrants themselves is everything to be desired. There is no reason why this should not be so. We have a country extensive in territory, rich in resources and fertility: and withal a magnificent network of railroad, capable of bringing the products of the farmer and artisan in the most distant portion of the country to an evergrowing and profitable home and foreign markets. Everything is being done to bring about a speedy and happy settlement of the unpopulated districts, while capital is surely and unmistakably making itself felt in the development of all industries that contribute so much to the greatness of a nation. With the right class of settlers, such as we have been getting lately, and the present citizens of Canada doing nobly by their country, we are in for a period of unprecedented prosperity. Let us all shoulder to shoulder do our little to make Canada what she was intended to be; the home of a numerous, great and prosperous people.—[World.

A Professional opinion.—Rev. F. Gunner M. D., of Listowel Ont., says regarding B. B. B., "I have used your excellent Burdock Compound in practice and in my family since 1884, and hold it No. 1 on my lists of sanative remedies. Your three busy B's never sting, weaken or worry."

A great number of self binders are being purchased by farmers in this neighborhood the present season. The Watson Deering Binder is said to be the leading machine in the market. J. H. Carson, agent, Markdale.

A Living Miracle.—"My infant daughter was taken ill with cholera infantum, the doctor said she could not live. The Reverend Wm. McWilliams would not allow her head to be lifted when he babtised her, she was so weak. Dr. Fowler's Wild Strawberry gave immediate relief. She is a living miracle, hale and hearty. Since that time (7 years) our house has never been without that remedy." * * * From statement of George Johnston, Harwood, Ont.

Wm. Sargent, Berkeley, has a quantity of seed buckwheat for sale.

Nature makes no Mistake.—Nature's own remedy for bewel complaints, cholera morbus, cholic, cramps, vomiting, sea sickness, cholera infantum, diarrhœa, dysentry and all diseases of a like nature belonging to the summer season, is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, which can be obtained of all dealers in medicine.

Markdale Markets.—Fall wheat 82 to 82 cents; spring wheat 80 to 82; barley 30 to 50; peas 48; oats 27; butter 12 to 12; eggs 11; potatoes 75 per bag; pork 5.40; hides 5.50; wool 20.

National Pills will not gripe or sicken yet are a thorough cathartic.

Danger.—There are some who pay but little or any attention to a cough or cold, and say let nature take its course. This is just the time nature should have assistance. The lungs are threatened. Assist them with Tamarac Elixir.

It can do no harm to try Freeman's Worm Powders when your child is ailing, feverish or fretful.

To the Editor of the Standard.

Sir,—I write in reference to [illegible] cellent and timely editorial in [illegible] issue of your paper, in which [illegible] the formation of a Mutual Aid [illegible] for the young people of our [illegible]

I fully agree with your [illegible] that most of our young men [illegible] to improve themselves; and [illegible] there is really no serious obst[illegible] the way of any person who is [illegible] mined to educate himself, still [illegible] such helps are thrown in our [illegible] are more apt to take an interest [illegible] and profit by them. With all [illegible] ference to your proposition of a [illegible] ual Aid Society," I am afraid, [illegible] speaking, it would not last any [illegible] than the average society seems to [illegible] ist in our village.

Now I propose we organize a [illegible] hanics' Institute in Markdale. [illegible] are no doubt residents here who [illegible] been identified with this Order in [illegible] towns and who know something [illegible] its workings. but for the benefit [illegible] those who have not had that privilege [illegible] I will give a few statements.

The objects of a Mechanics' Institute [illegible] are three-fold; 1st a circulating [illegible] brary; 2nd an Art school; 3rd [illegible] Reading Room, in each of the [illegible] the Government allow competent [illegible] providing you comply with the Rules [illegible] and Regulations as laid down in the [illegible] Consolidated Statutes. I don't know [illegible] the exact proportion on each, but think [illegible] it is fifty per cent on Library, provided [illegible] vided there are not too many fictitious [illegible] works chosen.

The first thing to be done is to call [illegible] a meetlng of our citizens and appoint [illegible] a Board of Directors: then draft a [illegible] constitution and decide on a membership [illegible] ship fee which is generally one dollar [illegible] thus making purchase of books easy [illegible] notifiy the authorities at Toronto.

I am sure every man in Markdale [illegible] will take an interest in such a society [illegible] There is now one in nearly every place [illegible] of any importance or size in Ontario [illegible] and there is no necessity of Markdale [illegible] being one whit behind in educational [illegible] matters.

Mechanic.

Prof. Low's sulphur soap is a delightful toilet luxury as well as a good curative for skin disease,

The Country School, and the Farmer's Boy.

The country school is preeminently the Farmer's school. In it the great majority of the farmers of to-day receive their education, and in it the great majority of those of the next generation will receive the whole of their schooling.

Is the country school doing what it should for the farmer's boy? It is given to the boy who will remain on the farm that kind of an education which will be the best preparation for life's work?

What is an education for? Why should a boy spend so much time in the school-room? The purpose of a boy's education is to fit him for his work, whatever that may be. The education given in a country school ought then to fit the boy to be a successful farmer. If that is to be the profession of most country school-boys.

What education does the farmers profession demand? The ability to read, write, and understand the English language and to make readily all the ordinary numerical calculations connected with his business—this is all, so to say, that a farmer needs, and this is practically all that many of the schools supply. But is this enough? Shall we set the standard of education for the farmer at the very lowest notch? Shall we in this way say that the poorest education is sufficient for the farmer? We certainly do not think that farming is the occupation for which the poorest education is sufficient. Give the boy opportunity to become acuqainted with the things around him. Put the study of soils, plants, animals, etc., into the schools. Ask your school-teacher to give instruction of this kind. Demand of them that they know enough to give such instructions in the right way. If you will demand only the best of teachers for your children, you can have these things taught to them; but if your are willing to take year by year the young and poorly prepared teacher the work will not and cannot be done. You will have to pay roundly for efficient teachers; but will it not be the best economy in the long run, for are they not to instruct your children for their whole life's work?—[American Agriculturist for June.

TAMARAC ELIXIR NATURE'S REMEDY FOR COLDS, HOARSENESS, LUNG COMPLAINTS PATENT PENDING

Markdale Standard

"HEW TO THE LINE, LET THE CHIPS FALL WHERE THEY MAY."

SEVENTH YEAR.—No. 356. MARKDALE, ONT., JUNE 30, 1887. C. W. RUTLEDGE, Proprietor.

Local and Other Items.

Notices in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

NOTICE.—Correspondence, communications, Advertisements, &c., must be in this office by noon on Tuesday to insure publication the same week.

—: AT :—

RUSSELL'S

—Noted Jewelery Store,—

FLESHERTON,

be found the most complete stock atches, Clocks, Jewelery, Silver-, Spex, &c., in this part of the ntry.

all and see those watches they are ng at $12.00 bearing warrants three and a half years, while other lers are asking $15.00 for the e article. P. S. Bartlett, 3 oz. silver case for $16.00 while they selling elsewhere for $17.50. er dealers cannot compete with and they know it. We cannot them being annoyed at our ible low prices; we must give public the benefit of our close ing.

Just Note a few prices.

fine Nickle Alarm Clock for actually $2.00 bearing a warrant for two rs. Your choice of over 20 fine ed chains for only $1.60; Just k of it. Fine walnut clocks from 5 upward. Brooches, Ear-Rings, ies' Chains, Cuff-Buttons, Scarf-s, at equally low prices.

emember if you want your Watch lock repaired properly by a work-, Russell's is the only place.

orders by mail promptly attended to at

RUSSELL'S Noted Jewelry Store,

FLESHERTON.

Delightful weather.

Pic-nics are the rage.

Dr. Sproule M. P. returned home to Ottawa on Monday.

W. J. Besson is rusticating in Manitoulin.

Remember the Lawn Party at Mr. Dale's on the evening of Dominion Day.

Mr. R. D. Currie was to Elora over Sunday.

Thos. Townsend of Glenelg commenced haying last Monday, June 27th.

School closes to-morrow (Friday) for the summer holidays.

John E. Crone is gone home to Natva to rusticate for a few weeks.

Mrs. Ward of Detroit is visiting her ind F. Sarjeant of this village.

Mrs. Thos. Sowerby of Holland and ughter are visiting friends at Nelson, lton Co.

The editor of the Advance is taking holidays and he will not issue a per this week.

Messrs Robert and Herbert Irwin are ending a few days at home and will ve for Dakota shortly.

James Allen Esq., of Allenford and ughter Laura spent Sunday with ends in this vicinity, Statute labor is the order of the day; another week haying will be the sh.

Mr. John Shears will please accept anks for a paper bag of beautiful glish cherries.

Read the article on Commercial Un- in another column on this page. A nvincing argument.

Mrs. A. Hope, of Macville, Albion, as been prospecting for a farm in this cinity.

Miss Annie McCay is gone to visit ends at Carlisle for a month.

A Lodge of Independent Order of Good Templars was organized in Markdale this week.

J. P. Marshall, Dentist, will be at the Markdale House next Thursday and Friday.

Mr. James Vance of Carlisle, near Hamilton, visited his son-in-law Hamilton McCay recently.

Shade trees will be highly appreciated now-a-days by those doing Statute labor, or rather "putting in the time on the road."

The Owen Sound Advertiser is now printed on a new (Campbell) power press. We congratulate Mr. Little on this evidence of prosperity.

Rev. Mr. Cornish preached his farewell sermon last Sunday night to a large congregation, and took his departure, with his family, on Wednesday for Drayton.

A Scottish Concert will be held in Watson's Hall, Priceville on the evening of the 1st July at which J. R. Anderson our Scottish vocalist and W. J. Benson our Irish Comic will take part.

The Chesley Enterprise says "there is a man in Hanover so stingy that he uses a wart on his neck for a collar button."

John Goodfellow, son of Mr. Samuel Goodfellow of Euphrasia, aged 21 years, was accidently killed near Heathcote recently while assisting to move a barn. A leaver struck him on the head causing instant death.

Fresh arrivals.—Three residents added to our town recently, all female; one at Mr. Joseph Irwin's, one at Mr. Jas. Miller's, the feed store man and one at Mr. Isaac Stinson's the builder and contractor, Alex Lyons horse ran away while returning from the "Irish Lake" picnic, pitching Lyons and Arch. McIntyre of Euphrasia out, not injuring them seriously. The buggy is a wreck.

The dwelling house of Mrs. McNea of Artemesia, a out five miles from Markdale, was destroyed by fire together with nearly all the contents last Thursday.

If you want a choice farm, or if you have a friend who does, we would direct your attention to John Whitby's adv. in another column.

Mrs. Vasey arrived from California on Monday last and will spend the summer with friends in this district, among whom is Mr. A. Fogerty of this village, her brother-in-law.

Thos. S. Wright has ordered a Sawyer Steam Thresher, and will be prepared to do work in that line as soon as the threshing season opens.

The annual Methodist Sabbath School pic-nic at Walker's appointment will be held in Mr. Wm. Ewart's grove near the church on July 1st. A collection will be taken up in aid of the S. School. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

A Garden Party will be held in Mr. Rae's garden on Friday evening, July 1st, under the auspices of the Ladies Aid Association of the Presbyterian Church.

"Immigrant Children."—Mr. John T. Middlemore, the founder of the Orphan Children's Emigration Charity, London, Ont., left Liverpool on the 10th inst., in the S. S. Lake Ontario, with a party of 50 girls and 100 boys between the ages of 8 and 20 years, who are brought out to this country for adoption or hire, chiefly among farmers. They are expected to arrive Guthrie Home, near the city, on or about the 23rd inst. This will be Mr. Middlemore's 15th annual visit to these shores with juvenile emigrants from Birmingham, England, since 1872. Already many applications accompanied with good references have been made for the children expected to arrive, but more are required. Further particulars may be obtained by addressing Mr. H. Gibbins, Manager of the Guthrie Home, London Out.

Markdale Markets.—Fall wheat 82 to 82 cents; spring wheat 80 to 82; barley 30 to 50; peas 48; oats 27; butter 12 to 12; eggs 11; potatoes 75 per bag; pork 5.40; hides 5.50; wool 20.

The case, Queen vs., Calaghan which we reported last week, was concluded on Friday, County Crown Attorney Frost conducted the case for the Queen and P. McCullough for defendent. The prisoner was committed to Owen Sound jail to await his trial at the Fall Assizes.

The Directors of East Grey Agricultural Society met in Flesherton on the 22nd inst., to make preparations for the fall exhibition. The prize list was made out, Judges appointed, the 22nd and 23rd of September set apart for the fall Show, general business regarding garding reciprocity between Canada and the United States discussed, when the following resolutions were carried without opposition:—That the board of directors deeply regret the action taken by several of the Farmers' Institutes of this province in tampering with certain resolutions having for their object the establishment of Commercial Union between Canada and the United States, said resolution being misleading, the real object misrepresenting and the probable result a failure. It was likewise resolved that this board of directors invite our representative in the Dominion Legislature on his return from parliament to call a meeting in each township in the Riding for the purpose of explaining the question of reciprocity between Canada and the United States as has already been submitted, and the probability of good or evil resulting from the discussion there or that are taking place throughout the Province.

BUSINESS LOCALS

Turnip Seed! Turnip Seed! At Stephen's Drug Store.

4 colors in sun specks at W. A. Brown's Jewelley store.

If you want pure Paris Green, go to Haskett Bro's.

Paris green strictly pure, to be had at Mabee's hardware.

Paris Green pure at the Medical Hall, A. Turner & Co.

Scythes, Forks, Rakes and Snaths very cheap; call and see them. S. Hill.

Fresh Fish.—Sarjeant Bros., butchers, receive a supply of fresh fish twice a week.

The cheapest scythes the largest stock and the best make (Oshawa) is at Haskett Bros.

Turnip Seeds Fresh pure and true to name at the Medical Hall. A. Turner and Co.

A new Massey horse rake for sale very cheap for cash or short credit. Dan. Henderson, 7th line, Euphrasia.

In cutlery we have some very fine goods to choose from; see them, at the sign of the cross cut.

Lazarus, Moris, Pebble and Crystal lens, specks and eyeglasses at W. A. Brown's Jewellery store.

Cigars! Cigars! lovers of a good Havana cigar will find that Benson has the finest cigar in town, sold by the box.

Fine lathes tools and best Material used by W. A. Brown, the peoples watchmaker and Jewellery, Markdale.

Anything you may want in the hard ware line can be had at prices that give satisfaction, solid full lines, and prices right. Mabee the hardware.

Nasal Balm.—The only medicine in the market that will immediately cure Cold in the Head, and permanently cure Catarrh, Hay Fever, etc.

A few splendid tweed suits left; will clear them out at 7.50. Mens all wool coats at $3.50 worth $4.00, 4.50 and $5. They are great value. S. Hill.

The largest stock of Frames and Moulding ever opened out in Markdale just to hand, and selling very cheap at the new Photo Gallery.

Clearing out Millinery novelties and dress goods at reduced prices. Ladies bring your butter and eggs and see for yourselves. S. Hill.

Full lines in scythes, snaths, rake, forks and general harvest goods. The best make, only kept in stock at Mabee's hardware.

All needing specks, bear in mind that W. A. Brown has the only complete stock in Markdale, and that he has a practical knowledge of optically fitting them.

Hay is a heavy crop and Haskett Bros have enough scythes to cut it. Prices away down far below what others call rock bottom. We have the goods and must sell them; call and be convinced.

J. P. Marshall, Dentist, has changed his arrangements for visiting Markdale and will in future be at the Markdale House on Thursday and Friday following the first Monday in each month, and at Flesherton the following day, consequently his next visit will be the 7th and 8th of July and at Flesherton the 9th.

Tamarac elixir.—Is not advised to cure consumption, but it has made some remarkable cures of persons supposed to be in the first stages of the disease.

A great number of self binders are being purchased by farmers in this neighborhood the present season. The Watson Deering Binder is said to be the leading machine in the market. J. H. Carson, agent, Markdale.

Dr. Jug's Medicine should be used by every one at this season of the year as it is the best blood purifier in the market and will reinvigorate the frame and prepare it to bear the heats of summer. The pills are justly called the "Little Gems" as they operate without causing either griping or pain and are a sure cure for nervousness, biliousness and other affections of the Liver and Kidneys. Buy them and try them and you won't regret your investment. Sold by Turner & Co., Markdale.

A Unique Work on Canadian Topics.

Mr. Erastus Wiman, President of the Canadian Club, writes to the editor of this paper as follows:

"It is the intention of certain members of the Canadian Club, in New York, to issue, in the form of a beautiful book, the papers which has been delivered before the Club during the past winter by prominent parties, together with those which are to be delivered during the remander of the season.

"These papers will include a speech on 'Commercial Union,' by the Hon. Benjamin Butterworth, member of Congress, who is said to be one of the most eloquent men of that body. A remarkable production by Prof. Goldwin Smith on 'The Schism in the Anglo-Saxon Race.' A paper by Dr. Grant of the Queen's University on 'Canada First.' One by J. W. Bengough, Editor of Toronto Grip. By Mr. Le Moine, of Quebec, on 'The Heroines of New France.' By J. A. Fraser, 'An Artist's Experience in the Canadian Rockies'. By Edmond Colling, on 'The Future of Canada.' By Professor D. G. Roberts, of Kings College. By Geo. Stewart, jr., of Quebec. By the Rev. Dr. Eccleston, on 'The Canadian North West.' By John McDougall, on the Minerals of Canada.' And by the Editor, G. M. Fairchild, jr., on 'The History of the Canadian Club.' The work will also include extracts from the speeches and letters of the President.

"The book is to be issued in beautiful style, at $1 per copy."

"A great many Canadians will doubtless desire to possess themselves of this rare compilation, and, by purchasing copies, indicate the interest which is manifested throughout Canada in the attempt of the Canadan Club to lay before the Americans the resources, advantages, and attractions of their native country."

"Parties desirous of obtaining copies can do so by enclosing the price of the book to James Ross, Canadian Club, 12 East 29th Street, New York.

Rev. Mr. Bucem arrived with his family this week and will preach next Sunday morning and evening in the Methodist Church.

COMMERCIAL UNION

—BETWEEN—

Canada and the United States,

is now being largely discussed throughout the Dominion with the preponderence of public opinion in favor of union; whether union with our cute Yankey Brothers would cure the ills we labor under or not, McFarland sayeth not, but he does most decidedly say that if you want to reap the greatest advantage from your cash or produce you must (if you have not already done so) form a union with McFarland's Immense Establishment, where you can get the choice of largest stock of choice goods at close prices, North of Toronto. This week I have opened out and placed in stock. New Grey Dress Goods; New Cream Dress Goods; New Black Dress Goods; New Olive Green Dress Goods; New Browns Fawn; Eclectric Blues & Fancy Dress Goods, with Trimmings and Buttons to match.

Pearl Buttons, Hair Nets, Corsets, and Gloves, Josephines best Kid Gloves light shades only 50 cents pair, sold everywhere at $1.25.

500 pairs Womans Cotton Hose dark colors 12½ cents a pair.

607½ yds. Light Ground Prints fast colors 10½ cents.

Good Washing Dress Muslins 6 cents, one case white and cream Oriental Laces at 5 8 10, 12½ and 15 cents being balance of a wholesale stock and without exageration the chepest laces ever offered in Markdale.

7 Cases New Boots and Shoes, Mens Womens and Childrens at close prices.

47 Boxes New Nobby Ties, Shirts, Braces, and Underware.

A second shipment of that 30c. Cashmere 45 inches wide.

1200 doz. Buttons 5 cents per dozen, stock well assorted. Prices right. Corteous treatmpnt to all.

W. J. McFARLAND,

Direct Importer.

MARKDALE.

HOUSEHOLD.

The Child Character.

The first characteristic of right childhood is that it is modest. A well-bred child does not think it can teach its parents, or that it knows everything. It may think its father and mother know everything—perhaps that all grown-up people know everything; very certainly it is sure that it does not. And it is always asking questions, and wanting to learn more. A second character of right childhood is to be faithful. Perceiving that its father knows best what is good for it, a noble child trusts him wholly, gives him its hand, and will walk blindfold with him if he bids it. A third character of right childhood is to be loving and generous. Give a little love to a child, and you get a great deal back. It loves everything near it when it is a right kind of child; would give the best it has away, always, if you need it; does not lay plans for getting everything in the house for itself, and delights in helping people—you cannot please it so much as by giving it a chance of being useful, in ever so little a way. And, because of all these characters, it is cheerful. Putting its trust in its father, it is careful for nothing; being full of love to every creature, it is happy always, whether in its play or its duty. So, then, you have the child's character in these four things—humility, faith, charity, and cheerfulness.

Boxing the Ears.

Boxing the ears is a too common form of punishment practised by irritable and ignorant persons, and it is almost always done in fits of sudden anger. I say done by irritable and ignorant persons, because it seems to me that no person of any information on the subject would allow their passion to get the better of their judgment in such a matter. The drum of the ear is of paper-like thinness; it may and has been, in numbers of cases, ruptured by a single slap on the side of the head, incurable deafness resulting. Says an eminent physician, "All strokes on the head of children with an angry hand are brutal and criminal." In the same connection he adds that "a generous, wise and humane parent should allow a night to intervene between the commission of the fault on the part of a child and any decided punishment. The veriest theft should be allowed time lest the law should be vindictive and wrathful. And shall a man or woman punish an unresisting child with angry inconsideration, with unreasoning wrath in the heart? It is monstrous."

Practical Recipes.

CARAMEL CAKE.—One-half cup of butter, one cup of sugar, two eggs, one-half cup of milk, one-half cup of flour, one teaspoonful of soda. We think that one and a half teaspoonfuls of baking powder instead of soda makes the cake much better. Bake in three layers. Spread frosting between and on top of layers.

COLD LEMON PUDDING. — One-half box of gelatine soaked in four tablespoons of water for ten minutes; and a pint of boiling water, juice of two lemons, one cup of sugar; strain and set away to cool. When cold, stir in the whites of three well-beaten eggs. A thin boiled custard can be used to pour over this pudding, or thick, sweetened cream.

POTATO PANCAKES.—Grate a dozen medium-sized potatoes, after peeling them and washing thoroughly. Add the yolks of three eggs, a heaping teaspoonful of flour, and if they seem too dry, a little milk will do to thin them, with a large tablespoonful of salt, and, lastly, the whites of three eggs beaten stiff, and thoroughly beaten in with the potatoes. Heat your griddle and put butter and lard in equal proportions in it, and fry the cakes in it until they are brown. Make them a third larger than the ordinary pancake.

BOILED BATTER PUDDING.—This pudding is composed of flour, butter, eggs and milk. Take three tablespoonfuls, put it in a basin and add sufficient milk to moisten it; carefully rub down all the lumps with a spoon, then pour in the remainder of the milk and stir in one ounce of butter, which must first have been melted. Keep beating the mixture, and three eggs and a pinch of salt, and when the batter is quite smooth either put it in a well-buttered basin with a floured cloth tied tightly down over it, and this into a vessel of boiling water, moving the basin about to keep the flour from setting in any part, and boil for one and one quarter of an hour, or else boil in a floured cloth that has been wetted in hot water, and place in a vessel of hot water to boil; the pudding thus covered will cook in a little less time than the other way. Serve with sweet sauce, wine sauce, or with preserves or tart jam. This pudding should be brought to table quickly while it is light.

BAKED SHAD.—Baked shad is a delicious dish for late spring and early summer, and may be prepared as follows: Select a large shad for the purpose, and let it have full, bright looking eyes, firm flesh and red gills. Scale it, open it, and after cleaning wash it well, and then place it in clean, salty water to lie a short time. Before cooking wipe it dry, rub it inside and out with a mixture of pepper and salt and fill it with a stuffing composed of the following, namely, fine bread crumbs mixed with a finely mixed silver onion, some thyme leaves, rubbed small, a little sweet majoram of summer savory, and a lump of butter. Do not use too much thyme or summer savory, but just enough to give their delightful flavor to the dish. Sew up the opening with a strong thread, dredge the fish with flour, lay it in a pan with a little water in which is some butter, and place in the oven. Baste frequently and bake one hour, and serve with parsley sauce. Three or four narrow strips of fat salt pork laid on top of the baking fish is thought to improve its flavor.

Useful Hints.

Do not let growing children wear shoes with high heels; it is better for them to wear none at all, or only such an increase of thickness as is seen at the heels of common-sense flat-soled shoes.

Wash children's feet once a day in pure tepid water, as the largest pores of the system are located in the soles of the feet, and these pores discharge offensive refuse matter, which, if not removed, is re-absorbed again.

Clothe a child's lower limbs, and the feet especially, warmly. The fashion that orders very short frocks and thin underclothing is deadly and cruel. Children's stockings should be changed at least every other day, and sunned and aired daily.

TO CLEAN CANARY BIRDS.—These pretty creatures are often covered with lice and greatly annoyed by them. They may be relieved of them by placing a clean white cloth over their cage at night. In the morning it will be covered by very minute red spots; these are the vermin which give the little songsters so much trouble.

To wash woolen blankets, or any woolen article, proceed as follows: have a suds ready by boiling up some good white soap, such as ivory soap, in soft water; let it stand to cool below the boiling point, say till it is as hot as the hand can bear, then put in the blankets and sluice them up and down repeatedly. Never rub any soap on the blanket, and do not rub them, as this will cause them to full up, thicken and shrink. A clothes wringer is the best improvement upon hand labor for squeezing out the water. After rinsing in warm water squeeze as dry as possible, stretch lengthwise and dry in the open air if the weather is good; if not, dry in a warm room, but not near the fire. Dust or mud or any soil of the kind should be shaken and beaten out or removed before the washing.

TO CLEAN FEATHER PILLOWS.—An excellent way to renew and cleanse feathers is to make a cheese-cloth pillow-case and empty all the feathers into it and sew up the open end; next plunge the case of feathers into a tub of hot water and sluice them up and down. The water should have a little spirits of hartshorn or ammonia in it to soften and remove the dirt from the feathers. After drawing them up and down for a number of times, run them up and down in clean, cool, soft water, and then pin the bag by the four corners to two clothes-lines and let them remain for hours in the hot sun, turning them after the first two hours. Use either new pillow-cases of ticking, or wash and cleanse the ones used before. When the feathers are well sunned and dried, place them in their cheese-cloth case back in the ticking case. This process makes them soft, clean and light.

REMARKABLE ACCIDENT.

A Very Queer Accident of a Small Train with a Big One.

"Talking about collisions and railroad accidents," said the brakeman, after putting a window up for a young lady passenger and failing to notice the old woman who wanted a similar service performed, "let me tell you of an accident I saw once down in Pennsylvania. There was a narrow gauge road down there, which used the track of the old Atlantic and Great Western broad gauge for seven miles, of course running on its own rail, set right between the rails of the other road. The old Atlantic and Great Western, you know, is now the Nypano, or New York, Pennsylvania & Ohio, a part of the Erie system. Its gauge was six feet wide, and what big cars they used to run on that road! Why, they were like barns. Well, one night there was a collision between a narrow gauge train and broad gauge train. Some mistake about orders, I guess it was. Anyhow, a narrow gauge passenger train dashed into the rear end of a broad gauge passenger train, and with the curiousest result ever you heard of. That little narrow gauge engine just jumped right up into the the big cars of the other train and never stopped till it reached the tender behind the broad gauge locomotive. And what was the funniest thing about it, it drew the whole train after it, the little cars running right up the aisle of the big train and never hurting a passenger in either train, 'cept one feller what had his head outen a window of the narrow-gauge smoking car. He was pretty badly hurt. It was a mighty queer sight, let me tell you, one train inside another, and the passengers of each talking to each other as comfortable as you please. I was brakeman on the broad-gauge train, and as we was runnin' under orders to make Salamanaca by a certain minute, we went right along without stopping, taking the other train with us. The best joke of it all was that my conductor went through the narrow-gauge train and made all the passengers whack up cash fares."

The Tangled Skein.

BY A. E. T.

I knew that they were lovers,
  Though their love was not confessed,
And even by their own young hearts
  That love was scarcely guessed.
Like the first faint glow of morning,
  Like the coo of wooing dove,
Was this joy that sweetly thrilled them—
  The first awaking love.

They were a handsome couple,
  He was a manly lad,
And she was a winsome maiden,
  Sweet-tempered, bright and glad.
As they sat in the cottage parlor,
  The little maiden wrought
So busy at her 'broidery frame—
  "So needlessly," he thought.

For, oh, he wished to talk to her,
  To speak a tender word
That rang and echoed through his heart;
  But, shy as any bird,
She flew away if he but looked
  Too ardently his love.
What could he do, what could he say,
  Her shyness to remove?

And so he silent sat and looked
  At her with wistful eyes;
But if she noticed it at all,
  One only could surmise.
But suddenly she turned to him—
  "Please hold this tangled skein—
I'm out of blue." I went away—
  When I came in again,

The look of things had changed somewhat;
  The work was laid aside;
The lassie's pale, white lily cheeks
  Were with rose blushes dyed.
No more he silent looked at her,
  But with a meaning plain
He looked at me and laughing said,
  "We've wound the tangled skein."

A Fighting Parson.

It is told of the late Rev. Dr. Granville Moody, the "fighting parson," that once at Piqua, Ohio, where he was preaching, he made a patriotic remark that rather cut Mr. Frank McKinney, a local Democratic leader, and McKinney threatened to whip him. "You may get hurt if you try it," replied the minister. But McKinney wasn't afraid and attacked him on the public street. In a twinkle Dr. Moody grappled with him, got his head "in chancery" and pounded him until he begged for mercy, when he let him go, saying, "I told you, Frank, I might hurt you." In the scuffle they tumbled over a boy and broke his leg. Mr. Moody at once took charge of the youngster, paid the surgeon's bill, and more, and sent an account to McKinney for half the expenses, which the latter paid.

A THRILLING SCENE.

Magnetism Among the Lions—A Queer Experiment.

Some two hundred journalists were present yesterday, says a Paris correspondent, at the Folies Bergere, where a sort of general rehearsal was given of a seance of magnetism which took place in a cage containing two fine lionesses, Sailda and Sarah, and an immense lion, Romulus. The cage was placed on the stage, and the lion-tamer, Giacometti, having entered it he made the animals first perform in the usual way, but the great attraction was the entrance into the cage of M. de Torcy and his "subject," Mlle Lucia. This subject is not more than twenty years of age, plump, and what may be called plain. She was dressed in white, and had her hair hanging loose over her shoulders. After presenting her to the spectators M. de Torcy told her to go into a cage placed against the one containing the lions and communicating with it by a door. He followed her in and made a few passes in front of her eyes. In a minute Lucia seemed to be fast asleep. Opening the door leading into the lions' cage M. de Torcy entered it, and in obedience to his order was followed by his subject. She walked straight up to the lions, which were kept in respect by Giocometti. Romulus seemed to be half asleep, Sarah appeared afraid, and only Saida kept on roaring. M. de Torcy then made Lucia kneel down in front of the lions. Her arms were stretched out towards them, and the expression of her countenance changed from that of astonishment to joy. Roused up by Giacometti, the lions now began rushing and bounding around Lucia, who remained motionless. The lioness Saida was then made to stand on her hind paws. While Giacometti held her jaws wide open M. de Torcy ordered Lucia to stand up and walk up to the formidable animal. The subject obeyed with the utmost composure. Two heavy armchairs were then put into the cage, and, assisted by the lion-tamer, M. de Torcy placed Lucia, who was now as rigidly stiff as a board, with her head resting on the back of one and her feet on the back of the other. This was the barrierover which the lions were made to jump with the most formidable roaring. The gas of the establishment was turned low, Bengal fires were lighted, and the lions, urged on by Giacometti's steel whip, roared louder as they continued to leap over this barrier of human flesh and blood. From the beginning to the end there was something terrible in seeing the young woman in a state of unconsciousness place herself in what appeared imminent danger of being devoured, and the unpleasant feeling was considerablyincreased when the last jump the lioness Sasda failed to clear Lucia, and sent her rolling to thet ground. She fell heavily but remained inert till M. de Torcy waked her up by blowing on her forehead. On opening her eyes Lucia appeared more astonished than frightenea in finding herself among the wild beasts.

SOME FREAKS OF NATURE.

The wife of Mr. Hey, of Americus, Ga., wears a handsome breastpin which was made out of a petrified strawberry which grew on her husband's farm. The berry is beautifully colored, resembling a bright ruby, and is very hard. It weighs about two ounces and glistens in the light like a ball of fire.

Mrs. Rosanna Dennis, of Tiffin, died of dropsy seventeen years ago, and her body, which was disinterred the other day, was found to be thoroughly petrified, with the exception of the feet. It was so heavy that ten men were required to move it. A piece chipped from the body resembled flinty lime stone.

Ara Soule, of Grant, Minn., noticed that one of his favorite hens had ceased laying eggs, but growing remarkbly large. Finally after attaining an astonishing size the hen died, and Mr. Soule was curious enough to hold a post-mortem examination. He cut the fowl open and was somewhat astonished when four well-developed spring chickens popped out and began strutting around the barnyard. He supposes that some trouble with the hen's organization had stopped the egress of the eggs and that the natural heat of her body incubated the chicken germs.

The petrified body of a human being was found on the farm of Martin Edwards, near Windsor, in a ditch last week. The body is that of a short, fleshy person, and is supposed to be that of an ancient mound-builder. It is very hard and looks exactly like soapstone. The head is long and narrow, the forehead high and prominent, with high cheek-bones, square chin and a small neck. The body was broken off at the knees, the lower limbs being missing. Its total length to the knees, is two feet nine inches, and its weight is about 170 pounds.

There is a sink-hole on the line of the Carthage and Adirondack Railroad, near Harrisville, N. Y., into which ton after ton of gravel has been dumped, but only to have it disappear from sight. A short time ago the railroad employees succeeded in filling it up to a level with the surrounding country, but when a couple of cars were pushed over it they sank at once in eighteen feet of water and a brakeman narrowly escaped drowning. Altogether 300 carloads of gravel and any quantity of rubbish have been thrown into the hole, and the railroad people now think that it is bottomless.

In Zapohtlan, Mexico, two hunters recently discovered a beautiful grotto 30 yards long and 130 wide. The grotto is formed of quartz and is adorned with the most beautiful stalactites and stalagmites, which glitter like pearls when the light of the torches falls upon them. The infiltrations have formed exquisite pillars and colonnades thirty yards in height. In the centre of the grotto are two artificial reservoirs filled with clear and very cold water. On the floor were found many petrified skulls and bones, which leads to the belief that the place was once used as a temple for human sacrifice by the ancient Mexicans.

A Wedding Present

Of practical importance would be a bottle of the only sure-pop corn cure—Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor— which can be had at any drug store. A continuation of the honeymoon and the removal of corns both assured by its use. Beware of imitations.

The amount of British capital invested in Brazilian Government bonds and in various public enterprises in Brazil is £62,643,000. Adding the capital employed in the Brazilian trade, the sum-total of British interest in Brazil is probably little short of £100,000,000.

SNOW DRIFT BAKING POWDER
THERE IS NO BETTER
The Snow Drift Baking Powder Co., Brantford, Ont

COMPOUND OXYGEN—THE CONSERVATOR of health, the enemy of disease; heals the Lungs, Re-builds the Broken Down Constitution of young and old. Home treatment, sufficient for two months, Inhaler and all complete, sent by express for $12. Moved my office from 73 King West to 41 King East. MRS C. SUDMAN FIEROE. Four years established in Toronto. 32 Office Treatments for $18. Send for circular.

GUELPH Business College, Guelph, Ont.
Twelve States and Provinces already represented on the roll of this Institution. To thorough, practical instruction, and the efficiency and success of its graduates, this College owes its popularity. Circulars, giving terms, etc., mailed free. Address
M. MacCORMICK, Principal.

TEACHERS and Students, Attention! Special classes during summer holidays, in Shorthand, Typewriting, Book-keeping, Penmanship, etc. Write for full particulars. Canadian Business University and Shorthand Institute, Public Library Building, Toronto.
THOS. BENGOUGH, President.
CHARLES H. BROOKS, Manager.

BEAVER LINE OF STEAMSHIPS,
Sailing weekly between Montreal and Liverpool.
RATES OF PASSAGE:—Saloon, Montreal to Liverpool, $40, $50, and $60; Return Tickets, $80, $90, and $100—according to steamer and accommodation. Intermediate and Steerage at lowest rates. For further particulars and to secure Berths, apply to H. E. MURRAY, General Manager, 1 Custom House Square, Montreal, or to the Local Agents in the different Towns and Cities.

MEAT CHOPPERS. Washing Machines, 3 kinds; Clothes Wringers, 10 kinds; Mangles, 3 kinds. Churns, Carpet Sweepers, and other sundries.
HAMILTON INDUSTRIAL WORKS Co., Hamilton, Canada.
Send for article wanted or Illustrated Catalogue.

STRATFORD, Aug. 6, 1885.—Having suffered from Kidney disease from childhood, I consulted eminent doctors in Chicago, New York, and in Canada. Also tried various patent medicines, but getting no relief from any source gave up, as I was sure my case was hopeless. Finally I was induced to try Dr. Jug's Medicine, and I am glad to say that three bottles cured me.
D. DUGGAN, Dry Goods Merchant.

J. L. JONES
WOOD ENGRAVER
10 KING ST EAST
TORONTO.

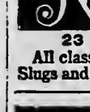
MAY APPLE BLOOD SYRUP
THE greatest discovery of the present age for REGULATING THE BOWELS, AND CURING ALL BLOOD, LIVER AND KIDNEY COMPLAINTS. A perfect Blood Purifier. A few in Hamilton who have been benefited by its use:—
Mrs. M. Keenan, 192 Robert St., cured of Erysipelas of 2 years' standing; Robert Cornell, 24 South St., daughter cured of Epileptic Fits after 6 years' suffering; Jennie Birrell, 55 Walnut St., cured of Weakness and Lung Trouble; John Wood 95 Cathcart St., cured of Liver Complaint and Biliousness, used only 3 fifty-cent bottles; Mrs. J. Beal, 6 Augusta St., troubled for years with Nervous Prostration, two small bottles gave her great relief. Sold at 50c. & $1
F. F. DALLEY & CO., Proprietors.

I CURE FITS!
When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you. Address DR. H. G. ROOT,
Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto.

PATENTS Procured in Canada, all foreign countries, etc. Patent Attorneys, and experts in Patent Cases established 1867. Donald C. Ridout & Co.

135 ACRES EXCELLENT sale. Lot 3, loam; 100 acres clear; good frame, orchard, spring creek, gravel road, Town; price $5,000, $1,000 down, interest. Rare bargain, immediate. 100 ACRES—Lots 34, 35, Con. 3, Road, Artemesia, Grey Co.; 20 acres, $200 down, balance 6 per cent.
DR. McTAGGART,

H. Williams, FELT AND SLATE
Manufacturer and dealer in
Tarred Felt, Roofing Pitch, Papers, Carpet and Deafening Felt, ROOFING, Etc. 4 Adelaide St. E.

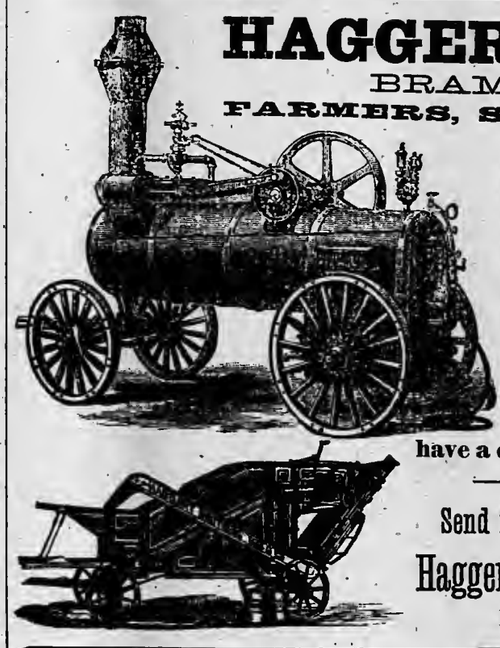


AGENTS APPLY TO THE D. W. BEADLE, St. Catharines

Awnings! BRATED GOLD MEDAL TENT MANUFACTORY, West, Toronto. NATIONAL MANUF

Wall Paper MANUFACTURED
M. STAUNTON & CO.
Samples on application. TORONTO

Water PURE LITHO AUGERS, per hour. Also Rock Drills—Hand, Steam Power. Send for Catalogue.
Laidlaw Manufacturing Co., Hamilton



ASSESSMENT SYSTEM
The Mutual Reserve
LIFE ASSOCIATION
The largest and most prosperous open Association in the world—desires active tives in every section of Canada; liberal It has full Government Deposit, and under vision of Insurance Department at Ottawa. Correspondence solicited. Address,
J. D. WELLS, General Manager
65 King Street East, Toronto

BABY'S BIRTHDAY

A Beautiful Imported Birthday to any baby whose mother will names of two or more other babies parents' addresses. Also a hand mond Dye Sample Card to the much valuable information.
Wells, Richardson & Co., Montreal

THE National ELECTRO & STEREOTYPE CO.
23 ADELAIDE ST. E., TORONTO.
All classes of fine work. Mfrs. of Printers' Slugs and Metal Furniture. Send for price

THE WHITE THRESHING ENGINE OF LONDON, ONT.
A FULL SUPPLY FOR 188

CONSUMPTION
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to sufferer. Give express and P. O. address.
DR. T. A. SLOCUM,
Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto

HAGGERT BROS.
BRAMPTON.
FARMERS, SAVE MONEY

Get your threshing done with the Celebrated Awake SEPARATOR. GRAIN LOST. For work and fast work without a rival. The Awake is the most popular Separator among farmers and threshers of Canada, and with Cornell Portable or Cornell Traction Engine have a complete "Team."
—ORDER EARLY.—
Send for Illustrated Catalogue
Haggert Bros. Manuf'g Co.
BRAMPTON, ONT.

GURNEY'S
Standard Hot-air Furnaces
HAVE NO EQUAL.

PRICES TO SUIT ALL DEALERS
THE "BOYNTON,"
" "HARRIS,"
" "MAMMOTH,"
" "MONARCH."
Send for Price List and Illustrated Catalogue
EVERY FURNACE GUARANTEED
THE E. & C. GURNEY COMPANY, (L'TD)
TORONTO, HAMILTON, MONTREAL, AND WINNIPEG.

Y ORDER OF THE LEAGUE

BY FRED. M. WHITE.

CHAPTER XVI.

nsumed by conflicting emotions and by a thousand hopes and fears, Max set out on his journey to Rome. At hazards, he was determined to commit rime, and trusted to time and his own e wit to show him a way out of the difficulty which lay before him. All ld familiar country he passed through d to interest him now; he saw nothing his own fate before his eyes; and the nal City which had once been a place of ery and delight to him, now looked to istorted fancy like a tomb, every broken e an avenging finger, and every fractur- olumn a solemn warning.

was night when he arrived and secured rments—the old ones he had occupied s student days, the happiest time in his he thought now, as every ornament re- d this silent voice or that forgotten me- slumbering in some corner of his brain. could eat nothing; the very air of the was oppressive to him; so he put on hat and walked out into the streets; all with the citizens taking their evening , and gay with light laughter over flirta- and cigarette smoke. He wandered long far, so far, that it was late when he re- ed; and there, lying on the table, was a d packet, bearing the device of the r, and in the corner two crossed daggers. groaned as he opened it, knowing full the packet contained the hated "instruc- s," as they were called. He tore them , read them hastily, and then looked of the window up to the silent stars. And as Visci, his old friend Carlo Visci, he sent here—to murder! The whole thing ed like a ghastly dream. Visci, the st friend man ever had; Visci, the lsome genius, whose purse was ever ly for a fellow-creature in need; the man had sat at his table times out of num- ; the student who was in his secrets; man who had saved his life, snatched from the very jaws of death—from the ow waters of the Tiber. And this was friend he was going to stab in the back e dark night! A party of noisy, light- rted students passed down the street, e English voices amongst them, coming ely to Maxwell's ears, as he sat there ing on the fatal document, staring him the face from the table.

"Et tu, Brute!"

axwell looked up swiftly. And there, one trembling forefinger pointing to documents, stood the figure of a man a look of infinite sorrow on his face, as gazed mournfully down upon the table. was young—not more than thirty, per- , and his aquiline features bore the ks of much physical suffering. There something like tears in his eyes now.

"Carlo! is it possible it is you?" Max- ll cried, springing to his feet.

"Yes, Fred, it is I, Carlo Visci, who nds before you. We are well met, old end; you have not far to seek to do your ding now. Strike! while I look the her way, for it is your task, I know."

"As there is a heaven above us, no!" axwell faltered. "Never, my friend! Do think I would have come for this? Lis- to me, Visci. You evidently know why am here; but sure as I am a man, never all my hand be the one to do you hurt. have sworn it!"

"I had expected something like this," isci replied mournfully. "Yes, I know hy you come. You had best comply with y request. It would be a kindness to me kill me, as I stand here now."

"Visci, I swear to you that when I join- d the Brotherhood, I was in the blackest norance of its secret workings. When I as chosen for this mission, I did not even mprehend what I had to do. Then they ld me Visci was a traitor. Even then I id not know it was you. Standing there the room, I swore never to harm a hair of your head; and, heaven help me, I never will!"

"Yes, I am a traitor, like you," Visci miled mournfully. "Like you, I was de- ived by claptrap talk of liberty and free- om; like you, I was allotted to take ven- eance on a traitor; and like you, I refus- d. Better the secret dagger than the crime f fratricide upon one's soul!"

"Fratricide! I do not understand."

"I do not understand either. Frederick, he man I was detailed to murder—for it is othing else—is my only brother.—You art! But the League does not countен- nce relationships. Flesh and blood and uch paltry ties are nothing to the friends of erty, who are at heart the sternest tyrants hat ever the mouth of man execrated.—But hat brings you here? You can have only ne object in coming here. I have told you efore it would be a kindness to end my xistence."

"But why? And yet, when I come to ook at you again, you have changed."

"I have changed," Visci echoed mourn- fully—"changed in mind and body. My eart is affected, diseased beyond all kope of remedy. I may die now, at any moment; I cannot live four months."

They sat down together, and fell to dis- cussing old times when they were happy, careless students together, and Maxwell did not fail to notice the painful breathing and quick gasping spasms of his friend, altered more beyond recognition from the gallant Visci of other days.

"Salvarini advised me to come here. You remember him; he claims to be a true friend of yours" Maxwell observed at length.

"He said it would gain time, and enable me to form my plans.—But tell me how you knew I was in Rome. I have only just arrived."

"I had a sure warning. It came from 'he hand of Isodore herself."

"I have heard much of her; she seems all-powerful. But I thought she was too stern a Leaguer to give you such friendly counsel. Have you ever seen her? I hear she is very beautiful."

"Beautiful as the stars, I am told, and a noble-hearted woman too. She is a sort of Queen of the League; but she uses her power well, ever erring on the side of mercy. She has a history, report says—the old story of a woman's trustfulness and a man's de- cert. Poor Isodore! hers is no bed of roses!"

"And she put you on your guard?" Max- well asked. "Come, there must be some good in a woman like that, though I cannot say I altogether like your picture. I should like to see her."

"I should not be surprised if you did be- fore many days. She is the one to protect you from violence. With her sanction, you could laugh the mandates of the League to scorn. Had I long to live, I should sue for her protection, and wherever she may be, she would come to me. Even now, if she comes to Rome, see her if you can and lay your case before her."

"And shield myself behind a woman! That does not sound like the chivalrous Visci of old. She is only a woman, after all."

"One in a million," Visci answered calm- ly. "If she holds out her right hand to you, cling to it as a drowning desperate man does to a rock; it is your only chance of salvation. And now it is late. I must go."

Despite his own better sense, Maxwell began to dwell upon the fact of gaining as- sistance from the mysterious Isodore. At meetings of the League in London, he had heard her name mentioned, and always with the utmost reverence and affection. If she could not absolutely relieve him from his undertaking, she could at anyrate shield him from non-compliance with the mandate. Full of these cheerful thoughts, he fell asleep.

He found his friend the following morn- ing quite cheerful, but in the daylight the ravages of disease were painfully apparent. The dark rings under the eyes and the thin features bespoke nights of racking pain and broken rest.

Visci noticed this and smiled gently. "Yes, I have changed," he said. "Some- times after a bad night, I hardly know my- self. It is cruel, weary work lying awake hour after hour fighting with the grim King. But I have been singularly free from pain lately, and I am looking much better than I have been."

"There might be a chance yet," Maxwell replied with a cheerfulness wholly assumed, and thinking that this "looking better" was the nearest approach to death he had ever seen. "An absence from Rome, a change of climate, has done wonders for people be- fore now."

Visci shook his head. "Not when the main-spring of life is broken," he said: "no human ingenuity, no miracle of surgery can mend that. Maxwell, if they had deferred their vengeance long, they would have been too late. Some inward monitor tells me I shall fail them yet."

"You will for me, Visci, you may depend upon that. Time is no object to me."

"And if I should die and disappoint you of your revenge, how mad you would be!" Visci laughed. "It is a dreadful tragedy to me; it is a very serious thing for you; and yet there is a comic side to it, as there is in all things. Ah me! I cannot see the droll side of life as I used; but when the bloodthirsty murderer sits down with his victim tete-a-tete, discussing the crime, there is something laughable in it after all."

"I daresay there is," Maxwell answered grimly, "though I am dense enough not to notice it. To me, there is something hor- ribly, repulsively tragic about it, even to hear you discussing death in that light way."

"Familiarity breeds contempt. Is not that one of your English proverbs?" Visci said airily.—"But, my good Frederick," he continued, lowering his voice to a solemn key, "the white horseman will not find me unprepared, when he steals upon me, as he might at any moment. I am ready. I do not make a parade of my religion, but I have tried to do what is right and honest and honourable. I have faced death so often, that I treat him lightly at times. But never fear that when he comes to me for the last time"——

Maxwell pressed his friend's hand in silent sympathy. "You always were a good fel- low, Visci," he said; "and if this hour must come so speedily, tell me is there anything I can do for you when—when"——

"I am dead? No reason to hesitate over the word. No Maxwell; my house is in order. I have no friends besides my brother and he, I hope, is far beyond the vengeance of the League now."

"Then there is nothing I can do for you any way?"

"No, I think not. But you are my prin- cipal care now: your life is far more impor- tant than mine. I have written to Isodore, laying a statement of all the facts before her; and if she is the woman I take her for, she is sure to lose no time in getting here. Once under her protection, you are safe; there will be no further cause for alarm."

"But it seems rather unmanly," Maxwell urged.

"Unmanly!" echoed Visci scornfully. "What has manliness to do with fighting cowardly vendetti in the dark? You must, you shall do it!" he continued vehemently; but the exertion was too much for him, and he swayed forward over the table as if he would fall. Presently, a little colour crept into the pallid face, and he continued: "You see even that is too much for me. Maxwell, if you contradict me and get me angry, my blood will be upon your head after all. Now, do listen to reason."

"If my want of common-sense hurts you as much as that, certainly. But I do not see how this mysterious princess can help me."

"Listen to me," Visci said solemnly. Then he laid all his schemes before the other —his elaborate plans for his friend's safety, designs whose pure sacrifice of such were absolutely touching.

Maxwell began to take heart again. "You are very good," he said gratefully, "to take all this infinite pains for me."

"In a like strait you would do the same for me, Fred."

"Yes," Maxwell answered simply. "How Salvarini's words come back to me now! Do you remember, when I wanted to throw my insignia out of the window that evening, the last we all spent to- gether?"

"I recollect. It was two days before little Genevieve disappeared," Visci answer- ed sadly.—"Do you know, I have never discovered any trace of her or Lucrece. Poor child, poor little girl! I wonder where she is now."

"Perhaps you may see her again some day."

"It has long been my dearest wish; but it will never be fulfilled now. If ever you do see her once more, say that I"——

"Visci!"

As the last words fell from the Italian's lips, his head hung forward, and he fell from his chair. For a moment he lay motionless, then raised his face slightly and smiled. A thin stream of blood trickled down his fair beard, staining it scarlet. He lay quietly on Maxwell's shoulder.

"Do not be alarmed," he said faintly. "It has come at last.—There are tears in your eyes, Fred. Do not weep for me. Do not forget Carlo Visci, when you see old friends; and when you meet little Genevieve tell her I forgave her.—Good-bye, old friend Take hold of my hand. Let me look in your honest face once more. It is not hard to die, Fred. Tell them that my last words— —Jesu, mercy!"

"Speak to me, Carlo—speak to me!"

Never again on this side of the grave. And so the noble-hearted Italian died; and on the third day they buried him in a single grave under the murmuring pines.

No call to remain longer now. One last solitary evening ramble, Maxwell took out- side the city wall ere his departure. As he walked along wrapped in his own sad thoughts, he did not heed that his footsteps were being dogged. Then with a sudden instinct of danger, he turned round. The feet that followed stopped. "Who is there?" he cried.

A muffled figure came towards him, and another stealthily from behind. A crash, a blow, a fierce struggle for a moment, a man's cry for help borne idly on the breeze, a mist rising before the eyes, a thousand stars dancing and tumbling, then deep, sleepy un- consciousness.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

SYMBOLS OF FATE.

Professional and Unprofessional Fortune Tellers.

What to learn.

The secrets of the past, present or future.

There is always some lucky hit - lucky for the fortune teller.

The most of people who have lived to any age have friends coming from a distance. Many have relatives who die and leave them fortunes. Young people are usually in love with some one of the opposite sex who is either dark or fair, and a journey is immi- nent in nearly all conditions. Crossing the water may mean going over a ferry or a running brook, as well as an ocean.

But the mystic quality lies in the fact that the person telling all these things is an an- nounced seer—born with a caul, like David Copperfield, and having intimate relations with the world of futurity and the powers of mystery.

No matter how ignorant of the civilizing influences of this life the inspired fortune- teller may be, how cheaply gotten up, or with what sordid circumstances environed, professors of all the sciences are willing to kneel at her feet to learn the secrets of the past, present and future, from her occult knowledge.

A new mythology would be a boon to soci- ety in its present condition when everybody is looking for a sign.

The crowing of a cock was an omen of ill to Peter. It heralds a visitor in those days as well as a change in the weather.

If you drop the scissors, a fork or a pen, and the point sticks in the floor, somebody is coming.

If your nose itches you are going to kiss a fool.

If your left hand tickles you will handle a sum of money.

If the right hand, you will shake hands with a friend.

If you first see a visitor in the looking- glass it is a sign of misfortune.

Two spoons signify a wedding; tea-spoons are understood.

But these signs of necromancy are as old as the doings of Macbeth's witches, whose weird incantations are practiced to this day. Indeed, a Shakespeare fortune-telling book would not be a bad enterprise. It would give a higher tone to the soothsayer's art. It might be called "Easy Lessons in the Horation Philosophy" and serve as a text- book in supernatural lore, with a motto by the second witch:

"By the pricking of my thumbs Something wicked this way comes."

Contagious.

"Laws, Mrs. Jupe, what a-ailin' Mistah Jupe?"

"Po' man got de lockjaw."

"Whew! Is it ketchin?"

"Oh, yes, indeed! ketch it from rus'y nails an' sich."

Making "a Clean Breast of It."

Softhearted Old Lady (when she heard the story and assisted applicant)—Dear me! Ah, poor man! You must indeed have gone through dreadful trials.

Tramp—I b'lieve yer, mum! An' what's still wus, mum, I was nearly al'ays con- victed!

The Servant Question.

Wife. "Bridget is absolutely worthless; she tries me from morning until night. I've a great mind to let her go."

Husband. "Well, how much do we owe her?"

Wife. "Only two months wages."

Husband. "Oh, well, we had better keep her."

The Old, Old Story.

"And will you let me go away without an answer, dear?" he said, gently, though his heart was throbbing double throbs.

"It is all so strange and unexpected, George,"—the words came soft and low. "If sometimes in my dreams the thought has come that you might some day call me —Ah, dear, you must read your answer in my eyes."

And the answer read, "I'll no t let you get away."

Partly.

Mrs. Buckrum, "How's dat baby ob you'n? Ye' wife was a-sayin' tudder day ez how she hadn't named it yit. Reckon she'll call it arter yo', ob course?"

Mr. Hodge Crabtree. "Wall, no'm, only partly. She's goin' call 'im Willyum Crabtree, Willyum arter her brudder Bill, and Crabtree arter me."

A Firm Clutch.

"Mr. Featherly," said Bobby, "Sister Clara asked pa last night if you were a young man who keeps the Sabbath."

"I hope, Bobby," replied Featherly, anx- iously, "that he told her that I do."

"Yes; he said that you keep everything you get a hold of."

NOW FOR SUMMER DRINKS.

The Effect of Iced Beverages Upon the Hu- man System.

With the advent of warm weather the demand for liquids to supply the wants of the body becomes vastly increased. A medical writer in St. Louis, treating of this subject, says: The heat excites the skin to exalted action, for it is mostly by means of the perspiration that the temperature of the body is kept down to its natural level, 98.4 degrees Fahrenheit. When the supply of liquids is scanty, or much below the actual demands, the greatest dangers are in- curred. These are from accumulation of waste materials, which are naturally re- moved by way of the skin and kidneys, besides the still graver (immediate) risks of sunstroke and heat exhaustion. Bever- ages of some kind must be taken, and we may with some advantage study the claims of those offered from which to make a se- lection.

The heat of the body may be modified to some extent by the use of fluids cooled to any degree from that of the normal standard to the freezing point, the ice itself may be swallowed when necessary to hasten the reduction of temperature. When beverages are taken cooled in this way the amount needed is reduced. Hence the instinctive craving for refrigerating drinks in summer. The amount necessary for keeping down the temperature being less, makes such drinks advantageous in many ways. Too great bulk is avoided; this lessens destен- sion of the stomach and consequent weaken- ing of digestion. Profuse perspiration is apt to irritate a sensitive skin and cooling beverages lessen the necessity for such in- creased work of the sweat apparatus.

OBJECTIONS AGAINST ICED DRINKS.

Many objections have been raised against ice-water and cold drinks generally. Most of these have no real foundation. A few of them may be noticed for the purpose of showing their weakness. Thus the bad teeth observed so often among Americans, which has made dentistry in that country an art that has nearly reached perfection, are often attributed to the use of iced beverages. But the dental imperfection is to be noticed in every village and farm-house, where such drinks are practically unknown. If the universal use of the frying-pan, hot bread and the American fire were blamed for their results the truth would be much nearer approached. Bad cookery is the main cause of dental imperfection.

That dyspepsia—the American disease— is due to defective cooking and imperfect chewing of the food and too great haste in eating, is undoubtedly the case in most in- stances; still there are many who believe that iced drinks are responsible for almost every variety of indigestion. When di- gestion is in progress there is a large flow of blood towards the stomach. The lining of that organ is in a state of congestion. The presence of a little ice-water or the like can scarcely be felt for a moment when millions of blood vessels are carrying the blood to and from it at a tremendous speed and that at a temperature of 100 degrees Fahrenheit. The effect of a moderate amount of ice-water would be simply a little stimulation, increasing rather than retard- ing the digestive process. Of course no one advocates the filling of the stomach with ice-water or other fluid at any tempera- ture during the digestive process, but a moderate amount of the former can do no harm—in fact, is rather beneficial. This cannot be said of alcoholics in any form, or of hot or very warm beverages. All these interfere more or less seriously with diges- tion, as experiments have abundantly dem- onstrated.

THE BENEFITS OF WATER DRINKING.

That water promotes appetite and diges- tion when taken with meals is shown by the fact that no "anti-fat" system of diet is so remarkably successful as that in which no drinks are permitted to be taken with meals or until two hours after them. When it is an object to reduce the amount of the blood, as in certain heart affections, the dry diet system is of great service, but the kidneys must be in excellent working order or this system must prove injurious. As a matter of fact, however, a considerable number of people in every community take too little fluids of any kind. They are afraid to drink when warm, do not desire it when cool, will not take it before or with meals, fearing to weaken digestion, and avoid drinking after meals, fearing an uncomfort- able sensation of fullness. Liver and ki d- ney troubles, headaches, neuralgia, &c., are often to be traced to this unnatural a oid- ance of fluids. It is probable that a large proportion of the benefits deriv ed from mineral springs is to be attribut ed to the taking of unusual quantities of water. Hence the reputation of many a health re- sort is based upon drinking water, not upon any real virtue resident in any special quantity of that imbibed.

Enough, perhaps, has been said of the dangers of well water, of impure ice, and that obtained from defective cisterns. The purity of drinking water cannot be too carefully watched. The ordinary filter only makes matters worse. The materials through which the water flows soon become a breeding place for the lower orders of vegetable life, while they strain out the coarser particles of dirt and give it a delus- ive appearance of purity. The unglazed porcelain filter is mostly free from such objections. This takes out all organized bodies, and when the ice is not brought into contact with water thus filtered it gives all the security that can be required against taking into the system the germs of disease. There is no security against the products of putrefaction passing through such a filter. In fact, the only way to guard against these is to watch the source of water supply with unceasing vigilance.

LEMONADE.

Water as a beverage, iced or at the ordi- nary temperature, is frequently modified to render it more agreeable to the palate or stomach, or slightly nourishing or stimu'a- ting. The addition of a vegetable acid, such as lemon or lime juice or vinegar, usually with sugar in some form, makes the drink agreeable to the taste, more digestible and slightly nourishing. Such liquids satisfy thirst in smaller amounts than would plain water at ordinary temperature. Some- times a mineral acid—sulphuric, muriatic or phosphoric—give the requisite sour to the "lemonade." Of these the dilute phos- phoric acid is the least harmful. When taken in large quantities it is pretty sure to impair digestion. Muriatic and sulphuric acids have no place in beverages except in certain fevers and other conditions of actual disease. They should never be used as habitual drinks. Because phosphorus is an essential ingredient in brain, nerve and bone, it has been thought that it might be well to increase the amount in the body by continually taking some compound containing it into the stomach. There is an im- mense amount of humbug in this, which the enterprising manufacturer is not slow to utilize. The phosphates, along with the different forms of phosphoric acid, do not add to the phosphorus in the body which can be used to advantage in building up new bone, nerve or brain. It has already become used up as much as the ashes and cinders after coal and wood has been burned. Combined with iron it makes an elegant, palpable preparation of that useful tonic, but no better than many other preparations of the metal. It certainly possesses no marvelous restorative properties by reason of the phosphorus present in this used-up condition.

OATMEAL WATER AND COLD TEA.

The addition of oatmeal to drinking water makes it nutritive, satisfying and agreeable to the stomach. For laborers it makes a useful addition to the diet, costs but little and repays the small outlay in the form of increased ability to perform labor, either physical or mental.

Diluted cold tea has long been known as an agreeable, slightly stimulating beverage. For this, or any other purpose, the tea leaves must not be boiled. If they are, a large amount of tannin is extracted along with the aromatic and stimulating princi- ples, and this sadly interferes with digestion in many individuals. A pinch of soda bicarbonate—ordinary "baking-soda"—add- ed to the leaves at the time boiling water is poured over them, and the "steeping" pro- cess limited to six or seven minutes, will remove almost all objections from cold or iced tea as an agreeable, stimulating summer drink. Coffee treated in a similar way may be used instead, but it contains much less of the stimulating principles.

STATISTICS.

The total number of bales of Australian wool received in England in 1885 was as follows—New South Wales, 279,516; Vic toria, 349,034; South Australia, 131,400; New Zealand, 253,830; Queensland, West- ern Australia, and Tasmania, 117,454; or a total of over 1,131,000, against 1,022,000 in 1885. Of Cape wools there were 1,354,000 bales, against 1,202,000.

Railways in India are in their infancy. If India were as well supplied with railways as England is, it would have 365,000 miles, instead of the 12,376 miles it now has. If the Indian Government continues the con- struction of railways at the same rate that it has been doing during the last thirty years, it will take more than 900 years to give India for its area the equivalent mile- age of England.

In 1886 London imported from different parts of the country, by sea, 4,671,127 tons of coal, as against 4,563,966 tons in 1885; and by railway and canal, 7,128,380 tons in 1886, as against 7,081,488 tons in 1885. After making due allowance for exports, there has been a total increase in the coal trade within the London district during the past year of 150,043 tons. The price has been low, the average, including the dues of the London market, being only 16s. 2d. per ton.

Next to the annual expenditure for food and drink of the people of the U ited Kingdom comes that on articles of dress, principally consisting in cotto , wool, linen, and silks, in boots, shoes, and hats, as well as in gold and silver ornaments and jewelry, involving an ou lay of well- nigh £148,000,000 gross, c £123,000,000 net or real value. The h comprises about £72,000 use expenditure some £11,000,000 for f ,000 for house-rent the value of annual a niture, estimating 000 for coal, £14,000 ditions, £15,000,000 000 for water, mal for gas, and £2,000. Then then ther ing in all £114,000,000. tobacco, amou e in the expenditure in gross. ating to some £13,000,000

In 1855 th in Englan number of telegraph messages pense to f at from one shilling and six was 889 our shillings, with free address tariff, ,360. In 1860, under the same under hey had risen to 1,863,839. In 1865 shil a reduced rate of from one to two la ings, and a sixpenny rate in certain ge towns, the total rose to 4,650,231. In 869 the number of messages was estimated at 7,500,000. Subsequently, under a tariff of one shilling for twenty words, the re- turn for 1870 was 9,850,177; for 1875 it was 19,253,120; for 1880 it was 26,547,137 and for 1885 it was 33,493,224. From October, 1885, to October 1886, under the sixpenny tariff for twelve words, the ad- dress being counted, the total mounted up to 47,508,509 messages. By separating the inland messages in the last two returns the great immediate increase by the change of tariff becomes more evident, as these figures give 24,615,395 messages in 1884-85 at the shilling, and 37,692,249 in 1885-86 at the sixpenny rate.

A Monstrous Cabbage and Huge Caldron.

Howell tells a tale of a traveller who re- ported that he had seen a cabbage under whose leaves a regiment of soldiers were sheltered from a shower of rain. An- other who was no traveller, yet the wiser man, said he had passed by a place where there were four hundred braziers making up a caldron; two hundred within and two hundred without beating the nails in. The traveller asking for what use that huge cal- dron was, he told him,—"Sir, it was to boil your cabbage.

Too Poetical.

Lady (to husband in the background). "Isn't it exquisite, George? Notice how delicately and harmoniously the tones of the colors are blended. That pale turquoise blue catches so beautifully the shell pink plush of the brocaded flower. What do you think of it, George? Is it not a veritable poem. And only sixteen dollars a yard!"

Husband. "Yes dear, it is a poem; but I think something in simple prose will wear as long and won't cost so much money."

To Sir Walter Scott.

"Who loves not more the night of June Than cold December's gloomy noon?"
Well, he who hath but flannels thick,
With ne'er a chance to live on tick;
The man who owns tobogran chutes;
The vender of the rubber boots;
The mortal who by selling skates
His lack of lucre mitigates—
All find your sentiment at fault,
Sir Walt,
And dub it rot,
Great Scott!

Markdale Standard.

C. W. Rutledge, Proprietor.

MARKDALE, JUNE. 30. 1887.

Irish Lake Pic-Nic.

The eleventh annual picnic was held at the "Irish Lake" on Tuesday. The weather was lovely and the attendance large.

A new feature, and one which was much appreciated, was the "music from the old tin horn." Flesherton and Markdale brass bands appeared to advantage in uniform and rendered in a masterly style selections of music to the delight of all lovers of music harmony. The contest between the bands for a prize of $15 was close and somewhat difficult to decide, but was awarded to the Flesherton band.

In the election for a gentlemans' Dressing Case, Mr. Lemont of Priceville was the winner. There was very little enthusiasm over this contest, Parks Bros string band furnished music in their usual first class style and the dancing platform was as usual well patronized.

The Rev. Father Feeny has rare tact and judgement in supervising such grtherings, and with his affable genial temperament made all feel at home.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—The Dominion Parliament was prorogued last Thursday night.

—Grading and track-laying has commenced on the Grand Trunk double track between Toronto and Montreal.

—The Governments Public Works Department have decided to build a line of telegraph from Wiarton to Tobermorey.

—The Postmaster General has announced that there will be no reduction in the rates of postage this year.

—James Conmee was elected for West Algoma last Thursday at Port Arthur by acclamation, and George Rankin who was nominated for East Algoma in opposition to R. A. Lyon, has retired, leaving the latter elected without opposition.

—Chief Justice Sir M. C. Cameron died on Saturday night last at his son's residence in Toronto, after a short illness, aged 65 years. In reference to the deceased the Mail of Monday says "By the death of Sir Matthew Crooks Cameron, Toronto, loses an estimable citizen of blameless life, Ontario a wise and upright judge, and the Dominion a faithful and gifted public servant whose services brought honour to it as well as to himself.

Holland Centre.

From our own correspondent.

Holland Centre Agricultural Society will hold a meeting on Saturday, July 2nd, to elect directors for the Fall Show.

The annual pic-nic of S. Section No. 7 Holland Centre was a grand success. It rained a little in the morning but cleared up beautifully in the afternoon. Great credit is due the teacher, Miss Lizzie Moore for the manner in which the children were trained for the occasion. The party broke up about 6:30 and all retired much pleased.

Mrs. A. E. Calcutt presented her husband with a fine boy on the 21st as a token of rememberence of the Queen's Jubilee. We wish the Jubilee boy and his mother every happiness.

Our Volunteer boys returned from Niagara in excellent condition. Some of them would just as leave stay there all summer.

Our Destiny.—A Western paper says that "Canada's destiny is to be a flourishing State of the American Union." Yes, it's only a financial colony of the American Union now.—Tid-Bits.

Flesherton.

From our own correspondent.

Master E. K. Richardson has been home from Owen Sound for a few holidays. He returned on Monday last—A. R. Fawcett, Esq., editor of the Advance, and wife, are this week enjoying a holiday east; in consequence we make no Advance this week.

Altho the weather was rather cool and damp it did not cool the ardour of the union pic-nic of the Methodist and Presbyterian Sabbath Schools of this village held on Thursday last. There was a good turn out and every body appeared to join heartily into the various amusements of the day.

Seldom on the departure of a Minister does so large a congregation assemble as that in the Methodist church here on Sunday evening last to listen to the last pulpit utterance of the Rev. W. Ayers as pastor of this charge. Almost every available seat was occupied and the extension seats in the aisles filled to the doors. From the words of the Apostle in the acts of the Apostle 20th chapt. and 32nd verse. "And now brethern, I commend you to God and to the word of His grace which is able to build you up and give you an inheritance among all those which are sanctified." The speaker delivered a very impressive and appropriate discourse at the close of the service M. Richardson Esq., and Dr, Christoe delivered brief addresses appropriate to the occasion.

Flesherton expects to celebrate Dominion Day loyally. Large posters announcing the field sport of the day, and in the afternoon the corner stone of the new School building will be laid, which will be much the largest public building here, being about one third larger than either of our commodious churches. It is expected the laying of the corner stone will be conducted with Masonic Ceremonies. Arrangements are not completed yet as to who shall conduct the ceremony. In the evening a garden party will be held under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid (Methodist) on Mr. M. Richardson's lawn.

No. 6 company of volunteers arrived home safe on Saturday last. A warm lunch was provided for them by the good ladies of the town. Capt. Campbell in a pithy address thanked the Ladies' heartily for their kindness in making such kind provision for the men. Ex. Capt. W. K. Flesher addressed the company and complimented the men on their soldierly and neat appearance. The men all looked hale and hearty and enjoyed their outing.

A Bold Black Bear.

On Sunday evening the 19th June when Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Henning, lot 15, con. 9 Euphrasia, were returning from church, they were startled by a black bear which was apparently making himself at home about the dwelling, and left quite leisurely on the approach of Mr. and Mrs. H. The following evening his bearship again appeared, and with undaunted boldness strolled up to the house drank milk from a dish near the door, then went to the milk house, which stands a few feet from the dwelling, where he pushed the partly opened door in and entered, there drinking a crock of cream and a pail of fresh milk; from there he walked around to the front of the house, got up with his paws on the window sill and looked in. As to fire-arms, Mr. Henning was defenceless and was of course timid in making an attack without such a weapon. Bruin however left and Mr. H. summoned his neighbors Robt Nixon. Seth Mathers and S. Henning who soon arrived armed to the teeth, when each took a position to watch his return. The moments began to glide tediously away and the shades of evening crept over the atmosphere when, behold, bruin again put in an appearance as bold as ever. Each man laid low until he came within easy range of their shooting irons when "click" went Nixon's gun and the black monster, appearently surprised, made a hasty retreat but fell before he got far, the ball having touched a vital point. A second and third well aimed shots followed when bruin turned up his toes. The carcass weighed over 200 lbs and the hide was sold to W. J. McFarland of this town. It is very evident that the bear had made frequent visits before detected, as a pail of milk at the door had disapeared several previous nights. Mrs. H. wondering in the morning what could have taken it, but the mystery now appears to be solved.

Headache, Biliousness, Dyspepsia and Indigestion relieved and cured at once by Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Try it. Sample free.

JOHN J. DALEY, ESQ.

"JOHN J. DALEY & CO.,

REAL ESTATE DEALERS.

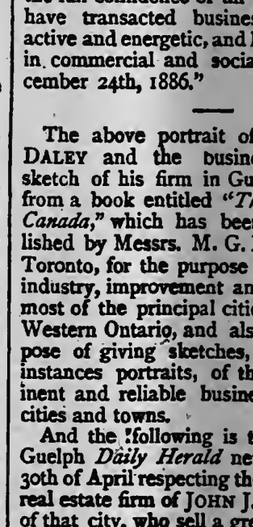
There is a very large amount of farm property continually changing hands, nearly all of which is handled by the firm of John J. Daley & Co., who are well known, not only in this Dominion, but also in the United States and Europe.

Mr. John J. Daley, whose portrait heads this sketch, succeeded Messrs. Thompson & Jackson two years ago in the Royal City; he is now the principal owner and sole manager of the most extensive and most systematically conducted real estate business in farming lands in Canada.

Mr. Daley purchases a large amount of farm property, having within a few months' time bought six farms at an aggregate price of $40,850.00 This firm have the best and most complete system of conducting their business known, which can be easily observed by any practical person in looking over their books, and reading and examining their letters, pamphlets, etc., and more particularly when Mr. Daley briefly and ably explains the system which he himself has adopted.

They have prominent agencies established in Europe as well as in Canada, and they have thousands of applications for farm property from all parts of Canada, the United States and Europe, and many from the Island of Jamacia and South Africa.

The Canadian Farm Advertiser, published by this well-known firm, has a very large circulation throughout Canada, Europe and the United States, and the sales effected recently through this medium are unprecedented in the history of real estate transactions in farming lands in Canada.



The firm are well known for their honorable and straightforward system of doing business, and have thus secured the full confidence of all with whom they have transacted business. They are active and energetic, and highly esteemed in commercial and social circles.—December 24th, 1886."

The above portrait of Mr. John J. Daley and the business notice and sketch of his firm in Guelph, are taken from a book entitled "The Industries of Canada," which has been recently published by Messrs. M. G. Bixby & Co., of Toronto, for the purpose of showing the industry, improvement and enterprise of most of the principal cities and towns in Western Ontario, and also for the purpose of giving sketches, and in some instances portraits, of the most prominent and reliable business men in the cities and towns.

And the following is taken from the Guelph Daily Herald newspaper of the 30th of April respecting the success of the real estate firm of John J. Daley & Co., of that city, who sell a great many farms at very high prices. A similar notice appeared in the Guelph Daily Mercury of the same date:

"The well-known real estate firm of John J. Daley & Co. have already this spring posted upwards of 8,200 sealed letters, besides over three-quarters of a ton in weight of other mail matter, principally The Canadian Farm Advertiser. This gives some idea of the extent of the firm's business. They now have in the neighborhood of 1,000 agencies established, and are making preparations to establish several thousand more, many of which are to be in Europe, for the purpose of placing their Canadian Farm Advertiser in the hands of intending buyers, and in getting them to come to Western Ontario to buy farms placed in the firm's hands for sale."

Those wishing to sell their farms should write for terms to the firm, John J. Daley, & Co., Guelph, Ont.

SOOTHING, CLEANSING, HEALING.

It Cures

CATARRH, Cold In Head, HAY FEVER.

STOPS Droppings from Nasal passages into the throat and excessive expectoration caused by Catarrh. Sent pre-paid on receipt of price, 50c. and $1. Address FULFORD & CO., Brockville, Ont.

Massey Agency

Holland Centre.

TORONTO Light Binder steel frame 5 & 6 feet cut

TORONTO MOWER, one and two horse.

MASSEY Harvester

MASSEY MOWER

SHARP'S RAKE.

A full stock of repairs kept constantly on hand for the above machines.

REPAIRS STRICTLY CASH.

Also agent for Hull's patent reversible Hay Carrier, Manufactured by Cockshutt Bro's, St. Thomas, and Fox Pea Harvester, Owen Sound.

THOS. WILLISCROFT, Agent.

MARKDALE CARRIAGE WORKS.

R. McNALLY:—Would hereby announce to the people of Markdale and the public generally that I have moved into my new carriage shop opposite the Markdale House, where I will manufacture every article in the wagon and carriage line, and having long experience in the business and by using first class material, I can guarantee satisfaction to every one who will favor me with their order.

Repairing, Painting and Trimming promptly attended to.

A call respectfully solicited,

R. McNALLY, Proprietor.

MARKDALE SAsH and DOOR FACTORY

Having erected and fitted up in every detail a Sash, Door and Plain Factory, containing all the latest and most approved machinery, everything being new, I am now prepared to turn out

Sash, Doors, Blinds, Mouldings, Hollow Battons

FRAMES, LATH, FENCE PICKETS, &c.,

And everything needed in the building trade, in a manner second to none in Canada, and having engaged superior mechanics in every department, would now respectfully solicit public patronage.

Every Effort Made to fill Orders Promptly

PINE LUMBER Dressed and Undressed

Direct from North Shore, all sizes, on hand. Plain and Fancy Turning done.

Careful Attention to Orders from a Distance.

303 THOS. McNEA.

IMPORTANT!

TO all users of Machine Oils, don't forget to call on E. S. MABEE, Sign of the Cross-Cut Saw, Markdale, and ask for the CASTOR E OIL, it is unequalled by any.

"AURORA"

WATER WHITE OIL,

is equal to American for brillance of light.

Empire Oil Co.,

Refiners & Manufacturer's,

349-75 London and Toronto.

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT 131 con 3 west of T. & S. Rd. Artemesia, 50 acres, about 20 acres clear of stumps and stones, balance good hardwood bush. Five miles from Markdale and four from Flesherton. For further particulars apply to A. S. Thompson, Flesherton P. O. or J. J. Thompson, Orilla.

342-tf

NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that any person or persons found trespassing or fishing on the farms of the undersigned will be prosecuted according to law without further notice.

Signed:—

John B. Thibaudeau, Thos. Brady
Edward Brady, James Brady,
William Brady. Wm. McCutcheon
John Shears, Geo. Richardson
Wm. McNally, George McNally,
James Elliott, James Stinson.
Adam Hislop, Robt Graham.
John Webber. John Perkins.

BE SURE & GET YOUR

PUMPS,

—FROM—

J. T. QUINN,

MARKDALE,

He makes as good a pump as there is in the market, and at the lowest possible prices, besides it is so convenient for getting repairs besides when buying from a distance.

Have some style about you and support home enterprise by buying from Quinn.

WE WANT

100 GOOD MEN at once, to sell for the Fonthill Nurseries (largest in Canada over 465 acres) steady employment and no lost time, liberal commission or salary best advantages; splended outfit furnished free any pushing man can succeed. Apply for terms to,

STONE & WELLINGTON,

Toronto, Ont.

Prof. Low's sulphur soap is a delightful toilet luxury as well as a good curative for skin disease,

DISTRICT DOINGS.

SYNOPSIS OF COUNTY AND DISTRICT DOINGS FROM OUR EXCHANGES PREPARED FOR STANDARD READERS.

Real deserving persons seldom receive special tokens of recognition.

BE ON YOUR GUARD

Don't allow a cold in the head to slowly and surely run into Catarrh, when you can stay it for 25c. by using Dr, Chase's Catarrh Cure. A few applications cure insipient Catarrh; 1 to 2 boxes cures ordinary catarrh case; 5 boxes is guaranteed to cure chronic Catarrh. Try it. Only 25c. and sure cure Sold by all druggists. 333 83

Men of impure motives are sure to judge others by their own "half-bushel."

A FREE GIFT.—Around each bottle of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure is a Medicine Guide and Receipe Book containing useful information, over 200 Recipes, and pronounced by doctors and druggists as worth ten times the cost of the medicine. Medicine and book $1. Sold by all druggists.

Why is there nothing like leather? Because it is the sole support of man.

Don't use any more nauseous purgatives such as Pills Salts &c., when you can get in Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters a medicine that moves the Bowels gently, cleansing all impurities from the system and rendering the Blood pure and cool. Sold by all Druggists. tf

A NOVELTY SITUATION.—"Yes, sir," he said with emphasis, I want excitement. I am tired of this humdrum life on a Northern railway."

"Young man," observed an old gentleman in the back seat. "I was in Charleston, S. C., the other day, and they are looking for just such a man as you."

"What for?" asked the young man who yearned for excitement.

"To break on an earthquake." replied the old gentleman as he put on a travelling cap,—Tid-Bits.

CHOLERA INFANTUM.—That terrible scourage among children may be speedily cured by Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. All forms of bowls complaints, nausea, and vomiting, and an ordinary diarrhœa to the most severe attack of Canadian remedy known for children or adults suffering from summer complaints.

Dundalk has a new driving park which they will formally open on Dominion Day.

A PROFESSIONAL OPINION.—Rev. F. Gunner B. D., of Listowel Ont., says regarding B. B. B., "I have used your excellent Burdock Compound in practice and in my family since 1884, and hold it No. 1 on my lists of sanative remedies. Your three busy B's never resting, weaken or worry."

The Meaford Monitor is 19 years old. We wish Mr. Sunter, the proprietor, success.

A LIVING MIRACLE.—"My infant daughter was taken ill with cholera infantum, the doctor said she could not live. The Reverend Wm. McWilliams would not allow her head to be lifted when he babtised her, she was so weak. Dr. Fowler's Wild Strawberry gave immediate relief. She is a living miracle, hale and hearty. Since that time (7 years) our house has never been without that remedy." * * * From statement of George Johnston, Harwood, Ont.

The Thornbury News comments favorably of the renderings of Markdale talent, Messrs Anderson, Benson and Chambers, at a Concert held at Thornbury on the evening of the 21st also J. E. Richards of Rocklyn formerly of this town.

NATURE MAKES NO MISTAKE.—Nature's own remedy for bowel complaints, cholera morbus, cholic, cramps, vomiting, sea sickness, cholera infantum, diarrhœa, dysentry and all diseases of a like nature belonging to the summer season, is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, which can be obtained of all dealers in medicine.

NATIONAL PILLS will not gripe or sicken yet are a thorough cathartic:

DANGER.—There are some who pay but little or any attention to a cough or cold, and say let nature take its course. This is just the time nature should have assistance. The lungs are threatened. Assist them with Tamarac Elixir.

IT CAN DO NO HARM to try Freeman's Worm Powders when your child is ailing, feverish or fretful.

A BUSINESS LETTER.

T. Milburn & Co., Tilsonburg, March 15th, 1887

Sirs,—Please ship at once three dozen bottles B B. Bitters. Best selling medicine in the shop. Sold seven bottles to-day. Yours truly C. Thompson.

The above sample is but one of hundreds of similar expressions regarding the popularity of B. B. B.

AS SWEET AS HONEY is Dr. Low's Pleasan Worm syrup, yet sure to destroy and expe worms.

Mr. W. E. Caiger, Advertising Agent for the Toronto News, says—I was induced to try Nasal Balm for a severe and troublesome Cold in the head. Once using it literally washing out the clogged sections, and left my head clear as a bell.

WEAVING.

Having returned to Markdale, in order to be more convenient for my customers, I beg to announce that I am now prepared to do all kinds of Custom Weaving. Residence and stand, opposite Presbyterian Church.

ARCH BOYD.

CLIPPINGS.

Mr. H. Milne, of Maxwell, a student at present stationed at Thornbury and Heathcote, conducted the preparatory Communion services in Erskine church, here, on Friday evening last. He delivered a very impressive discourse, which was much appreciated by the congregation. If spared, Mr. Milne has a brilliant career before him.—[Meaford Mirror.

The most severe thunder storm for years, passed directly over the town last Friday afternoon between 7 and 8 o'clock. The roaring of the thunder and flashing of lightning was simply appalling while the rain fell in torrents. The flag staff on the Queen's hotel was struck and the splinters sent flying down the siedwalk by lightning, and how the house escaped searious damage is a wonder, but strange to say the lightning went no further than the length of the pole. Several of electric lights went out with a snap, and numerous telephones were rendered useless.—[Mt. Forest Rep.

GOLDEN WEDDING.—While our citizens generally were preparing to celebrate the Queen's Jubilee, the family of our old townsman, Mr. John Mills, were celebrating another event of still grater importance to them, and which dated from the same time. Mr. and Mrs. Mills were married on the day of the Queen's accession to the throne and on Monday last celebrated their golden wedding, surrounded by their children and grand children, a numerous progeny. The old couple were the recipients of many gifts, and of the congratulations of a large number of friends, who wished that they might yet live to see many more returns of the anniversary of their wedding day. —[O. S. Tizer.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight alum or phosphate powders. sold only in cans, ROYAL BAKING POWDER Co., 106 Wall St., N. Y.

NOTICE.

WM. SARGENT, Berkeley, has a Durham Bull for service at his farm seven-eighth bred. Terms on application. 354-57

6 PER CENT.

Money loaned on Farm or Town Property at lowest rates of interest. Apply to
R. J. SPROULE,
Conveyancer & Postmaster. Flesherton.

Collingwood and Georgin Bay Line.

Royal Mail,

In connection with the Northern and North-Western R'ys, and the Grand Trunk R'y.

Str. PACIFIC, Captain P. M. Campbell.
Str. ATLANTIC. Captain R. D. Foote.
Str. NORTHERN BELLE, Capt. W. J. Bassett.

The fine new Steamers "PACIFIC" & "ATLANTIC" will run as follows during the season (weather permitting.)

Leaving Collingwood at 1 p. m.; Meaford at 3 p. m.; Owen Sound at 8 p. m.; and Wiarton at 11:45 p. m.; every

Wednesday and Saturday.

For Killarney, Manitowaning, Little Current, Kagawong, Gore Bay, Spanish River, Serpent River, Algoma Mills, Blind River, Thessalon, Bruce Mines, Hilton, St. Joseph's Island, Garden River, and Sault St. Marie.

The Saturday Steamer only will call at Cockburn Island.

MACKINAW.—During the summer season the above steamers will continue the trip on to the Island of Mackinaw making six full days of a round trip at a cost of $12.00 only including meals and berth.

For information as to freight and fares. Appply to any Agent of the above Railways, the Pursers on board the steamers, or to the Great Northern Transit Co., Collingwood.

THOS. LONG, Secretary. CHAS. CAMERON, Manager.

FARMERS!

Don't forget there is good work done at the Flesherton

WOOLEN FACTORY.

And we are doing all in our power to please. Customers are finding out it is to their advantage to deal with us, our Prices are Low and Our Goods are Reliable and notwithstanding price being cut so close on account of hard times, I intend to reduce the manufacturing prices in nearly every branch, viz., OILING, ROLL-CARDING, SPINNING, WEAVING, &c., &c. Give us a trial and see for yourself.

W. H. FLESHER.

Flesherton, May 30th, 1887.

HEAD QUARTERS

FOR

Books, tationery, Fancy Goods, Toys, Wall Paper, &c.

Toronto St. next Door to the Mansion House, Markdale.

A. Dinsmore returns his sincere thanks for the very liberal support accorded him since commencing as above, and hopes by strict attention to business and moderate prices to merit a continuance of public appreciation and patronage. Those requiring

WALL PAPERS

would consult their own interest by examining his stock, consisting of over Three Thousand pieces at from 5 to 75c. per Roll. Sunday Schools requiring Liberary Books will find Hundreds to select from and at such FAVORABLE TERMS as are sure to satisfy.

☞ Note the fact.—That until I commenced business there was no such thing as a special discount allowed to Sunday Schools, or if you wanted Books could not get them unless by sending to Toronto or elsewhere, now your wants can be supplied at your Door and at lower prices than Toronto. I therefore with confidence appeal for public support. A full line of School Books, Stationery, &c., always on hand, also agent for the DOMESTIC PAPER PATTERNS. Agent also for The Harden Star Hand Grenade for Extinguishing Fires. ☞ NOTE THE ADDRESS,

A. Dinsmore.

New Tailor.

Will Stoddart, late of England and Jersy City, U. S. begs to inform the citizens of MARKDALE and surrounding community, that he has opened a TAILORING SHOP over Mr. W. J. McFarland's Store, where he is prepared to do all work entrusted to him in the Latest and Nobbiest Styles; as I will inspect all work before leaving the Shop, customers may rely on having work turned out first-class in every particular; trusting that I may receive a fair share of the public patronage

I remain,
Faithfully your's,
WILL STODDART.

Markdale, March 14th, 1887.

New General Provision Store

THE undersigned would hereby respectfully intimate to the inhabitants of Markdale and surrounding country that I've opened up a general Provision store where I intend to keep on hand a general supply of all kinds of provisions such as:—

FLOUR, OATMEAL, CORNMEAL INDIAN CORN, GRASS SEED, OATS, BRAN, SHORTS, CHOPP, SCREENINGS. also a quantity of SEED GRAIN, HAMS, BACON, LARD, &c., in fact everything people want in this line.

Shop one door west of Joe Lamb's Blacksmith shop.

Soliciting a share of public patronage I am respectfully yours,

Jas. Miller
MARKDALE.

THE PLACE

TO GET

PURE PARIS GREEN

AT

Stephen's Drug Store.

THE

PLACE

TO GET THE BEST GRADE

OF

Hellobore! Hellobore!

AT

Stephen's Drug Store.

THE

Place to get Stanley's Spectacles which are the best at

Stephen's Drug Store.

Pure Cream of Tarter, Tested Baking Soda, and Pure Spices of all kinds.

R. L. Stephen.

R. S. Rae, Tailor.

REMOVED.

In returning thanks to my numerous customers for liberal patronage during the past 14 years in which I have done business in Markdale, and soliciting a continuance of the same, I would also intimate that I have removed to my premises on Mill Street, next door to Stephen's Drug Store, and opposite to the Post Office; where I shall be happy to meet all my customers.

Respectfully Yours,
R. S. RAE,
Markdale

TORONTO HOUSE.

I am offering this week Ready-Made Clothing, and

BOOTS & HOE

AT

astonishingly low prices. Persons requiring a summer outfit would do well to see my stock.

Wm Brown.

For Sale or to Rent.

ONE of the best farms in Artemesia township, being lots 115 and 116 third range west of T. & S. Road, three miles from Markdale, comprising 100 acres, over 80 of which is cleared and in good state of cultivation, well fenced, young and old orchard, watered with never failing spring and good well, brick house, good carriage house and stable and two log barns. Possession will be given after harvest. For further particulars apply on the premises to,

JOHN WHITBY,
Markdale, P. O.

MIRACULOUS.—"My Miraculous Cure was that I had suffered from kidney disease for about two years, was off work all that time. A friend told me of B. B. B., I tried it, and am happy to say that I was cured by two bottles." Wm. Tier, St. Marys, Ont.

OWEN SOUND

MARBLE WORK

H. B. HARRISON

MANUFACTURER OF

MARBLE AND GRANITE

MONUMENTS & HEADSTONES

Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.

JUST RECEIVED

3 Carloads Finest Variegate Marble

☞ Largest stock in the Dominion select from. Personally selected at the quarries in Vermont. Will be sold at prices which defy competition.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

N. B.—Beware of Monuments and Head stones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered together, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide the imperfections, and called White Bronze.

H. B. HARRISON

ROBT. ASKIN,

UNDERTAKER,
MARKDALE,
FUNERAL FURNISHINGS
supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse
for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—
FURNITURE
In Stock at bottom prices.

PICTURE FRAMING
Done on short notice.
ROBT. ASKIN.

WM. BREADNER.
Carpender and Builder
GEORGE St., MARKDALE.

ALL kinds of building and house carpenter work done in the village or country. Call early before the rush comes. 339-52

CARD OF THANKS.

In thanking my customers for their liberal patronage in the past. I have much pleasure in being still able to supply them with the following celebrated machines, viz.

The Watson all-steel two-horse twine Binder.
The Watson Deering Binder.
The Watson Improved Lion Reaper.
The New Humming Mower.
The Humming-bird Mower.
The Watson Daisy Rake.
The Mann Champion Rake.
The Tolten Pea Harvester.
The Mann Broad-cast Seeder and Harrows Combined.
The Champion Combined Drill, Colter & Scott, Oshawa.
The best Plow's and Harrows in the market.
Root Cutters, Grain Crushers, Fanning mills. Land Rollers.
Agent for the Waterson's Co's Machinery and Steam Threshers.
Horse Powers, Wagon's Buggies, Democrats, and every implement a farmer requires. Parties reqiring anything in above lines will find it to their advantage to call at my new implement house opposite R. McNally's Carriage works, where Mr. R. Robertson will be pleased to wait on customers in my absence.

J.H. CARSON, Agent
148-61 Markdale.

CANADIAN PACIFIC R. R.

TIME TABLE.

—Markdale Station—

GOING SOUTH.	6.47 a. m.	3.52 p. m
GOING NORTH.	12.02 p. m.	9.10 p. m

Burdock BLOOD BITTERS

WILL CURE OR RELIEVE

BILIOUSNESS, DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, JAUNDICE, ERYSIPELAS, SALT RHEUM, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, DIZZINESS, DROPSY, FLUTTERING OF THE HEART, ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH, DRYNESS OF THE SKIN,

And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD.

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.

A FARMER'S EXPERIMENT

BY J. MANTON MARLOWE.

"Caw! caw! caw!"

"Whoa!" said Farmer Tolley. The team stopped. Farmer Tolley leaned on the plough-handle, and looked up to a clear space in the sky, which was as cerulean as a sea.

"Caw! caw! caw!"

There were light clouds drifting across the blue expanse, driven by the warm western winds, and between the earth and sky was flying a dark object—a solitary crow.

"Caw! caw! caw!"

"Yes, I hear ye," said Farmer Tolley. "Come to pull up my corn this year before it is planted. I know you of old. I declare it is too bad! Go lang!"

Not far from the field where the farmer was ploughing was a swamp. In winter, when it was frozen and "sledding" was good, the farmers worked there, cutting their summer's wood. But as soon as spring came it was a miry bog. The great trees rose as from countless mossy islands. No one could penetrate it after April during the warm season, except when there was a drouth. In this watery solitude, in the tops of the tall pines the crows made their nests.

Farmer Tolley glanced up from the neat furrow the plow was turning to see where the dark object was going. The black sails of the pirate of the air swept before the warm winds towards the pines in the deepest bogs of the swamp.

"I declare it is too bad!" reiterated the farmer. "Too bad! Just like your relations waitin' round for your property before you die. Go lang!"

At the end of the furrow the farmer stopped his team and went to the well-sweep in the dooryard for some water. When the well-pole was descending his wife came to the door.

"Sophia, what do you think? I've seen that crow again."

"Show! You don't say so, Pelick!" Farmer Tolley's Christain name was Peleg.

"Sure as you're alive, I have!"

"Do you think, Pelick, it was the same one?"

"Yes, he knew me, and spoke to me from the sky, just as though I had been one of the old prophets, and he'd been sent to try my patience."

"Do you think it was the same one what pulled your corn so last year, Pelick?"

"The same one Sophia. Pulled the whole field up so that I had to plant it all over again. When I had gone away to the Four-Days' Meetin', and as a delegate too! I shant go this year, if they elect me. That crow did me well-nigh on to fifty dollars damage. I don't know but a hundred."

Farmer Tolley tipped the bucket on the stone well-curb.

"Don't you want I should bring you out a dipper, Pelick, or a tumbler, or somethin'?"

"No, I can use the bucket just as well."

"Well, Pelick, I don't know what you'll do."

Pelick went back to his team.

That evening, after milking and doing the chores, he sat down by the fire, for the evenings were yet somewhat long and cool, and took up the local journal.

"Pelick," said the good wife, "what do you think I found? There's a piece in that paper about crows."

"Where, Sophia?"

"Let me take the paper and I will find it for you. There Pelick."

Farmer Tolley adjusted his spectacles and began to read.

The cat climbed into his lap and rubbed against the paper with a faint mew.

"You get down, puss. Let me read this, Sophia! Sophia, I say! It says here, Professor Solomon, one of those great professors that arranges the planets and all them things, I suppose, it says, he says, Sophia, that the crow never alights beneath any object of which he is afraid. Just listen a moment: 'It is a fact well known to ornithologists that a crow never alights beneath any object of which he is afraid. Hence scarecrows should be erected high in the air, like barrels on tall poles, etc. The New England custom of stringing the field is for this reason very effective.' Stands to reason that it is so, Sophia. Folks are discovering almost everything now-a-days."

Farmer Tolley stroked the cat. He was a very guileless, tender-hearted man. It must have been a very mean kind of a crow to have pulled his corn, when he was "gone away to the Four-Days' Meetin' as a delegate, too."

After the bluebirds came the robins, after the robins, the martins; after the martins, the orioles, and then it was planting time.

One day when Farmer Tolley was industriously dropping corn and rejoicing in the sunshine, a black shadow swept across the row, like a partial eclipse, and his feet were arrested by a familiar voice—

"Caw! caw! caw!"

"You black wretch!" said Farmer Tolley. "I'll fix you! You go along with your caw, caw, cawin! Wait till I get up my sicentific scarecrow! That will make your eyes stick out. You won't do as you did last year, when I set up my straw man. Keep a comin' a little nearer, a little nearer, and finally one damp day you dropped down and lit upon his head. But I've got ye this year. There's nothin' that's like science."

The peach boughs reddened with blossoms, the pear trees became white as snow. Then the orchard burst into bloom like hills of roses. There were burning bushes in all the roadsides and pastures. Then planting time was over.

The bobolinks came, and the tender blades of corn began to form geometrical lines in the brown fields.

Just at this time, when there were damask mornings, and dewdrops on every leaf and blade of grass, and the clover was incense, and the roses were filling, as cups with wine, a wonder appeared in Bonneyville, such as the oldest inhabitant had never seen.

It was in Farmer Tolley's corn field.

In the middle of the said field there was a rock. It was on this rock that the wonder appeared.

It consisted of the figure of a man, or rather of a giant, as though one of the champions of the aboriginal race had come back to behold the advances that science was making in the world. The effigy held in its hand a tall pole, and on the top of the pole was an open umbrella.

The farmer had set up this effigy one day at nightfall; it was on the evening of the first day that he discovered that his corn was beginning to break through the hills.

On the morning after this gigantic apparition was made to lift up its umbrella thus high in the air, Farmer Tolley rose early and took his milking pails and went out to milk his four thrifty cows. But the thought of his scarecrow, constructed after Prof. Solomon's plan, so excited his curiosity that he put down his pails and walked briskly toward the cornfield. He sat down there under a tree by the wall, and viewed with satisfaction and amazement the creation of his own hands, which loomed above the sprouting field under the protecting umbrella.

The crow was also up early.

From the far-off pine-tops in the inaccessible bogs, there came an exclamation of wonder.

"Caw! caw! caw!" with a flapping of glossy wings.

"Haw! haw! haw!" said the farmer, slapping his hands on his knees; "so you see it, do ye? I can take a little rest after plantin' time, this year, thanks to Prof. Solomon. Haw! haw! haw!"

When the neighbors saw the apparition they, also, as well as the crows, were greatly surprised. They stopped by the bars to look at it. Horses saw it from the road and were frightened. The select men met and talked about it. Was it safe? It might cause a skittish horse to run, or take the senses away from some nervous woman or child.

The sagacious farmer's corn came up well, and rejoiced in the sunshine of the glowing days. The farmer surveyed it with pride, and the crow with envy from afar off. When the ill-omened bird flew over that field he flew high, as though, seized by a better inspiration, he was ascending toward the sun.

A third or fourth morning after the giant with the lofty umbrella had been palced upon the rock, Farmer Tolley again visited his field. The crow, also, had made a short excursion in that direction, and was contemplating the giant from a tree on the edge of the swamp.

"Caw! caw! caw!" he called, as he saw the farmer crawling through the bars of the promising field.

"You don't say so!" said the farmer. "Got along as far as you dare to, haven't ye? You see it, don't ye? How that corn is comin' up!"

The next morning brought to the farmer a further surprise. On going to the field he found that the crow had arrived there before him, and was surveying the greenery from a tall white berch that rose from a corner in the wall.

The farmer stopped short when he first saw the black object swaying in the wind from the top of the white birch tree. He was thinking at that time of the wonderful advancement that knowledge was making in the fields of discovery and in ascertaining the real relations of things, and he was rather humiliated at the suspicion that the crow also might have become a scientist and be making progress as well.

In these days of advancing knowledge the good parson called to see Peleg with an important message.

"I've been talking with a committee, Peleg, and they are unanimous that you shall go as the delegate to the June meeting this year. You had a rather hard experience last year on account of the crow, but Deacon Holden says that he will get his little boy to watch your field this year. He thinks that he cannot go anyhow."

"I shall not need anyone to watch my field this year, parson. I have been studying science, and I have set up a contrivance that would terrify the boldest servant or the prince of the power of the air—I mean figuratively that crow. Go out to the field with me, parson, and I will show you one of the most wonderful sights that you ever set eyes on! All the neighbors are talking about it!"

The parson and farmer Tolley passed through the orchard toward the field. The flaky apple blossoms drifted upon the breeze and whitened the emerald turf.

"This is a wonderful age in which we are living, parson; steam cars and telegraph and balloons, and pumps and things. There is one thing, parson, that you can always trust, and—that—is—science!"

The corn field came into view with the colossal image erected to science under the ægis of the lofty umbrella.

"There, parson, what do you think of that?"

"Caw! caw! caw!"

"Massy, parson, where did that crow fly from? Rose right out of the ground like."

"Peleg," said the parson, "science has many sides to it. You cannot trust a new principle of science until you you know the whole of it and it is wholly proven. There are discoveries and discoveries."

"The principle of this discovery," said Peleg, "is that no crow ever lights underneath an object of which it is afraid. Now, any crow would be afraid of such an object as that, it stands to reason. That's so, parson, every time. Therefore that there field is just as much protected and just as safe as though there was never a crow in all the wide world. That's what you would call logic, parson."

"Yes, Peleg, but in these great logical questions one wants to be sure that his premises are correct. The crow knows more than you think he does, Peleg, and I would not leave a field of mine like that without watching at this time of year without I was perfectly sure that my science and logic were perfectly correct. I wouldn't put any man's theory against that crow. He may have a theory of his own before you get back, Peleg. When a crow gets over being scared of an object he becomes wonderfully tame and bold. My father once had a tame crow that would steal his shoestrings out of his shoes when he was eating at the table. Theories are good things to work by Peleg, but a man is accountable for the exercise of his common sense. 'Prove all things,' the wise man said. Science is not science, and logic is not logic, unless you're sure."

Peleg and Sophia went to the June meeting. On the morning before Peleg started for this gathering of excellent, thrifty, will ordered people, which was appointed to take place in a little white church on the green of a neighboring town, he walked proudly over the corn field, which had become like a rippling sea of green. The thrushes were singing in the woods, and the robins in the orchards and dooryard trees.

"There is music everywhere," said Peleg.

A dreadful discord broke upon, or rather into, the choral harmonies of the woods and orchards and ancestral trees.

"Young crows, I do believe," said Peleg. "A whole family of them. Almost grown up, too. How lucky I am to have a scare crow like that!"

The June meeting proved delightful to Peleg and Sophia. There was nothing selfish in Peleg's soul, and he related to several farmers who were delegates the achievement of science as illustrated by his wonderful scarecrow.

The day of his return was rainy. He remarked to Sophia that they had need of the umbrella which was protecting the giant in the corn field. The latter certainly stood in danger of rheumatism or catarrh.

"Never mind, Peleg," said Sophia; "it is doin' great service where it is."

Immediately on his return Peleg visited the cornfield. He stopped at the bars. The crow did not greet him from the tree tops, but, could it be? there was a black gulf in the sea of green. It was near the wonderful giant, who was still holding his open umbrella boldly above his head. The crow had surely been at work there.

Farmer Tolley walked slowly toward the desert in the late beautiful expanse. It was raining very hard.

As he approached the vacant space his feet were arrested by a sound that made his lower jaw fall and his knees tremble. It came from the umbrella.

"Caw, caw, caw!"

"Could it be?"

Out from under the umbrella darted a dreadful object, with wings like night, wildly ejaculating, "caw, caw, caw!"

The farmer paused.

"I never!"

There was a commingling of Plutonian sounds inside of the umbrella—a wail as from an orphan asylum. Presently out flew a young crow.

Then another!

And another!

And a fourth!

Then followed their mother, making a long solemn procession through the windy, watery air. The poor things had lost their umbrella, but not their mother.

Farmer Tolley stood like one petrified. The collapse of science and logic and theory all in a moment, as it were, seemed to him like the blowing away of the word on which his feet of faith were planted. But he had not been gaining will power during the June meeting to fall into a passion on the very day of his return. He recalled, too, what his prudent parson had said about not being over confident in a theory unless you are sure that all the premises are correct and well proved.

He only said mildly—

"I'll tell Sophia of that."

And he added philosophically—

"When one plan does not work well, I've always noticed that the best way is to try another."

The next day the farmer removed the giant and the tall umbrella from the corn field.

On the morning after the disappearance of the airy knight, a very innocent looking scarecrow appeared upon the identical rock where science had met such a signal defeat. To the outward eye it was the figure of a man holding in his two hands a gun after the manner of a soldier presenting arms. Only Sophia knew the terrible secret contained in the immobile-looking figure.

The crow was up betimes on that morning, and beat its way through the sea of gray mist mingled with sunbeams to the little birch tree in the corner of the field.

"Caw, caw, caw!"

The figure stood like a statue.

The brains of birds, like all brains, have their limitations; and to the crow's limited philosophy, that figure could not be a man. Corvus swung up and down on the tree-top in the billowy mist, and now and then added its base notes to the sweet choruses of birds that encircled the field. Then he glided gently down on level wings into the middle of the field.

"Bang!"

Did ever a scarcrow fire a gun before?

If ever there was an astonished member of the raven family, it was that one; astonished not only that a scarcrow should fire a gun, but that the effect should be so harmless. It took the lucky bird but a moment to recover its wings, and the way the latter propelled a breakfastless body through space was something remarkable in the achievements of aerial velocity. The beguiled bird left the field in the dim distance before the echoes of the gun had ceased to die away among the pines.

Then the scarecrow walked toward the farmhouse, and had a talk with Sophia.

The summer came, and autumn powdered the autumn leaves, burned to gold. The purple swallows left the leaves; the partridge fluttered about the walls of the cornlands, and at last the wild geese again crossed the changing sky. The farmer raised a noble crop of corn that year.

The parson came to the husking. Peleg recited the history of the crop over the roast chickens, baked apples and pumpkin pies.

"Parson," said he, "the premises of that last scarecrow theory were all correct—were they not?"

"Not quite, not quite, Peleg," said the good parson. "What became of the crow?"

"He will not trouble me again next year, parson."

Peleg was right. The crow was wise. He never again visited the philosophical farmer's field, where scarecrows fire guns.

Personal Application.

The Rev. Wm. Robertson, of Kilmarnock, cannot be accused of dulness. He was frequently annoyed by one of those busybodies who are unfortunately to be met with in all congregations, and who never cease poking their noses into matters which do not concern them. One day, however, this pest, Andrew Oliphant by name, "o'erstepped the modesty of nature," so palpably that Mr. Robertson resolved to rebuke him publicly. Accordingly on the Sunday following he selected for his sermon the subject of besetting sins, and in the course of his remarks said:—"Everyone, my friends, has their draff-pock. Some has their draff-pock hinging afore them; others, again, has their draff-pock hinging a hint them; but I ken a man that sits in my ain kirk that has draff-pocks hinging a' round him. An' wha' do you think that is? Ye maun a' ken wha I mean—nae other than Andro Oliphant!"

Social Agonies.

She—Oh, how do you do, dear Mr. Lyon? Have you forgiven me for cutting you at Mrs. Leo Hunter's last night? I was actually stupid enough to take you for that horrid bore, Mr. Tetterby Thompson, whom you're said to be so like. It's a horrid libel—you're not like him a bit.

He—A—a—I wasn't at Mrs. Leo Hunter's last night—a—a—and my name is Tetterby Thompson.

THE TRADE OF MARRIAGE.

Impossible for Every Woman to Have a Husband.

The usual retort, when women complain of want of remunerative employment, is that they should not work, but find men to support them. As there are 500,000 more women than men in England, it is obviously impossible that every woman should have a husband. This state of things is as bad in Germany, also. The preponderance of the women over the men is greatest in the professional and upper middle classes. Among the richer aristocracy of England and the absolutely working people the sexes are still equal in number, and women can still marry. But the sons of clergymen, officers, civil servants, lawyers, doctors and some of the country gentry, find the struggle for existence too great in the Kingdom. They emigrate or leave the country by joining the military or naval service.

Their sisters all remain at home, unable to find husbands, and uneducated for work, even domestic work. These "superfluous women" most undoubtedly, as a body, perform the first duty of their sex—that of being charming; they are often handsome, and are generally well mannered and well dressed. They are "charmers," but there is no one to charm. They know very well that their chances of marriage are almost nil; therefore, should a solitary suitor without even a modest competency appear, they feel driven to accept the first man that asks them, whether they care for him or not, and most generally they do not. Their parents wish to get rid of them, so they marry without love. An evil arises out of this, more ghastly than can be described.

The marriage of convenience is a recognized social institution abroad. In England, in this nineteenth century, the women of the upper-middle classes adopt it without acknowledging it. However we may affect to deny it, there is a vast amount of married unhappiness in all classes. The fault is sometimes ascribed to the present degeneracy of woman, and sometimes to the deterioration of the men. The fault really lies in our social system, which gives a woman neither work nor money, and obliges her to sell herself before she has lost her only salable commodities—youth and beauty. As there exists four "superfluous women" to one man, the female has no choice, while the lordly male has the greater number from whom to pick and choose.

A Case in Point.

The people who claim to have become convinced, through some process of reasoning peculiar to themselves, that labor organizations and strikes are useful to working people, rarely pay any attention to facts or statistics, or the report of the present condition of the iron trade in England would interest them. Every one has seen or heard of Wolverhampton, the once prosperous centre of the English "Black Country," whose coal and iron brought comfort and wealth to many thousands of the more or less thrifty people who inhabited it. Twenty years ago there were, within three of the towns, forty-seven smelting furnaces in blast. There is now but one, and the owner of that, a man who has been in the business for nearly fifty years, and has paid out in wages not far from ten million dollars, is about to abandon it. There is no change in the natural conditions. The owner of the furnace also owns mines, which, as he says, would furnish material to carry on the works for fifty years longer, but the miners, by combinations and terrorism, have succeeded in establishing an eight-hour day; and as they cannot, or will not, in eight hours a day dig out enough ore for him to ennable him, after converting it into iron, to sell it for what it costs him, he has concluded to put a stop to what, he says, "was once a profitable business, but is now a heavily-losing one." With his abandonment of his mines and furnaces, the five hundred men, with their wives and children, who have been living on the wages which he paid them, will be turned adrift on the world, many of them to become a burden on public charity. If they had wished, or, we might say, if they had had loyalty and sense of honor enough, to do faithfully the work which he employed them to do, both they and he would be in the full enjoyment of present prosperity and confidence in the future; but they chose to listen to the gospel of shirking and disloyalty so industriously preached by loquacious adventurers, and reap the fruits of the successful reduction of their doctrines to practice. In their case no hope remains. While carpenters, masons and mechanics can usually get work of a certain sort after cutting themselves off from regular employment, a miner or an iron-worker is helpless. Probably Mr. Sparrow, in consideration of their necessities, would willingly allow his men to extract ore from his mines, and and try to smelt it and sell it on their own account; but the mines are filled with water, and must be pumped out before any ore can be dug from them. He has no more money to sink in the business, and they have none to hire pumps with; and no one, knowing their peculiar view of fidelity to obligations, would trust them with any, so they would have to remain idle, even if their late employer should make them a gift of his property.

A Scotch Girl in a Trance.

A rather curious case has occurred in Anstruther, Fifeshire. A little girl about eleven years of age, named Isabella Millar, took ill with scarlet fever about two months ago. She was getting better when she got a fright, and the fever developed into chorea or St. Vitus' dance. It was of a very virulent type, and to abate the violence of the convulsion fits chloroform was administered. For thirty-five days after this she lay as if dead; her breathing became scarcely perceptible, and never recognizing anyone, although she opened her eyes every now and again. Food was frequently given but never retained. Dr. Flaxman on the thirty-sixth day made an effort to feed her by means of inserting a small tube in her nostrils and sending the liquid down with a syringe. Next morning the girl opened her eyes for the first time in a fortnight, and recognized her mother. Since then the doctor has fed her twice daily in the same way, and there has been a marked improvement. Although not yet able to speak, the girl can now make signs for what she wants.

See the man hold up the post! Is the post loose? No; the man is tight.

The drink-bill of the United States is more than £400,000 a day for every day in the year.

THE LIME-KILN CLUB.

For some weeks past Elder Shadrack has exhibited signs of [illegible] nation. This is said to be owing to the fact that he drew $13 in a lottery and to establish a club of his own—a club with less formality and more [illegible] It was evident from his actions when meeting opened that he had an iron and the triangle had scarcely sent forth stricken voice when he was on his feet addressing the President.

"Brudder Whitbeck, you ar' out order," replied the Chair.

"Does de Cha'r decide dat I ar' out order?"

"It does, sah."

"Den I 'peals from the decishun, Cha'r."

"Your 'peal am out of order, sah."

"I also 'peal from dat decishun, axes fur a vote of de lodge."

It was plain to all members that Shadrack was out of order, and that he was seeking to force some issue. Brother Gardner looked at him in a dazed sort of way for a minute, and then asked:

"Does Brudder Whitbeck know dat he is liable to a fine of from six to leben thousand dollars?"

"No, sah! I demand a vote on my 'peal!"

"Does you intend to bulldoze dis Cha'r?"

"I intend to hev my rights under de constitushun an' by-laws of dis club. I has 'pealed from your decishun."

"Does any pusson second dat 'peal?" asked the President as he looked up and down the aisles.

No one did.

The old man slowly removed the spectacles from his nose, took the rhinestone pin from his bosom and calmly descended to the platform and approached the elder. The latter started to pull a brick-bat wrapped in alligator skin from his hind pocket, but before he could get it out something serious happened. From the reporters' desk it seemed as if his heels hit the ceiling and his head the floor in rotation. One of his shoes sailed into the southwest corner and struck State Right's Green in the stomach, and the other flew in the east and upset Col. Pinckney Handle Jackson. Buttons, buckles, brogues, suspenders, boot-traps and recipes for making root beer filled the air and were driven towards the open windows, and the humpty-bumps on the floor so alarmed the grocer down stairs that he ran out and sought to turn in a fire-alarm. By and by a deep hush fell upon Paradise Hall. Brother Gardner returned to his chair, Giveadam Jones put his coat under the head of the pulverized man and the floating fragments slowly settled out into the solemn night.

"All guv'ments should rule by law," said the President, as he toyed with his spectacles, "but when subjects defy de law an' de guv'ment, too, de guv'ment should be ekal to de occashun. Does any one else in de hall want to 'peal from de decishun of de Cha'r under de head of 'Communications?'"

Not a hoof moved.

"Werry well. De remains of de victim will be toted into room number three and kivered up with a piece of floor-cloth and de Committee on De Lost An' Gone will make sich arrangements fur de funeral as seems consistent wid de occashun. We will now dispatch the bizness on de Seckretary's desk."

A Russian Noble's Three Robbins.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the London Times says:—A piece of interesting information reaches me from a trustworthy source. It will be remembered that the submission of the Merv Turcomans was gained by help of the famous Moscow merchant, Kouschine, who sent his so-called trading caravan into Merv in charge of Alikhanoff and other officers in disguise. For the great service then rendered, this pioneer of Russian conquests in Central Asia has been rewarded with a patent of hereditary nobility. His firm is wellknown for its manufacture of cheap and highly coloured cotton prints for the Asiatic market, and the arms now granted to him and his descendants display three robbins, indicating the means of his elevation to rank and fortune. Precisely the same caravan tricks, I am assured, are now tried in Afghan Turkestan by exactly the same persons. This Moscow house is full of enterprise, and being backed up by the Government, with privileges over the Transcaspian railway and elsewhere, of course sticks at nothing. Last February its politico-commercial caravans introduced Moscow goods into the bazaars of Herat under our very eyes.

An Earthquake Incident.

The coolness of Englishmen under all sorts of circumstances is greatly admired by the people of the continent of Europe, where stories of travelling Englishmen are constantly told.

One of these stories relates that, in the recent earthquakes at Nice, in France, an English guest at one of the hotels was awakened by a beam falling on his bed. He rose coolly and rang the bell a long time.

A waiter finally arrived to answer the call, thinking that some one was in distress.

"Waiter," said the Englishman, calmly "can't you give me a room, don't you know, where the beam doesn't fall on the bed?"

Man and His Shoes.

How much a man is like his shoes!
For instance, both a soul may lose;
Both have been tanned, both been made tight
By cobblers; both get left and right.
Both need a mate to be complete;
And both are made to go on feet;
They both need healing, oft are sold,
And both in time willl turn to mould.
With shoes the last is first, with men
The first shall shall be the last; and when
The shoes wear out, they're mended new—
When men wear out, they're men dead too!
They both are trod upon, and both
Will tread on others, nothing loath.
Both have their ties, and both incline,
When polished, in the world to shine;
And both peg out. Now would you choose
To be a man or be his shoes!

To converse upon evil-doings, with all their debasing details, lowers the moral tone of all who engage in it No one rises from such a conversation quite so pure, quite so high-minded, quite so tender-hearted as before. Youth especially, exposed to such influences, quickly learns lessons of gossip and calumny. Except in the rare cases where justice demands investigation, the subject of evil-doing may be rightly banished from conversation. Absolute reticence is more affective in diminishing wrong-doing than the strongest showing forth or reprehension.

HEALTH.

The Pulse.

Every person should know something concerning the pulse, that true indicator of the condition of the human body, because it tells the state of one of its greatest controlling forces—the heart. The pulse beats as the heart beats, and only when it beats, and may be felt at the wrist on the thumb side, or at the temple, or just below the ankle. Every throb of the heart in health sends the bright life-giving blood through the arteries, and the living current goes to the tips of the fingers and the toes. In ill health the extremities are cold because the heart is not strong enough to propel the blood to them. When death is approaching, the heart works more and more feebly but faster and faster until life is ended. The pulse has various beats at various ages even in health, and these may be reckoned as follows:

Infancy	110
Childhood	90
Youth	80
Middle Age	70
Old Age	60

According to an eminent physician the natural pulse feels like a soft yarn under the fingers, while the pulse of inflammation is like that of a wire vibrating under the touch.

A quick, jerking pulse that is also variable, is one that indicates nervousness. A feeble pulse is always dangerous, that is, a pulse that beats twice very close together, as if it making but one pulse; it indicates great debility, sometimes typhoid symptoms.

A thready pulse, vibrating very fast rather than beating, and only slightly felt, is a very bad pulse. It is the pulse of the dying. If the pulse is simply fast, it is fever; if it is fast and hard, beating like the vibration of a tightly drawn string, it is an indication of inflammation and means danger.

Seventy steady beats per minute is the average standard of health in middle life. All above that indicates super-excitement of the heart, and hence an exhausting of the vital forces.

Says Dr. Hall, the quicker a machine runs the faster it wears out; so with the body. In proportion as the heart is beating over seventy a minute, fever is wasting the system. The heart beats under ordinary circumstances, about one hundred thousand times a day; under the influence of too violent exercise, such as running rapidly on a level, or up an ascent, or up-stairs, the beats are correspondingly increased, and consequently the wear on the system. Hence, every one should be careful not to prolong exercise of that kind. Indeed, in many cases, running long distances, or running up stairs should be absolutely avoided. Moderation in all things is the safest, moderate work, moderate exercise, moderate rest, moderate pleasure.

Granulated Eyelids.

"What is granulation of the eyes? what are its cause, symptoms and cure? is it the cause of movable lines over the sight?" are questions that are often asked. There is no connection between disease and the lines mentioned. The latter are of little importance. Most people may see them on looking steadily at a white wall or a cloud. They are supposed to be shadows of objects within the eye—parts of its structure—thrown on the retina, and thence projected greatly enlarged, into space. They trouble short-sighted people more than others, but they do not indicate disease.

Granulated lids are a form of conjunctivitis—an inflammation of the mucous membrane which lines the lids and the front of the eyeballs, called the conjunctiva.

There are four varieties of conjunctivitis. With two of them we have, at present, nothing to do. The infantile, which is due to contagion, and may speedily result in blindness if not promptly treated; and the diphtheritic, which occurs mainly in feeble and ill-fed children, and which is a serious disease, but, thus far, it is not known to have appeared in this country, though German immigration may at any time bring it here.

The other two varieties are the simple and contagious. The simple is generally due either to some irritating substances getting lodged under the lid, or to exposure to cold. In the first case the trouble subsides on removal of the offending cause. In the second, a simple wash, which should be prescribed by a physician, with rest for the eyes and protection from dust and sun, will soon remove inflammation.

By neglect and aggravation from surroundings, it may run into the contagious. In the simple form the secretion is only mucous, but if it passes into the contagious, the secretions become purulent.

As a general thing, the contagious form is due to contagion from a similar case, or from some other foul secretions in the blood. A single infected child at school may give it to many of his mates. Cases of blindness have so resulted. A towel used in common has often imparted it. One should never wipe with another's towel.

The granulations are minute, swollen protuberances under the lid, sometimes quite fine, sometimes large enough to give the lid a puffed look. They strongly incline to become purulent, and thus contagious. They are most common among children living in badly ventilated rooms.

In both simple and contagious conjunctivitis the main reliance is on astringent washes, but for the treatment of a contagious case the physician should be promptly called. No one suffering from it should be allowed to attend school.

Pollution of Rain Water.

The atmosphere, says the Royal Commission on the Domestic Water Supply of Great Britain, is the recipient of vast aggregate quantities of impurity, derived partly from the respiration of animals, partly from the combustion of enormous quantities of fuel, and partly from excremental dust, the fine particles of which, in dry weather, become suspended in the air to the extent, over the area of this country, of hundreds of tons, and remain there for weeks until washed out by rain. Thus rain is in reality water which has washed a more or less dirty atmosphere. It is laden with mineral and excrementitious dust, zymotic germs, and the products of animal and vegetable decay and putrefaction. A half-pint of rain water condenses out of about 3,373 cubic feet of air, and thus in drinking a tumbler of water, impurities which would only gain access to the lungs in about eight days, may be swallowed at once. On the roofs of dwellings this rain water, which is after all the only source of our water-supply, meets with soot and dust, and on the fields of manure and all sorts of impurities, which it carries down into wells, streams and rivers. These sources in their turn are liable to be further contaminated by soakings or infiltrations from cesspools and privies, and also on a larger scale by the land drainage, sewage and refuse of towns, which flow into our rivers, by dead fish and animals and decomposing weeds.

Treatment of Whooping-Cough.

The following plan of disinfection of sleeping and dwelling apartments and clothes is recommended by M. Mohn in the treatment of whooping-cough. It is said to cure the cases immediately. The children are washed and clothed in clean articles of dress, and removed to another part of the town. The bed-room and sitting-room or nursery are then hermetically sealed; all the bedding, playthings, and other articles that cannot be washed are exposed freely in the room, in which sulphur is burnt in the proportion of one ounce to the cubic yard of space. The room remains thus charged with sulphurous acid for five hours, and is then freely ventilated. The children return the same day, and may sleep and play in the disinfected rooms.

The Tyranny of Unionism.

Mayor Hewitt, of New York, who frequently propounds some new idea, which, moreover, is generally good, has made public a suggestion which will be heartily seconded by thousands of the quiet, sensible Americans who have succeeded in making this country what it is, in spite of the howling quacks from every clime who try to advertise themselves by attempts to interrupt its progress. Not long ago, the wife of a Knight of Labor wrote a touching letter to the editor of one of the daily papers, begging him to interfere with his great influence to prevent a strike from being ordered. Her husband she said, had steady work at satisfactory wages, and they were living comfortably, and laying up something for the next winter. If the Executive Committee of the District Assembly should order a strike, as it was reported they intended to do, to show "sympathy" with some other deluded Assembly, or on some other pretext, he would be compelled to give up his work, perhaps through the busy season, and his poor family must look forward to a winter of privation and misery. She knew by sad experience what this meant, and in the extremity of her helplessness before the might of the "colossal organization," she appealed to the only power that she knew to be capable of opposing it. A few days later, a member, not of the "colossal organization," but of the class which that organization systematically hounds and persecutes, wrote to Mayor Hewitt, calling in also his aid against its unrelenting malice. The writer was a plasterer, standing, as he said, "at the head of his profession," and with a wife and five dependent on him for the means of existence. Three years ago, being apparently, a man of considerable energy, and disposed to better his condition, he agreed to a proposition to work by the hour instead of by the day. For this violation of its principles, he was fined fifty dollars by the Plasterers' Society. It is hardly necessary to say that working-men with large families to support do not usually have fifty dollars about them, and he could not pay his fine. The Society thereupon commenced the well-known persecutions by which working-men are terrified into silence and submission. A watch was set upon the delinquent and if he found employment anywhere, notice was given to his employer to discharge him, under threat of the usual penalties. After going in this way from place to place, he had an opportunity to speak with the "walking-delegate" who had come to deprive him again of his living. The delegate informed him that he had imperative orders to "knock him off" where ever he found him, but said that if he would appear before the Society leaders that evening he might make an arrangement with them. He went to them accordingly, and was told that by the payment of eighteen dollars and a half he might obtain a "permit" to work. Not having eighteen dollars and a half, any more than the previous fifty, he could not buy a permit to earn his living, and the next morning his employer discharged him, without assigning any reason. Not knowing what else to do the victim of his inability to pay to the "colossal organization" the money which the organization prevented him from earning appealed to the Mayor, as a "defender of the rights of American citizens," to tell him what to do next. Mr. Hewitt replied in his usual sensible way, saying that he had received many other letters of the same sort, and, while conspiracies to take away a man's business, like the one described, were illegal and indefensible, and subjected those guilty of them to the payment of damages, he understood how impracticable it was for a poor working-man to obtain damages by process of law. He suggested, therefore, that an association might be formed in New York for the purpose of defending "the rights of honest men who are refused the opportunity to earn their own living," and promised to co-operate with any citizens who might think with him that the occasion was one needing "prompt and earnest action."

Smoke.

Mark Twain says he uses about 300 cigars a month.

Robert Buchanan thinks that tobacco is invaluable, while Tennyson's partiality for a clay pipe is well known.

Nine-tenths of the journalists of New York are lovers of the weed, and the printer's work generally ends in smoke.

Henry M. Stanley, the explorer, when in broadcloth smokes six cigars a day. When in nankeen his solace is a pipe.

Mr. Allibone, the great compiler, says smoking keeps a man quiet for an hour after dinner, and is "a great thing for digestion."

Women are the State librarians of Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Louisana, Michigan, Mississippi and Tennessee.

Lady Shopper (to susceptible clerk)—"These goods I bought of you the other day have changed color." Clerk—"No vunder dey schange color ven such a peautiful young lady looks at them mit dose lofely eyes."

"Smile and the world smiles with you," says an old adage. The world is always willing to smile with a fellow providing he foots the bill, but a man doesn't always have money enough to buy a drink for himself and the world, too.

PERSONAL.

Sir Reginald Hanson is said to be the first Lord Mayor of London who has received during his administration the degree of LL. D. from his university.

Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes says his correspondence is becoming so voluminous that he is afraid he will have to take to using a type-writer, though he doesn't want to.

Princess Dolgouriki, widow of Czar Alexander II., is now one of the chief leaders of Parisian society. Her receptions are noted for the high literary and artistic rank of the guests.

Crown Prince Rudolph of Austria, during three days at Berozencze recently, shot with his own gun forty-seven head of roebucks, a feat unprecedented in the annals of European sport.

Prince Napoleon's younger son, who now bears the title of Count Luigi Moncalieri, has entered the Italian service as sub-lieutenant in the Third Regiment of Cavalry, now stationed at Verona.

The late Lady Strangford was the chief founder of the British Hospital at Port Said, and she was on her way thither to look after its interests when she died. It has now been determined to name it "The Lady Strangford Hospital."

Queen Margherita of Italy attended every one of the twenty-two performances of Verdi's "Otello" at Rome, always entering the theater before the overture was begun and remaining in her seat till the last chord of the finale had been struck.

John L. Mitchell, the son and principal heir of the late Alexander Mitchell, is about 39 or 40 years of age. He is short in stature and his face resembles his father's. He has a long brown beard and wears spectacles. His Scotch ancestry is apparent in his make-up.

Senor Canovas Del Castillo, the Spanish Conservative leader, after thirty years of widowhood, will be married this summer to a lady who has been for eighteen years the acknowledged belle of Madrid society. She is enormously rich, and the Queen Regent will make her a Duchess.

The late Thomas Stevenson, the eminent Scotch engineer, was the father of Mr. Robert Louis Stevenson, the popular writer. He was the author of many valuable inventions, particularly relating to lighthouse, but as he was engineer to the Llighthouse Commission he declined all personal profits from them.

Senator Stewart of Nevada says that instead of cutting off the railroad passes of Senators and Representatives, as has been done by the Inter-State Commerce law, he would give them all passes and compel each man to travel at least 5,000 miles a year, in order to have them learn something about all parts of the country for which they have to legislate.

Justice Harlan, of the United States Supreme Court, has three able and ambitious sons. One who graduated at Princeton four years ago is now a Presbyterian minister in New York city and receives a salary of $6000 a year. Another son is a lawyer in Chicago, with a rapidly increasing practice. A third will be graduated from the Columbia Law School next month.

Senator Kenna of West Virginia has great resources as a political campaigner. When he starts out on an electioneering tour he carries with him a violin and a photographic outfit. It is said that he has photographed during the last few years at least two-thirds of his rural constituents. In the mountainous districts of West Virginia a combination of camera and fiddle is simply irresistible.

Mrs. Fawcett, widow of the illustrious English Postmaster General, has refused to join the woman's movement led by Mrs. Gladstone against the Crimes bill. "I am one of those," she explains, "who think that those who kill or shoot their neighbors, maim cattle, cut off the hair of girls and pour tar over their heads, ought to be punished, whether they live in Ireland or in England."

STORIES OF THE SUPERNATURAL.

Two ladies and two gentlemen, of Aurora, Mo., met in a parlor the other evening and determined out of sport to hold a mock spiritualistic seance. While they were quietly sitting around a table telling ghost stories the table was seized by some unseen power and carried quickly up to the ceiling, from which it was hurled to the floor with great violence. In its fall the table struck one of the young men on the head, rendering him unconscious. Physicians were called in and the unfortunate man conveyed to his home, but he is still unconscious and is not expected to live.

A Leadville miner named Roberts, who with his partner, Daniel Doo, was engaged in sinking a shaft in Sugar-Loaf Mountain, dreamed one night that the ground caved in and burried Von and that he himself had a narrow escape from death. He related the dream to his partner, who scoffed at it. On the following night the dream was repeated with great vividness, the parents of Roberts coming to his bedside and imploring him not to enter the shaft. Von was again incredulous when the second dream was related to him, and went to work as usual, but during the afternoon Roberts came up to him persuaded him to leave the shaft. A moment later the ground caved in with a great crash.

Thomas McKee, a plain, honest farmer living at Turtle Creek is very much disturbed at the queer things that have been going on in his household recently. He is not sure indeed, that he is not undergoing the persecutions of an emissary from Hades. For several weeks past some unseen visitant has thrown things topsy-turvy about the house, and now has begun to terrify Mr. McKee's family with fire. At all times of the day and in every conceivable spot it will dart forth without harming in the presence of the family, and the rooms are almost constantly filled with smoke. Round holes, as if made by a red hot iron, are burned in the bed-clothing, in dresses hung up in the closets, in towels on the rack, in packages of groceries in the pantry, even in hats as they hang on the hall tree—and all directly before the eyes of the watchers. Mr. McKee is staunch Presbyterian, and is much worried over the matter.

What is that peculiar sound I hear in the entry?" asked Mrs. Hungry, the new boarder, of the landlady, Mrs. Skinem. "Oh, that's nothing but old Peg-leg, one of our boarders," replied the landlady. "The noise is the alternate striking of his wooden leg on the stairs and the flapping of his vest against his empty stomach."

IMPERIAL BANK OF CANADA.

The twelfth annual general meeting of the Imperial Bank of Canada was held, in pursuance of the terms of the charter at the banking house of the institution, 15th June, 1887. There were present:—

Messrs H. S. Howland, T. R. Merritt (St Catharines), P. Hughes, T. R. Wadsworth (Weston), Robert Jaffray, Hon. Alex. Morris, Rev. E. B. Lawlor, George Robinson, W. T. Kiely, William Ramsay, John Fisken, jr., Henry Pellatt, Robert Carswell, James Mason, John Smart (Port Hope), Thomas Walmsley, Robert Thompson, R. Wickens, S. J. Vonkoughnet, J. O. Heward, G. M. Rose, R. Beaty, W. B. Hamilton, Dr. Thorburn, A. McFall (Bolton), D. R. Wilkie, etc., etc.

The chair was taken by the President, Mr. H. S. Howland, and Mr. D. R. Wilkie was requested to act as secretary.

The Secretary, at the request of the Chairman, read the report of the directors and the statement of affairs.

REPORT.

The directors beg to submit to the shareholders the twelfth annual balance sheet and statement of profits for the year ending 31st May, 1887:—

Balance at credit, on account, 30th May, 1886, brought forward		$ 18,339 13
Profits for the year ended 31st May, 1887 after deducting charges of management and interest due depositors and making full provision for all bad and doubtful debts		185,067 24
		$203,406 37
From which has been taken:
Dividend No. 23, 4 per cent. (paid 1st Dec. 1886)	$ 60,000 00
Dividend No. 24, 4 per cent. (payable 1st June, 1887)	60,000 00
		$120,000 00
		$ 83,406 37
Written off bank premises and furniture account	$ 3 656 93
Carried to rest account	50,000 00
		53,656 93
Balance of account carried forward		$ 29,749 44

Rest Account.

Balance at credit of account, 30th May, 1886	$ 500,000 00
Transferred from profit and loss account	$ 50,000 00
Balance of account carried forward	$ 550,000 00

The profits for the year show an improvement over those of the year previous, and have enabled your Directors to place the sum of $50,000 to Rest Account in addition to paying the customary dividends.

Appropriations have been made from Contingent Account in liquidation of assets therein provided for. Your directors are of the opinion that the balance unappropriated is sufficient to cover all doubtful assets. The ultimate realization of any considerable proportion of the assets at present covered by appropriations from this account depends upon a substantial improvement in the condition of things in the Province of Manitoba.

In view of the continued development of the North-West Provinces a branch has been opened in the town of Calgary.

The investments of the bank in Government, municipal and other first-class debentures now amount to $1,084,515 25.

The head office and branches of the bank have been carefully inspected, and your directors have much pleasure in expressing their satisfaction at the manner in which the officers of the bank have performed their respective duties.

H. S. HOWLAND, President.

GENERAL STATEMENT, 31ST MAY, 1887.

LIABILITIES.

1.	Notes of the bank in circulation	$1,053,133 00
2.	Deposits bearing interest (including interest accrued to date)	3,580,500 08
3.	Deposits not bearing interest	1,082,436 03
4.	Due to other banks in Canada	2,532 60
5.	Due to agents in United Kingdom	244,373 78
	Total liabilities to the public	$5,967,975 49
6.	Capital stock paid up	1,500,000 00
7.	Rest account	550,000 00
8.	Contingent account	33,024 13
9.	Dividend No. 24, payable 1st June, 1887 (4 per cent.)	60,000 00
10.	Former dividends unpaid	1,100 61
11.	Balance of profit and loss account carried forward	29,749 44
		$8,141,849 67

ASSETS.

	Gold and silver coin current		235,477 65
2.	Dominion Government notes		492,819 00
3.	Notes and cheques on other banks		167,717 60
4.	Balance due from other banks in Canada		187,728 89
5.	Balance due from agents in foreign countries		86,352 27
6.	Dominion of Canada debentures	$356,458 05
7.	Province of Ontario Securities	139,477 61
8.	Municipal and other debentures	588,579 59
			1,084,515 25
	Total assets immediately available		$2,254,610 66
9.	Loans on call		162,739 15
10.	Loans, discounts or advances on current account to municipal and other corporations		600,822 16
11.	Other current loans, discounts and advances to the public		4,731,885 09
12.	Notes discounted over due, secured		52,733 57
13.	Notes discounted over due, unsecured (Estimated loss provided for.)		35,690 94
14.	Real estate, the property of the bank (other than bank premises)		61,955 01
15.	Mortgages on real estate sold by the bank (all bearing interest)		35,770 35
16.	Bank premises, including safes, vaults and office furniture, at head offices and branches		145,269 49
17.	Other assets, not included under foregoing heads		60,373 25
			$8,141,849 67

D. R. WILKIE, Cashier.

The report was adopted.

The usual votes of thanks were passed to the president and directors, also to the cashier and other officers, for their attention and zeal in promoting the interests of the bank.

The ballot was then taken for the election of directors, which resulted in the election of the following shareholders, viz.:—Messrs. H. S. Howland, T. R. Merritt, Wm. Ramsay, P. Hughes, T. R. Wadsworth, Hon. Alex. Morris, Robert Jaffray.

At a subsequent meeting of the directors Mr. Henry S. Howland was elected President and Mr. Thomas R. Merritt, Vice-President, for the ensuing year.

Clover.

BY NORA LAUGHER.

A pretty blue eyed, nut brown maid
Was roaming 'neath the pleasant shade
Of some tall trees near to Dover;
While underneath her little feet,
Luxuriantly pure and sweet
Grew blossoms of fragrant clover.

That maiden, too, I have been told,
Had read the mystic legend old
Of finding the leafy rover;
So shyly looking all around
She quickly knelt upon the ground
To seek for the four-leafed clover.

By chance there came, too, on that day
A youth, so brave, gallant and gay,
Ideal of a maiden's lover;
And unto her he thus did say:
"My pretty maid! I've lost my way
All amongst this sweet, white clover."

Then o'er the maiden's cheek there came
A red, red blush of joy and shame,
And she sought her face to cover;
For in her hand exposed to view
She held the symbol old and true,
The magical four-leafed clover.

"Fair maiden, too, I've lost my heart,
For now I feel Cupid's keen dart
Is piercing my soul all over;
Having lost my heart and lost my way
Take pity on me now, I pray!
'Tis fate, by the four-leafed clover!"

The damsel did not say him nay,
So two fond hearts wended their way
To the ancient town of Dover;
And the glad day when they were wed
She wore upon her glossy head
A wreath of the pure white clover.

When swift old Time was on the wing
And long had ceased the merry ring
Of the wedding bells of Dover,
He said in tones so bright and gay:
"Dear wife, I always bless the day
When we met amid the clover."

The French War Minister.

General Ferron, the new French Minister of War, is not a hero of the Franco-Prussian combat. He is an officer of the corps of engineers, in which he has spent all his life, and being stationed in New Caledonia when the war broke out, was unable to reach France in time to take part in it. He is aged, has a bald head, is greatly stooped, is formal and punctilious to the highest degree, and in every way is the exact opposite of Gen. Boulanger. It is universally agreed that the elevated conduct of the deposed Minister at a critical moment, when by appearing at the military fete at the Grand Opera on Tuesday night he might have created the greatest trouble, has raised him in public esteem.

Happy Homes.

Much has been written and said about how to make home happy. The moralist and the preacher have hackneyed this theme until it would seem nothing more remained to be said. But the philosophers have gone far out of their way to account for the prevalence of ill-assorted couples and unhappy homes, and have over-looked the chief cause. Most of the unhappiness of married life can be traced directly to those functional derangements to which women are subject. In nine cases out of ten the irritable, dissatisfied and unhappy wife is a sufferer from some "female complaint." A trial of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will produce more domestic happiness than a million sermons or philosophical treatises. It cures all those peculiar weaknesses and ailments incident to women. It is the only medicine sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. See guarantee printed on wrapper enclosing bottle.

Velvet is used either plain or in soft, irregular folds on the brims of round hats.

Its thousands of cures are the best advertisement for Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

In the way of studs the same designs as shown for ladies as for gentlemen.

Man wants but little here below,
But wants that little strong.

This is especially true of a purge. The average man or woman does not precisely hanker for it, as a rule, but when taken, wishes it to be prompt, sure and effective. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets leave nothing to be desired in point of efficacy, and yet their action is totally free from any unpleasant symptoms, or disagreeable after-effects. Purely vegetable, perfectly harmless.

To the well balanced mind, fame consists in knowing one has so lived as to deserve the praise of others.

YOUNG MEN suffering from the effects of early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted also MIDDLE-AGED and OLD MEN who are broken down from the effects of abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and READ M. V. Lubon's Treatise on Diseases of Men. The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. E. Toronto, Ont.

The young man on the lookout for a "soft place," through a dislike for honest hard work, can find one under his hat.

LADIES

Who are Weak, Nervous and Exhausted; who fee themselves losing strength; who are pale, delicate and sickly in appearance, suffering from the many complaints peculiar to women—send for and read M. V. LUBON'S Treatise in BOOK FORM on the Diseases of Women. Mailed sealed and secure from observation on receipt of 6c in stamps, UNSEALED FREE. Address, M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. East Toronto, Ont.

Be pleasant and kind to those around you. The man who stirs his cup with an icicle spoils the tea and chills his own fingers.

Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness and Hay Fever.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are cured in from one to three simple applications made at home. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent free on receipt of stamp by A. H. Dixon & Son, 308 King Street West Toronto Canada.

The most agreeable companion is he who has experienced enough disappointments to take off the keen edge of conceit.

People who are subject to bad breath, foul coated tongue, or any disorder of the Stomach, can at once be relieved by using Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, the old and tried remedy. Ask your Druggist.

Then I saw in my dream that it is much easier going out of our way when we are in it, than getting into it when we are out of it.—[Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress.

A CURE FOR DRUNKENNESS,

opium, morphine, chloral, tobacco, and kindred habits. The medicine may be given in tea or coffee without the knowledge of the person taking it, if so desired. Send 6c. in stamps for book and testimonials from those who have been cured. Address M. V. Lubon, 47 Wellington St. East, Toronto, Ont. Cut this out for future reference. When writing mention this paper.

An old bachelor editor thus, in his spite, comments on a recent moonlight: "We left our sanctum at midnight last night, and on our way home we saw a young lady and gentleman holding a gate on its hinges. They were evidently indignant at being kept out so late, as we saw them bite each other several times.

Whenever your Stomach or Bowels get out of order, causing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, and their attendant evils, take at once a dose of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Best family medicine. All Druggists, 50 cents.

As an item of interest it might be stated that a pile of strength that would reach half way to the moon is wasted in this country every year by people holding up hymn books in church who don't know a B flat note from the howl of a brindle cat.

A. P. 339.

PATENTS For Sale—Illustrative descriptive Catalogue free. R. Chamberlin, Toronto.

GOOD LIVE AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY County in Canada. Address, FERRIS & CO., 87 Church St., Toronto.

AGENTS AND CANVASSERS wanted, Male or Female, whole or spare time, on salary or commission. Industrial Union of B.N.A., 45 Arcade, Toronto.

CONVERTIBLE WIRE BASKET, BEST SELLING novelty in Canada. Great reduction to agents. Sample by mail thirty cents. CLEMENT & Co., Toronto.

SPOONER'S COPPERINE 'Babbitt'—Non-fibrous Anti-friction Box-metal for journal bearings in machinery—Guaranteed copper mixed. Supplies every requirement. Ask your hardware dealer for it. ALONZO. W. SPOONER, Patentee and Manufacturer, Port Hope

Jas. S. Freeborn,

—M. D. Ch. M.; L. K. & Q. C. P. I.—

Doctor of Medicine and master of Surgery Victoria Univ. Licentiate of King's and Queen's College of Physicians in Ireland. Member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Ont. Formerly acting Surgeon of B. Battery, R. C. A. Quebec. Late resident of the Rotunda Hospitals, (Lying-in & Gynæcological) Dublin.

—OFFICE—

STEPHEN'S DRUG STORE.

Drs. Sproule & Brodie,

—PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS,—

MARKDALE.

Dr. SPROULE's office Turner's Drug Store

Dr. BRODIE's office Mathew s block.

P. McCullough.

BARRISTER, SOLICITOR, &c

OFFICE—OVER McFARLAND'S STORE,

MARKDALE.

Money to Loan.

MASSON & MASSON,

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, &c.

OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block, Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week.

J. MASSON, Q. C. S. MASSON. W. MASSON.

N. B.—Private and Company's funds to invest at from 6 to 8 per cent

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate se curity.

WILLIAM STUART,

KIMBERLEY,

Issuer of Marriage Licences. Money to Loan on Real Estate at low rates.

A few Farms for sale. Terms easy.

NOTICE

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.

will visit Markdale for the practice of his profession on Thursday and Friday following the first Monday in each month, and at Flesherton the following day, Saturday.

MARKDALE HOUSE,

MARKDALE, - - ONT.

J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

ISAAC STINSON.

Builder and Contractor

In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.

Estimates given. All work guarantced.

Orders by mail promptly attended to.

329 Residence, MARKDALE.

W. C. RICHARDS,

BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT, Markdale.

1241y

R. J. SPROULE,

FLESHERTON.

Conveyancer, Appraiser, Valuator and Money Lender. Deeds, Mortgages, Leases and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice Charges very low. Apply to

R. J. SPROULE,

Money Lender & Postmaster. Flesherton.

Dr. FOWLER'S EXTRACT of WILD STRAWBERRY

CURES

CHOLERA

CHOLERA INFANTUM

DIARRHŒA,

AND

ALL SUMMER COMPLAINTS

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS.

DISEASES MANDRAKE DANDELION LIVER CURE

HAVE YOU

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Jaundice, Headache, Dizziness, Pain in the Back, Costiveness, or any disease arising from a deranged liver, DR. CHASE'S LIVER CURE will be found a sure and certain rem dy.

NATURE'S REMEDY

The unqualified success of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure in Liver Complaint rests solely with the fact that it is compounded from nature's well-known liver regulators, MANDRAKE AND DANDELION, combined with many other invaluable roots, barks and herbs, having a powerful effect on the Kidneys, Stomach, Bowels and Blood.

500,000 SOLD

Over one-half million of Dr. Chase's Recipe Books were sold in Canada alone. We want every man, woman and child who is troubled with Liver Complaint to try this excellent remedy.

SOMETHING NEW. GIVEN AWAY FREE

Wrapped around every bottle of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure is a valuable Household Medical Guide and Recipe Book (84 pages), containing over 800 useful recipes pronounced by medical men and druggists as invaluable, and worth ten times the price of the medicine.

TRY CHASE'S CATARRH CURE. A safe and positive remedy. Price, 25 cents.

TRY CHASE'S KIDNEY AND LIVER PILLS. 25 cts. per box.

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS

[illegible] & CO., Sole Agents, Bradford

Markdale Roller Mill.

FARMERS HAVING No. 1 WHEAT and preferring flour from their own wheat, can get it by bringing twenty bushels or more.

Flour always on Hand

Flour $3.00 to $4.30 per. bbl.

SHORTS, per ton - $12.00

BRAN, " - 10.00

The highest market price paid for Fall and Spring wheat.

J. W. FORD.

Pubic Notice.

To all whom it may con cern.

I B. L. Stephen the Druggist of Markdale have been appointed agent for JOHNSON'S celebrated Tonic and nervine. JOHNSON'S little liver Pills, and JOHNSON'S all healing White Ointment. The nervine is the very best in the market, in all diseases caused by poverty of blood, for Nervousness, Hysteria, and the PALENESS of Complexion so often noticed in female's, loss of appetite and general debility. In conjunction w th the Liver Pills, it is he very best for all diseases arrising from Topid live r or bad stomach or saleatR. L. STEPHEN'S the druggist, Markdale, Ont.

The White Ointment is the very best in the market for Salt Rheume, Barbers Itch, Pimples, Chafs, Burns, Scalds, and all Skin diseases of a scrofulous nature. Try these fine remedies and you will not be disappointed.

WM. G. GUTHRIE,

Plain & Ornamental Plasterer

MARKDALE.

Arches, Cornices, Centre Flowers, and all kinds of plain and ornamental plastering executed at cheapest rates. Calsomining Lime Washing and Repairs promptly attended to.

330

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of

School Furniture.

Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness, wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.

181 ANDREW McGILL.

MONEY TO LOAN.

ON real estate security, at low rate of interest, no commission charged. Business Strictly Confidential,

J. S, BLACK,

190 Pomona, P, O.

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT No. 24, con. 4, N. D. R. Glenelg, 100 acres, will be sold cheap and on easy terms of payment, for further particulars apply on the premises, or by letter to

J. S. BLACK,

190-tf. Pomona P. O.

Markdale Woolen Mill.

Custom Carding, Weaving, Fulling, Dyeing and cloth dressing, done in a workmanlike manner and on very short notice.

First Class Cotton Warp

supplied at the lowest possible rates.

A call solicited.

Terms strictly cash or wool·

Sept. 28, 1886 F. J. RITCHIE.

IT IS A WELL KNOWN FACT

—THAT—

McCOLL'S "LARDINE,"

is the best known, and most reliable MACHINE OIL in the Dominion; Farmer's, Thresher's and Mill Owner's, will find it decidedly to their advantage to insist upon getting the "Genuine Lardine" when they ask for it, owing to so much inferior oil being sold under the same name by unscrupulous dealers. We are the sold manufacturers of the "Genuine Lardine" every barrel branded.

McCOLL BRO'S, & CO.

For sale in Markdale at Haskett Bro's Hardware Store. 347-78

FRESH TURNIP SEEDS.

FRESH PARIS GREEN.

FRESH HELLEBORE.

AT

H. Parker's,

DRUGGIST and SEEDSMAN,

Durham.

Traverston.

From our own Correspondent.

Miss Bella Allan, of Egremont, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Hastie.

Mr. Ed. Darcy, of her Majesty's mail service, is at present in Dundalk.

Miss Bella Hastie is home from Toronto.

Contrary to the expectations of all, Mr. Dennis Sweeny left on Tuesday for the neighborhood of the Sault, where he has gone into business. He carries with him the well-wishes of all; his manly form and genial countenance will be missed from our midst.

Mr. John Delaney is home from a trip through the Southern counties.

Three of our young ladies undertook the other night to imitate the renowned Grace Darling in rescueing beings from a watery grave. The being in this case was a cat of the male species, which had by some means become isolated on a large rock in the river, where he was espied by the trio. Nothing daunted, two of the ladies' embarked in the boat and started to the rescue. But Fortune eems to have been against them, for scarcely had the boat left shore when it upset precipitating the fair occupants into the water, from which they soon emerged, the picture of misery. Your correspondent who was enjoying the view from behind an adjacent wood-pile, now came forth to offer his sympathy but the moment he hove in view there was a scream a rush and the field was clear. The next task was to gather the booty which consisted of several tin pans, which the owner can have by calling on.

D. D. D.

Peel Farmers and the Grain "Taker."

A Brampton despatch says: The Farmers of the County of Peel; who were induced to give their notes for wheat at $15 per bushel to the Ontario Grain and Seed Company, of London are advertising cautioning any person against purchasing the notes, as they were given without consideration, as they intend to contest their liability to the utmost. This is the company to which Mr. L. Chisholm M. P. P., drew the attention of the Ontario, Legislature during the last session.—[Hamilton times.

The above frauds are no doubt the same parties who have "operated" in this section of the country during the past eight years:—first in the Sickle Sharpeners; then in the seed Wheat Agency of London; and, lastly, in the Hay Fork Agency. Many of our farmers have been victimized. It would almost seem that Law and Frauds were "hand and glove" in the business of victimizing the public.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a similar vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh Asthma and all throat and Lung Affections also a positive and radical cure for nervous Dability and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases. has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this receipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Send by mail by addressing with stamp naming this paper W. A. NOYES 149 Powers Block Rochester, N. Y.

334-86 E. O. W.

BIRTHS.

MERCER.—In Artemesia on the 27th inst the wife of Mr. Robt. Mercer of a son.

Society Directory.

Markdale C. O. O. F. No. 78. meets every alternate Monday evening at 8 o'clock in their Hall, Rae's block. Visiting brethren welcome.

Markdale A. O. U. W. No. 141 meets in their Hall, Rae's block, every alternate Monday evening at o'clock. A visit from brethren of neighboring lodges solicited.

MARKDALE L. O. L. No. 1045 meets in their Hall on Friday on or before full moon each month. Thos. Elliott, Master; W. J. Blakely, Secretary.

Victoria R. B. Preceptory, No. 282, Meets in Lodge Room of Markdale L. O. L. No. 1045, first Friday in each month. Visiting Sir Knights always welcome. Jas. Brodie W. P.; Thos. Elliott, Registrar.

Markdale Church Directory.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

Services every Sabbath at 10:30 a. m, Sabbath School at 2:30 p. m. Prayer Meeting every Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. Rev. A. Wilson, Pastor; A. McFarland, S. S. Superintendent.

CHRIST CHURCH.

Services every Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p m. Rev. Jas. Ward, Incumbent. Sabbath School 2:30. W. J. Ford, Superintendent.

METHODIST CHURCH.

Services every Sunday at 10:30 a. m and 7 p. m. Sunday School at 2:30. Prayer Meeting every Thursday evening from 8 to 9, Rev. Geo. Buggin Pastor; G. S. Bowes. S. S. Superintendent. Ladies' Aid in connection: Mrs. T. Hill, Secretary.

Strangers and visitors always welcome.

Parties desiring sittings will apply to C. W. Rutledge, Pew Steward.

Monthly Fairs.

Orangeville—The second Thursday in each month.

Dundalk—Tuesday before Orangeville.

Flesherton—Monday before Orangeville.

Markdale—Saturday before Orangeville.

Durham—Third Tuesday in each month.

Glenelg Council.

COURT OF REVISION.

The adjourned sitting of Court of Revision was held in Town Hall on June 18th. All the members present Mr. Moffat Presided, Minutes of former sitting read and confirmed, the assessment Roll was further amended as follows.

Robert Williams put on Roll as Wage Earner. Alexander Lyons entered for lot C, Armstrongs' Survey Markdale.

McMillan—Lamb—That the Assement Roll as now amended be the Revised Assessmend Roll for the year 1887 and that the Clerk do now certify to it as such.—Carried.

BUSINESS MEETING,

Council met this day pursuant to adjournment. All the members present. Reeve in the chair. Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed.

Cheques were issued as follows.—Irving Anderson, bridge at lot 15 con, 5, $8.00; Gillen Boyd, culvert at lot 9 con. 1 E. G. T. $1.50; Neil Black, for right of way as per agreement in 1885, $6.00; Allan McLean, culvert on town line G and A half cost $2.50; the Reeve, Deputy Reeve, and Mr. Dunsmore committee work each $2.00; G. L. McCaul, Law fee $6·00; Samuel M. Arthur, charity $3.00; Robert Bell, charity, $4.00: The Clerks half years salary $75.00.

Williams—McMillan—That whereas a petition signed by Thomas Townsend and 75 others was presented praying that a bridge be built across the river at lot 5, con. 9, be it resolved that the Reeve, Messrs Lamb and Dunsmore be a committee to examine the locality and report to this Council at its next meeting.—Carried;

Appropriations were made for roads and bridges and the Treasurer authorized to honor the orders of commissioners for same as follows.—Wards 1. 2. and 4. $150 each, Ward 3. $170. The Reeve was authorized or order 8 steel road scrapers from A, McGill, the same to be delivered at the hall by the 16th inst.

The Reeve and Deputy Reeve was appointed a committee to examine as to the advisability of building a bridge across Saugeen at lot 50, con. 2. N. D. R. and report at next meeting of council.

The committee appointed at last meeting of council to enquire as to corporation's liability for damages to J. H. Bliss for loss of Horse, handed in their report, advising non payment of damages, Report submitted to committee of the whole and reported without amendment, Williams—Lamb—That the report of special committee re Bliss' claim for damages for loss of horse &c. be received and adopted.—Carried.

A petition from Mrs. Caswell relative to a fine under the Licence Act was presented to council, Mr. S. L. M. Luke addressed the council in support of same.

Williams—Dunsmore—That the petition of Mrs. Caswell be laid on the table for further consideration.--Carried.

The Treasurer was instructed to receive $10.00 arrears of taxes against lots 13 and 14 con. 3 N. D. R. the Clerk to instruct County Treasurer to erase the same.

By law 251 authorising the removal of obstructions in rivers and streams within the municipality was passed, and ordered to be engrossed on the By-law Book.

Council adjourned to August 22 at 10 a. m.

J. S. BLACK.
Clerk.

Euphrasia Council.

The Council met as an adjourned Court of Revision at 10 o'clock a. m. on 15th June, 1887.

Members all present. Action was taken as follows: John M. Kilbourn, Owen Sound, assessed for lot 2, con. 1; lot 14, con. 7, placed on non-residents roll; Alex. Donnelly assesed as joint owner with Thomas Donnelly for E½ 15, con. 6; J. W. Walker assessed for S½ lot 7, con. 1; ¾ of an acre which had been assessed to J. W. Thurston was assessed to Michael Hammond; lot 8, con. 8, assesed to R. Bailey, sr., R. Bailey, jr., and Jas. Bailey; Archibald McLean assessed as tenant for S½ lot 7, con. 4; Joseph McCullough assessed as tenant for 2½ acres, being N. E. corner of lot 16, con. 11; Marcus Andrews assesed as owner for W½ lot 30, con. 1; Octavus Sparling and J. G. Perry assessed jointly for lot 23, con. 6, E½ lot 19, con. 5, placed on the non-resident roll; J. W. Smith assessed for part of S½ lot 5, con. 5, at $150; John Hurd assessed jointly with Henry Hurd for W½ lot 7, con. 8. On motion of Messrs. Erskine and Hurd, the assessment roll was confirmed as finally revised, and certified to by the clerk as required by statute. court arose.

Council reassmed at 2 o'clock p. Minutes of last session of council and confirmed. The reeve deputy-reeve were appointed to amine 27 and 28 side line in con 1, and to take whatever steps may deem prudent for repairing road. Mr. Hurd was appointed repairs made for the crossway of line at lot 7. The treasurer authoized to receive from W. cett, Esq., $51.31, money paid to in error re lot E½ 13, con. 4. Burch was instructed to not allow more gravel to be taken from his division for private purposes as will be required for public use. dollar struck of the taxes charged J. McKenzie, lot 9, con. 2, as he said amount in statute labor. treasurer was instructed to remit Messrs. Creasor & Morrison $3, advice. The Reeves orders issued on the treasurer to pay follows, viz.: David Martin, $2, on snow fence; James Clugston, $ repairing bridge on 9th line and pairing railing of bridge on 18 and side line; Joseph Boyd, $5, culvert; William Dales, $43, on 24 and 25 side line; Rodger Bo $14.75, repairing bridge and rem flood wood dangerous to bridge. McConnell, $15, to improve Thomas Donnelly $25, to improve road division; Mr. Tupper, $2, pairing road scraper; George Vic $10, to improve road through s Jas. McChing, $5, building aul James Erskine, Esq., $20, to imp 11th line; Charles Rear, $3, charged in error. Council adjourn until Thursday, June 30th, inst.

R DUNLOP, Cl

Our Daily Bread.

Heavy and sour bread or b has a vast influence through digestive organs upon the measure health we enjoy. How important our present happiness and future fulness the blessing of good h and a sound constitution are, we only realize when we have lost th and when it is to late to repair damage. Notwithstanding these fa thousands of persons daily jeopar not only their health, but their li and the health and lives of oth by using articles in the preparation their food the purity and healthfuln of which they know nothing. Perh a few cents have been saved, or it have been more convenient to ob the articles used, and the housek takes the responsibility and possib will never know the mischief that h been wrought. Paterfamilias h have spells of headache, the child may have lost their appetites, or k pale; if so, the true cause is rare suspected. The weather, the lack out-door air, or some other cause, given and the unwholesome, poison system of adulterated food goes Next to the floor, which should made of good, sound wheat and n ground too fine, the yeast or bakin powder, which furnishes the risi properties, is of the greatest impor tance, and of the two we prefer bakin powder, and always use the Royal as we thereby retain the origin properties of the wheat, no fermentation taking place. The action of t Royal Baking Powder upon the dough is simply to swell it and form little cells through every part. These cells are filled with carbonic acid gas, which passes off during the process of baking.

The Royal is made from pure grape acid, and it is the action of this acid upon highly carbonized bicarbonate of soda that generates the gas alluded to: and these ingredients are so pure and so perfectly fitted, tested and adapted to each other, that the action is mild and permanent, and is continual during the whole time of baking, and no residue of poisonous ingredients remains to undermine the health, no heavy biscuits, no sour bread, but if directions are followed, every article will be found sweet and wholesome.

IN BRIEF, AND TO THE POINT.

Dyspepsia is dreadful, Disordered liver is miserable. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existence. It is easy put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspepsia.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health: But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents.

Markdale Standard

"HEW TO THE LINE, LET THE CHIPS FALL WHERE THEY MAY."

SEVENTH YEAR.—No. 357. MARKDALE, ONT., JULY 7, 1887. C. W. RUTLEDGE, Proprietor.

Local and Other Items.

Notices in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

NOTICE.—Correspondence, communications, Advertisements, &c., must be in this office by noon on Tuesday to insure publication that week.

—: AT :—

RUSSELL'S

—NOTED JEWELERY STORE,—

FLESHERTON,

will be found the most complete stock of Watches, Clocks, Jewelery, Silverware, Spex, &c., in this part of the country.

Call and see those watches they are selling at $12.00 bearing warrants for three and a half years, while other dealers are asking $15.00 for the same article. P. S. Bartlett, 3 oz. coin silver case for $16.00 while they are selling elsewhere for $17.50. Other dealers cannot compete with us and they know it. We cannot help them being annoyed at our terrible low prices; we must give the public the benefit of our close buying.

☞ Just Note a few prices.

A fine Nickle Alarm Clock for actually only $2.00 bearing a warrant for two years. Your choice of over 20 fine plated chains for only $1.60; Just think of it. Fine walnut clocks from $2.95 upward. Brooches, Ear-Rings, Ladies' Chains, Cuff-Buttons, Scarf-Pins, at equally low prices.

Remember if you want your Watch or Clock repaired properly by a workman, Russell's is the only place.

All orders by mail promptly attended to at

RUSSELL'S Noted Jewelry Store,

FLESHERTON.

NEXT Saturday is cattle fair.

MISS CLARK is to Napanee visiting her parents a few weeks.

A pipe organ is being put in the Thornbury Presbyterian Church.

MRS JOHN SARGENT of Manitowaning is down on a visit.

FLESHERTON Lodge R. T. of T. has a membership of 120.

MR. GEO. GRANT and daughter of Priddey was in town this week.

MR. PORTER, head teacher went east on his holidays on Monday.

HOLLAND Council meets on Saturday next, 9th.

THE new Queen's Hotel at Dundalk is about ready for opening.

CHAM WEEDY is gone to Toronto to join his brother in the painting business.

GREY Division Grange held their semi-annual meeting in Flesherton last Tuesday.

JAMES R. CUNNINGHAM was home from Toronto a few days and returned on Monday.

MRS. STANLEY REYNOLDS of Whitemouth, C. P. R. is spending a few weeks with friends in Markdale.

MISS MINNIE WALKER is up from Toronto visiting a few weeks with her sister Mrs. W. A. Brown.

DOMINION DAY was a melter and the numerous pic-nic parties were deeply sensible of the fact.

MRS. R. KNOWLES of Muskoka visited her parents, Mr. Wm. Cunningham last week.

THE Anarchist seldom makes his mark in the world, except when he leans against something.

MR. C. LITTLEJOHNS showed us green peas from his vegetable garden this week.

MISS HUNT of Durham is spending two weeks in Markdale, and is the guest of Mrs. W. Mason.

SWINTON Post Office, Grey County, has been changed to Swinton Park Post Office.

A. TURNER & Co., have been making improvements in the appearance of their Drug Store by an application of paint.

JOHN M. DAVIS is on the war path for lambs, and is said to be paying good prices.

REV. MR. BUGGIN will paeach a sermon to the Orange men in the Methodist Church on Sunday evening next at 7 o'clock.

MR. GEO. STEER of this village had new potatoes on the 1st July. He will please accept thanks for a basket of beauties left at our sanctum.

MR, W. H. ASHLEY, editor and proprietor of the Hanover Post, was married last week. He and Mrs. A. have the best wishes of the Standard.

REV. MR, WARD gave his congregation a surprise last Sunday morning when he announced that he had resigned his charge of this parish, and intends leaving in a week or two.

YOUNG GEORGE WALKER, who was belabored by Calaghan over two weeks ago has been in a precarious condition since but is now thought to be out of danger.

A feather bed is decidedly injurious to sleep on in warm weather, but can be made both comfortable and wholesome by placing the straw matress uppermost.

"OUR LITTLE ONES" for July is to hand promptly, and fully sustains its reputation as an excellent and desirable magazine for children, $1.50 a year. Russell Publishing Co., Boston, Mass.

Two droll looking chicks drove into town about dark the evening of Dominion Day in a butcher cart with an old umberella over them. Wonder who they were?

THE Summer Entrance Examinations were conducted in Markdale School on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday by Mr. Merchant, M. A. Principal of the Owen Sound Collegiate Institute.

ON our 4th page to-day will be found a striking and instructive illustration of the comparative worth of the various kinds of baking powders now in the market.

A Melancthon patron has been refreshing the appetite of the editor of the Dundalk Herald with green peas and new potatoes.

WE have received a copy of the Provincial Exhibition prize list for 87 which will be held in Ottawa from the 19th to the 24th September.

THE editor of the Dundalk Herald, Mr. Newell, reports an increase in both his subscription list and job work in his first year at the helm, now closed.

CORRECTION.—Last week we mentioned three female residents having come to reside in town, but later developments have proved that two of them are male, and fine boys at that, viz:—I Stinson's and Jas. Miller's.

IT is not an uncommon occurence for a minister to be presented with a purse on leaving a circuit for a new field of labor, but last week Rev. E. R. Young, of Meaford, had his coat pocket (which hung in the hall) rifled of a purse of $21.

THE Vandeleur senior base ball team and Markdale juniors played a frendly game at Bells Lake on Dominion Day in which the contest is said to have been close and the game well played resulting in a victory for the Markdale boys.

WE had a friendly call last Monday from Mr. Moffat, Reeve of Glenelg, on his return from an official visit on Grange business, to Manitoulin. He didn't form a very high opinion of the Island as an agricultural district.

WE had a pleasent call yesterday from Mr. Adam Irving of Manitowaning on his way home from Toronto.

W. L. YOUNG is off to Penetang, where he will join a party to spend their holidays fishing, fowling and hunting in that district.

THOS. WILLISCROFT, agent for the Massey implements, machinery and repairs at Holland Centre, is a reliable man, and if you require a genuine article you cannot do better than deal with him.

THE Garden Party held at Mr. Rae's under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Presbyterian Church on the evening of Dominion Day was an entire success, notwithstanding a passing thunder shower which brought out-door amusements to a hasty conclusion. Proceeds $20.00.

REV. MR. BUGGIN preached two practical and impressive sermons last Sunday in the Methodist Church, making a most favorable impression; indeed several who are competent judges, declared that the morning sermon has not been surpassed, if equalled in the new church.

OSCAR WRIGHT spent a few days at home, and returned to Toronto on Monday. He is making his mark in the city, having been twice promoted in a year in the fine Dry-Goods establishment of John Catto & Co., King Street, and now has charge of the best counter in the store.

A VERY successful S. S. pic-nic was held by Walker's appointment School in Ewart's grove about five miles west of here on Dominion Day. A program consisting of readings, recitations, singing, &c., by the school was well rendered, also speaking by Rev. A. Thibadeau, who occupied the chair, Dr. Halsted, Mr. A.G. Jansen and W. A. Brown. A collection was taken up for the School, amounting to $14.

DEPARTED BLISS.—We understand that J. H. Bliss of the Traverston Mills, chose a "moonlight night for a ramble" having unexpectedly dissapeared one beautiful night last week. Mr. B. has been driving a rattling business in the sawmill line, and if reports are true (and we have good reason to believe they are) his mourners are legion, for unpaid accounts varying from small sums up into the hundreds.

Now doth the giddy youth arise, for gaudy clothes he measures, and forward looks with beaming eyes to one long round of pleasures. His day dream pictures twilight walks with one he'll ne'er forsake, he thinks of summer evening talks while boating on the lake. He holds his pen while mankind snores and writes a charming sonnet to that bright maid whom he adores, the girl with the Gypsy bonnet. He asks that maid to be his wife, while they are playing tennis, and for the first time in his life, he finds his name is Dennis.

DR. JUG'S Medicine should be used by every one at this season of the year as it is the best blood purifier in the market and will reinvigorate the frame and prepare it to bear the heats of summer. The pills are justly called the "Little Gems" as they operate without causing either griping or pain and are a sure cure for nervousness, biliousness and other affections of the Liver and Kidneys. Buy them and try them and you won't regret your investment. Sold by Turner & Co., Markdale.

THE Town Line appointment Methodist Sabbath School Anniversary pic-nic was held at Wm. Hawken's grove on Wednesday the 29th June when a good attendance was present and an enjoyable afternoon spent. A program was gone through consisting of music, recitations, addresses, &c. Mr. H. Hamilton occupied the chair, Messrs. Rev. A. Wilson, P. Lyons, and J. Hawken, sr., addressed the audience. The Superintendent, Mr. Webster, deserves credit for the training of the school showing good order and interest generally. Proceeds $24.

A very pleasant evening was spent at "Sutherland's" Presbyterian church, 10th Line, Holland, on Thursday evening last. The tables were luxurantly supplied with Strawberries, Ice-Cream, and Lemonade. Several speakers was in atterdance and the whole affair passed off enjoyably.

BUSINESS LOCALS.

TURNIP SEED! TURNIP SEED! At Stephen's Drug Store.

4 colors in sun specks at W. A. Brown's Jewelley store.

IF you want pure Paris Green, go to Haskett Bro's.

PARIS green strictly pure, to be had at Mabee's hardware.

Paris Green pure at the Medical Hall, A. Turner & Co.

FRESH FISH.—Sarjeant Bros., butchers, receive a supply of fresh fish twice a week.

THE cheapest scythes the largest stock and the best make (Oshawa) is at Haskett Bros.

Turnip Seeds Fresh pure and true to name at the Medical Hall. A. Turner and Co.

A new Massey horse rake for sale very cheap for cash or short credit. Dan. Henderson, 7th line, Euphrasia.

IN cutlery we have some very fine goods to choose from; see them, at the sign of the cross cut.

LAZARUS, Moris, Pebble and Crystal lens, specks and eyeglasses at W. A. Brown's Jewellery store.

CIGARS! CIGARS! lovers of a good Havana cigar will find that Benson has the finest cigar in town, sold by the box.

FINE lathes tools and best Material used by W. A. Brown, the peoples watchmaker and Jeweller, Markdale.

ANYTHING you may want in the hard ware line can be had at prices that give satisfaction, solid full lines, and prices right, Mabee the hardware.

FULL lines in scythes, snaths, rakes, forks and general harvest goods. The best make only, kept in stock at Mabee's hardware.

ALL needing specks, bear in mind that W. A. Brown has the only complete stock in Markdale, and that he has a practical knowledge of optically fitting them.

BUSINESS is active and increasing at J. G. Ritchie's Woollen Mill, Markdale. Custom carding, weaving, fulling, dyeing clothdressing &c., done on short notice and in a workmanlike manner.

A great number of self binders are being purchased by farmers in this neighborhood the present season. The Watson Deering Binder is said to be the leading machine in the market. J. H. Carson, agent, Markdale.

DISTRICT DOINGS.

A SYNOPSIS OF COUNTY AND DISTRICT DOINGS FROM OUR EXCHANGES PREPARED FOR STANDARD READERS.

THE TRIUMPHANT THREE.—"During three years suffering with dyspepsia I tried almost every known remedy but kept getting worse until I tried B. B. B. I had only used it three days when I felt better, three bottles completely cured me." W. Nichols, of Kendol, Ont.

The Advertiser printing office in Orangeville was burned on the 1st inst. The estimated loss to Mr. Kennedy the proprietor is $3,000 insured for $1,600.

GET THE BEST.—Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is the best, most prompt and safest cure for cholera morbus, dysentery, sick stomach, cramps cholic and cholera infantum that has yet been discovered. Its popularity is undimmed by age. All medicine dealers sell it.

There are lots of people who mix their religion with business, but forget to stir it up well. The business invariably rises to the top.

IN BETTER HUMOR NOW.—"My son aged eleven, was cured of an eruptive humor that covered his head and face with sores, by two bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters and Pills," testifies Mrs Mary Fulford of Port Hope, Ont.

W. A. BROWN

"THE PEOPLE'S JEWELLER"

—DEALER IN—

Fine Gold, Filled Gold, and Coin Silver Cases; with Hampden, Columbus, Waltham and Elgin Movements, in Ladies' and Gents' sizes. Solid 18 k. Wedding Rings. Roll Gold Chains, and Jewellery in large variety Beautiful lines in Silverware for presentation purposes. I keep in Jewellers lines the finest and most complete stock between Shelburne and Owen Sound; do business for myself in my own name, and can be held to every warrant I sign. I don't quote prices on Watches "Not in Stock," and then tell a customer wanting a Bartlett at $16, "I just sold the last one," I have P. S. Bartlett's, in stock at $17.50 less cash dis., warranted 3 years. I expect to establish more fully every year of business life, on unquestioned reputation for Reliabilty. Straight Dealing, Fine Work and Close Prices.

Watch and Clock Warrants 2 and 3 years covering breakages.

☞ A call to Price or Purchase respectfully solicited.

GRADES
BEST QUALITY. WORK FIRST-CLASS.

W. A. BROWN, - Box 5,

MARKDALE.

FARMERS!

Don't forget there is good work done at the Flesherton

WOOLEN FACTORY

And we are doing all in our power to please. Customers are finding out it is to their advantage to dea with us, our Prices are Low and Our Goods are Reliable and notwithstanding price being cut so close on account of hard times, I intend to reduce the manufacturing prices in nearly every branch, viz., OILING, ROLL-CARDING, SPINNING, WEAVING, &c., &c. Give us a trial and see for yourself.

W. H. FLESHER.

Flesherton, May 30th, 1887.

HEALTH.

Feeding of Infants.

At this season of the year, this subject is one of great importance. The following article presents in a concise manner the best knowledge on this subject possessed by the Medical Profession at the present time:—

"Dr. Henry Ashby states that it has been shown by recent researches that cow's milk is about four times as rich in caseine as human milk, while the amount of salts is some three or four times as much, and the amount of sugar in human milk is half as much again as in cow's milk. The addition to cow's milk of water and sugar, with the object of approximating the various constituents to those of human milk, must necessarily fail as regards one or more of them. Moreover, the addition to cow's milk of lime-water, barley water, or a fluid containing dextrine or some other gelatinous substance, does not, as is generally supposed, prevent the bulky coagulation provided the fluid be left at rest. On this account, Dr. Ashby advocates peptonized milk. This may be readily prepared for infants by pouring four ounces of boiling water on four ounces of milk, adding one-fourth of one of Benger's peptonizing powders, two teaspoonfuls of cream, and allowing it to stand for ten or twenty minutes, according to the amount of peptonizing desired, then adding a tea-spoonful of sugar or milk sugar, and letting the infant take at once. When this form of food is administered, though some curd may appear in the stools, it is always soft and passed without difficulty.

"Another less expensive artificial human milk may be prepared by mixing one-quarter pint of cream with three-quarters pint of warm water, and adding one-half ounce of milk sugar. To this, two to ten ounces or more of milk may be added, according to the age or the infant's capacity for the digestion of curd.

"Another artificial human milk may be prepared according to Meigs's formula, by taking two table-spoonfuls of cream of medium quality, one of milk, two of lime-water, and three of water to which sugar of milk has been added in the proportion of seventeen and three-quarter drachms to the pint, which saccharine solution must be kept in a cool place, and prepared fresh every day or two. An infant may take from half a pint to three pints of this mixture, according to age. In round numbers, this artificial human milk may be said to contain eleven to twelve per cent. of solids, of which three or four per cent. is fat, one per cent. curd, and six to seven per cent. sugar.

"Any one of the above forms of food will generally be found to agree well with a healthy infant, or when it is suffering from dyspepsia or intestinal catarrh."

Treatment in Liver Complaints.

According to Murchison, a careful regulation of the diet will do more for one who is afflicted with a liver trouble than all medicine. The foods to be avoided are the fatty, the saccharine, and the highly seasoned.

Corn, oats, wheat, sago, rice, and potatoes consist largely of starch, which, in the process of digestion, is converted into sugar. In severe cases, these and kindred substances must be given up.

As most people would find it exceedingly difficult long to despense with the use of wheat bread, gluten bread may be substituted for it; that is bread made of wheat from which about two-thirds of the starch has been removed. The diet should absolutely exclude clear fat and sugar.

The quantity of the food is a consideration hardly second to the quality. Too much food, of whatever kind, must be strictly guarded against.

The liver is injuriously affected by alcoholic liquors, generally. These beverages are to be rigidly prohibited, especially malt liquors, port wine, and champagne. One would not have supposed beer to be worse than brandy, but it is much worse.

Next to regulating the diet is securing an abundance of fresh air—sea air is especially healthful in liver difficulties—and a sufficiency of vigorous exercise. The action of the skin should be kept up by frequently bathing the body with warm water and soap.

It is also beneficial to drink half a pint of cold water, or water with a little soda in it, on going to bed, and while dressing in the morning.

Liver diseases are, however, so difficult and refractory that it is peculiarly necessary to call in the services of a good physician as soon as the complaint has declared itself.

Too many persons are inclined at once to begin dosing, supposing that they are "bilious." The incautious and unwise use of medicine at such a time may fasten a chronic disease upon one who might have been permanently cured in a few days, by proper treatment.

Seasonable Hints.

Don t forget to give the sleeping-rooms and bedding an airing every morning for an hour or two.

TOOTHACHE.—If the cavity is so great as to allow the air to reach the nerve, get some spirits of nitre and mix with alum; saturate a little cotton with it and apply it to the cavity. If the pain extends upwards to the eye, or takes the form of neuralgia, procure some horseradish leaves, take out the stems, wet them and apply on the face over the pain. This will generally bring relief.

TO CURE FELONS.—If at any time before suppuration commences, plenty of ice water is used, it will never fail in producing a perfect cure. Hold the affected part in ice cold water as long as it can be borne, withdraw it for a rest and repeat. Keep up this process for half a day, if necessary. It will at last overcome the inflammation, and that is all there is of a felon in its first stages.

If any poison is swallowed, drink instantly half a glass of cool water, with a heaping teaspoonful each of common salt and ground mustard stirred into it. This causes vomiting as soon as it reaches the stomach. Lest some of the poison might remain, swallow the white of one or two eggs, or drink a cup of strong coffee. These two are antidotes to a greater number of poisons than any other articles known.

TEST THE WELL-WATER.—As soon as the ground thaws out, decomposition begins, and any decomposing matter upon the surface begins to soak down into the earth out of sight, but not out of existence, and is more capable of mischief than ever, since some of this poisonous matter is pretty certain to find its way into the well, if there is one near by. There may be nothing dangerous upon our own premises, but our well may receive a gratuitous contribution of filth from our neighbor's insanitary premises, if not from our own. So it is well to test the water of the well early in the season, so as to be sure as to its quality.

CESSPOOLS.—These sinks of iniquity are responsible for the loss of many valuable lives every year. Those who use them seem to labor under the delusion that whatever goes down into the ground out of sight is out of existence. The truth is, these foul matters are more potent for mischief after they have gone down into the earth than while they were on the surface. Cesspools, like vaults, should be made water-tight, and should be carefully and thoroughly ventilated by free openings into the open air. The same precautions respecting disinfection and frequent removal of contents, are necessary for cesspools as have been mentioned in regard to vaults.

HOUSE SMELLS.—Sometimes a house acquires such a concentration of insanitary colors that it has a characteristic smell. The writer has known houses which one might recognize by the aid of the nose, in the darkest night. Those who live in such a malodorous dwelling, get this same odor attached to their clothing and their persons, so that sometimes we encounter family smells. Smells which have attained this magnitude are truly monstrous and disgreeful; yet there are thousands of families, every member of which carries around with him the evidence of the sanitary neglects which have made "home, sweet home," a noisome place.

VAULTS.—The ordinary privy vault is a disgrace to a civilized people. The Chinaman, often abused for his neglect of personal cleanliness, tolerates no such filthy things as the vault. He has from time immemorial employed the "pail system," and doubtless thereby escapes many of the deseases which naturally result from the overcrowding to which he is subjected. Any vault is a nuisance; but if there must be vaults, let them be constructed in the least objectionable fashion possible. A vault which allows its fluid contents to soak down into the earth, is a menace to every well within a radius of many rods; and not only does such a vault contaminate the water supply, but it also renders impure the ground air, which may force its way into our dwelling through the cellar or the basement. Vaults, to be even partially safe must be made water-tight. They should be made of brick, laid in cement, and lined with a good cement. It is also well to cover the cement with a thick layer of coal tar or asphaltum. By the free use of some good disinfectant, as copperas or white vitriol, not less than one-half to one pound daily, the contents of such a vault may be kept in a reasonably safe condition, but should be removed at least once in three months.

LEPROUS HOUSES.—"I wish you would tell me what is the matter with my parlor wall. There is a spot in the ceiling. Sometimes it is green, then it is yellow or orange; just now it is brown." Thus said a lady to the writer one day a few years ago. Said she: "I have washed the spot, and whitewashed it; and it doesn't seem to do any good. In a few weeks the old spot is back again as big as ever." We asked the lady to take her Bible, and turn to the 14th chapter of Leviticus, verses 34—45, and read a description of the disease which had attacked her house, and the old Jewish way of treating it. If the reader will turn to the passage, he will see that the discription tallies very well. The fact is simply this: A species of mold often forms upon the walls of rooms which are kept dark and damp, and so long as the conditions remain favorable, the mold will continue to return. The conditions which would favor the growth of mold are most unfavorable to human life. In modern times we know how to eradicate this plague without tearing down the house. After cleansing and scraping the affected wall, apply a strong solution of some good disinfectant, as sulphate of zinc or chloride of lime. Expose the room freely to the disinfecting rays of the sun, and open the doors and windows daily, so that air may circulate through it, and the brown, or green, or yellow spot will cease to return.

INFANT PRODIGIES.

Willie Gordon, the ten-year-old son of a Mandan wholesale clothing dealer, is his father's bookkeeper and confidential clerk. He shows a surprising aptitude for business and always takes entire charge of the store when his father goes East to buy goods.

Eddie Race, a five-year-old youngster, of Glen's Falls, is the best drummer boy for miles around. He performs the most difficult beats without a flaw and never seems to get tired, although the drum he carries is nearly as big as his body. Eddie has never had any tuition, but gets the beats right by instinct.

Lillie Stuch the fourteen-year-old daughter of State Librarian of Pennsylania, recently composed a cradle song so difficult that her music teacher advised her to modify it. She said that she had made it difficult so that she might send it to Patti, who would be able to sing it. This she did, and it was sung by the diva with great success in the West.

Miss Fannie Block, of Jackson, Miss., is said to be one of the most precocious children in the state. Though only nine years old she reads, writes, and speaks English, German and French fluently and reads Hebrew with ease. She is now beginning to master Greek. It took her only two months to learn German, and she acquired the other languages with equal readiness.

A little negro lad about seven years old, living near Union town, is said to possess a wonderful talent for sculpture. He can take a lump of mud from the road side and with his hands form any animal he ever saw, the porportions being perfect. He recently made out of clay a life-size statue of a dog that astonished everybody who saw it because of its extraordinary fidelity to life.

Paul Williams, the twelve-year-old son to G. B. Williams, of Mendon, has neither arms nor legs—only stumps two inches long from his shoulders and similar stumps, eight inches in length, in place of legs. Yet he is an accomplished penmanand a very good artist. He holds the pen or brush between his chin and one of his shoulders stump and moves it with his head. Besides all this, he his a pupil of high standing in the Mendon High School.

Many a solid man has lost his solidity by fooling with liquids.

HOUSEHOLD.

How to Make Coffee.

It is not good policy to purchase coffee ready ground, but if it must be done the supplies should be small and frequent. Any one may test the purity of ground coffee by shaking a little over a tumbler of clear, bright cold water, and leaving it for an hour or so. Pure coffee communicates its color to water slowly, and when the color has been imparted the infusion is still bright and clear, and the color is never deep. But chicory and other adulterants quickly produce an opaque and dark infusion. The difference is so striking that for ordinary purposes a better test is not required. To place good coffee on the table daily is a simple and inexpensive business, but it cannot be done at a penny a cup, as some folks are in haste to aver. At for 12 to 20d. per pound a good coffee in berry is always obtainable, and 16 pence may at the present time be considered a fair family price. It is best to roast and grind as wanted, but the grinding is the one important point, because ground coffee quickly parts with its aroma, and there is a great charm in having it made immediately from the mill. In some houses the trouble of grinding is thought much of, but as a matter of fact, it is almost nothing, and a mill costing only a few shillings will last a life time. Coffee should never be boiled; it should be made with soft water at boiling heat, but if hard water must be used it should not be made to boil until wanted, for boiling augments its hardness. A common tall coffee-pot will make as good coffee as any patented invention, but a cafetiere is a convenient thing, as it produces bright coffee in a few minutes, and thus enables us to secure a maximum of the aroma and dispense with the use of any rubbish "finings." Every one to his taste, we wil say, but as careless people make the coffee too strong one day and too weak the next, the ground coffee and the boiling water should both be measured, and it will always take as much as four cups of water to make three cups of coffee. For the breakfast table the addition of about one-eight of chicory is an improvement, but for the dinner table coffee should be made without chicory, because it dulls the piquant flavor of the genuine article. Two points in coffee making deter people from using it—the trouble of grinding and the boiling of the milk. The grinding, however must be done, and it is really nothing, but the boiling of the milk can be advantageously evaded by using Swiss milk, which harmonizes perfectly, and by many well-trained palates is preferred to fresh milk heated.

Common-Sense Recipes.

AUNT KITTIE'S SUET PUDDING.—One cup of molasses, one cup of suet, one cup of rasins, one cup of milk, two teaspoonfuls baking powder; add flour till very stiff to beat with a spoon; put in a steaming-pan or floured bag, and steam constantly for three hours.

WHITE CAKE.—One cup of butter, three cups of sugar beaten to a cream; four cups of flour and a half cup of corn starch, added alternately with a cup of sweet milk, two teaspoonfuls baking powder, flavor to taste; lastly the whites of twelve eggs beaten to a stiff froth.

PUFF PUDDING.—One pint of boiling milk and nine tablespoonfuls of flour, mix first with a little cold milk. When cold add a little salt and and flour, well-beaten eggs and bake in a buttered dish. Serve at once.

POP-OVERS.—One cup flour, one cup sweet milk, one egg, a piece of butter the size of a walnut, a little salt; to be baked in scallops or gem pan, in a very quick oven. This makes twelve.

COCOANUT PUDDING.—Grate the meat of a large cocoanut. Roll fine five Boston crackers, and mix with the cocoanut, add milk enough to beat, and a tablespoonful of butter. Beat five eggs, add a cup of sugar, mix and beat like a custard.

BROWNED POTATOES WITH CHEESE.—Peel some boiled potatoes, and pare them to the same size, dip them in liquified, butter and roll them in grated cheese, seasoned with pepper and salt. Place them in the oven on a buttered tin, just long enough for the cheese to color, and serve.

CHICKEN SALAD.—The best meat of two chickens dressed fine, twice as muchminced celery, five have hard boiled eggs, four tablespoofuls of melted butter, rubbed with the yolks, and the whites minced fine; mix thoroughly with one and a half teaspoons of mustard; salt and pepper to taste; moisten the whole with chicken broth and a little vinegar. In absence of celery use cabbage.

LEMON CUSTARD.—The yolks of four eggs and the whites of two, one cup of sugar, one cup of cold water, butter one-half the size of an egg, one tablespoonful of cornstarch rubbed smooth in a little of the butter, the juice and grated peel of a lemon. Bake in custard cups or a pudding dish. Beat the remaining whites in three tablespoonfuls of sugar, spread over the custard when baked and return to the oven until a light brown.

DEVILLED EGGS.—Could there not be a better name invented! Boil six eggs for twelve minutes, plunge into cold water until cool, so that the shells will come off easily. When peeled, lay on their sides, and cut about a third of each. Scoop out the yolks. Mash the yolks, and the pieces of white cut off into a bowl. When thoroughly mashed season with salt, pepper, mustard, chopped parsley, a tablespoonful of melted butter, or oil if preferred, and a little vinegar. Fill this paste into the cavities left by the yolks. You will have to heap it up pretty well to get it all in. This makes a very good dish for luncheon, and adds much to the appearance of the table. Garnish with green parsley branches.

An Earthquake Lawsuit.

A curious law case, which has arisen out of the recent earthquake at Diano Marino, will shortly be decided before an Italian court. Two adjoining houses at Diano Marino belonging to two different families were destroyed by the earthquake and the inhabitants were all killed. When the ruins and corpses were removed, the sum of 20,000 francs in gold and bank notes was found among the debris. As it was impossible to ascertain to which house the money belonged, and as no member of either family was saved to decide the matter the surviving relatives have brought their case before the Judges, whose decision is expected in Italy with much interest.

A TERRIBLE CUSTOM.

The Dreadful Effects of Opium Upon the Oriental.

Two instances have recently appeared in our columns of that strange and sanguinary custom of the East called "running amuck." "Running amuck" is a phrase derived from the Malay word "amok" ("killing") and constitutes a well marked hysterical affection of certain races inhabiting Oriental countries. It is rarely, if ever, manifested among the quiet-tempered Hindus, and but seldom among the Indian Mussulmans, while, when ever it does occur in Hindostan, the malady may generally be traced to the abuse of opium or the extract of hemp called bhang, ganja, or charras. The Hindu tobacconist sells a special confection made up of bhang, opium, datura, cloves, mastic, cinnamon, and cardamums, which is mixed with milk and sugar and eaten as a sweetmeat. This diabolical cake—known as majum—will drive a man mad about as soon as anything. With the Malays, however, who have given a name to the

TERRIBLE MENTAL ABERRATION

of which we speak, and who are by far the most addicted to it of all Eastern peoples, there is seldom any such explanation of the outbreak. Suddenly, without rhyme or reason, a man will spring up from his shop board or his coach, draw his kris—the wave-bladed dagger which they all carry—and with a scream of "Amok! Amok!" strike its point into the heart of the nearest wayfarer and dart down the crowded bazaar like the lunatic which he is, stabbing and cutting on all sides. "Amok! Amok!" echoes from a hundred mouths, and everybody hurries for a place of refuge, fleeing in all directions, except those bolder spirits who snatch up weapons of defense and join the armed throng which pursues the desperado. The path of the chase is soon strewn with bodies of men, women, and children, dead or bleeding to death, until some lucky shot or daring thrust disables the murderer, who is as soon as he falls to the ground. Occasionally it turns out that the "amoker" has received some personal affront or injury or was hopelessly in debt or disappointed in love; but more commonly there is nothing whatever to account for the wild fury of his proceedings, and the street sweepers drag his carcass away as carelessly as if a leopard had been slain in the public streets. So ordinary, indeed, is the occurrence that in many towns and cities where there lives a large Malay population an instrument is kept in readiness at every police station called the "amoker catcher." It is something like an eel spear with a very long handle, and so contrived that two elastic-pointed spikes close round the madman's neck and secure him helplessly when the iron prongs are pushed against his nape from behind.

PIERCED WITH A DOZEN BLADES

Neither rank nor wealth keeps a Malay from this sudden excess of homicidal mania if he has the predisposition or has been greatly excited. There was an instance at Salatiga, in the island of Java, where the Regent was celebrating the marriage of two of his daughters, and everybody was in a festive and joyous mood. Just, however, at the gayest moment of the ceremonies the Regent's brother-in-law, a high official, cam stabbing everybody he could get at with his jeweled kris. The Regent himself, coming up to inquire into the uproar, was killed by a single thrust, and it was the brother of the Prince who ran the "moker" through the back with a spear and brought him down, yet not before he had slaughtered nine of the palace people and wounded six others more or less severely. It might be supposed that a race subject to such ferocious fits would be naturally excitable and nervous in manner; but the contrary is the case. The Malay is of all men the most quiet, dignified, and slow of speech and action in his ordinary life. He seldom speaks loudly or quickly, has the most courteous and even gentle demeanor, and quarrels very rarely with his fellows. Yet he is coldly and silently cruel; and has no regard for human life, and derives from the Mohammedan faith which he professes its bitterest and most relentless dogmas. Once started on the "death run" by insult, despair, or some brain trouble his only thought is to "kill, and kill, and kill," and in the fierce exultation of his insanity he does not feel the blow which lets out his burning blood and puts a stop to his dreadful career.

RUSHING THROUGH THE PROCESSION

Giving Satisfaction.

Dueling, which is now the harmless pastime of French newspaper editors, was once a common practice with gentlemen of fashion, who obtained satisfaction for grievances real or fancied by sticking each other with rapiers. It would have saved a good many lives if Incledon's system had been introduced earlier:

Incledon, the famous vocalist, was one of the unsophisticated, and did a great many things out of sheer simplicity that had been much better left unsaid and left undone. Something of this kind gave offense to a gentleman whom Incledon happened to fall in with, and the offended party resolved upon satisfaction. He sought out the singer accordingly, and was lucky enough to find him enjoying his bottle of wine one fine afternnoon at a noted hotel.

"Mr. Incledon," says the waiter, "a gentleman wishes to see you, sir."

"Show him up, then," says Incledon.

"Sir," says the visitor, in a towering passion, "I'm told that you have been making free with my name in a very improper manner, and I've come to demand satisfaction."

After some parleying Incledon rose, put on his hat, and planting himself at one side of the room, began warbling "Black-eyed Susan" in his most delicious style.

When he had finished, "There, sir," said he, "that has given satisfaction to several thousands, and if you want any thing more I've only to say you're the most unreasonable fellow I have ever met with."

What's in a Name?

William Shakespeare is singing ballads in London; George Washington has been ordered to leave town; Louis Napoleon is shoveling in a chain-gang; John Bunyan was warned out of a Connecticut town last week as a tramp; Plutarch was hanged in Texas a few days ago for horse-stealing; John Hancock ran off with another man's wife last week; Abraham Lincoln was recently caught picking an old gent's pocket at a country fair; Charles Sumner is in an Iowa jail on suspicion. Oliver Cromwell was sent to the Cleveland workhouse two weeks ago for thirty days.

Wedding Anecdotes.

"Speaking of marriage fees," a prominent clergyman said, "recalls a very amusing blunder which was perpetrated by my innocent brother clergyman recently. The groom, who was not a very nervous man, either, carelessly poked an old plantation negro ballad in his vest pocket with the bill which he intended as the marriage fee. During the excitement which followed the ceremony, the young man placed the plantation ballad in the palm of the clergyman. After a fervent God-speed, the officiating clergyman left without inspecting the gift song. The divine was indignant when he discovered the nature of the bit of paper which he had stowed away in his vest. He felt insulted. However friends interceded, the young man found the $5 bill in his vest pocket, made a hurried explanation and succeeded in allaying the ire of the indignant clergyman.

"When in California," the ecclesiast continued. "I had a little experience with a presumptuous groom. The witness, a prominent physician, requested me to go with him to a hotel to marry the couple. I complied, and after the ceremony the groom began to fumble a $20 gold piece about between his thumb and index finger. Of course, all present observed the coin. Finally the prospective man sidled toward the piazza door and beckoned me to follow. When the door shut us from the bride and the Doctor, the young Benedict slipped the double eagle into his trousers pocket and fished out twenty shillings in silver as my fee. I refused nothing, but when I came to forward a certificate I filled it out on a piece of foolscap paper. I heard from the groom's friend the doctor, in due time. He demanded an explanation of my effrontery. When I meekly informed him that I could not afford to furnish a first-class certificate when the fee was so small, I received $5 from the groom for a proper statement of the marriage."

The clergyman then narrated how, returning from prayer meeting with his wife he found a couple seated in a wagon before his door. They desired to be united in the holy bonds of wedlock, and when the ceremony was concluded, the groom, who appeared rather dull, continued to linger and seemed greatly embarrassed. The gleeful bride nudged him in the ribs occasionally and looked hard at the minister. The young man only grew more and more uneasy. When all the topics of conversation had been exhausted the clergyman's wife proceeded to entertain the couple with cake and refreshments. At about one and a half hours after the ceremony had been concluded the bride called the groom to the door and was seemingly determined to get him out of the room. Just as the door was about to be opened the groom plunged his hands into his trousers pocket, drew forth a fifty-cent silver piece, blushed violently and hurried from the house. "However," said the clergyman, "I had more respect for the poor fellow than I did for the imposter and gave me $2.50 after he had given his wife and friends to understand that I was receive $20. I furnished the groom who censated me with fifty cents with a marriage certificate."

Preserved Game.

In an open sunny space, in Hampden Park not far from the road, standing among the thick grass, we see two handsome birds as large as our ordinary poultry. They are pheasants, and do not appear to be in the least disturbed at seeing us. They probably know that no one will be allowed to touch them except in the game season, which will not arrive for several months. The laws regarding game are very strict in England and even in the shooting season no one is allowed does not "preserve" game, as the word and care of it is here called, is allowed to kill a rabit, a partridge, or a pheasant, on his own property. All such game is considered to belong to those persons in the neighborhood who have "preserves." If a rabbit should come into the garden of a house where we are staying, and be found eating the cabbages, it may be driven away, but if the owner of the garden should shoot or kill it, he would be subject to a penalty.

It must not be supposed that the proprietors are always stingy about their game. On one of the estates of the Prince of Wales each poor man is allowed to come to the house every day in the shooting season, and get one rabbit. He is perfectly welcome to the animal, now it is dead. As the Prince and his friends could not possibly eat all they shoot; but if he should presume to deprive the owner of the pleasure of killing it, he would be a poacher and be put in prison.

A FRENCH LOVE POWDER.

The Horrible Use to Which Human Bones Are Put.

A curious instance of how deeply old superstitions are still rooted in remote parts of the country is a case which has just been brought before the Magistrates of Maurepas in the Department of Loiret, in France. A short time ago the gravediggers of Fontenay-sur-Long said to some workmen with whom he was talking at a Ferrieres factory: "Perhaps you think that dead men's bones are of no use to anyone, but you are mistaken; I have sold some to two women of Ferriers." The police hearing of this occurrence made inquiries, and the following facts were revealed: The women from Ferrieres went to Fontenay sur Loing and asked the gravedigger for some human bones. At first he refused, but was soon persuaded to yield by an ample bribe. The women, who pased in the district for sorceresses, returned home, hiding the bones for a short time, and then burning them and carefully gathering up the cinders, their purpose being to prepare a love draught for a young and pretty lass, who had ordered it to conquer the heart of a lover who had slighted her off.

A Plausible Theory.

"Waiter," he said, "I brought a silk umbrella with me when I came in, now it's gone."

"Yes, sah. Was it er new one, sah?"

"Yes."

"Wif er silver handle?"

"Yes. Do you know where it is?"

"Well, I don' know fo' suah, sah, but specs some gem'man must er took it."

Women are the State librarians of Iowa, Kentucky, Louisana, Michigan, Mississippi and Tennessee.

THE LIME-KILN CLUB.

"While I doan' want to seem capshus or poker perickler," said Brother Gardner as the meeting was called to order, "dar' am a few things I desiah to call you attenshun to at dis time. Heretofo' nuffin' has been said when members sat in de meetin' an' ate herrings. Dat purceedin' must now be stopped. Dey might hev eaten smoked herrings in de Roman Senate, but dat was in anoder aige, an' perhaps de smell wasn't so bad.

"Some of you members walk in heah wid a raw onion in one pocket and a cold biscuit in de odder, an' you sot an' munch, an' munch an' sot until dere am not a dry eye around you. Arter dis eavenin' sich things must be left at home.

"Sartin members git in de back seats an' pesserve deir shoes an' whittle off deir toe-nails, pare down deir co'ns, an' rub away at dere gone-bruises. Kin such purceedings be witnessed in Congress? From dis night on de member who is cotch in sich a per-formance will receive a paralyzing shock.

"Sartin members hev got into de habit of scrapin' deir hoofs on top of de stove an' a-peleratin' deir hoofs on top of de stove an' under sills an' takin' things powerful easy. When dat triangle sound hereafter all over dis mus' be on de floor, an' if it becomes necessary to elevate 'em an applicashun sent to the Secretary's desk will probably be favorably acted upon.

"A few sartin members hev bin in de habit of slippin' out of de room widout axin permishun, as purvided fur in de by-laws. Hereby warn sich pussons dat de nex' one who slips out will slip in a great deal faster, for I shall be at de outer door in pusson to help him.

"We want dignity—not too much, but enuff. I doan' want so much dignity as dat I can't wink to Samuel Shin to put a pin into Elder Toots when de latter gin'lman begins to snore in his sleep, or dat Samuel Cahoots will carry off a resolushion in his pocket bekase he am a feared to pre-sent it. If a member's co'ns ache he kin withdraw to de anty-room an' cajole wid himself. If de fiah bells ring one or two mem-bers kin step softly out an' post deir selves on de location of de hungerin' flames. I don't want to be too strict, but I shall in-sist on de same dignity heah as kin be found in de State Legislachur, an' de sooner you accustom yourselves to de change de bet-ter it will be fur you."

WIPED OUT.

For some time past reports of a very un-favorable character have been received from "The High Old Steppers," a branch of the Lime Kiln Club established at Nashville. The officers and members have been charged with various derelictions, and early in May the President was arrested, convicted and fined up for ninety days for having a bag of meal in his possession which belonged to a miller half a mile away. He was no sooner incarcerated than the lodge at once passed a resolution that the laws of this country were made by despots, enforced by tyrants, and should be resisted by the bay-onet. Its charter was at once demanded by the parent club, and in giving notice that its franch no longer existed, Brother Gard-ner said:

"De High Ole Steppers will step a good deal lower arter dis, an' we shall be keerful how we establish fucher branches in Nash-ville. When a man in dis kentry cums to a conclushun dat de laws ar' agin him he kin jar watchin' wid boaf eyes open. He's either bin stealin' somethin', or is achin' to kill a policeman on gineral principles."

WARNED TO STAY AWAY.

Under the head of communications the secretary announced a letter from Kurnel Sweetspring Johnson, of Selma, Ala. The kurnel bosses a department in an oil mill through the week, and preaches to the best fire-fighting power on Sundays. He has in-vented a new method to the world. After delivering his address he should remain in Detroit several weeks to take lessons in fire-washing, and would be the guest of Samuel Shin, for whom he had conceived a great admiration. The reading of the let-ter had scarcely been concluded when Sam-was on his feet, trying his hardest to turn pale. Visions of giving up his bed and sleeping on the floor—of his household ex-penses increasing one half—of calls to loan the best Sunday shirt and nankeen vest, came before his eyes until his tongue could utter a word.

"Sot down Brudder Shin—sot down! ob-served the President. "Dis Cha'r not only shares what your feelin's ar' but sympa-thises wid you. De seckretary will write to the kurnel to de effect dat dis ar' our cyclone, small-pox, cholera an' airthquake season, an' we couldn't live five minits arter strikin' Detroit. If dat doan' do we will telegraph him dat a pusson of his name is wanted here on a murder."

CONVICTED FOR PLAGIARISM.

Some time since Prof. de Ruyter Bangs, a temporary member residing in Columbus, Ohio, sent in the following poem to contest for the annual spring prize voted by the club. The committee thought they discovered the Italian hand of plagiarism in it, and it was laid aside for further investigation. Mr. Bebee now reported that the poem was stolen bodily from the work of the poet Singer of Michigan. Here are three of the twenty-seven verses:

One night when I sought my couch,
Dismayed ont and forlorn,
An angel appeared to me, and said;
"You marry a man named Henry Smith Rogers"

The days rolled swiftly past,
And I was almost discouraged,
When father hired a man,
And he was the one of my dreams.

And so you see how fate
Will sometimes woo us on,
And how no girl should despair
Because she has no beau.

On motion of Trustee Pullback the matter of expelling the Professor was put to vote, and he was expelled at the rate of forty miles an hour.

"In notifyin' him," said the President, "de secretary will state dat it is mo' on account of his poetry dan de stealin.' Let us now lock up de unfinished business, sot de safe to open on de word 'X' and retire to our domesti-cated homes."

Richer than He Thought He Was.

Generally a man dies leaving less property than he supposed that he owned The Baron de Neull Brussels, however, thought that he owned but a small property, and after making a few legacies directed the remain-der to be spent on his tomb. Some $600,000 more was found to have belonged to him, and the heirs are trying to find out whether it will all go into a mausoleum.

PEARLS OF TRUTH.

There never was a good war, or a bad peace.

I care not how much intelligence you have, if you cannot exhibit it you look like an ignoramus.

Thrift of time will repay you in after-life with a usury of profit beyond your most saguine dreams.

Truth subsists eternally, and finally triumphs over its enemies, because it is eternal and strong even as God himself.

God has one mode of saving men and women, and you cannot be saved upon any other principle than that which Jesus Christ taught.

The philosophers of the world will concede that the elements of which you and I are composed are eternal, yet they believe that there was a time when there was no God.

When the hour of death comes, that comes to high and low, then it is no: what we have done for ourselves, but what we have done for others, that we think on most pleasantly.—[Sir Walter Scott.

Judge every man by what he cannot do, and you will find no man of ability. Judge every man by what he has accomplished in the fields with which he is familiar, and you get at his real size.

He who seeks for and emphasises the good in others is not only blessing and improving them, but himself also. Envy is thus laid low; all the more amiable qualities are brought ont; the habit of giving happiness is in itself a joy, and the manifest denefits thus conferred are fully shared by the giver.

Friendship and love differ mainly in this—that, whereas the felicity of friendship consists in a mutual interchange of benefits, intellectual and other, that of love is in giving on one part and receiving on the other, with a reciprocal perception of how sweet it is to the endower to endow and the receiver to receive.

At the best, no one can know much. Compared with the infinite realms above and beyond us to be yet discovered, the knowledge of the most learned man covers but a tiny spot; and what fraction of such a spot ours may cover is but a small matter. But it does matter to ourselves and to all around us the use we make of what we do possess—whether we carry it around for exhibition, or whether we convert it into a living force to elevate our own natures, and to bless and help mankind.

Emin Pasha's Future Plans.

It is more than likely that Emin Pasha, who has lived in Central Africa over eight years, will choose rather to remain at his post than to return to Europe with the Stanley expedition. In his latest letters he announces his purpose to establish a permanent station in the healthful and fertile district of Mahagi, on the southwest coast of Albert Nyanza, and he also speaks of his projects for future expl ration. The purpose of Stanley's expedition is not to bring Emin Pasha home, but to supply him with the ammunition and other resources needed to enable him to withdraw, if he desires, or to still maintain the author-ity of Egypt in that part of equatorial Africa.

Emin Pasha and Dr. Junker have both protested in eloquent words against aban-doning this province to barbarism and the slaver. Emin Pasha has taught thousands of the natives improved methods of agricul-ture and the arts of weaving and shoemak-ing. To abandon the work he has so well begun will be to throw away the opportun-ity of planting civilization in the heart of Africa. By means of the newly discovered waterways to the Congo, Egypt's equatorial province may still be kept within easy reach of Europe, the Soudan may some day be re-gained, and millions of blacks preserved from the Khartoum slave drivers who formerly ravaged their homes.

Emin Pasha's territory was one of the two provinces of Egypt that paid all its expenses and turned a surplus into the trea-sury. According to Dr. Junker the Gover-nor General has on hand a store of ivory large enough to pay the entire cost of the Stanley expedition three times over. Junker also says that if Emin Pasha decides to remain at his post the majority of his force of 1,800 men will remain with him.

Egypt authorizes Emin Pasha to hold the province he has defended so well and has done so much to develop. No one familiar with the record of this remarkable man be-lieves that he will abandon the equatorial province, even for a temporary respite from his arduous labors, if thereby the fruits of his past efforts and the well-being of the natives must be sacrificed.

A Brave Nun.

Sister Marie Theresa, a French nun who has lately been decorated with the Cross of the Legion of Honor for forty years' service in the army ambulances, seems to be not only a brave but a merry woman. During a time of hard fighting in Tonquin a bomb fell into an ambulance full of wounded men. Sister Theresa seized the bomb and carried it to a distance. When she set it down it explod-ed, but, luckily, not till she had time to throw herself flat on the ground. Her as-sistants rushed up in terror and found her unconscious and covered with blood. When she regained her senses she uttered her customary phrase: "It's only a joke," an expression which has since become her nick name. At another time she was attending a wounded man, when she was struck by a passing splinter from a charge of metraille, but her quiet observati on was merely as usual: "It's only a joke" At the ceremony of the decoration none of the customary for-malities were omitted. The General who conferred the title chevaliere on the brave nun touched her with his sword on both her shoulders, and finally brushed her cheek with his white mustaches.

Some valuable relics of Franz Liszt, be-queathed by him to the city of Vienna, have lately been turned over to that municipality. Among them are a writing case, once the property of Haydn, and the clavichord used by Mozart at home. This spinet of Mozart's resembles an insignificant-looking table about two ells in length, with a black framework, without pedals and comprising five octaves. The chords are mostly broken. Gummed on the lid is the announcement of the death of Mozart's widow. Mozart's piano will be preserved in the Municipal Museum by the side of Franz Schubert's piano, which has long been in the possession of the city of Vienna.

GENERAL TOPICS.

H. Vilin, a French chemist, has invent-ed an improved kind of cement, possessing durability and the cold appearance of mar-ble, so that a wall set with it not only be-comes impermeable to moisture, but can be polished and made beautiful.

Fred Douglass recently said in Paris: I have travelled through most of the countries of Europe, and whenever I am in the cars, in the theatres, in the ball-rooms, anywhere in fact, I find that I am treated always with courtesy, and not rarely with distinguished consideration. As far as I can see, a man is judged over here without any regard to the color of his hair, or his eyes, or his skin.

A convival Buffaloprinter went to sleep in a second story window. He fell out and would undoubtedly have received severe injuries had he not been lucky enough to fall squarely on the shoulders of two reporters. They were knocked down and badly shaken, but were able to get an ambulance and send the un-conscious type-setter to the hospital.

Jim Ponce, of St. Augustine, Fla., going through the woods heard tremendous squawls yells, and roars, and cautiously investigating came upon a seven foot panther fighting with an alligator, which had the panther fast in his ponderous jaws. Ponce sided with the under dog and shot the alligator, where-upon the panther, freeing himself, made for the hunter, who had a hard fight before he killed the ungrateful beast.

The managers of Bellevue Park, at Pitts-burgh, recently bought seven fine deer in Michigan and had them shipped to the park, where a nice big yard with a seven-foot fence was waiting for them. The boxes were carefully placed in the yard and open-ed and the animals came out one by one. Then the biggest deer, turned her large, dreamy eyes toward the seven-foot fence, and in a moment made for it, followed by the other six. Those who were present were willing to swear that that dreamy-eyed ani-mal leaped twenty-five feet high over the fence if she cleared it at all, and she certainly cleared it, as did the other six. A reward is now offered for the Michigan jumpers.

The Chinese among others are said to be rising in Hawaii against the extravagance of the foolish king, with the intention of creat-ing a republic. This is most momentous. Should the Chinese race take to voting where will they stop? They may begin to vote in California, and if they do so they will have just the samo sort of power that other foreign elements have now. Instead of passing anti-Chinese laws, every party will compete for the Chinese support; and resolutions expressive of condemnation of the opium traffic of Britain, of the cooley traffic of Queensland of the invasion of China by Russia will be in order.

The merits of the "concussion" fire engine, or extinguisher, an improved apparatus in its line, are much extoiled in the English journals. As described, it is very light, can easily be carried in one hand, while it is capable of throwing a stream of water to any spot within thirty-five feet. The de-vice consists of a cylinder about two feet in length and three inches in diameter, and which is charged with water holding chemical in-gredients in solution, and, on being required, only needs to be sharply struck on the floor by a wall, the concussion sets free a quan-tity of acid by breaking a bottle inside the cylinder, instantly produces carbonic acid gas, which increases the volume of the water. eight times, besides producing force to throw the water. In this way no difficulty is experienced in directing the fluid to any ture, and putting it out at once.

A Non-Conductor.

The natives of Tonquin have little more knowledge of the telegraph than the old lady who said to the telegraph pole-climber.

"If there's a message up there from my son please throw it down, I'm expecting him home soon."

These well-meaning savages, it seems, have been making experiments not wholly successful from a scientific point of view.

The communication between Hi-Noi and Hai-Phong was once completely interrupted, and it took some time to discover the reason. The whole telegraph line was carefully in-spected, but with no effect. It then occurred to one of the officials that in the neighbor-hood of a friendly village the wires had look-ed rather thicker than usual. On returning to the spot he found that for a long distance the wire had been removed and carefully replac-ed with bamboo cord. The head man of the village explained that iron was very expen-sive in his district, but that in proof of his friendly feeling toward the French he had given orders that any one removing a portion of the wire should replace it with bamboo cord. The official tried to explain the dif-ference between bamboo and wire, and wound up by declaring that the next bit of bamboo rope put to such a use would come in for hanging the nearest village chief.

Recreant to his Trust.

A lady living in Chicago is the owner of a very sagacious Newfoundland dog called Don. The other day Don, who quite fre-quently goes to the grocery or market for his mistress, was sent after a basket of eggs. As he was returning home, carrying his basket with a proud, dignified air, he met a dog against whom he evidently had an old grudge. He set his burden down care-fully on the walk; then, giving a bark of challenge, started after his enemy on a dead run. A friend of his mistress, who witness-ed this proceeding, picked up the basket and carried it to its proper destination. Meanwhile Don, having vanquished his foe returned to the spot where he had left his eggs. On discovering that they had disap-peared he ran around frantically trying to find them. Finding his effort vain, he sat down and lifted up his voice in a howl of anguish, as visions of his mistress's whip, or at least the loss of his dinner, crossed his mind. Suddenly he started for home at a brisk trot. Sneaking out into the yard, he picked up an old, discarded basket that lay in one corner of the yard, and carried it in and deposited it at the feet of his mistress. He has been taught that when he goes to the grocery for any any article they do not happen to have, to return and give a succession of sharp barks. This he proceed-ed to do, as if to say, "They were out of eggs to-day."

Whenever I find myself covetous of some-thing that I have not I can effect a cure by recollecting what I have.

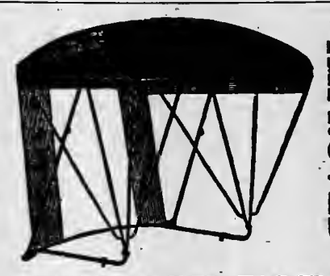
SNOW DRIFT THE FAVORITE
THERE IS NO BETTER BAKING POWDER
The Snow Drift Baking Powder Co., Brantford, Ont

THE LONDON GUARANTEE AND ACCIDENT CO. (LD: OF LONDON, ENG.
Capital, £200,000. Dominion Government Deposit, £55,000. Head Office: 72 King St East, Toronto.
Gentlemen of influence wanted in unrepresented districts.
A. T. McCORD,
Resident Secretary for the Dominion.

MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO.
MANUFACTURE ONLY
FINEST
Silver Plated Ware.
Artistic Designs, combined with Unequalled Durability and Finish.
HAMILTON ONT.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships
Sailing during winter from Portland every Tuesday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via Halifax and St. John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal, weekly, Glasgow and Boston weekly; and Glasgow and Philadelphia, fortnightly
For Freight, passage, or other information apply to J. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co. Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's N. F., Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans Rae & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; H. & A Allan Portland Boston Montreal

BABY'S BIRTHDAY.
A Beautiful Imported Birthday Card sent to any baby whose mother will send us the names of two or more other babies, and their parents' addresses Also a handsome Diamond Dye Sample Card to the mother and much valuable information.
Wells, Richardson & Co., Montreal.



THE National ELECTRO & STEREOTYPE CO.
23 ADELAIDE ST. E., TORONTO.
All classes of fine work. Mfrs. of Printers' Leads, Slugs and Metal Furniture. Send for prices.

THE WHITE THRESHING ENGINE OF LONDON, ONT
A FULL SUPPLY FOR 1887

CONSUMPTION.
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer. Give express and P. O. address.
DR. T. A. SLOCUM,
Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto.

AGENTS—Ladies or Gentlemen Wanted—To Canvass for our Subscription Books. Our Standard and popular work, Dr. Withrow's "History of Canada"—a book which ought to be in every library. Our instructive, amusing and soul-touching temperance book, "Platform Echoes," by J. B. Gough. Our complete book of sermons and autobiography of Sam P. Jones, with a short sketch of the life of Sam W. Small, and three of his special sermons. Our beautiful book of poetry and literature of all ages and all lands, entitled "Golden Thoughts on Mother, Home and Heaven." Our handsome Family Bibles, beautiful illustrations, full of useful and helpful matter for Bible study, besides good clear type and paper. Our terms are liberal. Send for circulars.
WILLIAM BRIGGS, Publisher, Toronto.

Royal Dandelion Coffee.
A Delicious and nourishing Breakfast Beverage, contains a proportion of German Dandelion Root, which acts medicinally on the Liver and Stomach, purifying the blood and invigorating the system. Prepared only by ELLIS & KEIGHLEY,
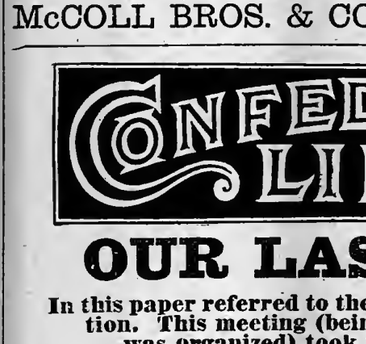
TORONTO.

CONBOY'S IMPROVED

CARRIAGE TOPS
Are famous for their style, convenience, durability, and cheapness. Buy no other until you see them. All the leading Carriage Builders sell them.
Factory: 407 King West, TORONTO.

THE ALBANY STEAM TRAP CO.'S SPECIAL BUCKET RETURN TRAP.



The Celebrated Hancock Inspirator.
Gresham's Automatic Re-starting Injector.
Morrison's Automatic Sight Feed Lubricator.
Engineers' & Plumbers' Supplies of every description. Send for circulars.
JAMES MORRISON,
75 & 77 Adelaide St. W.,
TORONTO

PEARL PEN AND PENCIL STAMP WITH NAME 50C
Postage 6 Cts. Extra

TINGLEY & STEWART M'F'G CO.
TORONTO, ONT.
Please mention this Paper when writing.

Lardine.
THIS SPLENDID MACHINE OIL! Has never failed to take the highest awards wherever exhibited.
It Has No Equal. Farmers, Threshers and Millmen Use No Other.
This Oil keeps the Machinery in first-rate working order, thereby lessening the chances of accidents and breakdowns. To be had of all first-class dealers. Beware of imitations!
Try our 600 Fire Test Cylinder Oil. Harness, Bolt Cutting, Wool and Lard Oil, always in stock.
SOLE MANUFACTURERS OF LARDINE.
McCOLL BROS. & CO., - - TORONTO.

CONFEDERATION LIFE ASS'N.
OUR LAST NOTICE
In this paper referred to the Annual Meeting of the Association. This meeting (being the 15th since the Company was organized) took place on Tuesday, the 12th April, when the following gratifying increases were announced:
PREMIUM INCOME INCREASED FOR YEAR, - $ 96,894.
INTEREST AND RENTS, - - - - - 13,029.
ASSETS, - - $356,375. SURPLUS, 80,234.
$260,420 Were allocated as Profits to Policy Holders. Profits payable on and after May 1st.
J. K. MACDONALD, Managing Director.

GURNEY'S
Standard Hot-air Furnaces
HAVE NO EQUAL.

PRICES TO SUIT ALL DEALERS
THE "BOYNTON,"
" "HARRIS,"
" "MAMMOTH,"
" "MONARCH."
Send for Price List and Illustrated Catalogue.
EVERY FURNACE GUARANTEED
THE E. & C. GURNEY COMPANY, (L'T'D),
TORONTO, HAMILTON MONTREAL, AND WINNIPEG

Markdale Standard.

C. W. Rutledge, Proprietor.

MARKDALE, JULY. 7, 1887.

COMMERCIAL UNION.

The great question of the day throughout Canada is, Commercial Union with the United States. It is one with two sides, and the great difficulty of a speedy decision appears to be the want of a proper knowledge of the question. One thing is certain, the more it is discussed, the more keenly and generally does the farmer favor the adoption of such a change

Canada is preeminently an agricultural country, and what would universally benefit the farmer must be general good for the country as a whole.

Our manufacturers may be protected and enriched at the expense of the consumer, but the greatest good to the greatest number should be the aim. It does seem strange that two row of custom houses over four thouousand miles long with scores of officials costing hundreds of thousands of dollars anually should be necessary between two countries speaking the same language and whose interests, in a great measure, are identical.

Next in point of importance to the agricultural interest is the Forest and the Mine, in both of which Canada is rich, and for which the United States is the natural market.

By all means then let there be unrestricted discussion on this important question and as for loyalty we cannot see any objections to an individual or country that looks out for number one.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—Dakota crops are reported to be less promising than in May.

—The Pope has excomiucated Dr. McGlynn of New York.

—Sheriff Paxton of Ontario Co., died at his residence Whitby on Sunday last aged 66 years.

—It is reported that no such drouth as now prevails has existed in Illinois and Arkansas for many years.

—The heat in New York has been very oppressive the past week and many cases of sunstroke are reported, the morality reaching 170 in a day.

—A waterspout broke last week in Arizona in the Cienaga valley, which is half a mile wide. and is part of a ranch belonging to one Mr. Vail flooding the valley in a few minutes to the depth of fifteen feet and drowning hundreds of cattle.

The "Globe" Suggests that as the utterances of the various church parliaments on the prohibition question proves them to be virtually a unit on this subject, they should form a joint committee expressly charged with the duty of furthering the cause. Such a committee might prove a very powerful weapon, and it would in itself be one step onward in the direction of church unity.

—Mr. Erastus Wiman and Hon. Benjamin Butterworth addressed a representative meeting of farmers Monday at Port Hope on the subject of Commercial Union. The gathering was held by the Port Hope Agricultural Society. A resolution was passed unanimously declaring in favor of Commercial Union and that those present would not vote for any party or individual who did not favor it.

—A very successful meeting of the West Wellington Farmers' Institute for the discussion of Commercial Union was held on Saturday at Drayton. Speeches were delivered by Mr. Erastus Wiman. Hon. Benjamin Butterworth, Mr. Goldwin Smith, Hon. Wm. Macdougall and General Waul. At the close a resolution in favor of unrestricted reciprocity was enthusiastically carried without opposition. A similar resolution was also adopted at an adjourned meeting of the West Victoria Institute, held on Saturday at Lindsay.

—The demonstration Dominion Day at Dufferin Lake, near Orangeville, in honor of Mr. Erastus Wiman, of New York, was a great success, being largely attended by the farmers of the County of Dufferin. Interesting speeches in favor of Commercial Union with the United States were delivered by Mr. Wiman, Mr. Butterworth, of Ohio, and others, and at the close of the meeting a resolution was unanimously adopted endorsing Commercial Union on terms not derogatory to our connection with the Mother Country.

—The Canadian Pacific Railway will in a few years cease to be the grertest railway in the world. The Russians are building a Siberian Pacific Railway to connect St. Petersburg with Vladivostock on the Sea of Japan. When the road is finished, five years hence, it will only be necessary to send our Yokohama steamers on to Valdivostock to put a girth around the earth in forty days. As westward the star of Empire holds its way, we presume that this great railway will be the opening up of new fields of enterprise for the Anglo-Saxon still pressing forward beyond the wide Pacific to the far West.

—The Farmers of Ontario appear to be thoroughly in earnest in their agitation for unrestricted trade between Canada and the United States. They appear to be just as thoroughly worked up over this question as ever the manufacturers were over the question of securing pretection, and for exactly the same reason. It would be money in their pockets if they got commercial union. The United States is the best market for the Canadian farmers, especially for barley and other coarse grains, as well as for horses and cattle and winter fruit. There is this to be said in favor of the farmer's demand. He does not ask the Government to tax other people in order that he may profit by it.

Landlordism.

Our brethern across the Atlantic give vent to grievous howls anent the tyranny of landlords. There may be some truth in their wails; one grain of truth will give currency to a pound weight of falsehood; when enlarged upon by the brilliant oratory of hungry fire-eaters and abettors of midnight assassination—Parnell & Co. Were the tenant laws of Ireland as coercive as they are in America, well might vagabondism present a clear sheet of so-called "grievances."

ILLUSTRATION.—What would an Irish tenant think of a law which would permit the lower sex of an unworthy landlord occupying the upper portion of a building (the lower part being occupied by a tenant) to wash down the filth of an ordinary room, as well as the essence of human excrement, upon dining-room table, carpets, bed-clothing, &c. The Irish tenant could obtain redress within twenty-four hours from the date of making his application for relief; but the Canadian sufferer must take a tortuous proceedure in law, with the satisfactory uncertainty of whether he will, or not, pay the costs.

Markdale furnishes a glaring illustration of the above; and there are those who have willing hands and full pockets who will test what are valid rights, and also expose a dastardly iniquity.

THE ANGEL OF JUSTICE.
June 27th, 1887.

I. O. G. T.

A lodge of Independent Order of Good Templars was organized in this village last week to be known as Jubilee Lodge. The officers elected are as follows.—

Worthy Chief Templar, J. K. Moffat; Worthy R. H. Supporter, Mrs. Hull; P. W. C. T. Geo. Littlejohns; W. Vice T. Emma Wright; W. Secretary, D. R. Anderson; W. A. S. Mrs. Pickell; W. T., Anna Anderson; W. F. S. Fred Stevens; W. M., Jas. Matson; W. D. M., Ida Stevens; W. C., Wm. Jackson; W. I. G., Mrs Dinsmore; W. O. G.; F. J. Ritchie.

The lodge meets at 8 o'clock on Tuesday evening of each week in McDougall's block.

DEATHS.

SHEA.—In Markdale on the 5th inst., Mrs. John Shea, aged 69 years. Funeral to the English Church cemetary to-day (Thursday) at 3 o'clock.

COMMERCIAL UNION

—BETWEEN—

Canada and the United States,

is now being largely discussed throughout the Dominion with the preponderence of public opinion in favor of union; whether union with our cute Yankey Brothers would cure the ills we labor under or not, McFarland sayeth not, but he does most decidedly say that if you want to reap the greatest advantage from your cash or produce you must (if you have not already done so) form a union with McFarland's Immense Establishment, where you can get the choice of largest stock of choice goods at close prices, North of Toronto. This week I have opened out and placed in stock. New Grey Dress Goods; New Cream Dress Goods; New Black Dress Goods; New Olive Green Dress Goods; New Browns Fawn; Eclectric Blues & Fancy Dress Goods, with Trimmings and Buttons to match.

Pearl Buttons, Hair Nets, Corsets, and Gloves, Josephines best Kid Gloves light shades only 50 cents pair, sold everywhere at $1.25.

500 pairs Womans Cotton Hose dark colors 12½ cents a pair.

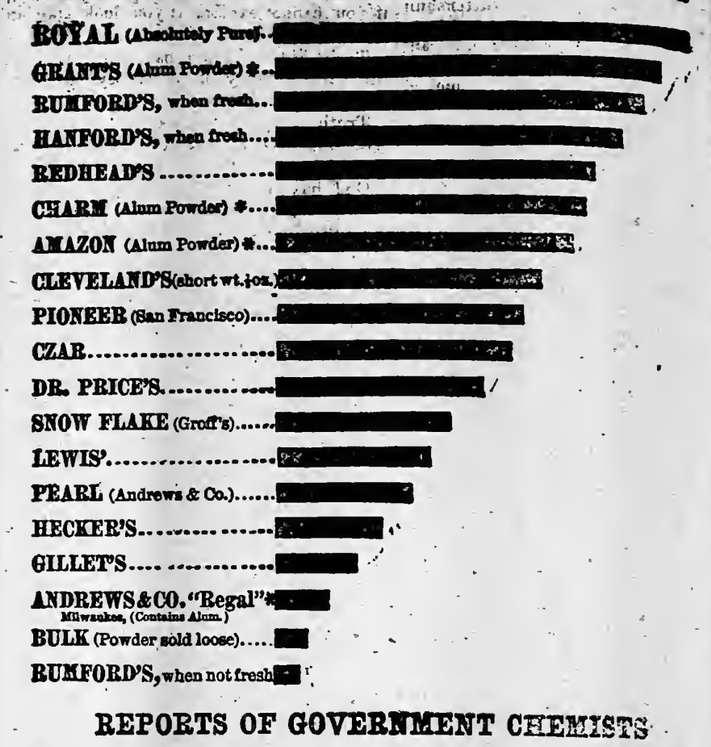
607½ yds. Light Ground Prints fast colors 10½ cents.

Good Washing Dress Muslins 6 cents, one case white and cream Oriental Laces at 5 8 10, 12½ and 15 cents being balance of a wholesale stock and without exageration the chepest laces ever offered in Markdale.

7 Cases New Boots and Shoes, Mens Womens and Childrens at close prices.

47 Boxes New Nobby Ties, Shirts, Braces, and Underware.

A second shipment of that 30c. Cashmere 45 inches wide.



1200 doz. Buttons 5 cents per dozen, stock well assorted. Prices right. Corteous treatmpnt to all.

W. J. McFARLAND,

Direct Importer.

MARKDALE.

COMPARATIVE WORTH of BAKING POWDERS.

REPORTS OF GOVERNMENT CHEMISTS

As to Purity and Wholesomeness of the Royal Baking Powder.

"I have tested a package of Royal Baking Powder, which I purchased in the open market, and find it composed of pure and wholesome ingredients. It is a cream of tartar powder of a high degree of merit, and does not contain either alum or phosphates, or other injurious substances. E. G. LOVE, Ph.D."

"It is a scientific fact that the Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure. "H. A. MOTT, Ph.D."

"I have examined a package of Royal Baking Powder, purchased by myself in the market. I find it entirely free from alum, terra alba, or any other injurious substance. HENRY MORTON, Ph.D., President of Stevens Institute of Technology."

"I have analyzed a package of Royal Baking Powder. The materials of which it is composed are pure and wholesome. S. DANA HAYES, State Assayer, Mass."

The Royal Baking Powder received the highest award over all competitors at the Vienna World's Exposition, 1873; at the Centennial, Philadelphia, 1876; at the American Institute, New York, and at State Fairs throughout the country.

No other article of human food has ever received such high, emphatic, and universal endorsement from eminent chemists, physicians, scientists, and Boards of Health all over the world.

NOTE—The above DIAGRAM illustrates the comparative worth of various Baking Powders, as shown by Chemical Analysis and experiments made by Prof. Schedler. A pound can of each powder was taken, the total leavening power or volume in each can calculated, the result being as indicated. This practical test for worth by Prof. Schedler only proves what every observant consumer of the Royal Baking Powder knows by practical experience, that, while it costs a few cents per pound more than ordinary kinds, it is far more economical, and, besides, affords the advantage of better work. A single trial of the Royal Baking Powder will convince any fair minded person of these facts.

* While the diagram shows some of the alum powders to be of a higher degree of strength than other powders ranked below them, it is not to be taken as indicating that they have any value. All alum powders, no matter how high their strength, are to be avoided as dangerous.

MARKDALE CARRIAGE WORKS.

R. McNALLY:—Would hereby announce to the people of Markdale and the public generally that I have moved into my new carriage shop opposite the Markdale House, where I will manufacture every article in the wagon and carriage line, and having long experience in the business, and by using first class material, I can guarantee satisfaction to every one who will favor me with their order.

Repairing, Painting and Trimming promptly attended to.

A call respectfully solicited,

R. McNALLY, Proprietor

MARKDALE SASH and DOOR FACTORY.

Having erected and fitted up in every detail a Sash, Door and Plain Factory, containing all the latest and most approved machinery, everything being new, I am now prepared to turn out

Sash, Doors, Blinds, Mouldings, Hollow Battons,

FRAMES, LATH, FENCE PICKETS, &c.,

And everything needed in the building trade, in a manner second to none in Canada, and having engaged superior mechanics in every department, I would now respectfully solicit public patronage.

Every Effort Made to fill Orders Promptly

PINE LUMBER Dressed and Undressed

Direct from North Shore, all sizes, on hand. Plain and Fancy Turning done.

Careful Attention to Orders from a Distance.

303 THOS. McNEA.

IMPORTANT!

TO all users of Machine Oils, don't forget to call on E. S. MABEE, Sign of the Cross-Cut Saw, Markdale, and ask for the CASTOR E. OIL, it is unequalled by any.

"AURORA"

WATER WHITE OIL,

is equal to American for brillance of light.

Empire Oil Co.,

Refiners & Manufacturer's,

349-75 London and Toront

A Public Disgrace.

Very few persons in the county but are aware of the dangerous spot in the Toronto & Sydenham Road, known as "Allen's Sink Hole." It has long been a terror to travellers. so much so that local travel is greatly impeded. Many miles around the inhabitants whose business compel them to travel that road are obliged to make a detour of several miles, and those, more venturesome, who manage to get over it, do so at the imminent risk of their lives or damage of their property.

The attention of County and Township Officials have been frequently called to it, but it appears that nothing short of loss of life will wake them up. Why should this "man trap" exist in a civilized country, which can boast of its high taxation for public purposes and Private Guzzles. Only last week His Honor, Judge Low and his distinguished Lady were on their return to Owen Sound from attendance at the Divisional Courts, rather than "Run the risk" were compelled to make a detour of three miles, this our eminent Judicial was compelled to Deviate from a Straight Course.

Now County and Township Officials will see to it * * * at once. The responsibilities cannot be taken and put off at pleasure. They are legally bound to keep the roads in proper repair, and will be held personally legal if any serious accident should occur.

Hoping that our sleepy officials will wake up to a sense of their responsibilities before it is too late,

I remain

Yours truly,

W. J. McFARLAND.

Printing Office Secrecy.

For the benefit of our readers who may imagine that all that is necessary is to ask the printer to have it reveal any secret desired, we make the following remarks, and ask our readers one and all will read them carefully. A properly conducted printing office is as much secret as a Masonic lodge. The printers are under oath of secrecy, but always consider themselves as truly in honor bound to keep office secrets as through sworn. Any employee in a printing-office who willingly disregards this rule in relation to printing secrets would not only be scorned by his brethern of the craft but, would lose the position at once. We make this statement because it sometimes happens that a communication appears in a newspaper under an assumed signature which excites comment, and various persons try to find out who is the author. Let all be spared the trouble of questioning employees of a printing office. They know nothings' on such points as these. On such matters they have eyes and ears but no mouth; and if they fail to observe this rule, let them be put down as dishonorable members of the craft. It is the same in job printing. If anything is to be printed and kept secret, let proper notice be given of the desire of secrecy, and you might as well question the Sphinx as one of the printers.

Don't use any more nauseous purgatives such as Pills Salts &c., when you can get in Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters a medicine that moves the Bowels gently cleansing all impurities from the system and rendering the Blood pure and healthy. Sold by all Druggists. tf

---

SIGHT v. BLINDNESS.

DR. STANLEY'S

CELEBRATED

English Spectacles

AT 10 BAY STREET, TORONTO CANADA.

—AND—

41 DUKE STREET, LONDON E. C. ENGLAND.

—:—

R. L. Stephen's,

CHEMIST & DRUGGIST, Markdale

Is the Agency for the sale of the above in MARKDALE. No Spectacles in the Market equal to them for the EYE PRESERVING QUALITIES they possess, or the GREAT EASE and COMFORT they confer on the wearer.

Your sight will in actuality so strengthen the eyes that it does not become necessary to change them for many years. They are therefore the CHEAPEST.

THEY ARE THE BEST IN THE WORLD

THEY NEVER TIRE THE EYE

AND LAST MANY EYARS WITHOUT CHANGE.

Sight tests by our New Test Card, as used by the leading Oculists throughout the world. 357-409

SOUTHERN ASTHMA CURE

DOUBLE TREATMENT IN EACH PACKAGE

INSTANT RELIEF FOR ASTHMA AND BRONCHITIS

SENT ON RECEIPT OF PRICE 25c.; REGULAR SIZE, $1.00

PREPARED BY S. SOUTHERN & CO., BROCKVILLE, ONT.

EXTENSIVE CREDIT

Auction Sale

Of Household Furniture, &c.

The undersigned has received instructions from Mr. Alexander Lyons to sell by Public Auction on Thursday,

JULY 14TH, 1887, at the Railroad Boarding House, Markdale, at 11 o'clock sharp. The following articles viz:—1 Cow, 2 Sow Pigs, 18 Hens, 11 Bedsteds and Bedding, 2 Bureaus large, 3 Dressing Bureaus, 5 Bed-room Cabinets, 1 Drawing Table, 2 Kitchen Tables, 1 Kitchen Cupboard, 3 Dining-room Tables, 1 Sideboard, 12 Dining-room Chairs, 6 Kitchen Chairs, 2 Rocking Chairs, 8 Sitting-room Chairs, 1 Set of Parlor Furniture, 2 Lounges, 1 Sewing Machine, 1 Cooking Stove and Furniture, 3 Heating Stoves and Pipes, 4 New Drums and Pipes, 2 Dozen Pictures, 8 Mirrors, 1 Eight-day Clock, a number of spring and other mattress, 12 Lamps, a number of spittons, 3 Chandeliers, 1 Sugar Kettle, a quantity of Dining-room Dishes, Glassware, Knives, Forks, Spoons, a number of window curtains, and a quantity of other household goods.

TERMS.—All sums $5 and under cash; over that amount 5 months credit will be given on approved joint notes.

ALEX. LYONS, GEO. NOBLE,
Proprietor. Auctioneer.

WEAVING.

Having returned to Markdale, in order to be more convenient for my customers, I beg to announce that I am now prepared to do all kinds of Custom Weaving. Residence old stand, opposite Presbyterian Church.

318 ARCH. BOYD.

WE WANT!

100 GOOD MEN at once, to sell for the Fonthill Nurseries (largest in Canada over 465 acres) steady employment and no lost time, liberal commission or salary, best advantages; splended outfit furnished free any pushing man can succeed. Apply for terms to,

STONE & WELLINGTON,
Toronto, Ont

PROF. LOW'S SULPHUR SOAP is a delightful toilet luxury as well as a good curative for skin disease,

---

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT 131 con 3 west of T. & S, Rd. Artemesia. 50 acres, about 20 acres clear of stumps and stones, balance good hardwood bush. Five miles from Markdale and four from Flesherton. For further particulars apply to A. S. Thompson, Flesherton P. O. or J. J. Thompson, Orilla.

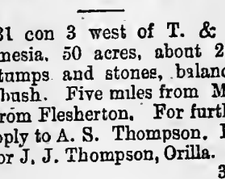
342-ft

NOTICE.

WM. SARGENT, Berkeley, has a Durham Bull for service at his farm seven-eighth bred. Terms on application. 354-57

---

6 PER CENT.



Money loaned on Farm or Town Property at lowest rates of interest. Apply to

R. J. SPROULE,
Conveyancer & Postmaster. Flesherton.

Collingwood and Georgian Bay Line.

Royal Mail,

In connection with the Northern and North-Western R'ys, and the Grand Trunk R'y.

Str. PACIFIC, Captain P. M. Campbell.
Str. ATLANTIC. Captain R. D. Foote.
Str. NORTHERN BELLE, Capt. W. J. Bassett.

The fine new Steamers "PACIFIC" & "ATLANTIC" will run as follows during the season (weather permitting.)

Leaving Collingwood at 1 p. m.; Meaford at 3 p. m.; Owen Sound at 8 p. m.; and Wiarton at 11:45 p. m.; every

Wednesday and Saturday.

For Killarney, Manitowaning, Little Current, Kagawong, Gore Bay, Spanish River, Serpent River, Algoma Mills, Blind River, Thessalon, Bruce Mines, Hilton, St. Joseph's Island, Garden River, and Sault St. Marie.

The Saturday Steamer only will call at Cockburn Island.

MACKINAW.—During the summer season the above steamers will continue the trip on to the Island of Mackinaw making six full days of a round trip at a cost of $12.00 only including meals and berth.

For information as to freight and fares. Apply to any Agent of the above Railways, the Pursers on board the steamers, or to the Great Northern Transit Co., Collingwood.

THOS. LONG, Secretary. CHAS. CAMERON, Manager.

NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that any person or persons found trespassing or fishing on the farms of the undersigned will be prosecuted according to law without further notice.

Signed:—

John B. Thibaudeau, Edward Brady, William Brady, John Shears, Wm. McNally, James Elliott, Adam Hislop, John Webber, Thos. Brady, James Brady, Wm. McCutcheon, Geo. Richardson, George McNally, James Stinson, Robt Graham, John Perkins.

BE SURE & GET YOUR PUMPS,

—FROM—

J. T. QUINN,

MARKDALE,

He makes as good a pump as there is in the market, and at the lowest possible prices, besides it is so convenient for getting repairs besides when buying from a distance.

Have some style about you and support home enterprise by buying from Quinn.

HEAD QUARTERS

—FOR—

Books, tationery, Fancy Goods, Toys, Wall Paper, &c.

Toronto St. next Door to the Mansion House, Markdale.

A. Dinsmore returns his sincere thanks for the very liberal support accorded him since commencing as above, and hopes by strict attention to business and moderate prices to merit a continuance of public appreciation and patronage. Those requiring

WALL PAPERS

would consult their own interest by examining his stock, consisting of over Three Thousand pieces at from 5 to 75c. per Roll. Sunday Schools requiring Liberary Books will find Hundreds to select from and at such FAVORABLE TERMS as are sure to satisfy.

☞ Note the fact.—That until I commenced business there was no such thing as a special discount allowed to Sunday Schools, or if you wanted Books could not get them unless by sending to Toronto or elsewhere, now your wants can be supplied at your Door and at lower prices than Toronto. I therefore with confidence appeal for public support. A full line of School Books, Stationery, &c., always on hand, also agent for the DOMESTIC PAPER PATTERNS. Agent also for The Harden Star Hand Grenade for Extinguishing Fires. ☞ NOTE THE ADDRESS,

A. Dinsmore.

New Tailor.

Will Stoddart, late of England and Jersy City, U. S. begs to inform the citizens of MARKDALE and surrounding community, that he has opened a TAILORING SHOP over Mr. W. J. McFarland's Store, where he is prepared to do all work entrusted to him in the Latest and Nobbiest Styles; as I will inspect all work before leaving the Shop, customers may rely on having work turned out first-class in every particular; trusting that I may receive a fair share of the public patronage

I remain,
Faithfully your's,
WILL STODDART.

Markdale, March 14th, 1887.

New General Provision Store

THE undersigned would hereby respectfully intimate to the inhabitants of Markdale and surrounding country that I've opened up a general Provision store where I intend to keep on hand a general supply of all kinds of provisions such as:—

FLOUR, OATMEAL, CORNMEAL INDIAN CORN, GRASS SEED, OATS, BRAN, SHORTS, CHOPP, SCREENINGS. also a quantity of SEED GRAIN, HAMS, BACON, LARD, &c., in fact everything people want in this line.

Shop one door west of Joe Lamb's Blacksmith shop.

Soliciting a share of public patronage I am respectfully yours,

Jas. Miller
MARKDALE.

THE PLACE

—TO GET—

PURE PARIS GREEN

—AT—

Stephen's Drug Store.

—THE—

PLACE

TO GET THE BEST GRADE

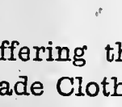
—OF—

Hellobore! Hellobore!

—AT—

Stephen's Drug Store.

—THE—



Place to get Stanley's Spectacles which are the best at

Stephen's Drug Store.

Pure Cream of Tarter, Tested Baking Soda, and Pure Spices of all kinds.

R. L. Stephen.

R. S. Rae, Tailor.

REMOVED.

In returning thanks to my numerous customers for liberal patronage during the past 14 years in which I have done business in Markdale, and soliciting a continuance of the same, I would also intimate that I have removed to my premises on Mill Street, next door to Stephen's Drug Store, and opposite to the Post Office, where I shall be happy to meet all my customers.

Respectfully Yours,

R. S. RAE,
Markdale

TORONTO HOUSE.

I am offering this week Ready-Made Clothing, and

BOOTS & HOE

—AT—

astonishingly low prices. Persons requiring a summer outfit would do well to see my stock.

Wm Brown.

For Sale or to Rent.

ONE of the best farms in Artemesia township, being lots 115 and 116 third range west of T. & S. Road, three miles from Markdale, comprising 100 acres, over 80 of which is cleared and in good state of cultivation, well fenced, young and old orchard, watered with never failing spring and good well. brick house, good carriage house and stable and two log barns. Possession will be given after harvest. For further particulars apply on the premises to,

JOHN WHITBY,
Markdale, P. O.

MIRACULOUS.—"My Miraculous Cure was that I had suffered from kidney disease for about two years, was off work all that time. A friend told me of B. B. B., I tried it, and am happy to say that I was cured by two bottles." Wm. Tier, St. Marys, Ont.

OWEN SOUND

MARBLE WORK

H. B. HARRISON

MANUFACTURER OF

MARBLE AND GRANITE

MONUMENTS & HEADSTONES

Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.

JUST RECEIVED

3 Carloads Finest Variegate Marble

☞ Largest stock in the Dominion select from. Personally selected at the quarries in Vermont. Will be sold at prices which defy competition.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

N. B.—Beware of Monuments and Head stones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered to gether, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide the imperfections, and called White Bronze.

H. B. HARRISON

ROBT. ASKIN,

UNDERTAKER,

MARKDALE.

FUNERAL FURNISHINGS

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—

FURNITURE

In Stock at bottom prices.

PICTURE FRAMING

Done on short notice.

ROBT. ASKIN.

WM. BREADNER.

Carpender and Builder

GEORGE ST., MARKDALE.

ALL kinds of building and house carpenter work done in the village or country. Call early before the rush comes. 339-52

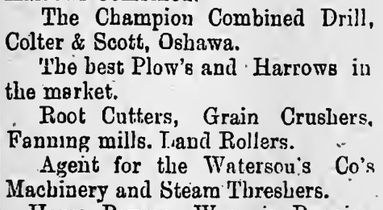
CARD OF THANKS.

In thanking my customers for their liberal patronage in the past, I have much pleasure in being still able to supply them with the following celebrated machines, viz.

The Watson all-steel two-horse twine Binder.
The Watson Deering Binder.
The Watson Improved Lion Reaper.
The New Humming Mower.
The Humming-bird Mower.
The Watson Daisy Rake.
The Mann Champion Rake.
The Tolten Pea Harvester.
The Mann Broad-cast Seeder and Harrows Combined.
The Champion Combined Drill, Colter & Scott, Oshawa.
The best Plow's and Harrows in the market.
Root Cutters, Grain Crushers, Fanning mills. Land Rollers.
Agent for the Watersou's Co's Machinery and Steam Threshers.

Horse Powers, Wagon's Buggies, Democrats, and every implement a farmer requires. Parties reqiring anything in above lines will find it to their advantage to call at my new implement house opposite R. McNally's Carriage works, where Mr. R. Robertson will be pleased to wait on customers in my absence.

J. H. CARSON, Agent
148-61 Markdale.



CANADIAN PACIFIC R. R.

TIME TABLE.

—Markdale Station—

GOING SOUTH.	6.47 a. m.	3.52 p. m
GOING NORTH.	12.02 p. m.	9.10 p. m

THE KEY TO HEALTH.

Unlocks all the clogged avenues of the Bowels, Kidneys and Liver, carrying off gradually without weakening the system, all the impurities and foul humors of the secretions; at the same time Correcting Acidity of the Stomach, curing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Headaches, Dizziness, Heartburn, Constipation, Dryness of the Skin, Dropsy, Dimness of Vision, Jaundice, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Scrofula, Fluttering of the Heart, Nervousness and General Debility; all these and many other similar Complaints yield to the happy influence of BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

Sample Bottles 10c; Regular size $1.

For sale by all dealers.

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, Toronto.

DON'T WRITE "RUSH" ON A TELEGRAM.

Operators Resent it, and it is a Great Handicap on a Message.

Never write "Rush" across the face of a telegram. If you do you will retard rather than acelerate its despatch. Employees of telegraph offices pay no more attention to a message with such an inscription on it than Post Office men do to letters marked on the envelope "In haste," "Very important; forward as soon as possible." "Deliver immediately,"and with other phrases of like import.

"I always smile," said a retired operator, "when I think of the way we boys used to treat 'rush' messages in the Western Union office. Some blooming jay would come in and want a despatch shoved through in a hurry. He would write 'Rush' across its face, thinking that would help it along. Now the idea of such a thing. Just as if everything wasn't rushed in a telegraph office—that is, if left to itself. The boys look upon anything like that almost as a personal affront. What is the consequence? The receiving clerk takes the message, frowns a little when the 'rush' comes to view, receives the money, says 'all right,' and the sender walks out complacently. Then the clerk picks up the despatch again, looks it over slowly, toys with it and smiles. Just here two or three other persons come in and he lays aside the 'rush' to wait on them. Finally he takes up his little pile of messages, puts the 'rush' at the bottom, and hands the batch over to the record clerk. When the record clerk comes to the 'rush' message he also smiles. As it is the last on his desk he plays with it for awhile, practises penmanship on it (does the Spencerian act, you know), takes his time in recording it—in fact, does everything but rush it. From the desk of the record clerk the messages are given to the operators by the file boy. He, too has a great antipathy for 'rush messages. If all the operators are not at leisure he supplies those who are from the top of the pile and sticks the rest on a hook. If there is a 'rush' in the lot it always goes on the hook. The upshot of the whole matter is that this precious piece of paper, with its immensely important communication which the sender wanted 'rushed,' is about the last despatch sent out".

The Troubles That Beset the Traveling Englishman Abroad.

A person speaking only the English language may meet with amusing incidents while traveling in Europe. For example, an English clergyman stopping at a Swiss hotel, desiring ink, got out his "phrase book," looked it carefully through to find the French word for ink and failing in his search concluded to ring his bell and "sail in on his English." The chambermaid came to the door and he said: "Will you bring me some ink?" She stood statutelike, and he repeated, "Ink!—Ink!—Ink!" She closed the door but very soon returned and asked him partly in French and partly in English, whether he would have it warmed. Again, on one occasion, I gave a railroad conductor in Germany a small silver coin, in order to have the compartment we were in all to ourselves.

After riding for some distance we came to a station where he was replaced by another conductor. Before leaving, he came, opened our door, and said something to us in German. Supposing he desired to see our tickets, I extended my hand with them, at which he shook his head. We then thought we must change cars again, having ridden at least twenty miles without doing so, and all rose up; at which movement he a second time shook his head. We next decided that it certainly must be time to have our baggage vised, since at least four hours had elapsed since the last examination, and we accordingly pulled down our valises, and started for the door; whereupon the conductor not only shook his head, but pushed us back and shut the door.

We afterwards learned that he, through innate politeness and in return, no doubt, for the small silver coin I had given him, was simply endeavoring to bid us "good-bye." While going up the Rhine we saw four English gentlemen on the deck sitting together; they called a waiter and ordered "lemonade for four." The waiter went away, was gone nearly half an hour, and at last appeared with ham and eggs for four. Nor was he astray as to the sound of the order, different in nature as were the viands he brought, as anybody with a bad cold will perceive, if he will repeat the words "ham and eggs" and "lemonade" alternately.

Killed by her Little Son.

John A. Beall, aged 12 years, was arrested the other day for the murder of his mother in Eaton, Ohio. The woman was shot twice in the head with a pistol, and her skull crushed in with an axe afterward. The Coroner's verdict contained this; "I further find that while it seems almost impossible to conceive that one so young, and especially a son, should commit such an atrocious crime, yet the evidence presented to me and the circumstances surrounding the case are so strong that I feel warranted in fixing the crime on John A. Beall."

Young Beall was arrested at the house of an aunt, where he was trying to sleep in an up stairs room. He said that he had not slept a wink for two nights. Beall was first taken to a photographer's, where his picture was taken, and then he was put in jail. The boy was cool and collected until interrogated about his mother. When asked if he missed his mother he replied; "Yes, I miss her because she was always asking me to do something."

The Sheriff said: "Do you ever see your mother now?"

"Yes," answered the boy crying, "I see her every time I shut my eyes. I see her as she looked when she tried to get up off the floor when the blood was running all over her."

The Blind Inventor.

Herr Fortelka, a lieutenant in the Austrian army, during the first campaign in Bosnia received a bullet in his right eye, and speedily became totally blind. Since his blindness he has invented, in addition to a magazine rifle, a new micrometer, an apparatus for automatic mapping, a new sort of gunpowder, two machines for the anti-oxidation of metals at a small cost and a number of smaller devices. "When either great or minute measurements are in question," says Herr Fortelka, "those who see with their eyes are often wrong, while I, who see with my fingers, am right." The models of his inventions have been entirely made by himself with the help of pieces of wood, string and wire.

A Musical Toad.

It is, perhaps, open to doubt if the toad hears the precious jewel imbedded [illegible] the poet speaks, but a French cure, a correspondent of M. Franciaque Sorcey's, has met with a toad which had a fortune in its throat, had it only fallen in with a impresario. The cure happened to call the other day on one of his poorer parishioners, who, in compliment to his visitor, added a fresh provision of fuel to the fire, which at once blazed up, emitting a welcome glow. Attracted by the warmth, as it would seem, an enormous toad emerged from under an old chest of drawers standing in a corner, hopped slowly up to the fire, and stationed himself in front of it like a pet animal, which, in fact, he was.

The peasant after a few prefatory words, proceeded to drone out an old Gascon ballad and sang a verse of it through. To the Abbe's intense astonishment the toad continued, or rather added a sort of coda to the melody the moment his master stopped, singing first a la, then a fa, returning next to the first note, and concluding on mi. The voice of the little singer was plaintive and musical, reminding the Abbe of the notes of the harmonica. The peasant continued the ballad to the end; the other amateur chiming in regularly with the same four notes at the end of each stave, keeping its eyes fixed on its master throughout the performance, and evincing in its expression and attitude a manifest desire to do its part in the concert to his satisfaction. The peasant, who was ill at the time, died soon after; and the cure, who had meant to adopt the other inmate of the hut, could find no trace of him when he went to fetch him.

Arab and Persian Horses.

The general run of Arabs are no doubt first rate horses, as far as they go, for military purposes, but they are too small to mount satisfactorily any but the native cavalry. There are of course exceptional animals which have size and power enough for anything, but they are so few that they may be left out of the general estimate which we take for the race. For any soldier whose weight is such that he can be mounted on an Arab he will be found the hardiest, soundest and most docile of war horses. He will do an enormous amount of work on very little and very indifferent food and will always bear himself well and handsomely. In one point only is he, more than other horses, susceptible of disease, and that is his eye, which is liable to cataract. His great characteristic is his undaunted pluck, which is never more clearly shown than when by any chance he is ill, when all veterinary surgeons will allow that he is a most desirable patient, resisting and throwing off the effects of illness or treatment in a way that no horse of another race can equal. Persian horses have always been found among the most generally useful remounts in India, and they take their place both in the ranks of cavalry and in gun teams. They have more power and size than Arabs, with many of the same good qualities, and—a matter of great importance to the state—they are generally cheaper in price.

A French Jubilee.

Paris is making preparations for a special jubilee of her own. A few weeks hence it will be fifty years since the first train steamed out of Paris and reached the suburb of St. Germain. The guard of that train is still alive and has strange accounts to give of the journey and of the preparations for it. It seems to have been scarcely such a triumph for France after all. The engine, of course, was English, and the driver and stoker were English too. The engine ran on four wheels and was a singular contrast to present locomotives, but the first-class carriages were almost of the same pattern as that still in use on the line.

The second-class were open, furnished with curtains to keep off the sun, and beyond the curtains nets were stretched to prevent too curious travellers from losing their balance and their lives. Freach taste asserted itself in the departments of costume and music. The guards had a uniform of blue and gold buttons, and were supplied with hunting horns. Great importance was attached to the horns, which were to represent the cornets used by the postilions of the mail coaches. For a week before the first journey the guards carefully rehearsed a fanfare, which was to be played with great spirit on the departure and just before the arrival of the train. They have changed many things on French lines in fifty years, and among others have substituted railway whistles for hunting horns.

Holy Visitors in a Russian Village.

In the village of Obodny, in the Government of Padolia in Russia, a peasant, reputed to be very wealthy and to have money hoarded in his house, received a visit lately from three venerable looking men, dressed in garments of a somewhat clerical fashion, who informed him that they were Christ and the Apostles Peter and Paul. The sham Christ said to him: "I have given you great wealth, but you have omitted to exercise charity, so I have come to reckon with you. Give me your money." The terrified peasant fell on his knees, begged for mercy, and gave over 500 silver roubles, declaring it was all the money he had in the house. They were not satisfied, and he sent off his servant to collect money from neighbors who were indebted to him. The report of the pesence in the village of such holy visitors brought a crowd to the spot. But the impostors mistook their motives, and believed they had come to apprehend them. One of them drew a knife from under his clothes and attacked a peasant, whereupon the crowd seemed to have become at once enlightened as to the true character of the trio, and taking courage, overpowered them.

Mysterious Photographs.

A wonderful thing happened in Louisa county recently. A Northern lady Mrs. Eaton, died and a white handkerchief was folded in four layers and put over her face. When they took the handkerchief off there were four distinct pictures of the lady on it, the size of a quarter of a dollar. Spirits of camphor had been put on the lady's face just before her death. Dr. E. S. Pendleton, who attended the lady, has the handkerchief, and will show it to any one, or reply to any questions regarding this matter.

Over two hundred million cans of vegetables are used by families in America and the cans thrown away. No wonder the goats of the country are so fat.

WYLD, GRASETT & DARLING.

Scent Warehouse.

The new building erected on the corner of Bay and Wellington streets by Messrs. Wyld, Grasett & Darling, wholesale dry-goods importers, is one of the most complete establishments of the kind in the Dominion of Canada. No expense has been spared to make the warehouse everything that it should be, and the most casual inspection is sufficient to show that completeness in every detail has been achieved. The firm was re-organized last February, Mr. Wyld, who for many years has been identified with business interests in Toronto, taking into partnership Mr. A. W. Grasett, a thorough expert in staples, and Mr. Andrew Darling, who takes charge of the office department. The warehouse of Messrs. Wyld, Grasett & Darling is five storeys in height, the basement being built of Credit Valley brown stone, the first story of Ohio greystone and the walls above of red brick. The sills, bands and string courses are also of Ohio stone, and at the corners are heavy round stone pinnacles with conical tops.

THE MAIN ENTRANCE

consists of two heavy dwarf arches, one on each street, while inside the portico rises an interior arch supported upon red granite columns with carved capitals. The roof, above which five walls extend, is of Trinidad asphalt, which is a very durable material. The size of the various flats are 118 feet by 60 feet, and they are provided with about sixteen windows each. The side wall of the building facing the north on Bay street gives exceptional opportunities for ample lighting, and in every department goods can be seen to perfect advantage just where they lie. The interior fittings of the building are of oak, and everything throughout the structure is of a massive character. The establishment will be heated by steam, the boiler being situated under the sidewalk, and each flat will be illuminated with incandescent light. There are also under the side walk lavatories, etc., and storage rooms. At the east end of the building two elevators run from the basement to the top storey, so that goods can either be despatched or received with the least possible delay. A granolithic pavement from the entry room to the shipping hoist is a feature of the basement. The

COUNTING ROOM AND OFFICES,

as well as the private rooms of the members of the firm, are handsomely fitted up in accordance with modern requirements. The ceilings throughout the building are of wood, with supporting columns of iron. A passenger elevator finished in oak is conveniently placed near the main entrance to the building. Speaking-tubes connect every department in the establishment, and a telephone room is situated near the front offices. The various floors of the establishment are utilised as follows:—The basement contains an entry room and packing and shipping department, and will also be used for storing surplus stock; the ground floor contains offices, and is specially devoted to leading staples of Canadian and imported manufacture; the second flat is devoted to woollens and tweeds from all the leading mills of Canada, as well as fine imported goods of Scotch manufacture, and an endless variety of worsted and West of England tweeds. This department contains everything necessary for a fine tailoring trade. The third storey contains dress-silk, smallwares and haberdashery generally, and the fourth a large stock of hosiery and knitted goods. At present the firm, not being yet thoroughly established in their new premises, part of the top flat is used as an entry-room and is crowded with goods ready to go out. Mr. Wyld devotes his personal attention to

THE WOOLLEN DEPARTMENT,

in which he is thoroughly at home, having been for many years prominently associated with probably the largest woollen business in Ontario. Messrs Wyld, Grasett & Darling keep a resident agent in Great Britain to look after their woollen trade, and their buyers for each department are experts in their own lines who have had many years' experience and are trained men, thoroughly familiar with the wants of the trade. Special attention is paid by the firm to the staple department, and their stock of prints, cretonnes, colored cotton goods, flannels of all kinds, blankets and linen goods is immense and varied. Already the house is in receipt of a great number of orders, and to judge by the rapidity with which they come pouring in, anticipates a very large season's trade.—[Toronto Globe.

Suppose.

Suppose that that big meteoric stone which plumped hissing hot out of space into a neck of woods in Vanderburg County, Ind., early last Sunday morning—smashing a tree, burying itself deep in the earth, and leaving a few chips and a sulphurous smell behind it—had fallen instead on the roof of the respected reader! Theoretically, one of these uninvited visitors from outside is as likely to drop in on a Toronto householder as on a hoosier farmer, and here is a peril of terrestrial existence in the presence of which we are much more helpless than in that of the lightning or the cyclone—as unforeseeable and unescapable (when it comes) as the earthquake itself. Fortunately for us however, it is at present a theoretical peril merely—not taken into account by the insurance companies. At present the big meteorites always fall in necks of woods in Indiana or Texas, hurt nobody, and benefit the special correspondents of the New York newspapers. But who shall say what surprising experiences may not wait a planet that is whirling through space in nolens volens, follow-my-leader dance toward an unknown destination?

Mr. Walter Besant's acquaintance with Mr. James Rice began with the chance contribution of an article by the former to Once a Week, the periodical of which Mr. Rice was owner and editor.

Two young English ladies living at Dresden recently went to Berlin on a visit and, wishing to make the most of their time, wrote to the Chancellor, expressing their fervent wish to see him; whereupon they received an invitation to his palace, where they were most kindly received. A servant took them through the palace and showed them everything of interest, with which they were, of course, greatly delighted, their joy culminating when Prince Bismarck himself suddenly appeared and addressed them most kindly in fluent English, walking with them for some time in the garden before bidding them farewell.

A Russian Tool.

Sirdar Sikander Khan, is the man whom as Governor of Penjdeh, Russia has put forward to draw Afghan chestnuts out of the fire. He is a son of the once notorious Sultan Jan, who ruled Herat from 1859 till the city was captured by the Dost in 1863. Sikander Khan was at one time a pensioner of the Indian Office and resided in London. He left Afghanistan twelve years ago and first took service with the Ameer of Bokara. Then with a band of Afghan horsemen he went over to the Russians, who speak highly of his military talents. He presently found his way to St. Petersburg, and was attached as colonel to a Russian cavalry regiment. A quarrel with a brother officer led to his retirment, and he was next heard of in England, where the Government gave him a small pension. At the outbreak of the Russo-Turkish war he went off to Constantinople to offer his service to the Sultan; but as they were not required he proceeded to Persia. He re-entered the Czar's service a year ago, and as Governor of Penjdeh may now have an opportunity of once more joining in the perilous game of Afghan politics. The Russians know how to use swash-bucklers and soldiers of this type.

$500 Reward.

If you suffer from dull, heavy headache, obstruction of the nasal passages, discharges falling from the head into the throat, sometimes profuse, watery, and acrid, at others, thick, tenacious, mucous, purulent, bloody and putrid; if the eyes are weak, watery, and inflamed; and there is ringing in the ears, deafness, hacking or coughing to clear the throat, expectoration of offensive matter, together with scabs from ulcers; the voice being changed and having a nasal twang; the breath offensive; smell and taste impaired; experience a sensation of dizziness, with mental depression, a hacking cough, and general debility, then you are suffering from chronic nasal catarrh. Only a few of the above named symptoms are likely to be present in any one case at one time, or in one stage of the disease. Thousands of cases annually, without manifesting half of the above symptoms, result in consumption, and end in the grave. No disease is so common, more deceptive and dangerous, less understood or more unsuccessfully treated by physicians. The manufacturers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy offer, in good faith, $500 reward for a case of catarrh which they cannot cure. The Remedy is sold by druggists at only 50 cents.

Pink frocks are very fashionable.

"Golden at morning, silver at noon, and lead at night," is the old saying about eating oranges. But there is something that is rightly named Golden, and can be taken with benefit at any hour of the day. This is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, literally worth its weight in gold to any one suffering with scrofulous affections, impurities of the blood, or diseases of the liver and lungs. It is unfailing. By druggists.

The same suit that does duty as a yachting costume can be correctly worn on the beach, the tennis and the croquet ground.

Beautiful woman, from whence came thy bloom,
Thy beaming eye thy features fair?
What kindly hand on thee was laid—
Endowing thee with beauty rare?
"'Twas not ever thus," the dame replied,
"Once pale this face, these features bold,
The 'Favorite Prescription' of Dr. Pierce Wrought the wondrous change which you behold."

Even in China, India, and Tussah silk plain grounds are more effective and vastly more ladylike than figured fabrics.

YOUNG MEN suffering from the effects of early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted also MIDDLE-AGED and OLD MEN who are broken down from the effects of abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and read M. V. Lubon's Treatise on Diseases of Men. The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address M. V. LUBON, 47 Welling. ton St. E. Toronto, Ont.

A pocketbook which he carried in his inside pocket over his heart successfully defended a Sandwich, man from a bullet fired by a fleeing burglar.

THE ASSESSMENT SYSTEM

Large Insurance Claim Paid—Endorsement of the Mutual Reserve.

Office of W. D. MATTHEWS & Co., Grain and Produce Merchants, Toronto, 11th May, 1887.

J. D. Wells, Esq., General Manager Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association.:

DEAR SIR—We beg to acknowledge receipt of cheque for Five Thousand Dollars in full of claim under a policy of insurance issued to us by the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso iation for that amount, as creditors of the late Edwin C. Fisher.

We have much pleasure in bearing testimony to the prompt and satisfactory manner in which this claim has been adjusted, and at the same time to express our confidence in your association. Having an intimate acquaintance with your President and chief officers, we know them to be gentlemen of the highest integrity, and in whose hands we believe the interests of the members of the Mutual Reserve are perfectly safe.

Wishing your association continued success.

Yours truly, W. D. MATTHEWS & Co.

A Sunday-school teacher asked a little girl of her class if she had been baptized. "Yes", said the little girl, "two times." "Two times? why, how could that be?" "It didn't take the first time," said the little girl.

LADIES

Who are Weak, Nervous and Exhausted; who feel themselves losing strength; who are pale, delicate and sickly in appearance, suffering from the many complaints peculiar to women—send for and read M. V. LUBON'S Treatise in BOOK FORM on the Diseases of Women. Mailed sealed and secure from observation on receipt of 6c in stamps, UNSEALED FREE. Address, M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. East Toronto, Ont.

His mother wishes to impress him with life's sober realities. "Johny, yesterday is gone, never to return." "Oh, that don't matter, mamma; there are scads of to-morrows just like it."

Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness and Hay Fever.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are cured in from one to three simple applications made at home. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent free on receipt of stamp by A. H. Dixon & Son, 303 King Street West Toronto Canada

"I wonder why Sniffles grieved so at Bilkins' funeral yesterday?" "Why, you see he was engaged to Mrs. Bilkins before her marriage, and he is not afraid she can hold him to the contract."

People who are subject to bad breath, foul coated tongue, or any disorder of the Stomach, can at once be relieved by using Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, the old and tried remedy. Ask your Druggist.

Calvin S. Brice, who was a poor schoolteacher at Lima, O., a few years ago, has leased James Gordon Bennett's gorgeous villa at Newport for the summer. Mr. Brice has made his fortune as a railroad consolidator, and his transactions have the merit of being legitimate.

A CURE FOR DRUNKENNESS

opium, morphine, chloral, tobacco, and kindred habits. The medicine may be given in tea or coffee, without the knowledge of the person taking it, if so desired. Send 4c. in stamps for book and testimonials from those who have been cured. Address M. V. Lubon, 47 Wellington St. East, Toronto, Ont. Cut this out for future reference. When writing mention this paper.

The Thistle seems to be beating other yachts with disagreeable persistency. If this thing goes on it may be necessary for the Yankees to averthat they don't want the Queen's old cup, anyhow.

Whenever your Stomach or Bowels get out of order, causing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, and their attendant evils, take at once a dose of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Best family medicine. All Druggists, 50 cents.

A. P. 340

PATENTS For Sale—Illustrative descriptive Catalogue free. R Chamberlin, Toronto.

GOOD LIVE AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY County in Canada. Address, FERRIS & CO., 57 Church St., Toronto.

AGENTS AND CANVASSERS wanted, Male or Female, whole or spare time, on salary or commission. Industrial Union of B.N.A., 45 Arcade, Toronto.

ANOTHER NOVELTY.—Goldman's Spiral Roller and Atomizer. All the rage in the States. Agents wanted. Sample by mail 45 cents. CLEMENT & CO., Toronto.

TORONTO CUTTING SCHOOL.—Gentlemen desirous of acquiring a thorough knowledge of garment cutting should apply at once to S. Corbin, 122 Yonge St., Toronto. Terms on application.

THE BOILER INSPECTION and Insurance Company of Canada.
Consulting Engineers and Solicitors of Patents,
TORONTO.
G. C. ROBB, Chief Engineer. A. FRASER, Sec'y-Treas.

COMPOUND OXYGEN—THE CONSERVATOR of health, the enemy of disease; heals the Lungs, Re-builds the Broken Down Constitution of young and old. Home treatment, sufficient for two months, Inhaler and all complete, sent by express for $12. Moved my office from 73 King West to 41 King East. MRS C. STIDMAN FIEROE. Four years established in Toronto. 32 Office Treatments for $5. Send for circular.

GOLD, COMPOSITION GOLD, Antique Bronze, Natural Wood, and other Picture and Room Mouldings, Frames, etc Paintings, Engravings Etchings, Artotypes, Artists' Materials, Mirrors, etc. Wholesale and Retail. Trade Catalogue. MATTHEWS BROS. & CO., Toronto.

SPOONER'S COPPERINE 'Babbitt'—Non-fibrous Anti-friction Box-metal for journal bearings in machinery. Guaranteed copper mixed. Supplies every requirement. Ask your hardware dealer for it. ALONZO W. SPOONER, Patentee and Manufacturer, Port Hope.

BEAVER LINE OF STEAMSHIPS,
Sailing weekly between Montreal and Liverpool.
RATES OF PASSAGE:—Saloon, Montreal to Liverpool $40, $50, and $60; Return Tickets, $80, $90, and $100—according to steamer and accommodation. Intermediate and Steerage at lowest rates. For further particulars and to secure Berths, apply to H. E. MURRAY, General Manager, 1 Custom House Square, Montreal, or to the Local Agents in the different Towns and Cities.

GUELPH Business College, Guelph, Ont.
Twelve States and Provinces already represented on the roll of this Institution. To thorough, practical instruction, and the efficiency and success of its graduates, this College owes its popularity. Circulars giving terms, etc, mailed free. Address
M. MacCORMICK, Principal.

AGENTS APPLY TO THE D.W. BEADLE NURSERY CO. WANTED St. Catharines, Ont.

Awnings! Decorated Window Shades, &c. Wholesale and Retail, at the CELEBRATED GOLD MEDAL TENT MANUFACTORY, 70 King St. West, Toronto. NATIONAL MANUFACTURING CO

MEAT CHOPPERS. Washing Machines, 3 kinds. Clothes Wringers, 10 kinds; Mangles, 3 kinds. Churns, Carpet Sweepers, and other sundries.
HAMILTON INDUSTRIAL WORKS Co., Hamilton, Canada
Send for article wanted or Illustrated Catalogue.

Dairy Salt,
FOR BUTTER, ETC.
NEW Importations.—Higgins' Eureka, Washington and Ashton Brands, in large or small sacks. Also Rice's Canadian Salt. Write for prices.
JAMES PARK & SON.
Wholesale Produce Merchants, Toronto.

J. L. JONES
WOOD ENGRAVER
10 KING ST EAST
TORONTO.

MAY APPLE BLOOD SYRUP
THE greatest discovery of the present age for REGULATING THE BOWELS, AND CURING ALL BLOOD, LIVER AND KIDNEY COMPLAINTS. A perfect Blood Purifier. A few in Hamilton who have been benefited by its use:—
Mrs. M. Keenan, 182 Robert St., cured of Erysipelas of 2 years standing; Robert Cornell, 24 South St., daughter cured of Epileptic Fits after 3 years' suffering; Jennie Birrell, 55 Walnut St., cured of Weakness and Lung Trouble; John Wood, 95 Cathcart St., cured of Liver Complaint and Biliousness, used only 3 fifty-cent bottles; Mrs. J. Beal, 6 Augusta St., troubled for years with Nervous Prostration, two small bottles gave her great relief. Sold at 50c. & $1
F. F. DALLEY & CO., Proprietors.

Bicycles!
SEND AT ONCE FOR LIST of Second-Hand Machines.
From $15 Upwards.
New Catalogue Ready 1st April
A. T. LANE MONTREAL

ONTARIO CANOE COMPANY
Peterboro', Ont.

MANUFACTUR'S OF ALL KINDS OF CANOES
Send 3c. Stamp for Catalogue.

I CURE FITS!
When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you. Address DR. H. G. ROOT, Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto.

BY ORDER OF THE LEAGUE.

BY FRED. M. WHITE.

CHAPTER XVII.

When Maxwell came to himself, it was broad daylight. He was lying upon a straw mattress in a small room, containing no furniture beside the rude bed; and as he looked up, he could see the rafters, black with dirt and the smoke of ages. The place was clearly a house, partly a hut. Gradually, the recollection came back to him, he remembered the events of the previous night, wondering vaguely why he had been selected as a victim for attack, and what brought him here. By the clear sound of voices and the rush of water, he judged himself to be in the country. He had no consciousness of fear, so he rose, and throwing open the heavy door, looked out. Towering away above his head were the snow-capped peaks of mountains, and below him the spreading valley of the Campagna. Wood upon wood was piled up before him, all aglow with bright sunlight, the green leaves whispering and trembling in the breeze. The hut was built on a long rocky plateau, approached by a narrow winding path, which ending in a steep precipice of two hundred feet, and backed up behind by almost perpendicular rock, fringed and crowned by trees. In spite of his position, Maxwell drew a long breath of delight; the perfect beauty of the scene thrilled him, and appealed to his artistic soul and love of the beautiful. For some time he gazed upon the panorama, perfectly oblivious to his position, till gradually the sound of voices borne upon the wind came to his ears. He walked to the side of the hut and looked around.

Seated upon the short springy turf, in every picturesque and comfortable position the ingenuity of each could contrive, were four men, evidently, to Maxwell's experienced eye, banditti. They seemed peaceably inclined now, as they lounged there in the bright sunshine smoking, and renewing the everlasting papilito, without which no Italian gentry are complete, either in the pages of fiction or as portrayed upon the modern stage. With the exception of one, evident to be leader, there was nothing gorgeous in their costume, it being the usual attire of the mountaineer; but the long carabines lying by their sides and the short daggers in their waistbands spoke of their occupation. Maxwell began to scent an adventure and enjoy the feeling; it would only mean the outlay of a few pounds, a little captivity; but when he approached nearer, and saw each bearing on some part of his person the gold moidore, his heart beat a trifle faster as he stepped forward and confronted the group.

"What is the meaning of this?" he asked in the best Italian at his command. "I suppose it is merely a question of ransom. But it is useless to put the figure too high. Come, what is the amount?"

The brigands looked to each other in admiration of this coolness. Presently, the leader removed his cigarette from his mouth and spoke: "You have your watch, signor, and papers; you have your rings and purse. It is not our rule to forget these with an ordinary prisoner."

Maxwell felt in his pocket, and, surely enough, his valuables were perfectly safe—nothing missing, even to his sketch-book. For the first time, he began to experience a sensation of fear. "Then, if plunder is not your object, why am I detained?"

"Plunder is not a nice word to ears polite, signor," the leader replied with a dark scowl. "You are detained by orders. To hear, with us, is to obey. You will remain here during our pleasure."

"But suppose I refuse to remain?"

Without rising, the brigand turned on his side and pointed towards the sheer precipice, and then to the wall behind; with a gesture he indicated the narrow winding path, the only means of exit, and smiled ironically. "You may go; there is nothing to prevent you," he said; "but before you were half-way down the path yonder, you would be the target for a score of bullets, and we do not often fail."

Maxwell was considerably impressed by this cool display; and indeed, when he considered the matter calmly, there appeared no prospect of immediate escape. Remonstrances or threats would be equally unavailing, and he determined to make the best of his position. "Perhaps you would not mind telling me why I am here, and by whose orders you have arrested me. It would be some slight consolation to know how long I am to stay. I am anxious to know this," he continued, "because I am afraid your mountain air, exhilarating as it is, will not suit me."

The group burst into loud laughter at this feeble humor: it was a kind of wit they were in a position to appreciate.

"It is impossible to say, signor. We only obey orders: we can only wait for further instructions as regards your welfare or otherwise. We were told to bring one Maxwell here, and lo! we have done it."

"I see you are brothers of the League," Maxwell replied; "and for some act of omission or commission I am detained here. You can at least tell me by whose orders you do this."

"Signor, they say you are a traitor to our order."

"That I am not!" Maxwell cried indignantly. "Tell me why I am here, and at whose orders. There is some mistake here."

"Not on our part, signor. The instructions came from London. I only received them last night. You will be well treated here, provided you do not make any attempts to escape. For the time, you are our guest, and as such, the best I have is at your disposal. If orders come to release you, we shall conduct you to Rome. We shall do everything in our power to serve you. If, on the other hand, you are tried in the balance and found wanting, we shall not fail to do our duty." He said these last words sternly, in contrast to the polite, grave manner with which he uttered the first part of his speech.

Maxwell had perception enough to comprehend his meaning. "You mean that I should have to die," he observed. "I suppose it would be a matter of the utmost indifference to you, either way?"

"As a matter of duty, signor, yes," he answered gravely; "though I do not wish to see a brave man die; but if the mandate came to that effect, I must obey. There is no refusing the word of the League."

"Then I really am a prisoner of the League," Maxwell returned bitterly. "Well, the cause of liberty must be in a bad way, when the very members of the League treat brothers as I have been treated."

"Ah, it is a fine word, liberty," the brigand chief replied sardonically. "It is a good phrase to put into men's mouths, but there can be no freedom where the shadow of the sword dwells upon the land. Even Italy herself has suffered, as she will again. Perfect liberty and perfect freedom can only be founded upon the doctrine of universal love."

By this time, Maxwell and the chief had drawn a little aside from the others. The artist looked in his companion's face, and noted the air of sorrow there. It was a fine, manly countenance, haughty and handsome, though the dark eyes were somewhat sombre now. Maxwell, with his cosmopolitan instinct, was drawn towards this man, who had a history written on his brow. "You, too, have suffered," he said gently.

"Suffered?" the brigand echoed. "Yes Englishman, I have suffered, and not more from the Austrian yoke than the cruelties of my own countrymen. There will be no true liberty here while a stiletto remains in an Italian's belt."

"I suppose not," Maxwell mused. "These Societies seem to me a gigantic farce. Would that I had remained quietly at home, and let empires manage their own affairs. And Salvarini warned me too."

"Salvarini! What do you know of him!" the chief exclaimed.

"Nothing but what is good and noble, everything to make one proud to call him friend.—Do you know him too?"

"He is my brother," the chief replied quietly.—"You look surprised to find that a relative of Luigi should pursue such a profession as mine. Yes, he is my brother—the brother of an outlaw, upon whose head a price has been put by the state. I am known to men as Paulo Lucci."

Maxwell started. The man sitting calmly by his side was the most famous and daring bandit chief of his time. Provinces rang with his fame, and the stories of his dashing exploits resounded far and near. Even away in the distant Apennines, the villagers sat round the winter firesides and discoursed of this man with bated breath, and children trembled in their beds at the mere thought of his name. He laughed scornfully now as he noted Maxwell's startled look.

"I am so very terrible," he continued, "that my very name strikes terror to you! Bah! you have been listening to the old woman's tales of my atrocities, about the tortures my victims undergo and the thousand-and-one lies people are fond of telling about me. I can understand Luigi did not tell you I was his brother; I am not a relative to be proud of."

"He is in total ignorance of your identity. That I do know.—I wonder at you choosing such a life," Maxwell put in boldly. "With your daring, you would have made fame as a soldier; any path of life you had chosen would have brought you honor; but now"—

"But now I am an outlaw," Paulo Salvarini interrupted. "And why? If you will listen, I will tell you my story in a few words."

Maxwell threw himself upon the grass by the other's side and composed himself to listen,

"If you look below you," the chief commenced, and pointing with his finger across the distant landscape, "you will see the sun shining upon a house-top. I can see the light reflected from it now. That house was once my home. I like sometimes to sit here and think of those days when Gillana and I were happy there—that is ten years ago now. I had done my best for my country; I had fought for her, and I retired to this peaceful spot with the woman of my heart, to live in peace, as I hoped, for the rest of my life. But the fiend of Liberty was abroad. My wife's father, an aged man, was accused of complicity in political crimes, and one day, when I was absent, they came to arrest him. My wife clung to him, and one of the brutal soldiery struck her down with the but of his rifle; I came in time to see that, for my blood was on fire, and I did not hesitate. You can understand the rest. My wife was killed, actually murdered by that foul blow. But I had my revenge. When I crossed the threshold of my house, on my flight to the mountains, I left three dead men behind me, and another, the officer, wounded sore. He recovered, I afterwards heard; but some day we shall meet."

He stopped abruptly, shaking in every limb from the violence of his emotion, his sombre eyes turned towards the spot where the sun shone upon the roof-tops of what was once a peaceful homestead.

"Luigi can only guess at this," the speaker continued. "To him I have been dead for years; indeed, I do not know what makes me tell you now, only that you surprised me, and I like to hear a little news of him."

"I have heard this history before," Maxwell observed. "It is five years ago now; but I am not likely to forget it. Still, you cannot enjoy this life. It is wild and exciting, no doubt; but your companions"——

"I live for revenge," Salvarini exclaimed sternly. "I am waiting to meet the brutal officer who ordered his follower to strike down my wife. I have waited long; but the time will come at length, and then, heaven help the man called Hector le Gautier!"

"Le Gautier!" Maxwell exclaimed. "He, an Italian officer! Why, he is at present Head Centre of the Brotherhood in London. He was even present at the time when Luigi told us your sad history. Surely he cannot know; and yet I trusted him too. Signor Salvarini, you bewilder me."

The outlaw laughed loud and long; but the mirth was strained, and jarred harshly upon the listener. "And that fiend is a friend of Luigi's! Strange things happen in these times. Beware, Signor Maxwell—beware of that man, for he will work mischief yet. It was by his orders you were arrested. He knows me by name, add as one of the Brotherhood only, so I did his bidding."

"Strange! And yet I have done him no harm."

"Not that you are aware of, perhaps. Still, no doubt you have crossed his path in some way. If I have a command in the morning to lead you out yonder to face a dozen rifles, I shall not be surprised."

"And you would countenance such murder?"

"This morning, yes. Now, I am doubtful. You are my brother's friend; I am Le Gautier's enemy; I do not wish to help him."

Three days passed uneventfully by, at the end of which time Maxwell had become a great favorite with the outlaw band. Following the lead of their chief, they treated him with every kindness; nor was he in his turn inclined to resent his captivity or chafe at this delay. His chief fear was for Enid; for Paulo Salvarini, though he was inclined to allow his prisoner every latitude, was firm upon the point of communication with the outer world; for, as he pointed out, he might after all be guilty of some great treachery to the League, and in that case must be answerable for anything that happened.

So the days passed on in that quiet spot, no further news coming to him till the morning of the fourth day. Then he was sitting at the door of his hut, watching the sunrise glowing on the distant hills, when Salvarini approached him, his face perturbed, and his whole manner agitated. "You are in danger," he whispered. "The orders have come, and you are proclaimed traitor. The men are mad against you, and declare you shall be brought out for instant execution. Ah! you have only seen the best side of their character; you have not seen them hungry for blood."

"Do they want to murder me?" Maxwell exclaimed. "Cannot you——"

"I am powerless now," Salvarini interrupted. "I will do what I can; but I fear nothing can save you now."

"Do not be afraid," said a calm voice behind. "I shall save him!"

"Isodore!"

"Yes, Paulo Lucci; it is I."

Maxwell looked up, and saw the most beautiful woman he had ever seen in his life. For a moment he could only gaze in rapt astonishment. This, then, was the Empress of the League—the woman Visci had mentioned, whose lightest word could free his feet and clear his path forever.

"You have come in time," Salvarini said with a low obeisance. "An hour hence and our prisoner would have been no more."

"I am always in time," Isodore replied quietly. "I have come to deliver you from a great danger," she continued, turning to Maxwell. "Come; we must be in Rome at once, and away, or we may yet be too late. Hark! Are the wolves clamouring for their prey already? We shall see."

It was light now, and from the plateau beyond came the hoarse yells and cries for revenge from the brigands. On they came towards the hut, clamouring for blood, and mad with the heat of passion. They rushed in, seized Maxwell, and led him out on to the level grass, while six of the party stepped back a few paces and cocked their rifles. The whole thing was so sudden that Lucci and Isodore were totally unprepared to resist. But the girl roused herself now, and quitting the the hut, swept across the open space and placed herself in front of Maxwell.

"Drop your arms!" she cried. "Are you mad, that you do this thing? Ground your rifles, or you shall pay dearly for this indignity."

Appalled by her gestures and the dignity of her voice, the desperadoes hesitated for a moment, and then one, more daring than the rest, raised his carabine to the shoulder, standing in the act of firing.

"You may fire," Isodore cried. "Fire! and every hair of my head shall be avenged for by a life! Fire! and then pray for the mercy of heaven, for you shall not meet with any from the hand of man!"

The desperate men were amazed by this beauty and daring, the audacity of which appealed to their rude instinct. One by one they dropped their firearms, and stood looking sullenly in the direction of the scornful woman, standing there without a particle of fear in her eyes.

"Who are you," cried one bolder than the rest—"who are you, that come between us and justice?"

They all took up the cry, and bade her stand aside.

"If she falls, I fall!" Lucci exclaimed in a firm steady voice. "Go on your knees, and ask for pardon.—Madam," he continued, falling upon one knee, "I did not think my followers would have shown such scant courtesy to Isodore."

At the very mention of her name, a change came over the mutineers. One by one they dropped their firearms, and came forward humbly to implore her forgiveness for their rashness, but she waved them aside.

Long and earnestly the three talked together, listening to the revelation of Le Gautier's treachery, and how the final act was about to be played over there in England: how Le Geutier had confessed his treachery, and how, out of his own mouth, he was going to be convicted. Silently and slowly they wound their way down the mountain path, under Lucci's guidance, out on to the plains, beyond which the sun lighted upon the house-tops of distant Rome. When they had got so far, Isodore held out her hand to the guide.

"Good-bye. It will not be safe for you to come any farther," she said. "Rest assured, in the general reckoning your account shall not be forgotten."

"It will not,' Lucci answered sternly. "I shall see to that myself. By the time you reach England, I shall be there too.—Nay, do not try to dissuade me. I do not take my revenge from another hand. I shall run a great risk; but, mark me, when the time comes, I shall be there!" Without another word he disappeared; and Isodore and Maxwell walked on towards the Eternal City both wrapped in their own thoughts. Mile after mile passed on thus, ere Maxwell broke the silence.

"Do you think he will keep his word?" he said half timidly.

"Who, Lucci? Yes; he will keep his word; nothing but death will prevent that.—And now, you and I must get back to England without a moment's loss of time."

"I cannot say how grateful I am," Maxwell said earnestly. "If it had not been for your bravery and courage"——He stopped and shuddered; the contemplation of what might have been was horrible.

Isodore smiled a little unsteadily in answer to these words. "I owe you a debt of gratitude," she replied. "My memory serves me well. I was not going to allow you to die, when you would have perished rather than raise a hand against Carlo Visci."

"Indeed, you only do me justice. I would have died first."

"I know it; and I thank you for your kindness to him at the last. You were with him when he died. Things could not have been better. He was always fond of you. For that, I am grateful."

"But I do not understand," Maxwell faltered. "He did not know you except by reputation."

"I think you are mistaken. Am I so changed that you do not recognise your friend Genevieve?"

"Genevieve! You? Am I dreaming?"

"Yes; I am Genevieve; though much changed and altered from those happy old days when you used to come to the Villa Mattio. You wonder why I am here now—why I left my home. Cannot you guess that Le Gautier was at the bottom of it?"

"But he professed not to know you; he"——

"Yes, he professed to be a friend of yours. But until I give you permission to speak, not a word that Isodore and Genevieve are one and the same."

"My lips are sealed. I leave everything in your hands."

"And cannot you guess why you have incurred Le Gautier's enmity?—No? Simply, because he aspires to the hand of Enid Charteris.—You need not start," Isodore continued, laying her hand upon the listener's arm. "You have no cause for anxiety It will never be!"

"Never, while I can prevent it!" Maxwell cried warmly.

"It is impossible. He has a wife already."

Only tarrying for one mournful hour to visit the cemetery where lay Carlo Visci's quiet grave, Isodore and Maxwell made their way, but not together, to England, as fast as steam could carry them.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

A Very Remarkable Fight.

"While travelling through the country with Barnum in 1881," said a veteran showman, "I witnessed one of the most remarkable fights on record. Four elephants against one man, and in the water, too. In July or August, 1881, our show struck the pleasant little City of Ottawa. You are doubtless aware that elephants are extremely fond of bathing. For some little time before coming to Ottawa they had been deprived of that pleasure. No sooner were they unloaded from the train, however, than their sharp little eyes caught sight of the river and the news was trumpeted about in elephant language from one to the other. They were very restive all day and betrayed great anxiety to bathe, and as soon as the afternoon performance was over the under keepers marched them to the river bank. I assure you many seconds did not elapse before the whole herd, twenty three in number, were splashing and dashing in the water like a lot of school boys. Such a strange sight naturally attracted the attention of the towns people and the farmers who, with their families had driven in to see the show, and I doubt very much whether the river at Ottawa ever presented such an animated appearance as on that day.

"After awhile the keepers bouted 'Mile up,' which in elephant phrase egy means all in. Nineteen immediately sw m to shore but no amount of shouting could inouce the other four to return. Men were sent with rocks to the bridge and the entire circus force swarmed along both river banks trying with stones to turn the huge beasts in the direction of the canvas, but all in vain. As a last resource the chief trainer, George Artingstall, was sent for. The poor fellow had been sick in bed for over a week with malaria, but on learning of the difficulty mme diately dressed himself and came to the bank Calling each elephant by name he ordered them to 'Mile up.' For a moment it looked as though his command would be obeyed, for the elephants, recognizing his voice, halted and seemed to waver in their course. Albert, the oldest and biggest settled the matter by uttering a loud snort of defiance, and led by him they once more started up the stream. Seeing at a glance that he could do nothing on shore, Mr. Artingstall made for the dressing room tent, from which he soon emerged dressed in tumbler's tights, and placing the elephant prod or fork between his teeth, boldly swam out to the elephants.

"Used as we were to strange sights we yet almost held our breath at this daring act. When within a few yards of them Artingstall again shouted 'Mile up,' but without effect. Then, seeming to lose his temper, he sprang upon the back of the nearest one, and commenced using his fork for all he was worth. Pretty soon a cry of rage came from the animal, upon which the trainer jumped from one to another, repeating the fork performance until after at least ten minutes fierce fighting and jumping, the elephants cried peccavi and swam trembling to the shore. Once there the keepers soon had them under subjection, but Artingstall, who had displayed such intrepidity and courage, sank into a dead faint the moment he touched shore.

A Street of Tombs.

An interesting discovery has very recently been made in the direct line between Pompeii and Nocera. The digging of a well in a vineyard revealed the existence of a street of tombs, about one thousand feet east of the amphitheater of Pompeii. If the whole street is as closely lined with tombs as is the portion laid bare it will be one of the most important discoveries lately made in that part of the world; but unfortunately money is wanting, so that the excavation is going on very slowly.

Most of the tombs are covered with rude inscriptions painted in red, many of them being of the nature of advertisements, the tombs thus serving the purpose of a newspaper along the much-frequented road. The exact date has not yet been accurately ascertained, but they probably belong to the periods of Julius Cæsar and Tiberius. A contrast may be drawn between the condition of Pompeii and that of Pergamon, which, although double the size of Pompeii, has, thanks to the energy of the Prussian government, been laid clear within eight years. In the latter beautiful finely painted statues, votive offerings to Athena, and belonging to the sixth century B. C., have been found buried in the earth, and literally forming the foundation of the houses above. Their style of art is one hitherto not supposed possible at so remote a period, and they cause the ruins of Pompeii to appear quite modern The discovery of an aqueduct which probably dates back to the time of King Solomon is reported from Jerusalem, and it is confidently anticipated that the further excavation of it will bring to light some extremely interesting and valuable inscriptions.—Swiss Cross.

The "Dead-Beat."

BY JOHN DEAR, TORONTO.

Let's beware of "the man (?)" who scorns to work,
Yet dares not refrain from eating!
In the core of his heart doth meanness lurk,
In spite of his bland, fair greeting!

He may talk and look like "a gentleman,"
And dress in the height of fashion;
He'll run "on credit" wherever he can,
If "dunned"—gets into a passion!

He will ofttimes talk of religion, too,
And pray with seeming devotion;
He will go to church, yet pay for a pew—
Of that he ne'er had a notion!

He carries his head like an English lord,
Though he sometimes tastes of hunger!
He will eat at the widow's frugal board,
And "skip" when she "trusts" no longer!

His heart is devoid of affection dear,—
He'd live off his poor old mother!
And will "sponge" on his friends both far and near,
Claiming each one for a brother!

Oh! out on the man with the heart of stone,
Who knows not the pleasure of giving;
Who will whimper, and whine, and beg, and groan—
"That the world owes him a living!"

He who "will not work" should not dare to eat
The bread of another's earning;
Far rather a thousand times sweep the street,
Thereby independence learning!

A Coronation Greeting.

BY C. H. ACTON BOND.

Victoria, we greet thee, Empress Queen,
Who now o'er us hast ruled for fifty years,
And still in virtue, truth and love art seen
As when thou first began thy reign in tears,
Afraid lest in thy duty thou should'st fail
And prove thyself unworthy of the trust;
But groundless were those fears; as there prevail
Sure tokens of thy deeds, both merciful and just.

All Britons now with joy their voices raise,
Exalting through each land thy glorious name,
And with true happiness sing forth thy praise
In peace and concord, adding to thy fame.
Their throbbing hearts with love for thee abound,
And gladly each one follows in the strain,
As hymns of thankfulness on high they sound
For all the blessings of thy happy virtuous reign.

From far Australia's shores beyond the sea,
There comes a sound of gratitude sincere
For all the acts of kindness done by thee
Throughout thy long and prosperous career;
Fair Canada, in gladsome burst of song,
Contributes to thy glory and renown;
In India, too, with voices loud and strong,
A prayer ascends to God for her who wears the crown.

As Rome its conquering heroes glorified
With shouts of joyful triumph for success;
So now, thy subjects look on thee in pride,
With one continual peal of jousness,
Re-echoing o'er the world from land to land
Thy honoured name, with true and heartfelt love;
For thou hast governed with a loving hand,
Receiving strength and wisdom from the throne above,

We pray that God will bless thee, noble Queen,
And grant thee still yet many years in peace
To rule o'er us with happiness serene,
And from thee every care and sorrow cease;
That at the closing of thy glorious reign,
Thou shalt have every joy and perfect rest,
And when departed from this world of pain,
Thou may'st the Victor's crowd wear ever with the blest.

Toronto's Coronation Ode.

BY W. A. SHERWOOD.

Long before yon grey cathedral rose to greet the Sabbath day,
Long before its silvery chiming echo'd o'er the watery way!
When the red man roamed the forest for the bird whose plume he wore,
Far beyond his homely wigwam on the thickly-wooded shore,
Thence returning Old Toronto saw him wandering up and down
With the braves who came to greet him from the neighboring Indian town;
Came they in to see the banners and to hear the bands men play,
Grand old strains of British music on that Coronation-Day.
Trembling when the little cannon dared its iron voice to raise,— E'en the forest seemed to startle at the vigor of its praise:
Joyously they heard the story of the young Queen crown'd, till they,
Homeward hastening flung the war-dance 'round the campfire at the bay;
From their heart with native kindness came the fullness of their song,
Yea, since fifty years of progress how the echo floats along,
Balsam, pine and sugar-maple, birch and beech and sturdy oak,
All have fallen 'neath the forward sweeping of the woodman's stroke;
And as backward moves the forest, so the red man steals away,
Seeks the silence of the woodland from the noise and glare of day,
And ten thousand stately mansions tell of something we have done,
Since upon this day commemorate fifty years our race has run;
Other lights than Indian camp-fires gleaming all along our bay,
Stars of civilization triumph on this Coronation Day!
Yea, from furthest loyal westland see approach the iron steed,
See the golden cars of commerce, synonyms of power and speed,
Bearing tribute's costly treasures, hallow'd offerings of peace;
Lo! ye traitors of the Empire, look and let your scoffing cease.
Know ye not our young Dominion rests her head on Britain's breast,
And the standard o'er her floating is Victoria's Royal Crest?
And, until that honor'd sceptre passes from our Mother's hand,
Till her dying blessing crowns us undivided shall we stand—
By the blood of Balaklava, by the battles of the plain,
By the Burnaby and Gordon on the Khedive's desert slain,
By the chains of slavery broken, by the God that we adore,
By the grand old open Bible we are one for evermore!

A Big Canal Project!

The French Minister of Public Works, replying to a question in the Chamber of Deputies, said the proposal to construct a canal connecting the Atlantic Ocean and the Mediterranean Sea was not ripe for discussion. The work would cost $300,000,000, while the revenue from the tolls levied would not cover the interest. Adverting to the scheme to make Paris a seaport, the Minister said that in the present state of the country's finances the Government could not approve so costly an undertaking. The initiative must be left to private enterprise. He doubted whether the work was possible without the co-operation of the state.

Austrian Evictions.

In one year in Vienna over 62,000 notices of eviction were served for non payment of State and municipal taxes. The population of the city proper being at the time roughly 753,000, it follows that about one in every twelve Viennese had the legal sword suspended over him. In no fewer than 14,795 cases the evictions were actually carried out. Equally suggestive is the fact that in 1885 alone outdoor relief had to be given here to 107,856 persons, while 35,708 arrests were made for vagrancy.

Before marriage the question a girl asks her lover most often is: "Do you really love me?" After marriage the query becomes: "Is my hat on straight?"

Jas. S. Freeborn.

—M. D. Ch. M.; L. K. & Q. C. P. I.—

Doctor of Medicine and master of Surgery Victoria. Univ. Licentiate of King's and Queen's College of Physicians in Ireland. Member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Ont. Formerly acting Surgeon of B. Battery, R. C. A. Quebec. Late resident of the Rotunda Hospitals, (Lying-in & Gynæcological) Dublin.

—OFFICE—

STEPHEN'S DRUG STORE.

Drs. Sproule & Brodie,

—PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS,—

MARKDALE.

DR. SPROULE'S office Turner's Drug Store

DR. BRODIE'S office Mathew s block.

P. McCullough,

BARRISTER, SOLICITOR, &c

OFFICE—OVER McFARLAND'S STORE,

MARKDALE.

Money to Loan.

MASSON & MASSON,

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, &c.

OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block, Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week.

J. MASSON, Q. C. S. MASSON. W. MASSON.

N. B.—Private and Company's funds to invest at from 6 to 8 per cent

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate se curitv.

WILLIAM STUART,

KIMBERLEY,

Issuer of Marriage Licences. Money to Loan on Real Estate at low rates.

A few Farms for sale. Terms easy.

NOTICE.

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.

will visit Markdale for the practice of his profession on Thursday and Friday following the first Monday in each month, and at Flesherton the following day, Saturday.

MARKDALE HOUSE,

MARKDALE, - - ONT.

J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

ISAAC STINSON.

Builder and Contractor

In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.

Estimates given. All work guaranteed.

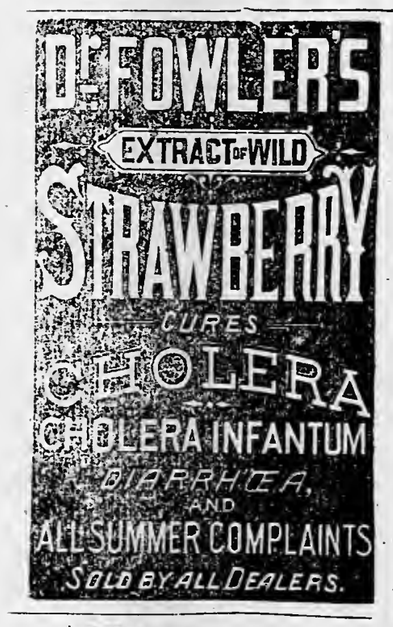
Orders by mail promptly attended to.

329 Residence, MARKDALE.

W. C. RICHARDS,

BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT, Markdale.

1241y



R. J. SPROULE,

FLESHERTON.

Conveyancer, Appraiser, Valuator and Money Lender. Deeds, Mortgages, Leases and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice. Charges very low. Apply to

R. J. SPROULE,

Money Lender & Postmaster, Flesherton.

HAVE YOU

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Jaundice, Headache, Dizziness, Pain in the Back, Costiveness, or any disease arising from a deranged liver, DR. CHASE'S LIVER CURE will be found a sure and certain remedy.

NATURE'S REMEDY

The unqualified success of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure in Liver Complaint rests solely with the fact that it is compounded from nature's well-known liver regulators, MANDRAKE AND DANDELION, combined with many other invaluable roots, barks and herbs, having a powerful effect on the Kidneys, Stomach, Bowels and Blood. 500,000 SOLD

Over one-half million of Dr. Chase's Recipe Books were sold in Canada a'one. We want every man, woman and child who is troubled with Liver Complaint to try this excellent remedy.

SOMETHING NEW. GIVEN AWAY FREE

Wrapped around every bottle of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure is a valuable Household Medical Guide and Recipe Book (84 pages), containing over 200 useful recipes pronounced by medical men and druggists as invaluable, and worth ten times the price of the medicine.

TRY CHASE'S CATARRH CURE. A safe and positive Remedy. Price, 25 cents.

TRY CHASE'S KIDNEY AND LIVER PILLS. 25 cts. per box.

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS

S. GIBBARD & CO., Sole Agents, Markdale

Markdale Roller Mill.

FARMERS HAVING No. 1 WHEAT and preferring flour from their own wheat, can get it by bringing twenty bushels or more.

Flour always on Hand

Flour $3.00 to $4.30 per. bbl.

SHORTS, per ton - $12.00

BRAN, " - 10.00

The highest market price paid for Fall and Spring wheat.

J. W. FORD.

Pubic Notice.

To all whom it may con cern.

I R. L. Stephen the Druggist of Markdale have been appointed agent for JOHNSON'S celebrated Tonic and nervine. JOHNSON'S little liver Pills, and JOHNSON'S all healing White Ointment. The nervine is the very best in the market, in all diseases caused by poverty of blood, for Nervousness, Hysteria, and the PALENESS of Complexion so often noticed in female's, loss of appetite and general debility. In conjunction w th the Liver Pills, it is he very best for all diseases arrising from Topid live r or bad stomach

The White Ointment is the very best in the market for Salt Rheume, Barbers Itch, Pimples, Chafs, Burns, Scalds, and all Skin diseases of a scrofulous nature. Try these fine remedies and you will not be disappointed.

or saleatR. L. STEPHEN'S the druggist, Markdale, Ont.

WM. G. GUTHRIE,

Plain & Ornamental Plasterer

MARKDALE.

Arches, Cornices, Centre Flowers, and all kinds of plain and ornamental plastering executed at cheapest rates. Calsomining Lime Washing and Repairs promptly attended to.

330

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of

School Furniture.

Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness, wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.

181 ANDREW McGILL.

MONEY TO LOAN.

ON real estate security, at low rate of interest, no commission charged. Business Strictly Confidential,

J. S. BLACK,

190 Pomona, P, O.

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT No. 24, con. 4, N. D. R. Glenelg, 100 acres, will be sold cheap and on easy terms of payment, for further particulars apply on the premises, or by letter to

J. S. BLACK,

190-tf. Pomona P. O.

Markdale Woolen Mill.

Custom Carding, Weaving, Fulling, Dyeing and cloth dressing, done in a workmanlike manner and on very short notice.

First Class Cotton Warp

supplied at the lowest possible rates.

A call solicited.

Terms strictly cash or wool·

Sept. 28, 1886 F. J. RITCHIE.

IT IS A WELL KNOWN FACT

—THAT—

McCOLL'S

"LARDINE,"

is the best known. and most reliable MACHINE OIL in the Dominion; Farmer's, Thresher's and Mill Owner's, will find it decidedly to their advantage to insist upon getting the "Genuine Lardine" when they ask for it, owing to so much inferior oil being sold under the same name by unscrupulous dealers. We are the sold manufacturers of the "Genuine Lardine" every barrel branded.

McCOLL BRO'S, & CO.

For sale in Markdale at Haskett Bro's Hardware Store. 347-78

FRESH TURNIP SEEDS.

FRESH PARIS GREEN.

FRESH HELLEBORE.

AT

H. Parker's,

DRUGGIST and SEEDSMAN,

Durham.

To the Editor of the STANDARD.

SIR,—In reading over the report of the meeting of Directors of East Grey Agricultural Society held in Flesherton lately, which appeared in your last weeks paper, I was much struck by a resolution which it stated was carried unanimously condemning the action of the several Farmers' Institutes which during the last few months have been held throughout the country and which have almost entirely gone in favor of fair reciprocity with the United States. Now Sir, I hold that that discussion was entirely outside the regular business of that meeting, or that at least if such a question were going to be brought up, due notice should have been given, in which case I am quite sure such resolution would not have passed without strong opposition. But aside from the serious view of the question, this sweeping resolution has a comic aspect, as for cool absurd presumption it has seldom if ever been equalled, for a handful of onesided directors in a hole and corner meeting to place on record their condemnation of the action of thousands of the most intelligent men of the Dominion on both sides of politics (as it is not a party question only when made so by narrow minded partisans) is simply r idiculous. Then the idea of imposing such a task upon the Dominion representative, as though the duties of a session just closed were not enough without requesting him to undertake such a summers campaign. I have not the slightest idea what his views on the matter are, but I give him credit for more common sense than to allow himself to be imposed upon by such a resolution. Such a request is simply in keeping with the sublime cheek of the whole business. Now, Mr. Editor, I would propose if this little company of Solons are so anxious to enlighten the dark and benighted minds of those ignorant misguided persons who believe that a broader, simpler and less expensive trade intercorse through reciprocity with the Americans, judiciously and equitably arranged by the respective governments would be beneficial to Canada, they had better elect one of themselves, say the President to undertake this missionary tour, beginning at Rocklyn.

Yours very respectfully,

W. G. PICKELL.

BE ON YOUR GUARD

Don't allow a cold in the head to slowly and surely run into Catarrh, when you can be cured for 25c. by using Dr, Chase's Catarrh Cure. A few applications cure insipient catarrh; 1 to 2 boxes cures ordinary catarrh 1 to 5 boxes is guaranteed to cure chronic catarrh. Try it. Only 25c. and sure cure Sold by all druggists. 333-83

FROM MANITOBA.—"I have been cured of chronic diarrhœa by the use of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. I used about twelve bottles of it and am now entirely free from the disease." William McLeren, Clearwater Manitoba.

Miss Mabel Andrews of T hornbury, a few days ago, jumped into the bay and rescued a girl named Scanlon. who had fallen from a boat, Miss Andrews had to swim quite a distance.

WORTH REMEMBERING,—In a long letter from John H. Hall, of Baddick, Cape Breton, N. S., he says: "I believe were it not for Burdock Blood Bitters I should be in my grave. It cured me of kidney and liver complaint and general debility which had nearly proved fatal.

DANGEROUS FITS are often caused by worms. Freeman's Worm Powders destroy worms.

AROUSE THE LIVER when torpid with Nationol Pills, a good anti-bilious cathartic, sugar-coated.

FOR NETTLE RASH, Summer Heat, Eruptions and general toilet purposes use Low's Sulphur Soap.

ALL WELL PLEASED.—The children like Dr. Low's Pleasant Worm Syrup and parents rejoice over its virtue.

MARVELOUS.—One dose of Dr. Chase's Liver cure will cure Sick Headache. Dizziness, and Sour Stomach. 1 to 2 bottles are warranted to cure Liver Complaint, Indigestion and Biliousness.

No one can describe the sufferings caused by Asthma except those troubled with the complaint. One package of Southern Asthma Cure will relieve any case. Double treatment in each package.

NASAL BALM.—Deafness caused by Catarrh is quickly relieved cured by Nasal Balm.

NASAL BALM.—The only medicine in the market that will immediately cure Cold in the Head, and permanently cure Catarrh, Hay Fever, etc.

THE largest stock of Frames and Moulding ever opened out in Markdale just to hand, and selling very cheap at the new Photo Gallery.

Dominion Day Frolicks.

July the 1st was an outing day for the Dudes of Markdale as well as the pic-nicers of the vicinity; some struck for Flesherton, others wended their way to Priceville, and still others took passage in a butcher cart for "Bells Lake," where a pic-nic was being held by Meaford Road Sunday School. The "Fairy Queen" steamer owned by Moffat Bros., was kept busy up to a late hour playing from one port to another with lively loads of pleasure seekers who returned to their homes late in the day both satisfied and wearied of their sport; but hold on Mr. Editor; I was nearly forgetting the "Dandy Dudes" who put in an appearence about 3 o'clock in a butchers cart drawn by a "stubbron fact," but the latest phrase pertaining to the animal which was freely commented on by those present as being a mule are not correct or else I'm no judge of horse flesh—If you don't believe me ask Jim. Henry or Si. Hill—excuse me gentlemen, I did'nt mean to mention any names. The Young Druggist aint agoin to get off "Scott free" either; perhaps he aint no use to harness a hoss, but he's a "Jim dandy to drive, and if you don't believe it I will take much pleasure in referring you to Silas. I was in town on Monday and observed that they were looking all O. K. and doubtless enjoyed themselves immensely.

RUSTICUS.

Honor Roll.

Honor Roll S. S. No. 5, Holland, for the month of June.

IV Reader—Bertha McKennett, Ellen Gawley, Frank Hamilton.

III Reader—Martha Freeborn, Lizzie Clarke, Esther Hopps.

II Reader Sr.—Sarah Mathews, John S. Hamilton, Lizzie White.

II Reader Jr.—Robert Freeborn, Mary David, Davis Freeborn.

Part II—Francis Mathews, Mary White, Dorcas Deaver.

Part I—Ethel Hewitt, Amelia Sargent, Dorval Ward.

L. A. SMITH,
Teacher.

Respectful Questions!

Does Father Feeny know that intoxicating liquor was sold in large quantities at his annual picnic? Does he not as an intelligent citizen—know, it was contrary to Ontario law as made and provided? Is he not aware that said liquor led to disgraceful and brutal fighting? Will he not as the Parish Priest, clothed with authority, gain the respect of all clases attending their annual gatherings, by putting down his foot upon such illegal proceedings? I would not wilfully allege, that he was a party to the procuring of liquor for the purpose of illegal sale; but it surely would come to his knowledge that such sale was going on.. We like to mingle with our catholic friends and neighbors in their annual gatherings for right games and lawful enjoyment, but to remain silent, and not "Protest" in the name of right and law, against the unrestricted sale of spiritous liquor on an occasion like that, would be both dishonoring to God, and our general welfare as citizens.

"FIAT JUSTICIA, RUAT COELUM."

Honor Roll.

Honor Roll for R. C. S. S. No. 5 Glenelg.

IV Class—Ellen Dulan, Maggie McAsey, Thos. McAsey.

III Class—Theresa Darcy, Mary Delaney, Kate Connor.

II Class—Rose McGrade, Mary Healy, Patric Tuohy.

Part II Class—Mathew Meagher, Frank Tuohy, Norman McPhee.

I Class—Frank Darcy, Angus Johnson, Miles Darcy.

THOS. MOORE,
Teacher.

GIVE THEM A CHANCE.

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air-passages, but the thousand of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and chocked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, croup, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them, That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else had failed you, you may depend upon this for certain.

Flesherton.

From our own corresp

On Tuesday evening last to the departure of Rev. W. number of the members of ist Church assembled at the age and on behalf of the me friends of this station presen Mr. Ayers with a very kindly address and handsome gold with inscription artistically purchased from Mr. J. G. Flesherton's Noted Jewel Ayers was more than surpr in a few words kindly than many friends for their kind p tion.

Later in the evening the R T. (of which Mr. Ayers is a held a strawberry fastival and well gathering where a very evening was enjoyed. The about 150 present; short were also indulged in.—A large ber of our citizens escorted Ayers and family to the sta Wednesday morning on their ture for their new home in Go

Two of our Milk men while on Wednesday morning had a ion; one teamster was thrown wagon and received some severe in the face, and some consi milk lost. Be more more boys. [The above came too last week, Ed S.]

Dominion Day passed off q this village. The field sports tised proved a failure. The com of management so signally fail they found it necessary to the whole catalogue.

In the afternoon a large assembled to witness the inte ceremony of laying the corner of the new school edifice here, co ed by Mr. S. Damude, senior m of the Trustee board assisted Richardson, Esq., Sec., Treasu the same. The corner stone w mally laid by Mrs. W. K. F who on behalf of the Trustee was presented with a handsome Trowel manufactured form Silv by our enterprising Jeweler Russell and artistically engrav M. Richardson, Esq. An addre then delivered by W. K. Flesher (who thanked the Trustees f honor confered upon his wife o auspicious occasion) followed S. Christoe M. D. We might among many documents deposi copy of the "Standard" is them perhaps to be read in cen to come. Our Brass Band was sent and deliyened the occassion several appropriate airs.

The garden party in the evening M. Richardson's lovely grounds decided success. The weather that could be desired. Profe Wards fireworks, Band music various games were the a ments of the evening.

The anniversary sermons of Presbyterian Church here were pr ed on Sunday last, morning evening by the Pastor, Rev, A. son; Both services were impre and a season of blessing was enj by many.

Rev, J. W. Shilton occupied fo first time the pulpit in the Meth Church on Sabbath last. All heard him were delighted with hi Flesherton is again to be hon on the 12th July by a monster ge ing of Orangemen and their fri Already ample provision is being for the accommodation of the ands which may gather here on memorable day.

CLIPPINGS.

Mr. S. H. Breese had the pleasure presenting 277 children, large and s with cards, and money to the amou $51.43 on Jubilee Day. The rain i ferenoon prevented many more from ticipating in the gifts.—[Chatsw News.

During the severe storm on Wed day evening of last week lightning st Mr. T. Hogg's barn, in Holland, and barn and contents were destroyed. Hogg had $350 insurance on the b ing, but nothing on the contents, wh were worth at least $250.—[Chatsw News.

Heavy hail stones fell in some pla during the storm on Wednesday, and are informed that considerable dam was done thereby. Mr. John Merri had about 30 acres of crop destroy Mr. C. Green had a field of peas flatte ed down to the ground, and others Holland lost more or less by the stor —[Chatsworth News.

LIKE MAGIC.—"It always acted like magic, I had scarcely ever need to the second dose of Dr. Fowler's Extr of Wild Strawberry for summer co plaints." Mrs. Walter Govenlock, Ethel, Ont.

Markdale Standard

"HEW TO THE LINE, LET THE CHIPS FALL WHERE THEY MAY."

SEVENTH YEAR.—No. 357. MARKDALE, ONT., JULY 14, 1887. C. W. RUTLEDGE, Proprietor.

Local and Other Items.

Notices in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

NOTICE.—Correspondence, communications, Advertisements, &c., must be in this office by noon on Tuesday to insure publication that week.

—: AT :—

RUSSELL'S

—Noted Jewelery Store,—

FLESHERTON,

will be found the most complete stock of Watches, Clocks, Jewelery, Silverware, Spex, &c., in this part of the country.

Call and see those watches they are selling at $12.00 bearing warrants for three and a half years, while other dealers are asking $15.00 for the same article. P. S. Bartlett, 3 oz. coin silver case for $16.00 while they are selling elsewhere for $17.50. Other dealers cannot compete with us and they know it. We cannot help them being annoyed at our terrible low prices; we must give the public the benefit of our close buying.

☞ Just Note a few prices.

A fine Nickle Alarm Clock for actually only $2.00 bearing a warrant for two years. Your choice of over 20 fine gold chains for only $1.60; Just think of it. Fine walnut clocks from $1.75 upward. Brooches, Ear-Rings, Albert Chains, Cuff-Buttons, Scarf-Pins, at equally low prices.

Remember if you want your Watch or Clock repaired properly by a workman, Russell's is the only place.

All orders by mail promptly attended to at

RUSSELL'S Noted Jewelry Store,

FLESHERTON.

Haying is the order of the day.

Miss J. Lamb is to Toronto on a visit.

Mr. Geo. Speer is visiting at Totenham and Toronto this week.

Willie McFarland is home from Owen Sound High School.

Dr. Broome is visiting in Markham for a few weeks.

Lawyer McCullough has returned after spending holidays in Georgetown district.

Mrs. C. W. Rutledge has seriously ill with conjestion of the lungs.

He never was as good as he should be who does not strive to be better than he is.

Miss Mamie Bowes is to Georgetown and Toronto where she will spend a month.

Raspberries are a good crop and are coming to market in large quantities.

There does not seem to be any Anarchists among the potatoe bugs; they are all industrious and thrifty.

Mr. J. R. McIntyre of Dundalk is filling Mr. Young's place in Lucas' Bank during Mr. Y's absence.

The showery weather of the past week was injurious to the haying operations but grand for root crops and late grain.

It is becoming fashionable for ladies to carry a cane; it comes convenient in case they meet a cross dog or an impudent pup.

Rev. Mr. Wilson will preach next Sabbath morning to the S. School children. A cordial invitation is extended to the parents and all interested in Sabbath School work.

There was a successful excursion to the Model Farm, Guelph, from Meaford, Caledon East and intermediate stations on the 5th inst.

Judge Low in a communication from W. J. McF. last week should read Judge Lane; also "criminally legal" should read criminally liable.

We learn, on going to press, that Mr. D. Sweeney, of Traverston, and Miss Jane Smith, daughter of Mr. Wm. Smith, of Glenelg, were married yesterday.

Mr. Fred Lyons of Akron, Ohio, and formerly of this village was in town last week, also his brother Mr. Thos. Lyons of Kent, Ohio.

Christ Church annual Sabbath School picnic was held in Walker's bush last Wednesday afternoon. The day was fine, the vitals good; a goodly number present, and everything passed off pleasantly.

The Chatsworth News says: "The brick work of the new school building is going up rapidly. The first story is about completed, and the workmanship on it is first-class in every particular."

The Acton Free Press has always been spicy, newsy neat paper, and last week on commencing the thirteenth year of publication, it comes to hand enlarged and otherwise much improved. Mr. Moore richly deserves success. May it be unbounded is the Standard's wish.

Mr. Thos. Smart of Sault Ste Marie, Mich. formerly of Glenelg, is down. It is said he is after a span of horses and a wife.

We had a friendly call from Mr. Wm. Hall of Thornhill, formerly of Traverston; proprietor of the Traverston Mills. He was up looking after his Bless-ful affairs.

Every man should have their Will made. It will save endless trouble, and often expensive litigation. The prevailing idea is that when a man makes his will he expects shortly to die. We are all certain that death will come sooner or later, and we cannot tell how soon that time may come, therefore it is wise to be prepared in matters temporal as well as Spiritual. Ex.

Markdale cheese factory turned out 350 boxes of cheese in June. They have made their second sale for the season, amounting in all to over $2,000. The last sale realized 8½ cents per lb.; the first 9¼.

Mr. Thos. Littlejohns is down on a visit from Winnipeg where he went some eight years ago. Thomas was a steady, industrious boy and has done well in the North-West. He is engineer in a large steam mill, which lucrative position he had held for many years.

There was a large turn-out at the Methodist church on Sunday evening last on the occasion of the sermon to the Orangemen. Markdale and Kell's lodges were in attendance. Rev. Mr. Buggin gave an able discourse which was highly appreciated.

Markdale was almost deserted on the "glorious twelfth" and appeared more like Sunday than one of the six. The great majority of our citizens went to Flesherton. Markdale and Berkeley lodges left about ten o'clock, led by our brass band, making quite an attractive appearance, while the music was still more thrilling. They returned in good time and respectable shape in the evening. Read Flesherton correspondence for further particulars.

Mr. Bliss of Traverston, who we mentioned last week as having decamped, was back the latter part of last week but only to slip again for parts unknown. His creditors are more numerous and for larger amounts than was first supposed. Mr. Hall, the proprietor of the mills, has the household effects and chattels under seizure for rent, but does not expect to realize over 50 cents on the dollar, while others will have to grin and bear.

Brevities.—Life itself is brief: "Time and tide wait for no man." Pray short, earnest and to the point; short, practical, pungent, illustrative sermons are not only best received, but longest remembered, resulting in the most permanent good. Wit and humor makes an excellent seasoning. Short accounts make long friends. This is a fast age, and it is necessary to live in the spirit of the age.—Ex.

The Markdale Methodist church has just issued a Financial Report gotten up neatly in pamphlet form, giving the names of the various Trustee and other Boards; also Ladie's Aid, and S. School Superintendents, with a summary of amounts collecter for church purposes, each contributed being credited for the amount of his or her contribution to the various funds for twelve months up to 31st May, 1887.

BUSINESS LOCALS.

Harvest Mits from the best manufacturers at Mabee's.

Don't neglect to come early to the great clearing sale at J. G. Anderson's.

For Barley Forks, Grain Cradles, Grain Scythes, see Mabee.

If you want pure Paris Green, go to Hamblit Bro's.

Genuine bell glass to be had only from Mabee's Hardware, next door to Turner's Drug Store.

Be sure you read J. G. Anderson's advertisement in another column. You will find something that will interest you.

4 colors in sun specks at W. A. Brown's Jewelery store.

Turnip Seed! Turnip Seed! At Stephen's Drug Store.

Paris Green pure at the Medical Hall, A. Turner & Co.

Fresh Fish.—Sarjeant Bros., butchers, receive a supply of fresh fish twice a week.

Turnip Seeds Fresh pure and true to name at the Medical Hall. A. Turner and Co.

If you want 10 lbs. real good tea very cheap, just go to J. G. Anderson's great clearing sale. Special discounts for 30 days.

Fine lathes, tools and best material used by W. A. Brown, the peoples watchmaker and Jeweler, Markdale.

Cigars! Cigars! lovers of a good Havana cigar will find that Benson has the finest cigar in town, sold by the box.

We buy our goods at feather edge prices; we give the customers the benefit; they make a note of it and call on us often: Consequence, a mutual benefit. Mabee, the Hardware.

All needing specks, bear in mind that W. A. Brown has the only complete stock in Markdale, and that he has a practical knowledge of optically fitting them.

Lazarus, Moris, Pebble and Crystal lens, specks and eyeglasses at W. A. Brown's Jewelery store.

Business is active and increasing a J. G. Ritchie's Woollen Mill, Markdale Custom carding, weaving, fulling, dyeing clothdressing &c., done on short notice and in a workmanlike manner.

DISTRICT DOINGS.

A SYNOPSIS OF COUNTY AND DISTRICT DOINGS FROM OUR EXCHANGES PREPARED FOR STANDARD READERS.

John Paterson's Saw Mill at Hollin was burned last week. Loss $3,000.

The triumphant three.—"During three years suffering with dyspepsia I tried almost every known remedy but kept getting worse until I tried B. B. B. I had only used it three days when I felt better, three bottles completely cured me." W. Nichols, of Kendol, Ont.

Charlottetown, P. E. I., had a $50,000 fire last week.

Get the best.—Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is the best, most prompt and safest cure for cholera morbus, dysentery, sick stomach, cramps cholic and cholera infantum that has yet been discovered. Its popularity is undimmed by age. All medicine dealers sell it.

J. W. Rengough is to lecture at Wiarton to-morrow (Friday.)

In better humor now.—"My son aged eleven, was cured of an eruptive humor that covered his head and face with sores, by two bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters and Pills," testfies Mrs Mary Fulford of Port Hope, Ont.

Tara wants a branch of a chartered bank and is taking steps to that end.

Worth remembering.—In a long letter from John H. Hall, of Baddick, Cape Breton, N. S., he says: "I believe were it not for Burdock Blood Bitters I should be in my grave. It cured me of kidney and liver complaint and general debility which had nearly proved fatal.

Stop it.—Continual hawking and spitting caused by Catarrh is permanently removed by Nasal Balm.

BE ON YOUR GUARD

Don't allow a cold in the head to slowly and surely run into Catarrh, when you can be cured for 25c. by using Dr, Chase's Catarrh Cure. A few applications cure insipient catarrh; 1 to 2 boxes cures ordinary catarrh 1 to 5 boxes is guaranteed to cure chronic catarrh. Try it. Only 25c. and sure cure Sold by all druggists. 333-83

R. Thomson, late traveller for McKesson & Robins, chemists New York, was found dead in Orangeville last week. The cause of his death is unknown. His relatives all live in Ireland.

Marvelous.—One dose of Dr. Chase's Liver cure will cure Sick Headache. Dizziness, and Sour Stomach. 1 to 2 bottles are warranted to cure Liver Complaint, Indigestion and Biliousness.

Wm. Brown of Tiverton is the oldest printer in the Dominion. He is 90 years of age, and did bookwork in Scotland for half a century.

Tamarac—In an Elixir carefully prepared by an experienced chemist, with the well-known Tamarac as the fundamental principle and all the other ingredience in its composition are all the purest, and best calculated to relieve all cases of Coughs, Cold and Lung troubles.

Clerk to the Employer: "What shall I mark that new lot of black silk at?" Employer: "Mark the selling price ten shillings a yard." Clerk: "But it only cost four shillings a yard." Employer; "I don't care what it cost. I am selling off regardless of cost."

From Manitoba.—"I have been cured of chronic diarrhœa by the use of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. I used about twelve bottles of it and am now entirely free from the disease." William McLeren, Clearwater Manitoba.

The Superiority of man to nature is continually illustrated, Nature needs an immense quantity of quills to make a goose with; but a man can make a goose of himself with one.

For nettle rash, Summer Heat, Eruptions and general toilet purposes use Low's Sulphur Soap.

A $1,000 fire occurred in Nix's harness store Uxbridge last week. Fully insured.

Dangerous fits are often caused by worms. Freeman's Worm Powders destroy worms.

Arouse the liver when torpid with Nationol Pills, a good anti-bilious cathartic, sugar-coated.

The largest stock of Frames and Moulding ever opened out in Markdale just to hand and selling very cheap at the new Photo Gallery.

Like magic.—"It always acted like magic, I had scarcely ever need to give the second dose of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry for summer complaints." Mrs. Walter Govenlock, of Ethel, Ont.

Don't use any more nauseous purgatives such as Pills Salts &c., when you can get in Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters a medicine that moves the Bowels gently, cleansing all impurities from the system and rendering the Blood pure and cool. Sold by all Druggists. tf Ainly's tannery, operated by Colgan Bros. at Mt. Forest was destroyed by fire last week. Estimated loss $5,500. Insured for $3000.

Mathews' store at Acton was destroyed by fire last week. Loss $1,600. Insured $1,150.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a similar vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh Asthma and all throat and Lung Affections also a positive and radical cure for nervous Dability and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases. has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this receipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Send by mail by addressing with stamp naming this paper W. A. Noyes 149 Power's Block Rochester, N. Y. 334-86 E. O. W.

IN BRIEF, AND TO THE POINT.

Dyspepsia is dreadful, Disordered liver is miserable. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existence. It is easy put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspepsia.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health: But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents.

W. A. BROWN

"THE PEOPLE'S JEWELLER"

—DEALER IN—

Fine Gold, Filled Gold, and Coin Silver Cases; with Hampden, Columbus, Waltham and Elgin Movements, in Ladies' and Gents' sizes. Solid 18 k Wedding Rings. Roll Gold Chains, and Jewellery in large variety Beautiful lines in Silverware for presentation purposes. I keep in Jewellers lines the finest and most complete stock between Shelburne and Owen Sound; do business for myself in my own name, and can be held to every warrant I sign. I don't quote prices on Watches "Not in Stock," and then tell a customer wanting Bartlett at $16, "I just sold the last one." I have P. S. Bartlett's, in stock at $17.50 less cash dis., warranted 3 years. I expect to establish, more fully every year of business life an unquestioned reputation for Reliability. Straight Dealing. Fine Work and Close Prices.

Watch and Clock Warrants 2 and 3 years covering breakages.

☞ A call to Price or Purchase respectfully solicited.

GOODS
BEST QUALITY. WORK FIRST-CLASS.

W. A. BROWN, - Box 5,

MARKDALE.

FARMERS!

Don't forget there is good work done at the Flesherton

WOOLEN FACTORY

And we are doing all in our power to please. Customers are finding out it is to their advantage to deal with us, our Prices are Low and Our Goods are Reliable and notwithstanding price being cut so close on account of hard times, I intend to reduce the manufacturing prices in nearly every branch, viz., CARDING, ROLL-CARDING, SPINNING, WEAVING, &c., &c. Give us a trial and see for yourself.

W. H. FLESHER.

Flesherton, May 30th, 1887.

HOUSEHOLD.

The Kitchen Dresser.

The greatest convenience in a kitchen, next to a sink provided with hot and cold running water, is an old-fashioned dresser with its wide, capacious shelves above, and its pot and kettle closets below. Standing in full light against the wall, it has no dark corners for the harboring of unseen accumulations, and furnished with its great, tall, wide glazed doors, it must of necessity be neatly kept, or at once expose the carelessness of its owner, or her deputed helper. And a pleasing sight, too, is a well-kept dresser, with its rows of shining china and glass gleaming through the clear panes of its great doors.

And this brings me to the expression well kept, so I hasten to explain what that means. Well kept means carefully and cleanly kept, and not only that, but carefully and conveniently arranged. In the kitchen dresser will be the china or semi-porcelain for every-day use, also the glass goblets, tumblers and dishes accompanying them, also the meat platters and the vegetable dishes belonging to the every-day set, the tea set, with its belongings, and the knife-and-spoon basket, crumb-tray and brush.

A well-devised dresser generally has three wide shelves, furnished near the back with a moulding of wood to prevent large meat dishes from slipping down, and to keep them in a standing position, and shelf-space afforded by the top of its lower division. It has also three compartments at the bottom or lower part, with a wide drawer above each. In the middle lower compartment should be placed the household dinner pots; on either side, in the other compartments, the kettles, saucepans, griddles, broilers, etc. In the three drawers may be kept many articles, such as, in one drawer, clean kitchen towels and dish-cloths; in the second, the table-cloths neatly folded; in the third, the napkins, doyleys, and napkin rings, and perhaps the best carving knife, fork and steel. On the shelf-space, or room afforded by the top of the lower part, it will be found very convenient to arrange certain articles, for example, the coffee and tea cannisters, the cocoa or chocolate box, and the tea, coffee, and chocolate pots, bright as polishing can make them, ranged in front of the cannisters. On this shelf-space, the knife and spoon basket or box of plaited willow, the knives in one side and the silver or plated ware in the other; next to this the caster, with its mustard, vinegar, oil and pepper cruets, all neatly kept and sparklingly bright; also individual "salts," "oils," and "vinegars," and lastly, the crumb brush and tray, and the neatly-joined wooden table-mats, also fresh and clean.

Above, on the next shelf, ranged in front of the meat dishes of graduated sizes, should be the dinner and soup and dessert plates, also the vegetable dishes; and above this the every-day tea set and the daily glass. There should be a fixed place for each pile of plates and saucers, also for the cups, and the glass and vegetable dishes, so that there will be no confusion, and hence less liability to breakage.

Make your rules and see that they are enforced, so that any dish may be found at the moment wanted, and always found brightly polished. The kitchen dresser, by its capability for being attractive, offers an inducement to and a reward for neatness not attached to the ordinary closet. By all means encourage the kitchen dresser.

Little Helpers.

Mothers, do you ever realize, how much help our little four-year-old girls are? Mine is a perfect treasure; and I often wonder what could I do without her? If I would permit it she would be at work all the time. She seems to think if she is only helping mamma, she could not be happier; no difference how disagreeable, or hard the task to her unaccustomed fingers, it mamma will only say: "You are a dear, good little girl," she feels amply rewarded. Her little hands can do so many things, such as picking up things and putting them away, so that it is no trouble to sweep, and on a few occasions has swept the sitting-room—to use her own words—"Oh, so bright and clean!" Going to the cellar or pantry, for needed articles, paring apples, potatoes and turnips, in a surprising manner; a task she will do, and one which most people do not particularly like; but she evidently thinks it the nicest work in the world. Setting the table as nicely as any one can do; but I will not allow her to wash or wipe dishes yet, though she often begs to do so; dishes, when wet, are slippery things to hold, and if broken would cause one to feel vexed in spite of themselves. She almost always ppts them in the cupboard; sometimes (only when she teases, however,) she scours knives and forks; helps churn, brings in chips, and when brother wheels a load of wood to the door, brings it in as it is needed; feeds the chickens, waits on little brother, and—oh, I will stop or you will think that child must certainly do all the work. No, of course she does not do any very hard work. I have a dreadful time to keep her from trying to do everything, She is large of her age and very active; but I would never think of putting her to work, if she could only stay away and play contentedly. She watches how everything is done, "so I can do it just as you do, mamma," and is constantly lamenting because she does not grow faster; and when she plays, the wildest, roughest play suits her best, or play that is most like work; such as playing she has a large washing to do, or must clean house. She loves to dust; if I will tie a soft cloth on a stick and let her use that for a duster, she will keep the furniture and zinc shining, and all such places as under clothes-presses and little nooks and corners, where one cannot sweep with a broom, Nellie, with her "poke stick," will keep out everything in the shape of dirt.

Dear little hands so willing and helpful! Do we appreciate them as we should? I often look at them and kiss the dimpled fingers and think what tiny hands they are, to begin the fight with this rough world; but work is a blessing and nothing in life will bring us more real pleasure than being able to do our work, whatever it is, well.

Original Receipts.

COOKIES.—Two cups sugar, one and one-third cups of lard and butter, two-thirds of a cup of sour milk, and two-thirds of a teaspoonful of soda; one egg and flour to roll out.

BERWICK SPONGE CAKE.—Beat six eggs two minutes; add three cups of sugar, beat five minutes; two cups of flour, with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, beat two minutes one cup of cold water, beat one minute, extract of vanilla or lemon, little salt; two more cups of flour, beat one minute. Bake in moderate oven.

ALMOND CAKE.—Three eggs, two cups of sugar, one-half cup of butter; three cups of flour, one cup of milk and two teaspoonfuls baking powder. One teaspoonful of almond flavouring. Bake in layers.

CHICKEN SALAD.—Boil one chicken tender, and chop fine; chop fine the whites of twelve hard-boiled eggs; add equal quantities of chopped celery and cabbage; mash the yolks fine; add two tablespoons butter, two of sugar, one teaspoon mustard; pepper and salt to taste; and lastly, one-half cup good cider vinegar; pour over the salad and mix thoroughly.

NICE BISCUITS.—1 quart of flour, 3 teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a pinch of salt, three tablespoonfuls lard or butter. Mix soft, roll out half an inch thick, spread with butter and sugar, and sprinkle cinnamon over and some nice English currants. In the summer berries are very nice used in this way. Roll up same as jelly cake, cut in strips 1½ thick, and bake in a quick oven.

PLAIN BISCUIT.—Dissolve one rounded tablespoon of butter in a pint of hot milk; when lukewarm stir in one quart of flour, add one beaten egg, a little salt and a teacup of yeast; work the dough until smooth. If in winter set in a warm place, if in summer a cool place, to rise. In the morning work softly, and roll out a half-inch thick, cut into biscuits and set to rise for thirty minutes, when they will be ready to bake. These are delicious.

ICE CREAM CAKE.—1 cup of butter, 2 cups of sugar, 1 cup of sweet milk, 1 cup of cornstarch, 2 cups of flour, 2 teaspoonfuls of baking powder, the whites of eight eggs. This makes four or five layers about an inch thick. For the icing to put between the layers: the whites of three eggs, beaten stiff, one pound pulverized sugar. Boil the sugar with four tablespoonfuls of cold water until it candies. Pour it into the whites slowly, beating until nearly done. Flavour with vanilla.

DELICIOUS CORN BREAD.—1 pint of corn meal, 1 pint of flour, ½ cup shortening (half butter and same of lard); 2 eggs, 3 heaping teaspoons of baking powder, and cold water or sweet milk enough to make it very thin, just so it will drop nicely from the spoon. Bake it thin, so it will not be more than 1½ inches thick when done. Sour milk can be used in place of sweet milk with water, and soda in place of baking powder, but only one large teaspoonful of soda should be used, just enough to make your milk foam nicely. This is nice baked in gem pans for breakfast.

What Molasses will do for a Sick Man.

"I am going to open a molasses cure establishment," said a young man, who was recently laid up with a complication of troubles, and then explained that he was a firm believer in the magic virtues of molasses as a cure-all. He said that he had been studying up the subject and found that molasses was recommended for all the diseases known to humanity. "First I sprained my wrist by falling from a bicycle, and before I got home three people told me to put brown paper and molasses on it. Rheumatism caught me by the knee before my wrist was well, and nine different people told me to use molasses on it. Molasses and opodeldoc was one remedy and another was molasses, salt and vinegar. I caught a bad cold on my chest last week, and was told to try molasses and rum internally. The cold got worse, and when I proposed to try the effect of a mustard plaster I was told to mix the mustard with molasses so that it would not blister my cuticle. The first time I got out of the house I was walking up Broad street in company with a pronounced limp, and was asked what was the matter. I told two or three people that I had the rheumatism and learned that I ought to try molasses and camphor or salt and molasses. I got tired of these suggestions, and when the next man asked what ailed me, I answered that my corns troubled me. "Tell you what to do. Sure cure. Take a little piece of kid, daub it with molasses and stick it on the corn.' I broke away from him and savagely told the next sympathetic inquirer about my ailment that it was none of his business what was the matter with me. I stopped on the corner to rest, and while there heard a man telling a victim of malaria to take molasses and red pepper to break his chills. I am beginning to think that the molasses cure should be developed. I understand that the sticky stuff is a favorite remedy for everything out in the country, where they eat it on all sorts of things, and use it for all sorts of complaints. Up in Sussex you will find lots of people who eat molasses on salt pork, sweeten their tea and coffee with it, use it on lettuce and tomatoes, and drink it with vinegar and water in harvest time. I am beginning to think that half of my life has been wasted, for I never knew enough to use molasses on anything but buckwheat cakes.

In a Changing World.

Geologists have described Britain as swarming with a multitude of forms of gigantic reptiles, some of them 60 feet or more in length, during the reptilian age—the middle period in the earth's geological history, when mollusks and reptiles attained their culmination and declined, and when the first mammals of England at a later epoch—the middle of Quarternary— is given by Owen: "Gigantic elephants of nearly twice the bulk of the largest individuals that now exist in Ceylon and Africa, roamed here in herds, if we may judge from the abundance of their remains. Two-horned rhinoceroses, or at least two species forced their way through the ancient forests, or wallowed in the swamps. The lakes and rivers were tenanted by hippopotamuses, as burly and with as formidable tusks as those of Africa. Three kinds of oxen found subsistence in the plains. There were also gigantic deer, wild horses and boars, a wild cat, lynx, leopard, a British tiger larger than that of Bengal, and another and even more terrible carniverous monster with saber-shaped canines eight inches long. Troops of hyenas preyed upon carcasses and feebler quadrupeds. There was a savage bear larger than the Rocky Montain grizzly, a gigantic beaver, wolves, and various smaller animals, down to bats, moles, rats and mice."

Turned About.

"Women are unreasonable creatures," observed Brown, as he ordered another round for the boys. "Now, there's my wife. Before we were married, when I went to see her she always thought it was too early for me to go home, and now I can't go home early enough to suit her."

USEFUL AND SUGGESTIVE.

Wood steeped in a solution of copperas becomes harder and more indestructible.

A good remedy for burns, and one that is generally at hand, is a paste made of flour and cold water.

Wet the hands in vinegar and camphor after having them in soapy water; it kills alkali and keeps them soft.

When cleaning a stove if a small quantity of sugar is put into the stove-blacking it will not burn off so quickly.

Women while sewing should never cut the thread with their teeth, as by so doing they injure the enamel, and in a little while the teeth decay.

Ordinary carriage varnish is a good cement for broken china, and if the pieces are joined neatly, the fracture will hardly be perceptible.

It is claimed that holding a shovelful of hot coals over varnished furniture will take out spots and stains. Rub the place while warm with flannel.

If your fence is too old for paint to stick on it, a solution of water, glue and lime will form a syndicate that will make it as white as the new fallen snow.

Brick made of a mixture of coke, sand and lime, for light partition walls, excludes sound better than brick-work, and is light and a non-conductor of heat.

For cleaning brasses belonging to mahogany furniture, use either powdered whiting or scraped rotten-stone, mixed with sweet oil, and rub on with a chamois skin.

To clean tins, making them almost as nice as new, wash in hot soap suds, dip a dampened cloth in fine, sifted coal ashes, scour well, then polish with dry ashes.

To remove paint and putty from window-glass put sufficient saleratus into hot water to make a strong solution, and with this saturate the paint or putty which adheres to the glass. Let it remain until nearly dry, then rub off with a woolen cloth.

Never be alarmed if a living insect enters the ear. Pouring warm water into the canal will drown it, when it will generally come to the surface and can be easily removed by the fingers. A few puffs of tobacco smoke blown into the ear will stupify the insect.

To mend china: Into a solution of gum arabic stir plaster of paris until the mixture assumes the consistency of cream. Apply with the brush to the broken edges of china and join together. In three days the article cannot be broken in the same place. The whiteness of the cement adds to its value.

A MIXTURE TO ERASE SPOTS.—Equal parts of strong ammonia water, ether and alcohol form a valuable cleaning compound. Pass a piece of blotting paper under the grease spot, moisten a sponge first with water, to render it "greedy," then with the mixture, and rub with it the spot. In a moment it will be dissolved, saponified and absorbed by the sponge and blotter.

GEAR TEETH.—Gear teeth, says Wood and Iron, generally have one corner broken off first, after which they rapidly go to pieces This may be avoided and the teeth made much stronger, by thinning down the edges with a file, thereby bringing the whole strain along the centre of the tooth. Gear teeth fixed this way will not beak unless the strain is sufficient to break off the whole tooth.

Old Friends.

It does old friends good to meet now and then, for they have a pleasure in it that they could hardly have guessed beforehand, and they tighten up the threads of kindliness that for any reason had begun to slacken. In these days of active, busy life, the friendships are not forgotten but they are apt to lose their freshness, simply for want of renewals by handshaking and kindly words. It is possible that a correspondence is kept up for years, even a lifetime, by a few, but how many of us know of such a thing? Usually, there is regular exchange of letters for a time, then an occasional neglect, followed by contrition and vows to do better, and then a total lapse from fidelity, and frantic attempts to justify it on the ground of "business" and the "exactions of a large family." The friendly feeling remains in such conditions, dulled, of course, as it must be, and with only a hasty thought of the one who used to be always in mind, and whose companionship in some form seemed to be necessary to happiness. It prevents this degeneracy of feeling to meet, see each other face to face, and quicken all the sensibilities by exchanges that shall be made vital by the aid of voice, tones, laughter, the eyes, and probably tears and the touch of the hand, which, though it is so much alike all the world over, has an individuality in it that is quick and keen as a spiritual interpreter. If we show ourselves human and true we will gather new friends wherever we are and value and use them—even set them up against all others as examples of kindness and congeniality—but there is something in the greeting again after many years of the friends of youth that, like the atmosphere of the early home, has nothing like it. Happy are they whose friends remain to them. It becomes very lonely when the roll of school and colleg days is called and there are only a few, far-off voices to answer.

A Fortunate Escape.

Lamartine the French poet was once visited by a deputation of "Vesuviennes," furious female Rupublicans of the petroleuse type. The captain was the spokeswoman. She told him that the "Vesuviennes" had come to tell him how much they loved him. "There are fifty of us here," she added, "and our mission is, in the name of all the others, to kiss you." This announcement made the poet shudder. The captain of the gang was tolerably good-looking, but the others were a horrible-looking, half-drunken and half-crazy set of viragoes. He was equal to the emergency. Citizens," said he, "I thank you from the bottom of my heart. This is certainly the happiest day of my life; but permit me to say that splendid patriots like you cannot be treated like women. You must be regarded as men; and, since men do not kiss one another, we must content ourselves with a hearty hand-shaking." The ladies considered themselves highly complimented. "Vive Lamartine!" they shouted, and each grasped his hand. When they were gone, he looked like a man who had just escaped from a deadly peril.

In ploughing and planting a quarter section of land near Bethany, Ill., two farmers killed 160 rattlesnakes, some of them big fellows.

Two Sides to It.

Striker (coming home at 1 p. m.): Biddy, phwere's me supper?

Wife: Oi've all struck. Oi can't work twinty-four hours a day while yerdilf wid put in tin.

Pocketing an Insult.

"A small physique at times is a great disadvantage to a man," he said. "Recently I was grossly insulted by a great big duffer, and I could only pocket the insult."

"In what way did he insult you?"

"He offered me a bribe."

McGuinness Foots the Bill.

Mrs. Flaherty—"Phwat's this, Mrs. McGuinness? Ye're but jist married to a sicond husband and it's comin' out in a new mourning driss ye are!"

Mrs. McGuinness—"Oi alwiz mint to wear mournin' for poor Mike, but Oi niver had the money till now. McGuinness is well fixed, praise the saints!"

The Moral He Drew.

Sunday school Teacher—"Who were the children of Israel?"

Pupils—"Jews."

"What did Joseph's brethren do with him?"

"Sold him into bondage."

"What moral do you draw from this lesson?"

"Look out for Sheenies if you don't want to be sold."

Getting Even.

"My neighbor has thrown her dead cat over in my yard?" announced a female caller at police headquarters the other day.

"Yes'm."

"Can you do anything?"

"No, ma'am, I'm afraid not."

"Well, I can! I've got a dog four times as big as her cat, and I'll poison him and throw the body into her yard this very night—so there!"

She Found Out.

"Do you like a mustache?" he asked, as he sat beside her gazing on the rising moon; "I ask because there are young ladies who say they are horrid."

"I don't know," she replied innocently, "whether I like one or not. I never had one on my lip."

"Oh," he exclaimed, with a long-drawn breath; then he drew her closer, and there was a sound as if a bird had chirped.

Had a Few.

A lawyer who was consulted by a young woman from the country in regard to a breach-of-promise case asked her if she had any letters to put in evidence.

"Why, yes, I believe I have," she replied.

She was told to send them in that he might look them over, and in a day or two he got a package on which was written: "I can't find but these fourteen hundred just now, but will hunt up the balance this week."

His Last Hope.

To say that he was hard up would but faintly convey the state of impecuniosity to which he was reduced, and he was seriously considering the advisability of retiring to the nearest country poorhouse, when he suddenly remembered about five dollars that was owing to him, and off he rushed to try his luck at the debt-collecting business.

"All right," growled the indebted one. "You don't suppose I am going to run away from my creditors, do you?"

"I don't suppose you are. But I am."

And that brought him half a dollar on account.

The Way to Say It.

"Which am de properest way to suppress oneself? Does yer say; 'We eated at the table, or 'We has dun ate at de table?'" asked one Toronto darkey of another, they being engaged in a grammatical discussion. As they could not agree the question was referred to Uncle Mose for his decision, which was:

"In de case ob you two niggahs none ob you am right."

"What am de proper way to say: 'We eated at de table,' Uncle Mose?'"

"De properest way for sich cattle as you two am: 'We fed at de troft.'"

She Recognized the Symptoms.

"Mary," he murmured fondly, "did you ever feel a restless fluttering of the heart because some one was absent; a sort of vacant longing which needed the dear presence of some loved personality to dispel it?"

"I have, Augustus, I have."

"Did you ever feel as if the absence of some one individual from this earth would make it uninhabitable to you—would leave it a void through which you must wander aimlessly and alone?"

"Why, yes, Augustus. I felt just that way when some cruel, wicked person went and stole my darling little pug."

And Augustus gave it up in despair.

The Meanest Husband in the World.

"I think I've got rather the meanest husband in the world," exclaimed a little woman on a car the other day.

Her friend asked her to explain, and she continued:

"I found that he was smoking fifty cents' worth of cigars per day, and I got him to agree to give me as much pin-money per week as the cigars cost. He stuck to it one week."

"And then what?"

"He bought him a clay pipe and a pound of ten-cent smoking tobacco, and my income is cut down to two cents a week."

Toronto. T. CARSLEY.

Too Much Enthusiasm.

"Teaching, to me," said an enthusiastic young school ma'am, "is a holy calling. To sow in the young mind the seeds of future knowledge and watch them as they grow and develop is a pleasure greater than I can tell. I never weary of my work. I think only of——"

"I am very sorry," interrupted the young man to whom she was talking, "that you are so devoted to your profession, Miss Clara. I had hoped that some day I might ask you—in fact I called to-night to—but I hardly dare go on, in the light of what you——"

"You may go on, Mr. Smith," said the young lady, softly. "I'm a little too enthusiastic at times, perhaps."

FARM.

Stock Notes.

A good many farmers have the idea that milk is not just right for pigs until it is soured. This is a very serious mistake. No possible good can come from souring it, but very serious harm. After you take off the cream and the water, the most that remains is caseine and sugar of milk. Both are valuable. But when you sour it you change the sugar of milk into lactic acid and lose nearly half the entire value of your milk. Feed milk sweet to calves and colts. Never let it sour if you can help it. Why will you throw away half its value?

The Farmer's (Irish) Gazette gives the following different ways of treating balky horses, which are recommended for trial: First, pat the horse on the neck, examine him carefully, first one side, then the other; if you can get him a handful of grass, give it to him, and speak encouragingly to him. Then jump into the wagon, and give the word go, and he will generally obey. Second, taking the horse out of the shafts, and turning him around in a circle until he is giddy, will generally start him. Third, another way to cure a balky horse is, place your hand over his nose and shut off his wind until he wants to go. Fourth, then, again, take a couple of turns of stout twine around the fore legs, just below the knee, tight enough for the horse to feel it; tie in a bow knot. At the first click he will probably go dancing off. After going a short distance you can get out and remove the string to prevent injury to the tendons. Fifth, again, you can try the following: Take the tail of the horse between the hind legs, and tie it by a cord to the saddle girth. Sixth, the last remedy I know, is as follows: Tie a string around the horse's ear, close to head. This will divert his attention, and start him.

POULTRY NOTES.

The farmer who keeps a flock of twenty-five to thirty hens, with the usual accompaniment of a hundred or more lively chicks, and allows them to share his domain in common with himself, his other stock and farm utensils, finds perplexity and most abominable company at every turn. The hen at large, in her multiplied form, is worse than an army of locusts, and her following as offensive as a pestilence.

An experienced poultryman thinks the essential cause of failure in so many of the attempts to keep fowls in large numbers is due to a lack of care. A farmer will rise at four o'clock in the morning to feed and milk his cows, will carefully clean out the stalls and prepare the beds for the cows, and his work does not end till late; but he will not do so much work for the hens. Yet the hens will pay, when properly cared for, five times as much profit, in proportion to labor and capital invested, as the cows.

If young chicks and turkeys appear stupid and ailing; examine them for lice. A little grease put on top of the head and under the wings will generally prove efficacious. Treat the mother in like manner. Fumigate the hen house by burning sulphur therein, making the house as close as possible for a few hours. Also wash every part with kerosene, or whitewash with caustic lime at least twice a year, and give the fowls plenty of dust or dry ashes, and there will be no trouble from lice.

The only sure way to clean out a nest should the contents become soiled, is to carry the box outside, burn the hay, and then dip a sponge in kerosene and apply a lighted match to the box, first rubbing it over with the sponge. The oil will burn for a few moments over the box and then cease. If there are any lice they will have but a poor chance. If an egg is broken in the nest the result is usually lice, unless the nest is at once cleaned, and the best mode is to begin anew with the box very clean and fresh cut hay put in.

A correspondent of the London Journal of Horticultural says, in reference to the question of sex in eggs: Last winter an old poultry keeper told me he could distinguish the sex in eggs. I laughed at him, and was none the less skeptical when he told me the following secret: Eggs with the air bladder on the centre of the crown of the egg will produce cockerels; those with the bladder one side will produce pullets. The old man was so certain of the truth of this dogma, and his poultry yard so far confirmed it, that I determined to make experiments upon it this year. I have done so, registering the egg bladder vertical, or bladder on one side, rejected all in which it was not one or the other, as in some it is only very slightly out of the center. The following is the result; Fifty-eight chickens were hatched, three are dead, eleven are yet too young to decide upon their sex; of the remaining forty-four, every one has turned out true to the old man's theory. This of course, may be an accidental coincidence, but I shall certainly try the experiment again.

DAIRY NOTES.

Butter shrinks as well as other articles and such is often the cause of errors in reports of sales when butter is shipped long distances and remains unsold for several weeks.

There is no time, says a wise man, to waste with kicking cows. If you have one, just put a hame-strap in her mouth and buckle it tightly behind her horns. Take it off when done milking, of course.

It is always best to milk rapidly, so as to get the milk out of the stable as soon as possible, in order to prevent the absorption of gases by the milk, as the cooler it becomes the more readily the milk is affected by odors.

An Iowa Agricultural College bulletin makes the following classifications of the relative values of foods as milk producers:

Potatoes, per 100 pounds	10
Corn, per 100 pounds	50
Timothy, per 100 pounds	55
Barley, per 100 pounds	60
Oats, per 100 pounds	65
Wheat, per 100 pounds	70
Wheat bran, per 100 pounds	80
Clover hay, per 100 pounds	1.45
Oil meal, per 100 pounds

A great many people are under the impression that in feeding ground food to stock it is better to make it into a slop that the animal can drink. Prof. E. W. Stewart truly says: "The saliva is an important agency in the digestion of food, and saliva is caused to flow by the act of mastication. When sloppy food is given there is no mastication. This sloppy food, then, is deprived of the usual proportion of saliva, and must depend wholly upon other agencies of digestion."

SCIENTIFIC AND USEFUL.

There are 15,000 acres of oyster beds in the Bay of Archachon, France, which yield 300,000,000 oysters a year.

Gelatine is the latest adulteration of butter. By adding gelatine, which absorbs ten times its weight of water, the consistency of the butter is retained and the water adulteration is not noticed.

It is not necessary to have different metals to obtain a current of electricity. Iron in nitric acid, the two fluids being separated by a porous partition, will give a current, one plate wasting away while the other is thickened.

Steam and gas fitters have just learned that graphite properly prepared is superior to red lead for making joints and connections. It is said that this article will not "set" under any conditions, but that it makes a perfect joint and preserves the iron from rust.

William C. Kingsley, projector of the Brooklyn bridge, estimated many years ago, in the infancy of the enterprise, that 36,000,000 persons per annum would request its maximum capacity, and that this number of people would be using the bridge in 1900. Already 27,500,000 people cross the bridge, and at the present rate of increase Mr. Kingsley's estimate may be reached in 1890, ten years before the time fixed by him.

Freshly-made glue is stronger than that which has been repeatedly melted. Too large a quantity should not, therefore, be made at a time. Glue may be freed from the foreign animal matter generally in it by softening it in cold water, washing it with the same several times, till it no longer gives out any color, then bruising it with the hand, and suspending it in a linen bag beneath the surface of a large quantity of water at 66 degrees Fahrenheit. By doing this the pure glue is retained in the bag and the soluble impurities pass through. If the softened glue be heated to 122 degrees without water and filtered, some other impurities will be retained by the filter, and a colorless solution of glue be obtained.

A new idea is a bed-spring which shall serve as a fire escape in time of danger. It consists of four sets of springs, seven feet long and just wide enough when laid together to set in a bed frame. Each set is attached to the adjoining one by a clamp, which unites iron appendages fastened to the end of the springs. These appendages add to the length of the arrangement so as to make it about thirty feet long while hanging out of the window. One side of each set of springs is fitted with rung made of wrought iron, the only part of the contrivance not of steel. The rungs, which are on the outside when the springs depend from the window, and about fifteen inches apart, form a pretty strong ladder, which may be made use of for descent.

A Turtle in the Sea.

Some years ago when doing a walking tour in England with a friend we left the pretty little seaside resort of D——, in Devonshire, for T——, five miles distant, also situated by the sea. As we were about leaving D——, I asked the hotel proprietor on bidding him adieu if he could recommend us to a nice hotel at our next halting place. He named the "King's Arms," said we should find the host a jolly fellow, and, above all, he was the only man in that part of the country who could give us a basin of real turtle soup, and cheap, too. We could scarcely believe it and the few miles flew by in joyful anticipation of our first course. Arrived at the "Kings arms" we sought "mine host," apparently a very genial soul, but to our intense surprise on mentioning turtle soup he flew into a towering rage, said we could see his bill of fair and if that didn't suit us we could leave it. We should have thought him quite insulting and turned our backs upon him but were curious to know what angered him. We stayed, had a very good dinner, minus the soup, but saw no more of the proprietor during our short sojourn. Of the waiter, however, we inquired about the turtle soup and his abruptness to us. He smiled and said: "Well, I'll tell 'e, gentlemen. Some time ago there was a large dinner coming off here and master bought a fine turtle in London (which cost £5) about a week before the dinner, and boasted to everybody that he was goin. to 'surprise the natives.' Well, a day or so before the feast a gentleman told master the turtle would enjoy a sea bath, which would improve him for the soup, so master took him down to the beach, tied a rope on his leg and sat down to watch his prize. Then," said our informant, "the old beggar (master) dropped off to sleep, let go the rope and the turtle went off to sea and so boss has been teased to death about it.

The Czar's Ambition.

The Czar's highest aim is to be crowned "Emperor of Asia" on the site of the Holy Sepulchre at Jerusalem. The Crimean War had its origin in the quarrels over the holy places in Palestine, and was a continuation of the conflict between East and West which the crusades left still unsettled. Every step of the Russians toward Constantinople is thus a step toward Jerusalem. It is of great significance that the Emperor Alexander III. confides much more upon the power of religious enthusiasm than either of his predecessors did.

He wishes to procure a more official and ostentatious consecration of his religious authority, and to have his position emphasized as the supreme protector of the Eastern churches and the Orthodox Faith, and so rally all the Greek-Oriental churches and peoples around the person and office of the Czar as the Constantine and Justinian of the modern world. This bold project has been long in preparation, is never lost sight of in any diplomatic movement, and no sacrifice of money is thought too great to secure this end. Numbers of settlements of Eastern monks, of apparently harmless and unpretending character, have been and are being founded, and Russia finds money to pay for the purchase of the land.

Lonely Jacob's Ladder.

On Mount Whitney, the highest mountain in California, at a level of 14,000 feet above the sea and 1,500 feet above the timber line, where there is no soil and no moisture save snow and hail and ice, there grows a little flower shaped like a bell-flower, gandy in colors of red, purple and blue. It is called Jacob's ladder and its fragrance partakes of the white jasmine. It blooms alone, for it has only has no floral associate, but there is no creature, not even bird or insect, to keep it company.

The Pit Brow Women.

All legislation restricting the occupations in which women may engage should be most closely watched, as what is intended for a philanthropic measure may cause great evil. An instance of the necessity of this occurred a short time ago in England. The law abolishing female labor in mines has admittedly done great good, and when a measure was introduced into the Imperial parliament preventing the employment of women at the pit-brow, it, on the face of it, looked as if it was but an extension of the principle. These pit-brow women are employed, particularly in Lancashire, to screen over and save the small coal. They earned moderately good wages, and the work while hard was neither unhealthy nor did it bring them into degrading surroundings. The plea of the advocates of the measure was that the work was unwomanly, and as a proof of this they alleged that the women committed the unpardonable offence of wearing trousers and coats when at work. The pit-brow women were not at all inclined to allow themselves to be outlawed without a protest. A strong deputation of theirs, clad in their working clothing, interviewed the Home Secretary in order to induce him to get the Government to oppose the bill. They succeeded in their efforts and have still the right to earn an honest livelihood in the open air. The underlying cause of the bill being presented was that the trades unions were desirous of getting possession of the women's branch of the work.

We all Break Down There.

He was about to die for a cold-blooded murder. Standing beneath the gallows he made a short talk. He spoke of his impending death with slight emotion. Then of "his people" with some signs of tears. Then of his wife with sobs and a trembling voice. Then of 'his old mother"—and then he broke down completely and gave way to uncontrollable grief.

Ah, yes! It is right there that we all break down. At the thought of "the old mother," with her graying hairs, her kindly face, across which time and sorrow are cutting their furrows, and her faith and affection that never wavers or doubts, It is to "the old mother" that man's heart turns at last when trouble, or affliction, or remorse overtakes him. Other loves may be stronger, and the passion of other loves may obscure this for a time. The wife clinging in absorbed happiness to the arm, or little ones, clambering, fond and trustful about the knee, may efface all thought of "the old mother." But when a great crisis comes, and the strong man is bending beneath a burden too grievous to be borne, the vision comes to him of one, idealized in his heart at least, who never doubted, who never wearied, but who loved all the time with a love that passeth understandiug. The wife wondering at this at first, accepts it at last, quietly acquiescing, but happy in her mother's heart to know that from her own children in the days to come this same miracle shall be rendered unto her!

To Discover his Fate.

Various projects are afloat in England for sending a small expedition to Khartoum to ascertain the actual fate of Gordon and to secure, if possible, the release of the hapless whites who are prisoners there. Mr. Montagu Kerr, who was a member of the New York Stock Exchange before he distinguished himself as an African explorer, has been mentioned as the leader of the proposed expedition. The Soudanese have recently shown a disposition to palaver, if not to submit, and if the new Mahdi is not nursing his wrath over the curt dismissal of the envoys he sent to Cairo last spring, it is possible that he would give a safe passage to the expedition. It would, however, be a risky venture.

The Soudan is now nearly in the condition it was in when it fell like a ripe plum into the hands of Egypt. Trade with the outside world is utterly paralyzed, and the intestine fighting of rival chiefs is weakening the central authority at Omdurman. This state of things cannot last forever, and the fact that the actual needs of the Soudanese will some day cause the barriers they had built around them to be overthrown perhaps affords a glimmer of hope to Lupton Bey and the other fellows who are now making cartridges for the Arab musketers.

Self Control.

It is a very meagre conception of self-control that would limit it to the simple restrain, of outward expression. Yet this is frequently the only idea which the word calls up. The passionate man who puts back the angry word that rises to his lips, the inquisitive man who refrains from asking impertinent questions, the loquacious man who imposes a painful silence on himself, the vain man who conceals his self-admiration, the excited man who hides his perturbed emotions under a clam exterior, are cited as illustrations of self-control, and no deeper or wider meaning is attached to it. Yet, in truth, these and similar efforts of repression, while belonging to self-control, partaking of its nature and hinting of its presence, no more comprehend it than the faint perfume of a blossom comprehends the entire plant which bore it; for they have to do only with the phenomena which self presents to the world, whereas self-control has to deal with the real self, its manifold faculties, complex characteristics, delicate variations.

Prince Bismarck's Gallantry.

An interesting anecdote of Prince Bismarck's gallantry is going the rounds of the German press. It appears that two young English ladies living in Dresden went to Berlin on a visit, and, wishing to make the most of their time wrote to the Chancellor, expressing their fervent wish to see him, whereupon they received an invitation to his palace, where they were most kindly received. A servant took them through the palace and showed them everything of interest, with which they were, of course, greatly delighted, their joy culminating when Prince Bismarck himself suddenly appeared and addressed them most kindly in fluent English, walking with them for some time in the garden before bidding them farewell.

A New Motor.

A Frenchman drove into Waterville, Maine, a few days ago, his faithful "steed" being a monstrous Newfoundland dog. He came from a town in Canada, distant 150 miles, and had been on the road three days. The driver is confident that he can outstrip the best horses in a day's journey.

A ROMANTIC STORY.

A Man Deserts His Wife, Marries Another Woman, Causes Trouble by Dying Suddenly.

A Halifax despatch says:—A most romantic story has just been made public here. Thirty-five years ago Joseph McGill deserted his wife and six children in Edinburgh and came to Halifax, but never communicated with his family or allowed them to learn of his whereabouts. He obtained employment on the Intercolonial Railway as locomotive driver, under the assumed name of Joseph McLellan. Twenty-five years ago he committed bigamy by marrying Margaret Tobin, of this city. They lived happily together, accumulated property and raised a family. Five years ago the Catholic Missioners held service here, when McGill alias McLellan confessed to Father Wissell that he was guilty of bigamy and was now going under an assumed name. Father Wissell prohibited marital relations with the second wife. For four years these were suspended, the couple with their children, but as strangers. The injunctions of the church and remorse of conscience finally compelled McGill to go to Edinburgh to enquire into the fate of his first wife and family. He went last May, found his wife had been dead two years and four of his six children dead. To the two surviving children he revealed himself as their long-lost father, confessed the story of his bigamy and shame, but promised to provide for them out of his accumulated property. Then he came back to Halifax and privately remarried the woman whom he had lived with a quarter of a century as his wife. He was married to this woman both times under his true name of McGill, though still retaining among his friends and the public the assumed name of McLellan. On the 11th of February last, he was instantly killed by falling from a locomotive and striking his head on the sharp spout of an oil can. He was sixty-six years old, left no will, but his life was insured for three thousand dollars in the Locomotive Brotherhood Association in the name of McLellan. They to his second wife, on the ground that the policy is payable to Margaret McLellan, whereas she is the widow of Joseph McGill. To complicate matters still further, deceased's eldest daughter, Mrs. Jane Fraser, arrived from Edinburgh, a few days ago, made affidavits to the Probate Court, and has been granted the administration of her father's estate, but the second wife and family are in possession and threaten a hot fight. The priest who recently remarried the couple without license is liable to two hundred dollars' fine.

LIVING UNDER THE SAME ROOF

REFUSE TO PAY THE POLICY

An Armless Man.

Recently there died at Pottsdam, New York, a wonderful man. An accident deprived him of both arms, which were amputated at the shoulder. He earned a living by using his feet and his mouth instead of his arms. We are told that he owned a horse, of which he took the entire care, harnessed it, fastened and unfastened the buckles with his teeth, and drove with the reins tied around his shoulders. Being in need of a wagon, he bought wheels and axles and built a box buggy complete and painted it. He went to the barn one winter day and built a cowstable, sawing the timber with his feet, and with the hammer in one foot and holding the nail with the other, he nailed the boards on as well as most men could do with their hands. He dug a well twelve feet deep and stoned it himself. He could move away hay by holding the fork under his chin and letting it rest against his shoulder. He could pick up potatoes in the field as fast as a man could dig them. He would dress himself, get his meals, write his letters, and, in fact, do almost anything that any man with two hands could do. Many a man with all his physical faculties, unimpaired mourns because he cannot get along, and yet this armless brother made himself independent without arms or hands. He was like the Crimean hero, who, when his lower limbs were shot away, wrote to the woman he was engaged to marry, releasing her. She answered: I will marry you if you have enough body remaining to contain your noble soul.

Russia's Royal Sorrows.

I hear from St. Petersburg that the slight improvement which recently took place in the Czarina's health has not been sustained. The Empress is a prey to a deep melancholy, and so pronounced was this some weeks ago that the Czar, in alarm, called in Dr. Bukowitz—whom, however, the Empress refused to see. The journey to the Don Cossack country somewhat roused the Empress from her sadness, but now that she is back in Gatschina the old depression is again asserting itself. The fact is that the Czarina lives in a state of constant terror, which is all the more oppressive because of the necessity of hiding it from the Czar. Then the young Czarewitch gives cause for no little anxiety. I have it upon undoubted authority that the heir apparent to the Russian throne has been pronounced by physicians to be within a measurable distance of sheer lunacy. Nor is his physical health much better than his mental condition. Of all women in the world the Czarina of Russia is most to be pitied. Her husband is in daily peril of assassination and her eldest son is on the verge of lunacy.

In Business for Herself.

Dry Goods Dealer (to saleswoman)—I was very sorry, Miss Satinette, to receive your resignation. Aren't you satisfied with your place here?

Miss Satinette—Yees, sir; but I've had the offer of a better one.

Dry Goods Dealer—Well, if it is a question of salary, Miss Satinette, I would be willing—

Miss Satinette—It is not a question of salary, sir. Young Mr. Highcollar of the furnishings department made me an advantageous offer last evening, which I accepted. I'm to be the junior member of the firm.

Kentucky Eloquence.

This is how a Kentucky orator talked about his man who was running for something or other:—"Place our banner in the hands of J. M. Sebastian, and the future will show the correctness of my assertion that high over the thunder-riven crag of politics will it float throught the dark hours of the strife, and, when the struggle shall have ended, aloft over the thirty-fourth district will its ample folds spread forth, and with wild acclaim of joy will we see emblazoned thereon in burning letters of light the legend of glorious triumph—Victory."

AGENTS WANTED
APPLY TO THE C. W. BEADLE NURSERY CO. St. Catharines, Ont.

CHURNS. Margine, three kinds; Clothes Wringers, ten kinds; Washing Machines, 2 kinds, Carpet Sweepers, Meat Choppers, Trucks, and other sundries. HAMILTON INDUSTRIAL WORKS CO., Hamilton, Canada. Send for article wanted or Illustrated Catalogue.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships.
Sailing during winter from Portland every Thursday, and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers to Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via Halifax and St. John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal, weekly, Glasgow and Boston weekly; and Glasgow and Philadelphia, fortnightly. For Freight, passage, or other information apply to J. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's N. F., Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans Rae & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; R. A Allan Portland Boston Montreal

Bicycles!
SEND AT ONCE FOR LIST of Second-Hand Machines, From $15 Upwards. New Catalogue Ready 1st April. A. T. LANE MONTREAL

ONTARIO CANOE COMPANY Peterboro', Ont

MANUFACTUR'S OF ALL KINDS OF CANOES. Send 2c. Stamp for Catalogue.

J. L. JONES WOOD ENGRAVER 10 King St East TORONTO.

THE greatest discovery of the present age for Rheumatism THE DYSPEPSIA, AND DISEASE ALL BLOOD, LIVER AND KIDNEY COMPLAINTS. A perfect Blood Purifier, known in Hamilton who have been benefited by its use:—Mrs. M. Keenan, 192 Robert St., cured of Erysipelas of 2 years' standing; Robert Cornell, 24 South St., daughter cured of Epileptic Fits after 5 years' suffering; James Burns, 55 Walnut St., cured of Weakness and Lung Trouble; John Wood, 95 Cathcart St., cured of Liver Complaint and Biliousness, used only 3 fifty-cent bottles; Mrs. J. Beal, 6 Augusta St., troubled for years with Nervous Prostration, two small bottles gave her great relief. Sold at 50c. & $1.
F. F. DALLEY & CO., Proprietors.

BABY'S BIRTHDAY.

A Beautiful Imported Birthday Card sent to any baby whose mother will send us the names of two or more other babies, and their parents' addresses. Also a handsome Diamond Dye Sample Card to the mother and much valuable information.
Wells, Richardson & Co., Montreal.

The National Electrotype Co.
23 ADELAIDE ST. E., TORONTO.
All classes of fine work. Mfrs. of Printers' Leads, Slugs and Metal Furniture. Send for prices.

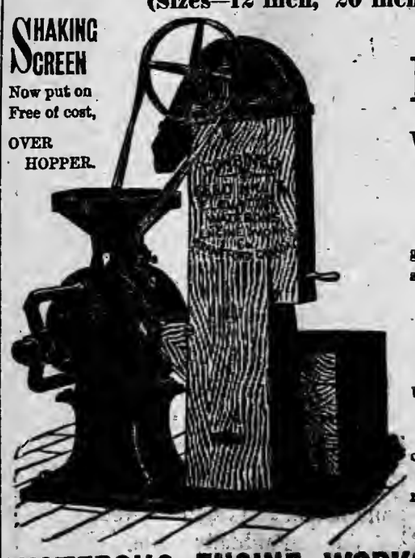
THE WHITE THRESHING ENGINE OF LONDON, ONT. A FULL SUPPLY FOR 1887

CONSUMPTION.
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer. Give express and P. O. address.
DR. T. A. SLOCUM,
Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto

Farmers and Threshers!
USE ON YOUR MACHINERY ONLY THE WELL-KNOWN

PeerlessOil
NINE GOLD MEDALS Have been awarded it during the last four years. Try also PEERLESS AXLE GREASE, for your Waggons and Horse Powers.
Manufactured at QUEEN CITY OIL WORKS, by
SAMUEL ROGERS & CO. TORONTO.

L. D. SAWYER & CO., Hamilton, Ont.
MANUFACTURERS OF
"L. D. S." ENGINES,
WOOD, COAL AND STRAW BURNERS,
PLAIN AND TRACTION,
"Grain Saver" and "Peerless" SEPARATORS.
"Pitts" Horse Powers, for 2, 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12 Horses.
Tread Powers, for 1, 2 and 3
Eclipse Separators, for Tread & Small Powers.
Send for Illustrated Catalogue



GURNEY'S
Standard Hot-air Furnaces
HAVE NO EQUAL.

PRICES TO SUIT ALL DEALERS
THE "BOYNTON,"
" "HARRIS,"
" "MAMMOTH,"
" "MONARCH."
Send for Price List and Illustrated Catalogue.
EVERY FURNACE GUARANTEED
THE E. & C. GURNEY COMPANY, (L'T'D),
TORONTO, HAMILTON MONTREAL, AND WINNIPEG

STANDARD CHOPPING MILLS!
(Sizes—12 inch, 20 inch, 30 inch, 42 inch),
SHAKING SCREEN Now put on Free of cost, OVER HOPPER.

USING Best French Burr Stones,
With and Without Elevator Attachment, as Shown in Cut.
With Elevator one man can attend to mill and grind 10 to 35 bushels per hour, depending on power size of mill, and degree of fineness meal is ground.
FRENCH BURR STONES,
Used in these mills, are acknowledged by all the best grinders in the world.
The Mills are exceedingly simple; any one with common sense can run them successfully.
Send in orders early, as our season's output is rapidly going.
WATEROUS ENGINE WORKS CO., Brantford, Canada, and St. Paul, Minn., U. S. A.

Markdale Standard.

C. W. Rutledge, Proprietor.

MARKDALE, JULY. 14, 1887.

ALLEN'S SINK HOLE.

In reference to the dangerous place in the public highway, known as 'Allen's Sink Hole," Mr. Thos. Campbell gives a very wise suggestion and one which might be acted upon with good and economical results, viz—to make a deviation say ten or twelve rods to one side of the present road.

It is well known that since the gravel road was built, some 25 years ago, the road has continued to sink from year to year, and the result ascribed is, that the cutting of the ditches severed what held the road up, and then the hundreds of tons of stone and gravel which has since been hauled upon that portion of the highway in order to fill up the sinking road has only tended to make matters worse, there being no apparent bottom. Now if a deviation was made and no ditches cut, but simply lay the road several feet deep with cedar trees full length crossways and cover with gravel, the probabilities are that a permanent road would be the result. The idea is at least worthy of serious consideration on the part of officials.

CROP PROSPECTS.

The business prospects for Canada seems bright, if we may judge from the weather we may have enjoyed in this neighborhood. There was first the exceptionally heavy snow, then an exceptionally rapid drying of the ground. The leaves and herbage sprang suddenly into healthy and vigorous life, leaving all destroyers behind them. Plenty of moisture and plenty of heat have followed the good beginning and everthing suggests a good harvest. Like conditions have not prevailed in large parts of the United States. Continued droughts in Kansas, Nebraska and the central tier of States, have reduced the expectations of the farmers to a minimum. Such a set-back will be serious for our neighbors as they are at present indulging in utterly unexampled expenditures. Thousands of millions are being spent in buildings and railways. In fact, while the United States seems to be at the very summit of its decennial boom and the crest of its wave of prosperity seems in danger of breaking into foam, Canada has not reached that point of danger toward which business prosperity inevitably tends.

—The gross net debt of the Dominion on the 30th June was $225,025,762.

—The Ontario Government have ratified the scheme in connection with Toronto University.

—It is expected that by the end of the present season there will have been at least one thousand new buildings erected this year in Montreal.

—A land slide at Zug, Switzerland, occurred last week in which a portion of the town sank into the river drowning some seventy persons and leaving six hundred homeless.

—The C. P. R, and Grand Trunk freight and traffic receipts are netting them a gain of from $20,000 to $40,000 a week in excess of correspoding period last year.

—The new postoffice division, with headquarters at Stratford, will consist of the Counties of Perth, South riding, and Huron, and the township of North and South Easthope, in Oxford County to be detached from the London division; North Perth, Wellington and Waterloo, to be taken from the Toronto division; and the Counties of Bruce, South Grey and North Grey, to be withdrawn from the Barrie division. Mr. Hopkirk, late private secretary to Sir. Alexander Campbell, has been appointed inspector of the division.

—The union of the Dominion and Industrial Exhibitions this year at Toronto will have the results of producing probably the finest exhibition, with accompaning entertainments, that has yet taken place in Canada. An unusually large number of entries is already assured, and although over $30,000 has been expended in new buildings, every inch of space will be occupied with exhibits. The attendance promises to be immense. Railway rates have been secured at a lower figure than heretofore. The special attractions are advertised as ahead of anything heretofore.

Osprey.

From our own Correspondent.

The Salvation Army continues to hold forth at Feversham with considerable success. Capt. Rowe leaves this week but his place will be supplied.

Mrs. Chas. E. Neil is dangerously ill with an abscess on her jaw, also erysipelas.

Hay is the great rush and a fine crop it is. Harvest will follow it close, barley and fall wheat being now coloring. Prospects never were better for an abundant harvest.

Flesherton.

From our own correspondent.

Monday last our township fathers met for council business in the Town Hall. The improvements lately made on the council chambers make it a more desirable place to spend the day in.

Monday was also fair day. There was a large turn out of bovines; a good number changed hands..

Some thousands of people assembled in Flesherton on Tuesday last, the 12th of July, to celebrate that memorable day. The town was gaily decorated; bunting was displayed in abundance; shop fronts gaily decorated, and flags floating in the breeze from almost every house top. The rather sickening looking twin arches, erected on the square looked as if they had scarcely come to maturity. If left up they may grow and present a better appearance next 12th. Nine lodges of Orangemen were present. About 11 a. m. those from the South and East had arrived and assembled on the square; after waiting some time for others to arrive, and the day being very warm, they were dismissed for dinner; and not until about 12 o'clock did the several lodges from the North arrive, being led by the Markdale Brass Band. All soon found comfortable quarters; and after dinner and some time to rest, there was a general muster on the square again, and from there marched to the Park where several speakers held forth for some time. We cannot now give a synopsis of what was said, but the speeches of the day were of an exceedingly high order. Special praise has been given ts Mr. Jansen, the Berkeley Presbyterian student, a young man of rare ability. The speakers were Rev. S. J. Corcoran, D. D. G. M.; Thos. Watson (Babtist,) A. Wilson (Presbyterian.) Jansen (Presbyterian,) and J. W. Shilton (Methodist). After hearty and loyal cheers for Queen and Country, the very large assembly marched back to the square in the village, when all were dismissed and the several lodges started for home after spending in our village a very pleasant and enjoyable day.

The Ladies' Aid of the Presbyterian church purpose holding a garden party on Mr. S. Damude's lawn on Friday evening next. All are welcome.

To Bro. John Shea:—

We the members of L. O. L. 1045, feel that it would be quite beyond the power of words to express our true sympathy with you in the great affliction you have sustained in the death of your wife. But, dear brother, our hearts go out to you in this your dark hour of sorrow in true heartfelt sympathy. The hand that has so long ministered to your wants and removed the thorns that may have fallen around your pathway has been stilled, and the music of her loved voice has been hushed, yet the agony of your bereavement will be somewhat softened upon the reflection that it is only a brief seperation and soon there will be an ecstatic meeting with the friends we have loved and lost and whom we shall still love and never lose again. Let this be your consolation and God bless you.

Faithfully yours,

L. O. L. 1045,

COMMERCIAL UNION

—BETWEEN—

Canada and the United States,

is now being largely discussed throughout the Dominion with the preponderence of public opinion in favor of union; whether union with our cute Yankey Brothers would cure the ills we labor under or not, McFarland sayeth not, but he does most decidedly say that if you want to reap the greatest advantage from your cash or produce you must (if you have not already done so) form a union with McFarland's Immense Establishment, where you can get the choice of largest stock of choice goods at close prices, North of Toronto. This week I have opened out and placed in stock. New Grey Dress Goods; New Cream Dress Goods; New Black Dress Goods; New Olive Green Dress Goods; New Browns Fawn; Eclectric Blues & Fancy Dress Goods, with Trimmings and Buttons to match.

Pearl Buttons, Hair Nets, Corsets, and Gloves, Josephines best Kid Gloves light shades only 50 cents pair, sold everywhere at $1.25.

500 pairs Womans Cotton Hose dark colors 12½ cents a pair.

607½ yds. Light Ground Prints fast colors 10½ cents.

Good Washing Dress Muslins 6 cents, one case white and cream Oriental Laces at 5 8 10, 12½ and 15 cents being balance of a wholesale stock and without exageration the chepest laces ever offered in Markdale.

7 Cases New Boots and Shoes, Mens Womens and Childrens at close prices.

47 Boxes New Nobby Ties, Shirts, Braces, and Underware.

A second shipment of that 30c. Cashmere 45 inches wide.

1200 doz. Buttons 5 cents per dozen, stock well assorted. Prices right. Corteous treatmpnt to all.

W. J. McFARLAND,

Direct Importer.

MARKDALE.

Jubilee Sale

Every body is interested in the great

CLEARING SALE

TO

Commence on the 15th July

AT

J. G. ANDERSON'S

Our stock being yet very large and the fall goods will soon be to hand, we have decided to have a great clearing sale to last for 30 days. The goods will positively be sold at slaughtered prices so you can make no mistake by coming prepared to take away with you a good large parcel.

Remember this is no Sham, the goods must be Sold.

Amongst the goods offered will be found special lines in Men's, Women's, and Childrens, Boots, Shoes and Slippers. Straw and Felt Hats, Gents' Ties, Fine White and Regatta Shirts. In the Ladies' Department there will be found a large range of summer and autumn, Dress-Goods, Embroidery, Laces, Gloves, and Hosiery, &c., these goods are all new and well worth inspection.

A special line of teas at a decided Bargain. Come in and see for yourself.

Come early before the Rush, so you can get properly waited on and get the rst choice of the goods.

J. G. Anderson's,

MAMMOTH HOUSE,

MARKDALE.

MARKDALE CARRIAGE WORKS.

R. McNALLY:—Would hereby announce to the people of Markdale and the public generally that I have moved into my new carriage shop opposite the Markdale House, where I will manufacture every article in the wagon and carriage line, and having long experience in the business, and by using first class material, I can guarantee satisfaction to every one who will favor me with their order.

Repairing, Painting and Trimming promptly attended to.

A call respectfully solicited,

R. McNALLY, Proprietor

MARKDALE SAsH and DOOR FACTORY.

Having erected and fitted up in every detail a Sash, Door and Plain Factory, containing all the latest and most approved machinery, everything being new, I am now prepared to turn out

Sash, Doors, Blinds, Mouldings, Hollow Battons,

FRAMES, LATH, FENCE PICKETS, &c.,

And everything needed in the building trade, in a manner second to none in Canada, and having engaged superior mechanics in every department, I would now respectfully solicit public patronage.

Every Effort Made to fill Orders Promptly

PINE LUMBER Dressed and Undressed

Direct from North Shore, all sizes, on hand. Plain and Fancy Turning done.

Careful Attention to Orders from a Distance.

303 THOS. McNEA.

Massey Agency,

Holland Centre.

TORONTO Light Binder wood frame 5 & 6 feet cut

MASSEY Harvester

TORONTO MOWER, one and two horse.

MASSEY MOWER.

SHARP'S RAKE.

A full stock of repairs kept constantly on hand for the above machines.

REPAIRS STRICTLY CASH.

Also agent for Hall's patent reversible HayCarrior, Manufactured by Cochrine Bro's, St. Thomas, and Fox Pea Harvester, Owen Sound.

THOS. WILLISCROFT, Agent.

Improvement Associations.

Editor of the STANDARD.

Sir,—Having missed the paper in ...ve gave an article on the above sub... reading in your issue of the 23rd ... month an invitation by Ebenezer ... to express our opinion on the use... "Natural Improvement Associa... possibly contribute my little mite to ... and elevating scheme.

...here is a great want in our large and ... Villages, no one, who has an interes... moral and intellectual welfare of our ..., will dispute for a moment.

...e the male population of our ... from a moral or social point of ... may divide them into three classes. ... are those young and other men ... with their daily toil or business ... over and above that to spend ... wages across the bar in the ... Here not only the money is wasted, ... morals and virtues are corrupted ... use of alcohol the brain becomes ...

...nd class of persons are those, who ... completed their days work and ... to the bar-room or strong drink ... but they seek for the easiest ... in the room and quietly, or ... to go to the land of nod, or ... company all together only to be ... nothing, having not the least ... to that important part which ... Creator has given to us, namely, ... faculties.

...d class of persons are those who do ... intoxicated drinks, although I ... in certain places 'Licens... drinks." Neither is ... inclined to much sleeping, ... to take up the ... useful book, to get ... but they keep all ... themselves.

...we find many persons who ... room or to the sleep... of the house or home, would ... a decent comfortable ... where they could spend ... in something pro... third class of persons re... reading and giving infor... it a delight to give their ... others less gifted.

...believe that it would be a ... young men and older ... to our homes. ... to feel that we have more ... were in power they would feel ... more possessed of ... they are capable of im... in many things useful ...

...Mechanical, Mora... would look as it was ... public platform, Eneel... Hilton. Life ... Towers now ... by the smoke ... and persons ... other for a ... to have a public debate on some ... subject for the ... population and then when ... would know who ... Town or Village ...

...say, that our youngmen ... advantages for such as... to take. But is the babe ... Was the city of ... the bash con... the farm? I think ... on a large scale ... towns or villages ... Are our youngmen born ... than the city folks? not ... been many great men in ... and why not ... may not be so much ... city people, but by ... they will become ... that there may not be a ... one day may be... the nation, if he sets his ... in action? It is certain, ... often think, and many read ... Can we not try to put our ... and bring these papers ... meeting, and after ... improved by a proper gentle... Speaking from personal ... say that these Associations ... means of help to me, on ... the public platform, to say ... to say.

...conclusion, some may say "ad... the usefulness and desirablity o... Improvement Associations,—where can ... such meetings? Certainly not in the ... or parlor of the tavern; there are ... places. If we have no Town Halls ... other halls. We have for instance ... Centre Mr. Hanley's and Mr. ... Halls, and in other places we have ... or an Orange Hall, can these ... not be had by kind request and a small ...?

...believe that there are no hinderance ... if there is a real desire to rise in in... and Moral improvements among ... young and old.

I hope that some gifted men—such as Ministers, Doctors and others may soon start and call the youngmen aronnd them giving them the helping hand in all what may ennoble.

With many thanks &c., &c,

I am,

A FRIEND TO ALL.

ALL WELL PLEASED.—The children like Dr. Low's Pleasant Worm Syrup and parents rejoice over its virtue.

FARM FOR SALE.

Being lot 5, south east quarter of 6 and and west half 6, con. 11, Euphrasia, will be sold cheap and on easy terms, also Saw Mill on lot 5, in good running order. For further particulars apply to

JAMES STINSON,

358-61* Markdale

WEAVING.

Having returned to Markdale, in order to be more convenient for my customers, I beg to announce that I am now prepared to do all kinds of Custom Weaving. Residence old stand, opposite Presbyterian Church.

313 ARCH. BOYD.

WE WANT!

100 GOOD MEN at once, to sell for the Fonthill Nurseries (largest in Canada over 465 acres) steady employment and no lost time, liberal commission or salary, best advantages; splended outfit furnished free any pushing man can succeed. Apply for terms to,

STONE & WELLINGTON,

Toronto, Ont

PROF. LOW'S SULPHUR SOAP is a delightful toilet luxury as well as a good curative for skin disease,

---

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT 131 con 3 west of T. & S, Rd. Artemesia. 50 acres, about 20 acres clear of stumps and stones, balance good hardwood bush. Five miles from Markdale and four from Flesherton. For further particulars apply to A. S. Thompson. Flesherton P. O. or J. J. Thompson, Crilla.

342-ft

SIGHT v. BLINDNESS.

N. STANLEY'S

CELEBRATED.

English Spectacles

79 BAY STREET, TORONTO CANADA.

—AND—

13 JEWIN STREET, LONDON E. C. ENGLAND.

—:x:—

R. L. Stephen's,

CHEMIST & DRUGGIST, Markdale

Has the Agency for the sale of the above in MARKDALE. No Spectacles in the Market equal them in the EYE PRESERVING QUALITIES they possess, or the GREAT EASE and COMFORT they confer on the wearer.

Their use will in actuality so strengthen the Eyes that it does not become necessary to change them for many years. They are therefore the CHEAPEST.

THEY ARE THE BEST IN THE WORLD
THEY NEVER TIRE THE EYE
AND LAST MANY EYARS WITHOUT CHANGE.

The Sight tests by our New Test Card, same as used by the leading Oculists throughout the world. 357-409

---

6 PER CENT.

Money loaned on Farm or Town Property at lowest rates of interest. Apply to

R. J. SPROULE,

Conveyancer & Postmaster, Flesherton.

Collingwood and Georgin Bay Line.

Royal Mail.

In connection with the Northern and North-Western R'ys, and the Grand Trunk R'y.

Str. PACIFIC, Captain P. M. Campbell.
Str. ATLANTIC, Captain R. D. Foote.
Str. NORTHERN BELLE, Capt. W. J. Bassett.

The fine new Steamers "PACIFIC" & "ATLANTIC" will run as follows during the season (weather permitting.)

Leaving Collingwood at 1 p. m.; Meaford at 3 p. m.; Owen Sound at 8 p. m.; and Wiarton at 11:45 p. m.; every

Wednesday and Saturday.

For Killarney, Manitowaning, Little Current, Kagawong, Gore Bay, Spanish River, Serpent River, Algoma Mills, Blind River, Thessaion, Bruce Mines, Hilton, St. Joseph's Island, Garden River, and Sault St. Marie.

The Saturday Steamer only will call at Cockburn Island.

MACKINAW.—During the summer season the above steamers will continue the trip on to the Island of Mackinaw making six full days of a round trip at a cost of $12.00 only including meals and berth.

For information as to freight and fares. Apply to any Agent of the above Railways, the Pursers on board the steamers, or to the Great Northern Transit Co., Collingwood.

THOS. LONG, Secretary. CHAS. CAMERON, Manager

NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that any person or persons found trespassing or fishing on the farms of the undersigned will be prosecuted according to law without further notice.

Signed:—

John B. Thibaudeau,
Edward Brady,
William Brady,
John Shears,
Wm. McNally,
James Elliott,
Adam Hislop,
John Webber.
Thos. Brady
James Brady,
Wm. McCutcheon
Geo. Richardson,
George McNally,
James Stinson,
Robt Graham.
John Perkins.

BE SURE & GET YOUR

PUMPS,

—FROM—

J. T. QUINN,

MARKDALE.

He makes as good a pump as there is in the market, and at the lowest possible prices, besides it is so convenient for getting repairs besides when buying from a distance.

Have some style about you and support home enterprise by buying from Quinn.

HEAD QUARTERS

—FOR—

Books, tationery, Fancy Goods, Toys, Wall Paper, &c.

Toronto St. next Door to the Mansion House, Markdale.

A. Dinsmore returns his sincere thanks for the very liberal support accorded him since commencing as above, and hopes by strict attention to business and moderate prices to merit a continuance of public appreciation and patronage. Those requiring

WALL PAPERS

would consult their own interest by examining his stock, consisting of over Three Thousand pieces at from 5 to 75c. per Roll. Sunday Schools requiring Liberary Books will find Hundreds to select from and at such FAVORABLE TERMS as are sure to satisfy.

☞ Note the fact.—That until I commenced business there was no such thing as a special discount allowed to Sunday Schools, or if you wanted Books could not get them unless by sending to Toronto or elsewhere, now your wants can be supplied at your Door and at lower prices than Toronto. I therefore with confidence appeal for public support. A full line of School Books, Stationery, &c., always on hand, also agent for the DOMESTIC PAPER PATTERNS. Agent also for The Harden Star Hand Grenade for Extinguishing Fires. ☞ NOTE THE ADDRESS,

A. Dinsmore.

New Tailor.

Will Stoddart, late of England and Jersy City, U. S. begs to inform the citizens of MARKDALE and surrounding community, that he has opened a TAILORING SHOP over Mr. W. J. McFarland's Store, where he is prepared to do all work entrusted to him in the Latest and Nobbiest Styles; as I will inspect all work before leaving the Shop, customers may rely on having work turned out first-class in every particular; trusting that I may receive a fair share of the public patronage

I remain,
Faithfully your's,
WILL STODDART.

Markdale, March 14th, 1887.

New General Provision Store

THE undersigned would hereby respectfully intimate to the inhabitants of Markdale and surrounding country that I've opened up a general Provision store where I intend to keep on hand a general supply of all kinds of provisions such as:—

FLOUR, OATMEAL, CORNMEAL INDIAN CORN, GRASS SEED, OATS, BRAN, SHORTS, CHOPP, SCREENINGS. also a quantity of SEED GRAIN, HAMS, BACON, LARD, &c., in fact everything people want in this line.

Shop one door west of Joe Lamb's Blacksmith shop.

Soliciting a share of public patronage I am respectfully youre,

Jas. Miller
MARKDALE.

THE PLACE

—TO GET—

PURE PARIS GREEN

—AT—

Stephen's Drug Store.

—THE—

PLACE

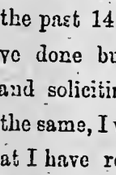
TO GET THE BEST GRADE

—OF—

Hellobore! Hellobore!

—AT—

Stephen's Drug Store.



—THE—

Place to get Stanley's Spectacles which are the best at

Stephen's Drug Store.

Pure Cream of Tarter, Tested Baking Soda, and Pure Spices of all kinds.

R. L. Stephen.

R. S. Rae,  Tailor.

REMOVED.

In returning thanks to my numerous customers for liberal patronage during the past 14 years in which I have done business in Markdale, and soliciting a continuance of the same, I would also intimate that I have removed to my premises on Mill Street, next door to Stephen's Drug Store, and opposite to the Post Office, where I shall be happy to meet all my customers.

Respectfully Yours,

R. S. RAE,

Markdale

TORONTO HOUSE.

I am offering this week Ready-Made Clothing, and

BOOTS & HOE

—AT—

astonishingly low prices. Persons requiring a summer outfit would do well to see my stock.

Wm Brown.

For Sale or to Rent.

ONE of the best farms in Artemesia township, being lots 115 and 116 third range west of T. & S. Road, three miles from Markdale, comprising 100 acres, over 80 of which is cleared and in good state of cultivation, well fenced, young and old orchard, watered with never failing spring and good well, brick house, good carriage house and stable and two log barns. Possession will be given after harvest. For further particulars apply on the premises to,

JOHN WHITBY,

Markdale, P. O.

MIRACULOUS.—"My Miraculous Cure was that I had suffered from kidney disease for about two years, was off work all that time. A friend told me of B. B. B., I tried it, and am happy to say that I was cured by two bottles." Wm. Tier, St. Marys, Ont.

OWEN SOUND

MARBLE WORK

H. B. HARRISON

MANUFACTURER OF

MARBLE AND GRANITE

MONUMENTS & HEADSTONES

Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.

JUST RECEIVED

3 Carloads Finest Variegate Marble

☞ Largest stock in the Dominion select from. Personally selected at the quarries in Vermont. Will be sold at prices which defy competition.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

N. B.—Beware of Monuments and Headstones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered together, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide the imperfections, and called White Bronze.

H. B. HARRISON

ROBT. ASKIN,

UNDERTAKER,

MARKDALE.

FUNERAL FURNISHINGS

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—

FURNITURE

In Stock at bottom prices.

PICTURE FRAMING

Done on short notice.

ROBT. ASKIN.

WM. BREADNER.

Carpender and Builder

GEORGE ST., MARKDALE.

ALL kinds of building and house carpenter work done in the village or country. Call early before the rush comes. 339-52

CARD OF THANKS.

In thanking my customers for their liberal patronage in the past. I have much pleasure in being still able to supply them with the following celebrated machines, viz.

The Watson all-steel two-horse twine Binder.
The Watson Deering Binder.
The Watson Improved Lion Reaper.
The New Humming Mower.
The Humming-bird Mower.
The Watson Daisy Rake.
The Mann Champion Rake.
The Tolton Pea Harvester.
The Mann Broad-cast Seeder and Harrows Combined.
The Champion Combined Drill, Colter & Scott, Oshawa.
The best Plow's and Harrows in the market.
Root Cutters, Grain Crushers, Fanning mills. Land Rollers.
Agent for the Watterson's Co's Machinery and Steam Threshers.
Horse Powers, Wagon's Buggies, Democrats, and every implement a farmer requires. Parties reqiring anything in above lines will find it to their advantage to call at my new implement house opposite R. McNally's Carriage works, where Mr. R. Robertson will be pleased to wait on customers in my absence.

J. H. CARSON, Agent

148-61 Markdale.

CANADIAN PACIFIC R. R.

TIME TABLE.

—Markdale Station—

GOING SOUTH.	6.47 a. m.	3.52 p. m
GOING NORTH.	12.02 p. m.	9.10 p. m

THE KEY TO HEALTH.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

Unlocks all the clogged avenues of the Bowels, Kidneys and Liver, carrying off gradually without weakening the system, all the impurities and foul humors of the secretions; at the same time Correcting Acidity of the Stomach, curing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Headaches, Dizziness, Heartburn, Constipation, Dryness of the Skin, Dropsy, Dimness of Vision, Jaundice, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Scrofula, Fluttering of the Heart, Nervousness and General Debility; all these and many other similar Complaints yield to the happy influence of BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

Sample Bottles 10c; Regular size $1.

For sale by all dealers.

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, Toronto

THE LIME-KILN CLUB.

"If Cataline Rombustus Pierson ar' in de hall to-night I should like to hev him step dis way," said Brother Gardner as he wiped his spectacles on his elbow and turned his gaze into the southeast corner.

Cataline, who is a young man of 22, very stiff in the back and of ancient ancestry, come forward with a bland smile on his face and his coat buttoned tightly around him.

"Brudder Pierson," continued the President in a fatherly way, "I haf had an eye on you fur some time back. Ar' dat a dimun pin you has on?"

"No, sah—It's glass."

"I thought so. Is dar' anything at de end of dat watch chain?"

"No, sah."

"Gold chain?"

"No, sah."

"Hows dat suit of cloze, Brudder Pierson—paid fur or not?"

"N-no, sah, but I'ze gwine to pay."

"Oh, your ar'! De tailor was ober to see me las' nite about 'em. Please lemme see dat big roll of money you war carryin' around yesterday."

"I'ze dun took it apart, sah. It was only a two-dollar bill wrapped around a rag."

"Jist as I 'spected! How's yer bo'd, Brudder Pierson?"

"Three weeks behind, sah, but I'ze gwine to pay up."

"Dat's good news. Owe any borrowed money?"

"Y-yes, sah, but I'ze gwine to pay it back."

"Den, to sum up, you doan' own de cloze on your back. You ar' cheatin' de public wid a glass dimun, a brass watch chain, an' you am dodgin' creditors in ebery direction All dis fer what? To put on a leedle style. Brudder Pierson, you am a deceiver; you am a hypocrite; you am a liar. Dar am a heap ob white folks just like you. Sooner dan let the world know dey am poo' dey will commit a crime. Whar dey orter w'ar kaliko dey will buy velvets; whar dey orter pay deir milk bills dey will use deir money to go to de grand opera. Meet 'em on de street an' you'd think dey owned a bank. Go to deir homes an' you'd think you'd stumbled into de poo'-house.

"I doan' understan', Brudder Pierson, why you feel called upon to swell. Dem cloze won't hide yer black face; dem fashnubal gaiters won't reduce de size of yer feet; a brass watch chain an' a glass diamun am not gwine to boost ye into high society an' hold ye thar very long. How does you reason dis case, Brudder Pierson?"

"I—I doan' know."

"Well, sah you resoom yer seat. De nex' time you appear heah dat chain an' dimun must be missin'. I'll give you just two weeks to part yer ha'r away from de middle. In abo' fo' weeks, if dat oo'd bill ain't paid up an' de tailor feelin' safe about his money, sunthin' will drap. It will drap hard, an' it will hit you!" Dis club believes in kaliker shirts an' cash down fur grub; in stoga shoes an' house-rent all paid up; in Kentucky-jeans an' no bill at de butcher's; in paper collars an' no dodging creditors. Sit down, Brudder Pierson, an' think it ober."

A MAN WITH A GRIEVANCE.

The Secretary announced the following from Ottawa, Canada:

BROTHER GARDNER—It has now become the practice for members of different societies the world over to appeal to the Lime-Kiln Club for a judicial decision on everything that has become a matter of grievance or debate. The sagacity of mind and patient inquiry brought to bear by yourse f on questions referred for your consideration is fully recognized. The consequence is that every one appealing to your club feels that his case will be settled on the ground of common sense and justice.

Now, Brother Gardner, my name is Originality Langshan, and I am a man with a grievance. I am a member of the society of the Knights of the Tin Cross. It is a society for the promotion of all kinds of purity of speech and tender care of the feminine sex and the prevention of the alienation of the affections of the wife from the husband. Like every other society for the benefit and solicitude of mankind it has principles which its members are not expected to live up to. It is a society for the benefit of those who are under suspicion and anyone not under a cloud has no use for the society. The inducements held out to the poor wayfarer tired of self-indulgence and the hard path of transgression, are, first, the society will make an angel of him if the material is not too coarse, and second, the candidate is promised to be sent on deputations to the neighboring villages to propagate the principles of the order and establish a club. The members are admitted by a fee and the changes in the character are not wrought by any silent process of elevation. The feelings are harrowed up by laying bare every tender spot you have taken the greatest care to keep covered up, then you are kept on the ragged edge of expectation for three weeks awaiting to be sent on the promised deputation. In addition to all this you are under the salutary restraint of being watched by the brothers, who are ready to pick you up before you fall and to jump on you with both feet when down.

I ain't come to the grievance yet, but I'm getting there. The chairman of the club at the last fortnightly meeting announced from the chair that he had "received a communication from Hangback Dickinson, of Ironsides, requesting that a deputation be sent from this city to rejuvenate the painfully dormant state of the morals of that much neglected village. I therefore nominate Originality Langshan and Metaphysics Johnsted to take the necessary steps to proceed to Ironsides to establish a club of the Knights of Tin Cross at that place. It is understood that the deputatien need not start until after pay day, as they are at liberty to pay their own expenses and charge the same to the newly established club."

The preliminaries have been arranged, excursion tickets purchased, and with a plug hat, white ties and several times marked down bran new dusters, we got on board the cars: the conductor shouted "let er go Smith," and she went. The receiving committee at Ironsides failed to connect, and Metaphysics Johnsted and the narrator had to depend upon their own unassisted efforts to find the hall. Metaphysics opened the meeting by ostentatiously saying he would address the meeting on the subject of metaphysics, and physiology as connected with the principles of the Order of the Knights of the Tin Cross. Metaphysics enjoyed his own speech and the audience enjoyed a siesta. The abstract statements were "too much" for the audience and they failed to catch on from the beginning to the end. As the poet has already said:

"There is a speech which is mute."

I was assigned to the silent but more or ignal and practical work of passing around the tracts containing the great principles of the order to the audience, which was proceeded with, and again as the poet has said:

"There is a silence that speaks."

At the conclusion of the proceedings Brother Hangback Dickinson arose and said: "I move a vote of thanks to Brother Originality Langahan for tee original, ubiquitous, vivacious and versatile manner in which he has distributed the tracts. Original, because it requires a man with a great head, who has a genius for that sort of thing; it is such a gigantic, intellectual effort that but few men could stand it without bringing on softening of the brain. He is vivacious and agile, because the manner in which he clambered over the backs of the seat shows that his experience in climbing over the fence into the melon patch has been turned to good purpose. The radiant and summer butter expression of countenance shows the satisfaction he takes in the work assigned to him, therefore I have great pleasure in moving for a vote of thanks to Originality Langshan, and also that this club give its note of hand for the expenses of the deputation, to be paid when there is money in the treasury."

After the vote of thanks was carried I arose and said the vote of thanks was accepted, and, fellow-brethren of the Knights of the Tin Cross, as you are aware, this is no teetotal fociety, we are waiting with suppressed expectation for the hospitality usual on occasions of this kind; furthermore hospitality is measured by the quality of the cordial and the size of the glasses. If there are six or seven inches of beer surrounded by cut glass it is an evidence of refined and elegant generosity, if it is a bucket with a tin dipper it is an evidence of generous hospitality without the elegance, but if Brother Hangback Dickamson is to squeeze the curse of Canada out of a jar from under his arm into a broken saucer, then it is evidence of lack of apprecirtion of the capacity of this deputation, and their efforts to night will be like the little flower that wastes its fragrance on the desert air. Under the saucer business a deputation whose members are constitutionally as dry as a lime burner's boot would lose too much time getting their skins full.

It is unnecessary to add that the hospitality was of the very highest standard. The whole proceedings were brought to b successful close by proposing the ultimate success of the Wyandotte Guild, of the Knights of the Tin Crois, by Brother Metaphysics Johnstead, who scoffed the contents of the flowea vase in which the lilacs had been sleeping for a whole week.

Now, Brother Gardner, comes the grievance

In the daily paper of this city, which has an intermittent existence, but generally manages to get out on "Every Saturday," there appears a long report of the establishment of the Knights of the Tin Cross, in Ironsides. There are substantial grounds for the suspicion that Metaphysics Johnsted furnished that report. From the beginning to the end there wasn't the least mention of the name of Originality Langshan or the vote of thanks to him. Now, then, the question for your deliberation and adjudication is this: Was the omission on the part of Metaphysics Johnsted a case of prolonged absent-mindedness, or was it a case of pure cussedness, prompted by that fiend in the human breast "the green-eyed monster."

ORIGINALITY LANGSHAN.

Ottawa, Canada, June 20, 1887.

"As to dat queshun," observed Brother Gardner as he drew himself to his feet, "de Ch'ar will reserve his dicishun fur six mohths. An' de Ch'ar furder hopes dat when any of ours frens in de Dominion write again dey will remember dat ink has gone up a cent a bottle, an' dat dar has bin a riz on paper an' envelopes."

HARD AT WORK.

The Committee on the Prevention of Escape from Burning Hotels reported that no less than three colored people had already set to work to invent such a hand fire extinguisher as the Lime-Kiln Club thought was demanded by the exigencies of the hour, and that models of several inventions would probably be displayed before the club at its next meeting. Then, on motion of Givadam Jones, the meeting went home.

A Romantic Love Story.

Said a Toronto florist the other day: Last spring I used to notice a couple going by here—a fine, manly young fellow and a girl pretty and dainty, with lovely brown hair and dark-blue eyes. They didn't know each other, but when the young man went to business the girl was sure to be somewhere around where she could see him. She lived right around the corner, and she used to come in here and pretend to be examining the flowers as he passed. Then she would look up and down and watch him as he went down the street. One day as he went by she looked up and said to me, 'Oh, what a funny hat!' and then carelessly, as she began picking among the flowers, 'I wonder who he is.' I came very near laughing, for the previous day the young fellow had been in to ask me who she was, and had sent her some flowers. About a week after she came in with a friend, and I heard her telling the friend how somebody had been sending her flowers every morning, and she did wish she could find out who it was. Well, the best part of it all came afterwards. One morning he came in as usual, and the gardener took him back in the conservatory. While he was there the girl entered and stood near the counter looking towards the window. Presently he returned, and as he started for the door briskly he said: "Well, send these flowers as usual up to 24——street." Neither knew the other was near, and hearing the number of her house mentioned she turned around and they met face to face. "Well, I never saw such an embarrassed couple in all my days. She had a big jacqueminot near her face, and it would have been hard to tell which was redder, the rose or her cheeks. She turned to the flowers and he passed out. They didn't come any more, but not long ago I saw them going by together. They both looked in and when they saw me he laughed and she blushed.

When a cow steps in the milk pail she also steps into the butter. If she only kicks over the milk she simply wastes her food.

A new invention is the lemon saw. The inventive genius of the age never tires and it ranges all the way from a mousetrap to a harness for electricity.

HOT FLUSHES.

Light weight: A pound of candles.

Give a man six feet of earth and he will take a knell.

The inquisitive fellow may not be a sadder, but he is always a "why sir" man.

It is when a baggage master comes to handle the luggage of a star actor that he realizes the force of Hamlet's remarks about Yorick—a fellow of infinite chest.

"A guilty conscience needs no accuser," says the proverb, with great truth. The guiltier a man's conscience the more willing he is to worry along without an accuser.

The commencement season is close at hand. It is called "commencement" principally because the fathers of the fair graduates then "commence" to see what they cost.

"Der feller dot can vhittle a pooty goot character out of der rough chibs of eferyday life," writes Carl Pretzal, "he was ondidied to hat a goot abetite on his tombstone.

Little Man—"I understand, sir, that you called me an unmitigated liar?" Big Man—"No, sir; I didn't use the word 'unmitigated.'" Little Man—"Then I accept your apology."

Deutcher (yawning)—"How you vas, Hans. You don't know me no more, ain't it?" Hans—"Mine frent, if you vas shut your mouth so I can see your face, den mebbe I can tell who you vas."

"Yes, Job suffered some," said an Illinois deacon, "but he never knew what it was to have his team run away and kill his wife right in the busy season, when hired girls want three dollars a week.

"Yes," said Mrs. Macgillitop as she expatiated on the beauty of her garden, "I have given it great care, and if you come over in a week or so I hope to show you some beautiful scarlet pneumonias."

Bridget (in the witness box)—"Did he have an impidiment in his spache? That he did; for his false teeth were loose an' kep' jumpin' up and down, biting the words in two. Shure it was an impidimint he had!"

A physician has been investigating cats and dogs, and he finds just as many cranks and fools among them as among the human race. He says that every fourth cat is off her base, while every ninth dog is a sort of a fanatic.

They had been at the masquerade, where she had recognized him at once. "Was it the loud beating of my heart, my darling that told you I was here?" murmured he. "Oh, no," she replied: "I recognized your long legs."

"I say boy," said an excited little gentleman the other day, with his face purple with exertion, "which is the quickest way for me to get to the railway station?" "Run!" was the aggravating boy's response, shouted at the pitch of his voice.

"Did you meet with success!" asked a neighbor of a man who had returned from prospecting for silver in New Mexico. "Oh, yes, I met with success, but success was going the other way. If I could have overtaken success I would have been all right."

"You say you stumped Texas for the Prohibition ticket—what peculiarity of your audience struck you most forcibly?" "Well," said the missionary, "the chunks of clay and pieces of brick struck me most forcibly, but the eggs stayed by me the longest."

The New England Blue Laws.

These laws were enacted by the people of the "Dominion of New Haven," and became known as the blue laws because they were printed on blue paper. They are as follows:

"The governor and magistrates convened in general assembly are the supreme power, under God, of this independent dominion. From the determination of the assembly no appeal shall be made.

"No one shall be a freeman or have a vote unless he is converted and a member of one of the churches allowed in the dominion.

"Each freeman shall swear by the blessed God to bear true allegiance to this dominion, and that Jesus is the only king.

"No dissenter from the essential worship of this dominion shall be allowed to give a vote for electing of magistrates or any officer.

"No food or lodging shall be offered to a heretic.

"No one shall cross a river on the Sabbath but authorized clergymen.

"No one shall travel, cook victuals, make beds, sweep houses, cut hair or shave on the Sabbath day.

"No one shall kiss his or her children on the Sabbath or fast days.

"The Sabbath day shall begin at sunset Saturday.

"Whoever wears clothes trimmed with gold, silver or bone lace above one shilling per yard shall be presented by the grand jurors, and the selectmen shall tax the estate £300.

"Whoever brings cards or dice into the dominion shall pay a fine of £5.

"No one shall eat mince pies, dance, play cards, or play any instrument of music except the drum, trumpet or jewsharp.

"No gospel minister shall join people in marriage. The magistrate may join them in marriage, as he may do it with less scandal to Christ's church.

"When people refuse their children convenient marriages, the magistrate shall determine the point.

"A man who strikes his wife shall be fined £10.

"A woman who strikes her husband shall be punished as the law directs.

"No man shall court a maid in person or by letter without obtaining the consent of her parents; £5 penalty for the first offense, ten for the second, and for the third imprisonment during the pleasure of the court."

They Didn't Trust the Judge.

An English traveller was passing through Colorado a short time ago, and stayed the night at one of the principal towns in the State. The place was in great excitement: two prisoners had been taken out of the gaol and hanged by the mob. On the following day the traveller resumed his journey, and, meeting a citizen in the train, he said, referring to the events of the previous day, "I thought you had given up the practice of lynching people in these parts." Citizen: "Well, we do not trust our judge; we have seen his bank-book. He came to us three years ago. He had then ten dollars to his name. His salary was two thousand dollars a year; and when we looked at his bank-book the other day he had nineteen thousand dollars to his credit. We do not trust that judge."

FOR THE CURIOUS.

It is estimated that twice as much English as American capital is invested in Mexico.

A hemlock tree measuring five feet and seven inches in diameter was felled in Tioga County, Pa., a few days ago.

A German newspaper devoted to forestry says that for forest culture in Germany there is a decided preference for hickory.

A rosebush in the garden of John A. Conor near Murraysville, has over 800 full blown roses on it and as many more buds.

A devil fish weighing nearly 100 pounds was caught by Daniell Oswald of the Atlantic highlands while he was draining his fish pond.

Boyton's invention still remains only the plaything of one man—not a great invention for general use or even for sport like the bicycle.

The biggest nugget of gold ever found in Wisconsin was washed out Friday on the farm of John Condt, one mile from Rock Elm, Pierce County. It weighed nearly three grains. Several other fine nuggets were found with it.

Why the Crow is Black.

The Indians of the extreme Northwest had some very remarkable legends about the creation, in which the crow takes the leading part, bringing order out of chaos. Perhaps the most curious was that which accounted for the raven coat of the crow. One night, while making a tour through his dominions, he stopped at the house of Cannook, a chief, and begged for lodging and a drink of water. Can-nook offered him a bed, but, on account of scarcity of water, refused to give him anything to drink. When all the rest were asleep the crow got up to hunt for the water-butt, but was heard by Cannook's wife, who aroused her husband. He, thinking that the crow was about to escape, piled logs of gum wood upon the fire. The crow made desperate efforts to fly through the hole in the roof where the smoke escaped, but Can-nook caused the smoke to be denser and denser, and when the crow finally regained the outer air he had a black plumage. It was previously white.

Blood Will Tell.

There is no question about it—blood will tell—especially if it be an impure blood. Blotches, eruptions, pimples and boils, are all symptoms of an impure blood, due to the improper action of the liver. When this important organ fails to properly perform its function of purifying and cleansing the blood, impurities are carried to all parts of the system, and the symptoms above referred to are merely evidences of the struggle of Nature to throw off the poisonous germs. Unless her warning be heeded in time, serious results are certain to follow, culminating in liver or kidney disorders, or even in consumptisn. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will prevent and cure these diseases, by restoring the liver to a healthy condition.

The frock of white pique is again in favor for little girls.

To dream of a ponderous whale,
Erect on the tip of his tail,
Is the sign of a storm
(If the weather is warm),
Unless it should happen to fail.

Dreams don't amount to much, anyhow. Some signs, however, are infallible. If you are constipated, with no appetite, tortured with sick headache and bilious symptoms, these signs indicate that you need Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets. They will cure you. All druggists.

Dotted fabrics are as fashionable as plaided and barred stuffs.

When all so-called remedies fail, Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy cures.

Costumes of white cloth with embroideries of white silk and silver, and costumes of silver gray cloth with steel embroidery and gray pearls, come among the latest importations from Paris.

YOUNG MEN suffering from the effects of early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted, also MIDDLE-AGED and OLD MEN who are broken-down from the effects of abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and READ M. V. Lubon's Treatise on Diseases of Men. The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address M. V. Lubon, 47 Wellington St. E. Toronto, Ont.

The better a man knows himself the more indulgent he is to the faults of others.

And now the dude, in style arrayed,
Gayly goes forth to promenade;
He wilts 'neath the fervor of a noonday glance,
And so do his collar, and his jacket, and his pants

Belts that have been loosened by getting wet should be thoroughly dried and fastened together by inserting cement into the cracks with a knife and hammering until dry. A good cement for this purpose is equal proportions of good glue and Prussian gelatine dissolved in the same manner as ordinary glue.

There is a tendency in Paris toward hats with lower crowns.

Whenever your Stomach or Bowels get out of order, causing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, or Indigestion and their attendant evils, take at once a dose of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Best family medicine. All Druggists, 50 cents.

Show me the man, writes Sterne, who knows what life is and dreads death, and I'll show thee a prisoner who dreads his liberty.

Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness and Hay Fever.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are cured in from one to three simple applications made at home. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent free on receipt of stamp by A. H. Dixon & Son, 308 King Street West Toronto Canada

When a man hath once forfeited the reputation of his integrity, nothing will then serve his turn, neither truth nor falsehood.

People who are subject to bad breath, foul coated tongue, or any disorder of the Stomach, can at once be relieved by using Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, the old and tried remedy. Ask your Druggist.

We are sure to get the better of Fortune if we do but grapple with her.

LADIES

Who are Weak, Nervous and Exhausted; who feel themselves losing strength; who are pale, delicate and sickly in appearance, suffering from the many complaints peculiar to women, send for and read M. V. LUBON'S Treatise in BOOK FORM on the Diseases of Women. Mailed sealed and secure from observation on receipt of 6c in stamps. ENCLOSE STAMP. Address, M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. East Toronto, Ont.

PATENTS For Sale—Illustrative catalogue free. R. Chamberlain,

GOOD LIVE AGENTS WANTED in County in Canada. Address, FERRIS & CO., 57 Church St., Toronto.

AGENTS AND CANVASSERS Wanted for Male or Female, whole or spare time, on salary or commission. Industrial Union of B.N.A., 45 Arcade, PATENTS PROCURED in Canada, the all foreign countries. Patent Attorneys, and experts in Patent Cases, established 1867. Donald C. Ridout & Co.,

CONVERTIBLE WIRE BASKET, BEST novelty in Canada. Great reduction to Sample by mail thirty cents. CLEMENT & Co.,

SPOONER'S COPPERINE Babbitt, fibrous tion Box-metal for journal bearings in Guaranteed copper-mixed. Supplies every ment. Ask your hardware dealer for it. SPOONER. Patentee and Manufacturer,

THE BOILER INSPECTION and ance Company of Canada. Consulting Engineers and Solicitors of TORONTO. G. C. ROBB, Chief Engineer. A. FRASER, Sec'y

Awnings! Decorati dow Sha Wholesale tail, at the BRATED GOLD MEDAL TENT MANUFACTORY, 70 West, Toronto. NATIONAL MANUFACTURE

TEACHERS and Students, Attention Special classes during summer Shorthand, Typewriting, Book-keeping, etc. Write for full particulars. Canadian University and Shorthand Institute, Public Building, Toronto. THOS. BENGOUGH, Pres. CHARLES H. BROOKS, GUELPH Business College, Guelph, Twelve States and Provinces already on the roll of this Institution. To thorough tical instruction, and the efficiency and success graduates, this College owes its popularity. giving terms, etc., mailed free. Address H. MacCORMICK, Prin.

COMPOUND OXYGEN—THE CONSERVE of health, the enemy of disease; heals Lungs, Re-builds the Broken Down Constitution young and old. Home treatment, sufficient for months, Inhaler and all complete, sent by express $12. Moved my office from 73 King West to 343 East. MRS C. STIDMAN FIEROE. Formerly established in Toronto. 32 Office Treatments Send for circular.

Water PURE LIVING WATERS per hour. Also Rock Drills—Hand, Steam Power. Send for Catalogue. Laidlaw Manufacturing Co., HAMILTON,

MILLER'S TICK DESTROYER

STOCKMEN, give this valuable preparation a fair trial. It promptly and effectually in Ticks and other vermin pests, as in eradicating all affections skin to which Sheep are subject in Tins at 35c., 70c. and $1. A 35c. Tin will Sheep or 35 Lambs. HUGH MILLER & Co.,

BEAVER LINE OF STEAMSHIPS, Sailing weekly between Montreal and RATES OF PASSAGE:—Saloon, Montreal to $40, $50, and $60; Return Tickets, $80, $90, —according to steamer and accommodation. mediate and Steerage at lowest rates. For particulars and to secure Berths, apply to H. MURRAY, General Manager, 1 Custom Square, Montreal, or to the Local Agents in the ferent Towns and Cities.

H. Williams, FELT AND SLATE Roofer

Manufacturer and dealer in Tarred Felt, Roofing Pitch, Building pers, Carpet and Deafening Felt, ROOFING, Etc. 4 Adelaide St. E., TORONTO

Dairy Salt FOR BUTTER, ETC.

NEW Importations.—Higgins' Eureka, Worsington and Ashton Brands, in large or small Also Rice's Canadian Salt. Write for prices. JAMES PARK & SON, Wholesale Produce Merchants Toronto

Wall Paper MANUFACTURERS. M. STAUNTON & CO Samples on application. TORONTO ONT.

MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO MANUFACTURE ONLY FINEST Silver Plated Ware Artistic Designs, combined with Unequalled Durability and Finish HAMILTON ONT.

—THE— Toronto Silver Plate Co MANUFACTURERS OF THE HIGHEST GRADE OF SILVER PLATED WARE

TRADE  MARK.

ALL GOODS GUARANTEED TORONTO.

ASSESSMENT SYSTEM.

The Mutual Reserve Fund LIFE ASSOCIATION

The largest and most prosperous open Association in the world—desires active representatives in every section of Canada; liberal inducements. It has full Government Deposit, and under the supervision of Insurance Department at Ottawa. Correspondence solicited. Address, J. D. WELLS, General Manager, 65 King Street East, Toronto.

I CURE FITS! When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my Infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you. Address DR. H. G. ROOT, Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto.

...Y ORDER OF THE LEAGUE

BY FRED M. WHITE.

CHAPTER XVIII.

...u wished to see me?"

...es: if you will be so good as to sit ...and listen to me."

...d stood looking at her mysterious vis... some perplexity. There was some... almost weird about the strange wo... beauty; but in obedience, she seated ...to listen.

"I have a strange story to tell," Isodore ...med. "For a long while now I ...been watching over your welfare. Do ...k me personal or rude in any ques... I may ask. Believe me, I do not for ...ment wish to pain you; indeed, on ...her hand, I wish to do you a great ser...

...d inclined her head gently. "Per... it will be as well to have as perfect ...erence between us as possible. You al... know my name. Will you be so ...as to tell me to whom I owe this ...

"My name is Isodore."

...d looked at her visitor in interest and ...sion. This, then, was the beautiful ...y about whom Maxwell had often ..., the princess to whom the fatal ...rhood owed allegiance. Then she ...frigid. Had it not been for her and ...s her, Frederick would have been ...her now.

"You misjudge me," Isodore continued ...for she had read the other's thoughts ...ly as an open book. "Believe me, ...I known, Mr Maxwell would never ...been sent to Rome. But if I am to ...ue, I must have your confidence. ...If I tell you your lover is in England ...

"...England, and never came to see me?" ...exclaimed with a little gasp. Impos... He would surely have written."

"Nevertheless, it is perfectly ...he only arrived yesterday. ...have come to you, or written, had I ...bidden him."

"Forbidden him," Enid echoed haughtily. "Why?"

"Because things were not ready," Isodore ...d calmly. "I did not take a journey ...e at the hazard of my life, to rescue ...m a great danger, to have my plans ...at the last moment. If it had not ...for me, Mr Maxwell would not be alive ...Isodore could not restrain herself ...tly to conceal this touch of womanly ...

...'s face softened strangely. "I have ...of you. Forgive me if I seem cold, ...have been severely tried lately," she ...

"You do not know what a load you ...aken off my mind: and yet perhaps" ...e stopped abruptly; her thoughts ...in the direction of Le Gautier, and ...ing how she could face her lover ...

"...yet," Isodore replied—"and you ...see a way out of the difficulty into ...the miserable schemes of Le Gautier ...aced you?" Do I speak plainly, or ...more explicit?"

...random shot went home; Enid's ...shed crimson to the fair curls lying ...forehead. "You speak plainly ..." she faltered. "You need say no ...I am dazed and bewildered by your ...ntal knowledge."

...will be clear enough presently. The ...are dark now; but I see rays of light ...and there. Do you study spiritual...

..." Enid answered, puzzled by the ...ness and inconsequence of the ques... "I cannot say that I have. But ...

...your father is in the house, I shall ...to see him. Will you be good ...to ascertain if he can be seen?"

..."I tell him he is wanted on supernatural affairs, he will come." Enid smiled as ...ng the bell. "It is his craze."

...a little pause, the baronet entered ...om, and, like his daughter, stood in... by the visitor's perfect beauty. He ...ow; in spite of his age, he was a ...of the beautiful still. He looked up ...ly in the perfect eyes, and waited ...to speak.

..."Sir Geoffrey, you are a swindled, de... man!"

..."Bless me!" the startled baronet ex... at this unceremonious opening. ...ulled, deluded, I? Who by? Im...?"

..."By the conjurer, Le Gautier." ...Geoffrey stared in open-mouthed am...ment; even the breeding of the Charteris ...not rise to this occasion. Enid's ...gave one leap, and then began to beat ...ly. She was conscious of some com...plications of the deepest interest to her, ...waited with impatience for Isodore to ...

..."Some time ago, you went to a house ...Paddington. You will please correct ...I am in error, Sir Geoffrey. During ...presence there you saw several start...manifestations: you were commanded ...certain things, one of which affected ...your daughter's happiness, and ...by some happy accident, were equal...table to Le Gautier. Am I right?"

..."Perfectly," the baronet gasped. "And ...not say they will be carried out to ...ter. I believe"——

..."They were a common, vulgar, barefaced ...

..."I beg your pardon," Sir Geoffrey inter... politely, ready to do battle in defence ...is pet scheme. "I cannot agree with ...Le Gautier"——

..."A low adventurer. I am not talking ...I can prove every word I say. This ...morning, I was at Paddington, and ...the manifestation room, or whatever ...may choose to call it. At the back of ...room is a large mirror; over the window ...other. Preparations for the manufac... of visions to suit any taste were mani... And one thing in conclusion: the girl ...personated your better self and your ...brother, who never was married, is at ...under your roof. She is Linda Des... the girl who met with the accident in ...ality."

...Geoffrey began to feel uncomfortable, ...moreover experienced a twinge of com... There was something so horribly ...about the beautiful stranger's story, ...it shook his faith to its foundation. ...really, such an extraordinary tale," ...stammered, "and everything appeared ...real. I cannot doubt, the likeness to my ...was so perfect. Am I mad that I ...believe this?"

"If you will excuse me for a moment and permit me to see this Linda Despard, I will introduce you to your brother in a few moments. Miss Charteris, have I your permission?"

"You have my permission to do anything which will clear up the wretched mystery," Enid cried passionately. "Even now, I am totally at a loss to know what you are speaking of. Go! Do anything you may desire, so that we can have a little quietness hereafter."

Without another word, Isodore vanished, leaving Sir Geoffrey pacing the drawing-room in great perturbation and casting uneasy glances in Enid's direction. He was not convinced yet, but his doubts were troublesome. "It is all nonsense," he exclaimed. "I saw with my own eyes——"

"Your brother, Sir Geoffrey."

The baronet looked up, and there, standing in the doorway, saw Isodore, holding by the hand a figure dressed in a slouch-hat and enveloped in a cloak. For a moment, he staggered back in amazement; it was the lost Ughtred to the life!

"This is the long-lost brother," Isodore continued. "Linda, throw your hat away, and tell Sir Geoffrey the tale you told Lucrece. Listen, Sir Geoffrey, and you will hear something entertaining, and Miss Charteris something that will restore the bloom to her cheeks."

Linda Despard pushed her hat aside, and stood, half-boldly, half-timidly, before the startled baronet. There were tears in her eyes as she looked at Enid.

"But what can this possibly have to do with Le Gautier?" Sir Geoffrey demanded.

Isodore waved him aside haughtily. "Much, if you will have patience," she said.—"Linda, you had best commence. We are trifling."

There was an air of command in these words there was no disputing. Enid sank into a chair pale but collected, the baronet standing behind her, looking anything but comfortable. Lucrece took up her place beside her mistress. Isodore stood through the interview.

"Well, I will do anything to help that angel of mercy who has been so good and kind to me!" the actress commenced, with a grateful glance at Enid. "I tried to do her a great injury; but, thank heaven, I am not too late to save her yet. I am much to blame; but this is a hard world, and there are times when a few shillings are a godsend to me. It is not a long story. Lucrece here, and Isodore, knew my husband, and how he used to treat me, beating, half-starving me, and taking all my earnings to spend at the cafes. Well, I put up with that life as long as I could; and then, after one awful night, I left him. I came to England, and brought my boy with me. After some hardships, I contrived to get a situation in a London theatre under a new name. It was only a small part, for my imperfect English was against me. One night, some months ago, as I was coming out of the theatre, I met Le Gautier. I had known him in better days, and though I was not ignorant of his character, it was pleasant to hear the old familiar tongue again. It appeared he had been in the theatre, and recognised me, and waited to say a few words as I came out. Time went on, and he was really kind to me. Through his influence I obtained a rise of salary, and I was grateful. What he really wanted with me you shall hear presently." The narrator paused a moment here, and looked round in the eager faces. Every sound could be heard distinctly—the ticking of the clocks, and Sir Geoffrey's heavy breathing. "One night he came to my lodgings," the speaker resumed, "and then he asked me if I had forgotten the old spiritualism tricks. I must tell you that once on a time I travelled the continent with a company that played ghostly pieces, such, for instance, as translations of Dickens' Christmas Carol, a simple thing, a mere optical illusion, what you call Pepper's Ghost. I told him I thought I could remember, and then he made a proposal to me. I never hesitated; the pay was too good for that. I was to meet Le Gautier at a house near Paddington one night, and go through the old tricks for a gentleman deeply interested in spiritualism. I learnt my lesson well. I was first to personate the better self of the spectator, and afterwards the spirit of his brother."

"Ah!" Sir Geoffrey exclaimed. "Go on!"

"I interest you now. I thought I should. I knew at the time, to my shame let me confess it, from the things I had to say, that the spectator was to be got into Le Gautier's power. Well, the night came; the simple apparatus was fixed; everything promised well. I was a bit nervous, for I was out of practice, and I wanted to see what sort of a man the victim was. While they were at dinner, I looked into the room, and there I saw the gentleman whom I now know to be Sir Geoffrey Charteris. When I saw your credulous face," the narrator continued, addressing the baronet, "I was no longer afraid. Presently, when it became dark and they sat over their wine, I listened till a word agreed upon was uttered by Le Gautier, and I commenced. First, there was some music, sounding strangely enough in the room, but not to me, for I played it. That was simple to an unbeliever with ordinary nerves; then came flashes of light, also easy enough; and when I deemed I had created a sufficient sense of fear, I entered the room. It was quite dark by that time, and I was dressed from head to foot in close garments. I touched Sir Geoffrey on the face and whispered in his ear; and once when he showed signs of unbelief, I clutched him by the throat and nearly strangled him.—Sir Geoffrey- if I make a mistake in a single particular, correct me."

"You are perfectly correct," the baronet answered, flushing scarlet. "Pray, continue. You do not know what the suspense is to me."

"Had you been quick and strong of nerve you would have found it out then, for, as it was, you grasped my arm, covered in wet eel-skins, a creepy thing to touch in the dark, even if you know what it is. That was the first part of the performance, and then the real business commenced in earnest. Le Gautier led you to a room at the back of the house, a room draped in black cloth, and seated you in a certain spot, daring you to move at your peril. I wondered I did not laugh at this; I did once or twice, I know, so that I had to finish with an hysterical cough, which had the advantage of relieving me and heightening the effect. Well, the jugglery commenced—the meanest trickery, hardly sufficient to deceive a child. It was easy enough to work it under cover of the incense and smoke; from behind your chair, Sir Geoffrey, the curtains were pulled back and a mirror exposed. I stood upon a pedestal in the window, behind another mirror. The illusion was perfect, and all I had to do was to ask and answer questions. I got through the first part of the performance well enough, but when I had to personate Sir Geoffrey's brother, the case was different. Had you, sir, been calm and collected, you must have discovered. I personated the spirit of your brother, desiring penance for some fancied wrong done to my children; and to heighten the effect, two ragged little boys were introduced to personate the dead man's starving and adandoned family. Frightened almost to death by the fear of being haunted, Sir Geoffrey, you promised me anything. You promised to join some League, the meaning of which I do not know, to carry out your dead brother's work; and last, but not least, that my good angel and preserver there should become Le Gautier's wife. The illusion was perfect, and a little of Le Gautier's matchless ventriloquism completed it.—And now," the speaker continued, running forward and falling at Enid's feet, "let me implore your forgiveness! My benefactress, how grateful I am that I have been able to serve you!"

"I have nothing to forgive," Enid replied. "You have taken far too great a load off my mind for me to reproach you now."

"But the whole thing is inexplicable to me," Sir Geoffrey exclaimed. "How did you manage to impersonate my late brother so accurately?"

Linda Despard smiled and pointed to a photograph album. "Easy enough with plenty of these about. What simpler than to abstract a likeness from one of these books and give it me! With my theatrical training and knowledge of makeup, the task was nothing."

"I am all the more astonished," Isodore remarked, "that the audacity of the command relating to Miss Enid did not open your eyes."

"But you understand Le Gautier professed to know nothing of what had taken place," Sir Geoffrey explained. "I even had to broach the subject to him. He never by any chance alluded to it."

"Such cunning as his always proves too deep for simple honesty. I need not ask if you believe what you have heard, Sir Geoffrey?"

"Indeed, I do.—Enid, my child, come and kiss me, and say you forgive your foolish old father. Take me away into the country, where people cannot find me. I am not fit to mix with men of sense; and, O' Enid, as soon as it is convenient, tell Varley to go into the library and pick out all the works he can find on spiritualism and burn them."

"You are sure you have forgiven me?" Linda Despard asked Enid timidly.

"From the bottom of my heart. You have done me a service to-day which I cannot forget, or indeed ever repay—And to you, Isodore, if I may call you so, I am grateful. You will pardon me if I seemed harsh or hard when you came here, but I have distrusted every one of late."

"You have no cause to thank me," Isodore replied simply. I am afraid I must confess that it is not entirely upon your behalf I have done this thing."

"I care not for that. I shall always remember yon with gratitude."

Isodore turned quickly from the window. "Le Gautier is coming up the steps," she exclaimed. "He must not see me here now, or everything will be ruined. I must see you again before I leave the house. Where can I hide? I would not have him discover me now for ten thousand pounds!"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

A Brave Young Lad.

A letter from Rome to the Philadelphia Bulletin says the return to Italy from Abyssinia of Count Salimbini, Major Piano and the twelve-year-old son of the latter, who have been Ras Alula's prisoners for so many months, has created a considerable sensation. The chief interest is perhaps centred upon the boy, who is described as having displayed the courage and firmness of a man through all the vicissitudes and hardships endured. The only time when he broke down was, it appears, when chains were put upon the prisoners for the first time and he found himself fettered hand and foot to an Abyssinian lad of about his own age who was to be henceforth, sleeping or waking, his inseparable companion. But he soon recovered his sang froid and helpless as he was physically, soon established a sort of ascendency over the negroes who used to come and go to his hut, and would rate them soundly if they displeased him as they sometimes did by coming to beg for some of his clothing. His father had managed to keep for him, as indeed all the prisoners tried to do, two or three jerseys, to be worn one over the other as a protection against the dangers of lying on the damp floor of their prison huts after the tropical heat of the day. To this the boy proably owed his complete immunity from illness during' his imprisonment,; he has returned quite bronzed and hardy-looking. He had other advantages, though, which were not shared by the elder prisoners.

A woman's heart goes out to childhood, thank goodness! all the world over, and Ras Alula's daughter took compassion on the brave little Italian boy, and did all she could to soften the rigors of his imprisonment. It is certain that the fierce chief would have allowed no other living being to interfere with his jealously guarded hostages, who were only released, as perhaps the reader may remember, in exchange for a thousand rifles belonging to Ras Alula, which hitherto the Italian officials had not allowed to pass. He still retains Count Savoiroux, and, on the remonstrances of Major Piano and the others, who, at first refused to come away without their unfortunate comrade, he bid them begone or remain at their own peril, for he had no more to say to them. But young Emanuel Piano had, it appears, adieux of a softer kind, for he shows with some pride a little gold cross which Ras Alula's daughter gave him, saying: "Think of me when you are in Italy."

A Wife's Explanation.

Violet: Ma, how do people know that it's a man in the moon?

Mother (sadly): Because it's always out nights.

The Queen's Jubilee.

[illegible]

Queen's Most Excellent Majesty.

Since Britain's sceptre first was swayed,
Since e're a bard his Sovereign sung,
Ne'er was more glorious theme essayed
Than smote the minstrel's pen or tongue.
Behold! from diverse peopled lands,
On which perpetual shines the sun,
Come in oblation-laden hands
The trophies Britain's might has won,
As tributes to our Mother-Queen
(Millions revere this sacred name),
Whose reign no equal earth has seen,
Whom God has blest with fadeless fame.

Rejoice, O every gem of Britain's crown!
Exult, ye continents and isles, exult
Your Queen and Empress with your myriad tongues!
Pour out thanksgiving to the King of kings,
Whose hand uplifted to a prosperous throne
The loved of monarchs, thus so long to rule
In equity her great united realm
And nourish with maternal affection
The children of her crown—the fostered ones,
Whose orphanage adoption claimed of her.
A century's half has known her gracious reign
Since coronation honored England's throne.
Age has been tempered by the grace of God,
Thus far to cherish with auspicious life
The person of our Queen through strife and peace;
And He who hears and answers earnest prayer
Has had regard to supplication, made
By faithful subjects' intercessive love,
That, winged by faith, has sought the mercy-seat,
There with an all-prevailing voice to call
Jehovah's benediction on her head.
What need of retrospection, since we see
The goodness of the past reflected now?
The dernier shades of blessings once enjoyed
Mingle with those of supervening grace
Which follow in their footprints. Lo, they come

To Queen and people in a thousand shapes,
Fathered by projects of her statesmen's thought
In days which were and then were not, but which,
With hearts o'erfilled with gratitude, we bless.
Yet, though reviewal of the past be spurned,
That grief shall not invade the joy we feel,
There rise the phantoms of the loved, bereft
From her and us, whom love and reverence join
To welcome to these scenes of festal glee,
E'en though in silence we may mourn the fact
That they may not be seen in outward form
To satisfy the sense of mortal sight.
We think not when gay pageantries we view
Of earthly pomp and secondary joy;
And grieve for them who cannot share with us
The feelings which these splendrous scenes inspire,
That, mayhap, they are witnesses of all,
And are but pained that we know not how close
They sometimes press to us and kindle thrills
Of glows of heavenly bliss, which blindness oft Attributes to the gladness mirth instils.
'Tis well. God is not God if we can know
As much as He of souls disincarnate.

Beyond Atlantic's leagues there is an isle
Whereto, as pilgrims on a holy-day,
Such devotees who honor their descent
From ancestry whose origin was there, (Whence sprung intrepid pioneers, who fought,
Wresting from savage-haunted wilderness
The homesteads no forefathers left to them.)
Find an attraction in a central source
And from the seaboards bounding many strands,
Scattered o'er earth's circumferenced climes,
They speed in caravans through wastes of sea
Toward the Mecca of their dreams—England,
The shrine of all her patriots loyal zeal—
An Empire's heart, that fills its arteries
And veins with throbbing energy of life.
All are not pilgrims; some must be content
With orient glances where the pilgrims go
And local ebullitions of their joy
In their own land and way. So thus do we,
Through the one minstrel celebrant, address
Our homage from the Land of Lakes to you,
Our reverend Queen. Our fervent prayers
Invoke on this your gladsome Jubilee
A brighter crown than gold and precious stones
To your exalted head adorn; and 'tis
A halo of God's blessings imaged down
In reflex of that one immortal crown
Life's noblest purpose 'tis for us to win,
And which, God knows how much we crave it, Queen,
For you, when you in heaven shall celebrate
Your everlasting, tearless jubilee.

Cloudland.

BY CLAYTON PARKHILL.

Have you been to that wonderful country
That lies far in the sky—
The mystical realm of Cloudland,
Where the mountains are piled so high?

Would you visit that beautiful kingdom
Where the elves and fairies dwell
Who come to us at the nightfall
To sport in the jingle and dell?

The tempests are far below them
And rains and snows never beat;
But the softest of sunlight ever
Warms this land for the spirits meet.

They sleep all day 'mongst the cloudlets
Till the sun slides towards the West;
Then they wake into light their torches
Before he shall sink into rest.

Have you seen the sunset glories
Light their mountains in the sky?
'Twas the radiance from their torches
That illumed the land on high.

Then they come to us with the twilight,
They bring to the babies sleep;
To the lads and lassies love dreams
So sweet that they wake to weep.

To the housewife they bear contentment,
And they soothe the husband's care;
They bring unto earth only blessings—
These spirits from Cloudland fair.

Have you seen the elfin ladders
Let down from the morning sky,
When the boys said "The sun's drawing water,"
The girls laughed and questioned them "Why?"

The girls knew better than they did;
'Twas the elves going back to their home,
And that is the way you must travel,
If you're anxious in Cloudland to roam.

Remedy For Ivy Poisoning.

I have always been extremely susceptible to the poison of poison-ivy and oak so as to give me great annoyance, unless it is immediately checked on its first appearance. This, common washing soda accomplishes for me, if properly applied. I make the application by saturating a slice of loaf bread with water, then cover one surface with soda, and apply to the eruption, the soda next the flesh. When the bread is dried by the animal heat, I drop water on the outer side so as to keep it thoroughly moistened and dissolve the soda crystal in contact with the skin. This, you will perceive, is merely a bread poultice; the bread being a vehicle through whose moisture the soda reaches the humor. I find that washing or bathing with soda water, even continuously, will not suffice with me. My skin requires the heat and moisture of the bread in order for the soda to act on and neutralize the poison. I rarely have need to retain this soda poultice for more than thirty minutes on any affected part. No pain ensues. Formerly I suffered for weeks, as the poison would spread all over my body. Now thirty minutes measures the duration of its exhibition.

Undeveloped Powers.

A large part of the failures, the disappointments, the inferior work, the poor thinking, the shallow reasoning, the lack of kindly feeling and sympathetic action which afflict mankind is due to the lack of nourishment afforded to the faculties. They are starved, consequently feeble and inefficient. Men plead the lack of time to enrich their minds, to stimulate their powers, to feed their moral natures. As well might the bird with drooping wing and declining strength plead that he had so many flights to take in mid-air that he had no time to pick the corn from the field or the fruit from the tree to sustain him in those flights.

GENERAL NEWS.

Two [illegible] were sitting under a tree near Boyertown, Pa., on Sunday evening, when it was struck by lightning. They were horrible burned, and blood oozed from their wounds. They will probably die.

Lightning struck near a tree against which a negro boy was leaning in Atlanta. He whirled around two or three times and ran. After running some distance he stopped and went through the same spinning motion. He has been crazed ever since.

Three months ago W. M. Murchison, of Nova Scotia, who had been ill for some time, awoke in the night and found that his tongue was paralyzed, and that he could not swallow anything. He has just died after fasting ninety days. Up to a short time before his death he was cheerful, saying that he was quite willing to die.

A Rockland smoker bought a cigar the other day in one the stores of that city, and on smoking it found a small gold ring on the inside. The cigar was Pennsylvania make, and it was evidently not a prize, as the box had no lottery attachment. The only way to account for the find is that some lady cigar-maker accidently rolled her ring in the cigar, it being evidently a lady's ring.

Seventy years ago Henry Gildemeister, German, enlisted as a volunteer in the Hanseatic Legion, a free corps of 3,000 men attached to the Northern Army under the command of the Crown Prince of Sweden. Gildemeister now lives in Bunker Hill, Ill., and will be 93 years old on Saturday; and recent news from his native country leads him to think that he is the only survivor of the famous 3,000.

This remarkably pleasing horse story comes from Inyo, Cal.: A load of hay was put in a yard, near a stable. A horse was loose in the yard, two others being tied in the stable, the door of which was open. After eating a few bites of the hay the loose horse appeared to remember that his companions were debarred from the feast. He took large mouthfuls, carried i into the stable, and placed it before the other horses.

The most accomplished butler, valet, and maid servant combined is a Chinaman in the employ of the rich Timothy Hopkins of California. He wears an Oriental costume of silk of great magnificence, takes care of Mr. Hopkin's mansion in a quiet, unobtrusive manner, as pleasing as it is effective, has charge of the wardrobes of Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins, and when Mrs. Hopkins dresses for a ball lays out her costume, selects her jewels, and never makes a blunder.

A newspaper in Nonticello, Fla., says that W. P. Belliger, going home the other evening, was overtaken by a slight shower. and then heard a jigging sound as something like a hailstone struck him on the head and fell to the ground. He struck a match and found a silver quarter bearing date early in the eighteenth century. "Mr. Belliger is a gentleman of veracity, and no one doubts his statement. He is satisfied there is a rich treasury above."

A charming and unique friendship is said to have sprung up between a young German and a young Frenchmen in south Holyoke, Mass. Neither can speak the language of the other, and both are ignorant of the English language. Under ordinary circumstances these young men would be lifelong strangers, but fate has thrown them together as roommates in a boarding house, and, though unable to converse other than by gestures there has sprung up between these young men a friendship of more than ordinary warmth.

It is related that some Americans recently going through the Jardin des plantes of Paris stopped to look at a big rattlesnake in a cage. It lay motionless, apparently asleep, but when two of the party who lingered behind began to speak in English it moved, lifted its head, and gave every sign of interest. They told their companions that the snake understood English. The whole party then returned to the cage. The snake was apparently asleep again. They conversed in French, but the snake made no movement; then the ladies began to speak in English. The snake started lifted its head, and showed the same alertness as before at the sounds The rattlesnake proved, on inquiry, to have come from Virginia.

A small boy, swimming with others in the Erie Canal, near Clyde, suddenly yelled with vigor that "so'thin' had hold of" him. He scrambled ashore, and the something proved to be a small snapping turtle, that had grabbed him by the leg. His beak had gone through the skin and some of the flesh of the boy's leg. These animals never let go their hold while there is life. In this case the jaws did not open till after the head had been cut off. The wound made by the turtle's beak was not very serious. The boy wrapped a handkerchief around his leg and started for home, carrying the turtle.

A Family Arrangement.

A family in which there are a number of men who come in at different times during the latter part of the evening, and who generally go to bed immediately upon getting in, was troubled for a long time by the question that worried each man when he came in as to who was yet out. As every one was generally in bed there was none to answer the question, and the arrival was at a loss to know whether to lock the front door for the night and put out the lights, as he would do if all were in, or not. A tour of the bedrooms was necessary to acquire the desired knowledge, and this, it is needless to say, became more annoying each time. At last a happy idea was found.

A small board of hard wood, on which was neatly painted as many figures in a row as there are persons in the family, with two rows of pegs beneath each, one labelled "out" and the other "in," was placed in a rather obscure place in the hall-way, where all the family can readily see it, but where it will not attract the eyes of strangers. On each peg is hung a small brass ring, and now, as each one goes out, he places the ring hanging under the number assigned to him on "out" peg, and when he comes in the ring is hung on the "in" peg. Thus a glance at this board tells just who is out and who is in, and a "long-felt want" no longer exists in the house.

A Famly Financier.

"Oh, Nell! Isn't it lucky our legacies were only four hundred dollars!"

"Lucky? when we expected, at least, ten thousand apiece!"

"But don't you see, dear, if we had had all that Papa would have invested it."

Jas. S. Freeborn,

—M. D. Ch. M.; L. K. & Q. C. P. I.—

Doctor of Medicine and master of Surgery Victoria. Univ. Licentiate of King's and Queen's College of Physicians in Ireland. Member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Ont. Formerly acting Surgeon of B. Battery, R. C. A. Quebec. Late resident of the Rotunda Hospitals, (Lying-in & Gynæcological) Dublin.

—OFFICE—

STEPHEN'S DRUG STORE.

Drs. Sproule & Brodie,

—PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS,—

MARKDALE.

DR. SPROULE'S office Turner's Drug Store

DR. BRODIE'S office Mathew s block.

P. McCullough.

BARRISTER, SOLICITOR, &c

OFFICE—OVER McFARLAND'S STORE,

MARKDALE,

Money to Loan.

MASSON & MASSON,

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, &c.

OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block, Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week.

J. MASSON, Q. C. S. MASSON. W. MASSON.

N. B.—Private and Company's funds to invest at from 6 to 8 per cent

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate se curitv.

WILLIAM STUART,

KIMBERLEY,

Issuer of Marriage Licences. Money to Loan on Real Estate at low rates.

A few Farms for sale. Terms easy.

NOTICE.

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.

will visit Markdale for the practice of his profession on Thursday and Friday following the first Monday in each month, and at Flesherton the following day, Saturday.

MARKDALE HOUSE,

MARKDALE, - - ONT.

J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

ISAAC STINSON.

Builder and Contractor

In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.

Estimates given. All work guaranteed.

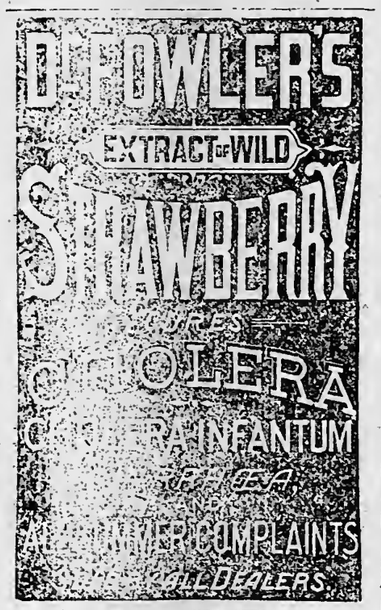
Orders by mail promptly attended to.

529 Residence, MARKDALE.

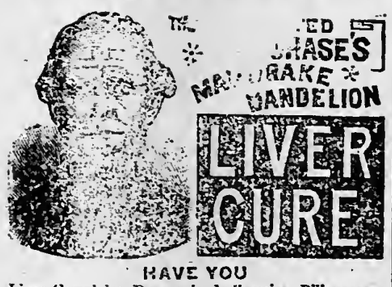
W. G. RICHARDS,

BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT, Markdale.

1241y



R. J. SPROULE,



FLESHERTON.

Conveyancer, Appraiser, Valuator and Money Lender. Deeds, Mortgages, Leases and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice! Charges very low. Apply to

R. J. SPROULE,

Money Lender & Postmaster, Flesherton.

HAVE YOU

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Jaundice, Headache, Dizziness, Pain in the Back, Costiveness, or any disease arising from a deranged liver, DR. CHASE'S LIVER CURE will be found a sure and certain remedy.

NATURE'S REMEDY

The unqualified success of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure in Liver Complaint rests solely with the fact that it is compounded from nature's well-known liver regulators, MANDRAKE AND DANDELION, combined with many other invaluable roots, barks and herbs, having a powerful effect on the Kidneys, Stomach, Bowels and Blood. $500.00 GOLD

Over one-half million of Dr. Chase's Recipe Books were sold in Canada alone. We want every man, woman and child who is troubled with Liver Complaint to try this excellent remedy.

SOMETHING NEW. GIVEN AWAY FREE

Wrapped aronnd every bottle of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure is a valuable Household Medical Guide and Recipe Book (84 pages), containing over 200 useful recipes pronounced by medical men and druggists as invaluable, and worth ten times the price of the medicine.

TRY CHASE'S CATARRH CURE. A safe and positive remedy. Price, 25 cents.

TRY CHASE'S KIDNEY AND LIVER PILLS. 25 cts. per box.

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS

EDMANSON & CO., Sole Agents, Brantford.

Markdale Roller Mill.

FARMERS HAVING No. 1 WHEAT and preferring flour from their own wheat, can get it by bringing twenty bushels or more.

Flour always on Hand

Flour $3.00 to $4.30 per. bbl.

SHORTS, per ton - $12.00
BRAN, " - 10.00

The highest market price paid for Fall and Spring wheat.

J. W. FORD.

Pubic Notice.

To all whom it may concern.

I R. L. Stephen the Druggist of Markdale have been appointed agent for JOHNSON'S celebrated Tonic and nervine. JOHNSON'S little liver Pills, and JOHNSON'S all healing White Ointment. The nervine is the very best in the market, in all diseases caused by poverty of blood, for Nervousness, Hysteria, and the PALENESS of Complexion so often noticed in female's, loss of appetite and general debility. In conjunction w th the Liver Pills, it is he very best for all diseases arrising from Topid live r or bad stomach

The White Oinment is the very best in the market for Salt Rheume, Barbers Itch, Pimples, Chafs, Burns, Scalds, and all Skin diseases of a scrofuleus nature. Try these fine remedies and you will not be disappointed.

or saleatR. L. STEPHEN'S the druggist, Markdale, Ont.

WM. G. GUTHRIE,

Plain & Ornamental Plasterer

MARKDALE.

Arches, Cornices, Centre Flowers, and all kinds of plain and ornamental plastering executed at cheapest rates. Calsomining Lime Washing and Repairs promptly attended to.

330

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

The underaigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of

School Furniture.

Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness, wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.

181 ANDREW McGILL.

MONEY TO LOAN.

ON real estate security, at low rate of interest, no commission charged. Business Strictly Confidential,

J. S. BLACK,

190 Pomona, P. O.

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT No. 24, con. 4, N. D. R. Glenelg, 100 acres, will be sold cheap and on easy terms of payment, for further particulars apply on the premises. or by letter to

J. S. BLACK,

190-tf. Pomona P. O.

Markdale Woolen Mill.

Custom Carding, Weaving, Fulling, Dyeing and cloth dressing, done in a workmanlike manner and on very short notice.

First Class Cotton Warp

supplied at the lowest possible rates.

A call solicited.

Terms strictly cash or wool

Sept. 28, 1886 F. J. RITCHIE.

IT IS A WELL KNOWN FACT

—THAT—

McCOLL'S "LARDINE,"

is the best known, and most reliable MACHINE OIL in the Dominion; Farmer's, Thresher's and Mill Owner's, will find it decidedly to their advantage to insist upon getting the "Genuine Lardine" when they ask for it, owing to so much inferior oil being sold under the same name by unscrupulous dealers. We are the sold manufacturers of the "Genuine Lardine" every barrel branded.

McCOLL BRO'S, & CO.

For sale in Markdale at Haskett Bro's Hardware Store. 347-73

FRESH TURNIP SEEDS.
FRESH PARIS GREEN.
FRESH HELLEBORE.

AT

H. Parker's,

DRUGGIST and SEEDSMAN,

Durham.

Successful Surgical Operation.

DEAR SIR:—

During the past 18 months Miss Abigal Clement has been afflicted with a painful abcess or tumor on the right side of the abdomen, and sought relief from a medical gentleman in Toronto who has obtained more than local reputation as an eminent surgeon. To him Miss Clement applied and, we are pleased to say, with happy results, as the following letter will show:

236 Simcoe Street, Toronto,
June 13, 1887.

MRS. A. CLEMENT,

"DEAR MADAM,—I successfully removed, the tumor from your daughter's side yesterday, and have every reason to hope that she will make a good recovery. Of course she is very weak from the effects of the chloroform

* * * * * *

I thought I would write you these few lines, knowing you would be very anxious, and believing you would prefer hearing direct from me."

Yours very respectfully,

DR. S. B. POLLARD.

The many friends of MISS Clement will be pleased to learn of her recovery; and it is to be hoped this will forever set at rest the vile slanders, cunningly circulated, to the detriment of this worthy, unoffending family, through the unworthy motive of business jealousy.

MRS. A. CLEMENT.

BIRTHS.

BOYLE—In Glenelg, on the 10th inst., Mrs. Joseph Boyle, of a son.

DEATHS.

HALL—In Glenelg, on the 8th inst., Bertha, daughter of Mr. James Hall, aged 7 years 6 months.

MARRIAGES.

GRAHAM—BLAIR,—At the residence of the brides parents, by Rev. A. Wilson, on the 12th inst., Mr. J. I. Graham to Miss Maggie, daughter of Mr. Wm. Blair, all of Artemesia.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel for purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low est, short weight alum or phosphate powders sold only in cans, ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO. 106 Wall St., N. Y.

EASY TO USE.

SOOTHING, CLEARSING, HEALING.

It Cures CATARRH, Cold in Head, HAY FEVER.

STOPS Droppings from Nasal passages into the throat and excessive expectoration caused by Catarrh. Sent pre-paid on receipt of price, 50c. and $1. Address FULFORD & CO., Brockville, Ont.

Monthly Fairs.

Orangeville—The second Thursday in each month.
Dundalk—Tuesday before Orangeville.
Flesherton—Monday before Orangeville.
Markdale—Saturday before Orangeville.
Durham—Third Tuesday in each month.
Chatsworth—Monday before Durham.
Holland Centre—Saturday before Chatsworth
Priceville—Monday before Durham.
Hanover—Monday before Durham

Markdale Church Directory.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

Services every Sabbath at 10:30 a. m. Sabbath School at 2:30 p. m. Prayer Meeting every Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. Rev. A. Wilson, Pastor; A. McFarland, S. S. Superintendent.

CHRIST CHURCH.

Services every Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p m. Rev. Jas. Ward, Incumbent. Sabbath School 2:30. W. J. Ford, Superintendent.

METHODIST CHURCH.

Services every Sunday at 10:30 a. m and 7 p. m. Sunday School at 2:30. Prayer Meeting every Thursday evening from 8 to 9, Rev. Geo. Boggin Pastor; G. S. Bowes, S. S. Superintendent. Ladies' Aid in connection: Mrs. T. Hill, Secretary.

Strangers and visitors always welcome

Parties desiring sittings will apply to C. W. Rutledge, Pew Steward.

MURDER AT ALLENFORD.

The Crime Premeditated—The Murderer attempts to Commit Suicide—He is Arrested and Placed in Gaol—A strong Feeling Against him.

TARA, July 10.—The section of country around Allenford has been shocked repeatedly during the past few years by crimes of poisoning cattle, incendiarism, robbery, rape, etc., but on Friday last the most terrible event that has ever disgraced the history of the Bruce Peninsula was enacted in the Township of Amabel, about one mile and a half north of that village, which resulted in a fine, handsome widow about thirty-five years old. Your correspondent visited the scene of the tragedy in company with Constable Briggs, of Tara, and below is a history of the occurrence, as near as could be gathered from friends and neighbors. Mr. A. McDougall died about five years ago, leaving his widow with four children, aged from one to seven years, and in fairly comfortable circumstances. Fully a year or more after his decease a neighbor named Samuel Hughes a man of rather shady reputation in the community, who has a wife living in this village who could not live with him because of his ill-treatment of her, began to evince great interest in the welfare of McDougall's widow assisting her in various ways, by cutting her wood, etc., in the winter and saving her small crop of hay in the summer. His attentions became more marked year by year, until during the past winter he is said to have lived at the home of Mrs. McDougall almost entirely. Some of her friends and neighbors felt this was hardly right and took the liberty of pointing out to her the errors of such a thing, and drawing attention to Hughes' character. Her replies were that Hughes had always used her kindly, that she loved him and

THE DEATH OF MRS. ARCHIBALD M'DOUGALL,

WOULD MARRY HIM IF SHE COULD.

Recently Hughes made overtures to his Tara wife to release him from the bonds that held him to her, offering her one hundred dollars if she would consent to a separation and agree to let him marry again. Mrs Hughes declined all such overtures, although very willing to be rid of her unloved spouse in a legal and proper manner. This was the condition of affairs two months ago, when a second man appeared upon the scene in the person of Alexander Dempster, of Algoma, a former hotelkeeper of Allenford, who had known Mrs. McDougall as a girl. He lost his wife some years ago, wanted another and he made up his mind to win Mrs. McDougal if he could. He pressed his suit with vigor, was accepted, and they were to have been married some day this week. It is generally believed that as soon as Mrs. McDougall engaged herself to Dempster she gave Hughes to understand that his visit to her must cease at once. He objected to this, of course and repeatedly came to the house during the past few weeks. He never received any encouragement, however, so far as can be learned from the statements of the children who reported that their mother sent him away again and again. This treatment made him desperate, and on Thursday he made a will, dividing his property between his two sons by his first wife. At the same time he got a friend to telegraph to his son at Duluth to come home at once as he

WAS NOT GOING TO LIVE MANY DAYS.

On Friday afternoon he went over to Mrs. McDougall's. She was preparing her three eldest children to attend a picnic in the neighborhood, and they report that their mother and Hughes had some angry words before they left, but no violance was attempted. He remained around the premises and took dinner with the doomed woman and her youngest child, a little toddler of six years, and his presence there was remarked by a couple of neighbors who came about one o'clock to get a horserake. It is evident Mr. McDougall anticipated no trouble or she would have applied to those for assistance. They were the last people that saw her alive. The little child states that his mother went outside shortly after they departed, and Hughes followed her and spoke to her. She made some reply, and then he drew a little short gun from his pocket and she fell over. Hughes turned to the little fellow and told him to run over and tell his grandfather, an old man named Eberts, Mrs. McDougall's father, who lives in a small house about one hundred and fifty yards from that occupied by her, that his mother was dead. The little fellow delivered the message, and when Mr. Eberts arrived at the house of his daughter, he found her stretched on the floor of the kitchen, dead with a pillow under her head. The sigh was a terrible blow to the aged father but he quickly secured assistance, and Dr. Taylor was promptly called. Nothing could be done for the poor woman, however, as a short examination revealed two gaping bullet wounds in her breast, and death must have been almost instantaneous. The news of the tragedy spread rapidly and an immense crowd of neighbors and villagers soon gathered. The capture of Hughes was their first object, and a search being started his coat and hat were found in one of the rooms of the house and his boots in another, but he was nowhere around. Constable Barclay then started for his own house, about one mile away, and there he found him stretched on a straw stack and attended by a couple of neighbors. There is no doubt he intended committing suicide, likely at the home of his victim, whom he dragged into the house after shooting, but after removing a portion of his clothes, he probably changed his mind and started for home across the fields. Arrived there he fired one shot into his miserable carcase but the bullet struck one of his ribs, and failed to reach a vital spot. It appears he had not courage to try again, but went over to the house of Mr. Boon, on the next farm, taking off his pants on the way and hanging them on the fence, and appearing in the presence of Mr. Boon with nothing his person but a shirt. He was greatly excited and said he had shot Mrs. McDougall and that he was going to die, and asked for a drink of water. Boon complied with his request and then assisted him home, where the constable found him, as stated, and arrested him and removed him to Allenford, where the bullet was extracted from his back and his wounds dressed.

AND SHOT HER TWICE,

WITH A BULLET WOUND IN HIS BACK

THE INQUEST.

In the evening an inq... Coroner J. B. Taylor, ... foot [illegible] foreman of the jury. ... Tara, conducted a post-mortem ... on the murdered woman and found ... gunshot bullet wounds in her right ... about two inches apart, passing through ... lung. One bullet was discovered in... ribs behind; the other was embedded ... the spine. Either wound was sufficient ... cause death. Nine witnesses were ex... whose testimony brought out many of ... facts above given. A verdict of wilful, ... meditated murder was returned ... Hughes, and he was committed to ... Walkerton gaol to stand his trial at the ... Assizes for this awful offence.

THE VICTIM AND THE MURDERER.

Mrs. McDougall was the third ... of John Eberts, an aged and highly ... ed German resident of the township. ... grief of her father, sisters and elder ... on first viewing her remains was ... description and there was not a dry ... among all those who witnessed it. ... men and women wept in unison, and ... was a terrible cry for vengeance on the ... of the crime. If Hughes had been ... then there is not a doubt but he would ... been swung to the nearest tree. The ... was removed to gaol on Saturday ... He is a tall, dark-complexion man of ... unprepossessing personal appearance ... about 40 years of age. Rumor connects ... name with many unlawful acts in the ... ship and there are none to sympathise ... him.

Euphrasia Council.

The council met pursuant to ... journment on 30th June, 1887.

Members all present except ... Fawcett; Minutes of last session ... council read and confirmed.

A petition signed by Richard C... foot and 21 others, asking for the op... ing of side road 6 and 7 in the ... concession, laid over until next ... ing of council.

Mr. Hurd was appointed to exa... the roads at lots Nos. 1 and 3 in ... 7th line with the view of making ... pairs.

Erskine—Hurd—That as ... council has been in the habit of ... ing for the use of schoolhouses, ... quired as polling places, at both M... icipal and Legislative Elections, ... sum of $2.00 for the use of each sch... house, this amount being considered ... both council and trustees fair ... satisfactory, although the Legis... of Ontario makes it legal for trus... to demand $4.00 for the use of s... house at Legislative Elections.

That as the trustees of school ... tion No. 14, have taken advantage ... this provision and demand $4.00 ... as this council considers it to ... only just that all parties should be ... equally, that the treasurer be ... structed to remit $2.00 additional ... the proper parties for the ... of their polling places, used at ... Legislative elections, viz.

Union S. S. No. 6, Euphrasia ... Collingwood, $2.00; Union S. S. ... 4, Euphrasia and Collingwood, $2... School S. No. 15, $2.00; School ... No. 9, $2.00; Orange Hall, Kimber... $2.00.—Carried.

The Reeve's orders were issued ... the Treasurer to pay as follows, ...

W. Alcock, $2.00; repairing ... scraper; H. Curry, $2, repairing ... scraper; G. Crabtree, $2.25; repa... road scraper; Jas. Cook, $3.00; p... to repair culvert; Jas. Homes, $... 75, work on town line Collingwo... John Dales, $2.00, repairs on ... mail line, con. 1; J. W. Gu... $1.00, cedar for culv... at Epping; R. Dunlop, clerk, $30... part salary; J. McMorris $14.75, w... on 27 and 28 side line, con. 1; ... Dales, $7.75, repaired bridge on ... mail road.

Council adjoured until the last ... day in June.

R. DUNLOP, Clerk

CLIPPINGS.

HYMENEAL.—On Wednesday ... Mr. William Masson, of the legal ... of Masson & Masson, of this town, ... Mary, second daughter of the late ... Joseph Parker, were united in marri... at the residence of the bride's moth... by the Rev. A. H. R. Mulholl... The happy couple left on the aftern... train, with the well wishes of ma... friends.—[O. S. Advertiser.

The Sad Fate of a Jubilee Dude

A jubilee dude with a jubilee smile,
Made a jubilee call in a jubilee style;
He'd jubilee pants, a jubilee coat,
And a jubilee tie around his jubilee throat;
He'd a jubilee glass in his jubilee eye;
He'd a jubilee voice and a jubilee sigh.
A jubilee miss dressed in jubilee lace,
Met this jubilee dude with a jubilee face.
On the jubilee breast of this jubilee girl
Was a jubilee brooch made of jubilee pearl
This jubilee maid in a jubilee mood,
Was a jubilee love with a jubilee dude
And when he proposed in a jubilee way
A jubilee wedding on Jubilee Day,
With a jubilee gaze this jubilee miss
Raised her jubilee lips for a jubilee kiss.
But her jubilee pa raised his jubilee eyes,
Saw that jubilee kiss, heard the jubilee sighs
When the jubilee pa raised his jubilee boot,
The jubilee dude gave a jubilee scoot,
But a jubilee dog made a Jubilee row,
Got his Jubilee mouth full of Jubilee trou...

Markdale Standard

"HEW TO THE LINE, LET THE CHIPS FALL WHERE THEY MAY."

SEVENTH YEAR.—No. 358. MARKDALE, ONT., JULY 21, 1887. C. W. RUTLEDGE, Proprietor.

Local and Other Items.

Notices in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

NOTICE.—Correspondence, communications, Advertisements, &c., must be in this office by noon on Tuesday to insure publication that week.

—: AT :—

RUSSELL'S

—NOTED JEWELERY STORE,—

FLESHERTON,

will be found the most complete stock of Watches, Clocks, Jewelery, Silverware, Specs, &c., in this part of the country.

Call and see those watches they are selling at $12.00 bearing warrants for three and a half years, while other dealers are asking $15.00 for the same article. P. S. Bartlett, 3 oz. silver case for $16.00 while they are selling elsewhere for $17.50. Other dealers cannot compete with us and they know it. We cannot help them being annoyed at our unparalleled low prices; we must give the public the benefit of our close buying.

☞ Just Note a few prices.

A fine Nickle Alarm Clock for actually worth $2.00 bearing a warrant for two years. Your choice of over 20 fine gilded chains for only $1.60; Just think of it. Fine walnut clocks from $1.35 upward. Brooches, Ear-Rings, Ladies' Chains, Cuff-Buttons, Scarf-Pins, at equally low prices.

Remember if you want your Watch or Clock repaired properly by a workman, Russell's is the only place.

All orders by mail promptly attended to at

RUSSELL'S Noted Jewelry Store,

FLESHERTON.

Sero fly.

Don't bodder me.

New potatoes are now general.

The heat of last week was very oppressive; not so bad this week.

Fall wheat and barley is being cut this week in this neighborhood.

Mr. Rorke of Owen Sound has been spending his holidays in Markdale.

Miss Boddy, a teacher in Owen Sound Public School, paid Markdale a visit last week.

Miss Miles Young, of Blythe, is visiting in Markdale.

Geo. C. Bowes is home from Owen Sound High School.

Miss Logan of Meaford is visiting her sister, Mrs. Wm. Brown.

Hay is a heavy crop in this district, and is now mostly harvested in excellent condition.

Mr. R. D. Biggar returned on Monday from a visit down east.

John I. Graham, Vandeleur, has timothy over six feet long.

Ten days are 50 minutes shorter now than a month ago.

Mrs. C. W. Rutledge is recovering from her severe illness.

Miss McGee and daughter, and Miss Bryden is up from Toronto visiting their parents.

Messrs. Brown and R. J. Brown are home from Owen Sound Coll. Inst. for their holidays.

Glenelg Voters' List for 1887 is just out. The job took a ream and three quires of paper and is in every respect firstclass.

Andrew S. Irving, one of our most enterprising farmers, cut a handsome field of fall wheat last Monday and Tuesday.

Misses Anna Anderson and Annie Henry went to Toronto this week where they purpose spending a short time.

Mr. J. H. Packham, a teacher in Owen Sound High School, spent Sunday in Markdale.

Rev. Mr. Buggin's two sons are visiting their parents this week.

Read Stephen's racket on the Potato Bugs in another column.

Don't miss McFarland's new adv. Look it up first thing.

We had a friendly call this week from Rev. A. B. Demill, Founder and President of Demill College, Oshawa.

Mr. H. Parker, druggist of Durham, has a change of adv. in this paper. Look it up.

Miss Price from New York State arrived in Markdale last week and will spend a couple of months with her sister, Mrs. Wm. Stephens.

J. F. Carson sold a steam thresher to Thos. S. Wright of Glenelg, who will make things hum as soon as the fall wheat is harvested.

J. Cæsar, our station agent, is perhaps our most successful Flower and early vegetable gardner. He showed us this week a cucumber 9 inches long and 9½ inches around, but if U eat them they will W up.

Markdale and Priceville Base Ball Clubs played a match game on the grounds of the latter last Friday, resulting in a victory for the Markdale Club by 44 to 15 runs in nine innings.

The Presbyterian Ladies' Aid will give a garden party on Mr. Plewes property down by the mill, on the evening of July 29th. Boating, Croquett, and other amusements will be provided. All are invited. Admission 15 cents.

Markdale Methodist S. School will hold their annual pic-nic in Armstrong's grove on Friday afternoon, (to-morrow). The brass band will be on hand.

The Toronto cattle market has been glutted recently, so much so that some drovers had to return part of their shipment home, or loose heavily.

We are pleased to state that Mr. W. T. Jackman, our old foreman, and esteemed friend, is so far recovered from his recent severe and prolonged illness as to be able to work at the case again. He is now enjoying good health, and spends his spare hours doing Ladies' fancy work, at which he has become quite on expert, and is preparing specimens for the Fall Show.

Donald McKinnon, sr., and his son Malcolm, of Glenelg received serious injuries one day last week while going to Durham by being upset out of the rig.

W. A. Brown, our enterprising jeweller, has a beautiful stock of fine goods well worth the inspection of those requiring anything in his line. It is a rare thing to see such a stock outside the cities.

Miss. Lizzie Moore of Holland, teacher, and Miss Buchanan of Artemesia took a trip up the Lakes to the "Soo" for their holidays.

A new way of killing flies is to catch them bring them to the telegraph office and give them each an electric shock. Alf Hall says it fetches them every time.

John E. Richards, merchant, of Rocklyn, spent Sunday and Monday in Markdale among his many friends. He reports business steadily increasing and prospects bright for a good fall trade.

The contract is let for the erection of an addition to Glenelg Agricultural Society's Hall in Markdale. The coming Fall Show promises to be much larger than any former one. Tickets for membership are only $1.00 up to the 27th July, (next Wednesday) after that date $2.00 will be the fee.

Messrs Sam. Henning and Seth Mathers of the 9th line Euphrasia drove to Essa township, Simcoe county, recently to visit friends. Henning has a spanking fine team of young horses, and the pair doubtless had a jolly time. It is hinted that there are special attractions in that direction, not black bears either.

BUSINESS LOCALS.

Unprecedented bargains at J. G. Anderson's.

A choice farm of 100 acres for sale. See adv. or apply to John Whitby.

See J. G. Anderson's 10c. line of dress goods; they beat all.

Pure Paris Green at Stephen's Drug Store,

Embroideries at about half price at J. G. Anderson's.

I shall clear every line of fishing tackle out at once, Poles, Baskets, &c., W. A. Brown.

Don't fail to see J. G. Anderson's ten cent prints; they are daisies.

Harvest Mits from the best manufacturers at Mabee's.

I expect to be up the Lakes two weeks—work left at the shop will be promptly attended to on my return. W. A. Brown.

For Barley Forks, Grain Cradles, Grain Scythes, see Mabee.

See that lace J. G. Anderson is selling for one cent a yard, cheap at 5 cents.

Paris Green pure at the Medical Hall, A. Turner & Co.

Genuine bell glass to be had only from Mabee's Hardware, next door to Turner's Drug Store.

Nothing to equal J. G. Anderson's 4 lb for $1. tea.

Fresh Fish.—Sarjeant Bros., butchers, receive a supply of fresh fish twice a week.

Cigars! Cigars! lovers of a good Havana cigar will find that Benson has the finest cigar in town, sold by the box.

We buy our goods at feather edge prices; we give the customers the benefit; they make a note of it and call on us often: Consequence, a mutual benefit. Mabee, the Hardware.

Holland Council.

Holland Centre, July 9th 1887.

Council met for the transaction of business. Reeve in the chair; Members all present. Minutes of former meeting read and approved.

Shute—Murray—That by-law No. 5, for the purpose of raising $4,800 to assist Union S. S. No. 1, Holland and Sullivan, to buy site and build new school house, be read 1, 2, 3, times.—Carried.

Murray—Shute—That the requisition of Jas. Lonsway, with regard to getting pay for road taken of his lot, be laid over for further consideration.—Carried, Galbraith—Murray—That Mr. Blyth's bill be paid.—Carried.

Shute—Murray—That the report given by the committee appointed to look over the assessment roll, be referred back to the committee for further information.—Carried.

Murray—Shute—That the application of trustees of U. S. S. No. 1, Holland and Sullivan, for $5.00 to pay for drafting, by-law to assist said Trustees to borrow $4,800, to buy site and build new school house be laid over for further information.—Carried.

Howey—Galbraith—That we pay $5.00 to trustees of U. S. S. No. 1, H. and S. for drafting by-law No. 5 for the purpose above mentioned.—Lost.

Shute—Murray—That the report of special committee to examine town line between Holland and Sullivan and Holland and Glenelg be adopted.

Galbraith—Shute—That we spend $40.00 on the town line between Holland and Glenelg, that is, $20.00 on each side of the 6th concession east and west.

A petition was presented by Thos. Armstrong signed by 30 ratepayers with regard to repairing the 50 side road 2 and 3 E. G. R. and being a continuance of the 40 side road W. T. and S. Road.

Shute—Galbraith—That the sum of $40 be spent in accordance with the above petition in case the petition complete the work, if the money is too little to complete the job, Murray—Howey—That $15.00 be granted to cut down hill on 9, and 10, side road E. G. R. near Congers old mill.

Murray—Galbraith—That we grant $20.00 to be spent on town line between the 4th con. and Garafraxa road in case Sydenham supplement the same.

Howey—Murray—That we grant $40.00 to town line between Euphrasia and Holland, $25. north of 15 side road, and $15.00 south of it subject to the supplement of Euphrasia.

Galbraith—Shute—That we grant $15 to assist to cut down Geo. Walker's hill.

Shute—Galbraith—That $15.00 be granted to repair bridge on 2nd con. W. T. & S. R. near Sutliffs.

Murray—Shute—That Mr Howey be instructed to bridge over Narrows at Henderson's lake.

Murray—Howey—That the Treas. be instructed to withdraw the five hundred dollars deposited with the Farmers Loan and Saving company on or after the 28th July.

Howey—Murray—That Messrs Galbraith and Shute be a committee to examine bridge on 2nd con. near Campbell's and report on condition of the same.

Howey—Galbraith—That the assessor get the balance of his salary,

Howey—Galbraith—That we adjourn till the 11th of August.

Carson Price.
Tp Clerk.

GIVE THEM A CHANCE.

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air-passages, but the thousand of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and chocked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, croup, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else had failed you you, may depend upon this for certain.

Voters' List for 1887.

Municipality of the Township of Glenelg, County of Grey.

NOTICE is hereby given, that I have transmitted or delivered to the persons mentioned in the third and fourth sections of "The Voters List Act," the copies required by said-section to be transmitted or delivered of the list made, pursuant to said act, of all persons appearing by the last revised Assessment Roll of the said Municipality to be entitled to vote in said Municipality at Elections for members of the Legislative Assembly, and the Municipal Elections; and said list was posted up at my office at Lot 24 Con. 4, Township of Glenelg, on the 20th day of July, 1887, and remains there for inspection.

Electors are called upon to examine the said list, and, if any ommissions or any other errors are found therein, to take immediate proceedings to have the said error corrected according to law.

JOHN S. BLACK,
Clerk of the said Municipality.
Dated this 20th day of July A. D. 1887,
358-60

6 PER CENT.

Money loaned on Farm or Town Property at lowest rates of interest. Apply to
R. J. SPROULE,
Conveyancer & Postmaster, Flesherton.

SIGHT v. BLINDNESS.

N. STANLEY'S
CELEBRATED
English Spectacles

79 BAY STREET, TORONTO CANADA.
—AND—
18 JEWIN STREET, LONDON E. C. ENGLAND.

—:x:—

R. L. Stephen's,
CHEMIST & DRUGGIST, Markdale

Has the Agency for the sale of the above in MARKDALE. No Spectacles in the Market equal them in the EYE PRESERVING QUALITIES they possess, or the GREAT EASE and COMFORT they confer on the wearer.

Their use will in actuality so strengthen the Eyes that it does not become necessary to change them for many years. They are therefore the CHEAPEST.

THEY ARE THE BEST IN THE WORLD
THEY NEVER TIRE THE EYE
AND LAST MANY EYARS WITHOUT CHANGE.

The Sight tests by our New Test Card, same as used by the leading Oculists throughout the world. 357-409

NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that any person or persons found trespassing or fishing on the farms of the undersigned will be prosecuted according to law without further notice.

Signed:—

John B. Thibandeau,	Thos. Brady
Edward Brady,	James Brady,
William Brady,	Wm. McCutcheon
John Shears,	Geo. Richardson,
Wm. McNally,	George McNally,
James Elliott,	James Slinson,
Adam Hislop.	Robt Graham.
John Webber.	John Perkins.

W. A. BROWN

"THE PEOPLE'S JEWELLER"

—DEALER IN—

Fine Gold, Filled Gold, and Coin Silver Cases; with Hampden, Columbus, Waltham and Elgin Movements, in Ladies' and Gents' sizes. Solid 18 k Wedding Rings. Roll Gold Chains, and Jewellery in large variety Beautiful lines in Silverware for presentation purposes. I keep in Jewellers lines the finest and most complete stock between Shelburne and Owen Sound; do business for myself in my own name, and can be held to every warrant I sign. I don't quote prices on Watches "Not in Stock," and then tell a customer wanting Bartlett at $16, "I just sold the last one." I have P. S. Bartlett's, in stock at $17.50 less cash dis., warranted 3 years. I expect to establish, more fully every year of business life an unquestioned reputation for Reliability. Straight Dealing. Fine Work and Close Prices.

Watch and Clock Warrants 2 and 3 years covering breakages.

☞ A call to Price or Purchase respectfully solicited.

GOODS
BEST QUALITY. WORK FIRST-CLASS.

W. A. BROWN, - Box 5,
MARKDALE.

FARMERS!

Don't forget there is good work done at the Flesherton

WOOLEN FACTORY

And we are doing all in our power to please. Customers are finding out it is to their advantage to deal with us, our Prices are Low and Our Goods are Reliable and notwithstanding price being cut so close on account of hard times, I intend to reduce the manufacturing prices in nearly every branch, viz., OILING, ROLL-CARDING, SPINNING, WEAVING, &c., &c. Give us a trial and see for yourself.

W. H. FLESHER.

Flesherton, May 30th, 1887.

TADOUSAC.

Once the Commercial Metropolis of Canada.

"A lovely ship sailed up the St. Lawrence,
The white whales floundering in the Bay of Tadousac, and the wild duck diving as the foaming prow drew near,—there was no life but these in all that solitude, twenty miles from shore to shore. The ship was from Honfleur and was commanded by Samuel de Champlain. He was the Æneas of a destined people, and in her womb lay the embryo life of Canada." It is in these words that Parkman begins the wonderful story of the true settlement of Canada, but before Champlain, and therefore before there was Canada, there was a Tadonsac. Eight years before Champlain and Pontgrave, his merchants associate, appeared upon the scene, a colony of rough fishermen had been formed there and a large and lucrative fur trade was being done. These men wintered there, died fast of the scurvy, not knowing how to make spruce beer, and others took their places. When Pontgrave, some time before Champlain, appeared in the Bay of Tadousac and worked his ship around La
Pointe les Tous les Diables, or La Pointe Aux Rochers, he found a sturdy Basque trader already there, and what was worse, the Basque was trading with the Indians very largely. Pontgrave displayed the King's royal deed of monopoly to the Basques, but these people refused to see the beauty of monopoly, and for the first time in the history of Canada

WHITE MAN FOUGHT WHITE MAN and the frowning gorge of the Saguenay re-echoed the roar of cannon. The Basques were triumphant and when on that fateful 3rd of June Champlain swept into the little bay he found his colleague a prisoner. A truce was signed after a diplomatic conference and the Basques gave up the fur trade and betook themselves to catching whales.

Near the brink of the little cove or harbor where the vessels lay, now called L'Anse a L'Eau, Champlain found the remains of a wooden building, the only fragment of a dwelling built by white men in all the broad north land. Above the brook which forms the outlet of that black lake, which now charms and chills summer visitors, were the lodges of a band of Algonquins. The wooden building was re-built, and while Pont-grave commenced to trade, Champlain went on to the grandeur of Quebec, the loveliness of Mount Royal, to befriend the Huron and fight the Iroquois, and to begin in very fact that New France that was to extend across the continent. While Quebec was being founded and fought for by soldiers, and Montreal was being built to shelter the holy nuns, Tadousac was the "commercial metropolis" of Canada. Here, amid the desolation of the barren mountains and the black water, the untamable wildness of the spot where

THE BARE SKELETON OF THE CONTINENT is revealed, a regular market was first opened in Canada. The fur dealers came yearly from France and the Indians as regularly descended the Saguenay and the St. Lawarence to the meeting place. For a few months the lonely bay was thronged with the wildest of civilized and the wildest of savage men. The Algonquin Indians, with whom the Basques were trading when Pontgrave made his appearance, became the middlemen between the French and the distant tribes of Indians, and they brought to Tadousac the spoils of the chase from Hudson Bay to the great lakes. A third class, who in the early history of Canada, were always to be found with if not before the fur traders, also came to Tadousac, the missionary priests who came to gather in a harvest of souls, not of furs, and finding the Indians could not be induced to locate themselves at Tadousac, they followed them into the forest. A Jesuit convent was built at a very early date, and it is said that the first stone house ever built in Canada was built here. A small resident population grew about the convent, for it was profitable to be on hand to buy before the ships came in the spring; but the place was a trading station and nothing more, until the church of the Recollects, the first church in Canada, was erected. Champlain appeared at Tadou-sac in 1608, and it is probable the church was erected about forty years after. The present building was built in 1747, but it is merely the second or third building which has stood upon the foundations of the first church. The church was the centre of the settlement, the home church of the first missionaries, the one thing in the world which brought to the rough traders a memory of the old. The settlement prospered, finding commerce a better stay than Quebec found in arms, and the annual ships from France discharged all their cargoes at this point. The export of furs was large, the DeCaen monoply taking 22,000 heavy skins out of the port in one season. In 1629 David Kirk, with six large ships partially manned with Huguenot refugees, sailed into the bay of Tadousac, and seized possession of it in the name of His Britannic Majesty. The fleet lay there

CROUCHING FOR THEIR PREY

until the sails of the annual spring fleet rose above the St. Lawernce. Then they slipped their cables and swooped down upon the advancing fleet. The overcrowded transport stood no chance against such a fleet as Kirk's and the lilies of France went down before the red cross for the first time on the St. Lawernce. The rescuing fleet captured, Quebec was left to starvation and the English. On the 20th of July the red cross waved over Quebec for the first time and shortly after the English fleet, on board of which was Champlain, the Jesuits and the garrison of Quebec, gathered in Tadousac. Kirk had captured eighteen French ships and nineteen fishing vessels, but his booty was not large, and as the enterprise of the conquest of Canada had been undertaken at his own cost he was somewhat morose. At any rate he seems to have given to Champlain a sufficient number of things to grumble at, and indeed the great pioneer seems to have groaned and grumbled at his treatment, his bed and his food, to an extent that must have made him a serious trial to his captors. Kirk tried trading with the Indians, fishing and hunting, and as the fall drew near he burned the church and village and set sail for England.

In 1832 De Caen anchored before Quebec, and the fortress was surrendered to him by Thomas Kirk, who had held it since 1628.
From that time onward the French ships came to Quebec, not Tadousac, and the fur trade soon ascended the river to Montreal.
Tadousac became a fishing and a mission station, the one spot on the lower river where a church tower rose, and it is now the quaintest seaside resort in Canada. The little old church has been the centre of the little community for years, and its sunburrowed floors under dark, smoke-grimed pine sheathing give it an air of antiquity which the years of the present building hardly justify.

Her Visitor.

In the days when the dread of tramps was not as widely spread as it is at present, her parents had ventured to leave little Elizabeth at home alone while the rest of the family went to church. The house was at the least a quarter of a mile away from another dwelling, but although Elizabeth was a very small child, she was not alarmed, but had only a sense of pleased importance in her loneliness. At first she sat with a book of Josephus's History open on her lap. She could only read the short words, but that made no difference; papa always read it on Sunday.

Then she went out to sit on the steps and watch the humming-birds near the door. Presently, up the path walked an unshorn, unkempt, and dirty man.

Elizabeth rose, smoothed her apron; and sat waiting for him to speak; she was not afraid, but the sense of being sole mistress of the house maid her serious.

"Folks to home?" grunted the man.

"No, sir; I'm all alone," answered Elizabeth, gravely.

"Can't you gi' me somethin' to eat?"

"Yes, sir; you wait here," and the little maid went to the pantry, and, after laborious spreading of butter appeared with a plate of white bread.

"Aint there any pie? Aint you got any cake?" said the man, in surly coaxing.

"Yes, sir; but I'm never allowed to cut into 'em."

"The doctor said I wasn't to eat no bread, not if I starved. He said t'would be the death o' me."

"I'm so sorry," said the little girl, pitifully; "you wait till mamma comes, and she'll give you some, but I couldn't—not, anyway."

The man looked at her for a moment, from widely open eyes; then, with perhaps as much surprise at himself as at her, he began to munch the bread and butter, and finished it to the last crumb.

"Gi' me a match," he said, taking out his pipe.

"I can't sir; father doesn't let the men smoke round the buildings, and I know he wouldn't you."

The man stared at her again, Elizabeth calmly returning his gaze. Then he broke into a laugh.

"Well, if you aint the gamest chicken
I ever see!" he said, and walked away.
Elizabeth went back to her contemplation of the humming-birds.

Next day the tramp was arrested for robbery in a farmhouse near by, the deed having been committed that very Sunday forenoon.

"Oh, I don't think it could have been the gentleman I fed," said Elizabeth, when she heard her horrified mother declare that it must be the same; "he was so polite!"

A Thrilling Scene.

M. Albert de Mun, the great orator of the Clerical party in the French Chamber, made an impressive speech on the Army bill. He paid a glowing tribute to the memory of the old army which had acquitted itself so brilliantly in Africa, the Crimea and Italy, and went on to say: "Yes, I render a supreme homage to that army which fought so valiantly at Gravelotte and Rezonville, at Weissonburg and Reichshoffen; to the army which made that charge at Sedan of which I cannot speak without a rising in my throat, for half the regiment of Chasseurs d'Afrique —that charge which drew from the King of Prussia a cry, like that of William of Orange at Nerwinde. 'Oh, those gallant fellows!, he cried, as the other had exclaimed 'Les Insolents!'" The entire House partook of the emotion of the speaker. There were few dry eyes among the members, whether they sat on the right or the left of the President.
Ladies in the tribune wept aloud. Then suddenly, the first thrill of emotion past, a loud cheer arose from all the benches, only to be repeated again and again. The spectators would have joined had the regulations permitted, for they shared the general enthusiasm. And in the tribune, pale with emotion, his arms crossed on his stalwart breast, stood one of the heroes of the fray.
It was long since such a chord had been struck; for the simple, sincere, manly lan guage of the soldier-deputy sank deep into all hearts.

WEDDING SUPERSTITIONS.

The bride must keep the pins which fastened her wedding dress.

"Thrice a bridesmaid, never a bride," is a proverb that needs no comment.

Marry at the time of the moon's waning and your good luck will wan also.

If two marriages are celebrated simultaneously one of the husbands will die.

Fair or foul weather upon one's wedding day augurs a happy or unhappy married life.

If a girl who is engaged accidentally lets a knife fall it is a sign that her lover is coming.

The husband must never take off the wedding-ring: to take it off will insure him bad luck of some kind.

The girl who steps accidentally or otherwise, on a cat's tail need not expect to be married the same year.

Jubilee Jugs.

The Prince of Wales originated the idea of the Jubliee jugs which to the number of 85,- 000 were distributed to the children in Hyde Park last week. His royal Highness was much struck by the distribution of rough brown cups bearing the Imperial cipher in relief, with which the Czar commemorated the marriage of the Czarovitch; and the productions of Messrs. Doulton, which cost nearly sixpence each, are great improvements on the original. The ground is of polished cream-coloured earthenware, and the two portraits of the Queen (1827 and 1887) are artistically executed in neutral tints.

What He Should Say.

"Ma," said Bertha, "should I say
'pants' or 'trowsers'?"

"Trowsers, my dear," said the mother.

"Well then," said Bertie, "I think Bridget had better give Fido some water; he trowsers awfully."

CURED BY A MIRACLE.

Mrs. Baby Mantel, of Keeler, Mich., had been lying in bed for eighteen months until the other day when she suddenly rose and dressed herself without assistance. She now feels perfectly well, whereas previously she had not been able to drag herself around the house. Mrs. Mantel says that she prayed for recovery from the time she was taken ill and that her prayers just before her restoration to health were no more earnest than they had been.

Medical circles in Erie are much amazed at the miraculous recovery from paralysis of Isaac Baily, a Lancaster soldier, who has been a patient at the Erie Soldiers' Home for a long time past. He had suffered almost entire paralysis from a gunshot wound, and during his stay at the Home had been as helpless as a child. A few mornings ago he astonished his attendants by dressing himself unaided and walking about the premises as if nothing ailed him. He now seems to be entirely well.

A Chicago woman who has had some success in the Christian science faith cure made an astonishing cure last week in the case of M. F. Potter, an Iowa man, who injured his spine ten months ago, and came to look on his condition as hopeless. Nine doctors treated him for six months and then gave him up to die. The Chicago woman cured him in two weeks without administering a drop of medicine, and he is now so well that he can walk a mile at a brisk gait without the slightest inconvenience.

Up to the last week Mrs. B. F. Howe, of Huntington, had for more than three years been a bedridden invalid. She suffered from nervous prostration, was partially paralyzed and was even too sick to feed herself. Her physicians told her that death was rapidly approaching. On the afternoon of Saturday, June 18, a few friends came over from the prayer-meeting at the church and prayed for her recovery. She grew stronger and heart-ier every day, and seems to be entirely well.

Mrs. Walter Meade, the wife of an Adrain drayman, had been confined to her bed for several years with chronic diseases. A short time ago an internal abscess began to sap her remaining strength and her case was abandoned as hopeless. At last the physician told her that at the utmost she could live only two days. Mrs. Meade prayed earnestly that night to be restored to health and awoke refreshed. New life seemed to course through her veins and she grew stronger every hour. The abscess dried up and disappeared, the other ailments departed and Mrs. Meade is now well. Besides that, her husband, long a scoffer at religion, is now a devout church-goer.

Thomas Bedow, an Allegheny City blacksmith, lost the use of his legs two years ago, and his physician told him that he was afflicted with an incurable case of paralysis.
He tried every known kind of treatment in vain and then resigned himself to his fate.
Last week Mr. Bedow read an account of a remarkable cure wrought by faith, and when he went to bed that night he prayed long and earnestly that he might recover. The moment he awoke in the morning he felt that he was cured. He sprung from bed, danced about the floor, jumped into his clothing and ran downstairs, shouting all the time like a madman. Before ending his antics he ran about the yard several times to test his new-found strength. Mr. Bedow says he hasn't been so well for twenty years as he is now.

PREMONITIONS OF DEATH.

A Nashville lady dreamed one night recently that her old school friend, whose bridesmaid she had been at her wedding to a Virginia planter a year before, had died suddenly and that she was present at the funeral. The lady related the dream to her family, and refused to be convinced that it was not a premonition of death. A week later a delayed letter reached the lady informing her that her friend had died at about the same time with the occurrence of the dream.

At a recent seance in Cleveland a Mrs.
Moss related how she had been forewarned of the death of her husband's sister Maggie.
The two women had been warm friends, but had not seen each other for years; but last week, while Mrs. Moss was alone in her room, her sister-in-law appeared before her and after speaking affectionately to her kissed her and departed. Mrs. Moss was much distubed by the visitation, and telegraphed to learn if her sister-in-law was ill.
She was not surprised to receive a letter the next morning announcing that Maggie was dead.

Louisa Benn, the daughter of a laborer in Wednesburg, England, made up her mind to emigrate to Australia, and gained the consent of her parents. Just before she was to sail, however, her mother dreamed that the ship which was to carry her daughter struck a rock near the Australian coast and went down with great loss of life. She succeeded in dissuading Louisa from going, but not until the girl's baggage had been placed on board the vessel and every preparation made for her departure. The ship went down, as Mrs. Benn had imagined it would and among the lives lost were those of several girls who were to have been Louisa's companions.

Little Agnes Buckley, a policeman's daughter of Newburyport, who died recent ly, had a strong realization of her approaching death, although the physicians had not given her up. On the afternoon of the day she died she called her mother to the bedside to make arrangements for the funeral, and announced that she had only a minute or two longer to live. Just then the gate clicked and she heard her father's footsteps coming up the walk. Raising herself in bed with her remaining strength the child cried out: "Hurry up, papa, I'll wait a minute for you." The agonized father heard the cry and rushed up the stairs to the bedroom. He had barely time to take his daughter in his arms, when she whispered "Good-by" to him and expired.

A young woman employed as a domestic by a Denver family married a private soldier in the regular army a year ago, and immediately after the wedding returned to her service, while her husband was sent out to Port Union, in New Mexico. One afternoon last week, while sitting in the kitchen, she heard a tapping at the window, and on looking up saw the face of her husband there.
The apparition remained for a minute without speaking and then slowly faded away.
The young woman ran screaming into the presence of the family, related the strange experience to them and fainted. Later in the day she received a telegram from the fort announcing that her husband had died of fever the day before.

THE CRAZY ROMAN ROYALTS.

How Insanity Has Run Through the Entire Imperial Family.

In the recently published memoirs of Count Vitzthum, of Eckstadt, proofs are given of the hereditary character of the mental disease which afflicted the imperial family of Russia. All the sons of Czar Paul I., like that unhappy monarch himself, who was murdered in 1801, became subject to fits of insanity. Paul I. had four sons—Czar
Alexander I., the Grand Duke Constantine,
Czar Nicolas I., and the Grand Duke
Michael. Every one of them, after his forty-fifth year, exhibited undoubted signs of mental deraugement. This was not fully discovered in the case of Nicolas I. until after the Czar's death. An English physician, however, the Count says, noticed the appearance of the hereditary disease in the Czar as early as July, 1853, and he then predicted that the monarch had not more than two years of life before him. This he stated in a letter to Lord Palmerston. The Emperor Nicolas died in March, 1855, about four months earlier than the date predicted.
The Count appears to have no doubt that the Crimean war, so far as it depended on Nicolas was the rash act of a ruler "whose mental equipoise was disturbed." None of the four sons of Paul I. lived to be sixty years of age, and every one of them suffered from concussion of the brain after reaching his forty-fifth year.

Alexander died at forty-eight, a miserable man, moody and despondent, as Prince Metternich has painted him, "tired of existence." His brother, the Grand Duke Constantine, though not manifestly insane, gave frequent signs of mental disturbance, of which he was himself so plainly conscious that he did not think himself fit to be trusted with the reins of government. His conduct in the year 1830, at the outbreak of the revolution in Warsaw, will remain to prove his mental unsoundness. He had to be intrusted to the care of his wife, the Princess Lowicz, who was cautioned in the same way as is a physician in charge of a patient having intermittent fits of insanity.
He died in his fifty-second year from congestion of the brain. The Grand Duke Michael was killed by a fall from his horse at the age of forty-eight. Some years before his death he had exhibited signs of undoubted mental disease, and his physicians declared that he was on the road to certain insanity. The events of 1848-52 were not calculated to allay the hereditary dispositions of the imperial family of Russia, but to excite and intensify them. There is something terrible in the contrast between the outward position of the Czar Nicolas, upon the bent of whose will the fate of so many millions in Europe was depending, and the alleged diseased inward condition of his mind.

Sweet Summer.

BY SUSAN HARTLEY.

Sweat Summer, leaning o'er a rustic fence,
With marigolds beneath her freckled chin,
How fair thou art! A pitying Providence
Hath sent thee to this world of toil and sin.
What though the sun that follows thy brown feet
Too lavish may by with its glowing heat.

What dawns thou bringest, bright with scarlet fire,
To tempt us from our downy couch of sleep,
And lure us on to pleasure where the brier
Doth gayly through the breathless thickets creep,
And busy hornets hide within the bush,
And nimble snakes coil 'neath the blossom's blush.

What throbbing stars to peer through the green trees,
What witching moons to light the perfumed caves,
Where cooing lovers sit in blissful ease,
Amid the dim, mosquito-haunted leaves;
What restful nights made tuneful by the trill
Of festive crickets in the grasses still.

What peace of mind, what watermelons cool,
What languid sails, what seas of sweet ice-cream,
What doctor's bills, what fishing in a pool
When all the fish have vanished like a dream,
What sudden waves of tender sentinment,
What strange forgetting all you ever meant

Vacation in the happy wood that rings
Through thy best days so fairy-like and fair,
Oh, that's the time when to the old world clings
An simpler ether, a diviner air.
A little space it is, while sweet hours whirl,
To court ad libitum a Summer girl!

The Stone-Cutter.

There dwelt in far Japan,
Long ages since, a man
Who earned, by hammering stone, his daily food—
But discontent and dole
Lay heavy on his soul,
Which craved great riches as the only good.

And so the gods on high,
Who sometimes bitterly
Punish a man by granting all his prayers,
Gave him a mine of gold,
And lands to have and hold,
And, by and by, breed feuds among his heirs.

But soon he, murmuring,
Desired to be a king;
To reign and rule—ah, that were perfect bliss!
He wearied earth and air
With his incessant prayer
Until the gods indulged him, even in this.

His courtiers fawned and lied,
And rival powers, outside
His realm, assailed his peace with fierce debate,
And heaviness and care
Bleached gray his youthful hair,
And made him weary of his regal state.

"Oh, change me to a rock!"
He cried, "that no rude shock
Can stir, nor any strife disturb or shake!"
And lo! he stood, ere long,
A bowlder, fixed and strong,
Which torrents could not move, nor tempests break.

In vain the burning heat
Of fiercest sunshine beat
Upon his head; in vain the storm wind smote
His rugged sides; in vain
Great rivers, swoln by rain,
Came roaring from their mountain caves remote.

He was at rest; and he Rejoiced exceedingly,
Saying, "No more for me, oh, sweet release!
Will there be change and woe,
And wavering to and fro—
Since I am fixed in an eternal peace!"

But on a summer day
A workman brought that way
A hammer and a chisel—these alone.
He measured here and there,
And then, with patient care,
Began to cut away the stubborn stone.

"Ah!" said the bowlder king,
"What means this wondrous thing?
This plodding workman smites and conquers me!
He cuts as suits him best,
Huge blocks from out my breast—
He is more strong than I! Would I were he!"

And lo, the powers aloft,
Who had so long and oft
Laughed at his follies, craved and then out-grown,
Again his pleading heard;
He, taken at his word,
Became once more a hammerer of stone!

So, wiser than before
And asking nothing more,
Again about his olden toil he went;
Until he died from age
He toiled for scanty wage,
Nor ever spake a word of discontent!

The Queen of the Belgians.

It is a remarkable fact, but none the less worthy of record, that Queen Henrietta of Belgium, is popular everywhere but in the country of her adoption. In Austria, while staying under the roof of her parents, the Emperor and Empress, the little Archduchess was loved by every one, and to this day her memory is held in deep affection. In England, also, Her Majesty is much esteemed; but in Belgium it is quite the exception to find any one who has a good word to say for her. Some state the reason for this is her leaning towards and open encouragement of the Jesuits, and, as the Queen affects complete contempt of public opinion, her feelings for the Papists have never been disguised in the least. As a general rule the Queen is seldom seen in the town of Brussels itself, her daily excursions in her pony carriage, drawn by six cream-colored animals, which she drives herself, being confined to the Bois de Boulogne and Ixelles, the suburbs of Brussels, or to the beautiful grounds surrounding the summer palace of Laeken.
The Queen is rather short, not by any means ill-looking and dresses in the plainest, some say the shabbiest, manner possible. Like her cousin, the Empress of Austria, Her Majesty is passionately devoted to horses and passes most of her time in her stables, which are invariably kept to the pink of perfection in point of cleanliness and order.

The Bishop's Retort.

A FACT IN THE LIFE OF BISHOP WILBERFORCE.

A boistering atheist happened to meet
A bishop one day as he walked down the street,
And stopp'd him to ask in a bantering way,
This question—"Please tell me, Sir Bishop, I pray,
For I'm really a stranger where you are at home,
And don't care in ignorance longer to roam;
And to him that gives much, you know, much shall be given,
So tell me, Sir Bishop, the straight road to heaven."
The bishop, not slow at a witty retort,
And not unaccustomed to fools of this sort,
Most pleasantly smiled and most graciously said,
"First turn to the right and then keep on ahead."

The Trials of a Landlord.

Summer Tourist (to landlord)—Do you allow dogs in your hotel?

Landlord—Yes, sir, bring all the dogs you want to.

Summer Tourist—I'll have to go somewhere else. I can't stand dogs.

Another Summer Tourist—Do you allow dogs in your hotel?

Landlord—No, sir, won't have a dog about the place.

Tourist—I'm sorry. My wife has a dog that she thinks more of than she does of me.

Excelsior.

Fred: There's Jones! He's a rising lawyer, isn't he?

Ned: Yes, he goes a story higher up the block every quarter day!

Martial, but Subordinate.

"What a very martial-looking man your husband is, Mrs. Hobson," observed a visitor. "I saw him in the parade on the First, and was quite struck with his soldierly appearance."

"Yes," responded Mrs. Hobson, "the Colonel looks well in his uniform."

"Is he at home?"

"No, baby was fretful, and I told him to give her a turn around the block in the carriage."

Making the Punishment Fit.

A jury in Arkansaw, composed of eleven business-men and an old fellow from up the creek, retired to the jury-room. The foreman, when selected, remarked that he thought that the prisoner ought to be sent to the penetentiary for five years. "That ain't long enough," said the old fellow.
"Let's put it on him fur ten." "Oh, that won't do!" "Wall, then"—stretching himself on a bench—"I'm with you."
"What? You're going to hang the jury?"
"That's about it." "My dear sir, we are anxious to get back to our business." "Then send him up for ten." "But that would be a great injustice." "Then squat and make your selves comfortable." "Have you any special reason why the prisoner should go up for ten years?" "Think I have"—throwing a quid of tobacco at the spittoon. "Can you please name it?" "Yes, for it will take me long. He is my son-in-law, and I have been supportin' him ever since he was married." He went up for ten years.

Standing On Its Head in a Pail of Water.

A singular and distressing accident happened on Monday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Peter Henderson of Paterson. Mrs. Henderson went out into the yard to get some coal, leaving her four-months girl lying on the side of the bed. When she returned she found that the baby had in some way rolled off and fallen head first into a pail of water that stood by the bed. The child was standing on its head, stone dead, when found by its mother. It was unable to extricate itself and was drowned in less than six inches of water.

Something Surprising.

Daughter—"There is only one thing more astonishing than the readiness with which Ned gave up tobacco when we first came engaged."

Mother—"What is that surprising thing?"

Daughter—"The rapidity with which he took it up again as soon as we were married."

Deathless.

BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

There lies in the centre of each man's heart
A longing and love for the good and pure,
And if but an atom, or larger part,
I tell you this shall endure, endure,
After the body has gone to decay—
Yea, after the world has passed away.

The longer I live and the more I see
Of the struggle of souls toward heights above,
The stronger this truth comes home to me,
That the universe rests on the shoulders of
A Love so limitless, deep and broad
That men have renamed it and called it God.

And nothing that ever was born or evolved,
Nothing created by light or force,
But deep in its system there lies dissolved
A shining drop from the great Love Source,
A shining drop that shall live for aye
Tho' kingdoms may perish and stars may die.

He Can't Go Far.

Wife—"Oh, doctor, Benjamin seems to be wandering in his mind!"

Doctor (who knows Benjamin)—"Don't trouble about that; he can't go far."

BEGUN WRONG.

BY ROSE TERRY COOKE.

Jack had poise enough to make a quiet entrance, and hearing voices up stairs proceeded to Angy's dressing-room; she stood there amid waves of pale, glittering satin, that a dressmaker was draping about her slender figure; the woman stopped her work as he entered.

"Do you want me, Jack?" Nellie asked, in a surprised tone.

"I do want you; can you come to the library?"

"Yes, I will; wait for me there a moment. Madame is just through."

Jack went into the library and flung himself into a great easy-chair; the delay was dreadful; his courage fluttered, sank, perhaps would have failed, but that his wife hastened to him, and with feminine instinct perceiving his distress, knelt on the floor beside him, and putting her warm soft arm about his neck. The tender touch broke him down.

"Nelly," he said,—the word was like a sob—"I have failed; my business is gone; we have nothing left."

He thought she would faint and slip from his arms; but she looked up into his face and laughed; a flash of cheer and courage crossed her pale face. "Is that all?" she said, in a tone like the reveile of a bugle. "I thought you were ill, Jack."

This was what the level brows, the clear eyes, the cleft chin, and the firm lips had in store for him, inspiring courage, will to fight or endure. Jack burst into tears; the hard dreadful tears of a man.

Never in all her married life had Nell lavished on him such caresses as now. She clasped his head against her bosom, and covered his face with kisses; she wiped away those slow-hot tears that burned like melted lead; she stroked his damp hair, damp with the agony of his resolve and reluctance she murmured inarticulate sounds in his ear such as mothers croon to their speechless babies. She saved his soul alive. Was not that something to do? After a time he recovered strength and looked up at her with the saddest smile:

"Nelly, you are an angel."

"Not a bit of it, sir!" she laughed. "I'm a very mortal woman, and here's the proof." She poured out a glass of wine from a decanter left there by a careless servant since the night before when a friend had called, and made him drink it slowly; the warmth of the stimulant drove off the chill of his excitement.

"Now tell me the rest," said Nelly, as she felt his cold, damp hands recover their warmth.

"There is nothing more to tell, Nelly, thank God! I am only unfortunate, not a rascal."

"As if you could be!" she replied indignantly; then she made him sit beside her on the sofa and by dint of questions, gently yet acute, drew from him the condition of affairs as far as he was able to make her understand them.

In the course of this conversation it was needful to tell her of her father's insolvency at the time of his death.

"And you never told me!"

A hot color swept over her face as she uttered the words.

"My love, I could not bear to trouble you; it was not necessary."

"And I went on with all sorts of extravagance, thinking I could do as I had done, because father was rich. "How can I forgive myself?"

"How can you ever forgive me, Nell? is the real question."

She drew his throbbing head down on her shoulder.

"Is it so very hard to forgive one, Jack, for over-loving?"

He could not answer; his voice failed. Presently he rose.

"I must go now, Nelly; you have saved me out of the depths."

He looked at her with his heart in his eyes, and with one long, loving embrace left her.

Eleanor sat down, stunned; her courage, her generous faithful heart, her strong will, had rallied to her husband's aid: but now he had left her she buried her head on the arm of the sofa with a long shuddering sigh, and tried to think; there was much to be done, she could not plan yet, but she could work; she went back to her dressing-room, and there lay the silvery folds of satin across a high chair! she should never wear that dress, the ball for which it was preparing she should not attend; she unpinned the plaits, folded the breadths carefully together and laid them in the box from which they came, put in the lengths of delicate lace, and the garniture of apple-blossoms that was to have been worn with them, and calling her maid told her to tie up the box and set it aside, she had changed her mind about the ball. Then a dreadful weariness of soul and body came over her, for Nelly Palmer was a young delicate woman after all, and she had received a heavy shock. But after a rest of some quiet hours, (for she denied herself that day to callers) she rallied, and dressing for dinner, showed a serene and cheerful face to Jack when he came back, and welcomed him as if he had still been her lover. Ah! he was more. Never since he first took her image into his heart had Nelly been so dear, so adored as now; he knew for the first time the intent and sweetness of "a helpmeet for him."

But in the first excitement of any change, even of loss, there is a certain force that helps us to endure; while Jack was busied all day long in figuring up his losses, his assets, the probabilities of the situation, and its more dreadful possibilities, and Nelly arranging her jewels for sale, chaffering with dealers in such things for her beautiful laces, her costumes of velvet and satin, even the little personal luxuries she had so long enjoyed, there was the impetus of a new occupation, new thoughts, to help them through the various mortification, petty yet painful, that beset their way; but it was depressing to find how values shrink in selling! how much less a dress is worth than you paid for it! Even the string of pearls that had been her father's wedding gift, did not quite fetch half the price Mr. Balch had paid for them.

Then there was the doubt as to what should be reserved for the new home. Again and again, after considering, was the list of what they at first thought necessities revised, and it was always Nell who did it. Jack was struck with astonishment at her practical facility, which really had never had a chance for development before.

It was she who made out the lists of furniture, china and silver, and arranged them for the sale; she who managed to sell the carriage and horses to an acquaintance just returning from Europe, at a much better price than would have been received at auction; she who advised that the gas should be given up, as all but one of the servants; and that one would be less expensive.

Jack at last had found a place as clerk in the office of a steamship company, at a thousand dollars salary; just the amount of Nelly's allowance for dress when she left school at eighteen. Jack thought himself lucky to get that, there were to many men out of business at the crisis.

Neither he or his wife had much idea of the value of money; it was needful that they should have some place to go to as soon as their home was sold, and they set about looking for a home at once. What weary days passed in the search! what depths of squalor and discouragement sickened Nell's heart and discouraged her soul as she went from one cheap boarding-house to another, and came away disgusted. They sat down resolutely one night, and made a strict calculation of means and expenses; but even taking into consideration the fact that they were both clothed for a year or two, for they found it was economy to keep their ordinary clothing rather than sell it; and also that there was no furniture, bedding, or in fact any household goods to buy, still they could not afford to board in a comfortable manner, or to rent a whole house; so they resolved to hire three rooms and keep house in them.

"I don't know how to cook, Jack; but I'm not a fool. I can learn," laughed Nelly. "Mother began in a small house when she married father, and I've got her dingy old recipe-book; kept it for sentiment's sake; now it will be worth everything."

"But Nelly you have never had to work; how can you? No, we must keep a servant."

"My Jack, we can't. And if we could, how could I teach her? I know nothing myself! we should waste her wages to begin with."

Jack had to give in.

There was great satisfaction to them both in the fact that Jack's business being wound up so early in the course of his trouble, not only paid all his creditors, but left him five hundred dollars, to which the delighted creditors added five hundred more, as an expression of their respect for his prompt winding up of affairs, instead of trying to recover himself by borrowing more money, and asking more credit, till the business would have been a mere hollow shell, and those who had helped or dealt with him been hopelessly defrauded.

They did not know that they owed this to Eleanor's counsel.

"Don't try to go on another day!" she had energetically exhorted Jack; "ask Mr. Hartmann; you say he knows the state of affairs; ask him if it isn't better to stop now, save your creditors and your credit, and get out of suspense yourself, rather than keep dragging on till nothing is left. Oh, Jack! it is honester, I am sure, to stop now; and I want my husband to be the very honestest man in all the town."

What could Jack do but kiss that lovely glow on her radiant face, and take her advise forthwith?

"A whole thousand dollars that makes!" said Jack, when the creditors sent in their check, with a letter that made Nell's heart proud.

"What shall we do with it? Don't you want to board now for a year, to get used to our descent?"

"No, I want the worst first, Jack; put that money in the saying's bank; there may be need of it sometime; we may not always be well."

"Sensible creature!" laughed Jack; and he deposited the money that day.

By the time the household goods were sold, and the house turned over to the largest crditor, Jack had hired a small flat of three rooms, in a tenement house on the corner of a street in a totally unfashionable and obscure part of the city; the rooms were in the fourth storey, but there was a lift for coal and wood, and another for the tenants; and the sun shone all day into the south windows, from which one also could look away over the roofs of the lowest part of the city to the sparkling waters of the great bay beyond.

Nelly had sold all her personal property, only reserving enough of the proceeds to furnish these rooms with such things as the creditors allowed them to take at appraisal prices; all the rest of the money went for Jack's debts and her own. She had taken the plain crockery from the kitchen cupboard, two pairs of good blankets, one down comfortable that had been hers since her school-days that she did not sell, and she kept half the bed-linen that she had brought with her from home.

Carpeting for two of these rooms in the flat was furnished from the one on her bedroom, and one rug brightened the tiny parlor; chairs from her room too now did duty for the parlor, and a small card-table that had been her grandmother's stood under the odd old mirror from the same quarter. There were bright chintz curtains from the bath and dressing-rooms put up here, and the bedstead and bedding were those she had used at home, though they were rather large for the small bed-room; but when all was done, the three apartments were as pretty as a doll's house; one picture on the wall of each gave an air of refinement, even if they were only autotypes, and the taste for harmonious color that had distinguished Nelly's dress and house came into play now; nothing was incongruous, glaring or crude; if this new home was cramped it was cheerful and home-like, and they entered in and shut the door with a sense of rest and relief.

However, this was but the beginning. Jack's duties were not unfamiliar to him, but Nelly's were all new; she burned her fingers and her food in trying to cook, and produced most indescribable messes even with the old recipe-book to guide her, and Jack missed every day the glass of wine at dinner that would have helped down the unpalatable meal. It was well for him that he had to give it up while it was only one glass, but the habit was hard to break, and he lost his appetite. No wonder! the delicate viands, the savory sauces that a professed cook had had sent up were quite different from the tough, burned steak and watery vegetables with no taste, the heavy puddings, and tasteless gravies that were all poor Nelly could concoct. To Jack's credit be it said that his deep devotion to Nellie, his daily recollection of her sweet, brave acceptance of trouble, kept his mouth shut as to her failures now; and she, fully appreciating his kind silence, put all the energies of her mind and deftness of her fingers into the new duty. Cooking is not an abstract science, or a matter that needs five hours practice every day for ten years; intelligence and resolution will surmount these difficulties, and although Jack grew thin before his patience needed, they did mend, and in six months Nelly had mastered the situation, and was able to serve a dinner or a breakfast at once savory and economical.

It has been said that "little things are God's levers," and it is utterly true; once fed with good and wholesome food the craving for daily stimulant that Jack had resisted like a hero, died out, and he recovered flesh, strength, spirits and courage; all of which had dwindled.

Oh my dear women! wives and mothers! if you want to keep your husbands and sons and brothers from those lures of the devil, liquor saloons, feed them well at home; give them well cooked meat, savory vegetables, good coffee, chocolate, tea; a cheerful house, a pleasant wife, a well-spread table, are the best temperance lectures in the world; and all these can be had cheap if you will only learn how.

But this is a digression.

All this experimenting and the new labors which she had not yet learned to take easily and systematically, fully occupied Nelly, but when she had learned her lesson time began to drag, and she was a little lonely, a little languid, though her daily activities were a help to her physical condition that she did not appreciate; she had hours now to sit at her window and sew, looking at the blue stretch of billows, or dreaming over the fine stitches and delicate embroideries wherewith she garnished the little robes that she could not buy lace for; fashioning her own half-worn garments into soft small wrappings, and doing her best, ignorantly but instinctively, to prepare for the arrival of another member to this small household.

When it came the hoard in the saving's bank stood her in good stead; the doctor, understanding the state of things, sent out into the country for one of those skillful and homely nurses who not only care for the patient but do the house-work, so that all Nelly's cares were lifted from her, and she could lie still at peace, wondering at the loveliness of her tiny daughter, whom Jack stigmatized as "That crumpled up red thing!"

And now Nelly would be lonely no longer. She had her hands and her heart full, and that divinest of all earthly affections, mother love, possessed her in all its fervor and patience; Jack, as the baby grew into some human aspect found himself longing to get home and play with it; and all the anxieties and troubles its childish sorrows and ailments caused, only endeared it the more to its parents, and bound the three together with stronger ties.

Two years after Jack's failure he was walking home from church one Sunday with a young man who was a clerk in the same office. Jack asked him in to lunch.

"No thank you," said young Holcombe. "I go to your house too often; it makes me envious, Palmer."

"Have one of your own, then," suggested Jack, with a laugh.

"On a thousand a year? No sir! we must wait until I can do better than that."

"That is all we began on, Holcombe, except a little in the bank for a rainy day; and you have got twice what we had laid up."

"Well, you didn't begin life so, and I won't; I daren't ask Mary to leave her father's house and come down to work for me."

"Look here!" said Jack energetically, "you're all wrong! How did your father begin life? How did Mary Carter's? Why can't you and she begin just there? Give her the chance, Sam; that is due to her. And believe my experience that you never can know or feel what a true woman can be, who truly loves you, till you are poor together. Tell her all the truth about your affairs, your fears and why you have kept silent so long; begin right; begin at the bottom; and take "a help-meet for you;" and when you get to the top you'll find out what the Lord meant when he made the firt woman. I own I begun wrong; but I'm going to end right, after all.

Respect for The Dead.

Our respect for the dead, when they are just dead, is something wonderful, and the way we show it more wonderful still. We show it with black feathers and black horses; we show it with black dresses and black heraldries; we show it with costly obelisks and sculptures of sorrow, which spoil half of our most beautiful cathedrals. We show it with frightful gratings and vaults, and lids of dismal stone, in the midst of the quiet grass; and last, and not least, we show it by permitting ourselves to tell any number of lies we think amiable or creditable in the epitaph. This feeling is common to the poor as well as the rich; and we all know how many a poor family will nearly ruin themselves to testify their respect for some member of it in his coffin, whom they never much cared for when she was out of it; and how often it happens that a poor old woman will starve herself to death in order that she may be respectably buried. Now, this being one of the most complete and special ways of wasting money—no money being less productive of good, or of any percentage whatever, than that which we shake away from the ends of the undertaker's plumes—it is, of course, the duty of all good economists and kind persons to prove and proclaim continually to the poor as well as to the rich that respect for the dead is not really shown by laying great stones on them to tell us where they are laid, but by remembering where they are laid without a stone to help us, trusting them to the sacred grass saddened flowers; and, still more, that respect and love are shown to them not by great monuments to them which we build with our hands, but by letting the monument stand which they build with their own.

The Commercial Traveler.

Said a commercial traveler to a reporter the other day: "People have a strange idea that all traveling men are necessarily hard cases and constantly full of liquor. Only those who know us can fully understand us. In our average trips we visit 500 different localities, and our stomachs must be lined with as many kinds of water and cooking of different men and women. Besides this our hearts and lungs must labor under all kinds of air below and above sea elevation. Now how is it reasonable to suppose that we are constantly 'boozing' or doing anything that must injure our stomachs and minds, when we every day transact business with hundreds of men of different temperaments?"

Royal Dandelion Coffee.

A Delicious and nourishing Breakfast Beverage, containing a proportion of German Dandelion Root, which acts medicinally on the Liver and Stomach, purifying the blood and invigorating the system. Prepared only by

ELLIS & KEIGHLEY,
TORONTO.

MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO.
MANUFACTURE ONLY
FINEST
Silver Plated Ware.
Artistic Designs, combined with Unequalled Durability and Finish.
HAMILTON ONT.

CONWAY'S IMPROVED

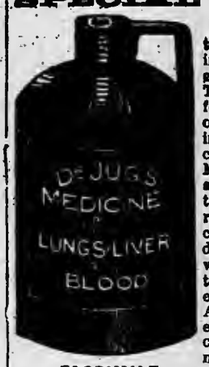
CARRIAGE TOPS
Are famous for their style, convenience, durability and cheapness. Buy no other until you see them. All the leading Carriage Builders sell them.
Factory: 467 King West, TORONTO.

I CURE FITS!
When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you. Address DR. H. G. ROOT,
Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto.

PEARL PEN AND PENCIL STAMP
WITH NAME 50C
Postage 6 Cts. Extra

TINGLEY & STEWART M'F'G CO.
TORONTO, ONT.
Please mention this Paper when writing.

J. L. JONES
WOOD ENGRAVER
16 KING ST EAST
TORONTO.



Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships.
Sailing during winter from Portland every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via Halifax and St. John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow line sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal, weekly, Glasgow and Boston weekly; and Glasgow and Philadelphia, fortnightly
For Freight, passage, or other information apply to J. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shaw & Co., St. John's N. F., Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans Rae & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; H. A. Allan Portland Boston Montreal

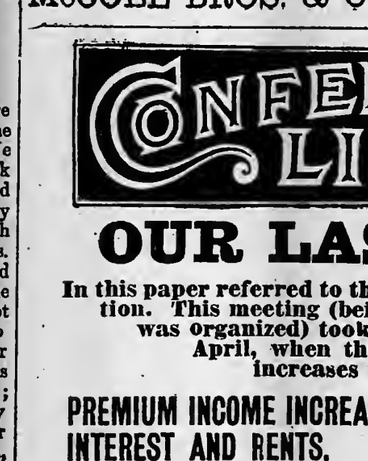
THE ALBANY STEAM TRAP CO.'S SPECIAL BUCKET RETURN TRAP.

The Celebrated Hancock Inspirator.
Gresham's Automatic Re-starting Injector.
Morrison's Automatic Sight Feed Lubricator.
Engineers' & Plumbers' Supplies of every description. Send for circulars.
JAMES MORRISON,
75 & 77 Adelaide St. W.,
TORONTO

SPECIAL NOTICE.

FACSIMILE OF A JUG OF DR. JUG'S MEDICINE.

We have decided in future to put Dr. Jug's Medicine in a brown jug, instead of a glass bottle as heretofore. The jugs that we will use for this purpose are made of the finest imported Rockingham, of a mottled brown colour, with "Dr. Jug's Medicine for Lungs, Liver and Blood" in raised letters on the side. Our reasons for making this change are: "1st—Its wonderful curative qualities will be better preserved by the medicine being kept entirely in the dark. 2nd—As the jug will be registered it will be impossible to counterfeit it. 3rd The name "Dr. Jug's Medicine" will be more easily remembered by association. 4th—Our friends will be able to recognize at once that they are getting the genuine article, as there is no other medicine put up in a jug. DR. JUG MEDICINE CO., Toronto and Stratford.



HILBORN
Hot Air Furnace
BURNS WOOD.
Made in 8 sizes. Efficient, economical and durable. Write for illustrated catalogue of the largest and best variety of furnaces and registers manufactured in Canada.
Estimates cheerfully given to any one.
Clare Bros. Co., Preston, Ont.
Mention this paper.

Lardine.
THIS SPLENDID MACHINE OIL! Has never failed to take the highest awards wherever exhibited.
It Has No Equal. Farmers, Threshers and Millmen Use No Other.
This Oil keeps the Machinery in first-rate working order, thereby lessening the chances of accidents and breakdowns. To be had of all first-class dealers. Beware of imitations!
Try our 600 Fire Test Cylinder Oil. Harness, Bolt Cutting, Wool and Lard Oil, always in stock.
SOLE MANUFACTURERS OF LARDINE.
McCOLL BROS. & CO., - - TORONTO.

CONFEDERATION LIFE ASS'N.
OUR LAST NOTICE
In this paper referred to the Annual Meeting of the Association. This meeting (being the 15th since the Company was organized) took place on Tuesday, the 12th April, when the following gratifying increases were announced:
PREMIUM INCOME INCREASED FOR YEAR, - $ 96,894.
INTEREST AND RENTS, - - - - - 13,029.
ASSETS, - - $356,375. SURPLUS, 80,234.
$260,420 Were allocated as Profits to Policy Holders. Profits payable on and after May 1st.
J. K. MACDONALD, Managing Director.

GURNEY'S
Standard Hot-air Furnaces
HAVE NO EQUAL.

PRICES TO SUIT ALL DEALERS
THE "BOYNTON,"
" "HARRIS,"
" "MAMMOTH,"
" "MONARCH."
Send for Price List and Illustrated Catalogue.
EVERY FURNACE GUARANTEED
THE E. & C. GURNEY COMPANY, (L'T'D),
TORONTO, HAMILTON MONTREAL, AND WINNIPEG.

Markdale Standard.

C. W. Rutledge, Proprietor.

MARKDALE, JULY. 21, 1887.

NOTE AND COMMENT.

—Krupp, the famous maker of cannon, is dead.

—Last Saturday was the hottest July day known for many years on this continent.

—Hon. Oliver Mowat left for England last week and will be absent two months.

—If all the transgressors against liquor laws were fined, our government would not require to raise the revenue by imposing a duty.

—An unprecedentedly large number of fatal cases of sunstrokes have been reported from the United States during the recent hot spell.

—A prolonged plasters' strike in Toronto has just ended: the strikers having secured their demands on certain conditions.

—A Committee of Imperial Parliament has been formed for the purpose of endeavoring to cheapen the postal telegraph charges between the Mother Country and the Colonies.

—52½ miles of the Grand Trunk will be double-tracked between Toronto and Montreal this season. The work is to be taken up again next year, and the third season the work is to be completed between the above cities.

—A terrible accident occurred last Friday evening at St, Thomas, a freight train loaded with oil running into a crowded excursion train at the Grand Trunk crossing. The cars took fire, causing one of the oil tanks to explode, eleven persons being burned to death and many fatally injured.

—One of the most extensive conflagarations the city of Montreal has seen for many years occurred early on Friday morning, the St. Lawrence sugar refinery, one of the largest in the Dominion, being completely destroyed. One of the workmen was killed while escaping from the burning building, and several others are rumoured to be missing. The loss is estimated at nearly $600,000.

Flesherton.

From our own correspondent.

Master D. K. Richardson returned home from the Owen Sound High School on Saturday last.

F. Armstrong, Esq., the popular manager of M. Richardson & Co's, China Hall and hardware department, is off for a holiday this week enjoying the breezes of one of our northern lakes.

The lawn party on Mr. S. Damude's grounds, under the auspices of the Presbyterian Ladies' Aid, Friday evening last, was a very pleasant affair, and financially a success. Our exelcior brass band was present and added much the to evening's enjoyment.

A marked improvement has been made in the seating capacity for the choir in the Presbyterian church. A choir gallery has been erected in the recess in the East end of the building which inproves the appearence of the building and adds much to the comfort of those taking part in leading the service of song. The pastor, Mr. Wilson, delivered an address to the Sabbath School children on Sabbath afternoon last, his subject being based upon the life and character of the young boy—King, Joseph. The children and congregation engaged heartly in singing several choice selections and the whole service was more than usually interesting to children.

Mr. Geo. Park, sr., mail carrier between Flesherton and Feversham, met with an accident on Monday last by being thrown from his buggy receiving a severe bruise on the thigh and otherwise shaken up. It appears while driving past some cattle lying on the road one beast jumped suddenly up striking the buggy and upsetting it; and Mr. Parks lay helpless until picked up by a passer-by; the horse being quiet made no attempt to run.

To the Editor of the STANDARD.

SIR.—The following sarcastic item appeared in the Flesherton Advance, as an Editorial Note, last week.—"The Twelfth of July will likely be celebrated in Markdale next year, and it will be interesting to notice then whether Flesherton will intimate certain citizens of that classic place in the matter of bringing their own edibles along with them and renting some public hall for the purpose of feeding the hungry multitude in opposition to the hotels and eating houses. Well, some people in Markdale may "want the whole earth." but, thank God, they can't get it!" I presume Mrs Hollingshead is the person referred to, who having been engaged by certain lodges of Orangemen two weeks prior to the 12th to provide dinner that day, did so in good faith and without malice. Said lodges are not of Markdale more than of Flesherton either, but were determined to secure a good dinner, and knew well where to get it. I might here say however to the editor of the Advance that it's a miserable thing to be so envious with the village of Markdale.

AN OBSERVER.

A Recommendation.

To the Editor of the STANDARD.

SIR.—I should like to remind your readers, at this period, that if they wish to plant rows of everygreen for shelter, it can be well done in the last week of July or the first of August. Rows of these trees, whether pine, or cedar, or spruce will be found infinitely superior to maples, with which so many are now forming windbreaks, as the everygreens will give shelter in winter or spring, which the others will not. Passing through some of our front townships lately, I was glad to see that many of the farmers were planting these everygreen rows. Of the trees mentioned the Norway spruce will probably grow quickest. I found a windbreak of lines of Norway spruce and pine, of which the spruce in twenty years had caught up to the pine planted thirty-five years. Now that our original forests are going fast, all should endeavor to plant at least a line of trees along one side of their farms. Planting trees is one of the chief means by which we can hope to preserve the fertility of the soil.

Yours &c.,
R. W. PHIPPS,
Toronto July 15th 1887,

CLIPPINGS.

Mr. Archie Campbell, of Glenelg, has in his possession a cow whose record for productiveness, both as a butter maker and stockraiser as well as for longevity we think has few parallels. She is now 23 years of age and has raised 19 calves besides enriching Archie's coffers to the extent of about $400 from the sale of her dairy products, she is still as livly as a 3 year old.—[Durham Chronicle.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.—The second annual convention of the County of Grey Sunday School Association in connection with the Church of England was held at St. George's Hall on Friday last. Rev. Canon Mulholland occupied the chair, and there were between sixty and seventy delegates present from different parts of the county. The first topic for discussion. "Lesson Leaflets, and how to use them." was introduced by Mrs. Farlie of Chatsworth, in a well considered address. Some took ground against leaflets, because of the danger of being used in schools instead of using the bible; but on the whole the opinion was in favor of them. The question of "How to select and how to manage Libraries." was introduced by Mr. A. Turner of Markdale. Rev. Canon Mulholland introduced the subject of "Band of Hope," and explained the method of conducting in Owen Sound, and Rev. J. C. Farthing also gave a very interesting address on this subject; while Miss. Anderson of Durham introduced the subject of "Infant Classes." These and other topics elicited general and practical discussions, and the convention altogether was quite successful. Rev. J. Fairlie was elected President; Miss. Mocker, Vice-President; Mr. A. Turner, Recording Secretary; and Mrs. Fairlie, Corresponding Secretary. It was arranged that the next convention should be held at Chatsworth on the second Friday in July 1888. After the convention, the ladies' of St. George's congregation entertained the delegates at tea in Mrs. Scott's grove, where a pleasant time was spent.—O. S. Times.

ALL WELL PLEASED.—The children like Dr. Low's Pleasant Worm Syrup and parents rejoice over its virtue.

STARTLING SLAUGHTER.

The knife driven right into the bone.

McFarland is going to sell every yard of summer dress goods at and under cost.

15 cent Check Lustres for 10 cents.
35 " Ottoman Cord for 25 cents.
15 " Cashmerettes for 9 cents.
30 " Stripe Balermos for 23½ cents.
30 " Camlets and DeBieges for 22 cents.
20 " Canvas Clothes for 12½ cts.
37½ " All Wool Lace Stripe (west end cloth.) 25 cents.

NOTE. only a limited number of yds. of these goods are left.

65 cent Ladies' silk mitts for 25c.

27 Ends Colored and Black Satins and Silks under cost.

A variety of remnants of different materials under cost.

2000 doz. Ivory Buttons all shades from 3c, per doz. up.

3 Only handsome Embroidered Dresses $1.50.

Lace Gloves, Parasols, at actual cost.

A good sensible Parasol for 15c.

24 Men's Balbriggan Undershirts and Drawers 30c.

24 Men's Balbriggan Undershirts and Drawers 50c.

60 Youth's and Misses Straw Hats, old price 40c. now 20c.

Agood useful Table Linen only 20c.

Garter Elastic 2c. per yd.

16 doz. Woman Hose 10c. per pair.

60 pairs Womens Fancy Silk Stitched Hose former price 55c. on the counter now at 25c.

71 Men's Black and Colored Felt Hats old price ranged from $1.00 to $2.00 your choice of the lot for 50c.

5 Cases Men's Long Boots for harvesting at $1.50 per pair.

Heavy Direct Importations are now on the way from the European markets and room must be made for them. Come in and ask for goods as advertised and we will give you some eye openers.

☞ Every article in this column is in stock now. If you want them call on us early after seeing this, that we may not be under the painful necessity of telling you we are sold out.

W. J. McFARLAND,
Direct Importer.
MARKDALE.

Jubilee Sal

Every body is interested in the great

CLEARING SAL

TO

Commence on th0 15th Jul

AT

J. C. ANDERSON'

Our stock being yet very large and the fall goods will soon be to hand, have decided to have a great clearing sale to last for 30 days. The goods positively be sold at slaughtered prices so you can make no mistake by co prepared to take away with you a good large parcel.

Remember this is no Sham, the goods must Sold.

Amongst the goods offered will be found special lines in Men's, Women and Childrens, Boots, Shoes and Slippers. Straw and Felt Hats, Gents' T Fine White and Regatta Shirts. In the Ladies' Department there will found a large range of summer and autumn, Dress-Goods, Embroidery, L Gloves, and Hosiery, &c., these goods are all new and well worth inspection.

A special line of teas at a decided Bargai Come in and see for yourself.

Come early before the Rush, so you can get properly waited on and get rst choice of the goods.

J. G. Anderson's,

MAMMOTH HOUSE,

MARKDALE.

MARKDALE CARRIAGE WORKS.

R. McNALLY:—Would hereby announce to the peopl of Markdale and the public generally that I have moved into my new carria shop opposite the Markdale House, where I will manufacture every artic in the wagon and carriage line, and having long experience in the busines and by using first class material, I can guarantee satisfaction to every on who will favor me with their order.

Repairing, Painting and Trimming promptly attended to.

A call respectfully solicited,
R. McNALLY, Proprietor

MARKDALE
SAsH and DOOR FACTORY.

Having erected and fitted up in every detail a Sash, Door and Plain Factory, containing all the latest and most approved machinery, everything being new, I am now prepared to turn out

Sash, Doors, Blinds, Mouldings, Hollow Battons,

FRAMES, LATH, FENCE PICKETS, &c.,

And everything needed in the building trade, in a manner second to none in Canada, and having engaged superior mechanics in every department, I would now respectfully solicit public patronage.

Every Effort Made to fill Orders Promptly

PINE LUMBER Dressed and Undressed

Direct from North Shore, all sizes, on hand. Plain and Fancy Turning done.

Careful Attention to Orders from a Distance.

303 THOS. McNEA.

Massey Agency,

Holland Centre.

TORONTO Light Binder MASSEY Harvester

wood frame 5 & 6 feet cut

TORONTO MOWER, MASSEY MOWER.

one and two horse.

SHARP'S RAKE.

A full stock of repairs kept constantly on hand for the above machines

REPAIRS STRICTLY CASH.

Also agent for Hall's patent reversible Hay Carrier, Manufactured by Cochrin Bro's, St. Thomas, and Fox Pea Harvester, Owen Sound.

THOS. WILLISCROFT, Agent.

Osprey Council.

The fifth meeting of this council was held at Feversham, on the 11th June. Members all present. Minutes of last meeting adopted.

Communications from Richard Burton and 26 others, asking assistance to open out the 25th sideroad from the 10th to the 12th Con's; Clerk respecting list of lands liable to be sold for arrears of taxes; road commission; statute labor and nonresidents.

Taylor—McIntyre,—That $100 be expended in each of the 5 divisions, and that J. Hudson be commissioner for No. 1; A. McGirr, No. 2; J. Speers, No. 3; J. Taylor, No. 4; and J. McIntyre, No. 5.

Yeas—Speers, Tayloy, McIntyre, and McGirr.

Nay,—Hudson.

Hudson—Speers,—That J. Elliott receive $50 for his services as Collector, $86.

Taylor—McIntyre,—That the clerk be instructed to notify the council of Melancthon that this council intend to expend $25 on the townline opposite lots 37 to 41 on condition that the Melancthon council grant an equivalent.

Hudson—McIntyre.—That the statute labor be done in the road division in which the land is situated.

Speers—Taylor,—in amendment, that the pathmasters schedules be made out as in former years.—Lost.

Council adjourned till 8th July.

The council met at McIntyre, 8th July 1887. Members all present.

Minutes of last meeting adopted.

Communications from Inspector of Drains; amended report, B. S. Kerr, notice respecting the bridge over the Beaver River on 10th sideroad and the 4th con., between the 5th and 20th sideroad, being in a dangerous state; J. R. Fawcett, account $1.25, advertising Court of Revision, and one for $30.00, for printing 400 copies of minutes for 1886; Joseph Taylor, report on 25th sideroad, between the 11th and 12th con's.

Speers—Hudson,—That John Conran be assessed for West ½ lot 22, con. 6, omitted, at $500.

Hudson—Speers,—That George Bowell's name appearing twice on the assessment roll for E½ lot 9, con. 4, be withdrawn from one of the places.

Taylor—McIntyre.—That this be instructions to the clerk to notify the Council of Collingwood that this council intends to expend about $10 on the townline east of Sykes' saw mill on condition that Collingwood council grant an equivalent.

Speers—McIntyre.—That A. McIntyre, J. Taylor, and J. Hudson, meet the 20th sideroad, with power to expend $25 if necessary, and report to next council.

McIntyre—Hudson,—That the clerk communicate with James Conran, esq., with the view of having a survey of a deviation road north of con. 12, on 20th sideroad.

Speers—Hudson,—That the clerk notify John Clark, Deputy-Reeve of Proton, that this council will pay its share of re Glenelg and the group.

Taylor—McIntyre,—That where there is an undivided assessment, lying partly in one school section and partly in another, the clerk is hereby instructed to equalize the assessment according to the best of his judgement.

Order issued in favor of A. McLean, $35, for statute labor charged and not but now performed; A. R. Bennett, $1.25, for advertising Court of Revision and $30 for printing minutes of council, 1886; W. Milne, clerk, on salary; N. A. McLean, collector, $50, salary, and $3.00 for postage and stationery.

Council adjourned to meet at Singhampton on the 20th August.

W. MILNE.

The Court of Revision held its first sitting on the 31st May.

APPEALS.—John Adair, overcharge on land; John McKinnon, overcharge on land, and lot omitted; Duncan D. McFarlane, overcharge on land; George Milne, requiring name to be withdrawn for lot 18, and entered as tenant for lot 20, con. 5; C. McD. Williams, overcharge on assessment. Moved by Mr. McIntyre, seconded by Mr. Taylor, that this court adjourn to meet at Feversham on Friday, the 3rd day of June next.—Carried.

The second meeting of the C. of R. was held at Feversham on the 11th day of June.

Hudson—McIntyre,—That lots 48 and 49, con. 1, N., be reduced $100. And that Lorenzo Adair be taken off and W. J. Adair put on as tenant, and L. Adair as L. S. for lots 48 and 49, con. 1, S.—Carried.

Taylor—McIntyre,—That the assessment of John McKinnon be confirmed; D. D. McFarlane, reduced $50; G. Milne be withdrawn as owner of lot 18 and assessed as tenant for lot 20, con. 5, and that lot 18 be placed on the N. R. R. and that C. McD. Williams' assessment be reduced $200.—Carried.

Taylor—McIntyre,—That D. Macklem's assessment of lots 53, 54, con. 1, N., be reduced $100; H. McQuarrie, E½ 21, con. 7, $50; Hall Brothers, $400 on Feversham mill property; John Humberstone, $100, on lots 2, 3, con. A.—Lost.

Hudson—Speers,—In amendment—That the following named persons' assessments be reduced on assessment roll as follows:—William Scutt $50, Harvey McQuarrie $50, Luke and Mark Hall, $500, and J. Humberstone $50.—Carried.

Taylor—Speers,—That the clerk be instructed to make the following corrections in the assessment roll, namely:

Concession 3, S., lot 18, add 8 to population. Lots 67, 68, add 1 to population. Lot 71, omitted assess to James Inglis at $1,100. Lot 79, add 6 to population. Lot 80, 45 acres assessed to J. A. Taylor, increase to 47 acres.

Concession 2, S., lots 1, 2, 3, 4, assessed to W. Williamson, change to James F. Hutchinson, aged 22, and reduce personal property $100. Lot 74, assessed to Neil McKinnon, change to Alexander McKinnon.

Concession 1, S., lots 7, 8, take off M. T. & W. J. Burk, farmer's sons. Lot 11, reduce assessment to mill property $2000. Lot 44, add 6 to population. Lot 53, N½ 54, add William Scutt, Tenant, and 5 to population. Lots 60, 61, add 3 to population. Lots 66, 67, add 5 to population.

Concession 1, N., lots 9, 10, assess to M. T. & W. J. Burk, joint tenants. P't. lot 10, add 6 to population of A. Rosebery. Lots 58, 59, 60, add 6 to population. Lots 21, 22, add 1 to population.

Concession 2, N., lot P. 61, add 7 to population of N. A. McLean. Lot 61, add 4 to population of J. McKinnon Concession 3, N., lots 5, 6, add Donald & Neil Bell, tenants. Lots 26, & 27, take off Francis and put on John Winters, sr. Lot 36, add 1 to population. Lots 45, 46, take off William H. Arnott and put on Charles Stewart, and add 6 to population. Lot 55, add 2 to population. S. W. C. lot 78, ½ acre omitted assess to J. A. Wheeler at $100, and add 5 to population.

Concession 4, lot 16, add William Lang, tenant, and 3 to population. P. lot 18, take off assessment of J. & J. Clark. E½ lot 26, add 12 to population. Lot 23, take off Donald McLean, F. S. and put on Alexander McLean, tenant. Lot 75, take off non-resident roll and assess to Allan McLean.

Con. 6, Lot 11, add 11 to population. Lot 12, add 5 to population. Lot 16, add 2 to population. Lot E½ 33, take off nonresident roll and assess to Conran, and add 6 to population. Lot 32, add 6 to population; Lot 35, Take off Thomas Arthurs and put on Thomas Anderson. Lot 37, take off nonresident roll and assess to James Sinclair.

Con. 7, Lot 11, add 2 to population of B. S. Kerr.

Con. 8, Lot P. 13, add 3 to population of R. Heron. Lot 33, omitted assess to Robert McConnell at $600, Lots 35, 36, add W. J. Longheed, tenant, and 3 to population. Lot 37, add John Taylor, owner.

Con. 9, lot N. P. 16, 30 acres assess to Luke & Mark Hall. Lot N. P. 16, assess to John Paul and Robert Brown. Lots 17, 18, add 2 to population of G. Lush. Lot 34, add 2 to population of R. McConnell.

Con. 10, lot 7, changed from William to John Duncan. Lot W½ 13, add 2 to population of E. Wright. Lot W½ 21, add 2 to population. Lot E½ 21, add 2 to population.

Con. 11, lot 8, change from William to John Duncan. Lot 16, add Richard Brackinburg, tenant, and 8 to population. Lot 18, add 1 to population. Lot 20, add 1 to population. Lot 30, add A. Saigeon, tenant.

Con 12, lot 1, take off N. R. roll assess to T. Wheewell. Lot 12, add 2 to population. Lot 16, add 2 to population. Lot 20, add 3 to population.

Con. 13, lot 7, add 1 to population. Lot W½ 8, add 1 to population. Lot 30, add 2 to population. Lot N½ 30, assessed to Thomas Knibbs, should read N½ 33.

Con. 14, lot E½ 9, omitted 53½ acres assess to George Ottowell at $300. Lot 21, add 2 to population.

Con. A, lots 1, 2, add 1 to population. Lot 6. P. 7, add Thomas Gosneld, F. S., age 22. Lot 18, add 1 to population. Lot S. P. 22 add 2 to population.

Charleston—Lot 2, add one to population of C. McD. Williams. Charleston—Lot 4, add 3 to population.

Feversham—W. E., lots 2, 3, changed from John Bates to William Mullin, and add 8 to population. Feversham—W. W., Lots 4, 5, add 2 to population. Feversham—Lot 6, take off W. H. Campaign, Tenant. Feversham—V. F., Lot 7, add 7 to population of Hamilton.

And that the Court of Revision now rise.—Carried.

W. MILNE,
Clerk.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel for purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low est, short weight alum or phosphate powders sold only in cans, ROYAL BAKING POWDER Co. 106 Wall St., N. Y.

TAMARAC ELIXIR
NATURE'S REMEDY.
FOR COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS THROAT & LUNG COMPLAINTS INSTANT RELIEF POSITIVE CURE

HEAD QUARTERS
—FOR—
Books, tationery, Fancy Goods, Toys, Wall Paper, &c.

Toronto St. next Door to the Mansion House, Markdale.

A. Dinsmore returns his sincere thanks for the very liberal support accorded him since commencing as above, and hopes by strict attention to business and moderate prices to merit a continuance of public appreciation and patronage. Those requiring

WALL PAPERS

would consult their own interest by examining his stock, consisting of over Three Thousand pieces at from 5 to 75c. per Roll. Sunday Schools requiring Liberary Books will find Hundreds to select from and at such FAVORABLE TERMS as are sure to satisfy.

☞ Note the fact.—That until I commenced business there was no such thing as a special discount allowed to Sunday Schools, or if you wanted Books could not get them unless by sending to Toronto or elsewhere, now your wants can be supplied at your Door and at lower prices than Toronto. I therefore with confidence appeal for public support. A full line of School Books, Stationery, &c., always on hand, also agent for the DOMESTIC PAPER PATTERNS. Agent also for The Harden Star Hand Grenade for Extinguishing Fires. ☞ NOTE THE ADDRESS,

A. Dinsmore.

New General Provision Store

THE undersigned would hereby respectfully intimate to the inhabitants of Markdale and surrounding country that I've opened up a general Provision store where I intend to keep on hand a general supply of all kinds of provisions such as:—FLOUR, OATMEAL, CORNMEAL INDIAN CORN, GRASS SEED, OATS, BRAN, SHORTS, CHOPP, SCREENINGS. also a quantity of SEED GRAIN, HAMS, BACON, LARD. &c., in fact everything people want in this line.

Shop one door west of Joe Lamb's Blacksmith shop.

Soliciting a share of public patronage I am respectfully yours,

Jas. Miller
MARKDALE.

SOUTHERN ASTHMA CURE
DOUBLE TREATMENT IN EACH PACKAGE
INSTANT RELIEF FOR
ASTHMA AND BRONCHITIS
BY MAIL ON RECEIPT OF PRICE
SAMPLES, 25c.; REGULAR SIZE, $1.00
ADDRESS FULFORD & CO., BROCKVILLE, ONT.

SAY!

Did you ever in your life hear the potato bug sing? Have you seen them when they got up on their hind legs and whoop and holler with joy, holding their feelers to their stomach rolling over and over almost tickled to death? So much so that every muscle in their bodies is vibrating to the fullest extent. In fact they go into convulsions with laughter at the haggard and woe-begone look of the man who buys impure Paris Green.

BUT STRAIGHT BUSINESS

buy your Paris Green,
—AT—
Stephen's Drug Store,

and your bugs will kick streight quick and die.

Use Stephen's Insect Powder, it is the Shoor! Shoorer!! Shoorerest!!! in the market.

HAVE ARRIVED

5 gross of the Celebrated Diamond Dyes.

1 gross of Burdock Blood Bitters.

½ gross of Richardson & Well's Butter Color.

Prescriptions Dispensed day and night,
—AT—
R. L. Stephen's.

R. S. Rae, Tailor.

REMOVED.

In returning thanks to my numerous customers for liberal patronage during the past 14 years in which I have done business in Markdale, and soliciting a continuance of the same, I would also intimate that I have removed to my premises on Mill Street, next door to Stephen's Drug Store, and opposite to the Post Office, where I shall be happy to meet all my customers.

Respectfully Yours,
R. S. RAE,
Markdale

TORONTO HOUSE.

I am offering this week Ready-Made Clothing, and

BOOTS & HOE
—AT—

astonishingly low prices. Persons requiring a summer outfit would do well to see my stock.

Wm Brown.

For Sale or to Rent.

ONE of the best farms in Artemesia township, being lots 115 and 116 third range west of T. & S. Road, three miles from Markdale, comprising 100 acres, over 80 of which is cleared and in good state of cultivation, well fenced, young and old orchard, watered with a never failing spring and good well, brick house, good carriage house and stable and two log barns. Possession will be given after harvest. For further particulars apply on the premises to,

JOHN WHITBY,
Markdale, P. O

OWEN SOUND
MARBLE WORK

H. B. HARRISON
MANUFACTURER OF
MARBLE AND GRANITE
MONUMENTS & HEADSTONES
Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.

JUST RECEIVED
3 Carloads Finest Variegate Marble

☞ Largest stock in the Dominion select from. Personally selected at the quarries in Vermont. Will be sold at prices which defy competition.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

N. B.—Beware of Monuments and Head stones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered together, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide the imperfections, and called White Bronze.

H. B. HARRISON

ROBT. ASKIN,
UNDERTAKER,
MARKDALE,
FUNERAL FURNISHINGS
supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse
for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—
FURNITURE
In Stock at bottom prices.

PICTURE FRAMING
Done on short notice.
ROBT. ASKIN.

WM. BREADNER.
Carpender and Builder
GEORGE St., MARKDALE.
ALL kinds of building and house carpenter work done in the village or country. Call early before the rush comes. 339-52

CARD OF THANKS.

In thanking my customers for their liberal patronage in the past. I have much pleasure in being still able to supply them with the following celebrated machines, viz.

The Watson all-steel two-horse twine Binder.
The Watson Deering Binder.
The Watson Improved Lion Reaper.
The New Humming Mower.
The Humming-bird Mower.
The Watson Daisy Rake.
The Mann Champion Rake.
The Tolten Pea Harvester.
The Mann Broad-cast Seeder and Harrows Combined.
The Champion Combined Drill, Colter & Scott, Oshawa.
The best Plow's and Harrows in the market.
Root Cutters, Grain Crushers, Fanning mills. Land Rollers.
Agent for the Waterson's Co's Machinery and Steam Threshers.

Horse Powers, Wagon's Buggies, Democrats, and every implement a farmer requires. Parties reqiring anything in above lines will find it to their advantage to call at my new implement house opposite R. McNally's Carriage works, where Mr. R. Robertson will be pleased to wait on customers in my absence.

J. H. CARSON, Agent
148-61 Markdale.

CANADIAN PACIFIC R. R.

TIME TABLE.

—Markdale Station—

GOING SOUTH.	6.47 a. m.	3.52 p. m
GOING NORTH.	12.02 p. m.	9.10 p. m

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

WILL CURE OR RELIEVE

BILIOUSNESS, DIZZINESS, DYSPEPSIA, DROPSY, INDIGESTION, FLUTTERING OF THE HEART, JAUNDICE. ACIDITY OF ERYSIPELAS, THE STOMACH, SALT RHEUM, DRYNESS HEARTBURN, OF THE SKIN, HEADACHE,

And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD.

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.

YOUNG FOLKS.

BOYS WHO BECAME FAMOUS

WINNING THE BEEF.

"The boy's mad—mad as a March hare! Oh, to think that I should ever have such a son!"

So spoke a portly Suffolk butcher as he came stamping into his house one evening with a very angry face indeed.

"Good lack! what aileth thee, husband?" cried his wife anxiously. "Hath our son Thomas done aught to displease thee? He was ever a good and dutiful lad."

"Good and dutiful, forsooth!" growled the butcher, "What think'st thou, dame, this "good and dutiful lad' of thine hath taken into his crazy pate? Nothing less will serve his highness than to be a student of Oxford, and win his degree there as Bachelor of Arts."

"Lackaday! that were a hard matter!" cried the good woman, opening her eyes in amazement. "Whence hath the boy got such high notions?"

"High or low," grunted her husband, "'tis all one. The thing is impossible, and there's an end on it."

Just then the figure of a young lad appeared in the doorway, whose slim, well-shaped form, pale, delicate features, and high white narrow forehead were so utterly unlike the butcher's brawny frame and course red face that no one could ever have guessed them to be father and son.

"Sir," said he, quietly but firmly, "I have blotted the word impossible out of my dictionary."

The tone in which these bold words were spoken and the bright, fearless look which accompanied them struck even the angry father with involuntary admiration.

"I like thy spirit, son Thomas," said he, in a milder voice, "but thou art over-bold nevertheless. Who ever heard of a butcher lad becoming a scholar and a learned clerk of Oxford? I and mine have been butchers these two hundred years, and I trow that what was good enough for thy fathers is good enough for thee."

The sly twinkle in young Tom's dark grey eyes showed that he saw the weakness of his father's argument, and knew how to answer it.

"Thou speak'st well, father," said he; "but tell me, I pray thee, who is the greatest man that liveth in Europe this day?"

"Why, who but his Holiness the Pope?" said Thomas the elder, who, like most Englishmen of that age, was a stanch Catholic.

"And know'st thou not, father," retorted Thomas the younger, "that his Holiness was a peasant's son, and worked in the fields in his youth? What if he had said then, "What was good enough for my fathers is good enough for me." The greatest man in this town of ours is our worshipful lord of the manor. His greatgrandfather was but a simple yeoman, and a yeoman he had remained had he thought as thou wouldst have me think, father. But forasmuch as he did good service to our lord King Henry V. of England in the French wars, the King knighted him with his own hand, and lo! his descendant is become a great lord."

"Son Thomas!" cried the butcher in desperation, "wilt thou talk thine own father out of his senses?"

"The more reason for letting him go where his ready speech can be known and prized as it ought," put in the mother, who had been listening with delight to her son's eloquence.

But the father was too thorough an Englishman to give in without resisting to the utmost.

"Hark ye, lad," cried he, "I'll make a fair bargain with thee. If thou canst, within three years, win thy degree as an Oxford Bachelor of Arts, well and good; but if not, give me thy word that thou'lt come home straightway and be an honest butcher like thy father."

"So do it," answered the lad, grasping his father's hand; "I give my word."

"And I mine," said the butcher; "and to show that I am a man of my word, the day thou wearest the gown of an Oxford Bachelor I'll give thee the best bit of beef in my shop for thy dinner, even if King Henry himself (long life to him!) had bespoken it."

Three years had gone by since the father and son made their bargain, and the butcher, remembering how pale and thin his son had looked the last time he saw him, was more anxious about the result than he would have cared to own. He had just unhooked a magnificent sirloin of beef, when his wife burst headlong into the shop, and called out in a tone of very unusual excitement,

"What art thou doing with that beef, husband?"

"It hath been bespoken by our worshipful lord of the manor," replied the butcher.

"Were it for King Henry himself," cried the housewife, seizing the meat with both hands, "he should not have it this day! Bethink thee, husband, how thou didst promise that when our son should gain his degree of Bachelor of Arts—"

"And hath he gained it?" broke in the butcher, now quite as much excited as his wife. "Whence hast thou the news, wife? where is the messenger?"

"Here," answered a low, clear voice behind him; and there stood young Thomas himself in the fur-trimmed robe of an Oxford Bachelor of Arts.

"Brave lad!" shouted the overjoyed father, seizing his son in a hug worthy of a Polar bear, and plentifully besmearing his new robe with the grease that covered his own frock. "Thou shalt have the beef, though one should offer me its weight in gold. I pray thee, good friend," he added, turning to the lackey who had been sent for the meat, "let not his lordship be angry if—"

"My lord loveth good learning too well to be displeased thereat," interrupted the servant, who knew the story of the butcher's promise to his son as well as every other man in the town. "May God prosper thee, Master Thomas, and give thee joy of such a son!"

A proud man was the butcher that night as the neighbors flocked into congratulate him and his wonderful son. And the sheriff himself held out his hand to the young scholar, saying, laughingly:

"Thou hast begun well, good youth, and thou wilt mount high hereafter. Remember me, I pray thee, when thou art a cardinal."

"There is many a true word spoken in jest," answered the student, with a sudden gleam in his deep, earnest eyes. "One Englishman hath become a pope—why should not another become a cardinal?"

And any one may now read for himself in history how Thomas, the butcher's son, ruled all England for many a year as CARDINAL WOLSEY.

Britain's Dependence on the Sea.

In these days it cannot be too frequently iterated and reiterated that to the sea England and the English-speaking race owe everything. Whatever may be said of England's decadence as a physical force among the other great physical forces of Europe, her unique destiny as the great moral force of the world is becoming more and more obvious every day. The peculiar racial characteristics of her people, her language, her literature, her traditions, are colouring the great tide of human life, as the mighty river beyond the peaks of Kaf coloured, according to the Mohammedan fancy, the waters of the ocean "as with the living blood of all gems."

And what is the cause of this? The feverish attention lately given to colonial matters on the Continent and the talk of Imperial Federation in England show what is the general opinion to the cause.

A great racial struggle for life is imminent in Europe, outlets for the teeming populations of the old world are urgently demanded, and practically there are no new countries left to develope. In the new world of the West and in the new world of the South the whole of the lands in the temperate zones have been appropriated, and by whom? Mainly by the English. That this is the cause of England's present dominance and of her stupendous future has now become an axiom on the Continent.

But what is the cause of the cause? How has it come about that in the unfilled lands of the temperate zone—in North America, in Africa, in Australia—almost every square mile of land is in the hands of Englishmen? Among Englishmen we, of course, include our brothers of the United States, with whom we of this island share with pride our blood and traditions, and between whom and us the bonds of affectionate sympathy are becoming closer and closer every year and every day. Is it true as English chauvinists assume it to be, that in the great racial struggle for life the Englishman is specially organised for success? Does the English race really exhibit any superiority over the other European races? Are Englishmen and Americans more courageous than Germans or more energetic? Are they more high-spirited than the French, or more deft, or more frugal? Are they more nobly endowed than the Italians with that dignified common sense which is said to be the very salt of life? To answer these questions in the affirmative would, no doubt, be pleasant, but would it be justified by the facts! Would any English employer of labor, skilled or unskilled, answer them in the affirmative? No; there is another cause a cause wholly unrelated to race—for the prospects of the English race. That cause is the sea.

From no peculiar merit of his own, but from the favouritism of fate or circumstances or chance, is the English race destined to hold the world in its hand. The Englishman's birthplace having been the only large and fruitful island of the old world, he has become the child of the sea.

That the high road of the ocean should lead him all over the world was simply inevitable. Hence England's destiny as the august mother of empires should give rise to no vainglory in any Englishman's breast; but rather it should give rise to a feeling of modesty, almost of humiliation, before responsibilities so vast. It should cause us to ask ourselves, Are we really and fully worthy of this favouritism of the sea? Thanks to the "silver streak," which is worth an entire European army, the English race, instead of exhausting its force, as the other less lucky races have been obliged to do, in defending frontiers, has been enabled to give all its energies to strengthening its limbs at home and finding fresh fields in which to strengthen them abroad. It is only of late years that the fact has been ignored that England owes her very existence to the sea—that without the sea she is nothing.

This becomes clear at once if we turn to the popular literature and to the stage of fifty years ago. At the time when the achievements of Nelson were still fresh in the popular mind, the love of the navy was a national passion—a passion whose expression would be laughed at now. Out of many instances that occur to us we will give one. In a volume called "Romance of Real Life" appeared a story called "Subordination" in which was a dramatic situation of a very tempting kind for managers and playwrights. A soldier having struck his superior officer for assaulting his (the soldier's) wife, was tried by Court-martial, and condemned to death. Admirably adapted as was such a story for the somewhat sentimental stage of that time Douglas Jerrold, who understood well the deep national passion for everything naval, saw that by turning the military into a naval hero the popular appeal of the story would be intensified a hundredfold. That he was right on this supposition the annals of the stage of that time abundantly show. Nowadays a nautical drama cannot be taken seriously at all. The very name suggests a Cockney burlesque. Thus considered, a writer of good sea poetry would confer a service on the country should he revive in the breasts of Englishmen the old passion for the traditions of the English navy. The finest marine lyric in this or any other language, "Ye mariners of England," was written by a man who had no knowledge whatever of the sailor's calling, and there is no need why the "Sohos," "Heave-hos" and Pull away, "boys," of the Dibdin school of marine poets should be revived. The landsman, if he have the true sea-feeling, need not shrink from entering the field.

Preston Summer Resort and Mineral Springs.

PRESTON—one of the prettiest little towns in Western Canada, with its beautiful, cool, shady walks and drives, its lovely valleys, with the charming little river Speed flowing through it until it reaches the Grand River, has long been noted for its celebrated Mineral Spring. The remarkable curative qualities of the baths in the most obstinate cases of rheumatism, kidney and liver complaints, neuralgia, skin diseases of every description, as well as its recuperative powers to the business man needing quiet and rest after the year's labors, can be testified by hundreds of our prominent citizens. The Hotel, situated on a slight eminence in the quiet part of the town, with cool, terraced gardens, croquet lawns, etc., is well adapted for the invalid or seeker of quiet summer repose and rest. The accommodations are most comfortable, with every modern convenience, the table first-class; billiard table and livery stable in connection; the rates lower than any other summer resort in the Dominion. Its close proximity to Toronto, with low railway rates, makes it the most desirable spot in Ontario for our citizens to spend their summer vacation. Preston can be reached by G. W. R. to Preston station, by Credit Valley to Galt, within three miles, or by G. T. R. to Blair, one and a half miles. Tickets for Spring can be bought at reduced rates from Brantford. 'Buss meets every train at Preston station. Send for circular with rates and particulars to C. KRESS, Mineral Baths, Preston, Ontario.

THE LIME-KILN CLUB.

The Chairman of the Committee on the Safety of the Public Health announced that he had his report ready for the summer of 1887, and being told to proceed with it he arose in his place and read from a blue-tinted manuscript as follows:

"Dar' am certain things to be looked out fur doorin' the heated sezun. De fust thing on de list is cholera. Den comes, in de reg'lar order named, yaller fever, consumpshun, bilyus fever, fallin' into de ribber, gittin' run ober by a street kyar an' cholera morbus. Bein' 'rested by de police an' sent up fur sixty days mus' be classed as a misfortin instead of a disease.

"De hot sezun am de time to be keerful. We would recommend to de cull'd population of dis kentry:

"1. Ice cream should be eaten slowly an' deliberately, de chin well wiped off wid a red napkin as soon as possible afterwards, an' de victim should beware of mental excitement or physical exershun fur an hour or two.

"2. Sodawater an' ginger ale should be paid fur in advance. Dis gives de soda-man a chance to look at de money an' find it all right, an' saves de customer any fear of hevin' to take to his legs an' outrun anybody. We doan' specify as to de quantity which kin be safely surrounded. Some pussons kin hold a bar'l, while others stop at a gallon.

"3. Harvest apples an' cow-cumbers hev slayed tens of thousands of innocent people, but dey war' all white folks. While we doan' believe either vegetable am harmful, it will be well to eat slowly, chaw de rinds an' cores very fine, an' sit down in de shade of de woodshed fur half an hour arter eating.

"4. A watermellyon fired from a cannon at a culled gem'lan two feet away might somewhat injoore his physical corporosity, but under no odder sarcumstances kin we look upon de product wid even suspishun. We believe dat de melon crop of dis kentry fur de last five y'ars, together wid de way it was distributed about, has been de means of keepin' cholera from our doahs. Doan' leave any core stickin' to de rinds.

"5. We doan' recommend too much washin an' cleanin'. De Injun am de dirtiest pusson on dis airth, an' nobody eber knowed an Injun to have cholera or small pox. Kinder wash up now and den, an' sorter scrub up a leetle extra on Sundays, an' trust de rest to carrying an onion in your pocket.

"6. Leave de window up when you go to bed, frow some lime arounnd de back doah occasionally, an' when obleeged to drink water shake in a leetle pepper-sass."

IT WAS CARRIED.

Pickles Smith moved that the report be accepted and the suggestions printed for gratuitous distribution.

Whalebone Howker objected. He should not feel safe from yellow fever without instructions from a medical bureau. He would cast no slur upon the honorable committee but what did a man like Maj. Arnica Lemingwell, who was in the ash business, Prof. Kehote Johnson, who peddled fish, or Porous Davis, who blacked stoves, know about epidemics? Any man in that lodge was liable to be attacked with cholera at any moment, and not ten minutes before he had witnessed a sample case of cholera morbus in the blue ante-room. Samuel Shin had mixed harvest apples, cucumbers, ice water, ginger ale, new cabbage, old strawberries and the cocoanut crop of 1886 together, and the result was that he was still calling for some lawyer to come and make his will.

"Brudder Howker," said the President in reply, "de matter was given to dat committee to investigate. Dey ar' 'posed to hev performed deir full duty. Until the cholera lifts some member of dis club we hev no moral right to go back on de report. I shall darfore put it to vote."

Upon a vote being taken the report of the committee was adopted by an overwhelming majority.

UNFAVORABLY REPORTED.

Givesdam Jones expressed his readiness to report on the application of Jesse Blalock and others, of Buzzard's Roost—a suburb of Birmingham, Ala.—in the matter of granting a charter for a branch lodge. He had discovered that the petitioners were people in very bad standing in Birmingham, especially among the police, and that Blalock's sole object in establishing a branch was to spite Joe Price, the king pigeon of the roost. Brother Jones had been in correspondence with old Pete Whitefield, the porter of the Florence Hotel, who hasn't slept in a bed for six years, and has the largest bank account of any colored man in the city, and old Pete had replied:

"No, sah, doan' you gin dem niggers no charter nor nuffin.' Why, sah, dat crowd am de tuffest lot of black folks in dis hull Stait, an' dey'd hev de lodge room chuck full o' stolen chicken afore it was a month old. I'ze 'spectin' ebery day to see boaf Blalock an' Price hung up fur murder!"

In view of the circumstances Brother Jones said he should report unfavorably on the application, and he was relieved from further consideration of the matter.

HE FAILED.

Col. Hardbern Jackson then presented the following resolution:

"Resolved, Dat de Legislachur of Michigan, just adjourned, was de wuss body of men ever assembled at Lansing for legal purposes."

Samuel Shin swallowed a two-cent piece in his haste to get his mouth open to second the adoption, but the President wilted him with a look, and said:

"De resolushun am useless. It simply specifies what de people already know, an' hev made up der minds to. I shall, darfore, declar' it outer order, and we will syndicate to our several homes, each pusson takin' de umbrella dat belongs to him an' none odder."

Home Testimony.

Many hundred recommendations similar in character to the one given below have been received, and give proof of the great value of Polson's Nerviline as a pain remedy. Try it.

ATHOL, Feb. 20.—We hereby certify that we have used Nerviline in our families, and have found it a most reliable remedy for cramps in the stomach, also for headache, and externally for rheumatic pains. No house should be without this invaluable remedy.—LUKE COLE. ELISHA COLE, J. P.

"Were you ever caught in a sudden squall?" asked an old yachtsman of a worthy citizen. "Well, I should rather think so," responded the good man. "I have helped to bring up eight young 'uns."

The Experience of Mrs. Peters.

Mrs. Peters had ills,
Mrs. Peters was sure she was going to die;
They dosed her with pills,
With powders and squills,
With remedies wet, and with remedies dry.
Many medicines lured her,
But none of them cured her,
There names and their number nobody could tell;
And she soon might have died,
But some "Pellets" were tried,
That acted like magic, and then she got well.

The magic "Pellets" were Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets (the orginal Little Liver Pills). They cured Mrs. Peters and now she wouldn't be without them.

Bustles grow smaller.

Don't Hawk, Spit, Cough, suffer dizziness, indigestion, inflammation of the eyes, headache, lassitude, inability to perform mental work and indisposition for bodily labor, and annoy and disgust your friends and acquaintances with your nasal twang and offensive breath and constant efforts to clean your nose and throat, when Dr. Sage's "Catarrh Remedy" will promptly relieve you of discomfort and suffering, and your friends of the disgutting and needless inflictions of your loathesome disease.

"If women are really angels," writes an old bachelor, "Why don't they fly over the fence, instead of making such a fearfully awkward job of climbing?"

A Square Statement by a Carpenter.

"For years I have had a chest trouble amounting to nothing short of consumption. I saw how others in like condition had been cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and resolved to test its merits in my own case. The results are so plane as hardly to require a bitstock or any auger-ment in favor of this grate remedy. It does awl it claims! It builds up the system, supports and strengthens where others fail." He adz: "My recovery, which is now on a sure foundation, hinges entirely on the compass of this wonderful Restorative, having tried other remedies without a bit of relief."

The barber—"What you need, sir, is some of my 'hair restorer.'" The Customer—"What I need more, sir, is a divorce from my wife."

THE ASSESSMENT SYSTEM

Large Insurance Claim Paid—Endorsement of the Mutual Reserve.

Office of W. D. MATTHEWS & Co., Grain and Produce Merchants, Toronto, 11th May, 1887.

J. D. Wells, Esq., General Manager Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association.:

DEAR SIR—We beg to acknowledge receipt of cheque for Five Thousand Dollars in full of claim under a policy of insurance issued to us by the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association for that amount, as creditors of the late Edwin C. Fisher.

We have much pleasure in bearing testimony to the prompt and satisfactory manner in which this claim has been adjusted, and at the same time to express our confidence in your association. Having an intimate acquaintance with your President and chief officers, we know them to be gentlemen of the highest integrity, and in whose hands we believe the interests of the members of the Mutual Reserve are perfectly safe.

Wishing your association continued success.

Yours truly, W. D. MATTHEWS & Co.

The way the English are talking:

"Should the British yacht conquer the Yankee May-flower
(By the length of a foot would suffice),
Why, every up-Thames man will sing in his bower,
'Oh, this'll be—Thistle be nice?'"

PAISLEY DYEING.—There is no reason why everybody should not look well, when for a very small expense you can have all your faded wearing apparel cleaned or dyed at the well-known dye works of R. Parker & Co., 759 Yonge St., Toronto, Ont. Send for pamphlet giving all information.

Customer—"Isn't it a trifle large, Levi?" Levi—"Larch, mine frent! Gracious! Uf you geeps dot Shpring coat on, unt your wife sees it, your bosom vill schwell mit pride so dot she'll hef to set dem buttons forvarts."

YOUNG MEN suffering from the effects of early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted, also MIDDLE-AGED and OLD MEN who are broken-down from the effects of abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and read M. V. Lubon's Treatise on Diseases of Men. The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address M. V. Lubon, 47 Wellington St. E. Toronto, Ont.

Mrs. Yerger—"Matilda, who was that man you were talking to last night at the back fence?" Matilda Snowball—"Hab yer nebber felt de influence ob de tender pashun, dat yer axes me sich queshuns?"

Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness and Hay Fever.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presense of living parasites in the lining membrans of the nose and eustachian tubes Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are cured in from one to three simple applications made at home. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent free on receipt of stamp by A. H. Dixon & Son, 308 King Street West, Toronto, Canada.

A farmers of Plymouth, Ill., angry at his cow, endeavored to kick her on the nose. She lowered her head, and he impaled his leg upon her sharp horns.

People who are subject to bad breath, foul coated tongue, or any disorder of the Stomach, can at once be relieved by using Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, the old and tried remedy. Ask your Druggist.

Cook (on the day after her arrival)—"Please, mum, I'm a bit fiery at times, and when I am fiery I'm apt to be a bit rough-spoken, but you needn't let that put you about. With a little present now and then you can allus bring me round again."

Whenever your Stomach or Bowels get out of order, causing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, or Indigestion and their attendant evils, take at once a dose of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Best family medicine. All Druggists, 50 cents.

"Oh, my friends, there are some spectacles that a person never forgets!" said a lecturer, after giving a graphic description of a terrible accident that he had witnessed. "I'd like to know where they sell 'am," remarked an old lady in the audience who is always mislaying her glasses.

LADIES

Who are Weak, Nervous and Exhausted; who feel themselves losing strength; who are pale, delicate and sickly in appearance, suffering from the many complaints peculiar to women—send for and read M. V. LUBON'S Treatise in BOOK FORM on the Diseases of Women. Mailed sealed and secure from observation on receipt of 6c in stamps, UNSEALED FREE. Address, M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. East Toronto, Ont.

A. P. 354

PATENTS For Sale—Illustrative descriptive Catalogue free. R. Chamberlin, Toronto.

GOOD LIVE AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY County in Canada. Address FERRIS & CO., 57 Church St., Toronto.

300 CASES OF CONSUMPTION CURED without a failure. Address W. L. MILLER, M.D., 18 East 11th St., N.Y. City.

DR. WM. ARMSTRONG, Specialty, Skin diseases, cases of the blood. All cancers cured able, without the use of the knife. 9 to 12 a.m. and from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. cepted 28 Dundas Street, Toronto.

TORONTO CUTTING SCHOOL desirous of acquiring a thorough garment cutting should apply at once 122 Yonge St., Toronto. Terms on ANOTHER NOVELTY. All the rage in the States. Agents by mail 45 cents. CLEMENT & CO.

COMPOUND OXYGEN—THE of health, the enemy of disease Lungs, Re-builds the Broken Down young and old. H months' treatment, and all complete, 112. Moved my office from 73 King East. MRS G. STIDMAN FIERON established in Toronto. 32 Office Send for circular.

BEAVER LINE OF STEAMSHIPS Sailing weekly between Montreal RATES OF PASSAGE:—Saloon, Montreal $40, $50, and $60; Return Tickets, —according to steamer and accommodation. mediate and Steerage at lowest rates particulars and to secure berths, apply MURRAY, General Manager, Square, Montreal, or to the Local Agents ferent Towns and Cities.

Awnings! CELEBRATED GOLD MEDAL TENT MANUFACTORY, West, Toronto. NATIONAL MANUFACTURING

GOLD, COMPOSITION GOLD, Natural Wood, and other Room Mouldings, Frames, etc gravings Etchings, Artotypes, Mirrors, etc. Wholesale and Retail. alogue. MATTHEWS BROS. & CO.

AGENTS—Ladies or Gentlemen To Canvass for our Subscription Stanard and popular work, Dr. Withrow's of Canada"—a book which ought to be in Our instructive, amusing and soul-touching ance book, "Platform Echoes," by J. H. complete book of sermons, and autobiography P. Jones, with a short sketch of the life of Small, and three of his special sermons. Our book of poetry and literature of all ages entitled "Golden Thoughts on Mother, Heaven." Our handsome Family Bibles, illustrations, full of useful and helpful Bible study, besides good clear type and terms are liberal. Send for circulars. WILLIAM BRIGGS, Publisher, GUELPH Business College, Twelve States and Provinces already on the roll of this Institution. To thorough tical instruction, and the efficiency and graduates, this College owes its popularity. giving terms, etc., mailed free. Address M. MacCORMICK, Prin.

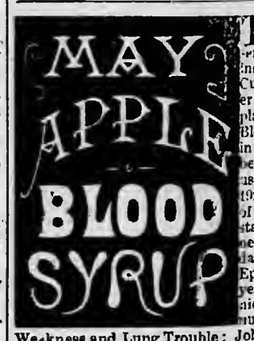
THE LONDON GUARANTEE AND ACCIDENT CO. (LTD. OF LONDON) Capital, £260,000. Dominion Government £55,000. Head Office: 72 King St East, Gentlemen of influence wanted in unrepresented districts. A. T. McCORD, Resident Secretary for the Dominion.

CHURNS. kinds; Washing Machines, 2 kinds. Carpet Meat Choppers, Trucks, and other sundries. HAMILTON INDUSTRIAL WORKS CO., Hamilton, Send for article wanted or Illustrated Catalogue.

Dairy Salt FOR BUTTER, ETC. NEW Importations.—Higgins' Eureka, Worsenton and Ashton Brands, in large or small Also Rice's Canadian Salt. Write for prices. JAMES PARK & SON. Wholesale Produce Merchants

RUBBER STAMPS, cils, and Burning Brands, &c. for Catalogue. BARBER BROS. 37 Scott St., Toronto.



MILLER'S TICK DESTROYER

STOCKMEN, give this valuable paration a fair trial. promptly and effectually in Ticks and other vermin pests, as in eradicating all affections skin to which Sheep are subject. in Tins at 35c., 70c. and $1. A 35c. Tin will Sheep or 35 Lambs. HUGH MILLER & Co.,

Bicycles SEND AT ONCE FOR of Second-Hand From $15 Up- New Catalogue Ready 1st A. T. LANE MONTREAL

THE greatest covery of the ent age for ing the Bowels, Curing all Blood ers and Kidney plaints. A Blood Purifier. A in Hamilton who been benefited by use: Mrs. M 192 Robert St., of Erysipelas of 2 standing; Robt. well, 24 South daughter cured Epileptic Fits after years' suffering; nie Birrell, 35 ut St., cured Wood, 95 Ch cart St., cured of Liver Complaint and Biliousness used only 3 fifty-cent bottles; Mrs. J. Beal, 6 Augusta St., troubled for years with Nervous Prostration, small bottles gave her great relief. Sold at 50c. & $1. F. F. DALLEY & CO., Proprietors.

Weakness and Lung Trouble: John

BABY'S BIRTHDAY

A Beautiful Imported Birthday Card to any baby whose mother will send us names of two or more other babies, and parents' addresses. Also a handsome mond Dye Sample Card to the mother much valuable information. Wells, Richardson & Co., Montreal.

The National ELECTRO & STERLO CO. 23 ADELAIDE ST. E., TORONTO. All classes of fine work. Mfrs. of Printers' Rings and Metal Furniture. Send for prices.

THE WHITE THRESHING ENGINE OF LONDON, ONT. A FULL SUPPLY FOR 1887

CONSUMPTION I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer. Give express and P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto.

ORDER OF THE LEAGUE

BY FRED. M. WHITE.

CHAPTER XIX.

...me window stood a high Japanese ... with plate-glass panels. Isodore ...rely time to conceal herself behind ...hen Le Gautier entered. He seemed ...hat hurried, but otherwise calm ..., as he walked into the room and ...n Enid. "Before I leave"——Then ...pped suddenly.

...Geoffrey was standing a little way ...from the group, one hand behind his ...the other pointing with unsteady fore... ...to Linda Despard, while he never ...his eyes from Le Gautier's face. A ...tick of the nostrils, a quiver of the ...nd the Frenchman was himself again. ...Sir Geoffrey never moved; he merely ...d his lips, and snapped out one word, ...ell."

"Is this a theatrical rehearsal?" Le Gau... ...ked at length.

"I am waiting," the baronet returned, ...some explanation. To a man of your ...ence, I need not be explicit. This ..., monsieur, and you, I hear, are old ...quaintances."

"You talk in riddles, Sir Geoffrey."

"You are anxious to gain time. I, on ...other hand, do not wish to be too hard ...on you. Let me explain. Miss Linda ...pard—who has been in my house for ...time, the result of an accident, the ...ils of which you have probably heard—...out to be an old friend of yours. She ...essed this moment, you perceive, in a ...aracter which had been rehearsed under ...r personal superintendence—the charac... ...of my late brother."

"But what can this possibly have to do ...h me?"

"A truce to this folly!" Sir Geoffrey ...ed warmly. "I have heard everything ...out the jugglery at Paddington—the mir..., and Pepper's Ghosts, and the whole ...nable machinery by which I was de... ...ved."

"Then you no longer believe?" Le Gau... ...asked, fixing his glittering eyes upon ...e baronet's face.

But the magnetic power was gone now; ...e glance was returned as sternly. Sir ...offrey seemed a new man. "I do not be...ve," he replied.

"Then take the consequences—be a ...nted, miserable man for the rest of your ...s! You will not be warned. I have done ...t I can for you. If you like to believe the ...e you have heard, I will not prevent you. ...y again, take the consequences."

"On the contrary, my good sir, it is you ...o will be the principal sufferer. I wish ...o make this interview as pleasant as pos...ble, and cannot do better than by making ...t brief. There was a little cont act between ..., which you will consider at an end from ...is moment."

"And why?" Le Gautier asked hotly. "You have proved nothing against me at ...resent. This Linda Despard, whose tale ...ou have been listening to, is no friend of ...mine."

"Can you look her in the face and say ...hat she is wrong?" Sir Geoffrey interrupt...ed. "Of course, you cannot deny the ...ruth of her words. Then why am I bound ...o fulfil my contract with you?"

"Because I have your word it shall be so. ...On your word, and by the power I hold over ...you, I claim my wife still."

"And in good time, you shall have her, ...Hector le Gautier."

The group assembled there looked sudden...ly at Lucrece, as she spoke. She came for...ward now, facing the Frenchman, who eyed ...her with an undisguised sneer.

"And what has the maid of Miss Charteris ...to do with me?"

"Much," she answered quietly. "Do ...you know who I am?"

"A servant who has got into the drawing-...room by mistake. If I am wrong, please ...enlighten me."

Lucrece stepped forward, throwing her ...head back, and placing one hand upon a ...table at her side. "I will enlighten you. ...Five years is a long time in a lifetime like ...mine, but your memory will carry you back ...to the Villa Mattio. Hector le Gautier, I ...am Lucrece Visci, sister of your friend Carlo ...Visci."

"And I am no wiser now."

"But I am," Enid exclaimed. "Father, ...you remember Signor Visci, the artist who ...used to meet us at Rome?"

"Yes, my dear"—with a glance at Le ...Gautier—"a fine specimen of an Italian ...gentleman. The only unpleasant recollec...tion I have of him is, that he first introduc...ed me to Monsieur le Gautier."

The Frenchman's eyes flashed, and he ...moved as if to speak; but Lucrece continued ...rapidly: "You may not remember me; ...but you have not forgotten my sister, ...Genevieve. Ah! I have moved you now! ...Miss Charteris, you were in Rome when she ...disappeared. Her false lover stands before ...you now!"

"It is false!" Le Gautier exclaimed. ...."Prove that I——"

"It is true. Prove it? Look at your ...own face there!" Lucrece cried, pointing to ...a mirror opposite him. "Look there, and ...deny it if you can!"

"True or false, I cannot waste words with ...you.—Sir Geoffrey, I hold you to your ...promise.—Enid, you shall keep your word."

"We are not in the habit of bestowing ...the daughters of our house upon adventur...ers," Sir Geoffrey replied. "I am sure your ...natural good sense and a little calm reflec...tion will show you the folly of your demand."

"My father has spoken for me," Enid ...said. "I have nothing to add."

Le Gautier stepped across the room to ...her. She rose to her feet in alarm. Lucrece ...stood between the two, and grasping Eind ...by the wrist, and laying her hand upon the ...Frenchman's shoulder, held him back. "Are ...you mad that you ask this thing?" she ...asked.

"And wherefore? How does it concern ...you?"

She looked him steadily in the face as she ...replied: "Then I must refresh your mem...ory," and raising her voice till it rang ...through the lofty room, "because you have ...a wife already!"

Le Gautier staggered back; but he was ...not beaten yet. "Another of your little ...fabrications," he said mockingly.

"Look at him!" Lucrece exclaimed, turn...ing to the others, and pointing at the de...tected man with infinite scorn. "Look into ...his face—mark his dejected air, though he ...braves it out well, and tell me if I am wrong."

"Your word is doubtless a good one; but there is something better than words, and that is proof. Do you not think I can see through this paltry conspiracy which has been got up against me? But you have the wrong man to deal with in me for that. I will have the compact fulfilled; my power is not over yet; and, Sir Geoffrey, I give you one more chance. Refuse at your peril."

"I do refuse," Sir Geoffrey answered icily. "Do your worst."

"That is your decision?—And now as to these groundless accusations you have brought against me. You have made them; prove them." He turned to Lucrece with a gesture which was almost noble, all the actor's instinct aroused in him now. There was one desperate chance for him yet.

"You had best take care, if I accept you at your word."

"I wish to be taken at my word. I demand your proofs!"

"And you shall have them!" Saying these words, Lucrece glided swiftly from the room,

An awkward silence fell upon the group. Le Gautier was the first to speak. There was a kind of moisture in his eye, and an air of resigned melancholy on his face. "You have misjudged me," he said sorrowfully. "Some day you will be ashamed of this—Sir Geoffrey you are the victim of a designing woman, who seeks, for some reason, to traduce my fair fame. If I have a wife, let them bring me face to face with her here."

"You have your wish, Hector, for I am here!"

Le Gautier bounded forward like a man who had received a mortal hurt, and gazed on the speaker with glaring eyes. Valerie was standing before him, not without agitation herself. A low cry burst from his lips, and he drew his shaking hand down his white, damp face. "What brings you here?" he asked, his voice sounding strangely to his own ears, as if it came from far away. "Woman! why do you come here now, to destroy me utterly?"

She shrank back—an eloquent gesture to the onlookers—a gesture seven years' freedom from thraldom had not obliterated. "You wished to see me. Lo! I am here! Turn round to your friends now, and deny that I am your lawful wife—deny again that you have ever seen me before, and put me to the proof.—Why do you not speak? Why do you not show a little of that manhood you used to have? Strike me, as you have done often in the times gone by—anything better than standing there, a poor, pitiful, detected swindler—a miserable hound indeed!"

There was a dead silence now, only broken by Le Gautier's heavy breathing, and the rustle of his sleeve as he wiped the perspiration from his face.

"There is the proof you demanded," Lucrece said at length. "We are waiting for you to deny the witness of your eyes."

But still Le Gautier did not speak, standing there like some stone figure, his limbs almost powerless. He raised his head a moment, then lowered it again swiftly. He tried to articulate a few words, but his tongue refused its office.

Sir Geoffrey laid his hand upon the bell. "Have you nothing to say?" he asked.

"I—I—— Let me go out—the place is choking me!"

Sir Geoffrey rang the bell sharply. "Then this interview had better close. It has already been too long, and degrading—James, show Monsieur le Gautier out, if you please.—I have the honour to wish you good-morning; and if we do meet again," he added in a stern undertone, "remember, it is as strangers."

Le Gautier, without another word or look, left the room, Lucrece following a moment later, and leading Valerie away. Isodore stepped out from her hiding-place, her face alternately scornful and tender.

"We owe you a heavy debt of gratitude indeed!" Sir Geoffrey exclaimed warmly. "It is extremely good of you to take all this trouble for mere strangers. Accept my most sincere thanks!"

"We are not quite strangers," Isodore replied, turning to Enid. "Lucrece told you who she was; let me tell you who I am. I have never met you, though once I hoped to do so. I am Genevieve Visci!"

"What! Signor Visci's sister—the girl who—who"—— "Do not hesitate to say it. Yes, Isodore and Genevieve are one. Out of recollection of old times, when you were so kind to my dear brother, I have not forgotten you, knowing Le Gautier so well."

"But Lucrece, your sister, to come here as my maid. And Le Gautier—how did you know? I am all at sea yet."

"It is a long sad story, and some day when I know you better, I will tell you all, but not now. But one thing, please, remember, that come what will, Le Gautier cannot harm you now. He may threaten, but he is powerless. I have only to hold up my hand"——

"And Frederick—Mr. Maxwell?"

"Do not be impatient. You will see him to-morrow; for this evening I have need of him. You have not the slightest grounds for anxiety. Le Gautier will never harm any one more."

"How strangely, sternly, you speak," Enid replied.

Isodore smiled. "Do I? Well, you heard what Lucrece said, and I may have planned a little retaliation of my own. The eastern eagle flies slowly, but his flight is sure. Trust me, and fear not."

Enid was bewildered. But the time was near when she was to understand.

With baffled fury and revenge raging in his heart, Le Gautier turned away in the direction of his lodgings, anywhere to get away from himself for a time, nothing left to him now but to wreak his vengeance upon Sir Geoffrey in the most diabolical way his fiendish ingenuity could contrive—and Isodore. By this time, Maxwell was no more; there was some grain of satisfaction in that; and he had Marie St. Jean to fall back upon.

He sat brooding in his rooms till nearly nine—time to attend the meeting of the League, the last one he determined that should ever see his face. Had he known how fatally true this was, he would have faced a thousand dangers rather than gone to Gray's Inn Road that night. It was nearly ten when he lowered his gas, and struck off across the side streets in the direction of Holborn. When he reached his destination, he walked up-stairs, the only arrival as yet. Had he been less preoccupied, he would not have failed to notice the glance bestowed upon him by the [illegible] lingered about the room till one by one the company came in.

They were not long in commencing business. Le Gautier did not occupy the chair on this occasion; the proceedings of this evening were important, and a Supreme Councillor was present. He greeted each man coldly. To Le Gautier his manner was stern to the last degree. The routine commenced, and was conducted quietly for some time in the briefest, dryest fashion. Then the president for the evening rose, and taking from his pocket the gold moidore, commanded every one there to throw his upon the table. Presently, nine golden coins glittered on the green baize. "One short," the president said sternly. "Whose?"

They looked round, each waiting for the other to speak.

"It is mine," Le Gautier exclaimed, "I did not think it necessary."

"You have no right to think; it is not in your province. If you have in any way parted with it"——He stopped significantly, and Le Gautier hastily intervened.

"I humbly beg your pardon. I will fetch it immediately. I have not far to go; I can return at once. In justice to myself, I am sure you will permit me to fetch it."

"No!" thundered the Chief Councillor with a glance in Le Gautier's face that made his heart beat thick and fast. "And as to justice, you shall have it presently, to the uttermost scruple.—Gentlemen, there is a traitor present!"

With one accord they sprang to their feet, suspicion and alarm in every eye.

"Who is it?" they cried. "Death to the traitor!"

"Look round among yourselves and see if you can discover him.—No? Then he wears a good mask who has a hard conscience.—Stand up, traitor!—ay, the most despicable; stand up, and look us in the face! Who is the man who has enjoyed our deepest confidences—the man we have to thank Isodore for discovering?—Staud up, I say! Rise, Hector le Gautier!"

The Frenchman knew his last hour had come; but he knew that such a bold accusation as this could not be made without the most convincing proof. But despite his failings, he was not the man to cower before such a great danger. He braced his nerves till they were like steel; there was no particle of fear in his face as he turned at bay.

"I had expected something like this," he said. "It is not likely that my promotion should pass by without incurring some jealousy. I will say nothing about my long services, the years I have spent in the service of the League. My accuser, and your proof!"

A murmur of applause ran round the table at this sentiment. There was no appearance of guilt here.

"Isodore is your accuser—the proofs she holds. You are charged with conspiracy to overthrow the League, in conjunction with another person. Your companion is one Marie St. Jean."

Even with his iron nerves under control as they were, Le Gautier could not repress a start, which was not lost upon the Councillor.

"Marie St. Jean," he continued, "received from you certain papers for the purpose of handing them over to the police. The information contained therein is complete. Do you deny your handwriting?"

He threw a bundle of papers across the table to Le Gautier. As he read them, his white face became corpse-like in its livid hue. But he was fighting for his life now, and summoned all his self-command to his aid, knowing full well that if he was condemned, he would never leave that room alive. His calm air came back to him.

"I admit the handwriting—private memoranda stolen from my apartments. I am still waiting for your proof. Besides, Marie St. Jean is a member of the League; she restored to me"——

"Your insignia, which you had the temerity to stake upon the colour at Homburg.—Salvarini, I call upon you to say if this is not so?"

"I would rather say nothing about this," Salvarini said. Le Gautier saw how distressed and agitated he was. "I fear—I much fear you have too much proof without calling upon me."

"You stand by a friend, Luigi!" Le Gautier said bitterly. "Do not think of me now. Every man must look to himself!"

"Sufficient of this," the president interrupted. "My proofs are overpowering. You are charged with packing the cards, to force the Brother Maxwell upon a dangerous mission."

"Enough!" the prisoner exclaimed; "confront me with my accuser!"

"You shall see her—Isodore!"

As he raised his voice, a breathless hush fell upon the assembly. Presently, a woman entered; for a moment she looked at the group, and then raising her veil, showed her beautiful face.

"Marie!" A deep, bitter cry, following this word, burst from Le Gautier's lips, and he fell forward upon the table, his head upon his hands. There was no escape now, he knew full well. And the woman he thought had loved him—the woman who knew all his plans to the letter, was the Princess of the League, the most dangerous member, Isodore herself! Salvarini looked into her face for a moment, and then whispered one word—Genevieve; but she heard it, and smiled at him, pleased that one man should remember—heard the little word which struck a womanly chord in her heart, and was thankful. Then she made him a sign to be silent.

Stunned by the crushing force and suddeness of the blow, Le Gautier half lay there, with his head resting upon the table, no sound breaking the solemn silence. The president addressed the wretched man, asking him if he had anything to say.

He raised his head and looked dazedly around, then down again. "I? No! I have nothing to say. My doom is sealed!"

"Bind him!"

Rough hands were laid upon the doomed wretch, and fastened him in his chair securely, taking care to make his bonds too tight for escape. Le Gautier did not resist; he knew now that there was no escape in all the wide world for him. They left him thus, trooping into an adjoining room to go through the mockery of the trial which the orders of the League demanded.

When Le Gautier looked up, he was alone, save for Isodore. "You are satisfied with your work now?"

"Yes, I am satisfied now," Isodore echoed. "So you thought to play me off against Enid Charteris, poor fool! Hector le Gautier, I am going to tax your memory. Do you remember one evening in the Mattio woods when you abandoned a lonely trusting girl, the sister of your friend? Do you remember laughing (a year of vengeance ago) [illegible] years ago? Justice is done, but is sure. Do you remember?"

"Yes. Is it possible that you can be?"——

"Yes, it is possible, for I am Genevieve Visci! It is my turn now." And without another word she left him.

Presently, a desire to live took the place of his dull despair. In an agony he tugged and turned, cutting his wrists with the [illegible] rope till the blood ran down his hands. He could hear the low monotonous voices from the adjoining room, the hurrying footsteps in the road below; and only that thin wall between himself and safety. Even the window leading from the iron staircase was open, and the evening breeze fanned his white despairing face. He struggled again till his heart nearly burst, and then, worn out, broke into tears.

"Hector!"

He turned round, hardly certain whether it was a voice or a fancy. Gradually out of the mist a figure emerged, and creeping stealthily across the bare floor, came to his side. It was Valerie.

"So you have come to gloat over my misery too," he whispered hoarsely. "Go, or, manacled as I am, I shall do you a mischief."

For answer, she drew a knife from her pocket, and commenced, with trembling fingers, to sever his bonds. One by one the sharp knife cut through them, till at length he stood a free man. One grudging, grateful glance at the woman, and he disappeared

(TO BE CONTINUED).

The Influence of a Newspaper.

The following clipped from an exchange is indeed worthy of a place in our columns as in catering to the public taste we do not furnish sufficient insight into the conducting of a newspaper.

What were we before the circulation of the newspaper? for head and heart must have felt a need that books could not fill. Through its columns we feel that we are inhaling a new atmosphere, bracing, invigorating, that stimulates the pulses to new aims and hopes; and its issues are potent for a greater or less amount of good or evil.

It is a mighty agent of reform that must fructify, or wither, exalt or degrade society. The secret of its subtle influence lies in its continual presence and ceaseless appeals to the fireside where it is a welcome guest that is eagerly greeted, and its teachings devoured to the exclusion of all other reading, however elevating and instructive.

Its matter is so varied that there is something suited to every taste, mood, interest and avocation. It is one of the most important factors of civilized life, and it is only a narrow prejudice that decries its value.

It constitutes almost the sole species of instruction that many families possess; and insipid indeed would be some homes without its cheering presence. It gives a knowledge of the outside world which we cannot glean from books, for it keeps pace with every innovation, every little business fluctuation, every social, religious, commercial, and political enterprise, at home or abroad, in time of war or of peace; and it is now recognized as one of the greatest demands of modern social life.

Since it has gained an undisputed foothold upon public confidence it arrogates to itself a universal range as prophet, teacher critic, and legislator, and is not content with all this distinction, but boldly draws aside the curtain of daily domestic life and exposes to vulgar gaze the closeted grinning skeleton behind the downy cushion of gilded haberdashery and luxury.

What the editor is and what a cricital public would have him be, are as diverse as one can conceive, and it would be a difficult undertaking to furnish the true ideal. It should not be expected that his work should bear the stamp of an exceptional excellence and finish, for to indite hourly and creditably demands more unremitting thought, attention, and leisure than is possible to bestow upon the varied matter presented for the public approval or condemnation.

The editor's responsibility is a grave one, and the daily and momentous pressure of his surroundings renders his position any other than an enviable one. He must think hastily, yet soundly, he must write rapidly, yet faultlessly; and any immaturity of thought or expression is an unforgiven trespass upon an invidious public.

The Court for Him to Practice In.

A railroad switchman had been devoting his spare time to the study of Blackstone, and when he considered himself well versed in legal lore he sent in his resignation to the company.

The yardmaster met him one day and said.

"Well, Johnnie, I see you have been admitted to the bar?"

"Yes," replied Johnnie, "I have been successful in getting through all right, and I will hang out my shingle as a lawyer in a few days."

"I suppose you will soon be heard from in the courts of the country defending great criminals?"

"No, siree," replied John, "I shall confine my practice to courts that hear evidence in divorce matters, for in that court I believe I shall be eminently successful, because I have had so much experience in uncoupling.

A site of 50 acres has been taken for the Gordon Memorial Boys, Home in London. A building will be put up to accommodate 160 boys, and the cost of maintaining the establishment will be $20,000 a year.

"I can't tell for the life of me," said an old farmer in Muskoka, to a party of city visitors, "what you fellers see up here ter draw ye. For my part, these all-fired rocks have been the worst things we've had to contend with. Still, it's all right if you like it. We're glad to see ye; only it's mighty funny."

The other evening Philip Spear left his five-year-old boy alone in the house for a little time. While the father was away a kerosene lamp, left on a stand, exploded. The little fellow, with remarkable presence of mind, seized the blazing lamp and threw it out of the window. When the lamp struck the sidewalk it attracted the attention of some men who ran upstairs and extinquished the fire, which had burned the stand cloth and several newspapers lying upon it. Some of the burning fluid spattered over the boy, burning him quite severely.

FOREIGN NEWS.

[illegible], said upon Abdurahman the Shah of Persia says that he will look on only.

Prof. Billroth of Vienna, probably the greatest living surgeon, pronounces Pasteur's hydrophobia treatment a fiasco.

Robert Watson Boyd, the ex-champion sculler, died at his residence, at Middlesborough, England, early the other morning. He leaves a widow and two children.

In the recent interesting correspondence between Mr. Bright and Gladstone, the latter addressed his former colleague as "Bright," while Bright wrote "My dear Mr. Gladstone."

It is said that the visit of Queen Kapiolani to London during the jubilee, where she took precedence over most of the other royalties, caused much ill-feeling. She was not a welcome guest.

At last the celebrated Dr. Virchow, of Berlin, has given the Crown Prince's malady a name. It is pachy durnta varicosa. As everybody knows what this means, it is needless to explain it.

The umbrella has figured more than once in war. It was recently used to protect the Sheriff at Bodyke from some bolling meal. Lord Kerr led his troops all through the Indian mutiny with an umbrella. Osman Pasha carried a large white umbrella into action at Plevna.

An important addition has been made to the active list of the Royal Navy to-day by the completion for sea at Sheerness of the new fast cruiser Mohawk, which has been built at a cost of £108,000. The Mohawk is the first of the new type, and is armed with 16-inch breech-loading guns and seven fourteen-inch tubes, discharging Whitehead torpedoes.

The forthcoming marriage of the young Emperor Kwangsu is officially announced. The subject was first mentioned informally at the beginning of last year, and we are now told that the youthful ruler and—what is more important—the Empress (until lately Regent) have at last made a selection of the lady whom they deem worthy to be the wife of the sovereign of the Middle Empire. The ceremony is to be marked by unique festivites, the cost of which is computed at £1,000,000. The last occasion of a Chinese Emperor's marriage was in October, 1872, when Tungche married the lady Alhuta."

It is a mistake for Prince Bismarck's organs to hope to destroy Russian credit by an evidently concerted effort to cry it down. There is nothing more timid than capital, and Russian securities are bad enough to make one wonder that the empire can borrow at all, but direct efforts to appreciate or to depreciate stocks are the worst possible methods to accomplish those ends. If the Berlin papers had been able to convince the public that there was going to be war in Afghanistan or a rebellion in Turkestan, or wholesale corrupt alienation of government assets in Siberia or somewhere, they would have gone further towards accomplishing their end.

The Unratified Egyptian Treaty.

The Egyptian treaty continues to agitate the European press. As the time for ratifying the convention draws near the various organs of the governments interested express clearer and more definite opinions concerning it. recent despatches brought France's side of the controversy, in the words of the very conservative and generally well informed Journal des Debats. France, said that journal, is still ready to negotiate a treaty which would have for basis the shortening of England's occupation of Egypt, but it could not agree that England, by any pretext, should have right to perpetual occupation of the country. And yet that is what the treaty which England wants the Sultan the signscribes. pre-

It is not likely that France will recede from the position she has taken. The French press is unanimous in declaring that she will never consent to an English capture of Egypt. M. de Lesseps says in an interview sent by the Commercial Cable and published in another column that "if England does not evacuate Egypt she will sooner or later have to fight France. . . . If this treaty is signed the Sultan will lose his throne, as I have letters here from Arabia announcing preparations for a religious revolution."

And now comes the announcement from the Brussels Nord, a Russian organ, that Russia "will not fail France" in this matter, and denying that the Czar could be bought out by English concessions in Bulgaria, adding that Germany, Austria and Italy will not espouse England's interests to the extent of affording her material aid.

Hares in Battle.

A singular incident of the battle of Wagram, between the French and the Austrians, is related by Captain Blaze, of the French Imperial Guard. He says that besides being a great contest of arms, the day was a great hare-hunt. There were four hundred thousand hunters, half Austrians and half French.

The plain was simply covered with hares, which the long advance of the two armies, had gathered into that narrow space. Every ten steps we started up one of these animals. Frightened by our guns, they ran for their lives, and continued to run until they reached the Austrian lines. There they were none the less terrified, and came rushing back upon us.

The soldiers were greatly amused by the frantic movements of the hares, and could hardly be restrained from making after them.

Finally, there was a great Austrian cavalry charge, which of course, took no account of the hares. The horses plunged in among the ranks of the French soldiers, who, confused by so strange an attack, began bayonetting the hares. Other soldiers, not immediately pressed by the onset of the enemy, caught up the trembling animals in their hands.

There was that day a great slaughter of men and of hares, and many a shot destined for the enemy struck one of these poor animals, who doubtless believed that both the great armies had come there expressly to hunt them, the hares, instead of to hunt each other.

"One of our prominent barker mans lately got troubled mit a dightness of der chest," says Carl Pretzel. "He vas shtingy like der duce. Efery nite times he put his trunk of sekuridies under his pillow, and he don't shleep a mouthful, but yoost laya awake to hear 'em draw interest oud."

Jas. S. Freeborn,

—M. D. Ch. M.; L. K. & Q. C. P. I.—

Doctor of Medicine and master of Surgery Victoria. Univ. Licentiate of King's and Queen's College of Physicians in Ireland. Member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Ont. Formerly acting Surgeon of B. Battery, R. C. A. Quebec. Late resident of the Rotunda Hospitals, (Lying-in & Gynecological) Dublin.

—OFFICE—

STEPHEN'S DRUG STORE.

Drs. Sproule & Brodie,

—PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS,—

MARKDALE.

DR. SPROULE'S office Turner's Drug Store

DR. BRODIE'S office Mathew's block.

P. McCullough,

BARRISTER, SOLICITOR, &c

OFFICE—OVER McFARLAND'S STORE,

MARKDALE,

Money to Loan.

MASSON & MASSON,

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, &c.

OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block, Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week.

J. MASSON, Q. C. S. MASSON. W. MASSON.

N. B.—Private and Company's funds to invest at from 6 to 8 per cent

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

WILLIAM STUART,

KIMBERLEY,

Issuer of Marriage Licences. Money to Loan on Real Estate at low rates.

A few Farms for sale. Terms easy.

NOTICE.

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.

will visit Markdale for the practice of his profession on Thursday and Friday following the first Monday in each month, and at Flesherton the following day, Saturday.

MARKDALE HOUSE,

MARKDALE, - - ONT.

J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

ISAAC STINSON.

Builder and Contractor

In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.

Estimates given. All work guaranteed.

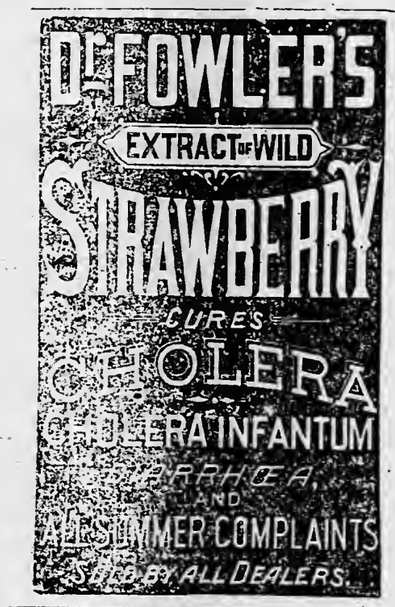
Orders by mail promptly attended to.

329 Residence, MARKDALE.

W. C. RICHARDS,

BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT. Markdale.

124ly



R. J. SPROULE,

FLESHERTON.

Conveyancer, Appraiser, Valuator and Money Lender. Deeds, Mortgages, Leases and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice; Charges very low. Apply to

R. J. SPROULE,

Money Lender & Postmaster, Flesherton.

HAVE YOU

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Jaundice, Headache, Dizziness, Pain in the Back, Costiveness, or any disease arising from a deranged liver, DR. CHASE'S LIVER CURE will be found a sure and certain remedy.

NATURE'S REMEDY

The unqualified success of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure in Liver Complaint rests solely with the fact that it is compounded from nature's well-known liver regulators, MANDRAKE AND DANDELION, combined with many other invaluable roots, barks and herbs, having a powerful effect on the Kidneys, Stomach, Bowels and Blood. 500,000 SOLD

Over one-half million of Dr. Chase's Recipe Books were sold in Canada alone. We want every man, woman and child who is troubled with Liver Complaint to try the excellent remedy.

SOMETHING NEW. GIVEN AWAY FREE

Wrapped around every bottle of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure is a valuable Household Medical Guide and Recipe Book (84 pages), containing over 500 useful recipes pronounced by medical men and druggists as invaluable, and worth ten times the price of the medicine.

TRY CHASE'S CATARRH CURE. A safe and positive remedy. Price, 25 cents.

TRY CHASE'S KIDNEY AND LIVER PILLS. 25 cts. per box.

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS

EDMANSON & CO., Sole Agents, Bradford

Markdale Roller Mill.

FARMERS HAVING No. 1 WHEAT and preferring flour from their own wheat, can get it by bringing twenty bushels or more.

Flour always on Hand

Flour $3.00 to $4.30 per. bbl.

SHORTS, per ton - $12.00
BRAN, " - 10.00

The highest market price paid for Fall and Spring wheat.

J. W. FORD.

Public Notice.

To all whom it may concern.

I R. L. Stephen the Druggist of Markdale have been appointed agent for JOHNSON'S celebrated Tonic and nervine. JOHNSON'S little liver Pills, and JOHNSON'S all healing White Ointment. The nervine is the very best in the market, in all diseases caused by poverty of blood, for Nervousness, Hysteria, and the PALENESS of Complexion so often noticed in female's, loss of appetite and general debility. In conjunction wth the Liver Pills, it is he very best for all diseases arrising from Topid liver or bad stomach

The White Ointment is the very best in the market for Salt Rheume, Barbers Itch, Pimples, Chafs, Burns, Scalds, and all Skin diseases of a scrofulous nature. Try these fine remedies and you will not be disappointed.

For sale at R. L. STEPHEN'S the druggist Markdale, Ont.

WM. G. GUTHRIE,

Plain & Ornamental Plasterer

MARKDALE.

Arches, Cornices, Centre Flowers, and all kinds of plain and ornamental plastering executed at cheapest rates. Calsomining Lime Washing and Repairs promptly attended to.

365

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of

School Furniture.

Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness, wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.

181 ANDREW McGILL.

MONEY TO LOAN.

ON real estate security, at low rate of interest, no commission charged. Business Strictly Confidential,

J. S. BLACK,

190 Pomona, P. O.

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT No. 24, con. 4, N. D. R. Glenelg, 100 acres, will be sold cheap and on easy terms of payment, for further particulars apply on the premises, or by letter to

J. S. BLACK,

190-tf. Pomona P. O.

Markdale Woolen Mill.

Custom Carding, Weaving, Fulling. Dyeing and cloth dressing, done in a workmanlike manner and on very short notice.

First Class Cotton Warp

supplied at the lowest possible rates.

A call solicited.

Terms strictly cash or wool.

Sept. 28, 1886 F. J. RITCHIE.

IT IS A WELL KNOWN FACT

—THAT—

McCOLL'S

"LARDINE,"

is the best known, and most reliable MACHINE OIL in the Dominion; Farmer's, Thresher's and Mill Owner's, will find it decidedly to their advantage to insist upon getting the "Genuine Lardine" when they ask for it, owing to so much inferior oil being sold under the same name by unscrupulous dealers. We are the sold manufacturers of the "Genuine Lardine" every barrel branded.

McCOLL BRO'S, & CO.

For sale in Markdale at Haskett Bro's Hardware Store. 347-73

British Worm Syrup!

British Worm Syrup!!

THE BEST FOR CHILDREN

—AT—

H. PARKER'S,

DURHAM.

Collingwood and Georgian Bay Line.

Royal Mail,

In connection with the Northern and North-Western R'ys, and the Grand Trunk R'y.

Str. PACIFIC, Captain P. M. Campbell.
Str. ATLANTIC, Captain R. D. Foote.
Str. NORTHERN BELLE, Capt. W. J. Bassett.

The fine new Steamers "PACIFIC" & "ATLANTIC" will run as follows during the season (weather permitting.)

Leaving Collingwood at 1 p. m.; Meaford at 3 p. m.; Owen Sound at 8 p. m.; and Wiarton at 11:45 p. m.; every

Wednesday and Saturday.

For Killarney, Manitowaning, Little Current, Kagawong, Gore Bay, Spanish River, Serpent River, Algoma Mills, Blind River, Thessalon, Bruce Mines, Hilton, St. Joseph's Island, Garden River, and Sault St. Marie.

The Saturday Steamer only will call at Cockburn Island.

MACKINAW.—During the summer season the above steamers will continue the trip on to the Island of Mackinaw making six full days of a round trip at a cost of $12.00 only including meals and berth.

For information as to freight and fares. Apply to any Agent of the above Railways, the Pursers on board the steamers, or to the Great Northern Transit Co., Collingwood.

THOS. LONG, Secretary. CHAS. CAMERON, Manager

New Tailor.

Will Stoddart, late of England and Jersy City, U. S. begs to inform the citizens of MARKDALE and surrounding community, that he has opened a TAILORING SHOP over Mr. W. J. McFarland's Store, where he is prepared to do all work entrusted to him in the Latest and Nobbiest Styles; as I will inspect all work before leaving the Shop, customers may rely on having work turned out first-class in every particular; trusting that I may receive a fair share of the public patronage

I remain,
Faithfully your's,
WILL STODDART.

Markdale, March 14th, 1887.

BE SURE & GET YOUR

PUMPS,

—FROM—

J. T. QUINN,

MARKDALE,

He makes as good a pump as there is in the market, and at the lowest possible prices, besides it is so convenient for getting repairs besides when buying from a distance.

Have some style about you and support home enterprise by buying from Quinn.

WE WANT!

100 GOOD MEN at once, to sell for the Fonthill Nurseries (largest in Canada over 465 acres) steady employment and no lost time, liberal commission or salary, best advantages; splended outfit furnished free any pushing man can succeed. Apply for terms to,

STONE & WELLINGTON,

Toronto, Ont

PROF. LOW'S SULPHUR SOAP is a delightful toilet luxury as well as a good curative for skin disease,

FARM FOR SALE.

Being lot 5, south east quarter of 6 and and west half 6, con. 11, Euphrasia, will be sold cheap and on easy terms, also Saw Mill on lot 5, in good running order. For further particulars apply to

JAMES STINSON,

358-61* Markdale

WEAVING.

Having returned to Markdale, in order to be more convenient for my customers, I beg to announce that I am now prepared to do all kinds of Custom Weaving. Residence old stand, opposite Presbyterian Church.

318 ARCH. BOYD.

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT 13t con 3 west of T. & S. Rd. Artemesia, 50 acres, about 20 acres clear of stumps and stones, balance good hardwood bush. Five miles from Markdale and four from Flesherton. For further particulars apply to A. S. Thompson, Flesherton P. O. or J. J. Thompson, Orilla.

342-ft

The Markdale Standard

Is issued every Thursday, by

C. W. RUTLEDGE, Markdale, Ont.

TERMS—$1 per year in advance; $1.50 if not paid within six months.

Professional and business cards one inch space and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3 MO.
Whole column	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
Half column	27 00	15 00	10 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00	6 00
Two inch space	7 00	4 00
Three inch space	10 00	5 00

Casual advertisements 8 cents per line first insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.

Editorial notices, or notices in local column 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents each subsequent insertion.

Stray animals &c, advertised 3 weeks for $1

No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid except at the option of the publisher.

JOB PRINTING.

THE STANDARD office has a splendid equipment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. All orders filled with dispatch.

Markdale Church Directory.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

Services every Sabbath at 10:30 a. m. Sabbath School at 2:30 p. m. Prayer Meeting every Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. Rev. A. Wilson, Pastor; A. McFarland, S. S. Superintendent.

CHRIST CHURCH.

Services every Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p m. Rev. Jas. Ward, Incumbent. Sabbath School 2:30. W. J. Ford, Superintendent.

METHODIST CHURCH.

Services every Sunday at 10:30 a. m and 7 p. m. Sunday School at 2:30. Prayer Meeting every Thursday evening from 8 to 9, Rev. Geo. Buggin Pastor; G. S. Bowes. S. S. Superintendent. Ladies' Aid in connection; Mrs. T Hill, Secretary.

Strangers and visitors always welcome

Parties desiring sittings will apply to C. W. Rutledge, Pew Steward.

Society Directory.

Markdale C. O. O. F. No. 78. meets every alternate Monday evening at 8 o'clock in their Hall, Rae's block. Visiting brethren welcome.

Markdale A. O. U. W. No. 141 meets in their Hall, Rae's block, every alternate Monday evening at o'clock. A visit from brethren of neighboring lodges solicited.

MARKDALE L. O. L. No. 1045 meets in their Hall on Friday on or before full moon each month. Thos. Elliott, Master; W. J. Blakely, Secretary.

Victoria R. B. Preceptory, No. 282, Meets in Lodge Room of Markdale L. O. L. No. 1045, first Friday in each month. Visiting Sir Knights always welcome. Jas. Brodie W. P.; Thos. Elliott, Registrar.

Post-Office Directory.

MARKDALE.

The P. O. will be opened from 8 o'clock a. m. to 7 p. m. every working day.

Mails closed as follows, viz:

C. P. R., going North, 11:40 a m, and 7 p m
" " South, 3:30 p m, and 7 p m

TRAVERSTON.

Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday 12:30 noon.

HARKAWAY.

Friday, 12:30 noon.

For registered letters and money orders, fifteen minutes earlier than above. The P. O. will be open on Holidays from 9 to 9:30 a. m., and half an hour after mails arrive.

W. J. McFARLAND, P. M.

Directory.

MARKDALE VILLAGE OFFICIALS.

Police Trustees—E. Davis, A. Turner, and S. J. Coleman.

Public School Trustees—B. Coleman, J. Lyons, W. A. Brown. B. Coleman, Sec.

COUNTY OFFICIALS.

Judge, H. McPherson, Owen Sound.
Deputy-Judge, S. J. Lane, Owen Sound.
Sheriff, C. H. Moore, Owen Sound.
Clerk of Peace, W. Armstrong, O. Sound.
Clerk, John Gale, Owen Sound.
Treasurer, S. J. Parker, Owen Sound.
County Warden, N, Reid, Owen Sound
Registrar, N., R. McKnight, "
" S., Thos. Lauder, Durham.
Revising Barrister, North, Judge McPherson, Owen Sound.
Revising Barrister, South & East, Judge Lane, Owen Sound.
M. P., North, Jas. Masson, Owen Sound.
M. P., East, T. S. Sproule, M. D., Markdale
M. P., South, Geo Landerkin, M. D., Hanover.
M. P. P., North, D. Creighton, Owen Sound
M. P. P., East, Capt. Rorke, Clarksburg
M. P. P., South, John Blyth, Orchard.

DIVISION COURT CLERKS

No. 1. John Stephens, Owen Sound.
" 2. David Jackson, Durham.
" 3. Thos. Plunkett, Meaford.
" 4. Thos. J. Rorke, Heathcote.
" 5. J. W. Armstrong, Flesherton.
" 6. John McDonald, Chatsworth.

Monthly Fairs.

Orangeville—The second Thursday in each month.
Dundalk—Tuesday before Orangeville.
Flesherton—Monday before Orangeville.
Markdale—Saturday before Orangeville.
Durham—Third Tuesday in each month.
Chatsworth—Monday before Durham.
Holland Centre—Saturday before Chatsworth
Priceville—Monday before Durham.
Hanover—Monday before Durham

DISTRICT DOINGS.

A SYNOPSIS OF COUNTY AND [illegible] FROM OUR EXCHANGES PRESENTED FOR STANDARD READERS.

Thirteen cows celebrated the [illegible] ford by going to pound.

DANGEROUS FITS are often caused by worms. Freeman's Worm Powders destroy worms.

A schooner from Kincardine [illegible] barrels of salt at Thornbury [illegible] for the Grangers.

BE ON YOUR GUARD.

Don't allow a cold in the head to [illegible] and surely run into Catarrh, when it can be cured for 25c. by using Dr. Clase's Cure. A few applications cure [illegible] catarrh; 1 to 2 boxes cures ordinary [illegible] 1 to 5 boxes is guaranteed to cure [illegible] catarrh. Try it. Only 25c. and [illegible] Sold by all druggists.

The News says there was [illegible] four and five thousand [illegible] Thornbury on the 12th.

Don't use any more nauseous [illegible] gatives such as Pills Salts &c., which [illegible] can get in Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, [illegible] a medicine that moves the Bowels [illegible] ly, cleansing all impurities from the [illegible] system and rendering the Blood pure [illegible] and cool. Sold by all Druggists.

Sattaby's steam planing mills at [illegible] hurst, valued at over $5,000, was burned [illegible] Monday.

FOR NETTLE RASH, Summer Rash, Eruptions and general toilet purposes use Low's Sulphur Soap.

Woman may be a puzzle, but man is willing to give her up.

AROUSE THE LIVER when torpid with Nationol Pills, a good anti-bilious cathartic, sugar-coated.

Shelburne pound keepers are reaping an abundant harvest owing to the by-law prohibiting cattle running at large being enforced.

MARVELOUS.—One dose of Dr. [illegible] Liver cure will cure Sick Headache, Biliousness, and Sour Stomach. 1 to 2 bottles are warranted to cure Liver Complaint, Indigestion and Biliousness.

A bridge near Port Elgin of 140 feet [illegible] and 40 feet above the stream fell [illegible] while a man was driving over with a [illegible] load of stones. The water was eight [illegible] deep, and strange to say neither the man nor his horses were injured or the wagon [illegible]

A PERSON—Unable to sleep in bed, [illegible] to work, unable to take ordinary exercise from the effects of Asthma until [illegible] Southern Asthma Cure. A sample [illegible] age relieved, three packages' permanently cured.

Fish stories are now in order. This is given as a fact and is alleged to be new. If the first, it should be framed; if the latter author should be decorated:—A Muskoka camper alleged that he set out a night line baited with a minnow. This was swallowed by a shiner, which was taken in later by a perch which at a subsequent stage was captured by a black bass. A maskalunge [illegible] up before the camper and swallowed the combination, and the whole outfit was landed ashore in time for breakfast. Muskoka is a wonderful country.

UNEQUALLED.—P. B. MacNamara, [illegible] goods merchant, Brockville, Ont., says: "For an instant relief for cold in the head, catarrh, Nasal Balm is unequalled. The effect is noticed as soon as it is used.

GREAT GAIN.—"I used a great deal of [illegible] tor's medicine for kidney complaint during five years, was getting worse all the time until I tried B. B. B. I took three bottles gained in weight from 130 to 150 lbs. I highly recommend Burdock Blood Bitters to be a good medicine." Thus testifies [illegible] Walton, of Springfield, N. B.

A GOOD ACT.—"As a cure for all summer complaints I highly recommend Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, having always used it with the best results. I have also been thanked for recommending it." William Haw, Ancaster, Ont.

AFTER LONG YEARS.—"I was troubled with liver complaint for a number of years, finding no cure. I tried B. B. B. I took four bottles, and am perfectly cured, strong and hearty." Mrs. Maria Askett, Alma, Ont.

The Thornbury News gave last week several columns on the advantages of that town as a manufacturing centre, the beauties of the scenery and a biographical sketch of the members of the town council.

ARE YOU GOING TO TRAVEL?—Don't forget a supply of that Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. It is a superior remedy for [illegible] sickness, and a positive cure for all bowel complaints induced by bad water, change of diet, or of climate. Whether at home or abroad, it should be kept at hand in case of emergency.

IN GOOD REPUTE.—James McMurrich, writing from Kinsale, says: "B. B. B. as a remedy for diseases of the blood, liver and kidneys, has an excellent reputation in this locality. I have used it, and speak from experience, as well as observation. It is the only medicine I want, and I advise others afflicted to try it."

A SOURCE OF DANGER.—The frequent source of danger attending bowel complaints during the summer and fall is the liability to check the diarrhœa too suddenly. Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry will not do this. Inflammation of the bowels does often follow its use, as is too often the case with powerful opiates and astringents. It cures promptly and in a natural manner.

Markdale Standard

"HEW TO THE LINE, LET THE CHIPS FALL WHERE THEY MAY."

SEVENTH YEAR.—No. 359. MARKDALE, ONT., JULY 28, 1887. C. W. RUTLEDGE, Proprietor.

—: AT :—

RUSSELL'S

—NOTED JEWELERY STORE,—

FLESHERTON,

ll be found the most complete stock Watches, Clocks, Jewelery, Silver-re, Spex, &c., in this part of the ntry.

Call and see those watches they are ling at $12.00 bearing warrants three and a half years, while other lers are asking $15.00 for the me article. P. S. Bartlett, 3 oz. n silver case for $16.00 while they e selling elsewhere for $17.50. her dealers cannot compete with and they know it. We cannot p them being annoyed at our ible low prices; we must give public the benefit of our close ying.

Just Note a few prices.

fine Nickle Alarm Clock for actually y $2.00 bearing a warrant for two rs. Your choice of over 20 fine ted chains for only $1.60; Just nk of it. Fine walnut clocks from .35 upward. Brooches, Ear-Rings, dies' Chains, Cuff-Buttons, Scarf-ns, at equally low prices.

Remember if you want your Watch Clock repaired properly by a work-n, Russell's is the only place.

ll orders by mail promptly at-tended to at

USSELL'S Noted Jewelry Store,

FLESHERTON.

Local and Other Items.

Notices in these columns intended to benefit individual or Society will be charged ten cts a line for the first insertion and five cts a line each subsequent insertion.

NOTICE.—Correspondence, communications, Advertisements, &c., must be in this office by noon on Tuesday to insure publication that week.

SATURDAY, 6th August, is Markdale cattle day.

Pea harvesting commenced this week in the neighborhood.

SARJEANT BROS. have got a bran new and very butcher cart for the mule.

WM. FAWCETT, Esq., deputy-reeve of Artemesia, cut oats last week.

QUARTERLY meeting in the Methodist church the first Sunday in August.

SOUTH GREY Fall Show will be held in Durham on the 27th and 28th September.

R. H. BENSON has put up a pair of fine mirrors on the plate-glass front of his grocery store.

THE Ladies' Aid of the Methodist church purpose holding their annual garden party at the parsonage the second week in August.

MR. J. CORNFIELD, of Artemesia, was recently severely gored by a young heifer. His injuries are altogether internal.

REMEMBER the garden party to-morrow (Thursday) evening at Plewes', mill, down by the beautiful river.

OVER $20,000 worth of the product of the farm has been marketed at Markdale station this season.

BOUNTIFUL weather continues, and harvesting operations are from ten days to two weeks earlier than usual.

HOLLAND COUNCIL will meet for the despatch of business on the 11th August, and adjourn on the 22nd.

J. P. MARSHALL, dentist, will be in Markdale next Thursday and Friday, 4th and 5th August, for the practice of his profession.

DOG LOST.—On Thursday, 21st, a large black and white hound with brown nose; answers to Sport. All parties will be rewarded for bringing her to R. B. Currie, Markdale.

MCFARLAND'S staff are busy stock-taking. Step in there if you want bargains. Dress goods, gloves, millinery and a lot of remnants to be sold under cost.

MARKDALE council are taking steps to procure a suitable pleasure and picnic grounds for that town. This is a judicious move, and one which Markdale should take.

HORSES, cow and heifer for sale. See Adv or enquire of Wm. Brown, Markdale.

STRAY yearling. See Adv. or enquire of Alex. McLellan, Berkeley,

FOUND.—A gold ring the night of the garden party at Mr. Rae's. The owner can have it by proving to same and paying 25 cents for this adv.

MR. WM. HOGG, merchant of Flesherton Station, has made an assignment of his estate to Mr. E. R. C. Clarkson, for the benefit of his creditors.

SOME individuals—who are not even subscribers—imagine they can dictate to us what we shall publish and what we must omit. Of course we cheerfully obey (?)

THE Markdale Presbyterian Sabbath School will hold their annual picnic at Bell's Lake on Wednesday, the 3rd of August. Conveyances will leave the church at 10 o'clock sharp.

THE Bliss sale came off last week at Traverston and was largely attended. Mr. Hall, the proprietor of the mills, realized about 85 cents on the $ on over-due rents, while other numerous creditors had to remain out in the cold.

IT will cost you less to advertise your lost cattle than to hunt them up. The STANDARD goes into more farmers' houses than you could visit in two weeks' constant tramp, and who would think of spending even one week hard toil for $1.

ON Monday last Mr. Joe Halbert of Euphrasia brought three store pigs to Markdale in a wagon where they were to be delivered to Mr. Pickell, drover, but two of them died on arrival caused by the heat and being too much hampered. $17.50 was the price of the two.

THE Wiarton Echo came to hand last week enlarged and otherwise improved, thus it commences its ninth year with undoubted evidences of prosperity. The Echo always has a healthy and reliable ring, and we are pleased to note its progress.

SOME ill-disposed persons entered the house of Mr. Jas. Arnold—our R. R. section boss—on Sunday, July the 17th, while the family were at church, and stole the sum of fifty-five dollars, which they abstracted from a trunk belonging to Frank Maidment. There is strong suspicion of the guilty parties.

A communication signed Lizzie, portraying the ignorance and self-conceit of a young man in town, is too personal for publication and besides, she does not give her real name. We positively decline publishing communications—and especially annonymous ones—without the full name of the writer, not for publication, but as an evidence of good faith.

OUR exchanges are unanimous in their expressed opinon, that this has been the most delightful season in the memory of the past. It is a significant fact that no less than five of our local exchange editors have recently been married, and it speaks volumes for the domestic harmony of all concerned to hear such healthful sentiments. We hope their joys may be great, and their sorrows little ones.

THE Methodist S. S. picnic came off in Armstrong's grove on Friday afternoon last. There was a fine turnout, over 300 having partaken of the good things provided by the ladies besides many who arrived after tea time. The Brass Band were out in full force and did excellent service. The swings were well patronized, and altogether a most enjoyable evening was spent by old and young.

PULLED BREAD.—The New York Times correspondent gives this:—Pulled bread—there is an edible that ought to be on every American table. It is designed to be eaten with cheese, and it is delicious. Take a loaf of newly made bread, and while it is still warm pull the inside out of it in pieces the size of your hand or smaller. Put these into the oven and bake them a delicate brown. When cool they are crisp, and as full of flavor as a nut. Eat pulled bread once with your cheese and you will want it often.

BUSINESS LOCALS.

HARVEST Mits from the best manufacturers at Mabee's.

FRESH FISH.—Sarjeant Bros., butchers, receive a supply of fresh fish twice a week.

Paris Green pure at the Medical Hall, A. Turner & Co.

WE buy our goods at feather edge prices; we give the customers the benefit; they make a note of it and call on us often: Consequence, a mutual benefit. Mabee, the Hardware.

GENUINE bell glass to be had only from Mabee's Hardware, next door to Turner's Drug Store.

I expect to be up the lakes two weeks—work left at the shop will be promptly attended to on my return. W. A. Brown.

FOR Barley Forks, Grain Cradles, Grain Scythes, see Mabee.

PHOTOS and all kinds of pictures taken by Jackson, the Markdale photographer, in the finest style of the art. Try him and be convinced.

J. G. ANDERSON wants 500 pairs good heavy home-made Wool Mitts in exchange for Dry Goods: they must be A 1.

CIGARS! CIGARS! lovers of a good Havana cigar will find that Benson has the finest cigar in town, sold by the box.

I shall clear every line of fishing tackle out at cost, Poles, Baskets, &c. W. A. Brown.

PURE PARIS GREEN at Stephen's Drug Store.

THE Presbyterian Ladies' Aid will give a garden party on Mr. Plewes' property down by the mill, on the evening of July 29th. Boating, Croquett, and other amusements will be provided. All are invited. Admission 15 cents.

Personals.

Miss Polly Damon is visiting friends in town.

Miss Stephen, of Stayner, is spending a week with her brother, R. L.

Mrs. T. Hanbury, of Dundalk, is visiting friends in this vicinity.

Miss Davis, of Owen Sound, and Miss Tackaberry, of Chicago, are the guests of Mr. Edward Davis.

DR. BRODIE returned last Friday.

MRS. E. S. RUTLEDGE took her departure for Fort William last Friday accompained by Maggie Rutledge.

W. A. BROWN left this week on a business trip up the Lakes and will be absent two weeks.

Messrs. Andrew Hill, of Orangeville, and Archie Hill, of Stayner, are visiting friends here.

Miss Cora McDougall is visiting her aunt in Toronto.

Mrs. F. Averell, of Newton Robinson, is visiting her parents in Glenelg.

Mrs. Thos. Townsend, of Glenelg, returned on Saturday after visiting her daughter in Owen Sound.

Mrs. Geo. Grant, of Paisley, is visiting in Markdale.

Mrs. W. Munshaw has spent a month recently with friends at London.

Mr. Alex. Lucas, business manager of the Calgary Herald, N. W. T., gave his brother, our banker, a flying visit last week.

Mrs. McPherson, from Forest, has been visiting her brother, Wm. Lucas, Esq.; also Mrs. Lucas, of Alviston, Mr. Lucas' mother.

Mrs. Chellew, of Collingwood, and Miss Jennie Lyons, of Tara, are visiting their parents here.

Miss Minnie Lucas, is visiting in Toronto.

Miss Minnie McIntyre, of Ayer, is rusticating in Markdale.

Mrs. Thos. Mathews is spending a few weeks in Perth and vicinity.

Messrs. Jas. Johnston and Will. White of Meaford, paid Markdale a visit this week.

Harry Lugston, of Toronto, spent a few days this week with Moffat Bros.

Wesley Whitby and family returned to Providence Bay this week.

Master Sam. Boyd, of the Standard Office, is rusticating at Parry Sound.

Mr. Thos. Hanbury, of Dundalk, gave us a friendly call this week.

Mrs. John McKenna has been rusticating at Walter's Falls for a week.

Master Charlie Biggar is visiting friends at Oakville.

Miss Jimby is visiting her sister, Mrs. T. Boland.

Mr. D. Knechtel, the great furniture manufacturer of Hanover, was in town this week looking after a shipment of lumber from this place.

Miss Young, of Watford, has been spending a couple of months in Markdale.

Mr. Hanna, of Stayner, teacher, is spending part of his holidays in Markdale.

W. M. Speer, of Tara, paid Markdale a flying visit on Wednesday.

Odds and Ends.

G. S. Bowes has a fine field of fall wheat.

John Lyons has a field of excellent oats.

Andrew S. Irving has a new self-binder.

S. Wardell is drilling rocks and fixing up wells and pumps generally in this district.

The implement agents are doing a thriving business.

Sarjeant Bros. have erected a large stable.

John Whitby has been fixing up his new village property and grounds in good shape.

Geo. M. Haskett has had the surroundings of his new and handsome residence laid out and neatly arranged.

A new sidewalk has been laid from the Markdale House to Rooke's bakery.

Two gents were seen going north on the C. P. R. last Friday who appeared to have business in view; it was hinted that they went to buy the Owen Sound Times or Chatsworth News out.

To the Editor of the STANDARD.

SIR,—Apparently of late the question of Incorporation has been entirely ignored. What are our town fathers about? The Police Trustees are the only persons legitimately entitled to that appelation, but their apathy in reference to the well-being of the village plainly show that they are only stepfathers of very shady reputation. Many of our electors thought last January that the right men had been chosen, but alas time has dispelled the illusion. The most casual observer, in passing thro' our village, noticing how the streets, sidewalks, &c., are being repaired, must be convinced of this fact, viz: that some change is absolutely necessary whereby fixity of plan and permanency of purpose may be secured, so that this everlasting doing and undoing may be avoided. Lacking this fixity and permance the work of one year is often entirely lost if not absolutely a detriment to that of the following.

As an example illustrative of the kind of common sense and engineering skill possessed by our Police Trustees or Pathmasters—look at that new crossing on Mark st., head of Elizabeth. Most people think a crossing should be somewhat higher than the surface of the street, not so our town fathers; that crossing is fully six inches below the surface, which is, I suppose, according to the modern style of our said fathers. In muddy weather this will prove a great convenience, for foot passengers can either cross on stilts or in a boat, which will be quite romantic—"variety," you know, "is the spice of life." Seriously, Mr. Editor, is there no remedy for this sort of bungling? Yes, incorporate! and then we can have a "commissioner of streets and walks" who can be clothed with authority commensurate with the requirements of this office.

Such officer need not necessarily be an expensive adjunct to our corporate existence; the trifling remuneration for such an officer would be more than saved yearly by the economy of labor and expenditure which he could effect.

Of which more anon.

OBSERVER.

The man who sings "I would not live always, I ask not to stay," loudest in a prayermeeting, sends for the doctor when there's anything the matter with him just as quick as the man who keeps a policy shop.—Boston Courier.

Why are towns and cities called she? Several reasons may be given, her interests are husbanded; She is always encircled by skirts, and then there's always more or less bustle.

J. F. Kennedy, proprietor of the Orangeville Advertiser, who was recently burned out, has bought a new plant, and his paper will soon appear again.

W. A. BROWN

"THE PEOPLE'S JEWELLER"

—DEALER IN—

Fine Gold, Filled Gold, and Coin Silver Cases; with Hampden, Columbus, Waltham and Elgin Movements, in Ladies' and Gents' sizes. Solid 18 k Wedding Rings. Roll Gold Chains, and Jewellery in large variety Beautiful lines in Silverware for presentation purposes. I keep in Jewellers lines the finest and most complete stock between Shelburne and Owen Sound; do business for myself in my own name, and can be held to every warrant I sign. I don't quote prices on Watches "Not in Stock," and then tell a customer wanting Bartlett at $16, "I just sold the last one," I have P. S. Bartlett's, in stock at $17.50 less cash dis., warranted 3 years. I expect to establish more fully every year of business life an unquestioned reputation for Reliability. Straight Dealing. Fine Work and Close Prices.

Watch and Clock Warrants 2 and 3 years covering breakages.

☞ A call to Price or Purchase respectfully solicited.

GOODS BEST QUALITY

Watch Repairing Practically Excellent; Accurate in Finish; Uniform in Price.

W. A. BROWN, - Box 5,

MARKDALE.

FARMERS!

Don't forget there is good work done at the Flesherton

WOOLEN FACTORY

to their and notwith- the manu- SPINN-

Customers are finding out it is to the Goods are Reliable and Our Prices are Low and Our I intend to reduce the ROLL-CARDING, ING, WEAVING, &c., &c. Give us a trial and see for yourself.

And are doing all in our power to please. advantage to deal with us, our standing price bring out so close on account of hard times, facturing prices in nearly every branch, viz.,

W. H. FLEHER.

Flesherton, May 30th, 1887.

THE "THOUSAND ISLANDS."

A Graphic Description of the Natural Formation and Scenery of the Famous Resort.

"The humming-bird has now laid its eggs in the nest by the veranda," our friend wrote us from Gananoque; "come soon if you want to see them. And Miss Sinclair has tamed a chipmunk, which eats almost from her hand, by the big tree. I'm sure your boy would like to have a peep at him. Also, the Indian-pipe plant is beginning to flower in the wood behind the house. It doesn't last long; you must make haste, or you will be too late for it."

We knew the hospitable chalet at Gananoque of old; and even if our friend's society had not been enough of itself to entice us (which it amply was), the added delights of a humming-bird's nest, a tame chipmunk, and the Indian-pipe plant in full flower might surely have sufficed to move the heart of the stoniest of parents. I don't go in, myself, for being what you may call stony; on the contrary, where the junior branches are concerned, I acknowledge myself but as clay in the hands of the potter; so the very next day saw us safely packed on board the "Princess Louise" river-steamer, three precious souls, and all agog to dash through thick and thin on the heaving bosom of the broad St, Lawrence.

And the broad St. Lawrence did heave that July evening, no mistake about it. A fresh west wind was blowing over the lake, and the spray was dashing up with sea-like violence as we steamed away from the wooden wharves of Kingston, heading downstream for

THE THOUSAND ISLANDS.

Lake Ontario, when it chooses, can get up a very decent storm indeed: quite as fine a storm as any to be seen upon the German Ocean, with huge four-masters from Chicago stranding helplessly on the reels and spits; and even the river can run seas high in its broader reaches among the wide expansion known as the Lake of the Thousand Islands. Now, Gananoque is the pretty metropolis of the Thousand Island district on the Canadian side, as Alexandria Bay and Clayton are on the American shore; and the "Princess Louise" is the little steamer which plies daily between Kingston and Gananoque during the summer season, when the ice is up and navigation is open. But I have always found European ideas as to the geography of Canada so very vague that I shall make no apology for beginning my story with some slight account of the Thousand Islands and their immediate surroundings.

Just at the point where the huge St. Lawrence emerges lazily from Lake Ontario—or where Lake Ontario narrows into the St. Lawrence, whichever you will—the bed of the river crosses a transverse range of low granite hills, whose bare summits have been ground into domeshaped bosses (or roches moutonnees, as they say in Switzerland) by the enormous ice-sheets of the Glacial epoch. The granite of the chain is very hard and pure; it is quarried in large masses, indeed, for monumental and building purposes, among these very Islands; and so the great river, unable to cut itself as profound a channel as it might otherwise have done in a more yielding rock, has spread itself out in wide pools over a broad and shallow bed, only deep enough for large navigation by river-steamers in two or three well-recognized currents. The main line of the Grand Trunk Railway in fact, between Kingston and Montreal, traverses this same low, granite range, and exhibits very clearly the conditions precedent for the production of so strange and as the Thousand Islands. The range consists of numerous crouching, ice-worn mounds or hillocks, shaped exactly like a pig's back—or, to be more respectful, let us say an elephant's, or a basking whale's—while in between them lie deep grooves, or valleys equally ice-worn, all running parallel and scratched alike, as is necessarily the case with the grooves due to the downward movement of a single great glacier or ice-sheet. Now, the average width of the St. Lawrence under normal circumstances, when it isn't trying, Yankee fashion, to do a big thing, is about a mile or a mile and a half. But when it encounters this belt of ancient ice-worn gneis, with its accompanying dales, it spreads itself out into a sort of encumbered lake some ten or fifteen miles wide, filling up the grooves and interstices between the rounded humps, but leaving the higher mounds or hillocks themselves as tiny islands intersected by endless miniature channels. The name Thousand Islands is by no means due to characteristic American exaggeration; the official survey, made for the gives the number as sixteen hundred and ninety-two, and they extend for forty miles down the river from Kingston to Brockville, in a perpetual succession of beautiful pictures.

BEAUTIFUL A PHENOMENON

TREATY OF GHENT

If the islands and islets still remained merely in their original condition, as rounded, dome-shaped knolls, clad with pine and maple and Virginia-creeper, rising humplike in slow slopes from the water's edge, they would still be extremely romantic and picturesque. But they are far more than this. The ceaseless action of the river at their sides, aided by the disintegrating frosts of winter, and the pressure of the ice-packs when the lake "breaks up" in early spring (exactly as if it were an academy for young gentlemen in the Easter holidays), has cut many of their edges into steep little cliffs, fantastically weathered, as granite almost always weathers, into beautiful broken crags and pinnacles. Thus the cliffs often spring sheer from the surface of the water, worn by rain and frost into quaint, jutting shapes, and with rare ferns and flowers and creepers hanging out here and there from their creviced nooks. The summits remain for the most part smooth and polished by the old ice-action; and the contrast between their bald, round surfaces, almost gray with age and lichens, and the jagged and ruddy outline of the more recent fractures, makes an extremely bold and effective element in the total picture. The islets are also of every imaginable shape, size, and grouping—some of them big enough to hold two or three farms, and others of them rising solitary from midstream, crowned by a single waving stem of Canadian cedar. Here is one, for example, a mere bare pinnacle of mouldering rock; and here is another, a craggy little island, yet covered with endless variety of timber, whose drooping foliage hangs over the bank and reflects itself placidly in the silvery mirror below. Thus cluster after cluster passes before one's eyes, all but all as infinitely varied in shape and contour as intricate intermixture of rock and vegetation, and land and water, can possibly make them.

FAIRY-LIKE, GREEN, AND ROMANTIC,

I must give the reader due warning, however, that on this ground I am perhaps a trifle enthusiastic. To say the truth, if I may for once be frankly personal, I speak with the pardonable partiality of a native. I am, indeed, an aboriginal of this very district, born at Kingston, the threshold of the St. Lawrence, and "raised" (as we say beyond the Atlantic) on the biggest and longest of the Thousand Islands. Hence, something of the glamour of childhood surrounds the region still in my eyes: sweeter flowers blow there than anywhere else on this prosaic planet; bigger fish lurk among the crevices, bluer birds flit between the honeysuckles, and livelier squirrels gambol upon the hickory trees, than in any other corner of this oblate spheroid. I see the orange lilies and the lady's-slippers still, by the reflected light of ten-year-old memories. So the cautious reader will perhaps do well to take a liberal discount of twenty per cent. off all my adjectives, to submit my eulogistic verbs to a strict ad-valorem drawback, and to accept the remainder as probably representing an unprejodiced view of the situation. I am not, I will admit,

A PATRIOTIC CANADIAN,

—in so small a community, patriotism runs perilously near to provincialism—but I must allow that a warm corner still exists in my heart for the rocks and reaches of the Thousand Islands.

The "Princess Louise" steams down the Canadian Channel—one of the two chief navigable currents—past Wolfe Island where I spent a rustic boyhood with the raccoons and the sunfish, and on through endless gronps of other wooded islets, with cedars sweeping low to the water's edge, till, after a couple of hours aboard, two white wooden lighthouses, guarding the entrance to the little harbor, announce our approach to Gananoque. A "creek" or minor river (pronounce it "crick" if you wish to be thoroughly transatlantic), here joins issue with the great St. Lawrence, and of course on its way indulges in some local waterfalls, once pretty, but now made to do duty, alas! with American utilatarianism, in turning the saw-mills which are the raison d'etre of the flourishing small village. I will not describe Gananoque itself—Canadian villages are best left to the imagination of the charitable reader; I will only say that its natural situation is absolutely charming and its bay and outlook "as beautiful as they "make them." The "Princess Louise" drew up at the rough log wharf, choked with immense piles of white pine planks—"lumber," as the American language gracefully phrases it: and even as we reached the tiny quay we saw our hostess in her row-boat, already pulling round a granite bluff from her retreat to meet us. By private arrangement with the captain, indeed—so sweetly simple and domestic is life in these new countries—the engineer "scooted," or blew, his whistle three times as he passed the lighthouse whenever he had visitors on board for our friend's chalet. The moment the "scoot" is heard on the cliff the chalet folks put out their boat at once, and row round to the landingplace to take up their visitors without delay on arrival.

We disembarked from the "Princess Louise," and took our seats in the chalet row-boat. Our hostess pulled; politeness compelled me to offer myself as an unworthy substitute, but, when she firmly declined to surrender the sculls, I felt a secret twinge of satisfaction, for though it's one thing to pilot a dingey from Oxford to Sanford Lasher, it's quite another thing to pull a heavy hen-coop against the big waves of the full St. Lawrence on a windy evening.

CANADIAN LADIES

think nothing of a mile or two of rowing, or of a still breeze; and modeaty recognized the palpable fact that the sculls were in far more competent hands. Practice makes perfect, however; and a few weeks in C nada soon brought back to me the old knack of rowing with tholepins instead of rowlocks, though to the last the instinctive tendency to drop the wrist in the vain effort to feather—feathering of course, is impossible with the pins—persisted always, much to my discomfiture.

The chalet, whither we were bound, stands a little removed from Gananoque village in wild grounds all of its own, raised high among the woods, on top of a sheer cliff, beneath whose frowning crags we rowed into a little bay or haven, protected by a bold granite headland from the sea, that rolled high upon the open river. There we pulled up beside the floating wooden landing-stage, and disembarked on the grounds of Mossbank. (The real name was not Mossbank, but something very much prettier and more appropriate, only my friend's solemn adjurations have bound me down by inviolable promise not to reveal either its local habitation or its name too openly to the profane, vulgar, or even, which is quite another matter, to the candid reader, of this present magazine.) I forget how many steps, partly wooden, and partly cut into the solid granite of the headland, led up the face of the perpendicular cliff from the water's edge to the chalet platform. I was told at the time—something like one hundred and ninety, I fancy; but the beautiful picture of that calm bay, and the hanging woods, and the maiden-hair fern springing in wild luxuriance from the clefts of the rock, and the bearberry clambering over the ice-worn bosses, and the wild sarsaparilla raising its green berries on its tall, bare stalk and all the thousand and one exquisite details of frond and foliage, and fruit and flower, distracted my attention from arithmetical facts, gradational or otherwise, and left me only eyes and mind for the beautiful scene that unrolled itself slowly, step by step, before me.

At the summit, on a rounded, rocky plateau of bare granite, overgrown in places by clambering shrubs and trailing Western creepers, the chalet itself fronted the Sunset Islands, and looked down from its aerial perch upon the intricate maze of

RUSSET LAND AND PURPLE WATER,

To the right lay the lighthouses and the islands in their neighborhood; in front, one islet behind another stood massed in view, backed up by the low hills of the New York shore; to the left, the high cliff closed in the sight, with a single rocky island rising full in prospect, and the river stretching illimitably onward, broken by endless tiny archipelagoes, in the direction of the Cornwall Rapids. For the chalet itself, how shall I fitly describe it? A more charming summer-house was never devised for human habitation. Being meant for midsummer use alone, warmth and snugness were left wholly out of consideration; all the stress was laid upon coolness and breeziness in the sweltering heat of Canadian August. Inside and out, the chalet was scrupulously of wood, wooden; it was built of the native white pine, polished both sides, one thickness of boards only, and all the constructional details within and without were plainly visible to the naked eye in a way that would have delighted the honest souls of Scott and Fergusson. The inner walls showed the polished framework (like a good church-roof) that supported the single layer of planks, unpapered, and otherwise undisfigured; the polished beams and joists over-head bore the weight of the boards that formed at once the ceiling of the drawing-room and the floor of the neat little bed-rooms up stairs. Thus every room had six sides of polished light-brown pine-wood—floor, ceiling, and four walls. A few delicate Oriental rugs and native fur-skins lay daintily upon the waxed floor; etchings and sketches hung upon the walls; light and graceful summer-like furniture filled up the rooms; but otherwise all was the clean wooden framework, and delightfully cool and appropriate it looked. Further to carry out the summer effects of the whole, the three reception-rooms on the ground-floor, instead of being jealously partitioned off from one another with the stereotyped formality of urban life, were thrown into one by broad archways, where folding-doors might have been, but were not, so giving an air of roominess and freedom to drawing-room, dining-room, and library alike, which was especially grateful in hot Canadian noon-tides. With doors and windows flung wide open, and roses and honeysuckles peeping in from the richly festooned pillars of the veranda, can one imagine a more delightful spot in which to spend a cloudless summer?

For, to complete the charm, a veranda ran round the house below, with broad shade and comfortable rocking-chairs, and creepers clambered up the posts around, making, as it were, a rustic frame for the exquisite picture of river and islands that lay beyond. Up-stairs, each bedroom opens out onto a continuous balcony, formed by the roof of the veranda, and running round the whole chalet, Swiss or Norwegian fashion, with a wood-work balustrade, overgrown with lithe sprays of native climbers. The view from the balcony was even finer than that from the platform of rock on which the house stood; it opened up yet wider vistas of the river, and gave a broader prospect over the blue hills of the dim American shore beyond.

I have been thus particular in describing the house at Mossbank, because it may be taken as of the delicious little summer cottages in which Americans and Canadians lounge away the sultry months of the transatlantic season. Our hostess, indeed, who combines the artist's eye with the poet's, had been peculiarly happy in her choice of a site; Mossbank stood on, by far, the prettiest point we saw anywhere among those sixteen hundred and ninety-two fairy-like islands; but almost all the cottages we visited were picturesque and appropriate to their use and situation, though none other, perhaps, was quite so graceful in its design, or so dainty in its appointments as the one in which we were fortunate enough to fix our headquarters. Dozens of such cottages now stud the prettiest parts of the various channels, and it is locally fashionable to run them down as disfiguring and modernizing a beautiful piece of rustic wild scenery. For my own part, though I have known the Islands intimately from childhood upward, and can remember them when their only inhabitants were minks and musquash, and their staple products blueberries and wildflowers, I do not think the quaint little cottages and the wooden bungalows are anything other (in most cases) than improvements to the district. And I am rather a Puritan, too, in this matter of wildness. I hate the intrusive foot of civilization. But civilization, as it shows itself among the Thousand Islands, is not intrusive; it rather heightens than detracts from the total impression. By themselves, the islands tend toward sameness; a graceful chalet, a light wooden toy farm-house, a white, gleaming lighthouse, judiciously planted on a jutting height, and well embowered in spruce-fir and maples, give individuality and distinctiveness to the picture, and supply the landscape with what it otherwise sadly lacks—points de repere—in the tangled maze of wood and water. Every view is all the better for an occasional landmark; the wildest nature is somewhat improved by a stray token of man's occupancy and the possibility of intercourse with the mass of humanity.

A FAIR SAMPLE

LIFE UPON THE WATER

Among the islands one lives upon the water. By a certain tacit understanding between the islanders, every resident has a recognized right to explore every other resident's petty domain. No obtrusive notice boards flaunt before the innocent face of heaven the anti-social and wholly uncalled-for information that trespassers will be prosecuted with the utmost rigor of the law. On the contrary, the usual formula painted on the neat little placard beside the tiny landing-stages assumes the optative rather than the imperative mood: "Parties landing on this island are requested to abstain from damaging the ferns and flowers." The fact is, all the islanders are there as summer visitors only; each possesses but a tiny realm of his own, often beautifully varied, but always readily exhausted of its native interest; and the whole charm of the spot would evaporate entirely if proprietors insisted with ungrained British churlishness upon their legal right to shut themselves in from landless humanity with the effectual protest of a high brick wall. Accordingly, everybody always lands freely, no man hinuering, upon everybody else's private island; and the day is mostly passed in wandering (afloat) in a delicious, aimless, listless fashion down tiny channels between islet and islet, stopping here to pick a rare wild-flower from a cliff on the side, and halting there to explore and climb some jutting rock whose peak promises a wider view over all the surrounding little archipelagoes.

AN IDEAL LIFE.

Few modes of life could be more graceful or humanizing than summer life in these delicious archipelagoes. Here and there, to be sure, as at Thousand Island Park, a whole big island has been bought up by speculators (oddly mixed in the making with camp-meetings and other revivalist religious gatherings), and laid out as a sort of exclusive Bedford Park, where none but approved members of a particular sect may take a cottage. One such little village is exclusively Methodist, while another is wholly given over to serious Congregationalism. But in most parts of the group (and it must be remembered that the islands cover, roughly speaking, an area of forty miles by ten or fifteen) each house occupies a little insular kingdom of its own, where the boys and girls can swim, and fish, and play, and flirt, unmolested; where the seniors can lie in hammocks under the trees, and ruminate on politics, philosophy, and the tender affections: where callers can be espied from afar as they approach the shore; and wherehospitality on a simple scale is as universal as it is unexacting. Note, also, that big black base and muskallonge still lurk among the cracks and crannies of the submerged granite, and that on many islands you can sit on the jutting end of a tiny promontory and drop your line for them, plump from the shore, into twenty feet of clear green water.

HOW NOT TO DO IT.

Our last words to the British tourists who, stirred by my natural and indigenous enthusiasm, may perhaps contemplate some day visiting and exploring the Thousand Islands. Don't for a moment suppose that the islands can be adequately seen from the deck of one of the big lake steamers that ply up and down between Montreal, Kingston, and Toronto. This is the stereotyped British-tourist way of seeing them, and nothing could be flatter or more disappointing. If you take them so, I do not doubt you will come away objurgating me by all your domestic deities. The steamer sticks to one or other of the two main channels, which are wide and deep, and comparatively unencumbered by rocks and islands; it avoids the tiny minor reaches, rich in endless surprises and varying vistas which constitute the real charms and beauty of this fantastic, fairy-like region. No, no! to see the islands properly, you must live on one of them for several days at least, and row up and down among the lost side-channels and tangled back-waters, exploring the petty bays and inlets, and occasionally losing your way altogether among the endless intricacies of that maze of water. But if you can not afford the time to see them thus, you should at least spend a day or two at Clayton or Gananoque, and take the "round trip" on the little excursion-steamer, "Island Wanderer," which threads its way in and out through the loveliest windings of the landlocked river.

Wheat and the World.

Could imperial Rome have only grown sufficient wheat in Italy to have fed her legions, Cæsar would still be master of three-fourths of the earth. Rome thought more in her latter days of grapes and oysters, and mullets, that change color as they die, and singing and flute playing, and cynic verse of Horace, anything rather than corn. Rome is no more, and the lords of the world are they who have mastership of wheat. We have the mastership at this hour by dint of our gold and our 100-ton guns, but they are telling our farmers to cast aside their corn and to grow tobacco and fruit and anything else that can be thought of in preference. The gold is slipping away. These sacks in the market, open to all to thrust their hands in, are not sacks of corn but of golden sovereigns, half sovereigns, new George and the dragon, old George and the dragon, Sydney Mint sovereigns, napoleons, half napoleons, Belgian gold, German gold, Italian gold, gold scraped and scratched and gathered together like old rags from door to door. Sacks full of gold, verily I may say that all the gold poured out from the Australian fields, every pennyweight of it hundreds of tons, all shipped over the se, to India, Australia, South Africa, Egypt, and, above all, America, to buy wheat. It was said that Pompey and his sons covered the great earth with their bones, for each one died in a different quarter of the world. but now he would want two more sons for Australia and America, the two new quarters which are now at work plowing, sowing, reaping, without a month's intermission, growing corn for us. When you buy a bag of flour at the baker's you pay fivepence over the counter into somebody else's till. Consider now the broad ocean as the counter, and yourself to represent thirty-five millions of English people buying sixteen, seventeen, or eighteen million quarters of wheat from the nations opposite, and paying for it shiploads of gold.

Power by Electricity.

The transmission of power by electricity opens up a field of vast possibilities. According to a recent writer: "The time will come when every waterfall, every mill stream, and every rivulet even can be utilized as a motive force in cities, towns and villages. The steam engine will become as antiquated as the old-fashioned oil-lamp is now. Since electricity has been proven capable of being used as a motive power at al, the grand desideratum has been to discover some means of generating it at a less cost than has been possible heretofore, and the result is that the aquatic force which has been of but very little use to man heretofore is to be made his most valuable servant. The question of cheapening the electric light, which has hung like a cloud over its future in the capitalist's mind and has dimmed even its brilliant rays, is thereby solved, for if the force can be had for the mere taking from every running channel of water in the land, why, then the main cost is at once swept away. When, further, this force is carried, with the assistance of a simple wire, to any point where it is needed, industrial revolution will have been accomplished, the consequence of which it is difficult to measure in its entirety. The tides being likewise added to this available force, there is more than enough for all the present and possible future demands of the world. As Prof. Thomson, the English scientist, said recently, a tenth part of the tidal energy in the comparatively insignificant valley of the Severn would be alone sufficient to light every city in Great Britain, while another tenth would turn every loom, spindle and anxle. The day may not be so far off when the streets of New York are lighted by the Falls of Niagara, and its multitude of presses and machines of all sorts turned by the same agency."

Mr. A. J. Bethell corrects in an amusing way an old fallacy with regard to ostriches. The popular belief, he remarks, that the ostrich, when pursued, hides his head in the sand, is incorrect. On the contrary, if he gets a fair chance at a man, he will," he says, "reverse the position, and hide the man, or what remains of him, in the sand by jumping on and rolling over him.

PERSONAL.

Miss Clara Louise Kellogg is on the to Carlsbad, and will be absent from fica ten weeks. On her return she wi sume singing in concert.

Madame Christine Nillson is exp aing in this country and the States season in concert. Her price is sup to be $2500 a concert.

The Pope sent an autograph lett King Kalakaua, of the Hawaiian expressing his regret at the news of th cent death of the Princess Likelike.

A well-known riding-master insists girls should not be taught to ride unt are ten years old, because they are we the spine when weak at all. But active boys can be put into the saddl soon as they are large enough to hold

The book oftenest in Mr. Ruskio's of late years is Carlyle's Fredrick the and it is one of the griefs of Mr. Ruskin age that he knows Sir Walter Scott heart. Nevertheless, if he takes up a ume of Scott, it is not laid down fo next hour.

Capt. Samuel P. Griffin, who died Aspinwall on the 4th July, wore not a medals of honor. The most highly by him was a decoration conferred Queen Victoria in recognition of his vices on the Grinnell expedition, which cured the first traces of the lost Arctic plorer, Sir John Franklin.

Miss Fortescue has given to an Eng reporter some impressions of her visit and to the States. She finds that Amer women have good hands and invisible that they wear their clothes with exq grace; and that the inland scenery of A ica "lacks trees, hedges, water, and lak What lakes we have are so large that cannot see the other side of them.

Mr. Robert Bonner's interest in h arose primarily from the benefits he rec ed from horseback riding, in accordan with a prescription from a physician, thus cured him from the effects of overw After three months of the exercise Mr. B ner was able to do as much work in t hours as previously in ten or twelve h

Queen Victoria expresses to her peo her "warm thanks for the kind—more kind—reception I met with going to and turning from Westminster Abbey with my children and grandchildren." It shows her that the labor and anxiety of fifty years, "twenty-two of which were spent untroubled happiness, shared and cheer by my beloved husband," have been ap preciated by her people.

Lord Byron asked "What is the end Fame?" According to accounts from Pa Gen. Boulanger must have found it so thing like the end of a "slugging" ma such as John Lawrence Sullivan has m popular in the United States. The Fre General was carried bodily by the Pa people to a railway station to which he bound last Friday, and the demonstrati were so enthusiastic that he was forced fly for refuge to the locomotive, and could scarcely take a seat during the jo ney in consequence of his bruises.

Ramabaia, a Hindoo woman of high ca who has been studying medicine in Philad phia, has put her novel experiences int volume, whose proceeds are to aid a fu she is endeavoring to raise to open at Pu ah a home for Brahmin widows doomed custom to a miserable existence. By ed cating and elevating these women and sen ing them out to teach—to which less ob tion would exist under Hindoo customs th for married or, still more, unmarried wo —Ramabaia hopes to make this home a ce tre of elevating influence in a place alread the educational headquarters of the pro vince of Bengal.

Lord Lorne could blame nobody but hi self for his ignominious descent from t back of his "capering beast." He declin the loan of a quiet and thoroughly train animal, in order that he might be mount on a more showy steed. The catastrop seemed considerably to amuse the royal fri but at the Abbey the Duke of Portla having heard nothing of the fall, ingen ously asked Princess Louise's husba "how he liked his mount?" The dai papers reported that Lord Lorne's h struck against the curbstone, but that h was nevertheless able to get up and wa away, an account which would lead one t conclude that his head must be of amazing thickness—but, as a matter of fac he got an easy fall on his back. Wis than Lord Lorne, the Duke of Edinburg telegraphed for an exceptionally qui charger.

Starving a Jury.

Jurymen are better off in these time than in the good old days when it was the law to endeavor to starve them into a verdi It is bad enough now to be put to loss o time and money, with little or inadequa recompense, without being starved or fined into the bargain. In the early part of the reign of Henry VIII. Lord Chief-Justice Reed tried an action when on circuit in which the jury were locked up, but before giving their verdict had eaten and drank, which they all confessed. This being reported to the Judge he fined them each heavily and took their verdict. In Hilary Term, Sixth Henry VIII., the caseca me up before the full Court of Queen's Bench on a joint motion to set aside on the ground of irregularity of trial, the jury having eaten when they should have fasted, and next remit the fines under the peculiar circumstances of the case. The jury averred that they had made up their minds in the case before they ate, and had returned into Court with a verdict, but, finding the Lord Chief-Justice had "run out to see a fray," and not knowing when he might come back, they had refreshment. The court confirmed both the verdict and the fines. In "Dyer's Reports" a case is reported of a jury who retired to consider their verdict, and when they came back the bailiff informed the Judge that some of them (which he could not despise) had been feeding while locked up. Both bailiff and jury were sworn, and the pockets of the latter were examined, when it appeared that they all had about them "pippins," of which "some of them confessed they had eaten, and the others said they had not." All were severely reprimanded, and those who had eaten were fined 12s. each, and those who had not were fined 6s. each, "for that they had them in their pockets."

If the Commander-in-Chief gives permission, a team of the Broughty Ferry Artillery Volunteers will take part in the gun competition at Quebec, in September next.

ERSONAL.

se Kellogg is on the w will be absent from A
On her return she will oncert.

ine Nillson is expected try and the States
. Her price is suppo
cert.

z an autograph letter of the Hawaiian Islan ret at the news of the Princess Likelike.

riding-master insists th e taught to ride until because they are weak weak at all. But e put into the saddle large enough to hold est in Mr. Ruskin's rlyle's Fredrick the Great griefs of Mr. Ruskin's ws Sir Walter Scott less, if he takes up a s not laid down for

P. Griffin, who died
4th July, wore not a
The most highly decoration conferred in recognition of his nell expedition, which aces of the lost Arctic Franklin.

has given to an Engli
pressions of her visit
She finds that Americ hands and invisible fee
eir clothes with exquis
he inland scenery of Amer hedges, water, and lakes.
ave are so large that her side of them.

onner's interest in hors om the benefits he ck riding, in accordan on from a physician, w om the effects of overwo ns of the exercise Mr. Bo o as much work in thr
ly in ten or twelve hour expresses to her peop
s for the kind—more th met with going to and stminster Abbey with grandchildren." It show r and anxiety of fifty lo two of which were spent ness, shared and cheere husband," have been a people.

ked "What is the end ing to accounts from Par must have found it som
d of a "slugging" matc wrence Sullivan has ma nited States. The Fren ried bodily by the Par
ay station to which he w y, and the demonstratio stic that he was forced o the locomotive, and ke a seat during the jou ce of his bruises.

indoo woman of high cas dying medicine in Philad novel experiences into roceeds are to aid a fu
g to raise to open at Poo ahmin widows doomed erable existence. By ed
ing these women and se
each—to which less obj under Hindoo customs th ill more, unmarried wom es to make this home a ce nfluence in a place alread headquarters of the pr

uld blame nobody but hi ominious descent from t ering beast." He declin et and thoroughly train that he might be mount steed. The catastrop bly to amuse the royalti
the Duke of Portland thing of the fall, ingen rincess Louise's husba his mount?" The dal that Lord Lorne's he ne curbstone, but that h able to get up and wal which would lead one t his head must be s—but, as a matter of fac fall on his back. Wis
, the Duke of Edinburg an exceptionally qui rving a Jury.

better off in these time old days when it was th starve them into a verdi now to be put to loss with little or inadequat out being starved or fine
In the early part of th
VIII. Lord Chief-Justic ction when on circuit i ere locked up, but befor ict had eaten and drank nfessed. This being repor
e fined them each heavil erdict. In Hilary Term
., the caseca me up befor
Queen's Bench on a join e on the ground of infor
e jury having eaten wh fasted, and next remit th peculiar circumstances jury averred that the minds in the case befor returned into Court wit
ing the Lord Chief-Justic e a fray," and not knowing ne back, they had refresh
t confirmed both th
ies. In "Dyer's Report of a jury who retired dict, and when they cam nformed the Judge tha ich he could not dispos while locked up. Bot re sworn, and the packet examined, when it appea nd about them "pippins,
f them confessed they ha hers said they had not, reprimanded, and thos
re fined 12s. each,
were fined 6s. each,
n in their pockets."

ader-in-Chief gives p
the Broughty Ferry A will take part in the g ebec, in September next.

HOUSEHOLD.

Bake Your Own Bread.

BY T. H. CHURCHILL.

Sixty four ounces of bread, that is to say, a four pound loaf, in this city costs eleven cents, and the price in any village or town anywhere in America will not vary much from this. This is at the rate of 2¾ cents per pound.

The best flour is selling now from $3.75 to $4 per barrel of 200 pounds, say 2 cents a pound. To find how much of each loaf was water, the writer took four loaves made by four different bakers, and crumbling and drying, each sample weighed before and after as follows:—

	Fresh Weighed	After Drying.
No. 1	65½ ozs.	45¼ ozs.
" 2	65½ "	44¾ "
" 3	64¼ "	45½ "
" 4	64¾ "	44½ "
Total	260zs.	180zs.

The weight evaporated will thus be seen to be eighty-one ounces, 20 ounces and a fraction, or about 31 per cent. of water. Now there is no fraud about this. Neither is there any fraud in using, as bakers nearly always do, about four ounces of potatoes to each loaf. Potatoes are among the best of foods but not worth 2¼ cents a pound, the price paid for bread, as before stated.

The object of this article is to make it perfectly plain to each bread-user that the material of a loaf of bread they pay eleven cents for, in reality only costs about five cents, and that a family, say of five persons using one loaf per day are paying a snug sum during the year which they might and should save. In the four loaves as a test we have roughly:—

Flour	164 oz. (10¼lbs.)	worth	20½ cents
Potatoes	17 "	"	¾ "
Water	80 "	"	"
Material for four loaves costing			21¼ "

If a house-wife is willing to pay one hundred per cent. or just double as much for bread as the material costs it is her own and her husband's affair, but let her remember that for every loaf per day for the year it costs her $20. The majority of families in this city take two to three loaves a day, so it becomes $40 to $60 a year which they pay the baker for his services.

If it be worth while to study economy at all these figures are worth considering. They mean the clothing of a child or a man much better than can now be afforded by many a household. They may mean living within the income, of quite a number, and are therefore to all such vital.

To those who urge the extra expense of fuel we would say:—Do not fall into the error of baking every day and serving hot biscuits and buns, but so far as bread is concerned do your baking once a week—say on washing day, when it can be done at trifling additional cost. Bread can be kept for a week easily, as thousands know, and the older or staler home-baked bread is the more healthful, digestible and nutritious it becomes. This article is not intended as a plea for baking powders, but to encourage economy in each and every family, rich or poor, and to perpetuate the good old custom of every mother making the bread her children eat.

Cooking Recipes.

CALF'S BRAINS FRIED.—Take the brains and beat up with an egg, salt and pepper; fry in hot lard.

PUDDING SAUCE.—Beat together four teaspoonfuls of sugar and two ounces of butter; stir in a teacup of boiling water; flavor to taste.

GREEN SPONGE CAKE.—Two teacups of sugar, one of cream, two of flour, four eggs, one teaspoonful of baking powder and teaspoonful extract of lemon; bake quickly.

LEMON MARMALADE.—Take lemons, peel, and extract the seed. Boil the lemons until soft, add the juice and pulp with a pound of sugar to a pound of lemon. Boil to thicken.

SNOW CAKE.—One cup of white sugar half cup of butter, one and a half of flour, half cup of sweet milk, teaspoonful of baking powder, whites of four eggs; flavor with almond.

BEEF TRIPE.—Clean the tripe carefully and soak in salt water, changing several times, cut in slices; boil perfectly done; dip in butter; fry a light brown; season with salt and pepper.

FIG CAKE.—Three pints of flour, one cup butter, one of sweet milk, two and one-half cups sugar, whites of sixteen eggs, three teaspoonfuls baking powder, one and one-half pounds figs flavored and cut in strips.

WHITE FRUIT CAKE.—One pound of flour, one pound of sugar, one pound of butter, one pound blanched almonds, three ounces citron, one grated cocoanut, whites of sixteen eggs, two teaspoonfuls baking powder, flavor to taste.

TO DRESS CUCUMBERS.—Gather, or buy from market early, peel and put on ice until dinner; then slice as thin as possible and pet with sliced onions in a dish. Salt and pepper freely, pour a cup of vinegar over them, and lay ice on the top.

DRESSED TONGUE.—Take a corned tongue and boil tender; split it, stick in a few cloves, cut one onion, a little thyme, add some browned flour. Have the tongue covered with water, in which mix the ingredients, add three hard boiled eggs chopped fine, and send to the table garnished with hard boiled eggs.

CHARLOTTE RUSSE.—Take two pints rich milk and soak three-fourths of a package of gelatine in it. Make a custard of a quart of milk, one pound of sugar and the yolks of eight eggs, add the gelatine and two teaspoonfuls extract of vanilla. When it begins to congeal stir in it a quart of rich cream whipped to a froth. Line a mold with stale sponge cake; set on ice.

BAKED LEG OF MUTTON.—Take a leg of mutton weighing six or eight pounds, cut down the under side and remove the bone; fill it with a dressing made of four ounces of suet, two eggs, two ounces chopped ham, six of stale bread, one onion, a little thyme, sweet marjoram, parsley, nutmeg, salt and pepper; sew up, lay in a pan and put in a hot oven, baste with butter, cook three hours.

ROAST BEEF.—Remove the bone from the thin part of the roast, lay in a piece of suet that does not project beyond the width of the roast, then fold it around against the thick of the meat. Skewer it with larding-pins fasten on the side, take some thin slices of bacon, lay in a dripping pan that is not too large and place in a hot oven. Fifteen minutes to the pound is the usual time required for roasting. Salt when half done and baste frequently. Minced onion, thyme and parsley may be added to the gravy.

FRUIT CAKE.—Eight cups of flour, six cups sugar, three cups butter, two cups milk (clabber preferred), twelve eggs, four teaspoonfuls cream of tartar, two teaspoonfuls soda, two pounds seeded raisins, two of currants, half pound thinly sliced citron, flour the raisins to prevent them from settling. Flavor with cloves, allspice, cinnamon, ginger and mace to suit the taste; bake four hours. Mix sugar and butter and beat it to light cream, then add milk and yolks of eggs, then the spices, and lastly the whites and fruits.

THE LIME-KILN CLUB.

The wisdom of the club in deciding not to permit any lecturer to enter the hall until he had passed an examination before a committee was apparent when the Hon. Plumbago Josylin of Huntsville, Ala., walked into Detroit to deliver his lecture on: "Can We Ever be Perfectly Happy?" The committee submitted him to the following examination

"When and where was Plato born?"

"What brought the downfall of the Roman Empire?"

"What nation first made use of the soup bone as a substitute for turkey?"

"Who introduced the game of policy into this country?"

"Who was De Soto, and why did he discover the Mississippi River?"

If I have 1,000,000,000 cocoanuts and give a strange darkey 265,492 of them, how many do I have left?"

"How long would a body weighing 250 pounds take in falling 1,800 feet?"

The list of questions embraced thirty-one, and the Hon. Plumbago could not return a correct answer to a single one of them He grew quite indignant over the examination, claiming that the only two things which stood in the way of perfect happiness on earth were green watermelons at fifty cents apiece and the house-fly; but the committee were firm, and he was told to jog along.

"De report of de committee will be accepted an' adopted," observed Brother Gardner, "an' each member of it will also consider hisself formally thanked. Had de Hon Plumbago been allowed to take dis platform we should hev lost half an hour of our valuable time an' been no wiser. We will now proceed wid de reg'lar purceedin's."

TO BE INVESTIGATED.

The Secretary then read the following communication from Charleston, Ill.:

Brother Gardner—We take this opportunity of writing to you with red ink on a blue sheet of paper to ask that Giveadam Jones will come down here and establish a branch of the Lime-Kiln Club. J. B. Mitchell the grocer, has offered us the free use of the room over his store for one year and thirteen colored men are all ready to be sworn in as charter members. We believe that a branch will secure fifty members here in a month, and probably put a stop to the disappearance of chickens and small pigs and watermelons.

In case Elder Toots can come with Giveadam Jones we will organize a camp meeting at the same time. How is the Elder on the shout? We don't care so much about religion, but we want a leader whose voice can be heard two miles against the wind. The gentlemen named will be met at the depot by a string band and forty colored people, and while here they shall drink nothing cheaper than pink lemonade with a stick in it. We hope the club will take prompt and decisive action on this petition.

CURLY JIM.
ABSOLUTE SMITH,
WAKEFUL WHITE,
Committee.

"De petishun ar' referred to de proper committee," said Brother Gardner, "an' I would inform de members ofit dat a thorough investigashun am necessary. I was pussonally acquainted wid Wakeful White in Seymour, Ind., twenty-two y'ars ago, an' he was den a bad man—werry bad. In fackt he ar' de only human bein' on dis airth who eber succeeded in cuttin' de hind buttons off my Sunday coat-tails widout my knowledge If he ar' de same man we mus' be suah dat he ar' reformed all de way frew, an' has undergone a change of heart from top to bottom."

SINFUL SMITH'S BAD BREAK.

Brother Sinful Smith, a member taken in about three months ago, and one who has hitherto maintained a respectful silence during club meetings, now suddenly arose and offered the following idyl in competition for the summer poetry prize offered by the club

"Sealed proposals are invited by
The board of Education for Whatever furniture, fuel,
Printing and other articles that
May be required
By the board for the ensuing year,
Samples an specifications can
Be seen at the office of the Board, High School building,
At any time."

He was about to read the third verse when Brother Gardner brought his gravel down with a resounding whack and exclaimed;

"Brodder smith, stop!"

"Yes, sah."

"What is you readin' to dis meetin'?"

"I calls it an idyl, sah."

"Oh, you does! Sot right down on your cheer, sah! Ar' de Committe on Lunatic Asylum present? Dey ar', eh! De committee will take immediate charge of Brodder Smith and remove him to de aunty-room. Arter sittin' dar de gem'len will exercise deir own jndgment as to treatment. I would, however, suggest plenty of ice on de back of his neck, an' plenty of boot leather a few feet lower down. In addition to dat Brudder Smith ar' heahby suspended from membership fur de space of three months A pusson who boldly and maliciously seeks to palm off on dis club as original an idyl stolen bodily from de works of Shakspeare mus' be made to feel de weight of our rebuke."

OUR FOREIGN RELATIONS.

Col. Stratagem Zollicoffer, Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, submitted his quarterly report, from which was secured the following points of general interest:

We are all right with France, on tolerable good terms with Germany and desire no quarrel with England. The annexation of Canada may come in time, but don't bet on it. Since it became generally known that one ironclad could capture our whole Atlantic coast line at her pleasure, this country has been mighty civil to all powers having ironclads, and will probably continue that way. Civility is cheaper than war."

FOR CAUSES.

The Committee on Applications reported unfavorably on the candidates named:

Judge Exchange Johnston, of Canton, Ohio, for having been sent to jail for stealing two sheep. He sought to explain that he thought the two sheep were simply one pig but the wool wouldn't wash.

Elder Huckleberry Banks, of Toronto, Ontario, for false pretenses, he having a wooden leg and being deaf in the right ear. In hunting up the Elder's record it was also discovered that he had twenty-one bird shot in the calf of the other leg, and he refused to explain how they got there.

Prof. Antimony Jackson, of Grenada, Miss., for several suspicious incidents connected with his career during the past year One of these incidents was being found in the post-office at night, where he claimed to have called to inquire for a letter. Another was in having two razor-backed hogs penned up under his cabin, and when the owner of the animals came around the Professor claimed he took them for crows.

THE CLOSE.

There being no further routine business of a perishable nature on the table, Brother Gardner said:

"In gwine to our homes let us remember dat de man who walks in de middle of de road can't be slugged wid a sand-bag from de alley. While we part as frens, an' while each member should carry home a fraternal feelin,' de pusson who walks off wid my hat will be made to wish he had nebber bin bo'n! We will now abduct."

Canning and Evaporating Fruit.

The business of canning and evaporating fruits and vegetables has been steadily growing for many years past, until it has now assumed immense proportions. If the work is done properly, which is not always the case, the fruits and vegetables will retain their fully developed richness to an extent that early grown fruits and vegetables do not equal, and for this reason the evaporated fruit is often used after the early grown fruit is placed on market. This is a very good plan to follow, and is not only cheaper, but is also more healthy for the consumer.

Consumers in general are using canned and evaporated goods more and more each year, and as a natural consequence the evaporating factories are having quite a boom.

The canning process is easily done at home by the farmer's wife, and all who are conveniently situated should by all means put up enough fruit to supply their own family abundantly during the winter. Good sauce is quite a luxury, and is also quite health-giving in its effect on the human system, and oftentimes wards off disease by aiding in digestion, and in this way is not only valuable for what nourishment it contains in itself, but also acts as an appetizer, and by its steady use the other food is better assimilated.

It is much better for the farmer to put up what canned fruit he needs, and he will then know just what he has got, and feel better in using it than when he has to buy it from the factory. Of course the farmer should not expect to compete with the factories, and try to market his canned goods, unless it is done on a very extensive scale, but it is only a simple matter to put up what is needed of the different fruits and vegetables for family consumption. And when this is done, the farmer will have the advantage of selecting the fruit when it is in its best condition for canning, which is not always the case with factory goods. Besides this, when they are put up at home the best varieties can be selected, and absolute cleanliness assured.

Preserves are desirable to have as a change, and it is best to fix up a certain amount of this variety of sauce, but the simple process of canning is much easier and cheaper, and the fruit can then be used little at a time, as is desired, for table use.

There should be a supply of dried fruit also prepared for winter use, as it is very easy to accomplish and quite desirable to have, as a change, later in the season.

Evaporated fruit is, however, far superior to dried fruit, and should not be classed with it by any means. The process by which it is obtained is altogether different, and like most other articles of superior value or quality, it requires more trouble and expense to secure it.

During the first process of evaporation intense heat is used, which will effect the outer surface of the fruit only, and will form an impenetrable coating, thus retaining the perfect flavor and other desirable qualities of the fruit.

There are a great many different patterns and styles of evaporators that do good work, but the principal trouble is that they are quite expensive, and can only be used to profit where the business is done on a large scale, and as yet they are not cheap enough for family use.

Nearly all kinds of fruit, and many vegetables, can be evaporated to good advantage, and the field of operation is considerably more extensive than that compassed by the drying method. All the evaporation process does is to draw out the surplus moisture, and when the fruit is used on the table, this moisture can be easily restored, and thus the consumer has a welcome substitute for the genuine article when it cannot be obtained, and it often is very hard to tell the difference between them.

Strictly True

In every respect and attested by the testimony of thousands that Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor is a sure and painless cure for corns. The claim that it is just as good made by those endeavoring to palm off imitations for the genuine only proves the superiority of "Putnam's." Use only Putname's Painless Corn Extractor. Sure, safe, painless.

Medical Professor—What would you do in case you happened to discover that there was still life in a body that you were dissecting? Student—If the life was very still, sir, I should proceed.

The Red Headed Girl and White Horse Theory.

First man—"What nonsense! The papers have revamped that old superstition about the red-headed girl and the white horse."

Second Man—"That old belief is true as preaching; never knew it to fail; when you see a red-headed girl you will find a white horse somewhere near."

"Oh, get out. Suppose there should be a little town with a red-headed girl and no white horse at all, then what?"

"Something like that happened once. I lived in the town and had the only white horse there was, and on a bet I tried to kill the old superstition by selling my horse to a stranger from Wayback and buying a black one. Well, the day he took off the white horse the girl was taken sick and did not appear on the streets until the day when the stranger came back with a fine black horse, for which I had to pay a mighty big price."

"But if there was no white horse in town you won the bet?"

"No, sir; the fellow had hardly got away before the red-headed girl walked out. A heavy shower came up, washed all the coloring off the animal, and there was my same old white horse."

One Cent.

It is almost impossible to attach any importance to one cent; but, at the same time, it is a very important coin at times. It will take a circular to British Columbia, and it will make you madder than a hatter and a March hare combined, when you go to pay your fare on a horse-car and find that you have but four cents and a ten-dollar bill. Then will the wanting cent seem colossal. Especially when you see the conductor fold your ten-dollar bill and stow it carefully in his vest pocket, and then begin to deal you out a lot of change that looks as though it had been in circulation since the revoluntionary war. One cent is very small when you present it to an organ-grinder's monkey, but when it is added to the rate of interest you receive on a stock, it possesses a stern magnificent grandeur that carries you away like a strain of music.

A Horse That Was a Setter.

A man had a horse who would sit down whenever he was touched in the flank. He would just squat down on his hind quarters like a dog. The man tried to break him of it, but he couldn't, and nobody would buy him. One day a sportsman came along and made his acquaintance and they took a ride together to hunt partridges. When they found a covey the man touched his heels to the horses flanks and he sat down.

"What makes your horse do that?" said the sportsman.

"Why, he's a setter," said the man. "He sets birds just like dogs."

So the sportsman thought he was a wonderful horse, and he swapped for him and gave fifty dollars to boot, and he got on him, and after awhile they came to a creek that was pretty deep, and as the sportsmen held up his legs to keep them out of the water his heels touched the horse in the flank and down he sat in the water. When he got up and out and all dripping wet he was as mad as a wet hen, and said:

"Well, sir, what made this horse do that way in the water?"

"I forgot to tell you," said the man, "that he sets fish just as well as he sets birds."

Dyspepsia not Poetry.

Literary editor—Sorry to say that I can't use this poem. The fact is, it lacks something. It is defective in rhyme, faulty in measure, and contains no definite idea.

Young poet—That is an insinuation that I am not a poet.

Well—yes.

You are mistaken, sir. I feel at times a wild yearning, a morbid melancholy, a searching for I know not what. This is the divine afflatus.

Nothing of the sort! I feel that very frequently. It is dyspepsia.

The Five Sisters.

There were five fair sisters, and each had an aim—
Flora would fain be a fashionable dame;
Scholarly Susan's selection was books;
Coquettish Cora cared more for good looks;
Anna, ambitious, aspired after wealth:
Sensible Sarah sought first for good health.

So she took Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and grew healthy and blooming. Cora's beauty quickly faded; Susan's eyesight failed from over-study; Flora became nervous and fretful in striving after fashion, and a sickly family kept Anna's husband poor. But sensible Sarah grew daily more healthy, charming and intelligent, and she married rich.

The masses against the classes, the world over.

Bartholdi's Great Work.

The statue of Liberty enlightening the world, which stands on Bedloe's Island, in the harbor of New York, is one of the most sublime artistic conceptions of modern times. The torch of the goddess lights the nations of the earth to peace, prosperity and progress, through Liberty. But "liberty" is an empty word to the thousands of poor women enslaved by physical ailments a hundredfold more tyrannical than any Nero. To such sufferers Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription holds forth the promise of a speedy cure. It is a specific in all those derangements, irregularities and weaknesses which make life a burden to so many women. The only medicine sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. See guarantee printed on wrapper enclosing bottle.

A man without self-estraint is like a barrel without hoops and tumbles to pieces.

The three R's brought Regret, Reproach and Remorse to a great political party in 1884. The three P's, when signifying Dr. Pierce's Purgative Pellets, bring Peace to the mind, Preservation and Perfection of health to the body.

Flowers are the sweetest things that God ever made and forgot to put a soul into.

On rising one morning lately a crofter at Lawers, who had taken in a neighbouring croft, found a fullmounted coffin at his door. He coolly took it into his stable and utilized it as a corn chest.

People who are subject to bad breath, foul coated tongue, or any disorder of the Stomach, can at once be relieved by using Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, the old and tried remedy. Ask your Druggist.

That cannot be a healthy condition in which fever, pimples and the great moon are drudges.

LADIES

Who are Weak, Nervous and Exhausted; who feel themselves losing strength; who are pale, delicate and sickly in appearance, suffering from the many complaints peculiar to women—send for and read M. V. LUBON'S Treatise in book form on the Diseases of Women. Mailed sealed and secure from observation on receipt of 6c in stamps, unsealed price 2c. Address, M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. East Toronto, Ont.

Whoever makes home seem to the young dearer and more happy is a public benefactor.

YOUNG MEN suffering from the effects o early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted, also MIDDLE-AGED and OLD MEN who are broken-down from the effects of abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and READ M. V. Lubon's Treatise on Diseases of Men, The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address M. V. Lubon, 47 Wellington St. E. Toronto, Ont.

The greatest event in a hen's life is made up of an egg and a cackle. But eagles never cackle.

Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness and Hay Fever.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are cured in from one to three simple applications made at home. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent free on receipt of stamp by A. H. Dixon & Son, 305 King Street West Toronto Canada

A proud man is seldom a grateful man for he never thinks that he gets as much as he deserves.

Whenever your Stomach or Bowels get out of order, causing Billousness, Dyspepsia, or Indigestion and their attendant evils, take at once a dose of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Best family medicine. All Druggists, 50 cents.

A. P. 355.

PATENTS For Sale—Illustrative descriptive Catalogue free. R. Chamberlin, Toronto.

GOOD LIVE AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY County in Canada. Address, FERRIS & CO., 57 Church St., Toronto.

CONVERTIBLE WIRE BASKET, BEST SELLING novelty in Canada. Great reduction to agents. Sample by mail thirty cents. CLEMENT & Co., Toronto.

PATENTS PROCURED in Canada, the U.S. and all foreign countries. Engineers, Patent Attorneys, and experts in Patent Causes. Established 1867. Donald C. Ridout & Co., Toronto.

DR. WM. ARMSTRONG, Dermatologist. Specialty, Skin diseases, Scrofula and all diseases of the blood. All cancers cured that are curable, without the use of the knife. Office hours, from 9 to 12 a.m. and from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m., Sabbaths excepted. 28 Dundas Street, Toronto.

COMPOUND OXYGEN—THE CONSERVATOR of health, the enemy of disease; heals the Lungs, Re-builds the Broken Down Constitution of young and old. Home treatment, sufficient for two months, Inhaler and all complete, sent by express for $12. Moved my office from 73 King West to 41 King East. MRS C. STIDMAN FIEROE. Four years established in Toronto. 32 Office Treatments for $18. Send for circular.

SPOONER'S COPPERINE 'Babbitt'—Non-fibrous Anti-friction Box-metal for journal bearings in machinery—Guaranteed copper mixed. Supplies every requirement. Ask your hardware dealer for it. ALONZO. W. SPOONER. Patentee and Manufacturer, Port Hope

BEAVER LINE OF STEAMSHIPS, Sailing weekly between Montreal and Liverpool. RATES OF PASSAGE:—Saloon, Montreal to Liverpool, $40, $50, and $60; Return Tickets, $80, $90, and $100—according to steamer and accommodation. Intermediate and Steerage at lowest rates. For further particulars and to secure Berths, apply to H. E. MURRAY, General Manager, 1 Custom House Square, Montreal, or to the Local Agents in the different Towns and Cities.

THE BOILER INSPECTION and Insurance Company of Canada, Consulting Engineers and Solicitors of Patents, TORONTO. G. C. ROBB, Chief Engineer. A. FRASER, Sec'y-Treas.

TEACHERS and Students, Attention! Special classes during summer holidays, in Shorthand, Typewriting, Book-keeping, Penmanship, etc. Write for full particulars. Canadian Business University and Shorthand Institute, Public Library Building, Toronto. THOS. BENGOUGH, President. CHARLES H. BROOKS, Manager.

Awnings! Decorated Window Shades, &c. Wholesale and Retail, at the CELEBRATED GOLD MEDAL TENT MANUFACTORY, 70 King St. West, Toronto. NATIONAL MANUFACTUR'G CO.

Water PURE LIVING STREAM. AUGERS, bore 20 feet per hour. Also Rock Drills—Hand, Horse, or Steam Power. Send for Catalogue. Laidlaw Manufacturing Co., HAMILTON, ONT.

—1887—
BUY NOW
FOR IMMEDIATE SHIPMENT.
THE OSHAWA MOWERS
They surpass all other mowers in workmanship, quality of material, excellence of construction, and performance of work.

NEW MODEL THRESHERS.
The best threshing machines in America. They do the largest amount of work, and thresh cleaner than any other machines can do the work. In excellence of construction they are unequalled. They are the best made in Canada, and are only equalled by their namesakes in the United States.

PORTABLE ENGINES.—No better agricultural engines are made.

HALL THRESHING MACHINES.—The best in the market for horse-powers.

WOODBURY, or DINGEE, IMPROVED HORSE MOWERS, now the easiest running and best in the world.

Also the CALIFORNIA, PLANET, AND PITT'S HORSE-POWERS, of established repute.

Repairs on hand for every machine made.

JOHN LIVINGSTONE, Trustee,
JOSEPH HALL MACHINE WORKS, OSHAWA.

—THE—
Toronto Silver Plate Co.,
MANUFACTURERS OF THE HIGHEST GRADE OF
SILVER PLATED WARES.
TRADE MARK.
ALL GOODS GUARANTEED.
TORONTO.

I CURE FITS!
When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you. Address DR. H. G. ROOT,
Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto.

Markdale Standard.

C. W. Rutledge, Proprietor.

MARKDALE, JULY. 28. 1887.

ANTI-POVERTY.

We received last week a circular from "The Anti-Poverty Society," Toronto, in which are printed a series of resolutions in favor of certain changes in the land law, as a remedy for poverty, with a request that we use our influence in the promulgation of the principles therein contained.

It is our humble opinion that the rules of such a society should insist upon economy, sobriety and industry as essential conditions of deliverance from poverty rather than the mere changes of certain existing laws. Instead of this there is not a word mentioned as that such principles are even desired.

Who are the well-to-do class of to-day, or even the wealthy? Did they not rise from very humble positions in life, if not from poverty? Yes, you say, at least the great majority. Then how did this desirable state of affairs come about? Was it by certain laws of the land being peculiarly advantageous to that class, or was it not in ninety-nine classes out of one hundred the reward of self-denial and persistant individual effort? This is, we believe, the true remedy.

NOTE AND COMMENT.

—Up to last Saturday fifteen miles of the Red River Valley railway had been graded.

—A train load of English stallions arrived at Stratford last week. Most of the horses will remain in Ontario.

—His Excellency the Governor General, with Lady Lansdowne, will open the Toronto Industrial Exhibition on Tuesday the 6th September.

—Edward Hanlan is once more champion oarsman of America, having won a race for the championship by quarter of a mile at lake Calumet near Chicago last Saturday.

The Rev. E. H. Dewart, D. D., editor of the Christian Guardian, has been appointed by the Government a member of the University Senate of Toronto in place of the late Sir Matthew Crooks Cameron.

What the States are bothered with just now is too large a revenue. Last revenue year they had more than a hundred million of dollars above what they needed. And every kind of corrupt dodge is resorted to in order to get it spent. Why not abolish a good many taxes and lower others? The remedy seems easy and likely to be efficient.

—The Christian Guardian is, in the fullest sense a first-class religious and family paper, and we notice recently, material improvements in more than one respect. Its "Notes and Gleanings" are shorter, yet more numerous, comprehensive and pointed. Increased attention is also given to "personal paragraphs" such as brief items of general Church news taken from exchanges.

It is now stated that a new Conservative organ, to be called The Empire, is to be established in Toronto to take the place vacated by the Mail. A meeting of prominent Conservatives was held in that city lately, at which arrangements were completed for bringing out the first issue of the new organ about Sept. 1st. D. Creighton, M. P. P., will be managing director; John Livingstone, of Montreal, chief editor, and Robert Birmingham, Secretary of the Ontario Conservative Association, the business manager.

—Sir John Macdonald is about starting to make a tour of the Maritime Provinces, which it is said he has not visited since Confederation. He has been in Toronto several times lately, and those who have seen and conversed with him say they have never seen him in better health or spirits—in fact, he says himself that he believes his constitution has taken a change, and the old cattarah of the stomach, with which he used to be afflicted, has almost entirely left him since his trip across the continent last year.

—The insurance men of the country do not seem to be united in their opinions upon their own business, the doctors in that line differing as they do in others. We find, for instance, in the last issue of The Budget, which calls itself "Canada's Insurance Journal," an article condemning in the strongest terms the system of paying agents by commission. The Budget points out (and it seems reasonable enough) that, under the commission system, the agent is paid as much for a bad risk as for a good one, and as the company wants good risks only, the interest of the company and the agent do not run on the same line. The Budget advocates payment of agents by guaranteed salary with a commission on the profits, thus making it to the agent's interest to make his branch a paying one to the company.

Reciprocity with the States is still the question of the hour and is taking hold of a very large proportion of the people, especially among the farmers. All over the peninsula, and away along the shores of Lake Erie, the feeling is specially strong. Commercial travellers and others who have no interest in misrepresenting matters, testify that wherever they go this feeling is uppermost. They argue that Canada had Reciprocity before and that instead of fostering annexation, it completely killed it. And why, they ask, may not this be again? Besides, if Reciprocity is best for the material and social interests of the great majority of Canadians, why should it not be gone in for? In any case it can do nothing but good to have the whole question considered in all its relations and lights. To foreclose discussion by shouting treason or by threatening personal violence will never do. It will only precipitate what is sought to be avoided. Argument, and argument alone will carry the day. The silversmiths of Ephesus were no doubt very zealous for the honor of Diana, but the fact of the matter was, they were far more troubled about their craft being in danger. Hence those tears, and all that shouting. Evidently those silver-smiths of the olden times have a good many successors in Canada, who shout most lustily, "Patriotism," while what they are all the while most concerned about is their own pocket. —[Truth.

CLIPPINGS.

Accident.—A week ago last Friday John Blyth, Esq., M. P. P., who is a practical farmer, got seriously injured by his team running away with the mower. One of his legs is badly hurt, but it is expected he will soon be all right.—[Durham Chronicle.

Splendid Wheat. — Mr. Henry Parker, the old established seedsman and chemist, has always shown an intelligent interest in farming and owns one of the best cultivated places in the South Riding of Grey. It is unnecessary to refer to his thoroughbred cattle now, for we are not writing about that, but it is well known that he put hundreds of dollars into their pockets by introducing the Clawson wheat and he is doing them just as good service by sowing the famous Manchester wheat, for which he paid ten dollars a bushel. We believe it is his intention to distribute about a quart of this variety, to the leading farmers of the district who deal with him. It is a perfect success and although sowed in inferior ground looks splendid and will be a magnificent yield. If there is a real farmer's friend in South Grey it is Henry Parker, although he is very unostentatious about it.—[Chronicle.

A Mean Act.—A short time ago some evil disposed persons carried off from Mr. T. C. Robinson's lot on top of the rock, upwards of 200 bushels of onions, which were nearly ready for market. Information of the robbery was given to the police, but no clue to the perpetrators has yet been found. We hope they will "smell onions" till they make honorable restitution.—[O. S. Times.

A Source Of Danger.—The frequent source of danger attending bowel complaints during the summer and fall is the liability to check the diarrhœa too suddenly. Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry will not do this. Inflammation of the bowels does not follow its use, as is too often the case with powerful opiates and astringents. It cures promptly and in a natural manner.

STARTLING SLAUGHTER.

The knife driven right into the bone.

McFarland is going to sell every yard of summer dress goods at and under cost.

15 cent Check Lustres for 10 cents.
35 " Ottoman Cord for 25 cents.
15 " Cashmerettes for 9 cents.
30 " Stripe Balermos for 23½ cents.
30 " Camlets and DeBieges for 22 cents.
20 " Canvas Clothes for 12½ cts.
37½ " All Wool Lace Stripe (west end cloth.) 25 cents.

Note, only a limited number of yds. of these goods are left.

65 cent Ladies' silk mitts for 25c.

27 Ends Colored and Black Satins and Silks under cost.

A variety of remnants of different materials under cost.

2000 doz. Ivory Buttons all shades from 3c. per doz. up.

3 Only handsome Embroidered Dresses $1.50.

Lace Gloves, Parasols, at actual cost.

A good sensible Parasol for 15c.

24 Men's Balbriggan Undershirts and Drawers 30c.

24 Men's Balbriggan Undershirts and Drawers 50c.

60 Youth's and Misses Straw Hats, old price 40c. now 20c.

A good useful Table Linen only 20c.

Garter Elastic 2c. per yd.

16 doz. Woman Hose 10c. per pair.

60 pairs Womens Fancy Silk Stitched Hose former price 55c. on the counter now at 25c.

71 Men's Black and Colored Felt Hats old price ranged from $1.00 to $2.00 your choice of the lot for 50c.

5 Cases Men's Long Boots for harvesting at $1.50 per pair.

Heavy Direct Importations are now on the way from the European markets and room must be made for them. Come in and ask for goods as advertised and we will give you some eye openers.

☞ Every article in this column is in stock now. If you want them call on us early after seeing this, that we may not be under the painful necessity of telling you we are sold out.

W. J. McFARLAND,

Direct Importer.

MARKDALE.

Jubilee Sale

Every body is interested in the great

CLEARING SALE

IS

NOW GOING ON

AT

J. G. ANDERSON'S

Our stock being yet very large and the fall goods will soon be to hand, we have decided to have a great clearing sale to last for 30 days. The goods will positively be sold at slaughtered prices so you can make no mistake by coming prepared to take away with you a good large parcel.

Remember this is no Sham, the goods must be Sold.

Amongst the goods offered will be found special lines in Men's, Women's, and Childrens, Boots, Shoes and Slippers. Straw and Felt Hats, Gents' Ties, Fine White and Regatta Shirts. In the Ladies' Department there will be found a large range of summer and autumn, Dress-Goods, Embroidery, Laces, Gloves, and Hosiery, &c., these goods are all new and well worth inspection.

A special line of teas at a decided Bargain. Come in and see for yourself.

Come early before the Rush, so you can get properly waited on and get the first choice of the goods.

J. G. Anderson's,

MAMMOTH HOUSE,

MARKDALE.

MARKDALE CARRIAGE WORKS.

R. McNALLY:—Would hereby announce to the people of Markdale and the public generally that I have moved into my new carriage shop opposite the Markdale House, where I will manufacture every article in the wagon and carriage line, and having long experience in the business, and by using first class material, I can guarantee satisfaction to every one who will favor me with their order.

Repairing, Painting and Trimming promptly attended to.

A call respectfully solicited,

R. McNALLY, Proprietor

MARKDALE SAsH and DOOR FACTORY.

Having erected and fitted up in every detail a Sash, Door and Plain Factory, containing all the latest and most approved machinery, everything being new, I am now prepared to turn out

Sash, Doors, Blinds, Mouldings, Hollow Battons,

FRAMES, LATH, FENCE PICKETS, &c.,

And everything needed in the building trade, in a manner second to none in Canada, and having engaged superior mechanics in every department, I would now respectfully solicit public patronage.

Every Effort Made to fill Orders Promptly

PINE LUMBER Dressed and Undressed

Direct from North Shore, all sizes, on hand. Plain and Fancy Turning done.

Careful Attention to Orders from a Distance.

303 THOS. McNEA.

Massey Agency,

Holland Centre.

TORONTO Light Binder wood frame 5 & 6 feet cut

TORONTO MOWER, one and two horse.

MASSEY Harvester

MASSEY MOWER.

SHARP'S RAKE.

A full stock of repairs kept constantly on hand for the above machines

REPAIRS STRICTLY CASH.

Also agent for Hall's patent reversible HayCarrier, Manufactured by Cochrine Bro's, St. Thomas, and Fox Pea Harvester, Owen Sound.

THOS. WILLISCROFT, Agent.

Meaford Road.

From our own correspondent.

Haying is about finished; a good crop has been saved in prime condition. Harvesting is now the order of the day. Messrs. T. Gilbert and E. Brodie have each a field of barley cut and in the barn last week.

A very successful garden party in connection with the day school here was held in the school grounds some time ago.

The Sabbath School pic-nic was held at the far-famed "Bell's Lake" on Dominion Day.

Another boat has been launched on the matrimonial sea, the contracting parties being Mr. J. L. Graham and Miss Blair.

Mr. A. Hislop has purchased a new self-binder.

Miss Annie Buchanan has gone on a pleasure trip to Sault St. Marie.

A certain woman who hales from Flesherton has been around here, but was left on suspicion. She had better stay away from this burgh or else tar and feathers might be called into requisition.

Flesherton.

From our own correspondent.

A monster pic-nic party of the young people of our village enjoyed themselves at Bell's Lake, in Holland, on Friday last.

We have again progress and improvements to report in connection with our village. A very artistic verandah and balcony, now in course of erection on M. Richardson's dwelling, will add much to the appearance and comfort of this already commodious residence. Mrs Bulmer's grounds have been much beautified by the erection of a neat picket fence in front, and the painter's brush with some of the modern colors applied to her photo. studio and dwelling, makes the whole premises much more attractive.

Our genial good friend and citizen, J. R. Fawcett, Esq., editor of the Advance, has again invested in real estate here, having bought from W. J. Flesher, Esq., a very nicely situated lot on Toronto St., on the elevation opposite the palatial dwelling of J. W. Armstrong, Esq., upon which he purposes erecting a handsome dwelling at an early date. Others of our citizens contemplate a move in that direction in the near future.

Every thing augurs well for us having a new roller mill in full operation in this village, peradventure in a few months. If so, a much felt want will be supplied. We understand W. K. Flesher, Esq., is at present getting estimates and counting the costs, closely, and have a keen eye to business, we have no doubt will see the way clear to carry this project to a successful issue.

The president of the Flesherton cheese factory is about closing the second large sale of cheese from this factory this season, and at good figures.

M. Richardson & Co., of this place, made a very large sale of butter which was shipped for the Old Country on Friday last.

Post Office inspector Hopkirk, of Stratford, paid this place an official visit on Friday last. Under the careful management of Miss Brown he found the Flesherton P. O. in "apple pie" order.

The Flesherton Hotel is being renovated and repainted in new and pretty colors quite in keeping with the good taste and neetness of the proprietor.

George Keefer, Esq., returned home from Washington territory on Monday last.

Clydesdale Horses.

The Clydesdales have long been recognized as a leading and very valuable race of heavy draft horses, but they were never bred to such a high degree of excellence as at present. The old type of Clydesdale, while massive and strong-limbed, was somewhat "light-gristed." But skillful and judicious breeding has produced an animal which may well be regarded as a model for a heavy draft-horse. They possess sloping shoulders, good limbs, well "feathered" around the fetlocks, well-sprung ribs, deep barrel chest, and muscular quarters. The extensive importation of these horses into the United States, has added an important element to the horse stock of the West, where they are highly appreciated. Great care is used, both in the land of their origin and in this country, to preserve the purity of the breed, and encourage breeding to the highest type. The stud-books of Great Britain and of America are conducted with the greatest care, to guard against the registry of any but pure bred animals. The respective associations of Clydesdale breeders in both countries, offer liberal premiums for annual competitive exhibitions. In this and other respects both associations have always shown a broad and liberal spirit of enterprise.

—American Agriculturist for August.

The American Agriculturist for August, 1887.

Contains original articles by no less than forty well-known writers, from twenty-one States and Territories. The frontispiece, by Cary, represents two young bears surprising a party of children pisking blackberries. Another full page engraving, by Mueller, depicts several bright midsummer scenes in the country. In addition to these there are many smaller illustrations of farm animals, plans of buildings, plants and flowers, new labor-saving devices, and implements, etc., A prominent feature of this number is the "Fair List," giving the dates of all the State, County, and District Fairs, to be held this fall, so far as announced. The Household, and Boys and Girls columns, are, as usual, full of interesting and entertaining matter; and in the Humbug department several frauds and cheats gets more notoriety than they may relish. Price $1.50 per year English or German; Single number 15 cts. Address American Agriculturist, 751 Broadway, New York.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a similar vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh Asthma and all throat and Lung Afflictions also a positive and radical cure for nervous Dability and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases. has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this receipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Send by mail by addressing with stamp naming this paper W. A. NOYES 149 Powers Block Rochester, N. Y.
334-86 E. O. W.

IN BRIEF, AND TO THE POINT.

Dyspepsia is dreadful, Disordered liver is miserable. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existence. It is easy put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food. sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought no to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspepsia.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health: But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel for purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low est, short weight alum or phosphate powders sold only in cans, ROYAL BAKING POWDER Co. 106 Wall St., N. Y.

6 PER CENT.

Money loaned on Farm or Town Property at lowest rates of interest. Apply to
R. J. SPROULE,
Conveyancer & Postmaster. Flesherton.

SIGHT v. BLINDNESS.

N. STANLEY'S CELEBRATED

English Spectacles

79 BAY STREET, TORONTO CANADA.
—AND—
18 JEWIN STREET, LONDON E. C. ENGLAND.

R. L. Stephen's,
CHEMIST & DRUGGIST, Markdale

Has the Agency for the sale of the above in MARKDALE. No Spectacles in the Market equal them in the EYE PRESERVING QUALITIES they possess, or the GREAT EASE and COMFORT they confer on the wearer.

Their use will in actuality so strengthen the Eyes that it does not become necessary to change them for many years. They are therefore the CHEAPEST.

THEY ARE THE BEST IN THE WORLD
THEY NEVER TIRE THE EYE
AND LAST MANY EYARS WITHOUT CHANGE.

The Sight tests by our New Test Card, same as used by the leading Oculists throughout the world. 357-409

STRAYED.

To the premises of Alex. McLellan, lot pt. 60 con, 1st, East T. & S. Road, Holland. A yearling steer, red. The owner can have it by proving property and paying expences.

ALEX. McLELLAN.
359-62 Berkeley, P. O.

FOR SALE.

Cheap for cash, one Milch Cow, span young Mares, one of which has a fine Colt from "Terror," one two-year-old Colt (Clear Grit) and one year-old Heifer.

559-61 WM. BROWN.

SOOTHING, CLEANSING, HEALING.
It Cures
CATARRH, Cold In Head, HAY FEVER.
STOPS Droppings from Nasal passages into the throat and excessive expectoration caused by Catarrh. Sent pre-paid on receipt of price, 50c. and $1. Address FULFORD & CO., Brockville, Ont.

EASY TO USE.

HEAD QUARTERS

—FOR—

Books, Stationery, Fancy Goods, Toys, Wall Paper, &c.

Toronto St. next Door to the Mansion House, Markdale.

A. Dinsmore returns his sincere thanks for the very liberal support accorded him since commencing as above, and hopes by strict attention to business and moderate prices to merit a continuance of public appreciation and patronage. Those requiring

WALL PAPERS

would consult their own interest by examining his stock, consisting of over Three Thousand pieces at from 5 to 75c. per Roll. Sunday Schools requiring Liberary Books will find Hundreds to select from and at such FAVORABLE TERMS as are sure to satisfy.

Note the fact.—That until I commenced business there was no such thing as a special discount allowed to Sunday Schools, or if you wanted Books could not get them unless by sending to Toronto or elsewhere, now your wants can be supplied at your Door and at lower prices than Toronto. I therefore with confidence appeal for public support. A full line of School Books, Stationery, &c., always on hand, also agent for the DOMESTIC PAPER PATTERNS. Agent also for The Harden Star Hand Grenade for Extinguishing Fires. NOTE THE ADDRESS,

A. Dinsmore.

New General Provision Store

THE undersigned would hereby respectfully intimate to the inhabitants of Markdale and surrounding country that I've opened up a general Provision store where I intend to keep on hand a general supply of all kinds of provisions such as:—

FLOUR, OATMEAL, CORNMEAL INDIAN CORN, GRASS SEED, OATS, BRAN, SHORTS, CHOPP, SCREENINGS. also a quantity of SEED GRAIN, HAMS, BACON, LARD, &c., in fact everything people want in this line.

Shop one door west of Joe Lamb's Blacksmith shop.

Soliciting a share of public patronage I am respectfully yours,

Jas. Miller
MARKDALE.

Voters' List for 1887.

Municipality of the Township of Glenelg, County of Grey.

NOTICE is hereby given, that I have transmitted or delivered to the persons mentioned in the third and fourth sections of "The Voters List Act," the copies required by said section to be transmitted or delivered of the list made, pursuant to said act, of all persons appearing by the last revised Assessment Roll of the said Municipality to be entitled to vote in said Municipality at Elections for members of the Legislative Assembly, and the Municipal Elections; and said list was posted up at my office at Lot 24 Con. 4, Township of Glenelg, on the 20th day of July, 1887, and remains there for inspection.

Electors are called upon to examine the said list, and, if any ommissions or any other errors are found therein, to take immediate proceedings to have the said error corrected according to law.

JOHN S. BLACK,
Clerk of the said Municipality.
Dated this 20th day of July A. D. 1887.
358 61

SAY!

Did you ever in your life hear the potato bug sing? Have you seen them when they got up on their hind legs and whoop and holler with joy, holding their feelers to their stomach rolling over and over almost tickled to death? So much so that every muscle in their bodies is vibrating to the fullest extent. In fact they go into convulsions with laughter at the haggard and woe-begone look of the man who buys impure Paris Green.

BUT STRAIGHT BUSINESS

buy your Paris Green,

—AT—

Stephen's Drug Store,

and your bugs will kick straight quick and die.

Use Stephen's Insect Powder, it is the Shoor! Shoorer!! Shoorerest!!! in the market.

HAVE ARRIVED

5 gross of the Celebrated Diamond Dyes.

1 gross of Burdock Blood Bitters.

½ gross of Richardson & Well's Butter Color.

Prescriptions Dispensed day and night,

—AT—

R. L. Stephen's.

R. S. Rae,  Tailor.

REMOVED.

In returning thanks to my numerous customers for liberal patronage during the past 14 years in which I have done business in Markdale, and soliciting a continuance of the same, I would also intimate that I have removed to my premises on Mill Street, next door to Stephen's Drug Store, and opposite to the Post Office, where I shall be happy to meet all my customers.

Respectfully Yours,
R. S. RAE,
Markdale

TORONTO HOUSE.

I am offering this week Ready-Made Clothing, and

BOOTS & SHOES

—AT—

astonishingly low prices. Persons requiring a summer outfit would do well to see my stock.

Wm Brown.

NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that any person or persons found trespassing or fishing on the farms of the undersigned will be prosecuted according to law without further notice.

Signed:—

John B. Thibaudeau, Edward Brady, William Brady, John Shears, Wm. McNally, James Elliott, Adam Hislop, John Webber, Thos. Brady, James Brady, Wm. McCutcheon, Geo. Richardson, George McNally, James Skinner, Robt Graham, John Perkins.

OWEN SOUND
MARBLE WORK

H. B. HARRISON
MANUFACTURER OF
MARBLE AND GRANITE
MONUMENTS & HEADSTONES
Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.

JUST RECEIVED
3 Carloads Finest Variegate Marble

☞ Largest stock in the Dominion select from. Personally selected at the quarries in Vermont. Will be sold at prices which defy competition.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

N. B.—Beware of Monuments and Head stones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered together, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide the imperfections, and called White Bronze.

H. B. HARRISON

ROBT. ASKIN,

UNDERTAKER, MARKDALE,
FUNERAL FURNISHINGS
supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse
for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—
FURNITURE
In Stock at bottom prices.

PICTURE FRAMING
Done on short notice.
ROBT. ASKIN.

WM. BREADNER.
Carpender and Builder
GEORGE ST., MARKDALE.

ALL kinds of building and house carpenter work done in the village or country. Call early before the rush comes. 339-52

CARD OF THANKS.

In thanking my customers for their liberal patronage in the past. I have much pleasure in being still able to supply them with the following celebrated machines, viz.

The Watson all-steel two-horse twine Binder.
The Watson Deering Binder.
The Watson Improved Lion Reaper.
The New Humming Mower.
The Humming-bird Mower.
The Watson Daisy Rake.
The Mann Champion Rake.
The Tolten Pea Harvester.
The Mann Broad-cast Seeder and Harrows Combined.
The Champion Combined Drill, Colter & Scott, Oshawa.
The best Plow's and Harrows in the market.
Root Cutters, Grain Crushers, Fanning mills. Land Rollers.
Agent for the Waterson's Co's Machinery and Steam Threshers.

Horse Powers, Wagon's Buggies, Democrats, and every implement a farmer requires. Parties reqiring anything in above lines will find it to their advantage to call at my new implement house opposite R. McNally's Carriage works, where Mr. R. Robertson will be pleased to wait on customers in my absence.

J. H. CARSON, Agent
148-61 Markdale.

CANADIAN PACIFIC R. R.

TIME TABLE.

—Markdale Station—

GOING SOUTH.	6 47 a. m.	3.52 p. m
GOING NORTH.	12 02 p. m.	9.10 p. m

THE KEY TO HEALTH.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

Unlocks all the clogged avenues of the Bowels, Kidneys and Liver, carrying off gradually without weakening the system, all the impurities and foul humors of the secretions; at the same time Correcting Acidity of the Stomach, curing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Headaches, Dizziness, Heartburn, Constipation, Dryness of the Skin, Dropsy, Dimness of Vision, Jaundice, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Scrofula, Fluttering of the Heart, Nervousness and General Debility; all these and many other similar Complaints yield to the happy influence of BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

Sample Bottles 10c; Regular size $1.

For sale by all dealers.

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, Toronto.

BULL AGAINST GRIZZLY.

A TERRIFIC BATTLE FOR WHOSE END THE VULTURES WAITED.

The Deadly Work of the Bull's Horns and the Bear's Teeth and Claws—Interested Spectators on the Earth and in the Air.

"I belonged to the engineer corps that surveyed the route for the Canadian Pacific Railroad," said my friend, Big Fraser, "and one day, while seeking a little recreation, I was a witness of a scene in wild life which I have no doubt there are plenty of people would travel far to see if it could only be reproduced, but which I wouldn't be a spectator of again for a good many gold dollars.

I left our camp one day in July to try my luck at trout fishing in the head waters of a small stream five miles from camp. The weather had been hot and dry for some time, and when I got over to the river I found the head waters were not much better than dry land, all the moisture I could find being puddles here and there in the bed. The only water likely to be found in that quarter with fish in it was the river, and that was twenty miles away, so I concluded that the best thing for me to do would be to march right back to camp. There was a heavy thicket along the north bank of the stream, some distance above where I came out on the dry bed, and a few trees standing maybe a hundred yards back from the bank. As I turned to retrace my steps I saw a small herd of wild cattle standing off to my right. Among them was a young bull, and a more splendid specimen of an animal I never saw. He and the rest of the cattle were eyeing me with suspicious curiosity, I didn't like the appearance of the bull, for he had a way of lowering his head, throwing dirt with his fore feet, and uttering an ominous sort of bellow that seemed threatening. I turned and walked away, moving toward the trees. I looked back over my shoulder, and saw the bull coming along after me. I increased my speed, and so did he, until I was running my fastest and the bull was doing his best behind me. I can't say exactly how it was done, but it wasn't many seconds before I found myself in one of these trees, out of reach of the bull, who was immediately under the tree, pawing the dirt and acting very mad. I shall always believe that I was hoisted into that tree by the bull, although I had no evidence to show for it.

"The bull pawed and grumbled under the tree for a few minutes, and then turned and walked toward the thicket, on the creek side of which there was a water hole. The other cattle went quietly to grazing where I had first seen them.

I suppose the bull started toward the thicket to get a drink at the water hole, but he never got the drink. I saw him push his way into the thicket, and the next instant I could see that he had got into trouble of some kind, and that trouble proved to be a grizzly bear. A fierce struggle followed in the thicket. The tops of the bushes swayed to and fro, and I could hear the heavy crash of wood as the two powerful animals writhed in fierce embrace. A cloud of dust rolled up from the spot. It was not distant over 100 yards from the tree in which I had taken refuge. Scarcely two minutes elapsed before the bull broke through the bushes. His head was covered with blood, and great flakes of flesh hung from his fore shoulders. But instead of showing any signs of defeat he seemed literally to glow with defiant rage. Instinct had simply prompted him in his retreat to seek an open space. He was lithe and wiry, yet wonderfully massive about the shoulders, combinding the rarest qualities of strength and symmetry. For a moment he stood glaring at the bushes he had retreated from, his nostrils distended, and his whole form fixed and rigid. But scarcely had I time to note all this when the bear, a huge, repulsive looking brute, broke through the opening. He was the most formidable specimen of his kind I had ever seen, and my sympathies were at once with the bull, in spite of his belligerent attitude toward me a few minutes before, but I had my serious doubts about the final result of the combat that began at once.

"That combat was a trial of brute force that no words of mine are adequate to describe. When the bear made his appearance out of the thicket the bull did not wait for his contestant's charge, but, lowering his great head to the ground, he rushed madly upon the bear. The latter seemed to appreciate the abilities of the bull, and summoned all the wariness of his nature to his aid. He waited until the bull rushed almost upon him and then sprang aside with marvellous quickness, seized his assailant's horns in his powerful grasp, and pressed his head down against the ground by his great strength and the weight of his enormous body, biting at the bulls nose and tearing the flesh from his neck and shoulders with his long sharp claws. This position was maintained for at least five minutes, the bull struggling desperately to free his head, but being unable to accomplish it, while the bear put forth every muscle to press the bull's body to the ground. The blood poured from the bull's nostrils in great streams, but the bear had as yet received no apparent injury.

"Presently both animals paused in

THEIR DESPERATE STRUGGLE,

as each was blown and rapidly approaching exhaustion. The bear did not relax the hold he had obtained on his contestant. As yet during the fight neither animal had uttered a sound, except their loud and labored breathing. The cessation in the struggle had probably been of ten minutes' duration, when suddenly the bull made one desperate lunge, broke the motionless, but terrible embrace, hurled the bear from off his head, and backed away probably ten paces. The bear lifted his huge form on his haunches, and stood ready for the next assault. The herd of cattle had by this time gathered in from the plain and surrounded the combatants, moaning and bellowing and pawing up the ground but maintaining a terrified neutrality. From my position in the tree I watched the exciting scene with breathless interest.

"The bull did not remain at rest a moment after backing away for a new charge, but, rendered furious by his wounds he gathered all his energies, and with an unearthly cry rushed with impetuous force and ferocity upon the bear. The latter attempted to use the tactics that had served him so well at the first onslaught, but the second charge of the bull was irresistible, in spite of the bear's terrific blows with his paws, and the grizzly went down in the dust before his crazed antagonist, and vainly tried to retreat. The bull thrust his horns in under the bear, caught him in the belly with one of the sharp weapons, and with one furious sweep of his head tore the grizzly open until his entrails protruded. Then the grizzly rose to his feet, and with a roar that made my blood run cold closed with his terrible enemy, and for a long time the two fought, their cries and the cries of the surrounding cattle being frightful to listen to.

"While the fight was going on two great eagles appeared from some mysterious aerie and sailed and circled above the scene of the conflict, leisurely and grandually dropping nearer to the earth. Almost simultaneously with the appearence of the eagles I saw the heads of half a dozen hungry wolves emerge from the bushes where the fight had begun. I knew that the battle must soon end, and that the eagles and the wolves had scented the contest from afar, and knew by their infallible instinct that it must result in choice prey for them. The presence of these hungry birds and beasts of prey added to the terror of the bloody conflict.

"THE TERRIBLE FIGHT CONTINUED

The ground was torn up and covered with blood for many feet around. Both animals were grievously wounded. It was plain that neither could hold out much longer. Maimed and gory, they fought with the certainty of death, the bear rolling over and over in the dust, vainly trying to avoid the fatal horns of his adversary, and the bull ripping, thrusting, and tearing the grizzly with irresistible ferocity. At last, as if determined to end the conflict, the bull drew back, lowered his head, and made a third terrific charge, but, blinded by the streams of blood that poured down his face, he missed his mark, stumbled, and rolled headlong on the ground. In spite of his frightful injuries and great exhaustion, the bear turned quickly and sprang upon his prostrate enemy. He seemed to have been suddenly invigorated by this turn of the battle in his favor. With merciless sweeps of his huge claws he tore the flesh in great masses from the bull's up-turned side. The advantage the bear thus obtained over the bull seemed to be understood by the herd, and the bellowing increased, dirt was thrown about in clouds, and one big cow drew near the struggling animals, and I believed for a moment that she intended to go to the aid of the herd's prostrate leader, so fierce were her aspect and actions; but she simply circled around the bear and the bull, bellowing and pawing. In the mean time both the eagles and the wolves grew impatient of the delay in the battle's ending. The former would now and then swoop down, as if to hurry up the finish, uttering harsh cries, and some waiting wolf would steal from his covert and make a closer and more courageous reconnoisance, snapping and snarling in apparent disapointment.

"The bull and the bear rolled over and over in the terrible death struggle. Nothing was now to be seen but a heaving, gory mass dimly perceptible through the dust. As to weight, the two fierce and determined brutes must have been about equally matched. The bear had the advantage of greater agility and the expert and telling use of two terrible weapons, his teeth and his claws, while the bull represented more inflexible courage and greater powers of endurance. The unfortunate result of the bull's last charge on the grizzly indicated that the latter's qualities would in a few minutes more settle the fight against the bull, and I was in momentary expectation of seeing such a termination, when, to my astonishment, I saw the bear relax his efforts, roll over from the body of his prostrate foe, and drag himself feebly away from the spot. His appearance was sickening to me, so frightfully had he been ripped and torn by the bull's horns. The grizzly had no sooner abandoned his attack on the bull than the latter was on his feet, bearing himself as erect and fierce as ever. If the bear's appearance was sickening, the bull's was doubly so. He was covered with blood from his forehead to his rump, and his flesh and skin actually hung in strips and tatters from his head and sides. Giving his head a shake that scattered blood in a shower about him, and gave him a moment's sight of the reeking bear in front of him, he lowered his head for the fourth time, and again made one of his terrific charges. When the dying bear had dragged himself away from the bull, the eagles actually swooped down upon him, and the wolves sprang from the thicket into the opening and prepared to pounce upon him. The bull scattered the impatient birds and animals as he swept on his final charge against the grizzly, and then hastily departed, shrieking and snarling. The cattle again added their bellowing to that of the bull's, and acted as if they understood the favorable turn the fight had taken. As the bull hurled himself against the grizzly, the latter braced himself for a last desperate struggle. He struck out wildly with his paws, and the bull fell back with the force of the grizzly's blows, representing a ghastly spectacle. His tongue hung from his mouth a mangled mass of shreds. His face was stripped bare of flesh to the bone, and his eyes were torn from their sockets. The charge was equally disastrous to the bear, he being ripped completely open, and he sank to the ground writhing in his agony. The indomitable courage of the bull here prevailed. Blinded and crippled as he was, he made but a slight pause after his fourth assault, and then dashed wildly at his foe again. The grizzly's roar now seemed to be one of terror. With a last frantic effort he sought to make his escape, scrambling and staggering through the dust. But it was useless. His great strength was gone. The bull plunged his horns again and again into the huge form of the dying brute as he lay stretched helpless the dust. The bear's muscles quivered and contracted. He drew his immense paws up once or twice in convulsive clutches, raised his huge head, gave one agonizing groan, and

FELL BACK DEAD.

The victorous bull raised his bloody, horridly disfigured crest, gave voice to a deep bellow, and, shaking his head triumphantly, turned and walked away. His progress was slow and painful, and he stopped and turned at short intervals and listened, as if to know whether his foe would renew the battle. He walked nearly a hundred yards, with his herd gathering and bellowing about him. Presently his head drooped from its proud position. He spread his legs apart as if to brace himself against the weakness that was stealing upon him. Suddenly he fell as if he had been shot, a mangled, bleeding mass and was soon dead.

"The bull had no sooner left the dead bear than the eagles and wolves were screeching, snarling, and fighting on the carcass. The bull had not been dead five minutes when a flock of vultures dropped down in their mysterious way upon his body. When I climbed out of the tree to leave the scene of that terrific combat the herd of cattle had disappeared on the plain and two great skeletons were all that marked the field of conflit.

Pat's Answer.

Trip an Irishman, and he will fall on his feet; corner him, and he will jump over your head; question him upon a subject of which he is ignorant, and his answer, though it is not a reply, will enable him to retreat with his flag flying. An Irishman, who wished for a position as letter-carrier in one of our large cities, went before the Civil Service Board for examination. He appeared, wearing a careless air, as one about to go through a mere formality.

"What is the distance, Mr. Mahoney, between Toronto and Constantinople?" asked the Chairman.

"Wat's the distance between Toronto and that haithen city?" said Pat, "Well, sor, is that's to be my route, I withdraw my application."

One of Pat's countrymen, having served in the Halifax navy-yard in a subordinate position, asked to be promoted, hinting that he would not object to going to sea, if he could be assured of a good berth on a man-of-war. He, too, was invited to appear before the Examining Board.

"Mr. Mulhone," asked the Chairman, "if you were in the China Sea, and the ship under full sail was going ten knots an hour, and a man should fall overboard, what would you do?"

Promptly came the answer, without the shadow of perplexity appearing on Mulhones face "If I was in the China Seas, under the circumstances ye name, and a man should fall overboard I think I'd write to his friends that he was drowned."

Robbing a Gold Mine.

At Nevada City 1,800 pounds of ore were sold a short time ago for $8,000. It was identified as the product of the Eberhard mine, near White Pines, and there was a great deal of curiosity to learn how it had been carried out of the mine. The story was obtained in some way, and this is it: A Cornish miner employed in the Eberhard had his dinner-bucket made with a false bottom, into which he put a specimen every day, carrying it away safely to a cabin which he shared with another Cornishman, who worked on the night shift. As his partner was absent when he was present, he had no trouble in secreting the ore, placing it each night under the floor of the cabin and keeping its presence and whereabouts a secret. One morning he informed his partner that he was going to quit the Eberhard and leave the country. The partner must have been suspicious, for he only waited for the ore thief to get out of sight, when he tore up the cabin floor, and, borrowing a horse and wagon, loaded up the 1,800 pounds of stuff, and driving to Nevada City sold it. He then disappeared, and the original thief never got a cent for his share of the plunder.

Not That Kind of a Baby.

It was at the baptismal font, and the clergyman had the baby in his arms.

"What is the name?" he asked the godfather.

"Josephine Newton."

"Joseph E. Newton, I baptize thee in the name——"

"Not Joseph E.—Josephine," interrupted the mother in great alarm. "Its not that kind of a baby."

A Mild Sentence.

Magistrate (to policeman)—"What's the charge against this man?"

Policeman.—"He asked me if it was hot enough for me."

Magistrate.—"Six months."

The Tender Passion.

Mrs. Yerger—"Matilda, who was that man you were talking to last night at the back fence?"

Matilda Snowball—"Has yer nebber felt de influoence ob de tender pashun dat yer axes me sich queshuns?"

He Knew What to Expect.

"So you are to be married?" questioned a cynical young man. "Yes, very soon." "Of course you think her an angel?" "Oh, no; I have four sisters!"

An Intelligent Bird.

Old Maid—"Is this parrot for sale?"

Bird-Dealer—"Yes, mum."

"Can he talk?"

"Not yet, but he understands everything you say to him."

An Expert in Character.

"Excuse me, sir," he said, "but you are something of a reading man, are you not?"

"Oh, yes, sir. I often read half the night through."

"I thought so. I am seldom mistaken in judging character. You have a passion for literature, I puppose?"

"Not exactly. I'm a proof reader."

A Noble Moke.

"I shall give the vacant Thistle to Lord X.," said Lord Melbourne once, mentioning a certain noble lord celebrated for his stupidity. "If you do," replied Lord Palmerston, "he will eat it!"

What She Married For.

Second husband, to wife: "Are you as fond of me as you were of your first husband, dear?" Wife: "Yes, indeed; and, if you were to die, John; I would be just as fond of my third. I'm not a woman to marry for anything but love."

Not Musty.

Customer—"Mr. Einstein, how long have you had that stock? This coat smells musty."

Mr. Einstein—"Jacob, mein soun, you joost schmell dot goat."

Jacob—"Mein fader, I no schmell nodings."

Mr. Einstein—"Dere vas no musty in dot goat. He knows, does mein soun. Yon voud not doubt dem nose."

AGENTS AND CANVASSERS wanted, Male ... Dominion Union of U.V.A., 46 Arcade, Toronto.

CHURNS. Mangles, three kinds; Clothes Wringers, ten kinds; Washing Machines, 2 kinds. Carpet Sweepers, Meat Choppers, Trunks, and other sundries. HAMILTON INDUSTRIAL WORKS Co., Hamilton, Canada. Send for article wanted or illustrated Catalogue.

Dairy Salt, FOR BUTTER, ETC. NEW Importations.—Higgins' Eureka, Washington and Ashton Brands, in large or small sacks. Also Rice's Canadian Salt. Write for prices. JAMES PARK & SON. Wholesale Produce Merchants, Toronto.

ASSESSMENT SYSTEM. The Mutual Reserve Fund LIFE ASSOCIATION. The largest and most prosperous open Assessment Association in the world—desires active representatives in every section of Canada; liberal inducements. It has full Government Deposit, and under the supervision of Insurance Department at Ottawa. Correspondence solicited. Address, J. D. WELLS, General Manager, 65 King Street East, Toronto.

MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO. MANUFACTURE ONLY FINEST Silver Plated Ware. Artistic Designs, combined with Unequalled Durability and Finish. HAMILTON ONT.

BABY'S BIRTHDAY.  A Beautiful Imported Birthday Card sent to any baby whose mother will send us the names of two or more other babies, and their parents' addresses. Also a handsome Diamond Dye Sample Card to the mother and much valuable information. Wells, Richardson & Co., Montreal.

MILLER'S TICK DESTROYER.  STOCKMEN, give this valuable preparation a fair trial. It operates promptly and effectually in destroying Ticks and other vermin pests, as well as in eradicating all affections of the skin to which Sheep are subject. Sold In Tins at 35c., 70c. and $1. A 35c. Tin will clean 20 Sheep or 35 Lambs. HUGH MILLER & Co., Toronto.

THE LEADING CANADIAN COLLEGE FOR YOUNG WOMEN. ALMA COLLEGE. 66 PAGE PAMPHLET FREE. ST. THOMAS, ONT.

 RUBBER STAMPS, SEALS Stencils, and Burning Brands, &c. Send for Catalogue. BARBER BROS. Co., 37 Scott St., Toronto.

The National ELECTRO & STEREOTYPE Co. 23 ADELAIDE ST. E., TORONTO. All classes of fine work. Mfrs. of Printers' Leads Slugs and Metal Furniture. Send for prices.

Wall Paper MANUFACTURERS. M. STAUNTON & Co. Samples on application. TORONTO.

H. Williams, FELT AND SLATE Roofer. Manufacturer and dealer in Tarred Felt, Roofing Pitch, Building Papers, Carpet and Deafening Felt, Sheathing, ROOFING, Etc. 4 Adelaide St. E., Toronto.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships. Sailing during winter from Portland and every ... and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and ... mer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, ... at Londonderry to land mails and passengers ... Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via ... fax and St. John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly ... ing summer months. The steamers of the ... lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, ... Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer ... Glasgow and Montreal, weekly, Glasgow and ... weekly; and Glasgow and Philadelphia, fortnightly. For Freight, passage, or other information apply ... J. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & ... Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's N. F., Wm. ... & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; ... Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allan ... & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; ... Allan Portland Boston Montreal.

 Bicycles. SEND AT ONCE FOR ... of Second-Hand Machines. From $15 Upwards. New Catalogue Ready 1st ... A. T. LANE MONTREAL.

CONSUMPTION. I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer. Give express and P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto.

MAY APPLE BLOOD SYRUP. THE greatest ... covery of the ... cent age for Regulating the Bowels, ... During all Blood ... er and Kidney ... plaints. A perfect ... Blood Purifier. A ... in Hamilton who has ... been benefited by ... use: Mrs. M. Keenan, ... 192 Robert St., cured ... of Erysipelas of 2 ... standing; Robt. ... neil, 24 South ... Daughter cured ... Epileptic Fits after ... years' suffering; Jas. ... tic Birrell, 55 ... nut St., cured ... Weakness and Lung Trouble: John Wood, 95 ... cart St., cured of Liver Complaint and Biliousness ... used only 3 fifty-cent bottles; Mrs. J. Beal, 6 Augusta ... St., troubled for years with Nervous Prostration, ... small bottles gave her great relief. Sold at 50c. & $1. F. F. DALLEY & CO., Proprietors.

THE WHITE THRESHING ENGINE OF LONDON, ONT. A FULL SUPPLY FOR 1887.

J. L. JONES WOOD ENGRAVER 10 KING ST. EAST TORONTO.

Farmers and Threshers! USE ON YOUR MACHINERY ONLY THE WELL-KNOWN Peerless Oil. NINE GOLD MEDALS Have been awarded it during the last four years. Try also PEERLESS AXLE GREASE, for your Waggons and Horse Powers. Manufactured at QUEEN CITY OIL WORKS, by SAMUEL ROGERS & CO. TORONTO.

L. D. SAWYER & CO., Hamilton, Ont. MANUFACTURERS OF "L. D. S." ENGINES, WOOD, COAL AND STRAW BURNERS, PLAIN AND TRACTION, "Grain Saver" and "Peerless" SEPARATORS. "Pitts" Horse Powers, for 2, 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12 Horses. Tread Powers, for 1, 2 and 3 Horses. Eclipse Separators, for Tread & Small Powers. Send for Illustrated Catalogue.

GURNEY'S Standard Hot-air Furnaces HAVE NO EQUAL. PRICES TO SUIT ALL DEALERS. THE "BOYNTON," " "HARRIS," " "MAMMOTH," " "MONARCH." Send for Price List and Illustrated Catalogue. EVERY FURNACE GUARANTEED. THE E. & C. GURNEY COMPANY, (L'T'D), TORONTO, HAMILTON MONTREAL, AND WINNIPEG.

BY ORDER OF THE LEAGUE.

BY FRED. M. WHITE.

CHAPTER XX.—CONCLUSION.

Turning into Holborn, he ran on blindly, never noticing another figure following in footsteps. It was getting late now, and he hurried into the Strand, St Clement's ches struck mid-night. Through the ward there blindly, on to the water-side, e snaky figure close behind never off his k; on to the Embankment, and towards aterloo Bridge. Then he stopped for brief moment to regain his spent breath think.

The following footsteps halted too; and me instinct told him he was followed. ning round again, full under the lamp- ht, he encountered Paulo Salvarini, deter- nation in his face, murder in his eyes. an agony of sudden fear, La Gautier ran wn the steps on to the Temple Pier, ding there close by the rushing water. second later, with a clutch like iron, Sal- rini was upon him

"Ah!" he hissed, as they struggled to and "you thought to escape me, you murderer nnocent women, the slayer of my wife! w I have you. Back you go into the riv- with a knife in your black heart!"

The doomed man never answered; breath as too precious for that. And so they ggled for a minute on the slimy pier, rini's grip never relaxing, till, sudden- reaching down, he drew a knife. One ashing flash, a muttered scream, and Le tier's lifeblood gushed out. Footsteps e down the stairs, a shrill shout from a man's voice. Salvarini started. In one ment, Le Gantier had him in a dying sp, and with a dull splash they fell over kwards into the rushing flood. Down, wn, they went, the tenacious grip never ening, the water singing and hissing in ir ears, filling their throats as they suck- it down, turning them dizzy, till they ted down the stream—dead!

Some boatmen out late, attracted by the eam, rowed to the spot; and far down low Blackfriars, they picked up the dead dies, both locked together in the last clasp death. They rowed back to the pier, d carried the two corpses to a place for night, never heeding the woman who following them.

Next morning they saw a strange sight. ning across the murdered man, her head on his breast, a woman rested. They ed her; but she was quite dead and cold, smile upon her face now, wiping out all ce of care and suffering—a smile of hap- ess and deep content. Valerie had crept ere unnoticed to her husband's side, and ed of a broken heart.

For a few days people wondered and culated over the strange tragedy, and n it was forgotten. A new singer, a ted poisoning case, something turned and distracted the frivolous public mind m the "mysterious occurrence," to use e jargon of the press.

Maxwell lost no time in getting to Gros- ner Square the following morning, where greeting may be better imagined than cribed. He told Enid the whole story of mission, omitting nothing that he ught might be of interest to her; and in turn heard the story of Le Gautier's dly, and the narrow escape both had had m his schemes.

"I do not propose to stay any longer in ndon," Sir Geoffery said. "After what have all gone through, a little rest and etness is absolutely necessary.—Enid, uld you care to go down to Haversham?"

"Indeed, I should. Let us go at once. am absolutely pining for a little fresh air ain. The place must be looking lovely w."

"All right, my dear," the baronet replied dly; sooth to say, not sorry to get back a part of the world where Sir Geoffrey rtaris was s ane one.

"Then we will go to-morrow, and Max- ell shall join us."

"But Isodore? I have not seen her yet."

"Oh, she can come down there some me, directly we are settled."

Later on in the same day, Maxwell heard e strange tale of Le Gautier's death. He d not tell the news to Enid then, prefer- ing to wait till a time when her nerves were more steady, and she had recovered from the ock of the past few days. So they went down to Haversham, and for three happy months remained there, "the world forgetting, by the world forgot;" and at the end of that time, when the first warm flush of autumn touched the sloping woods, there was a quiet wedding at the little church under the hill.

Gradually as time passed on, Sir Geoffrey recovered his usual flow of spirits, and was never known to have another "manifesta- tion." He burned all his books touching on the supernatural, and gradually came to view his conduct in a humorous light. In the course of time, he settled down as a model country gentleman, learned on the subject of short-horns and topdressing, and displaying a rooted aversion to spiritualism. It is whispered in the household—only it must not be mentioned—that he is getting stout, a state of things which, all things considered, is not to be regarded with in- credulity.

Nearly two years later, and sitting about the lawn before the grand old house were all our friends—Salvarini, mournful as usual, little altered since we saw him last; Max- well, jolly and hearty, looking with an air of ill-disguised pride at Enid, who was sit- ting in a basket-chair, with a little wisp of humanity in her arms, a new Personage—to use the royal phrase—but by no means an unimportant one. Lucrece was there, happy and gay; and Isodore, glorious Isodore, un- answerably lovely as she walked to and fro, followed by Salvarini's dog-like eyes. The baronet made up the party, and alas! truth must out, looking—but we will be charitable and say portly.

"How long are you going to stay with us, Isodore?" Enid asked. She would always be Isodore to them.

"Really, I cannot say, Enid. How long will you have me?"

"As long as you like to stay," Maxwell put in heartily.—"By the way, I suppose I am still a member of the League?"

"No, not now. Conditionally upon your promising never to reveal what you have seen and heard, you are free; Sir Geoffrey likewise.—Luigi here has resigned his mem- bership."

"I am so glad!" Enid cried. "I must come and kiss you.—Fred, come and hold baby for a moment."

"No, indeed"—with affected horror. "I should drop him down, and break him, or carry him upside down, or some awful tragedy."

"You are not fit to be the father of a beautiful boy; and everybody says he is the very image of you."

"I was considered a good-looking man once," said Maxwell with resignation. "No matter. But if that small animal there is a bit like me, may I"——

They all laughed at this, being light- hearted and in the mood to laugh at any- thing. Presently, they divided into little groups, Isodore and Luigi together. All her cold self-possession was gone now; she looked a very woman, as she stood there nervously plucking the leaves from the rose in her hand.

"Isodore—Genevieve"——

At this word she trembled, knowing scarcely what. "Yes, Luigi,"

"Five years ago, I stood by your side in the hour of your trouble, and you said some words to me. Do you remember what they were?"

"Yes, Luigi." The words came like a fluttering sigh.

"I claim that promise now. We are both free, heaven be praised! free as air, and no ties to bind us. Come?" He held out his arms, and she came shyly, shrink- ingly, towards them.

"If you want me," she said.

With one bound he was by her side, and drew her head down upon his breast. "And you are happy now, Genevieve?"

"Yes, I am happy. How can I be other- wise, with a good man's honest love?—Carlo, my brother, would you could see me now!"

"It is what he always wished—Let us go and tell the others."

So, taking her simply by the hand, they wandered out from the deepness of the wood, side by side, from darkness and despair, from the years of treachery and deceit, out into the light of a world filled with bright sunshine and peaceful, everlasting love.

[THE END.]

The Hygiene of Bathing.

In a short article published not very long ago in the Western Rural a writer recites the practical use of bathing, and does it in the emphatic language of the experienced physician, who knows from observation the effect of water in promoting health. A few changes adapts it to these columns:

Among all the appliances for health and comfort to mankind, we may safely say there is nothing so well-known, so useful and so comforting, and yet so carelessly performed or thoughtlessly neglected, as bathing. The skin of the human body, from head to foot, is a net-work of pores. One can not put a finger on a single place without covering several little openings, which ought always to be kept clear of obstructions. As evidence of the truth of this statement we need only to call to mind the great drops of sweat so often seen gathering on one's face and other parts of the body in warm weather—espec- ially during the time of severe exertion. These pores lead into minute tubes or chan- nels, that meander through the skin.

The dust which comes in contact with animals covered with hair is mostly kept out and the perspiration is conducted away from the pores of the skin by those hairs; hence, bathing is not so essential with them as with mankind, whose bodies are practically denuded of such protection. The glutinous mass of perspiration dust and filth, which in time gathers on the surface of the unwash- ed or uncleansed body, covers and clogs the pores, and often poisons the system. Fre- quent ablutions and an occasional immersion in water are thus desirable and often indis- pensable to health and comfort; consequent- ly, every family should have a convenient bath of some kind, not only for general neatness of person, but as a means of pre- serving health, and in many cases employed under the advice of a good physician.

In the long catalogue of diseases to which flesh is heir, scarcely one can be named in the treatment of which a bath is useless. To those blessed with good health, a bath, as a common-sense appliance, gives thrift and growth to healthy functions, a brightness and delightful serenity, a clearness of mind and bouyancy of spirit. It is certainly a blessing to both mind and body. For the mental worker, it is a nerve tonic. A thor- ough application of water of proper temper- ature will calm and give strength and tone to the system. The indoor laborer, who gets but a scanty supply of fresh air, needs a bath to obtain the skin invigorating elements of the open air.

The outdoor laborer—especially the farmer—who works with heroic energy all day long, unavoidably gathers on the entire surface of his body a complete prison-wall of dust and viscid perspiration; and when his day's work is done he needs then, more than any other thing, not only a wash, but a good bath to fit him for home society, his clean bed and refreshing sleep.

Every one needs a bath at times, and every human habitation should contain something for a complete immersion in water, and, since convenient and efficient portable baths at comparatively low figures are now exten- sively advertised for sale, there is little excuse for most people to be without this priceless benefit.

Why Call it a Street Railway?

The longest street railway in the world will be that which is to run between a num- ber of towns near Buenos Ayres. It will also be exceptional in that sleeping cars will be run on it for the convenience of through passengers. The sleeping cars and all the other equipments of the line are be- ing supplied by a Philadelphia firm. These sleeping cars are furnished with four berths each, which are made to roll up when not in use. The cars are furnished with lava- tories, water coolers linen presses and other conveniences, and are furnished throughout with mahogany. The other rolling stock comprises four double-decked open cars, twenty platform cars, twenty gondola cars, six refrigerator cars, four poultry cars furnished with coops, eight cattle cars, two derrick-cars for lifting heavy material, and 200 box cars.

JACOB'S PILLOW

The Stone of Scone and Its Legendary History Traced From Jacob's Dream to Victoria's Jubilee.

The "Lia Fail," the "Stone of Scone," the "Stone of Destiny," the "Pillow of Evi- dence" and "Jacob's Pillow" are the sev- eral names given to a stone of remarkable antiquity, which lies embedded beneath the seat of the coronation chair in Westminster Abbey, upon which Queen Victoria sat forty- nine years ago last Tuesday (June 28, 1838), when, as a slender and inexperienced girl of nineteen, she went through with becoming grace the pompous ceremony of coronation as Queen of Great Britain and Ireland, and again, less than two weeks ago, was occu- pied by her during a portion of the cere- monies of the jubilee celebration of her ac- cession to the throne, a year and a week prior to the formality of being crowned. The chair itself is a relic of great interest, but in that marvelous Abbey, so crowded with legends and memories, it scarcely ob- tains more than a passing glance from the visitor. That rude chair, once gilt and em- blazoned with color, contains the old cor- onation-stone of Scotland; a sacred stone, which, according to antiquarian lore, Fergus, the first king of Scotland, brought from Ire- land as a palladium of his race. It is called the "Stone of Destiny," because a prophetic rune has attached itself to it for some 2,400 years. The verse is in the Irish-Celtic dialect, and was rendered by Sir Walter Scott thus:

"Unless the fates are faithless grown,
And prophet's voice be vain,
Where'er is found the sacred stone
The Scottish race shall reign"

Some Irish scholars maintain that the word scuite in the last line, translated by Sir Walter "Scottish," is derived from neither Scots nor Scythians, and that its meaning as given in old Irish dictionaries is a "wander- er," thus carrying the prophecy far back of the time of the first Scottish king. Again, while the word lia is Irish for stone, the word phail is Hebrew, and is a scriptural word of deep theological import. It signifies "wonderful" and is frequently used in Holy Writ to convey to the mind of man the in- scrutable character of the fact, and thought, and power of the Godhead. Literally, there- fore, the words mean the "Stone Wonder- ful."

Tracing the stone back to Ireland, it is re- lated that on its arrival in that country (on the coast of which the ship was wrecked that brought it) the Ulster prince, who was the Heremonn-elect, was crowned B. C. 580. He was on the point of being inaugurated under some particular cromlech which was supposed to have supernatural powers of in- dicating which out of several aspirants was a man favored by Baal, but affected by the extraordinary story of this stone and the promise, like that made to Judah, of a "per- petual sceptre," conveyed in the Druidical rune above quoted, he desired at once to be crowned upon it, and accordingly this Ulster King, Eochaid, of Clothair Crofinn, was in- auguated Heremonn of Tara. The under- stood meaning of the rhyme is that so long as one of the race duly confirmed to mon- archical right on that stone shall have pos- session of the stone, the combination will se- cure to that race the right, and assure the possession, of monarchy.

According to bardic tradition the stone was said to emit mysterious sounds when touched by the rightful heir to the crown, and when an Irish colony invaded North Britain and founded the Scottish monarchy there in the sixteenth century the Lia Fail was carried thither to give more solemnity to the coronation of the king, and more security to his dynasty.

The legends of this venerable stone, how- ever, go back to a period long antedating its first use in Ireland. Tradition avers that it is the identical stone upon which the patri- arch Jacob rested his head on the plain of Luz, when he beheld the vision of the lad- der, and which he "set up for a pillar and poured oil upon it." And again, Jacob refers to it when he says "And this stone which I have set up for a pillar shall be God's house." (Gen. xxvii.) It is also re- ferred to in connection with the stone borne in procession to the threshing-floor of Araue- nah, the Jubusite, to install it as the chief corner-stone of the future Temple of Mount Zion, and referred to by the Prophet King in Psalms, cxviii., 22, 23.

It is said to have rested in past ages in Spain, and Gathelus, the Spanish King, a contemporary of Romulus, is credited with having sent it along with his son when he invaded Ireland. Edward I. took it from Scone Abbey, in Scotland, together with the Scottish crown and sceptre and solemnly of- fered them at the shrine of Edward the Confesser, at Westminaterin, 1297. In the reign of Edward III. it was agreed that this famous stone should be restored to the Scots, but when the trophy was about to be remov- ed from Westminster Abbey, the mob of London rose in a riotous manner and pre- vented its removal. The relic is a specimen of old red sandstone, as was determined when a small splinter was accidentally broken off while fitting up the Abbey in 1838. An iconoclastic writer asserts that in color, texture and granular qualities it is identical with the sandstone which Scoen of Palace is built, and is a veritable product of Scotland itself, dug from the same quarry or bed of rock as that of which the modern palace is built.

In the wardrobe account of King Edward in 1299 there is the entry of a payment to "Walton, the painter, for a step to the foot of the chair, in which the stone of Scotland was placed, near the altar of Edward, in Westminster Abbey." Further evidence of the veneration in which it has been held for centuries is afforded by a remark of King James I. at the council table at Whitehall, April 21, 1613. He said: "There is double cause why I should be careful of the welfare of that people (the Irish); first, as King of England, by reason of the long possession the Crown of England hath had of that land, and also as King of Scotland; for the ancient Kings of Scotland are descended from the Kings of Ireland, and they have all been crowned on that stone." Dean Stanley, in his "Memorials of Westmins- ter Abbey," says that precious relic, as King James I. deemed it, "is the one principal monument which binds together the whole empire." "The iron rings," he adds, "the battered surface, the crack which has all but rent its solid mass asunder, bear witness to its long migrations."

Whether there be sense in the legend of the stone; whether it came from Egypt or the Holy Land; whether or no the pro- phecy spoken of be a reality, or dream, or myth; whether the stone be called the Stone of Destiny, or Jacob's Pillow, or Lia Fail, i. e., the "Stone Wonderful," there is no doubt of one thing, it is a Pillar of Witness. As a throne of an empire kings have been crowned upon it in succession for nearly 2,500 years. The sceptre of Judah has passed from Eochaid of Ulster, the crowned Here- mon of the Irish Federation, B. C. 580, through Fergus, his lineal descendant, who took it from Ireland to Scotland, and on it was crowned at Iona first King of the Scots, A. D. 530; through Kenneth II. crowned King of Scots and Picts, A. D. 787, at Scone in Pictia; through the monarchs of England to James I., crowned King of Great Britain and Ireland; and thence down to Queen Victoria, as descended from the grand- daughter of James I., the last who has re- ceived anointing on it.

The Discoverer of Spectacles.

Fewer inventions have conferred a greater blessing on the human race than that which assists impaired vision. It is impossible to say how many there are at the present day whose lives would be almost valueless were it not for the use of spectacles. Indeed, Dr. Jonson rightly expressed his surprise, that such a benefactor as the discoverer of spec- tacles should have been regarded with in- difference, and found no worthy biographer to celebrate his ingenuity. Unfortunately, however, his name is a matter of much un- certainty; and, hence, a grateful posterity have been prevented bestowing upon his memory that honor which it has so richly merited. But it may be noted that popular opinion has long ago pronounced in favor of Spina, a Florentine monk, as the rightful claimant, although some are in favor of Rog- er Bacon. Monsieur Spoon, in his "Re- searches Curieuses d'Antiquite," fixes the date of invention of spectacles between the years 1280 and 1311, and says that Alex- ander de Spina, having seen a pair made by some other person who was unwilling to communicate the secret of their construction ordered a pair for himself, and found them so useful that he cheerfully and promptely made the invention public. According to an Italian antiquary, the person to whom Spina was indebted for his information was Salvi- no, who died in the year 1318, and he quotes from a manuscript in his possession an epi- taph which records the circumstance: "Here lies Salvino Armoto d'Armati, of Florence, the inventor of spectacles. May God pardon his sins The year 1318,"

"I Will Lift Mine Eyes Unto the Hills."

BY BETH.

Down in a valley, all darkness? Oh no!
Over the hill-tops bright sun-gleams do peep,
Lighting till mid-day the path at thy feet,
Lingering with softest caress—loath to go,
Inviting you to lift your tired eyes, as they fade,
Even to those Hill-tops, whence cometh your aid.

Step along lightly then, why need'st thou fear?
Turn never backward in faithless alarm.
Everywhere searching for God—dread not harm.
Pause not to drop on the flowers e'en a tear,
Holding thy hand, there is One guides thy way.
E'en at thy feet though the waters may roll,
Never now shall they roll o'er thy soul,
Since from the Hill-tops thy Master holds sway.

Rachel's Children.

BY L. A. MORRISON, TORONTO.

"A voice was heard in Rama, weeping and great mourning, Rachel weeping for her children; and she would not be comforted, because they are not."
Matt. II: 18. (Revision.)

In Rama, of old, a voice is heard
Like the sobbing waves on a weary strand;
The Soul of the list'ning Earth is stirr'd
With the wail from the "Prophet's land,"

A voice of weeping and bitter pain;
Bethlehem's mothers, in anguish sore,
Send up to Heaven the sad refrain:—
That its "comfort can come no more."

The harsh decree of a cruel king
Hath taken the babe at the mother's breast
And the laughing darlings, with lightsome spring,
Who were lights of the glad home-nest.

And the headsman's sword, and soldier's spear
Hath scatter'd and mangled them o'er the plain:
Rachel is weeping for children dear
Whom the minions of Rome hath slain.

They die for Him, whom they never knew;
These precious lambs were enswathed in blood;
Their martyred lives were a seal most true
That Jesus Christ was the Son of God.

They died that this lowly Christmight live,
Who died for them in the after days—
And evermore He to each doth give A "Martyr's Palm" and Victor's bays.

A Woodland Tragedy.

BY LAURA ROSAMOND WHITE.

A traveler, fleeing from a forest fire,
Sought refuge in a cooling stream near by,
From whence he watched the conflagration dire:
Great trees, like giant torches, lit the sky
With ruddy flame, and 'mid them, in the wood,
Wreathed by a withered vine, a dead pine stood.

The traveler, hearing plaintive notes of woe,
Gazed upward and beheld, high in the air,
A fishhawk circling; her dear brood below
Was menaced and, despite her utmost care,
Must perish if a red spark touched the crest
Of the tall tree where she had made her nest.

Soon cruel tapers turned the twining vine
Into a glowing ribbon to the peak
Of the majestic and enkindling pine,
And the affrighted fishhawk with her beak
Drew burning sticks from the imperiled nest,
Then covered her weak fledglings with her breast.

And mid the conflagration's fiery stings,
He who was gaping from the crystal wave
Saw that she lifted not her sheltering wings,
But died for love—a martyr true and brave.
A soulless martyr, by sore love distressed,
Till death had not a terror for her breast.

No knowledge she of shining "crown,"
And "instinct" taught her she must die with those
She hid beneath her bosom's rusty down.
Yet stilly, as if for a night's repose,
She chose with the sweet boon of life to part,
With her belov'd ones 'neath her burning heart!

After the fire had spent its mighty strength,
And black and level was the woody place.
The traveler journeyed on and met at length
Women and men of his most splendid race
Fairest and best; full many a tale of bliss
And grief he heard, but never one like this:

One hopeless for the morrow, with no art
Of gracious faith to cheer and soothe and charm,
With nothing but a bird's unthinking heart
To give heroic courage 'mid alarm;
Scorning the ether and the earth to be
A presence tender to her progeny.

Ah! if our Father's eye is watching all
The universe, he saw the scorching play
Of elements. Christ said: "A sparrow's fall"
Is "heeded." I have finer faith to-day;
Because this thought has taught me that above
Our records are God's chronicles of Love.

The English House of Commons recog- nises no reports of its debates, and has al- ways declared that to report them is a breach of its privileges. This is still the existing law, although these reports have been made without hindrance for more than one hun- dred years.

The following simple preparation will be found useful for cleaning and polishing old furniture: Over a moderate fire put a per- fectly clean vessel. Into this drop two ounces of white or yellow wax. When melted, re- move from the fire, and add four ounces pure turpentine; then stir until cool, when it is ready for use. The mixture brings out the original colour of the wood, adding a lustre equal to that of varnish.

A HARD MAN TO KILL.

He Has Died Three Times Already and Is Ready to do it Again.

There is a man in New York who is a cause of anxiety to his friends, but not for the reason that he is an ordinary dealer in stocks and a scalper of straddles. His name is C. K. Eastlan, and he is interesting be- cause he is likely to fall dead at any moment. He has died three times so far, and he dosen't look as though he had yet done the best in that direction. He is fully aware of his pleasant little peculiarity, and is unable to explain it to anybody. The first time he died was when he was 30 years old, and that was about 16 years ago. He was living in Norwich, Conn. He had suffered with chronic indigestion and was weak and feeble. One evening he was out walking after an unusually hearty supper, consisting of a cracker and a cup of tea, when he sud- denly fell on the sidewalk. The people who came to his assistance found him to all appearances dead. The doctors declared that he had died of heart disease, and pre- parations for the funeral were begun the next day. His friends came and looked at his corpse and remarked what a sad case it was, and the local papers published full obituaries. On the second night he astonish- ed the watchers by sitting up in his coffin and asking for a drink. When he saw how close he had come to a premature burial he came near dying in earnest.

He lived on regularly enough for four years after that. He was down in New Mexico looking after a mine in the summer of 1875, and it was then that he next suspended animation. The New Mexicans never had an idea that he was alive, and as the weather is very warm there he would infallibly have been buried if he hadn't been somewhat expeditious about coming to life. Nobody knew him down there, and he was laid out in an undertaker's shop in Santa Fe that served as a morgue. When he came to and wanted to know what he was doing there, he scared the undertaker's assistant into fits. His next exploit occurred in Phila- delphia one hot day two years ago last summer. He was supposed to have been sunstruck. He carries in his pockets now a carefully written notice containing his address and requesting that he be taken there in case of accident. All his relatives and friends have been notified not to let him be buried without having a good chance to come to life again if he can. But with all his precautions, he is haunted by a foreboding that somebody will bury him alive yet. The doctors don't know exactly what is the matter with him, but he has made arrangements with one of them to find out, if possible, when he really does die.

Death by Precipitation.

Death by precipitation is one of the oldest modes of capital punishment. It prevailed widely over the earth in primitive times. Traces and traditions of it are found here and there in different countries, and in lo- calities far apart. We can easily understand how this should be so, for in ancient times towns and villages were almost exclusively built upon elevated rocks and heights, for the sake of security. The nucleus of the town was usually a large isolated rock, such as the rock of the Parthenon at Athens, the rock of the Palatine at Rome, the rock of the Chateau at Nice, and the rock of Zion at Jerusalem. Precipitation among the Jews was one form of stoning, which was the re cognized legal punishment for blasphemy. Indeed "stoning," as the Mishna informs us, was regarded as merely a term for break- ing the culprit's neck. It was made imper- ative that "the house of stoning," as the place from which the criminal was cast down was called, should be at least "two storeys high"; and it was the duty of the chief witness to percipitate the criminal with his own hand. If he was not killed at once by the fall, the second witness had to cast a stone on his head; and if he still survived, the whole people were to join together in putting an end to him with a shower of stones. This precipitation constituted an essential and humane feature in the act of stoning. Both modes we must regard as an exceedingly primitive custom, the most nat- ural method in which a rude people would wreak their vengeance, or inflict deserved punishment. It was of a piece with the pre- historic custom of casting stones upon the place where the dead were buried, and so piling up a cairn there.

Only Suggested the Death.

Law is a very queer thing. Sometimes the suggestion of a thing is enough, and other times even absolute proof is no good. Now when a man dies while a suit is pending the attorney on his side can procure a postpone- ment by saying he's dead. That is how sen- sible people would get it, but the law calls it "suggesting the death of the plaintiff or defendant." An attorney some time ago was making that common fight against just- ice by postponement tactics. He had about got to the end of his tether and he felt very blue about it. It seemed inevitable that the case must be tried. He was on hand when the case was called. A bright idea occurred to him. He got up and said:—"May it please the court, I suggest the death of the defendant and ask an adjournment for two weeks." "Granted." When the case came up again there was a row. The attorney was called up. "What do you mean, sir," asked the court, "by saying that the defen- dant was dead, when he is here in court alive and well?" "I did not say he was dead may it please your honour. I merly took the law for it, which provides that counsel may suggest the death of the defendant," I suggested it.

Scotland street tunnel, Edinburgh, which has for many years been closed up, has been leased from the North British Railway Company, and is being utilized for mush- room culture. Over 200 yards of mush room beds have been planted.

A Persian never takes a dose of physic until he has previously obtained a favourable answer from heaven in the shape of an omen. Should he have the potion at his lips, if he happens to sneeze it is enough; the physic is thrown to the dogs, and another practi- tioner is called in.

Bream are much eaten in France, fivepence or sixpence a pound being the usual price in country towns. The old French proverb, "Ouï a breme peut bramer ses amis," which Izaak Walton translates, "He that hath breams in his pond is able to bid his friend welcome," proves that in France a bream, like good wine, "needs no bush."

Jas. S, Freeborn,

——M. D. Ch. M.; L. K. & Q. C. P. I.——

Doctor of Medicine and master of Surgery Victoria. Univ. Licentiate of King's and Queen's College of Physicians in Ireland. Member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Ont. Formerly acting Surgeon of B. Battery, R. C. A. Quebec. Late resident of the Rotunda Hospitals, (Lying-in & Gynæcological) Dublin.

——OFFICE——

STEPHEN'S DRUG STORE.

Drs. Sproule & Brodie,

——PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS,——

MARKDALE.

DR. SPROULE'S office Turner's Drug Store

DR. BRODIE'S office Mathew s block.

P. McCullough.

BARRISTER, SOLICITOR, &c

OFFICE—OVER McFARLAND'S STORE,

MARKDALE.

Money to Loan.

MASSON & MASSON,

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, &c.

OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block, Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week.

J. MASSON, Q. C. S. MASSON. W. MASSON.

N. B.—Private and Company's funds to invest at from 6 to 8 per cent

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

WILLIAM STUART,

KIMBERLEY,

Issuer of Marriage Licences. Money to Loan on Real Estate at low rates.

A few Farms for sale. Terms easy.

NOTICE.

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.

will visit Markdale for the practice of his profession on Thursday and Friday following the first Monday in each month, and at Flesherton the following day, Saturday.

MARKDALE HOUSE,

MARKDALE, - - ONT.

J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

ISAAC STINSON.

Builder and Contractor

In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.

Estimates given. All work guaranteed.

Orders by mail promptly attended to.

329 Residence, MARKDALE.

W. C. RICHARDS,

BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT. Markdale.

124ly

R. J. SPROULE,

FLESHERTON.

Conveyancer, Appraiser, Valuator and Money Lender. Deeds, Mortgages, Leases and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice. Charges very low. Apply to

R. J. SPROULE,
Money Lender & Postmaster, Flesherton.

DR. FOWLER'S

EXTRACT OF WILD

STRAWBERRY

CURES

CHOLERA

CHOLERA INFANTUM

DIARRHŒA,

AND

ALL SUMMER COMPLAINTS

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS.

HAVE YOU

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Jaundice, Headache, Dizziness, Pain in the Back, Costiveness, or any disease arising from a deranged liver, DR. CHASE'S LIVER CURE will be found a sure and certain remedy.

NATURE'S REMEDY

The unqualified success of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure in Liver Complaint rests solely with the fact that it is compounded from nature's well-known liver regulators, MANDRAKE AND DANDELION, combined with many other invaluable roots, barks and herbs, having a powerful effect on the Kidneys, Stomach, Bowels and Blood.

500,000 SOLD

Over one-half million of Dr. Chase's Recipe Books were sold in Canada alone. We want every man, woman and child who is troubled with Liver Complaint to try this excellent remedy.

SOMETHING NEW. GIVEN AWAY FREE

Wrapped around every bottle of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure is a valuable Household Medical Guide and Recipe Book (84 pages), containing over 200 useful recipes pronounced by medical men and druggists as invaluable, and worth ten times the price of the medicine.

TRY CHASE'S CATARRH CURE. A safe and positive remedy. Price, 25 cents.

TRY CHASE'S KIDNEY AND LIVER PILLS. 25 cts. per box.

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS

EDMANSON & CO., Sole Agents, Bradford

Markdale Roller Mill.

FARMERS HAVING No. 1 WHEAT and preferring flour from their own wheat, can get it by bringing twenty bushels or more.

Flour always on Hand

Flour $3.00 to $4.30 per. bbl.

SHORTS, per ton - $12.00
BRAN, " - 10.00

The highest market price paid for Fall and Spring wheat.

J. W. FORD.

Public Notice.

To all whom it may concern.

I R. L. Stephen the Druggist of Markdale have been appointed agent for JOHNSON'S celebrated Tonic and nervine. JOHNSON'S little liver Pills, and JOHNSON'S all healing White Ointment. The nervine is the very best in the market, in all diseases caused by poverty of blood, for Nervousness, Hysteria, and the PALENESS of Complexion so often noticed in female's, loss of appetite and general debility. In conjunction wth the Liver Pills, it is he very best for all diseasss arrising from Topid liver or bad stomach

The White Oinment is the very best in the market for Salt Rheume, Barbers Itch, Pimples, Chafs, Burns, Scalds, and all Skin diseases of a scrofulous nature. Try these fine remedies and you will not be disappointed.

For sale at R. L. STEPHEN'S the druggist Markdale, Ont.

WM. G. GUTHRIE,

Plain & Ornamental Plasterer

MARKDALE.

Arches, Cornices, Centre Flowers, and all kinds of plain and ornamental plastering executed at cheapest rates. Calsomining Lime Washing and Repairs promptly attended to.

365

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of

School Furniture,

Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness, wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.

181 ANDREW McGILL.

MONEY TO LOAN.

ON real estate security, at low rate of interest, no commission charged. Business Strictly Confidential,

J. S, BLACK,
190 Pomona, P. O.

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT No. 24, con. 4, N. D. R. Glenelg, 100 acres, will be sold cheap and on easy terms of payment, for further particulars apply on the premises, or by letter to

J. S, BLACK,
190-tf. Pomona P. O.

Markdale Woolen Mill.

Custom Carding, Weaving, Fulling, Dyeing and cloth dressing, done in a workmanlike manner and on very short notice.

First Class Cotton Warp

supplied at the lowest possible rates.

A call solicited.

Terms strictly cash or wool.

Sept. 28, 1886 F. J. RITCHIE.

IT IS A WELL KNOWN FACT

——THAT——

McCOLL'S

"LARDINE,"

is the best known, and most reliable MACHINE OIL in the Dominion; Farmer's, Thresher's and Mill Owner's, will find it decidedly to their advantage to insist upon getting the "Genuine Lardine" when they ask for it, owing to so much inferior oil being sold under the same name by unscrupulous dealers. We are the sold manufacturers of the "Genuine Lardine" every barrel branded.

McCOLL BRO'S, & CO.

For sale in Markdale at Haskett Bro's Hardware Store. 347-73

British Worm Syrup!

British Worm Syrup!!

THE BEST FOR CHILDREN

—AT—

H. PARKER'S,

DURHAM.

Collingwood and Georgian Bay Line.

Royal Mail,

In connection with the Northern and North-Western R'ys, and the Grand Trunk R'y.

Str. PACIFIC, Captain P. M. Campbell.
Str. ATLANTIC. Captain R. D. Foote.
Str. NORTHERN BELLE, Capt. W. J. Bassett.

The fine new Steamers "PACIFIC" & "ATLANTIC" will run as follows during the season (weather permitting.)

Leaving Collingwood at 1 p. m.; Meaford at 3 p. m.; Owen Sound at 8 p. m.; and Wiarton at 11:45 p. m.; every

Wednesday and Saturday.

For Killarney, Manitowaning, Little Current, Kagawong, Gore Bay, Spanish River, Serpent River, Algoma Mills, Blind River, Thessalon, Bruce Mines, Hilton, St. Joseph's Island, Garden River, and Sault St. Marie.

The Saturday Steamer only will call at Cockburn Island.

MACKINAW.—During the summer season the above steamers will continue the trip on to the Island of Mackinaw making six full days of a round trip at a cost of $12.00 only including meals and berth.

For information as to freight and fares. Appply to any Agent of the above Railways, the Pursers on board the steamers, or to the Great Northern Transit Co., Collingwood.

THOS. LONG, CHAS. CAMERON,
Secretary. Manager

New Tailor.

Will Stoddart, late of England and Jersy City, U. S. begs to inform the citizens of MARKDALE and surrounding community, that he has opened a TAILORING SHOP over Mr. W. J. McFarland's Store, where he is prepared to do all work entrusted to him in the Latest and Nobbiest Styles; as I will inspect all work before leaving the Shop, customers may rely on having work turned out first-class in every particular; trusting that I may receive a fair share of the public patronage

I remain,
Faithfully your's,
WILL STODDART.

Markdale, March 14th, 1887.

BE SURE & GET YOUR

PUMPS,

—FROM—

J. T. QUINN,

MARKDALE,

He makes as good a pump as there is in the market, and at the lowest possible prices, besides it is so convenient for getting repairs besides when buying from a distance.

Have some style about you and support home enterprise by buying from Quinn.

WE WANT!

100 GOOD MEN at once, to sell for the Fonthill Nurseries (largest in Canada over 465 acres) steady employment and no lost time, liberal commission or salary, best advantages; splended outfit furnished free any pushing man can succeed. Apply for terms to,

STONE & WELLINGTON,
Toronto, On

PROF. LOW'S SULPHUR SOAP is a delightful toilet luxury as well as a good curative for skin disease,

FARM FOR SALE.

Being lot 5, south east quarter of 6 and and west half 6, con. 11, Euphrasia, will be sold cheap and on easy terms, also Saw Mill on lot 5, in good running order. For further particulars apply to

JAMES STINSON,
358-61* Markdale

WEAVING.

Having returned to Markdale, in order to be more convenient for my customers, I beg to announce that I am now prepared to do all kinds of Custom Weaving. Residence old stand, opposite Presbyterian Church.

318 ARCH. BOYD.

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT 131 con 3 west of T. & S. Rd. Artemesia, 50 acres, about 20 acres clear of stumps and stones, balance good hardwood bush. Five miles from Markdale and four from Flesherton. For further particulars apply to A. S. Thompson, Flesherton P. O. or J. J. Thompson, Orilla.

342 ly

The Markdale Standard

Is issued every Thursday, by

C. W. RUTLEDGE, Markdale, Ont.,

TERMS—$1 per year in advance; $1.50 if not paid within six months.

Professional and business cards one inch space and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3 MO.
Whole column.....	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
Half column.....	27 00	15 00	10 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00	6 00
Two inch space.....	7 00	4 00
Three inch space	10 00	5 00

Casual advertisements 8 cents per line first insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.

Editorial notices, or notices in local column 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents each subsequent insertion.

Stray animals &c, advertised 3 weeks for $1

No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid except at the option of the publisher.

——x——

JOB PRINTING.

THE STANDARD office has a splendid equipment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. All orders filled with dispatch.

Markdale Church Directory.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

Services every Sabbath at 10:30 a. m. Sabbath School at 2:30 p. m. Prayer Meeting every Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. Rev. A. Wilson, Pastor; A. McFarland, S. S. Superintendent.

CHRIST CHURCH.

Services every Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p m. Rev. Jas. Ward, Incumbent. Sabbath School 2:30. W. J. Ford, Superintendent.

METHODIST CHURCH.

Services every Sunday at 10:30 a. m and 7 p. m. Sunday School at 2:30. Prayer Meeting every Thursday evening from 8 to 9, Rev. Geo. Buggin Pastor; G. S. Bowes. S. S. Superintendent. Ladies' Aid in connection: Mrs. T. Hill, Secretary.

Strangers and visitors always welcome

Parties desiring sittings will apply to C. W. Rutledge, Pew Steward.

Society Directory.

Markdale C. O. O. F. No. 78. meets every alternate Monday evening at 8 o'clock in their Hall, Rae's block. Visiting bretbren welcome.

Markdale A. O. U. W. No. 141 meets in their Hall, Rae's block, every alternate Monday evening at o'clock. A visit from brethren of neighboring lodges solicited.

MARKDALE L. O. L. No. 1045 meets in their Hall on Friday on or before full moon each month. Thos. Elliott, Master; W. J. Blakely, Secretary.

Victoria R. B. Preceptory, No. 282, Meets in Lodge Room of Markdale L. O. L. No. 1045, first Friday in each month. Visiting Sir Knights always welcome. Jas. Brodie W. P.; Thos. Elliott, Registrar.

Post-Office Directory.

MARKDALE.

The P. O. will be opened from 8 o'clock a. m. to 7 p. m. every working day.

Mails closed as follows, viz:

C. P. R., going North, 11:40 a m, and 7 p m
" " South, 3:30 p m, and 7 p m

TRAVERSTON.

Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday 12:30 noon.

HARKAWAY.

Friday, 12:30 noon.

For registered letters and money orders, fifteen minutes earlier than above. The P. O. will be open on Holidays from 9 to 9:30 a. m., and half an hour after mails arrive.

W. J. McFARLAND, P. M.

Directory.

MARKDALE VILLAGE OFFICIALS.

Police Trustees—E. Davis, A. Turner, and S. J. Coleman.

Public School Trustees—B. Coleman, J. Lyons, W. A. Brown. B. Coleman, Sec.

COUNTY OFFICIALS.

Judge, H. McPherson, Owen Sound.
Deputy-Judge, S. J. Lane, Owen Sound.
Sheriff, C. H. Moore, Owen Sound.
Clerk of Peace, W. Armstrong, O. Sound.
Clerk, John Gale, Owen Sound.
Treasurer, S. J. Parker, Owen Sound.
County Warden, N, Reid, Owen Sound
Registrar, N., B. McKnight, "
" S., Thos. Lauder, Durham.
Revising Barrister, North, Judge McPherson, Owen Sound.
Revising Barrister, South & East, Judge Lane, Owen Sound.
M. P., North, Jas. Masson, Owen Sound.
M. P., East, T. S. Sproule, M.D., Markdale
M. P., South, Geo Landerkin, M. D., Hanover.
M. P. P., North, D. Creighton, Owen Sound
M. P. P., East, Capt. Rorke, Clarksburg
M. P. P., South, John Blyth, Orchard.

DIVISION COURT CLERKS

No. 1. John Stephens, Owen Sound.
" 2. David Jackson, Durham.
" 3. Thos. Plunkett, Meaford.
" 4. Thos. J. Rorke, Heathcote.
" 5. J. W. Armstrong, Flesherton.
" 6. John McDonald, Chatsworth.

Monthly Fairs.

Orangeville—The second Thursday in each month.
Dundalk—Tuesday before Orangeville.
Flesherton—Monday before Orangeville.
Markdale—Saturday before Orangeville.
Durham—Third Tuesday in each month.
Chatsworth—Monday before Durham.
Holland Centre—Saturday before Chatsworth
Pricesville—Monday before Durham.
Hanover—Monday before Durham

DISTRICT DOINGS.

A SYNOPSIS OF COUNTY AND DISTRICT NEWS FROM OUR EXCHANGES PREPARED FOR STANDARD READERS.

Never want anything you can't get you will always get what you want.

FOR NETTLE RASH, Summer Eruptions and general toilet purposes use Low's Sulphur Soap.

Dundalk Brass Band purpose procuring new uniform.

AROUSE THE LIVER when torpid with Nationol Pills, a good anti-bilious cathartic, sugar-coated.

PHYSICIANS are usually averse to proprietary medicines, Nasal Balm is a specific for cold in the head and catarrh, and has the faith and evidence that it will cure these troubles, we ask and court a fair trial of its discovery, and a full investigation at your hands.

ALL WELL PLEASED.—The children like Dr. Low's Pleasant Worm Syrup and parents rejoice over its virtue.

TAMARAC.—A cold will often cause an irritation, dryness and soreness inside the throat. The first dose of Tamarac Elixir will give relief.

ARE YOU GOING TO TRAVEL?—Don't forget a supply of that Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. It is a superior remedy for sickness, and a positive cure for all bowel complaints induced by bad water, change of diet, or of climate. Whether at home or abroad, it should be kept at hand in case of emergency.

Traveller to bus driver—You should have a horn to let people know you are coming. Driver—I had one before leaving the barn.

IN GOOD REPUTE.—James McMurray writing from Kinsale, says: "B. B. B. is a remedy for diseases of the blood, liver and kidneys, has an excellent reputation in this locality. I have used it, and speak from experience, as well as observation. It is the only medicine I want, and I advise others afflicted to try it."

Hello, bones, what are you agoin' to do with yourself this hot day? I'm going to Askin's on biz. What's wrong? Oh, nothing much, business is dead and I'm going to make arrangements for the last rites.

GREAT GAIN.—"I used a great deal of Carlton's medicine for kidney complaint during five years, was getting worse all the time until I tried B. B. B. I took three bottles gained in weight from 130 to 159 lbs. I highly recommend Burdock Blood Bitters to be a good medicine." Thus testifies John Walton, of Springfield, N.B.

It is wonderful how polite men are in summer. They even lift their hats to the brakes.

A GOOD ACT.—"As a cure for all summer complaints I highly recommend Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, having always used it with the best results. I have also been thanked for recommending it." William Haw, Ancaster, Ont,

It was an editor who once characterized "gent" as being the vulgar fraction of a gentleman.

AFTER LONG YEARS.—"I was troubled with liver complaint for a number of years, finding no cure. I tried B. B. B. I took five bottles, and am perfectly cured, strong and hearty." Mrs. Maria Askett, Alma,

Books are so cheap now that the poorest people can buy and own them, and the richest can borrow and keep them.

MARVELOUS.—One dose of Dr. Chase's Liver cure will cure Sick Headache. Dizziness, and Sour Stomach. 1 to 2 bottles are warranted to cure Liver Complaint, Indigestion and Biliousness.

It is just announced that the strawberry crop has been killed. In some cases—boxes—sunstroke was followed by mortification setting in, but in general the death was due to consumption.

Don't use any more nauseous purgatives such as Pills Salts &c., when you can get in Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters a medicine that moves the Bowels gently, cleansing all impurities from the system and rendering the Blood pure and cool. Sold by all Druggists. tf

WHO THE REAL SUFFERER WAS.—"Do you suffer much from cold feet?" inquired the shoe merchant, with interest, as he complied with the lady's request and showed her the thickest-soled shoes he had in the store. "She suffer?" broke in her husband impetuously. Great Scott! She suffer! Not much. I'm the victim; I'm the one that has to suffer—George!" said the lady. That was all she said, but George seemed to understand, and there was a silence that was not broken until the merchant observed in a deferential and funeral way that it looked as if there was going to be some kind of a storm if the wind didn't change.—[Chicago Tribune.

DANGEROUS FITS are often caused by worms. Freeman's Worm Powders destroy worms.

It is stated that $11,000,000 worth of chewing gum is sold annually in the United States. The American girl is a great talker and it's use between times keeps her jaws in working order.—[Washington Hatchet.

BE ON YOUR GUARD.

Don't allow a cold in the head to slowly and surely run into Catarrh, when you can be cured for 25c. by using Dr, Chase's Catarrh Cure. A few applications cure insipient catarrh; 1 to 2 boxes cures ordinary catarrh 1 to 5 boxes is guaranteed to cure chronic catarrh. Try it. Only 25c. and sure cure. 335 tf Sold by all druggists.

Markdale Standard

"HEW TO THE LINE, LET THE CHIPS FALL WHERE THEY MAY."

SEVENTH YEAR.—No. 370. MARKDALE, ONT., AUGUST 4, 1887. C. W. RUTLEDGE, Proprietor.

—: AT :—

RUSSELL'S

—Noted Jewelery Store,—

FLESHERTON,

will be found the most complete stock of Watches, Clocks, Jewelery, Silverware, Spex, &c., in this part of the country.

Call and see those watches they are selling at $12.00 bearing warrants for three and a half years, while other dealers are asking $15.00 for the same article. P. S. Bartlett, 3 oz. coin silver case for $16.00 while they are selling elsewhere for $17.50. Other dealers cannot compete with us and they know it. We cannot help them being annoyed at our terrible low prices; we must give the public the benefit of our close buying.

☞ Just Note a few prices.

A fine Nickle Alarm Clock for actually only $2.00 bearing a warrant for two years. Your choice of over 20 fine plated chains for only $1.60; Just think of it. Fine walnut clocks from $2.35 upward. Brooches, Ear-Rings, Ladies' Chains, Cuff-Buttons, Scarf-Pins, at equally low prices.

Remember if you want your Watch or Clock repaired properly by a workman, Russell's is the only place.

All orders by mail promptly attended to at

RUSSELL'S Noted Jewelry Store,

FLESHERTON.

Local and Other Items.

Notices in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

NOTICE.—Correspondence, communications, Advertisements, &c., must be in this office by noon on Tuesday to insure publication that week.

Tsot.

And dry.

But pleasant at night

School commences on Monday the 15th.

Teachers will now count the days until their vacation ends.

The hum of the threshing machine may now be heard.

Every man begins life alike, without a shirt on his back.

The Meaford Mirror editor has been treated to ripe tomatoes by a patron.

Smith, the barber, will be at Flesherton next Monday, Aug. 8th, fair day.

The noon train Wednesday was nearly 2 hours late; it is said the engin got sunstruck, causing the delay.

The brick work on Andrew Fogarty's house is well advanced and will likely be completed next week.

Georgetown Junction station has been done away with, causing extra inconvenience and expense to passengers changing roads.

Notwithstanding the abundance of laborsaving harvest machinery, harvest laborers are in great demand.

There's no limit to the number of picnics now. It would be impossible to report them all, so we "let 'em slide."

Large numbers of cattle, sheep and hogs are being bought up and shipped by our dealers.

The brick work on the new Presbyterian church at Boyd's corners, 9th line, Euphrasia, will be about completed this week.

The New Presbyterian church at Proton Station, will be opened next Sabbath, and a tea-meeting will be held the Monday evening following.

Anniversary services will be held in Inistioge Methodist church on Sunday, the 14th inst. Rev. Geo. Buggin, of Markdale, District Chairman, will conduct the services.

Saturday is a busy day with Smith, the barber, and he would esteem it a favor if his many customers would call some other day for hair cutting.

Cliff & Sons, of Durham, shipped to Montreal last week, seventeen hundred dollars worth of manufactured goods, being the first instalment of a ten thousand dollar order; so says the Chronicle.

On Tuesday the 26th, ult., James A Warling, son of Mr. John Warling, Meaford Road, who was employed in the shingle mill of the "eclipse" saw mill, had one of his hands severely cut with the butting saw at which he was working, his thumb severed and his two front fingers badly mangled.

A great number of fine barns have been this season erected in the neighborhood of this village. If our patrons will assist us, by giving the size and style of the building erected in their neighborhood within five or six miles of Markdale, we will make out a list of them for the paper.

The Presbyterian S. School held their annual picnic at Bell's Lake yesterday, Wednesday. A number of conveyances was supplied and tho' the day was very hot, a pleasant time was spent: The children enjoyed the boating on Moffat Bro's steam yacht immensely.

Battered milk cans.—One day last week Charlie Rowe's team ran away, from the boy who was driving, while returning from leaving his load of milk to the factory. The horses ran nearly a mile when one horse fell which bro't them to a stand still. There was but little damage except some battered cans.

Mr. Richard Watson, of Artemesia, about two miles from Markdale, is not only a good farmer, but has commendable taste. His conveniently arranged outbuildings, tasty comfortable brick residence and neat thrifty orchard and garden with model fence in front, gives the farm an air of comfort and taste which is truly praisworth.

The garden party on the banks of Mr. Plewes' mill pond last Friday evening, under the auspices of the Presbyterian L. A. S., was something novel, in as much as the greater portion of those present availed themselves of the privilege of a boat ride. There is a fine stretch of water, about a quarter of a mile long, ten rods wide, and twenty feet deep in places. Several row-boats were at the disposal of the party. The brass band appeared to good advantage with their hat lamps burning brightly and sweet music wafted on the water as they "paddled their own canoe" from port to port. Refreshments were served, and lemonade and water-melon sold in good fashion, and a pleasant time generally spent.

Runaway.—Mr Robt. Mercer, of Euphrasia, was driving a spirited team belonging to Mr. Murdoch last Friday in this village, the team became unmanageable and ran the wagon against a hitching post, opposite McFarland's store, throwing out the occupants, Mercer and son. The wagon tongue broke off letting the team free, and they ran at a desperate rate down Mill Street and were headed and turned into Davis' Street, and caught in Armstrong's field. Mr. Mercer had a rib broken and was otherwise shook up, while the son, a lad of 12 years, was picked up in an unconscious state but is recovering. No further serious damage was done.

Eclipse saw mill burned.—On Wednesday night, July 27th, about midnight, the saw mill about five miles east of Markdale, known as "Sparlings Mill," was discovered in flames, not however until the roof was about falling in, making it impossible to save anything. The fire raged fiercely, the lurid glare being distinctly seen at Markdale. There was, with the mill, from 100,000 to 150,000 feet of lumber burned. The loss on the mill is put at $2,500 and on the stock $1,500 insured for $1,500. Wm. Lucas the owner, will therefore be the looser to the extent of about $2,500. This will throw quite a number out of employment, as the mill did a large and steady business.

BUSINESS LOCALS.

Busy as bees at McFarland's stock taking.

Be sure you get 5 lbs of tea at J. G. Anderson's for $1.

Bargains all this week at McFarland's Stock must be reduced before fall goods come.

121 pieces, combination dinner and tea sets, at the lowest possible prices at J. G. Anderson's.

Paris Green pure at the Medical Hall, A. Turner & Co.

You should see those dress goods at J. G Anderson's, only 10 and 12½c. a yard worth 15 and 18c.

Fresh Fish.—Sarjeant Bros., butchers, receive a supply of fresh fish twice a week.

Cigars! Cigars! lovers of a good Havana cigar will find that Benson has the finest cigar in town, sold by the box.

The best and also the cheapest crockery and glassware at J. G. Anderson's you have ever seen. Be sure you call and see them.

Holland Council will meet for the despatch of business on the 11th August, and Glenelg on the 22nd.

J. P. Marshall, dentist, will be in Markdale next Thursday and Friday, 4th and 5th August, for the practice of his profession.

Prints away, away down in prices at Anderson's mammoth dry goods store.

Farmers wanting a first-class Fanning Mill should buy the celebrated Chatham mill Given on trial, W. Jackson, Agent, Markdale.

Don't forget to see those cheap laces and embroderies at J. G. Anderson's. They are reduced to less than half price.

I shall clear every line of fishing tackle out at cost, Poles, Baskets, &c. W. A. Brown.

Pure Paris Green at Stephen's Drug Store,

Photos and all kinds of pictures taken by Jackson, the Markdale photographer, in the finest style of the art. Try him and be convinced.

Personals.

Miss Hattie Mathews is rusticating with friends in Meaford, Winona Haskett is camping out up the Georgian Bay.

Mr S. McNally from Hanover was visiting his brother R. McNally, last week in Markdale.

Miss Cherlotte E. McNally is spending her holidays with her sister, Mrs. Horn, in Erin.

R. L. Stephen is vacating for a few days at Owen Sound.

Miss Love (S. Hill's milliner) returned to her home in Meaford on Monday last.

Miss Millie Lyons, of Tara, is home on a visit.

Mr. John Foster, of Corbetton, gave us a friendly call lst Monday.

Miss Trevarrow, formerly of McFarland's millinery establishment, is visiting friends in Markdale.

Miss Mattie and Fannie Williams took their departure on Tuesday last for their old home at Evanston, ten miles from Chicago.

Mrs. Wm. Gell and daughter, of Nebraska, are visiting Mrs. Gell's mother, Mrs. Silverlock of Holland Centre, also her brother Henry and sister, Mrs Wm. Norton.

Mrs. Robson, of London, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Wm. Munshaw.

Mr. John Trelford, of Allenford, formerly of this place, has recently added a pair of boys to his family. There's nothing succeeds like success.

Johnson Wilson is home from London.

Miss Mary F. McLellan, of Toronto, has been spending a few days in Markdale.

Miss Mary Porter, teacher, visited her sister. Mrs. E. C. Large recently.

Master Mercer McCoy, of Owen Sound, has been spending some days with his cousin, Carrie McKenna.

Will. Luke, of Brampton, is rusticating in this district. He goes on to the "Soo" where he will camp out a week or so, together with five others.

Misses, Nellie and Hannah Thompson of Edgar, stopped off to see their sister Mrs. Angus Plewes last week, on their way to Sault Ste Marie for a trip.

Messrs. Robt. and Ered Freeborn, are spending a few days with their brother, Dr. Freeborn.

Mr. Jake G. Keefer, of Forest, formerly of this office, gave us a friendly call on Wednesday.

Andrew Bryden is home from Galt.

BIRTHS.

Mercer.—In Artemesia, on the 31st., July, the wife of Mr. James Mercer, of a son.

DEATHS.

Dunn—Died suddenly on the 12th ult, at his residence, 14 Reid Street, Dunfermline, Scotland, Robert Dunn, manufacturer, deeply regretted. The deceased was brother-in-law to Henry Meldrum, Eugenia.

It has been intimated to us that our esteemed friend, R. O. Whitby, is thinking seriously of joining the Forester's in Toronto.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist church will hold their annual garden party at the parsonage on Wednesday evening next, when preparations are being made for an enjoyable time. The brass band will be in attendance. The public are cordially invited to be present. Admission 15 cents.

I WONDER.

How long the hot weather will continue.

If the three Dr's will live and prosper in Markdale.

If the railway company intend gravelling the station yard before fall.

If they don't, why not?

If parents generally know that their children steal apples.

If so, why cannot they hinder them.

If our head teacher is really married.

If there isn't another marriage on the tapis,

When our band boys will appear in full uniform.

If threshing machine accidents will be as numerous as ever.

If carelesness is not the cause of the majority of accidents.

X. Actly.

CASUAL CRUMBS.

A writer on political economy says:—"It's the little leaks that tell." Yes, indeed: a little leak will give you away as fast as an overgrown onion.

An old favorite.—An old favorite that has been popular with the people for nearly 30 years is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry for all varieties of summer complaints of children and adults. It seldom or ever fails to cure cholera morbus, diarrhœa and dysentery.

An open letter.

Messrs. T. Milburn & Co Nov. 25th, 1886.

I wish I had used B. B. B. sooner, which would have saved me years of suffering with erysipelas, from which I could get no relief until I tried B. B. B., which soon cleared away the itching, burning rash that had so long distressed me. Mrs. Edward Romkey, Eastern Passage, Halifax, N. S.

Jas. Campbell, liquor inspector, has laid out a 30 acre plot of land on the lake shore, near Thornbury for a park.

Don't use any more nauseous purgatives such as Pills Salts &c., when you can get in Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters a medicine that moves the Bowels gently, cleansing all impurities from the system and rendering the Blood pure and cool. Soldby all Druggists. tf

A new definition.—(Scene—Glasgow car) 1st Female Passenger:—I wunner whit's the meanin' o' this terrible word Jubilee? 2nd do.—"I'll tell ye. Whin a woman's merrit twenty-five years that's her silver waddin', whin she's merrit fifty years that's her golden waddin', and whin her man dees that's her jubilee!"

BE ON YOUR GUARD.

Don't allow a cold in the head to slowly and surely run into Catarrh, when you can be cured for 25c. by using Dr, Chase's Catarrh Cure. A few applications cure insipient catarrh; 1 to 2 boxes cures ordinary catarrh 1 to 5 boxes is guaranteed to cure chronic catarrh. Try it. Only 25c. and sure cure. Sold by all druggists. 333 83

A young man sent a note to his girl asking what time he should call, and received in return the following:—"Deer Jou—Comet afpastate."

Freeman's worm powders are safe, sure and speedy to remove worms from children or adults.

Low's sulphur soap should be found with every toilet. It is cleansing and healing.

Oscar Wild is editing a ladies' magazine in London. He does up his long hair in a very neat knot and wears a bustle under his coat-tails. He wears a light blue corset and a red necktie, and is, in fact, just a little bit sweeter than ever.

Asthma.—Persons who have suffered for years with Asthma will find a quick relief and cure in the double treatment of Southern Asthma Cure.

Remove the cause.—Many persons suffer from a symptom of Catarrh that causes nausea, more especially after eating in the morning. Nasal Balm will cure by removing the cause.

Always required.—A good cathartic medicine. National Pills will not disappoint you.

W. A. BROWN

"THE PEOPLE'S JEWELLER"

—DEALER IN—

Fine Gold, Filled Gold, and Coin Silver Cases; with Hampden, Columbus, Waltham and Elgin Movements, in Ladies' and Gents' sizes. Solid 18 k Wedding Rings. Roll Gold Chains, and Jewellery in large variety Beautiful lines in Silverware for presentation purposes. I keep in Jewellers lines the finest and most complete stock between Shelburne and Owen Sound; do business for myself in my own name, and can be held to every warrant I sign. I don't quote prices on Watches "Not in Stock," and then tell a customer wanting Bartlett at $16, "I just sold the last one," I have P. S. Bartlett's, in stock at $17.50 less cash dis., warranted 3 years. I expect to establish more fully every year of business life an unquestioned reputation for Reliability. Straight Dealing. Fine Work and Close Prices.

Watch and Clock Warrants 2 and 3 years covering breakages.

☞ A call to Price or Purchase respectfully solicited.

GOODS BEST QUALITY

Watch Repairing Practically Excellent; Accurate in Finish; Uniform in Price.

W. A. BROWN, - Box 5,

MARKDALE.

FARMERS!

Don't forget there is good work done at the Flesherton

WOOLEN FACTORY

And we are doing all in our power to please. Customers are finding out it is to their advantage to deal with us, our Prices are Low and Our Goods are Reliable and notwithstanding price being cut so close on account of hard times, I intend to reduce the manufacturing price in nearly every branch, viz., OILING, ROLL-CARDING, SPINNING, WEAVING, &c., &c. Give us a trial and see for yourself.

W. H. FLESHER.

Flesherton, May 30th, 1887.

HOUSEHOLD.

Cookery for Children.

Too little attention is paid to the food prepared for children; the care and arrangement is left to servants who are either incompetent themselves, or care so little about the matter as to cook it in the manner they find the easiest to themselves. It is of great consequence to fix the times of taking food as well as to regular the quantity given to a child. The mother should, unless she has servants who can be thoroughly trusted, personally attend to these arrangements; it is her province. There is great danger that an infant under 3 years of age will be overfed if it be left to the discretion of the nurse. These persons, generally, to stop the screaming of a child, whether it proceed from pain or crossness, or repletion (as it often does), give it something to eat—often that which is very injurious, to tempt the appetite; if it will only eat and stop crying they do not care for the future inconvenience which this habit of indulgence may bring on the child and its motner.

Arrange as early as possible the regular times of giving food to children, according to their age and constitution. Young infants require food every two hours when awake; after 3 months old they may go three hours, then cautiously lengthen the time, as the child can bear it. But remember that all temperaments are not alike. Some of the same age may require more food than others. One rule, however, will apply to all—never give food to amuse a child or keep it quiet when it is not hungry, or to reward it for being good. You may as rationally hope to extinguish a fire by pouring on oil as to cure peevish temper or to curb a violent one by hampering the appetite for luxuries in diet.

Vacation.

Don't begrudge boys their vacation. Let them enjoy it to the utmost. Let them hie to the wood and the streams and the lakes, and leave behind them the dirt and smoke and constant worry of business life. Don't laugh. The business life is not theirs yet, but the signs and sights of it are all around them, and a few more months or years and each of these merry lads will have to stand in the thick of the fray and battle for the goal he has set his heart on. But just now that school has closed, let him have all the air and light he can get, and freedom from restraint save necessary and wholesome ones. Let him climb trees and grub in the ground. Let him swim, and fish, and run, and walk, and play in sunlight and shadow, till his skin gets brown as a berry and he sighs for rest again. Don't keep the boy in the city. Vacation on the spot where all has been work so long would not have the necessary charm. The boy may not quite appreciate in its highest sense what such a vacation is to him now, but in after life he will look back and realize the real value of this summer revelry; and when manhood with its responsibilities and stern necessities shuts down on the pastimes of boyhood, he will feel that he is the gainer in life-long happiness by as much as these vacation months have been allowed to in solid pleasure. He will do more. He will recognize what an important influence they have had in making up the sum of life's pleasures, and helping him to meet its pains, and will thank God for them.

A Woman Mender.

Frances E. Willard, too well known to need introduction or commentary, proposes a new occupation for woman, that of a woman mender. By this it is not intended to convey a "mender of woman," but a woman mender of all clothes that need mending. How it would rejoice the heart of many a mother who has to cook, and wash, and iron, and see in a thousand and one different ways to the material comfort of her family, if she could find herself exempt from this one thing, uninteresting, everlasting, all-necessary tail-end to the list of her manifold occupations! Woman, as Miss Willard states, wants bread as much as the ballot, and whenever she has obtained one of these she has taken one step towards the possession of the other. Herein the woman mender is an occupation that thousands of woman could easily and lightly take up—money making when left without training for any more difficult trade or position. Every woman can sew on buttons, mend hose, darn breeches and the like. Such work is quickly done and no mother would find it expensive to pay for, while the mender would find out quickly that all her time would be in demand as soon as it was known that she would do the work, and would aggregate a good living to her. Miss Willard proposes to start such an enterprise in her own town. Let others do the same, and it will be found to be a double-edged benefit to many.

Practical Receipts.

Fried Crackers.—Soak square soda crackers well in milk and fry them quickly a nice brown in a little butter.

Cream Cake.—One cup sugar, one cup sour cream, two eggs, two cups flour, one teaspoon soda, one teaspoon cream of tartar.

Cheap Cake.—One cup sugar, one-half cup butter, one cup sour cream, one egg, flour enough to make a good batter, one-half teaspoon soda.

Graham Gems.—One quart buttermilk, one teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of salt, Graham flour enough to make a stiff batter, bake in gem pans hot and well greased, in a hot oven.

Potato Cakes.—Peel twelve good sized potatoes, grate fine, add two eggs, teaspoonful of salt, one cup of flour, and enough milk to make a batter; bake on griddle irons, well greased.

Catsup.—To a gallon of ripe tomatoes, put four tablespoons fine salt, four of ground black pepper, three of ground mustard, half tablespoon allspice, same of ground cloves, six red peppers ground fine; simmer the whole slowly with a pint of vinegar three or four hours, then strain through a sieve, bottle and cork tight.

Fig Pudding.—One pound of sugar, one pound of bread crumbs, six eggs, the juice of four lemons, the rinds of two lemons, grated fine, all mixed together thoroughly, and boiled five hours in a tightly-covered tin mould. Fig pudding must be served hot, with a sauce made of one-half cup of white sugar, one-half cup of butter and one cupful of sherry wine, boiled together for ten minutes.

Apple Custard.—Make a syrup of a pound of white sugar to a pint of water, let this boil, removing any scum that may arise. Drop into it a dozen or more tart apples pared, cored and quartered; flavor with stick cinnamon, extract of lemon, or the juice of a fresh lemon. Let it cook until the apple is very soft, and the syrup thick and jelly-like, then put it away to cool in a jelly form or a bowl. When it is cold and firm, turn it out into a dish, and pour over it a soft custard. This makes a palatable dessert or a tea dish.

As It Will Be One Hundred Years Hence.

Miss Araminta Fitzgiggs to James Augustus De Brown, at an aerial picnic party one hundred miles from the city. Time, midnight.—"Dearest Augustus, will you let me see you home?"

He (aside)—"I shouldn't wonder if she'd propose to-night." (Aloud, bashfully)—"I do not know. My ma's here. Perhaps she will expect me to go with her."

She—"Oh, no! I just saw your ma's driver arrive with her new aerometer, so that she will drive home, while we will wing it on the soft, lambent air, and I've something sweet to tell you, love."

He—"Oh! Araminta, you're a flirt? but for this time I yield." They fly away.

She—"No! by Heaven I'm true, James Augustus. (Putting her arm affectionately about his waist.) I have long wished to say something to you that concerns my whole life. Dearest, will you be my husband? I can support you in luxury; my business is prosperous; I have money in bank; I own a house, and can cherish and protect you. I love you, my darling, and will make you a good wife. Say 'Yes' and make me happy!"

He—"Araminta, you do not think of what you say. You cannot consider what it will take to support a husband like me, educated as I have been by my ma in the most expensive tastes and habits."

She—"Do not say 'No,' dearest. I will work for you. I will do anything—even to going on the stage. Only say that you will have me."

He—"No! no! Araminta; you know not what you ask. I will be a brother to you. I will be your guardian angel. I will always be ready to accompany you to the opera or theatre. I will always come to you for money or advice; but I cannot marry you!"

She—"You must! you shall! If you refuse me I will haunt you all your life, for to-morrow my cold corpse shall be found in the bay and on my person a letter telling that you have deceived me and left me hopeless."

He—"Are you in earnest, darling I (Aside)—I'd better close on her. Maybe I can't do better, and I'm getting passe. (Aloud)—Take me then, dearest Araminta; I am yours forever!" He falls into her arms. She embraces and kisses him, and they arrive at his mother's door.

LIGHTNING FREAKS.

Lightning struck the Lyon county (Kansas) Court House, tore the gas meter from its place, ignited the gas, and set the building afire.

A negro lad in Atlanta was so frightened by a thunderbolt which struck a tree against which he was leaning that he became a hopeless maniac.

Lightning made splinters of the foremast of the schooner Alfred H. Hemp of Albany while the Captain and crew stood upon her decks, yet not a man was injured.

James Carmichael of Spring Hill mines, Ont., was standing on the porch of his house with two friends, when lightning instantly killed him, while neither of his friends received the slightest injury.

Lightning peeled the bark from a tree in Richwoods township, and, cutting it into six-inch pieces, drove them into the weather boarding of a house several feet away, so that the whole front was decorated.

Lightning entered the residence of G. S. Meacham at Fruitland park, Fla., and meandered around the premises until, meeting an umbrella leaning against the wall, it ripped out the ribs and made a bonfire of the cover. It then left the door.

The points ot the cultivator with which Frank Strait of Corning, was ploughing were melted by lightning and Strait was killed. The only mark on his body was a dark blue spot on the side of his neck. His shoes and stockings were torn to shreds,

Two visitors at Marshfield, Wis., live to tell a wonderful story of lightning. One of them was struck upon the shoulder, the current passing down his leg and through the soul of his shoe, making a clean-cut round hole in the leather and entering the floor. The other was likewise struck on the shoulder, and the fluid passed out through his slippers, making six clear-cut holes through the toe of each of them.

Where the House-Fly Breeds.

But few know the origin of the house-fly. The eggs, mere whitish specks to the unaided eye, are laid in little agglutinated piles in warm manure or in decomposing vegetation, especially that about our stables and barn-yards. From 80 to 100 are laid at a time and probably at three or four different intervals by the same fly, though on this point we have no exact data. Within twenty-four hours, in summer, they hatch into footless maggots, which, after rooting in filth till their tender skins seem ready to burst, become full-fed in less than a week, and descending into the earth or sheltering under an old board, contract to brown shining objects, rounded at both ends and technically known as pruraria. Within the darkness of his hardened skin changes rapidly take place; the insect passes through the pupa to the perfect state and finally, in about five days, the anterior end of the supariam is pushed off, and the fly quickly crawls out. At first its parts are pale and soft and its wings are crumpled and useless, but those soon expand and suddenly, without practice or teaching, the new fledged fly wings its way to our tables to mock our displeasure and to share our repast.

"What's the matter, John?" Why dat nigger dat lib down in Pearl street hit me on de mouf wid his fist." "Well, didn't you strike him back, John?" "No, sah, but I did strike him head!"

The man who has raised a cabbage head has done more good than all the metaphysicians in the world," observed Professor Bronson. "Then," observed Professor Jones, "your mother ought to have the premium."

MEN AND WOMEN.

It is said that Sarah Bernhardt invested the bulk of the money made last season in American real estate.

Frederick Douglass will return from Europe in September, and the colored people of Washington are making arrangements to give him a rousing reception.

Duke Charles Theodore of Bavaria, brother of the Empress of Austria, during a recent brief stay at Meran, made no less than 220 successful operations at the Eye Infirmary of that town.

George M. Bartholomew, the Hartford defaulter, has apartments in a private residence at Montreal. His wife is with him. Canadian air agrees with Bartholomew, and he is in better health and spirits than for years past. Some of his victims are still very much depressed.

The fine park on Dufferin Lake, Canada, in which Mr. Erastus Wiman, the Hon. Benjamin Butterworth and other conspicuous men and thousands of the rank and file of the Canadian population held the big Commercial Union picnic, is henceforth to be known as Wiman park.

It is an interesting fact that both Stagg, the famous Yale pitcher, and Caldwell, stroke of the winning 'Varsity crew, will devote their lives to the ministry. Their influence as clergymen will be all the greater from their success as athletes.

On her way from Balmoral to Windsor to attend the Jubilee, Queen Victoria was stopped by a swarm of bees. It was at night. The bees had swarmed in the glass box of a signal lamp and put out the light. The engineer not seeing the customary light stopped the train, and would have secured the bees and taken them on to Windsor as a memento had there been time.

Jules Verne lives at Amiens. It was his custom to go to Paris once a month for a day or two until a year ago, when he was wounded by a pistol-shot in the left leg. He still limps, cannot bend his leg, and is deprived of all exercise. He drives a good deal. Verne does not speak good English. He is a great reader of English literature, but has to make use of translations.

Yan Phon Lee, who was graduated at Yale a few days ago, was frequently interrupted by long and loud applause during the delivery of his commencement oration. He discussed the Chinese question from the Chinese standpoint, and sailed into the United States Government with Oriental vigor. This young and able Celestial has just been married to an American, Miss Elizabeth Maud Jerome.

John Willard Young is the youngest son of the late Brigham Young's first wife. He is about 43 years of age and has ten sons and ten daughters. He says his father left an estate of about $2,500,000. He willed $22,000 to each one of his children. Brigham Young has as yet no monument. He lies buried near what is called "the Iron House" in Salt Lake City, and his family have not been able to decide on a fitting design to mark his grave.

The Sandwich Islands are a prolific source of interesting news of late. Walter Murray Gibson, Premier of the Hawaiian Kingdom, is a man over 70 years of age, but hale and vigorous. Miss Howard St. Clair, a handsome California book agent, claims that the Premier had failed to keep a promise of marriage, and that the sum of $100,000 will just about quiet the throbbings of her more or less broken heart. An effort at a compromise is being made.

Harriet Beecher Stowe is failing rapidly. The brilliant intellect which conceived the immortal tale of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" is perceptibly shattered. The death of Professor Stowe has added years to the appearance of his lonely wife, and she has lost entirely her vigor and enthusiasm. In her modest little house in Hartford she awaits listlessly the end of her busy life. Sadly she said a few days ago to a friend, "No, I write no more. I have done, I have done, I have done"

A prominent British officer dining recently at Hawarden for the first time, ventured to traverse a very erroneous version of recent occurrences which fell from the lips of his host. Thereupon Mr. Gladstone's once remarkably fine though now haggard and restless eyes began to glare, he knit his brows and surveyed his audacious guest with a glance of withering contempt. But ere his anger could find vent in words, an intimate friend of the family averted the impending storm by interposing with an adroit explanation of the visitor's "obvious misconception," as he chose to term it. While the explanation was still in progress a footman slipped into the guest's hand a scrap of paper on which Mrs. Gladstone had hastily scribbled the words, "I regret that I forgot to forewarn you that Mr. Gladstone is never contradicted in this house."

Minor Morals for Married People.

The last word is the most dangerous of infernal machines. Husband and wife should no more strive to get it than they would struggle for the possession of the bomb-shell. Married people should study each other's weak points, as skaters look out for the weak parts of the ice, in order to keep off them. Ladies who marry for love should remember that the union of angels with women has been forbidden since the flood. The wife is the sun of the social system. Unless she attracts there is nothing to keep heavy bodies, like husbands, from flying off into space. The wife who would properly discharge her duties must never have a soul "above buttons." Don't trust too much to good temper when you get into an argument. Sugar is the substance most universally diffused through all natural products! Let married people take a hint from this provision of nature.

The Oil Wealth of Pennsylvania.

As a basis of work for those who love to revel in amazing figures we may state that statistics show that 53,000 wells have been drilled in Pennsylvania and New York since the discovery of petroleum at a cost of $200,000,000. These wells have produced 310,000,000 barrels of oil, which was sold at the wells for $500,000,000. This represented a profit to the producer of $300,000,000. The amount of oil exported is placed at 6,231,102,923 gallons. In the pool in Washington County alone $3,200,000 have been expended in machinery and drilling. This does not include the many millions that are represented there in the natural gas industry. Independent of the oil business there are about $50,000,000 invested in natural gas plants in Pennsylvania. These are majestic figures, and serve to show the magnitude of the oil and gas business.

TERMS OF CREDIT.

The Time Allowed by the Various Countries of the World.

The following data regarding the terms of credit allowed in various countries are derived from reports of United States consuls published by the Government:

It appears that in Germany the credit system is very widespread, and that the time allowed purchasers to settle their accounts is generally much longer than in France and England. Nearly every commercial and manufacturing branch of business has its own particular terms of credit, and there is no uniformity in this respect.

In England, a payment of the price of the goods delivered is required at the end of three months, dating from the day of shipment.

In France, a four-month's acceptance is required to be sent in settlement of the invoice.

In Italy, but little credit business is done and none without good security being given.

In Spain, four-fifths of the transactions are done on a cash basis, while in Portugal great liberality is shown, and quite a long credit is usually allowed.

In Austria, it is scarcely possible to do business without allowing a very long credit which is always one of six months.

In Turkey, even objects of prime necessity are sold on credit, and in this country, as well as in Russia, the time allowed is in most cases twelve months.

In Canada, settlements are made at the end of thirty days, with a discount of five per cent. Sometimes a credit of from three to six months is allowed, but in this case there is no discount granted upon payment of the account.

In Mexico the large commercial houses willingly give credit of from six to eight months, and in the retail trade long terms are given customers in which to settle their accounts. In Costa Rica a credit of from six to twelve months is given in case of merchandise imported from Europe, in order that the goods may be easily and quickly disposed of. But since this system of credit has often led to losses it is now being given up.

In Cuba the time fixed for payment is generally four to five months after delivery of the goods.

The consul general of the United States at Rio states that one of the greatest drawbacks to commercial intercourse with Brazil resides in the necessity of allowing too long a credit. At Rio Janerio, as in Buenos Ayres, the minimum credit is six months and often more.

In the Bermudas, accounts are settled but once a year. The 30th of June is the day usually fixed for the payments.

In Asia Minor, a credit of but two or three weeks is in most cases all that is allowed.

In China, it is not customary to give credit. Money is obtained from lenders, who exact an interest of from 8 to 12 per cent. Business is nearly always conducted upon a cash basis.

In Australia, a credit of six months is generally allowed.

Singing Sands of the Pacific.

In one of the South Pacific islands are some wonderful singing sands. These sands are in a small desert. In the centre of the desert are about a dozen cocoanut trees, and about five miles distant is the ocean. Ka Pule, a native guide, and myself reached the trees about noon. Our horses, as well as ourselves, were about used up, travelling through the deep sand under a blazing sun. As we lay stretched at the roots of the towering cocoanuts, the trade wind set in, cool and refreshing, from the ocean. Notwithstanding the heat and our wearied condition, there was an enchantment about the situation that caused me to think of the beautiful stories I had read in my childhood. I began to feel the soft touch of slumber, and all at once I heard a faint musical tinkling as if troops of fairies were coming to greet us as they used to do the enchanted princes in the olden days. I tried to locate the melodious sounds. In all directions there was nothing but hot, glowing sand. I looked up—there was nothing but the beautiful tropical sky and the tremulous atmosphere. Still louder sounded the music; it was all around us; it filled the air. I gazed toward the ocean, and there, apparently a short distance away, was a beautiful lake, with its waves dashing upon moss-covered stones. It was not there when we first arrived at the place, and I became half convinced that it was the work of enchantment. Ka Pule had fallen asleep, and, gazing at the lake and listening to the music in the air, I rested my head against the rough bark of of a tree. As I did so I heard the distant gurgle of a brook. I could plainly hear the water splashing over the glistening stones and dying away in quiet eddies, I was more and more bewildered, and at length awoke Ka Pule. I told him what I had heard, and directed his attention to the lake. He explained that the seeming lake was a wailiula or mirage: that the sound of gurgling waters came from an underground stream, and that the music was caused by the stirring of the flinty sands by the winds Anyway, the whole experience was beautiful, and I have often said that I once made a visit to fairy land.

Where Shall We Draw the Line.

Scene—A Glasgow hotel. Enter American stranger, who is asked by the proprietor to sign the visitors' book. He reads several names previously entered, and asks the meaning of some appendages, such as "M. R. C. V. S.," &c., then writes as follows:—"Tom Swan, B.B.B.B.B.B." Proprietor, angrily: "Don't make a fool of my book, sir;" Stranger: "Why, that's my title!" Proprietor: "Your what? What does it stand for?" Stranger: "Well, I'm the Best Blooming Bugler in the Boston Brass Band." Collapse of Proprietor.

Easily Satisfied.

Gypsy—"Give me fifty cents and I'll tell your fortune."

Irish Woman—"Shure, an' if I had fifty cints that would be fortune enough."

A son of the Emerald Isle meeting a countryman whose face was not perfectly remembered, after saluting him most cordially, inquired his name. "Walsh," was the answer. "Walsh, Walsh," responded the Paddy, "are ye not from Cork? I knew two old maids there of that name. Was ayther of them yer mother?"

One Fished—'Tother Busted.

"Too bad—too bad!" he said as he [illegible] out of his office with a telegram in hand.

"What is it?"

"Just found this in my office as I [illegible] from a ten days' vacation. It came after I left."

"What is it about?"

"It is from an old friend in [illegible] and it says: 'Telegraph me $300 by [illegible] I'm financially ruined.'"

"And you weren't here?"

"No."

"And he busted!"

"Very probably. Ah! well; some fish and some must bust. The only [illegible] tion I have is in knowing that I [illegible] have raised $10 had I been home."

Be the Sowl o' Moll Kelly.

An Irish voter at the recent [illegible] when asked if he could read, replied with alacrity, "I can, yer honour," and [illegible] off his paper in triumph to the [illegible] desk. He spent at least a quarter of an hour puzzling over it, and at last, [illegible] back in disgust, flung it down in [illegible] the Nationalist agent, and cried, "[illegible] luck to it! Mark it yerself, will ye?"

A Large Family.

A certain distinguished United [illegible] senator was on one occasion in Calcutta on a tour round the world, and among the places he visited was the English cemetery. There were many noted Englishmen buried there, and such names as "George Gordon, Lord [illegible]" "Henry Trevelyan, Bart.," were so numerous as to attract the senator's attention. Finally he said, "My, my, this Bart. [illegible] must be a large and influential one! I remember to have seen the name in Lodge's [illegible] but I had no idea they were such prominent people. Really, when I go back to Europe I must look them up and get better acquainted."

The Importance of Geography.

Negro Father (to son)—"How yer gittin' 'long at school?"

Boy—"Fust-rate."

Father—"Whut yer flingin' yer [illegible] down on fur de mos' part?"

Boy—"Rifmertic."

Father—"Got down ter jogerfy yit?"

Boy—"No, sah."

Father—"Wall, I wants yer ter git [illegible] ter dat ez soon ez yer ken."

Boy—"What's jogerfy gwine ter do for me?"

Father—"Whut's it gwine ter do for [illegible] W'y, it'll allus keep yer outen de po' [illegible] dat's whut it gwine ter do."

Boy—"How come?"

Father—"Is yer dun los' all yer [illegible] dat yer doan know how come? Doan know dat er man wid plenty o' jogerfy in his head kin allus tell de age o' er hoss lookin' at him? Doan yer know he kin fling his eye up ter de clouds an' tell when it's gwine ter rain, an' dat he kin skin sheep jes like snatchin' off er shirt? Know dat man whut tuck er peach tree switch an' found dat fine well o' water on de Fulgham place, doan yer?"

Boy—"Yes, sah."

Father—"Wall, he wuz er fine hand at jogerfy. Go back ter dat school-house an' study jogerfy, son; go right back dar an' study it dis minit."

The Disappointed Ones.

The following expressions are made use of about fifty times per day at the ladies' delivery window in the post-office:

"No letter for me? You must have overlooked it?"

"Oh! there isn't? Well, I didn't hardly expect one."

"Please look again. You don't know how anxious I am."

"Thank you. I was going by and thought I'd inquire."

"So strange! He said that he'd write as soon as he got there, and that was [illegible] weeks ago."

"You are certain you looked in the right box? Well, if there ain't, there ain't."

"It was a letter with money in it, and I wish you'd tell the Postmaster. Maybe somebody has stolen it."

"This is the fifth or sixth time I've inquired, and I'm beginning to be suspicious."

"Thanks, ma'am. I knew you'd give me a letter if you could."

Question For His Reverence.

One evening Cardinal Manning was walking in West London, and passed a laboring man, who, with his pipe in his mouth, was walking along. "Good evening," said the prelate, by way of beginning a conversation which before long turned on the temperance question. The workman, it appeared, had not taken the pledge, having consulted a friend about the matter, who thought there was no need for him to do so as he was no drunkard. The Cardinal, probably thinking that example is better than precept, told the man that he had taken it, whereupon the latter replied promptly, by asking, "Did you want it, your reverence?"

A Child's Logic.

There was an old negro cook, about seventy years of age, in the Petersby family who has been with them for a great many years, and whenever her birthday comes around she receives presents, cake congratulations, etc., much to the disgust of little Johnny, who said to his mother:

"Ma, I don't think you ought to give that cake to the old cook. You ought to give it to me. I've not had half as many birthdays as she has had."

What First Prompted It.

"Do you belong to the society known as the Woman's Suffrage?" asked a farmer of a woman whose appearance might possibly indicate that fact.

"Certainly I do, sir," replied the lady.

"May I ask what are the real objects of the society?" he asked.

"To promote the welfare of women and to elevate the sex," she replied.

"Is that all?"

"That is all."

"May I ask what first prompted the organization of such a society?"

"Yes, sir; we have no objections to answering such questions. It was first prompted by the scarcity of husbands."

HEALTH.

Good Nursing.

The sick are sufficiently unfortunate—a misfortune which we usually bring upon ourselves, unnecessarily, if we are sufficiently intelligent on this subject—without being subjected to the cruelty which was usual a few years since, if not now, to some extent. Once the fever patient was tortured by being deprived of water; still later, by having insufficient air and light of the sun, many rooms being darkened, almost hermetically sealed, the doors and windows all being carefully (carelessly) closed through an absurd fear of taking colds. In rare cases, as in the measles, when the light is painful to the eyes, it is well to so modify the light by thin curtains or several thicknesses of over cloths over the eyes, as to render them comfortable. Let the room be reasonably light and cheerful, giving the patient the advantage of the influence of the "mind cure." The sick, above all others, have a special claim for an abundance of the purest air possible, since the disease may have been principally caused by a deficiency of it, resulting in such an impurity of the general system that what we call disease, or an effort of nature to remove certain impediments, certain impurities, was necessary, as a purifying process. What we generally call disease is but the struggle of nature to right the wrongs or remove various causes back of what we see, the diseases being generally but curative measures. Thus, a sore is not the true disease, but an opening through which impurities escape, removing an internal state which causes the disturbance. Sores never run the life away, the mere discharge being always favorable, yielding the system of so much actual poison.

The average expired breath contains four and one-half per cent. of carbonic acid gas, in its full strength a deadly poison to the lungs, six per cent. proving unfit to sustain mortal life, while that of the sick, the victims of a malignant disease, is far more impure, often really putrescent. Then, open the doors and windows in moderate weather, of course reasonably, always having the patient comfortably warm. Put a strip of board under the window, allowing the air to come in through the space between the sashes, at the same time opening the draught of the stove or a small space of the fireplace, or a part of the chimney flue, any way to get a good supply of pure air safely. Place vessels of water containing a little copperas under the bed and elsewhere, absorbing the filth, often changed, and put around the plants. Let the patient breathe by night as well as by day.

Wonders of Surgery.

Medicine has made a wonderful advance within a century. The books of a prominent Vermont doctor, recorded from 1772 to 1790 a total of four thousand two hundred and seventy-one visits, in which he administered one thousand six hundred and thirty doses of physic. It is estimated, also, that he drew from his patients during the same period about a hogshead full of blood! Nor was the only fault of the medical practice of that time one of excess. In multitudes of cases the physic was the reverse of what was needed. This doctor's practice was not exceptional. The change since that time amounts to a revolution.

The advance in surgery has been still greater. The power of anæsthetics to render operations painless, and the power of disinfectants to prevent all suppuration, have enabled experts to secure marvellous results.

A few years ago the most skilful surgeons shrank from all operations that involved the opening of the abdomen. Now the abdomen is freely and safely opened for difficult operations. Says Sir William Stokes in the Lancet, in view of what has already been done in experiments on animals and in diseases of chest in man, "It is no wild flight of fancy to anticipate the time when a diseased lung may be found amenable to operative treatment."

He makes a similar remark in reference to the brain, kidneys, liver and spleen.

"It is not unreasonable to hope that regions hitherto barely touched by the operator may eventually become familiar ground for the exercise of his art."

In former articles we have given some account of surgical skill in restoring severed fingers; in transplanting skin and bone from animal to man, to repair loss on the part of the latter; in filling up large wounds with sponge, which speedily becomes organized.

Some time ago, in Paris, it being impossible to bring together the parts of a severed tendon in a young man's finger, the physician freshly cut the ends, and inserted a piece of tendon from a young dog, and sewed the ends together. The operation was wholly successful. We see, from the papers, that a similar operation has just been performed in this country.

Tobacco and Filth.

As we look at a servile slave of tobacco, one long degraded by it, noticing the appearance of his face and garments, we are ready to adopt the language of a lady: "No human being who has any reasonable regard for decency, not to say for politeness and refinement, should ever assume to thrust himself into the company of the average lady, while his clothing, his pockets, his whole system, are saturated with the disgusting stench of the 'vile weed.' It is difficult for a refined lady to pass the streets without being sickened, disgusted, and nauseated, if she walks behind a tobacco-stuffed male—not a true man! Were I a young lady I would indignantly reject the best appearing young man of the times, without regard to his character in other respects, if I detected the stench of tobacco, for I could not be induced to be contaminated by such breath, could not associate with one so very offensive to me in this regard." There is something in tobacco which directly and completely meets the abnormal demands of a low, depraved, and degraded nature, while it is well calculated to destroy the finest sensibilities, degrading any one just to the extent that he becomes a slave. We should not be proud that we borrowed the habit from the beastly Indians, while it is humiliating to know that the more enlightened nations of Europe almost insanely sought after the "vile weed," greedily devoured it as if it had been a boon to humanity. Its use was vigorously opposed by the great and good, yet but thirty years had elapsed after its introduction into England, before vast sums were spent for it, arousing the ire and indignation of King James, who in his peculiar and quaint style, said of it, by way of denunciation: "It is a custome loathsome to the eye, hateful to the nose, harmful to the braine, dangerous to the lungs, and in the black, stinking fumes thereof nearest resembling the horrible Stigian smoke of the pit that is bottomless."

Less Food Needed in Summer.

Growth and waste and repair go on in a nearly uniform way the whole year through, but the amount of food necessary for these operations or purposes is surprisingly small. The generation of bodily heat requires a more variable quantity of food. In Winter, with the temperature of the external air at zero, the temperature of blood in healthy persons is 98.3 degrees, and when the heats of Summer drive the mercury of the thermometer near to or above that mark, the blood still registers 98 3 degrees. The marvelous mechanism by which this uniform blood temperature is maintained at all seasons it is not necessary to consider, but it must be evident to every one that the force needed to raise the temperature of the whole body to nearly 100 degrees in Winter is no longer needed in Summer. The total amount of food needed for repair, for growth and for heating, physiology teaches us, is much less than is generally imagined; and it impresses us with the truth of the great surgeon Abernethy's saying, that "one-fourth of what we eat keeps us, the other three-fourths we keep at the peril of our lives." In Winter we burn up the surplus food with a limited amount of extra exertion. In Summer we get rid of it literally at some extra risk to health and, of course, to life. We can not burn it. Our vital furnaces are banked, and we worry the most important working organs with the extra exertion of removing what had better never have been taken into the stomach.

Just Try It.

Try a sun bath for rheumatism.

Try clam broth for a weak stomach.

Try cranberry poultice for erysipelas.

Try eating fresh radishes and yellow turnips for gravel.

Try swallowing saliva when troubled with sour stomach.

Try eating onions and horse-radish to relieve dropsical swellings.

Try buttermilk for the removal of tan and walnut stains and freckles.

Try the croup tippet when a child is likely to be troubled in that way.

Try hot flannel over the seat of neuralgia pain and renew frequently.

Try a cloth wrung from cold water put about the neck for sore throat.

Try walking with your hands behind you if you are becoming bent forward.

Economic Statistics of Paris.

The annual return published by the Prefecture of the Seine with regard to the population of Paris, the consumption of food, the circulation of vehicles and passengers by train, and other economic facts bearing upon life in the metropolis is always full of interest, and from that relating to 1886, which has just appeared, it will be gathered that the food supply of Paris comprised, in addition to 261,377 live oxen, 234,349 calves, 1,891,871 sheep, 247,105 pigs, 13,377 horses and 304 donkeys, 152,005 tons of butchers' meat, 24,152 tons of pork, 3,375 tons of horseflesh, 24,143 tons of poultry, 17,559 tons of butter, 5,412 tons of cheese, and 4,544 tons of turbot, salmon and red mullet. The quantity of other kinds of fish consumed is much larger, but as they are not subjected to octroi dues there are no statistics forthcoming. In addition to the above Paris consumed last year over 49,000,000 eggs, while in the way of liquids the consumption was 87,560,000 gallons of wine, 3,217,000 gallons of spirits and liquors, 6,705,000 gallons of cider, and 6,120,000 gallons of beer. The gas company distributed during the year about 251,000,000 cubic meters of gas, of which about 25,000,000 meters were for the streets and public buildings, while the quantity of water supplied from various sources was about 150,000,000 cubic meters, there being 66,000 subscribers to the water rate out of about 82,000 householders living in streets and squares, avenues, &c., with a total length of about 600 miles. Turning to the vital statistics, it will be found that the number of births during the year was 60,636, of whom over 17,000 were illegitimate, while the number of deaths was 57,092, of which over 10,000 were due to pulmonary complaints. The total number of patients in the hospitals during the year was 130,765, of whom 13,920 died. There were 20,604 marriages and 488 divorces. Circulation inside Paris was upon a larger scale than ever before, the Omnibus Company having carried over 191,000,000 passengers, while nearly 50,000,000 traveled by the two independent tramway lines. The boats on the Seine carried about 20,000,000 passengers, while between 17,000,000 and 18,000,000 used the circular railway. The analysts of the municipality ordered the destruction of 1,147 articles of food and instituted over 4,000 prosecutions for adulteration, while the police arrested 35,894 men and 6,253 women, of whom 2,703 were foreigners, mostly for trifling offences, such as disorderly conduct or begging.

NINE MEN WIPED OUT.

Their Fate Made Known by a Flock of Vultures Hovering Near.

Saturday evening a party of nine workmen mere employed grading a portion of the Georgia, Carolina and Northern Railroad, in Chester County, sixteen miles from Fort Mill, S. C. The party were blasting rock and had on hand about one thousand pounds of giant-powder. The camp where the majority of the workmen were was some distance from the blasting party. Just before sunset a terrible explosion was heard, but no attention was paid to it. Last night none of the workmen returned to the camp, and this morning search was made for them. When near the place where the blasting had been going on a large flock of vultures were seen upon the trees. The searching party made a horrible discovery. The thousand pounds of powder had prematurely exploded and not a man was left to tell the tale. Two mules were also killed. A spark from an iron bar which was being hammered is supposed to have ignited the powder.

The difference between a ballot-stuffer and a ballet-stuffer is, the former uses votes, the latter sawdust.

THE P. E. I. MURDER.

A Crime Unparalleled in the Annals of the Island.

The Margate horror is still shrouded in mystery. The respectability of the parties interested and the previous good character of the accused make the crime seem more unnatural. Its atrocity is unparalleled in the history of the Island. Only one case, that of Monroe, of St. John, equals it in the Lower Provinces. It has occurred in one of the most respectable and religiously disposed settlements on the Island. Residents of the locality feel that a blight has been cast over their fair fame. They are thunderstruck. They, as well as people throughout the province, did not feel that our island, much less Margate, was capable of producing such a murderer or such a murder. Many living near the scene of the tragedy did little more than a hand's turn for days after the body was discovered. Strong men would start at the snap of a twig or the rustle of a leaf.

THE PARTIES INTERESTED

are all respectably connected. William Millman is a son of Mr. John Millman, farmer, of Burlington. He is about twenty years of age and has nothing in appearance to indicate the murderer. His coolness, however, is strange. His mother, we hear, is subject occasionally to derangement. He is well spoken of at Margate, and has borne an excellent character. He is a communicant of the Episcopal Church. From the evidence he seems very considerate of his mother, whom he feared might hear of the trouble and go out of her mind again. It was during the festival of last Christmas that Millman first met Mary Tuplin. It was at a party. About New Year's he called at her father's home one evening. Her parents retired at the usual hour, leaving the two alone together. He neve went into the house since that night.

THE SCENE OF THE TRAGEDY is situated in one of the most beautiful portions of the Island. The roads leading to it are clothed on every side with beech and maple. The home of the murdered girl stands in from the highway, covered with ivy. In front a dense woods with a sheep track spreads out down to the shore of the South-West or Eel River. On the other side, and some distance up the road is the home of Millman. Tuesday night, as the shadows gathered, she slipped out on the road, entered the gloom of the woods—and the rest is yet untold. If trees could speak what horrors could they unveil. Whether it was in those woods, upon the beach, or in the boat, the deed was done, none but an avenging God and hte demoniac perpetrators know but as the bullets crushed through the neck and head of the trusting and unsuspecting victim, and the soul went out in a wild shriek of anguish to its God, the murderer or murderers prepared to complete their gastly work. It was soon over. The ponderous stone that had ballasted the boat was tied to the frail, girlish waist. Out into the river the boat was pushed and when the rower thought the boiling spring was reached the corpse was sunk to the bottom.

LYNCHING A CHINESE MURDERER.

The Jury Said he Might Live, but the Crowd Decided Otherwise.

About 12:30 o clock the other morning Hong Di, the Chinese domestic who murdered Mrs. Billiou at St John, Cal., some time ago, was taken from jail and hanged by a mob. The murderer had been on trial for several days, and a verdict of guilty was returned on Saturday, the jury fixing the punishment at imprisonment for life. Mrs. Billiou, her two daughters, and William Weaver, head servant man, were sitting at supper when the door of the dining room was thrown open by Hong Di, the cook, who levelled a Winchester rifle at Weaver and shot him through the shoulder. He fell on the floor, and a second shot went through Mrs. Billiou's head, killing her instantly. Both daughters fled to an adjoining room and escaped uninjured.

The Chinaman fled, and Weaver managed to get on his feet and lock the door. No trace of the murderer could be found for nearly a week, when he was found on the bark of the Sacremento River, nearly starved to death. On hearing the verdict the crowd became exasperated. The Judge refused to accept the decision of the Jury, and a wild scene at once began. Almost every man present was armed, and in an instant a hundred pistols were drawn amid cries of "Lynch him!" The Sheriff jumped to his feet and quieted the crowd long enough to say that, while he disapproved of the verdict, he hoped no blood would be shed in court.

The crowd left the court room and the prisoner was removed to jail. Soon an effort was being made to lynch the Chinaman and while the Sheriff and his charge were inside a large and determined mob was forming outside the jail. All day long the crowd kept on the street, but no effort was made to get at the prisoner until near midnight. At that time the town was alive with strangers from surrounding places, including the Captain of a steamer and twenty of his crew. Citizens were posted at all avenues of escape, and about 12:30 o'clock a break was made for the jail. Guards had been posted by the Sheriff, but as they were in sympathy with those on the outside, little resistance was made. In a few minutes the assassin was in the avengers' hands.

Weaver, the man whom Hong Di had shot first, was present, rope in hand. The prisoner was at once dragged out and taken to the bridge shrieking and screaming in terror. His cries were addressed to deaf ears. The rope was put around his neck despite his desperate struggles, half a dozen men raised him in their arms, and he was tossed over the parapet. He was probably half dead when thrown over. He struggled feebly for a few moments. Shortly afterward the body was cut down by order of the sheriff and carried to the jail.

Sure Pop.

Polson's Nerviline, the great pain cure, is sure pop every time. No need to spend a large sum to get prompt relief from every kind of pain, for 10 cents will purchase a trial bottle. Go to any drug store for it. Large bottles only 25 cents, at all druggists. Neviline the pain king, cures cramps, headache, neuralgia. An aching tooth, filled with batting saturated with Nerviline, will cease aching within five minutes. Try Nerviline for all kinds of pain. Ten and 25 cents a bottle.

He Made a Neat Hit.

"Is there any one living here under twenty-one years of age?" inquired a man who rang the door bell to a Jarvis street residence the other day.

"No, there is not," rather sharply replied a spinster of eight-and-thirty summers who answered the ring.

"Why! Is it possible?" was the reply of the apparently astonished man, "don't you live here?"

It was a neat hit, and after a little simpering and a brief chat about the weather the maiden purchased two copies of a work entitled "Hints for the Young."

Why Laura Lost Her Beau.

Laura once had an affluent beau,
Who called twice a fortnight, or so,
Now she sits, Sunday eve,
All lonely to grieve,
Oh, where is her recreant beau,
And why did he leave Laura so?

Why, he saw that Laura was a languishing, delicate girl, subject to sick headaches, sensitive nerves and uncertain tempers; and knowing what a life-long trial is a fretful, sickly wife, he transferred his attentions to her cheerful, healthy cousin, Ellen. The secret is that Laura's health and strength are sapped by chronic weakness, peculiar to her sex, which Ellen averts and avoids by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This is the only remedy, for woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case or money will be refunded. See guarantee on bottle wrapper.

What is got by force must be maintained by force.

He ate green cucumbers;
They made him quite sick;
But he took a few "Pellets"
That cured him right quick.
An easier physic
You never will find
Than Pierce's small "Pellets,"
The Purgative kind.
Small but precious. 25 cents per vial.

Regrets are the natural property of gray hairs.

A Flat Contradiction.

Some one has told you that your catarrh is incurable. It is not so. Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy will cure it. It is pleasant to use and it always does its work thoroughly. We have yet to hear of a case in which it did not accomplish a cure when faithfully used. Catarrh is a disease which it is dangerous to neglect. A certain remedy is at your command. Avail yourself of it before the complaint assumes a more serious form. All druggists.

Nothing that is not true can possibly be good.

THE ASSESSMENT SYSTEM

Large Insurance Claim Paid—Endorsement of the Mutual Reserve.

Office of W. D. Matthews & Co., Grain and Produce Merchants, Toronto, 11th May, 1887.

J. D. Wells, Esq., General Manager Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association.:

Dear Sir—We beg to acknowledge receipt of cheque for Five Thousand Dollars in full of claim under a policy of insurance issued to us by the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association for that amount, as creditors of the late Edwin C. Fisher.

We have much pleasure in bearing testimony to the prompt and satisfactory manner in which this claim has been adjusted, and at the same time to express our confidence in your association. Having an intimate acquaintance with your President and chief officers, we know them to be gentlemen of the highest integrity, and in whose hands we believe the interests of the members of the Mutual Reserve are perfectly safe.

Wishing your association continued success.

Yours truly, W. D. Matthews & Co.

Stick to one business, young man.

People who are subject to bad breath, foul coated tongue, or any disorder of the Stomach, can at once be relieved by using Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, the old and tried remedy. Ask your Druggist.

Insist on yourself; never imitate.

LADIES

Who are Weak, Nervous and Exhausted; who fee themselves losing strength; who are pale, delicate and sickly in appearance, suffering from the many complaints peculiar to women—send for and read M. V. LUBON'S Treatise in book form on the Diseases of Women. Mailed sealed and secure from observation on receipt of 6c in stamps, unsealed free. Address, M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. East Toronto, Ont.

It is stated that a discharged bullet goes like lightning with a "ping!" But there is a speed faster and deadlier than this when malicious tongues are gossi-ping!

Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness and Hay Fever.

Sufferers are not genera ly aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whsreby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are cured in from one to three simple applications made at home. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent free on receipt of stamp by A. H. Dixon & Son, 308 King Street West Toronto Canada Concentration is the secret of strength.

YOUNG MEN suffering from the effects o early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted, also Middle-aged and Old Men who are broken-down from the effects o abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and read M. V. Lubon's Treatise on Diseases of Men, The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address M. V. Lubon, 47 Wellington St. E. Toronto, Ont.

Always scorn appearances, and you always may.

Whenever your Stomach or Bowels get out of or der, causing Biliousness. Dyspepsia, or Indigestion and their attendant evils, take at once a dose of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Best family medicine. All Druggists, 50 cents.

A. P. 356

WANTED—500 AGENTS—Male and Female—Large profits. C. W. DENNIS, Toronto.

PATENTS For Sale—Illustrative descriptive Catalogue free. R. Chamberlin, Toronto.

NO MORE PIMPLE—USE FAIRY FACE POWDER, best in the world, 25c. a box. GUIMON, 29 Versaille St., Montreal.

GOOD LIVE AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY County in Canada. Address, FERRIS & CO., 87 Church St., Toronto.

TORONTO CUTTING SCHOOL.—Gentlemen desirous of acquiring a thorough knowledge of garment cutting should apply at once to S. Corrigan, 122 Yonge St., Toronto. Terms on application.

AGENTS AND CANVASSERS wanted, Male or Female, whole or spare time, on salary or commission. Industrial Union of B.N.A., 45 Arcade, Toronto.

ANOTHER NOVELTY—Goldman's Sprinkler and Atomizer. All the rage in the States. Agents wanted. Sample by mail 45 cents. CLEMENT & CO., Toronto.

DR. WM. ARMSTRONG, Dermatologist. Specialty, Skin diseases, Scrofula and all diseases of the blood. All cancers cured that are cureable, without the use of the knife. Office hours, from 9 to 12 a.m. and from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m., Sabbaths excepted. 28 Dundas Street, Toronto.

COMPOUND OXYGEN—THE CONSERVATOR of health, the enemy of disease; heals the Lungs, Re-builds the Broken Down Constitution of young and old. Home treatment, sufficient for two months, Inhaler and all complete, sent by express for $12. Moved my office from 78 King West to 41 King East. MRS C. SEIDMAN FIEROE. Four years established in Toronto. 35 Office Treatments for $18. Send for circular.

GOLD, COMPOSITION GOLD, Antique Bronze, Natural Wood, and other Picture and Room Mouldings, Frames, etc Paintings, Engravings Etchings, Artotypes, Artists' Materials, Mirrors, etc. Wholesale and Retail. Trade Catalogue. MATTHEWS BROS. & CO., Toronto.

AGENTS—Ladies or Gentlemen Wanted—To Canvass for our Subscription Books. Our Standard and popular work, Dr. Withrow's "History of Canada"—a book which ought to be in every library. Our instructive, amusing and soul-touching temperance book, "Platform Echoes," by J. B. Gough. Our complete book of sermons, and autobiography of Sam P. Jones, with a short sketch of the life of Sam W. Small, and three of his special sermons. Our beautiful book of poetry and literature of all ages and all lands, entitled "Golden Thoughts on Mother, Home and Heaven." Our handsome Family Bibles, beautiful illustrations, full of useful and helpful matter for Bible study, besides good clear type and paper. Our terms are liberal. Send for circulars.

WILLIAM BRIGGS, Publisher, Toronto.

CLOTHES WRINGERS, 10 kinds; Mangles 8 kinds; Washing Machines, 2 kinds. Churns, Carpet Sweepers, Meat Choppers, Trucks, and other sundries. Hamilton Industrial Works Co., Hamilton, Canada. Send for article wanted or Illustrated Catalogue.

Awnings! Decorated Window Shades, &c. Wholesale and Retail, at the Celebrated Gold Medal Tent Manufactory, 70 King St. West, Toronto. NATIONAL MANUFACTUR'G CO

THE LONDON GUARANTEE AND ACCIDENT CO. (LD: OF LONDON, ENG. Capital, £260,000. Dominion Government Deposit, £55,000. Head Office: 72 King St East, Toronto. Gentlemen of influence wanted in unrepresented districts. A. T. McCORD, Resident Secretary for the Dominion.

Dairy Salt, FOR BUTTER, ETC.

NEW Importations.—Higgins' Eureka, Washington and Ashton Brands, in large or small sacks. Also Rice's Canadian Salt. Write for prices.

JAMES PARK & SON. Wholesale Produce Merchants Toronto.

—1887—

BUY NOW FOR IMMEDIATE SHIPMENT.

THE OSHAWA MOWERS

They surpass all other mowers in workmanship, quality of material, excellence of construction, and performance of work.

NEW MODEL THRESHERS.

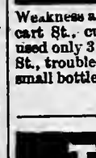
The best threshing machines in America. They do the largest amount of work, and thresh cleaner than any other machines can do the work. In excellence of construction they are unequalled. They are the best made in Canada, and are only equalled by their namesakes in the United States.

PORTABLE ENGINES.—No better agricultural engines are made.

HALL THRESHING MACHINES.—The best in the market for ho se-powers.

WOODBURY, or DINGEE, IMPROVED HORSE MOWERS, now the easiest running and best in the world.

Also the CALIFORNIA, PLANET, AND PITTS HORSE-POWERS, of established repute.



Repairs on hand for every machine made.

JOHN LIVINGSTONE, Trustee,

JOSEPH HALL MACHINE WORKS, OSHAWA.

MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO. MANUFACTURE ONLY FINEST Silver Plated Ware. Artistic Designs, combined with Unequalled Durability and Finish. HAMILTON ONT.

BABY'S BIRTHDAY.

A Beautiful Imported Birthday Card sent to any baby whose mother will send us the names of two or more other babies, and their parents' addresses. Also a handsome Diamond Dye Sample Card to the mother and much valuable information. Wells, Richardson & Co., Montreal.

Bicycles!

SEND AT ONCE FOR LIST of Second-Hand Machines, From $15 Upwards. New Catalogue Ready 1st April A. T. LANE MONTREAL.

MILLER'S TICK DESTROYER.

STOCKMEN, give this valuable preparation a fair trial. It operates promptly and effectually in destroying Ticks and other vermin pests, as well as in eradicating all affections of the skin to which Sheep are subject. Sold in Tins at 35c., 70c. and $1. A 35c. Tin will clean 20 Sheep or 35 Lambs. HUGH MILLER & Co., Toronto.

MAY APPLE BLOOD SYRUP

THE greatest discovery of the present age for Regulating the Bowels, and Clearing all Blood, Liver and Kidney Complaints. A perfect Blood Purifier. A few in Hamilton who have been benefited by its use: Mrs. M Keenan, 192 Robert St., cured of Erysipelas of 2 yrs. standing; Robt Gordon, 24 South St., daughter cured of Epileptic Fits after 6 years' suffering; Jennie Birrell, 55 Walnut St., cured of Weakness and Lung Trouble: John Wood, 95 Cathcart St., cured of Liver Complaint and Biliousness, used only 3 fifty-cent bottles; Mrs. J. Beal, 6 Augusta St., troubled for years with Nervous Prostration, two small bottles gave her great relief. Sold at 50c. & $1. F. F. DALLEY & CO., Proprietors.

THE WHITE THRESHING ENGINE OF LONDON, ONT. A FULL SUPPLY FOR 1887

J. L. JONES WOOD ENGRAVER 10 King St East TORONTO.

Markdale Standard.

C. W. Rutledge, Proprietor.

MARKDALE, AUG. 4, 1887.

CROP PROSPECTS.

We find, on driving through this district this week, that harvest is now calling for the reapers on all sides. Never in the history of the country was it as early as the present season. Fully one half of the spring grain will be ripe this first week in August and a very considerable quantity cut last week, July.. Crops are a uniform abundant yield, while the various kinds of spring grain, wheat, oats, barley and pease, appear to be sown in about equal quantities, or perhaps wheat the smallest acreage of the four kinds named. Barley has been saved in prime condition, and will thus be a valuable crop.

The root crop gives promise of an abundant yield; potatoes are planted in large quantities and look excellent, and fruit is a good average crop. Should the delightful harvest weather of the past two weeks continue, the bulk of spring grain will be cut before the 15th inst.

OUR ROADS.

Having had occasion to do some driving through the country recently our observations were not confined to the growing crops, as the rough roads and everlasting rolling stones, are a source of perpetual—though not pleasing—sensation, especially to an invalid; for whose benefit we were driving. We find our gravel road—which has done great service for many years—is now literally, a thing of the past. The roadbed has become so low and flat that where there is an incline or hill, the water invariably takes its course down the middle of the road, thereby washing off the clay or fine gravel and leaving the large stone painfully prominent. There is considerable statue labor done on this road from year to year, which is performed in a manner which seems to us useless, if not actually detrimental, viz.—by scattering coarse gravel along in places, in sufficient quantities to make the road rough. Now we are convinced that if the labor thus appropriated was judiciously performed in grading the road, a short distance each year, it would be the wiser plan; a sample of this latter can be seen half a mile north of Markdale. Another strong argument in favor of our idea. is the fact that our back roads are much better than the gravel road. It is of course too late to make amends for this season, as the statute labor is all done, but we hope to see a change for the better another year.

NOTE AND COMMENT.

—The suggestion to add a column to the voters' lists, giving the amount each ratepayer is assessed for, is worthy of consideration.

—The South Western branch of the C. P. R. from Winnipeg, is expected to be extended this fall, to meet the demands of the abundant crop.

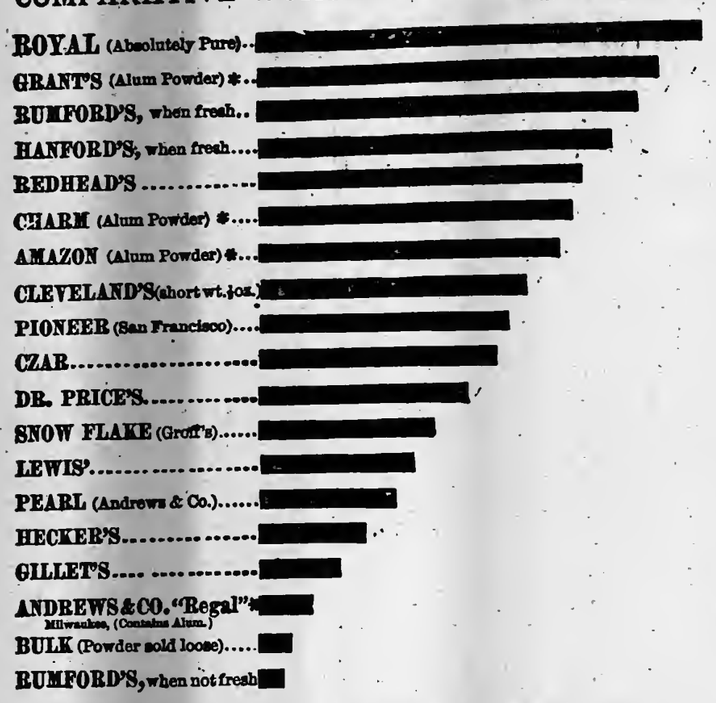
—President John Taylor, of the Mormon Church, having died a few days ago, Wilfred Woodruff, as President of the Twelve Apostles, has become President of the Church, the organization thus continuing without interruption.

—Whitby has not been lucky in its bonus speculations. The town has given somewhere in the neighborhood of $110,000 to secure the permament establishment of railway shops, and of an organ factory, each establishment to employ fifty hands; and to-day there is but one man employed in the railway works, while the sole occupant of the organ factory is a cow.

Baby life insurance is become popular in the United States, and it is said that over 800,000 children between the ages of one and twelve are insured there. They are chiefly the children of workingmen, and the insurance is generally carried to defray funeral expences in case of death. The premium is paid weekly as a rule, and is in all cases five cents a week. The benefit varies from $14 for a child that dies within one year to $123 for one that dies in the twelfth year.

—Sir. S. A. Blackwood, the secretary of the Imperial Post Office Department, is to visit Canada and investigate as to the conveniences and facilities of our steamships and railways for transmitting mail matter, with a view to the possible adoption of the Canadian route between Great Britain and China and Japan. Very few people have visited Western Canada without being favorably impressed. Let us hope that the latest visitor will be no exception to the rule.

—The Thornbury News has issued a pamphlet of some thirty pages as a "Jubilee Souvenir" containing an account of Queen Victoria's Coronation, a synopsis of the early history of Grey county, together with the municipal history of Collingwood township; also a sketch of Thornbury with a biographical sketch of the first town council of the new town. Had the editor used better paper in this interesting pamphlet it would have a much better appearance, especially to a critic; as it is, it will be perused with much interest, and Mr. Starrett deserves cred it for his enterprise and labor.



—The Dominion Exhibition for the present year is to be held at Toronto, from the 5th to the 17th of September next, in conjunction with the great Industrial Fair, and these two exhibitions combined in one will, without doubt, be the grandest affair of the kind we have yet had in Canada, The Prizes offered amounting to the large sum of $30,000. Entries in all departments, except in fruit and grain have to be made before the 13th of August, and intending exhibitors who have not yet obtained a copy of the prize list should lose no time in doing so; it can be obtained by dropping a post-card to Mr. Hill, the secretary at Toronto.

—A hen, half black Spanish and half game, has been doing a land office bussiness at Rolla, Mo. She laid her first egg on the 10th day of May, 1886 and has continued to lay an egg every day since. She went to setting as soon as she laid her first egg, and is still on her nest. She comes off every morning to get water and food and then goes back. She has hatched one egg a day except the first three weeks of her career. She has now been laying one year and is the mother and hatcher of 344 chickens, one-half pullets and the other half roosters—and she still looks well.

—The Lawless Liquor sellers of Ontario have, within the past few months, made such flagrant, desperate and systematic attempts to break down the Scott Act that the ten thousand dollars voted by the Legislature at Toronto last session for the enforcement of the Act has been entirely absorbed. The Government however, are determined to vindicate the sovereignty of law despite the pecuiarny cost, or the efforts of the liquor traffic to undermine it, and they have set apart a further sum for Scott Act enforcement, of twenty-five thousand dollars out of the vote for unforeseen expenses. By planting themselves firmly as the champions of the law, even though frowned upon for so doing by Prof. Goldwin Smith and his followers, the Ontario Government are doing noble service for the mora well-being of the whole Dominion.

KEEP YOUR HOUSE GUARDED.—Keep you, house guarded against sudden attacks of colic cramps, diarrhœa, dyspepsia and cholera infantum. They are liable to come when least expected. The safest, best and most reliable remedy is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

COMPARATIVE WORTH OF BAKING POWDERS.

REPORTS OF GOVERNMENT CHEMISTS

As to Purity and Wholesomeness of the Royal Baking Powder.

"I have tested a package of Royal Baking Powder, which I purchased in the open market, and find it composed of pure and wholesome ingredients. It is a cream of tartar powder of a high degree of merit, and does not contain either alum or phosphates, or other injurious substances. E. G. Love, Ph.D."

"It is a scientific fact that the Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure. "H. A. Mott, Ph.D."

"I have examined a package of Royal Baking Powder, purchased by myself in the market. I find it entirely free from alum, terra alba, or any other injurious substance. Henry Morton, Ph.D., President of Stevens Institute of Technology."

"I have analyzed a package of Royal Baking Powder. The materials of which it is composed are pure and wholesome. S. Dana Hayes, State Assayer, Mass."

The Royal Baking Powder received the highest award over all competitors at the Vienna World's Exposition, 1873; at the Centennial, Philadelphia, 1876; at the American Institute, New York, and at State Fairs throughout the country.

No other article of human food has ever received such high, emphatic, and universal endorsement from eminent chemists, physicians, scientists, and Boards of Health all over the world.

Note—The above Diagram illustrates the comparative worth of various Baking Powders, as shown by Chemical Analysis and experiments made by Prof. Schedler. A pound can of each powder was taken, the total leavening power or volume in each can calculated, the result being as indicated. This practical test for worth by Prof. Schedler only proves what every observant consumer of the Royal Baking Powder knows by practical experience, that, while it costs a few cents per pound more than ordinary kinds, it is far more economical, and, besides, affords the advantage of better work. A single trial of the Royal Baking Powder will convince any fair minded person of these facts.

* While the diagram shows some of the alum powders to be of a higher degree of strength than other powders ranked below them, it is not to be taken as indicating that they have any value. All alum powders, no matter how high their strength, are to be avoided as dangerous.

MARKDALE CARRIAGE WORKS.

R. McNALLY:—Would hereby announce to the people of Markdale and the public generally that I have moved into my new carriage shop opposite the Markdale House, where I will manufacture every article in the wagon and carriage line, and having long experience in the business, and by using first class material, I can guarantee satisfaction to every one who will favor me with their order.

Repairing, Painting and Trimming promptly attended to.

A call respectfully solicited,

R. McNALLY, Proprietor

Massey Agency,

Holland Centre.

TORONTO Light Binder woodframe 5 & 6 feet cut

MASSEY Harvester

TORONTO MOWER, ue and two horse.

MASSEY MOWER.

SHARP'S RAKE.

A full stock of repairs kept constantly on hand for the above machines

REPAIRS STRICTLY CASH.

Also agent for Hall's patent reversible HayCarrier, Manufactured by Cochrin Bro's, St. Thomas, and Fox Pea Harvester, Owen Sound.

THOS. WILLISCROFT, Agent.

MARKDALE SAsH and DOOR FACTORY.

Having erected and fitted up in every detail a Sash, Door and Plain Factory, containing all the latest and most approved machinery, everything being new, I am now prepared to turn out

Sash, Doors, Blinds, Mouldings, Hollow Battons,

FRAMES, LATH, FENCE PICKETS, &c.,

And everything needed in the building trade, in a manner second to none in Canada, and having engaged superior mechanics in every department, I would now respectfully solicit public patronage.

Every Effort Made to fill Orders Promptly

PINE LUMBER Dressed and Undressed

Direct from North Shore, all sizes, on hand. Plain and Fancy Turning done

Careful Attention to Orders from a Distance.

808 THOS. McNEA.

STARTLING SLAUGHTER

The knife driven right into the bone.

McFarland is going to sell every yard of summer dress goods at and under cost.

15 cent Check Lustres for 10 cents.
35 " Ottoman Cord for 25 cents.
15 " Cashmerettes for 9 cents.
30 " Stripe Balermos for 20 cents.
30 " Camlets and DeBieges for 22 cents.
20 " Canvas Clothes for 12½ cents.
37½ " All Wool Lace Stripe (west end cloth.) 25 cents.

Note, only a limited number of yards of these goods are left.

65 cent Ladies' silk mitts for 25c.

27 Ends Colored and Black Satins and Silks under cost.

A variety of remnants of different materials under cost.

2000 doz. Ivory Buttons all sizes from 3c, per doz. up.

3 Only handsome Embroidered Dresses $1.50.

Lace Gloves, Parasols, at actual cost.

A good sensible Parasol for 15c.

24 Men's Balbriggan Undershirts and Drawers 30c.

24 Men's Balbriggan Undershirts and Drawers 50c.

60 Youth's and Misses Straw Hats old price 40c. now 20c.

Agood useful Table Linen only 9c.

Garter Elastic 2c. per yd.

16 doz. Woman Hose 10c. per pair.

60 pairs Womens Fancy Striped Stitched Hose former price 55c. on the counter now at 25c.

71 Men's Black and Colored Felt Hats old price ranged from $1.00 to $2.00 your choice of the lot for 50c.

5 Cases Men's Long Boots for harvesting at $1.50 per pair.

Heavy Direct Importations are now on the way from the European markets and room must be made for them. Come in and ask for goods not advertised and we will give you some eye openers.

☞ Every article in this column is in stock now. If you want them call on us early after seeing this, that we may not be under the painful necessity of telling you we are sold out.

W. J. McFARLAND,

Direct Importer.

MARKDALE.

ADDITIONAL NOTES.

Three by-laws were voted on and carried in Toronto last Tuesday; No. 1 to raise $100,000 for a drill shed. No. 2 to raise $100,000 to build works to protect the Island. No. 3 to raise $190,000 for water works.

—It is announced that the Imperial Government has decided to grant a subsidy to the Canadian Pacific Railway. It is hoped to make the new route a great source of advantage to English speculators.

—Montreal had a $100,000 fire on Tuesday last.

—London, England, has police force of 13,849 men.

—At a meeting of gentlemen connected with agricultural societies throughout the province, held at at the Rossin House, Toronto, on Tuesday the 26th July, to discuss the advisability of memorializing the Ontario Government to grant aid towards centralizing fairs or exhibitions, the general opinions appeared to be that township shows have outlived their usefulness, and that Central Fairs must now take their place, although some present spoke strongly in favor of the townships shows, and would oppose anything which would interfere with the grants now made by government to those institutions. The following resolutions was carried unanimously:—"That this meeting, believing that the time has arrived when the Provincial Legislature should be asked to give grants to such of the central exhibitions as may be established on such financial basis and under such rules and regulations as may be laid down by the government, resolved, that the chairman and secretary be instructed to call a general meeting of the representatives of the difierent central exhibitions in Ontario in order that this matter be more thoroughly discussed and placed in a proper shape, said meeting to be held some time in the month of January, 1888, at Toronto.

Mormons at Riverview.

(From the Dundalk Herald.)

The Mormons at Riverview are meeting with keen opposition. The people are incensed against their doctrines as announced by them, and are indignant that their cultured and christianized community should be invaded by such heterodox and false teachers and teachings.

Week before last quite a seance was held at the Grand River above the village. Three candidates were to have been babtized (?) but only one put in an appearance. The others backed out. Such a scene as occurred was indescribable. Barking and dipping of dogs, expostulations and insults by the preacher (?), cheers from some present were things that occurred. Report says that some one not a candidate was in danger of a severe ducking.

Last week as a party of Mormons were driving out, a barricade was thrown up by some parties on the road, but when the parties who did it considered the danger that might happen in the darkness, it was thrown down; but avail was had to the use of rotten eggs, which were thrown freely at the "Saints" by some party or parties unknown. Such a sight as the day light presented next morning when eyes were fastened upon occupants, equipage and equines and earthly wardrobes is simply indiscribable. The community is resolved that the sect shall nave no position or progress here, and it has the whole strength of the moral and religious people at its back, although, perhaps, the measures used for its extirpation, is not sanctioned by the latter.—[Truth.

Better than gold.—To those troubled with Kidney and Urinary Troubles such as a constant desire to urinate, shooting, scalding, pains, pain in the back, sediment, &c., &c., Dr. Chase's Liver Cure will be found more valuable than gold. It positively cures. See "Prophet" for testimonials.

IMPORTANT!

TO all users of Machine Oils, don't forget to call on E. S. MABEE, Sign of the Cross-Cut Saw, Markdale, and ask for the CASTOR E. OIL, it is unequalled by any.

"AURORA"

WATER WHITE OIL,

is equal to American for brillance of light.

Empire Oil Co.,

Refiners & Manufacturer's,

3 49-75 London and Toront

CLIPPINGS.

Accident.—On Monday afternoon an old man named Hamilton McLeod while digging in the cellar at the rear part of Butchart's new building, had his leg broken near the ankle by a small portion of the earth caving in. Drs. McCulloch and Denhart set the injured limb; but it will be some time before he will be able to be around again, two bones being broken. He comes from near Markdale, and was depending on his daily earnings. We understand that Mr. R. P. Butchart has generously offered to pay necessary attendance and board till the man is well again; but we think it time that a House of Refuge was built by the County, where needy persons could be provided for at the public expens.—[O. S, Times.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel for purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low est, short weight alum or phosphate powders sold only in cans," Royal Baking Powder Co. 106 Wall St., N. Y.

SIGHT v. BLINDNESS.

N. STANLEY'S

CELEBRATED

English Spectacles

79 BAY STREET, TORONTO CANADA.

—AND—

18 JEWIN STREET, LONDON E. C. ENGLAND.

—:x:—

R. L. Stephen's,

CHEMIST & DRUGGIST, Markdale

Has the Agency for the sale of the above in MARKDALE. No Spectacles in the Market equal them in the EYE PRESERVING QUALITIES they possess, or the GREAT EASE and COMFORT they confer on the wearer.

Their use will in actuality so strengthen the Eyes that it does not become necessary to change them for many years. They are therefore the CHEAPEST.

THEY ARE THE BEST IN THE WORLD
THEY NEVER TIRE THE EYE
AND LAST MANY EYARS WITHOUT CHANGE.

The Sight tests by our New Test Card, same as used by the leading Oculists throughout the world. 357-409

Voters' List for 1887.

Municipality of the Township of Glenelg, County of Grey.

NOTICE is hereby given, that I have transmitted or delivered to the persons mentioned in the third and fourth sections of "The Voters List Act," the copies required by said section to be transmitted or delivered of the list made, pursuant to said act, of all persons appearing by the last revised Assessment Roll of the said Municipality to be entitled to vote in said Municipality at Elections for members of the Legislative Assembly, and the Municipal Elections; and said list was posted up at my office at Lot 24 Con. 4, Township of Glenelg, on the 20th day of July, 1887, and remains there for inspection.

Electors are called upon to examine the said list, and, if any ommissions or any other errors are found therein, to take immediate proceedings to have the said error corrected according to law.

JOHN S. BLACK,
Clerk of the said Municipality.

Dated this 20th day of July A. D. 1887.
359-61

STRAYED.

To the premises of Alex. McLellan, lot pt. 60 con, 1st, East T. & S. Road, Holland. A yearling steer, red. The owner can have it by proving property and paying expences.

Alex. McLellan.
359-62 Berkeley, P. O.

FOR SALE.

Cheap for cash, one Milch Cow, span young Mares, one of which has a fine Colt from "Terror," one two-year-old Colt (Clear Grit) and one year-old Heifer.

559-61 WM. BROWN.

HEAD QUARTERS

—FOR—

Books, Stationery, Fancy Goods, Toys, Wall Paper, &c.

Toronto St. next Door to the Mansion House, Markdale.

A. Dinsmore returns his sincere thanks for the very liberal support accorded him since commencing as above, and hopes by strict attention to business and moderate prices to merit a continuance of public appreciation and patronage. Those requiring

WALL PAPERS

would consult their own interest by examining his stock, consisting of over Three Thousand pieces at from 5 to 75c. per Roll. Sunday Schools requiring Liberary Books will find Hundreds to select from and at such FAVORABLE TERMS as are sure to satisfy.

☞ Note the fact.—That until I commenced business there was no such thing as a special discount allowed to Sunday Schools, or if you wanted Books could not get them unless by sending to Toronto or elsewhere, now your wants can be supplied at your Door and at lower prices than Toronto. I therefore with confidence appeal for public support. A full line of School Books, Stationery, &c., always on hand, also agent for the DOMESTIC PAPER PATTERNS. Agent also for The Harden Star Hand Grenade for Extinguishing Fires. ☞ NOTE THE ADDRESS,

A. Dinsmore.

New General Provision Store

THE undersigned would hereby respectfully intimate to the inhabitants of Markdale and surrounding country that I've opened up a general Provision store where I intend to keep on hand a general supply of all kinds of provisions such as:—

FLOUR, OATMEAL, CORNMEAL INDIAN CORN, GRASS SEED, OATS, BRAN, SHORTS, CHOPP, SCREENINGS. also a quantity of SEED GRAIN, HAMS, BACON, LARD, &c., in fact everything people want in this line.

Shop one door west of Joe Lamb's Blacksmith shop.

Soliciting a share of public patronage I am respectfully yours,

Jas. Miller
MARKDALE.

6 PER CENT.

Money loaned on Farm or Town Property at lowest rates of interest. Apply to
R. J. SPROULE,
Conveyancer & Postmaster. Flesherton.

Dr. Low's pleasant worm syrup is a safe and reliable worm remedy for all worms afflicting children or adults.

SAY!

Did you ever in your life hear the potato bug sing? Have you seen them when they got up on their hind legs and whoop and holler with joy, holding their feelers to their stomach rolling over and over almost tickled to death? So much so that every muscle in their bodies is vibrating to the fullest extent. In fact they go into convulsions with laughter at the haggard and woe-begone look of the man who buys impure Paris Green.

BUT STRAIGHT BUSINESS

buy your Paris Green,

—AT—

Stephen's Drug Store,

and your bugs will kick straight quick and die.

Use Stephen's Insect Powder, it is the Shoor! Shoorer!! Shoorerest!!! in the market.

HAVE ARRIVED

5 gross of the Celebrated Diamond Dyes.

1 gross of Burdock Blood Bitters.

½ gross of Richardson & Well's Butter Color.

Prescriptions Dispensed day and night,

—AT—

R. L. Stephen's.

R. S. Rae,  Tailor.

REMOVED.

In returning thanks to my numerous customers for liberal patronage during the past 14 years in which I have done business in Markdale, and soliciting a continuance of the same, I would also intimate that I have removed to my premises on Mill Street, next door to Stephen's Drug Store, and opposite to the Post Office; where I shall be happy to meet all my customers.

Respectfully Yours,

R. S. RAE,
Markdale

=TORONTO HOUSE.=

I am offering this week Ready-Made Clothing, and

BOOTS & SHOES

—AT—

astonishingly low prices. Persons requiring a summer outfit would do well to see my stock.

Wm Brown.

NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that any person or persons found trespassing or fishing on the farms of the undersigned will be prosecuted according to law without further notice.

Signed:—

John B. Thibaudeau, Thos. Brady
Edward Brady, James Brady,
William Brady, Wm. McCutcheon
John Shears, Geo. Richardson,
Wm. McNally, George McNally,
James Elliott, James Stinson,
Adam Hislop, Robt Graham,
John Webber, John Perkins.

OWEN SOUND

MARBLE WORK

H. B. HARRISON.

MANUFACTURER OF

MARBLE AND GRANITE

MONUMENTS & HEADSTONES

Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.

JUST RECEIVED

3 Carloads Finest Variegate Marble

☞ Largest stock in the Dominion select from. Personally selected at the quarries in Vermont. Will be sold at prices which defy competition.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

N. B.—Beware of Monuments and Head stones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered together, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide the imperfections, and called White Bronze.

H. B. HARRISON

ROBT. ASKIN,

UNDERTAKER,

MARKDALE,

FUNERAL FURNISHINGS

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—

FURNITURE.

In Stock at bottom prices.

PICTURE FRAMING

Done on short notice.

ROBT. ASKIN.

WM. BREADNER.

Carpender and Builder

GEORGE St., MARKDALE.

ALL kinds of building and house carpenter work done in the village or country. Call early before the rush comes. 339-52

CARD OF THANKS.

In thanking my customers for their liberal patronage in the past, I have much pleasure in being still able to supply them with the following celebrated machines, viz.

The Watson all-steel two-horse twine Binder.
The Watson Deering Binder.
The Watson Improved Lion Reaper.
The New Humming Mower.
The Humming-bird Mower.
The Watson Daisy Rake.
The Mann Champion Rake.
The Tolten Pea Harvester.
The Mann Broad-cast Seeder and Harrows Combined.
The Champion Combined Drill, Colter & Scott, Oshawa.
The best Plow's and Harrows in the market.
Root Cutters, Grain Crushers, Fanning mills. Land Rollers.
Agent for the Watersou's Co's Machinery and Steam Threshers.
Horse Powers, Wagon's Buggies, Democrats, and every implement a farmer requires. Parties reqiring anything in above lines will find it to their advantage to call at my new implement house opposite R. McNally's Carriage works, where Mr. R, Robertson will be pleased to wait on customers in my absence.

J.H. CARSON, Agent
148-61 Markdale.

CANADIAN PACIFIC R. R.

TIME TABLE.

—Markdale Station—

Going South.	6 47 a. m.	3.52 p. m
Going North.	12.02 p. m.	9.10 p. m

Burdock Blood Bitters

WILL CURE OR RELIEVE

BILIOUSNESS, DIZZINESS,
DYSPEPSIA, DROPSY,
INDIGESTION, FLUTTERING OF THE HEART,
JAUNDICE. ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH,
ERYSIPELAS, DRYNESS OF THE SKIN,
SALT RHEUM, HEARTBURN,
HEADACHE,

And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD.

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.

THE BOTTOMLESS JUG.

I saw it hanging in the kitchen of a thrifty, healthy, sturdy farmer in Oxford County—a bottomless jug! The host saw that the curious thing caught my eye and smiled.

"You are wondering what that jug is hanging up there for, with its bottom knocked out," he said. "My wife perhaps, can tell you the story better than I can; but she is bashful and I ain't, so I'll tell it.

"My father, as you are probably aware, owned this farm before me. He lived to a good old age, worked hard all his life, never squandered money, was a cautious trader and a good calculator; and, as men were accounted in his day and generation, a temperate man. I was the youngest boy, and when the old gentleman was ready to go—and he knew it—the others agreed that, since I had stayed at home and taken care of the old folks, the farm should be mine. And to me it was willed. I had been married three years.

Well, father died—mother had gone three years before—and left the farm to me with a mortgage on it for $2,000. I said to Mollie, my wife:

"Mollie, look here. Here father's had this farm in its first strength of soil, with all its magnificent timber and his six boys, as they grew up, equal to so many men, to help, and he worked hard—worked hard—worked late and early—and yet, look at it! A mortgage of two thousand dollars! What can I do?

"And I went to that jug—it had a bottom in it then—and took a good, stiff drink of old Meaford rum from it.

"I noticed the curious look on the face of my wife just then, and asked her what she thought of it, for I supposed she was thinking of what I had been talking about. And so she was, for she said:

"'Charles, I've thought of this a great deal, and I've thought of a way in which I believe you can clear this mortgage off before five years are ended.'

"Says I; 'Mollie, tell me how you'll do it.'

"She thought for awhile, and then said, with a funny twinkle in her blue eyes—says she:

"'Charles, you must promise me this, and promise me most solemnly and sacredly; promise me that you will never bring home for the purpose of drinking as a beverage, at any time, any more spirits than you can bring in that jug—the jug your father has used ever since I knew him, and which you have used since he has done with it."

"Well, I knew father used once in a while, especially in haying time and in winter when we were at work in the woods, to get an old gallon jug filled; so I thought that she meant that I should never buy more than two quarts at a time. I thought it over, and after a little while told her I would agree to it.

"'Now, mind,' said she, 'you are never, never to bring home any more spirits than you can bring in that identical jug.' And I gave her my promise.

"And before I went to bed that night I took the last pull at the jug. As I was turning it out for a sort of night cap, Mollie looked up and says she:

"'Charley, have you got a drop left?'

"There was just about a drop left. We'd have to get it on the morrow. Then she said, if I had no objections, she would drink that last drop with me. I shall never forget how she said it, 'that last drop!' However, I tipped the old jug bottom up and got about a great spoonful and that was enough, Molly said. She took a tumbler and poured a few drops of hot water into it and a bit of sugar, and then she tinkled her glass against mine, just as she'd seen us boys do when we'd been drinking to good-luck, and she says:

"'Here's to the old brown jug!'

"Sakes alive! I thought to myself that poor Molly had been drinking more rum than was good for her, and I tell you it kinder cut me to the heart. I forgot all about how many times she'd seen me when my tongue was thicker than it ought to be and my legs not so steady as good legs should be; but I said nothing. I drank the sentiment: 'The old brown jug,' and let it go.

"Well I went out after that and done my chores and then went to bed, and the last thing I said before leaving the kitchen, this very room where we are now, was: 'We'll have the old brown jug filled to-morrow.'

"And then I went off to bed. And I have remembered ever since that I went to bed that night as I had done hundreds of times before, with buzzing in my head that a healthy man ought not to have. I didn't think of it then, nor had I ever thought of it before, but I have thought of it a good many times since, and have thought of it with wonder and awe.

"Well, I got up next morning and did my work at the barn and then came in and ate my breakfast, but with no such appetite as a farmer ought to have, and I could not think then that my appetite had begun to fail. However, I ate my breakfast, and went out and hitched the old mare, for to tell the plain truth, I was feeling in need of a glass of spirits and I hadn't a drop in the house! I was in a hurry to get to the village. I hitched up and came in for the jug. I went for it to the old cupboard and took it out, and—

"Did you ever break through thin ice on a snapping told morning, and find yourself in an instant overhead in freezing water? Because that was the way I felt at that moment. The jug was there but the bottom was gone. Mollie had taken a sharp chisel and a hammer, and with a skill that might have done credit to a master workman, she had clipped the bottom clean off the jug without even cracking the edges of the sides. I looked at the jug and then she burst out. She spoke—oh, I had never heard anything like it. She said:

"'Charles, that's where the mortgage on this farm came from! It was brought home within that jug—two quarts at a time! And that's where your white, clear skin and clear pretty blue eyes are going! And in that jug, my husband, your appetite is going also! Oh, let the bottom stay out forever! Let it be as it is, dear heart. And remember your promise to me.'

"And then she threw her arms around me and burst into tears. She could speak no more.

"And there was no need. My eyes were opened as if by magic. In a single minute the whole scene passed before me. I saw all the mortgages on the farms in our neighborhood; and I thought where the money had gone. The very last mortgage father had ever made was to pay a bill held against him by the man who had filled his jug for years. Yes, I saw it as it passed before me; a flittering picture of rum! rum! rum! debt! debt! debt! and in the end, death! And I returned my Mollie's kiss, and said I:

"'Mollie, my own, I'll keep the promise! I will, so help me heaven!'

"And I have kept it. In less than five years, as Mollie said, the mortgage was cleared off; my appetite came back to me; and now we've got a few thousand dollars at interest. There hangs the old jug; just as we hung it on that day; and from that time there hasn't been a drop of spirits brought into the house for a beverage, which that bottomless jug wouldn't hold.

"Dear old jug! We mean to keep it and hand it down to our children for the lesson it can give to them; a lesson of life; of a happy life, peaceful, prosperous and blessed!"

And as he ceased speaking his wife with her arm drawn tenderly around the neck of her youngest boy, murmured a fervent amen.

Bunch Your Hits.

Of late years a new language has sprung up in America. It is the language of base ball. It is a unique and graphic tongue and can be mastered somewhat easier than German or French. The Dr. Johnsons of this language are the base ball reporters of the different papers that make the chronicling of the great game a specialty. The man who knows not base ball finds himself hopelessly lost when he attempts to read an account of the game as written by the sporting reporter. He sees the column full of "pop flies," "lawnmowers," "grasshoppers," "foul tips," "hot liners," and other terms that have no meaning to him. To the initiated, however, all these expressions tell every tersely what has happened. One phrase very often met with is the "bunching of hits." We read that such a club "got their eye on the ball" and batted the pitcher all over the field, but failed to win the game because they did not "bunch their hits." It is quite possible for a club to make say eighteen safe hits and nine innings and yet scatter the hits in such a manner that not a single run is scored. The opposing club may make but nine safe hits and yet so much bunch them that they run up a good score and win the game. Herein lies a great moral lesson that is applicable not only to the base ball public, but to the world at large. Bunch your hits, gentlemen. Every man is a condensed base ball club. He is in the race for the pennant of wealth or fame. A great deal is going to depend on his players, but more will depend on whether he bunches his hits or not. The first requisite is to select your players with care, the next to see that they bunch their hits. Craftiness, dishonesty and cunning are three very brilliant players, who sometimes make splendid catches, but they are very unsafe men to depend on and they are generally caught napping at the bases before the game is over. A very good all around nine are the following well-known sluggers: Caution, catcher; Ambition, pitcher; Industry, first base and captain of the club; Energy, second base; Alertness, third base; Politeness, short stop; Good Temper, right field; Sobriety, center field, and Honesty, left field. It is true that Ambition sometimes pitches a high ball that caution is not able to stop and a game is lost in consequence, but all in all this makes a very good nine that works well together. A club like this is reasonably certain to have a good position at the finish if it bunches its hits. Many a man puts forth enough energy in the game of life to win many of the prizes and yet he wins nothing. He makes a hit, but don't follow it up until his side is out. In the next inning she does the same, but the hits are not bunched and there is nothing to his credit on the scoreboard. So, young man, just out of college, remember that what has gone before is merely the preliminary practice of the club. Get your players well in hand; retire all doubtful base runners; engage sound ones to take their places and then "bunch your hits."

A Pneumatic Tube to Europe.

Col. J. H. Pierce, of Saithington, who has been studying the use of pneumatic tubes, has reached a point at which he hopes to show that a tube across the Atlantic can be used. Following is a description of the apparatus as he conceives it:—The tube will always be in couples, with the currents of air in one tube always moving in an opposite direction from the other. The heaviest cannon will serve to illustrate the tube. A car takes the place of the charge, the tube to be indefinitely continuous and the speed of the car to be governed by the rapidity with which air can be forced through. Time is required to establish a current of air flowing with great swiftness through a tube perhaps thousands of miles in length, but when once created the motion will be nearly uniform. The speed of the current may be made as great as may be desired by using the steam driver fans employed in blast furnaces. Niagara Falls could drive blast fans and furnish motive power to keep in motion the trains to connect this continent with the Old World. The temperature within the tube may be regulated by passing blasts of air entering the tube through furnaces or over ice. The speed attainable may reach 1,000 miles an hour. The tube lining and car exterior would be of polished steel with corrugated sides matching with wheels provided with anti-fraction bearings. The speed, owing to the curvature of the earth's surface, will tend to overcome all weight and the pressure will be upon the upper part of the tube; thus there is scarcely any limit to the speed attainable. The inventions consists in the details of the work.

Boarding-House Chat.

"Why is marble cake so called?"

"Marble cake is so called because it is marble cake—carved out of the solid rock in Italy and imported here at great expense."

"What's the idea of that?"

"Economy. It's cheaper in the long run. You see a piece of genuine marble cake will last a long time. Now here's a piece on this plate that has been in the house ever since I came to town—thirteen years ago this summer. Examine it closely and you will observe that it is almost as good as new. You will see here and there some scratches. They were made by strangers who had extra good teeth. There's a spawl knocked off that corner. That was done by the Man with the Iron Jaw who was through here last summer with the circus."

SEA SERPENTS.

Some of The Strange Creatures of the Alaskan Seas.

All sides of this enchanting Unalashka Island are deeply indented by bays and fiords. Reefs and rocks, sunken and awash, extend seaward in a southerly direction to long distances, churned incessantly by the heavy billows which break upon them; but around the northern and eastern margins more good harbors are claimed than for all the other Islands of the Aluetian Archipelago put together. In these sheltered channels and inlets, as well as in the raceways of the outlying reefs, fish in great variety abound—cod, herring, halibut, salmon, trout and many other edible kinds, feeding upon the surf washings and the scourings of the ocean bottoms which are carried in by the winds and tides.

And stranger forms of marine life are there in extraordinary presentation, wiard, uncouth, and rapacious; some hideous with tentacles, claws, and spines, and serried teeth, and others charged with batteries electrical—creatures devilish in temper and base in motive, who lurk among the weeds and algæ which cling to the rocks or forage stealthily among the rafts of kelp drifting with the tide. In such an uncanny range as this one variety of the sea serpent makes his home and thrives, holding his own against all comers. In haunts like this he takes on fat and grows apace. I do not know that he ever attains to the magnitude of those pelagic rangers which are sometimes encountered in the high seas, or indeed, that he aspires to, but he often measures a dozen feet in length, which is a big enough snake to convince the most incredulous. Prototypes of the creature exist in considerable numbers. Their customary range is off shore among the sunken reefs where the rock cod resort, which is their favorite food; but they are occasionally entangled in the ropy sea weeds which fringe the landwash, in which dilemma the natives do not hesitate to wade in behind them and drive them up on shore, stunning them with clubs. In this way the specimen before us was caught. He measured six feet long and ten inches thick. The capture was made on June 15, 1880, and a drawing was executed while the creature was still squirming, by S. Rapinsky, a creole missionary teacher at Ilinlink, but unfortunately the serpent itself was not preserved. He seemed a most extraordinary mongrel, manifestly much more of a fish than an eel appears to be, or even a cutlass fish (Trichinurus lepturus), for he has visible gills and opercles, fine scales, two spinous fins on his back and the caudal of a true fish.

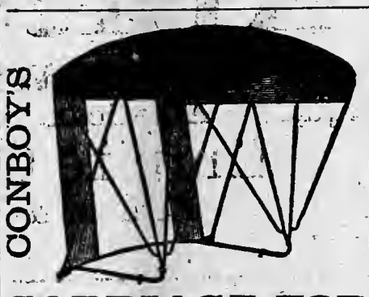
He has also an immense pair of pectorals for balancing himself, and a full complement of fins to promote locomotion, to say nothing of an abnormal third dorsal which is adipose! Also, he has long, sharp teeth for holding his prey, and a dentated vomer for mastication. Nevertheless, the tout ensemble is altogether suggestive of snakes. Whether he is less a snake than those more formidable monsters which navigators encounter on the broad ocean, or those which summer saunterers discover in Seneca lake, or the Hudson river, a capture of the latter alone can determine. In color he was most beautiful, the entire length of his sides being iridescent with purple and golden reflections, while crimson and yellow splashes crossed the lateral line at regular intervals from head to tail.

There can be no doubt that this specimen was a true fish with an elongated body. The tendency to regard everything vermiform or sinuous as a snake and everything serpentile as a reptile has invested certain mysterious denizens of the deep with snake-like attributes: but whether they are more serpent than fish, or more reptilian than the undulating specimens of Unalashka is what scientists would be delighted to discover.

As we find analogues in nature all creation through, it is reasonable to infer that there are true serpents in the sea as well as on the land, and that there are fish as well with serpent forms. Whether this great ophidian of the ancient and modern mariner be fish or reptile, he is, doubtless, predatory and therefore to be feared and avoided. Inasmuch as we, instinctively, associate serpents with evil, we should, perhaps, prefer to regard him as a fish, and therefore of a kindlier nature, yet we do not forget that a creature much less scaly inflicted ineffable and lasting misery on man.

PERFUMES.

How They Are Made—Pomades the Vehicle for Absorbing Them.



Pomades are the commercial vehicle for absorbing and transporting the perfumes of the jonquil, tuberose, jasmine, and a few other species of flowers. A square frame, or chassis, of whitewood, about twenty inches by thirty inches in size, is set with a pane of strong plate glass. On each side of the glass is spread a thin, even layer of grease, which has been purified or refined. Thus prepared, the frames are piled up in ranks six or seven high, to await the season of each special flower. When the blossoms arrive, the petals are picked from the stem—the pistils and stamens being discarded—and laid so as to cover the grease in each frame. These being again piled so as to rest upon their wooden edges, which fit closely together, there is formed a series of tight chambers, the floors and ceilings of which are of grease, exposed to the perfume of the flower leaves within. The grease absorbs the perfume; the spent flowers are removed daily and fresh ones supplied; and this process goes on from two to four or five months, according to the desired strength of the pomade, which when sufficiently charged with perfume is taken from the glass with a wide, thin spatula and packed in tin cans for export. By these methods the delicate odors of flowers are extracted and retained for transport to distant markets where, being treated with alcohol, they yield their perfume to that stronger vehicle and produce the floral waters and extracts of commerce. Coarser pomades are made by boiling the flowers in the grease and subjecting the residue to pressure. The spent pomades are used for toilet purposes and in the manufacture of fine soaps.

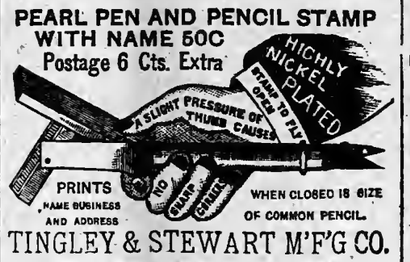
"And is this to be the end of all?" said O'Reilly De Vere, as he seized the girl's hand. "That is about the size of it," she replied, coldly. "You tell me that your employer has refused to raise your salary?" "Yes," cried the youth, eagerly; "but next year—" "Excuse me," she interrupted, with arctic frigidity, "but I am not investing in futures—not this week."

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships.

Sailing during winter from Portland every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails, and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via Halifax and St. John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal, weekly, Glasgow and Boston weekly; and Glasgow and Philadelphia, fortnightly.

For Freight, passage, or other information apply to J. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's N. F., Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans Ra & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; H. & Allan Portland Boston Montreal

CONBOY'S IMPROVED



CARRIAGE TOPS

Are famous for their style, convenience, durability, and cheapness. Buy no other until you see them. All the leading Carriage Builders sell them.

Factory: 407 King West, TORONTO.

PEARL PEN AND PENCIL STAMP WITH NAME 50C

Postage 6 Cts. Extra

TINGLEY & STEWART M'F'G CO.

TORONTO, ONT.

Please mention this Paper when writing.

THE ALBANY STEAM TRAP CO.'S SPECIAL BUCKET RETURN TRAP.

- The Celebrated Hancock Inspirator.
- Gresham's Automatic Re-starting Injector.
- Morrison's Automatic Sight Feed Lubricator.
- Engineers' & Plumbers' Supplies of every description. Send for circulars.

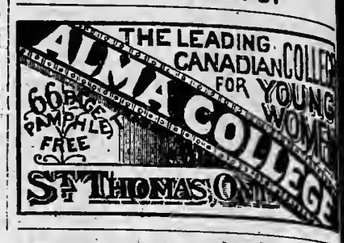
JAMES MORRISON, 75 & 77 Adelaide St. W., TORONTO

I CURE FITS!

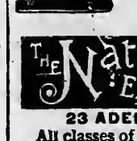
When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you. Address DR. H. G. ROOT,

Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto.

BEAVER LINE OF STEAMSHIPS.



Sailing weekly between Montreal and Liverpool.



RATES OF PASSAGE:—Saloon, Montreal to Liverpool, $40, $50, and $60; Return Tickets, $80, $90, and $100—according to steamer and accommodation. Intermediate and Steerage at lowest rates. For further particulars and to secure Berths, apply to H. E. MURRAY, General Manager, 1 Custom House Square, Montreal, or to the Local Agents in the different Towns and Cities.

Royal Dandelion Coffee.

A Delicious and nourishing Breakfast Beverage, which contains a proportion of German Dandelion Root, which acts medicinally on the Liver and Stomach, purifying the blood and invigorating the system. Prepared only by ELLIS & KEIGHLEY, TORONTO.

RUBBER STAMPS, Seals, Stencils, and Burning Brands, &c. Send for Catalogue. BARBER BROS. Co., 37 Scott St. Toronto.

The National Electro & Stereotype Co.

23 ADELAIDE ST. E., TORONTO.

All classes of fine work. Mfrs. of Printers' Leads, Slugs and Metal Furniture. Send for prices.

FACSIMILE OF A JUG OF DR. JUG'S MEDICINE.

SPECIAL NOTICE—We have decided in future to put Dr. Jug's Medicine in a brown jug, instead of the glass bottle as heretofore. The jugs that we will use for this purpose are made of the finest imported Rockingham, of a mottled brown colour, with "Dr. Jug's Medicine for Lungs, Liver and Blood" in raised letters on the side. Our reasons for making this change are: 1st—Its wonderful curative qualities will be better preserved by the medicine being kept entirely in the dark. 2nd—As the jug will be registered it will be impossible to counterfeit it. 3rd—The name "Dr. Jug's Medicine" will be more easily remembered by association. 4th—Our friends will be able to recognize at once that they are getting the genuine article, as there is no other medicine put up in a jug. DR. JUG MEDICINE CO., Toronto and Stratford.

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer. Give express and P. O. address.

DR. T. A. SLOCUM,

Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto.

Lardine.

THIS SPLENDID MACHINE OIL! Has never failed to take the highest awards wherever exhibited.

It Has No Equal. Farmers, Threshers and Millmen Use No Other.

This Oil keeps the Machinery in first-rate working order, thereby lessening the chances of accidents and breakdowns. To be had of all first-class dealers. Beware of imitations!

Try our 600 Fire Test Cylinder Oil. Harness, Bolt Cutting, Wool and Lard Oil, always in stock.

SOLE MANUFACTURERS OF LARDINE.

McCOLL BROS. & CO., - - TORONTO.

CONFEDERATION LIFE ASS'N.

OUR LAST NOTICE

In this paper referred to the Annual Meeting of the Association. This meeting (being the 15th since the Company was organized) took place on Tuesday, the 12th April, when the following gratifying increases were announced:

PREMIUM INCOME INCREASED FOR YEAR,			$ 96,894.
INTEREST AND RENTS,			13,029.
ASSETS,	$356,375.	SURPLUS,	80,234.

$260,420 Were allocated as Profits to Policy Holders. Profits payable on and after May 1st.

J. K. MACDONALD, Managing Director.

GURNEY'S

Standard Hot-air Furnaces

HAVE NO EQUAL

PRICES TO SUIT ALL DEALERS

THE "BOYNTON,"
" "HARRIS,"
" "MAMMOTH,"
" "MONARCH."

Send for Price List and Illustrated Catalogue.

EVERY FURNACE GUARANTEED

THE E. & C. GURNEY COMPANY, (L'T'D),

TORONTO, HAMILTON, MONTREAL, AND WINNIPEG

...E OF STEAMERS
...ly between Montreal and Liverpool
...E :—Saloon, Montreal to Liverpool
Return Tickets, $80, $90, and $10
...amer and accommodation. Intermediate
...rage at lowest rates. For further
...o secure Berths, apply to H. E. Moore
...eral Manager, 1 Custom House Square, or to the Local Agents in the principal Cities.

...al
...delion
Coffee.
...urishing Breakfast Beverage, com-of German Dandelion Root, which
...r the Liver and Stomach, purifying
...igorating the system. Prepared
& KEIGHLEY, ORONTO.

...E LEADING CANADIAN COLLEGE FOR YOUNG WOMEN COLLEGE
...NMAS, ONT.

...RUBBER STAMPS, SEALS
...ls, and Burning Brands, &c. Send
...r Catalogue. BARBER BROS. Co., 37 Scott St. Toronto.

...onal
...ECTRO & STEREOTYPE
...IDE ST. E., TORONTO.
...ne work. Mfrs. of Printers' Leads,
...Furniture. Send for prices.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We have decided in future to put Dr. Jug's Medicine in a brown jug, instead of a glass bottle as heretofore. The jugs that we will use for this purpose are made of the finest imported Rockingham, of a mottled brown colour, with "Dr. Jug's Medicine for Lungs, Liver and Blood" in raised letters on the side. Our reasons for making this change are: 1st—Its wonderful curative qualities will be better preserved by the medicine being kept entirely in the dark. 2nd—As the jug will be registered it will be impossible to counterfeit it. 3rd—The name "Dr. Jug's Medicine" will be more easily remembered by association. 4th—Our friends ...ognize at once that they are getting ..., as there is no other medicine put ...
JUG MEDICINE CO.,
Toronto and Stratford.

...SUMPTION.
...medy for the above disease; by its use ...
...of the worst kind and of long standing ...
Indeed, so strong is my faith in its ...
...send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together ...
...TREATISE on this disease to any ...
...ss and P. O. address.
...e. T. A. SLOCUM,
...e. 37 Yonge St., Toronto

...e.
to take the highest awards where-ever exhibited.
...llmen Use No Other.
...ening the chances of accidents an
...olt Cutting, Wool and
...ARDINE.
- TORONTO.

...ATION
...SS'N.
...OTICE
...ng of the Associa-
...e the Company
...ay, the 12th
...tifying
...:
- $ 96,894.
- 13,029.
...RPLUS, 80,234.
...Profits to Policy
...able on and after
...anaging Director.

...Y'S
...urnaces
...AL
...UIT ALL DEALERS
...OYNTON," ...ARRIS," ...AMMOTH," ...ONARCH."
...and Illustrated Catalogue.
...ACE GUARANTEED
...PANY, (L'T'D),
...ND, WINNIPEG

An Adventure in Cariboo.

Having in my time wandered over no small part of the globe, and being now laid up in ordinary, it is my chief delight to toss over the sere and yellow leaves of my memory by the help of traveled visitors. Such wayfarers are the most honored and welcome guests of my old oak-paneled smoking room, on whose walls hang many an antlered trophy of the chase; and many a weapoon, from my own well used English rifle to the "curst Malayan kreese" from Perak and Salangore, serves, if not to point a moral, at all events to invite or suggest many a tale.

My old friend Captain P. was here at the end of last year for a week's visit and the reversion, in the matter of pheasants, of my more modern friends' leavings. Those young gentlemen are not satisfied with anything less than twenty brace a day to each gun, but we old stagers are not such epicures—we who know what it is to shoot for our suppers, and to go hungry then. P.'s best stories, I think, hail from the West; though there are few of the parochial division of this planet that would not furnish him with a text. But he handles the West as if he loved it, as Izaak Walton bade us handle the frog. He is at home anywhere there; on the prairies, the Rocky Mountains, the Pacific coast from Alaska to Panama. He had been, many years ago, a Government officer, magistrate, escort captain, or the like, in British Columbia.

On the evening which I will take as an epoch to start with, our party consisted of a certain Chancery barrister, who shot well, drank fair, and had the sometimes provoking gift of summoning up the merits of one of our tales of outland with a judicial keenness often not to be anticipated from their wild ingredients; the parson of the parish, who might sometimes, I fancy, have preferred whist, short or even long, to our everlasting travelers' tales; P. and myself. We had been conversing on the subject of cities. Our remarks had been severe on those works of nature, and devoid of any shade of Brahminical charity. Their splendid impudence had been dealt with, and the barrister had cited even Mr. Ruskin against them. The Rector had reminded us of the etymology of the title "Beelzebub." I, for my part, though certainly against the grain, had assumed the brief of devil's advocate, and pleaded that some doctors (names unknown) had held that mosquito bites (in quantity unknown) will act (in circumstances not precisely stated) as a prophylactic against fever.

"Although," said P., after meditatively filling up his long tumbler and cramming a fresh charge of kanaster in his vast meerschaum, "although flies once did help me to a little fortune, (it was over $7,000) yet they must not call me as a witness to character. I plead against them. 'La mort sans phrase' is my verdict."

We waited, for indeed he was the last speaker on the subject, and we were quarrying the ground to flush a story or some subject to shoot a story at.

"The best fellow, the very best out and away, of my acquaintance in the French army—and in the Crimean days and before that I knew many—was Hector Cardec, squadron leader of MacMahon's out there in the mud in Algeria—as good a soldier and comrade as ever slapped a sword home in scabbard. He was mighty quick at pulling it out, too, by the same token."

We thought a story was to the fore now, but none of us could think how the flies were to come in.

"Well," resumed he, after some solemn puffs of his calumet, "well, he died—of the bite of a bluebottle fly on the sands of Bougie. A queer fate for such a fire eater! Poor Hector! his bold soul must have made the air shake over those meadows of asphodel yonder when he realized it and commented there on in his free fashion!" And P. on the character of Hector's rates sacer, here blew out so vast and indignant a volume of smoke that it seemed to be that hero's shade in person and in the very act of the utterances suggested.

All this was very moving, but we clearly had not yet lushed the story; and the barrister found voice for us by saying dryly, "Let us have the case for the flies, such as it is—the seven thousand dollars."

"Well," said P., "in the year 1860 or thereabout I was taking the pay of our Sovereign Lady, and giving no small share of very hard work for it, in her Majesty's colony of British Columbia. I was a Justice of the Peace, and had somewhat indistinct and multifarious duties connected with the maintenance of order generally, and of the gold escort in particular. In the Fall of that year I was in the northern, and in those days extreme, limits of the colony—at the Forks of Quesnelle, to speak by the card—as an early Winter began to whisper hoarsely and frostily to the various mining camps that it was time to be pulling up flume boxes, and for prudent folk to be turning their faces South. Men who had done well began to think of the amenities of the saloons and billiard halls of Victoria; if very well, they dreamed of even 'Frisco as a place of hybernation! while men who had been avoided by the quick wings of fortune were fain to balance the prospect of taking the down road only to remeasure its weary miles after a long winter, against that of hybernating in the society of icicles and treemartins.

"It cost more money then to insure the safe transport of 'dust' from the mines to the lower country. The smart red jackets of the gold escort had to be paid for as smartly; nor, if the truth must be told, was the security so provided altogether equal to that of a Chubb's safe in a bank cellar. The escort boys were only men of mold. They could fill a pit like other men, and though there never was a serious attack in my time we had plenty of alarms to season our excursions with, and one abortive ambuscade. Many owners of 'dust' wouldn't trust it to the escort, and some didn't like the toll, and so it came to pass that many a little Jew trader, of furtive proclivities and frugal mind, would sneak down the forest trails carrying his wealth himself, and make his way (aye, marry, and sometimes fail to make it!) in a hunted sort of fashion to the lower country. And many a stout Californian with buckskin belt well filled, or heavy saddle bags, preferred his own insurance to that of 'the Petticoat Government' it was often his ungallant humor to rail against. Between these two sorts of wayfarer, the one fleeing like a partridge on the mountains and the others in jovial Chancerian sort of cavalcade, banded together for safety and good company, swaggering and ruffling through the primeval woods, there were many grades of travelers. These fellows, however, stick to one's memory—gay with the glow of anticipated pleasures, pleasures to be all the sweeter by long and forced abstinence from them, comfortable and secure with a fortunate season behind them, with the bravery of bright revolver butts and scarlet shirts, in hard training for successfully 'bucking at the tiger' of nature in her most primitive form, like men who had been warring with mammoth and mastodon and had come off winners—these boys made bright pictures enough. If there was no soldierly clash of stirrup and scabbard, no jingle of consecrated romance, no feather and flourish of war, yet the tin drinking cup clinked gallantly against frying pan or kettle as they rode, and these paladins of pelf were, to do them bare justice, as full of fight as any soldiers who ever wore their country's color.

"Part of the way I happened (having a duty just then to be performed in a quiet, non-official way) to join such a party as I have described going from the Forks of Quesnelle down to Williams's Lake. These two points are some hundred and fifty miles apart, and thirty miles a day in the woods was very good travelling. Slow it was but not monotonous. If there were a monotone, it was of the dark and sombre twilight of the constant ceiling of pines through which the sun and upper air reached us arrow-wise. Below there was a variety of travel; here a wet bottom of mud, deep enough and thick enough to pull an animal's shoe off; there a big fallen tree across the trail to be negotiated with cattle which could fly as soon as jump; and these would be relieved by a redwood tract of cedars, with a slippery carpet of needles so clean, so sweet, and in all weathers so dry that it used to seem a shame not to off saddle and camp then and there instead of leaving it. At times the road would climb over a hog's back, or divide, and the travelers would toil and struggle up hill, to emerge in time upon some bare scalp of mountain—granite, syenite, or metamorphic rock—where the berberry or kinni-kinnick enameled the white quartz with its scarlet berry and glossy leaf or where the sole vegetation the snow water had to trickle through was composed of peat and patches of moss hag. There was no game, nothing to shoot at here; unless, which Saint Hubert forbid! foul murder were done upon the chipmunks, a friendly, gracious little race of striped squirrels, who frisk and flirt and play at hide-and-seek with the human traveler along the wayside trees, or upon the whisky jacks, portentously tame birds in Prussian colors of white and black, in size between a magpie and a wag-tail, who enjoy all the immunities of our robin, and will perch on a man's knee while he is eating his dinner. No; there is nothing for the sportsman on these trails. What game there is listens to the free-born accents of the white man and shrinks deeper within the forest shades, and no traveler has leisure to seek it there.

'Well, we got down in time to Williams's Lake, a broad valley, with two ranches or farms about a mile apart, where onions at fifty cents apiece and milk (those two anti-scorbutic longings of the man of pork and beans) were to be obtained—a foretaste of the luxuries of the lower country. The houses were both well filled with guests, for other mining districts were swelling the downward stream of travel. I will spare you a description of the manners and humors of these caravansaries, and go on to say that, having secured a tolerably promising corner for my blankets, I had rolled myself up in them, with my saddle for a pillow, and was well in the first dreamless sleep of the tired man, when—it was only about ten o'clock—a galloping horse suddenly pulled up outside, and loud cries—'Oh, Williams! you've got the Judge there! We want the Judge! waked me up. In that country it doesn't take much to open the weariest man's eyes, nor, on the other hand, is undue excitement fashionable among Anglo-Saxons; so, while the slight discrepancy between night and day dress was being rapidly adjusted, the whole story was told in a few curt sentences to this effect.

"At the other house a little difficulty had occurred—a shooting scrape. The victim was not dead yet, but as the manner of it—a felon shot from behind—had alienated the sympathies of the boys, it had resulted in the offender being 'corralled' and detained, and the Judge, who was reported to be at the other ranch, being sent for.

'The interior of the other house, which was soon reached, to eyes fresh from the cool dark night presented a picture that I well remember. The large log building was not divided into rooms and passages, and the cavernous glooms and abysses of its nocturnal condition made it seem vaster than it was. The chief light came from the fire of pine logs stacked endwise up the chimney, and it flashed red upon a strange and numerous company.

"There was, as a matter of course, in these womanless lands an efficient and beautiful manliness in the atmosphere. Death! What is death to dwindle, peak, and pine about? Still as little a thing to be frivolous, or cynical, or to bluster about. A fact of what we call life, like any other fact, but with the gravity of finality about it; one of the more emphatic facts, and to be reckoned with as such, but no more. Such was the feeling that animated these men. Few of them probably had read "Hamlet," but his thought was their thought—"If it be now, 'tis not to come; if it be not to come, it will be now, yet it will come; the readiness is all." And if the hard life at close grips with nature brings about the same results as divine philosophy, who would not rather hear the lark sing than the mouse squeak?

"Before the fire, not unskilfully propped up, was the victim—a poor, weak, vicious-looking creature. He had been shot through the lungs, and was bleeding fast to death internally. The murderer sat a little way off with his back to the wall, fenced in by a long table. Opposite to him sat two silent guards, one with his cocked pistol in his hand, the other with a similar weapon on the table before him. Like the others, his was no true miner's face. He looked a villain of the town, like the understrapper of a gambling hell, not a villain of the open air at all. The crowd who had been withheld from their sleep by this red business, welcomed my entrance with a grave silence.

"'Good evening, gentlemen; where is the owner of this house?'

"He stepped forward and quietly said that the two men had arrived together from the northern road on the evening before and had rested at his house the whole day; that about nine that evening he observed them come in from outside together; that they had a drink of whiskey at his bar, and he now remembered that they seemed sulkily disposed to each other. They must have gone out again, for half an hour later he heard a pistol shot close outside; and the door opening, the wounded man staggered in and fell on the floor, bleeding freely at the mouth. It was found on examination that the shot had entered the back and come out at the breast. The poor wretch was unable to say more than, 'Let—the—old—man—take—care!'

"To my request for further evidence, a respectable-looking man, Joe Davis, of Antler, deposed that he was coming in from doing up his mule in the barn when he saw in the dusk two figures near the house door; he heard words of apparent dispute, then the report and flash of a pistol shot; then a man ran almost into his arms, whom he seized and disarmed of a dragoon revolver, (produced.) The man sat there, (pointing to the prisoner.)

"I then approached the victim, for whom there was obviously no aid in surgery, and, having improved the position in which he lay a little, could get nothing from him but a faint answer, by sign and look, to the effect that the prisoner was the man who had shot him.

"I then asked the prisoner, 'What is your name?'

"'James Connor.'

"'Where of?'

"'Shirt-tail Canon, Cariboo.'

"'Did you shoot this man?'

"That's for you to find out, if it's your business.'

"'Do you know his name?'

"Silence. 'James Connor, you are my prisoner in the Queen's name, on the charge of attempting to murder a man here present, name unknown. You will be good enough to hand over any concealed weapons or papers you have about you, or I shall take them from you by force.'

"The men opposite him deliberately covered him at two feet distance with their revolvers as he slowly produced a common butcher's knife from under his coat and a Derringer from his trouser's pocket, and further, with some reluctance, a rude little pocketbook or leather case, (which, by the way, contained nothing of any importance as evidence,) and a very artistic bowie knife, with a scientifically proportioned blade and a haft of green shell work, such as San Francisco cutlers are proud to make. My volunteer constables then civilly informed me that they, though not British subjects, had been moved by the special nature of this 'difficulty' to act as they had done; but that beyond 'clinching' the prisoner for me with their experienced hands they could do and would do no more.

Accordingly, a couple of stout rawhide lariats were produced, with one of which Mr. Connor was very neatly and quickly bound, while the end of the other was so arranged around his neck that, while he could in nowise slip his head out of it, the holder of the other end of it, passing as it did over a hook of the roof of the room, could strangle him incontinently at will with a slip-knot well lubricated for the purpose. The situation was not agreeable for me and scarcely dignified. The duty of a constable or jailer thrust upon a magistrate; the surrounding persons, at the best, cold assenters to 'British justice;' at the worst, when the indignation of the original witnesses should have subsided (and Mr. Davis refused to wait voluntarily, and carried his summons as witness, scrawled by me on an old envelope, down country with him) too probable sympathizers with, and perhaps rescuers of, the criminal. The only hope I had was in a rumor that the Judge of the Criminal Assize was reported to be somewhere in the neighborhood. He, at all events, would have physical force of some kind and would relieve me of my prisoner. Him, whatever might betide, I determined to hold while hand and hilt kept together and while the tired eyelids of my tired eyes could be induced to keep apart. Looking back now on what did happen I hardly know if I should so have determined could I have foreseen it.

"Gentlemen! I never slept for five nights and four days from the moment of that capture! They tried to bribe me—first with one gold watch, then with three, all of the huge American pattern; then with leather bags of 'dust,' also increasing in value. At last I had to threaten that I would hang the man with the lasso that never left my hand if they did not cease. At length, on the evening of the fourth day, when I positively believe I was light-headed but keeping a firm grip of the lasso, nevertheless (whether the poor devil, Connor, was lightheaded I did not perhaps too curiously consider) without even a rumor from the road to prepare me, dear old N., the magistrate of the district we were in, having heard of my strange plight, sent two special constables to relieve me of my man. They did so, and let him escape within the hour. 'Bribed?' you ask—who knows? Connor's friends, or the law's enemies, were many and rich. They had had relays of horses on more trails than one for several days, I learned afterward. As for me, I slept for six-and-thirty hours without a break, and have now arrived at the point when I can introduce the promised flies into my narrative.

"The foregoing unsatisfactory episode being ended, with the only good result that my sometime jaded mare was now as fit as a four-year-old, I went about my business, having received a cheerful message from Mr. Connor that he intended to shoot me 'on sight.' The stereotyped warning of the West generally means business, and is considered by the party receiving it as a legitimate warrant for any extreme of anticipatory reprisal and defense; but I never expected to see Connor again, and I blew his message out of the range of practical politics.

"On my way down, some fifty miles from Williams's lake, I encountered at a wayside house a face that was familiar, and presently remembered it as belonging to an elderly and feeble-looking miner, who, in the first day or two of my acting as constable, had hovered about me in a diffident way, as if desirous of speaking, and yet disappeared without any actual parley having taken place. The strange thing was, however, that he was now in the very teeth of Winter, going up country! He appeared still very shy, and we barely exchanged half a dozen words with each other till about eleven the next morning, to which hour I had waited to let the ice melt off the roads. We were sitting together in a sort of rude veranda that gathered the beams of the morning sun, I looking over some notes and he dozing in the corner of the settle. I noticed with some compassion the deep lines of his face, and idly wondered what strange matters might be read between them had any one the key to the cipher. The flies, the meanest sort of all the common house flies, were troublesome, and perhaps investigating also the strange matters writ in the poor deep wrinkles. He writhed and moaned pathetically, and I, with the end of my long glove, assumed the humble negro function of frightening away the blue-tail flies to give him a little more sweetness of unconsciousness.

"There was an indescribable pathos in the old man's nasal drawl. He spoke as one who had got his death wound in his heart as he went on: 'I reckon you remember me in the crowd yonder when you corralled that critter, Connor? I had reasons to be grateful to you, Jedge, and with my poor sister's son, Dave Crow, (that was him as was shot by Connor,) with him—God's mercy on him even!—out of my path, and Connor chained up in your British calaboose, or, may be, hanged for good and for all, I guessed the last of my troubles was over. I was wrong, though. I was half in the mind to let on up yonder and tell what I had to do with it all, but it seemed to kinder fix itself so's I'd better not—and I let out for the down trail, wall, not lighter—there ain't much lightness left me, I reckon, naow—but feeling I'd better not meddle with the way things was fixed up for me. This yer was my second season in a creek, 'way over between Antler and Yaller Jacket. Las year I made a little under $10,000 in coarse gold, much of it fossicked out in Australian fashion. I was too sad a man to be much raised by that or anything in this world; but I cach'd half of it under the floor of my cabin, and tuk the rest down last Winter. I wrote to America to Dave, a bad boy, but all of my blood then above the grass roots—nothin' left naow—nothin'! I told Dave to come on and be a son to me. He came—sure he came. I wonder he spared the money for that naow. We come up together last Spring, and the luck held—both ways, Jedge, the luck held. The gold panned out well, and Dave's ill luck, in the shape of James Connor rejoined him up here. I guess it was a sorry record bound them two boys in sech a tight cahoot together, but I needn't reckon that over to you naow, if so be I knowed it at all. I haven't been so much alone—I've not marched the most of my days to the sorrerful tune I hev—not to be able to read men's hearts, you kin lay your bottom dollar on that, Jedge. Them men meant murder!—they meant it for weeks and meant it for months. Seem to me now I've raked some in, that money ain't so very much in this world as they make of it; yet to a man who's bin powerful poor for sixty years, it figures large when it seems like he'd lose it, and then—the nat'ral contrariness of human natur'! I worked and watched agin them two wolves enough to eat a man's heart out. We shared up evens three weeks agone and let out together for Victory. You know what happened at Williams's Lake, and you kin put a meanin' to it now. Two days ago I heard Connor was broke loose. He don't know where the dust is buried, but he reckons putty straight that some is buried, and may I'—here the old man, to my astonishment, exploded a train of some six of the most terribly ingenious oaths I ever heard in British Columbia—'if he does find it, and does keep it on this side o hell!'

"We had some conversation about the hardships and dangers of the Winter, of which he made light; and then, after some simple allusion to my tender sympathies with him as evinced by my keeping the flies off him just before, he begged me with great urgency to see him again at a camping-place in Cariboo, which I should pass through in some eight or ten days on my last journey up. He said it was important, and promised to explain why when we should meet, and so we parted for that time.

"You will be pleased to suppose that these ten days have elapsed, and that I am back in the snow and sitting in a rude, deserted wayside cabin, with the old man again for companion. My horse has been coaxed within the cabin, too, and the deep silence of the snow world lies on us as if we were the last survivors of an era.

"'I told you, Jedge, I wanted you to take some kinder statutory declaration, and to make some sorter inventory as would make an old man pass in his checks with some sorter peace of mind. I told you there was a bit of Cinnabar prospectin' as nobody but me did know, or was like to know. I told you, Jedge, that this was the last favor I reckoned to ask of livin' man, and now I beg and implore you this very night to come. I know the trail as well as the riffles in my own flume. Five miles, five hours, and a road (the way I'll take you) fit for the Governor's lady."

"The weird fascination of the man's appeal borrowed nothing from his words, or even his manner in the ordinary sense; but there was a magnetism in it that reminded me of old German ballads, and that, at any rate, gained his point.

"That night's march over those mighty metamorphic rocks, through that gigantic volcanic ruin now frozen so stiff and cold, though I shall never forget it, would require a Dante to sing and a Dore to depict its awful beauties. At last we reached the claim. The snow had clothed the torn and riven banks, and heaps of boulders, the ordinary ravages of mining, with its smooth and pure outline, and the cabin door, deftly and speedily opened by the owner's familiar hand, let us into its neat and orderly precincts. Materials for light and fire were ready prepared for use, though we had antedated the matter by a whole Winter, and having used them we sallied forth again to stable my horse in a somewhat distant shelter. On our return some coffee and crackers (biscuits, that is,) lent a sense of fragrance and festivity to the little shanty, but I was shocked to observe the weakness of the old man when he was thawed from the cold. He waived aside, however, all notice of this and showed me how to supplement the scanty comfort of the lowest of three bunks with a nondescript collection of coverings, old sacks, and even planks and dry branches, till my future bed looked like a woodpile into which I was to creep feet foremost.

"'It comes to me, Capen,' slowly said Summers—did I mention his name before?—'it comes to me that this thing is pretty nigh played out. I guess the Cinnabar must wait—no man but me could show you the way to that; but just under where I am sitting (and I put this yer stool here a puppus,) the depth of a pick-handle lies some two hundred and sixty ounces of dust as near as I can mind, tied up in three canvas sacks; and that thar dust, Jedge, Cap'en dear, my boy, as drur the flies from the old man's face—the old man's face as has every tear drained off it by years o' weepin' in his heart—that dust is for you. You're young, and I have no one belonging to me in the world. I'll give you a writin' right—a writin' saying the dust is yours.'

"I struggled as well as I could against the man's benevolent intentions; but, at last had to promise that I would exhume the gold and accompany him to the settlements in the morning. Summers was so weak by this time that I was obliged to wrap him up and compose him for sleep in front of the replenished fire. He felt no pain, and begged me to go to rest, which I did at last, clothed as I was, and warned by some intuition to arrange my pistol for instant use.

"I must have slept an hour or more when the old man's voice awakened me, repeating in a stronger but far-off sort of voice the same string of unspeakable imprecations that I formerly declined to repeat for your benefit, or rather injury. They did not sound so vicious this time; but gave me the idea of a sort of wild abracadabra or verbal fetish, used to fortify or accentuate a resolution. I slept again, and again awoke this time to some purpose. As my eyes opened a match was struck in the cabin, and to my amazement—for somehow I had never anticipated this—James Connor stood with a candle in one hand and a pistol in the other, peering into the cold and silent face of the dead miner; dead—in a second that was evident, for no pious hand, though my own was near, had closed his weary eyes, and they were wide open and the jaw fallen in all the unloveliness of death. I must have made some motion or sound, for the murderer's light and weapon both quickly moved upon me as I lay supine on one elbow, with, thanks to my intuitive precautions, the muzzle of my revolver covering him as he stepped sideways toward my bunk. There was no use in delaying the end; I pushed aside the nondescript mass of coverings with my pistol hand and showed myself. The ruffian backed a moment.

"'The Judge, by the jumping Moses!' he hoarsely exclaimed. Then, to do him justice, his voice grew firm, and he demanded sternly and briefly: 'You had my message?'

"It was touch and go; fortunately I was ready, as I replied, 'Take my answer!'

"The hammers of both weapons fell together. My pistol resting on the bunkedge, sent its bullet home under the man's left breast; his must have, thrown up, and the ball merely turned up a skin-deep furrow just above my left ear.

"I dug up the dust as Summers had directed, and enlarged the hole till it afforded a shallow grave for him and Connor. I piled over them as many large stones as I could conveniently drag from the hearth, and rode away in the early morning, a sadder and a richer man by some seven thousand dollars. Some of it I spent on myself; what I did with the rest is hardly worth talking about.

EX-EMPRESS CARLOTTA.

No Truth in the Stories of Her Restoration to Sanity.

Referring to current reports that the mental condition of ex-Empress Carlotta, widow of the unfortunate Maximilian, was improving, a Brussels correspondent says:—I recently visited the village of Buchout, five miles from here, where she has resided since the burning down of her residence at Tervueren three years ago. There was a religious procession going on which, according to old custom, has taken place for two centuries every second Sunday in July. The procession, with statues of saints and the Virgin, proceeded as usual to the chapel at the castle. Princess Carlotta witnessed the sight from a window, caged in by thin bars, her ladies in waiting holding each of her hands. Physically she appeared well, though she is becoming very grey. She wore a mauve silk dress and white cap, which she believes to be the same that she wore at the time of Maximilian's death. On the passage of each statue she nodded her head absently in a doll-like, mechanical way, and when the procession was fading away she followed it with her eyes; but her appearance and the information I gathered on the spot show that her mental condition is becoming worse rather than better. The Queen of the Belgians, the King and the Count of Flanders frequently visit her, the latter spending at least two days at Buchout every fortnight; but the Queen no longer cares to take Carlotta driving, as she did frequently before. Carlotta never goes out except in the park of the castle, with a watchful body guard. She sometimes stops and stares before an enclosure where the sick horses of the Queen's stables are sent to recuperate and to run about in freedom; but generally her sole occupation during her walk is picking up acacia leaves, which she puts on her hand and then blows off one by one. Despite the kindest treatment, all hope of mental recovery is forever gone.

TO BE HANGED AT THE AGE OF TWELVE.

A Colored Girl Who Poisoned A Baby Must Suffer the Penalty.

At Barnwell, S. C., recently, Judge Hudson sentenced Axey Cherry, a colored girl, twelve years old, to be hanged on the third Friday in September for the murder of the infant of Mr. Amos Williams, of Allendale, in Barnwell County. The child was sent by her mother to act as nurse for the Williams baby. She poked around the house and attended to her duties in so negligent a manner that she had to be constantly scolded. After a scolding one day she was overheard muttering to herself that she wasn't going to bother with that baby much more.

A few days after this concentrated lye was used in scouring the floor, and when Mrs. Williams left the room for a few minutes she told Axey that the lye was poisonous and that she mustn't touch it. On her return Mrs. Williams was horrified to find her baby's mouth full of concentrated lye. Axey ran out of the house saying as she left, "I don't reckon I will have to nurse that baby much longer now."

The young murderess all through her trial seemed to have no idea of the terrible nature of her deed, and when she was sentenced to be hanged she gazed stupidly at the Judge and grinned as she played with the buttons on her dress. As she was being carried back to jail she saw her father and made an effort to go to him. She cried for the first time when she was told that she could not go home but must go back to jail to await the day for her execution.

Maidens in their teens are the rage. Truly! ask them their age 'twill always be in teens.

Jas. S. Freeborn,

—M. D., Ch. M.; L. K. & Q. C. P. I.—

Doctor of Medicine and master of Surgery Victoria. Univ. Licentiate of King's and Queen's College of Physicians in Ireland. Member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Ont. Formerly acting Surgeon of B. Battery, R. C. A. Quebec. Late resident of the Rotunda Hospitals, (Lying-in & Gynæcological) Dublin.

—OFFICE—

STEPHEN'S DRUG STORE.

Drs. Sproule & Brodie,

—PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS,—

MARKDALE.

Dr. Sproule's office Turner's Drug Store

Dr. Brodie's office Mathew s block.

P. McCullough.

BARRISTER, SOLICITOR, &c

OFFICE—OVER McFARLAND'S STORE,

MARKDALE,

Money to Loan.

MASSON & MASSON,

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, &c.

Offices—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block, Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week.

J. Masson, Q. C. S. Masson. W. Masson.

N. B.—Private and Company's funds to invest at from 6 to 8 per cent

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate se curitv.

WILLIAM STUART,

KIMBERLEY,

Issues of Marriage Licences. Money to Loan on Real Estate at low rates.

A few Farms for sale. Terms easy.

NOTICE.

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.

will visit Markdale for the practice of his profession on Thursday and Friday following the first Monday in each month, and at Flesherton the following day, Saturday.

MARKDALE HOUSE,

MARKDALE, - - ONT.

J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

ISAAC STINSON.

Builder and Contractor

In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.

Estimates given. All work guaranteed.

Orders by mail promptly attended to.

329 Residence, MARKDALE.

W. G. RICHARDS,

BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT, Markdale.

1241y

R. J. SPROULE,

FLESHERTON.

Conveyancer, Appraiser, Valuator and Money Lender. Deeds, Mortgages, Leases and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice. Charges very low. Apply to

R. J. SPROULE,
Money Lender & Postmaster, Flesherton.

DR. FOWLER'S

EXTRACT OF WILD

STRAWBERRY

CURES

CHOLERA

CHOLERA INFANTUM

DIARRHŒA,

AND

ALL SUMMER COMPLAINTS

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS.

THE MANDRAKE DANDELION

LIVER CURE

HAVE YOU

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Jaundice, Headache, Dizziness, Pain in the Back, Costiveness, or any disease arising from a deranged liver, Dr. Chase's Liver Cure will be found a sure and certain remedy.

NATURE'S REMEDY

The unqualified success of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure in Liver Complaint rests solely with the fact that it is compounded from nature's well-known liver regulators, Mandrake and Dandelion, combined with many other invaluable roots, barks and herbs, having a powerful effect on the Kidneys, Stomach, Bowels and Blood.

500,000 SOLD

Over one-half million of Dr. Chase's Recipe Books were sold in Canada alone. We want every man, woman and child who is troubled with Liver Complaint to try this excellent remedy.

Something New. Given Away Free

Wrapped around every bottle of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure is a valuable Household Medical Guide and Recipt Book (84 pages), containing over 200 useful recipes pronounced by medical men and druggists as invaluable, and worth ten times the price of the medicine.

TRY CHASE'S CATARRH CURE. A safe and positive remedy. Price, 25 cents.

TRY CHASE'S KIDNEY AND LIVER PILLS. 25 cts. per box.

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS

EDMANSON & CO., Sole Agents, Bradford

Markdale Roller Mill.

FARMERS HAVING No. 1 WHEAT and preferring flour from their own wheat, can get it by bringing twenty bushels or more.

Flour always on Hand

Flour $3.00 to $4.30 per. bbl.

SHORTS, per ton - $12.00
BRAN, " - 10.00

The highest market price paid for Fall and Spring wheat.

J. W. FORD.

Pubic Notice.

To all whom it may concern.

I R. L. Stephen the Druggist of Markdale have been appointed agent for Johnson's celebrated Tonic and nervine. Johnson's little liver Pills, and Johnson's all healing White Ointment. The nervine is the very best in the market, in all diseases caused by poverty of blood, for Nervousness, Hysteria, and the Paleness of Complexion so often noticed in female's, loss of appetite and general debility. In conjunction wth the Liver Pills, it is he very best for all diseases arrising from Topid liver or bad stomach

The White Ointment is the very best in the market for Salt Rheume, Barbers Itch, Pimples, Chafs, Burns, Scalds, and all Skin diseases of a scrofulous nature. Try these fine remedies and you will not be disappointed.

For sale at R. L. STEPHEN'S the druggist Markdale, Ont.

WM. G. GUTHRIE,

Plain & Ornamental Plasterer

MARKDALE.

Arches, Cornices, Centre Flowers, and all kinds of plain and ornamental plastering executed at cheapest rates. Calsomining Lime Washing and Repairs promptly attended to.

365

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of

School Furniture.

Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness, wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.

181 ANDREW McGILL.

MONEY TO LOAN.

ON real estate security, at low rate of interest, no commission charged. Business Strictly Confidential,

J. S. BLACK,

190 Pomona, P. O.

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT No. 24, con. 4, N. D. R. Glenelg, 100 acres, will be sold cheap and on easy terms of payment, for further particulars apply on the premises, or by letter to

J. S. BLACK,

190-tf. Pomona P. O.

Markdale Woolen Mill.

Custom Carding, Weaving, Fulling, Dyeing and cloth dressing, done in a workmanlike manner and on very short notice.

First Class Cotton Warp

supplied at the lowest possible rates.

A call solicited.

Terms strictly cash or wool.

Sept. 28, 1886 F. J. RITCHIE.

IT IS A WELL KNOWN FACT

—THAT—

McCOLL'S

"LARDINE,"

is the best known, and most reliable Machine Oil in the Dominion; Farmer's, Thresher's and Mill Owner's, will find it decidedly to their advantage to insist upon getting the "Genuine Lardine" when they ask for it, owing to so much inferior oil being sold under the same name by unscrupulous dealers. We are the sold manufacturers of the "Genuine Lardine" every barrel branded.

McCOLL BRO'S. & CO.

For sale in Markdale at Haskett Bro's Hardware Store. 347-73

British Worm Syrup!

British Worm Syrup!!

THE BEST FOR CHILDREN.

—AT—

H. PARKER'S,

DURHAM.

Collingwood and Georgian Bay Line.

Royal Mail,

In connection with the Northern and North-Western R'ys, and the Grand Trunk R'y.

Str. PACIFIC, Captain P. M. Campbell.
Str. ATLANTIC, Captain R. D. Foote.
Str. NORTHERN BELLE, Capt. W. J. Bassett.

The fine new Steamers "PACIFIC" & "ATLANTIC" will run as follows during the season (weather permitting.)

Leaving Collingwood at 1 p. m.; Meaford at 3 p. m.; Owen Sound at 8 p. m.; and Wiarton at 11:45 p. m.; every

Wednesday and Saturday.

For Killarney, Manitowaning, Little Current, Kagawong, Gore Bay, Spanish River, Serpent River, Algoma Mills, Blind River, Thessalon, Bruce Mines, Hilton, St. Joseph's Island, Garden River, and Sault St. Marie.

The Saturday Steamer only will call at Cockburn Island.

Mackinaw.—During the summer season the above steamers will continue the trip on to the Island of Mackinaw making six full days of a round trip at a cost of $12.00 only including meals and berth.

For information as to freight and fares. Appply to any Agent of the above Railways, the Pursers on board the steamers, or to the Great Northern Transit Co., Collingwood.

THOS. LONG, Secretary. CHAS. CAMERON, Manager

New Tailor.

Will Stoddart, late of England and Jersy City, U. S. begs to inform the citizens of Markdale and surrounding community, that he has opened a TAILORING SHOP over Mr. W. J. McFarland's Store, where he is prepared to do all work entrusted to him in the Latest and Nobbiest Styles; as I will inspect all work before leaving the Shop, customers may rely on having work turned out first-class in every particular; trusting that I may receive a fair share of the public patronage

I remain,
Faithfully your's,
WILL STODDART.

Markdale, March 14th, 1887.

BE SURE & GET YOUR

PUMPS,

—FROM—

J. T. QUINN,

MARKDALE,

He makes as good a pump as there is in the market, and at the lowest possible prices, besides it is so convenient for getting repairs besides when buying from a distance.

Have some style about you and support home enterprise by buying from Quinn.

WE WANT!

100 GOOD MEN at once, to sell for the Fonthill Nurseries (largest in Canada over 465 acres) steady employment and no lost time, liberal commission or salary, best advantages; splended outfit furnished free any pushing man can succeed. Apply for terms to,

STONE & WELLINGTON,
Toronto, On

Prof. Low's sulphur soap is a delightful toilet luxury as well as a good curative for skin disease.

FARM FOR SALE.

Being lot 5, south east quarter of 6 and and west half 6, con. 11, Euphrasia, will be sold cheap and on easy terms, also Saw Mill on lot 5, in good running order. For further particulars apply to

JAMES STINSON,

358-61" Markdale

WEAVING.

Having returned to Markdale, in order to be more convenient for my customers, I beg to announce that I am now prepared to do all kinds of Custom Weaving. Residence old stand, opposite Presbyterian Church.

818 ARCH. BOYD.

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT 181 con 3 west of T. & S. Rd. Artemesia, 50 acres, about 20 acres clear of stumps and stones, balance good hardwood bush. Five miles from Markdale and four from Flesherton. For further particulars apply to A. S. Thompson, Flesherton P. O. or J. J. Thompson, Orilla.

342-ft

The Markdale Standard

Is issued every Thursday, by

C. W. RUTLEDGE, Markdale, Ont.,

Terms—$1 per year in advance; $1.50 if not paid within six months.

Professional and business cards one inch space and under, per year, $4.

	1 yr.	6 mo.	3 mo.
Whole column	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
Half column	27 00	15 00	10 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00	6 00
Two inch space	7 00	4 00
Three inch space	10 00	5 00

Casual advertisements 8 cents per line first insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.

Editorial notices, or notices in local column 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents each subsequent insertion.

Stray animals &c, advertised 3 weeks for $1

No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid except at the option of the publisher.

—x—

JOB PRINTING.

The Standard office has a splendid equipment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. All orders filled with dispatch.

Markdale Church Directory.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

Services every Sabbath at 10:30 a. m. Sabbath School at 2:30 p. m. Prayer Meeting every Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. Rev. A. Wilson, Pastor; A. McFarland, S. S. Superintendent.

CHRIST CHURCH.

Services every Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p m. Rev. Jas. Ward, Incumbent. Sabbath School 2:30. W. J. Ford, Superintendent.

METHODIST CHURCH.

Services every Sunday at 10:30 a. m and 7 p. m. Sunday School at 2:30. Prayer Meeting every Thursday evening from 8 to 9, Rev. Geo. Buggin Pastor; G. S. Bowes. S. S. Superintendent. Ladies' Aid in connection: Mrs. T. Hill, Secretary.

Strangers and visitors always welcome

Parties desiring sittings will apply to C. W. Rutledge, Pew Steward.

Society Directory.

Markdale C. O. O. F. No. 78, meets every alternate Monday evening at 8 o'clock in their Hall, Rae's block. Visiting brethren welcome.

Markdale A. O. U. W, No. 141 meets in their Hall, Rae's block, every alternate Monday evening at o'clock. A visit from brethren of neighboring lodges solicited.

Markdale L. O. L. No. 1045 meets in their Hall on Friday on or before full moon each month. Thos. Elliott, Master; W. J. Blakely, Secretary.

Victoria R. B. Preceptory, No. 282, Meets in Lodge Room of Markdale L. O. L. No. 1045, first Friday in each month. Visiting Sir Knights always welcome. Jas. Brodie W. P.; Thos. Elliott, Registrar.

Post-Office Directory.

MARKDALE.

The P. O. will be opened from 8 o'clock a. m. to 7 p. m. every working day.

Mails closed as follows, viz:

C. P. R., going North, 11:40 a m, and 7 p m
" " South, 3:30 p m, and 7 p m

TRAVERSTON.

Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday 12:30 noon.

HARKAWAY.

Friday, 12:30 noon.

For registered letters and money orders, fifteen minutes earlier than above. The P. O. will be open on Holidays from 9 to 9:30 a. m., and half an hour after mails arrive.

W. J. McFarland, P. M.

Directory.

MARKDALE VILLAGE OFFICIALS.

Police Trustees—E. Davis, A. Turner, and S. J. Coleman.

Public School Trustees—B. Coleman, J. Lyons, W. A. Brown, B. Coleman, Sec.

COUNTY OFFICIALS.

Judge, H. McPherson, Owen Sound.
Deputy-Judge, S. J. Lane, Owen Sound.
Sheriff, C. H. Moore, Owen Sound.
Clerk of Peace, W. Armstrong, O. Sound.
Clerk, John Gale, Owen Sound.
Treasurer, S. J. Parker, Owen Sound.
County Warden, N. Reid, Owen Sound
Registrar, N., R. McKnight, "
" S., Thos. Lauder, Durham.
Revising Barrister, North, Judge McPherson, Owen Sound.
Revising Barrister, South & East, Judge Lane, Owen Sound.
M. P., North, Jas. Masson, Owen Sound.
M. P., East, T. S. Sproule, M.D., Markdale
M. P., South, Geo Landerkin, M. D., Hanover.
M. P. P., North, D. Creighton, Owen Sound
M. P. P., East, Capt. Borke, Clarksburg
M. P. P., South, John Blyth, Orchard.

DIVISION COURT CLERKS

No. 1. John Stephens, Owen Sound.
" 2. David Jackson, Durham.
" 3. Thos. Plunkett, Meaford.
" 4. Thos. J. Borke, Heathcote.
" 5. J. W. Armstrong, Flesherton.
" 6. John McDonald, Chatsworth.

Monthly Fairs.

Orangeville—The second Thursday in each month.
Dundalk—Tuesday before Orangeville.
Flesherton—Monday before Orangeville.
Markdale—Saturday before Orangeville.
Durham—Third Tuesday in each month.
Chatsworth—Monday before Durham.
Holland Centre—Saturday before Chatsworth
Priceville—Monday before Durham.
Hanover—Monday before Durham

Maxwell.

A very successful garden party was held on the beautiful grounds of the Methodist parsonage at Maxwell on Thursday afternoon and evening last. The weather was fine, consequently the assemblage was large, between three and four hundred being present, a number of whom were from Markdale, Flesherton, Singhampton, Feversham and other places of note. The Flesherton brass band was present and rendered very fine selections of music. Games of various kinds were entered into with zest. The tables were spread with all delicacies generally given on such occasions. On motion being made and seconded, Mr. Gamey, Esq., took the chair, and after a curt little speech, took up the programme for the evening, and called for an anthem by the Maxwell choir, the rendering of which did credit to their leader. Mr. Strahan, of Ravena, was next called upon and gave us a sermon taking for his text "Old Mother Hubbard." Misses. Armstrong, Dunn, Richardson and Mr Barnhouse, of Flesherton, were then called upon and artistically rendered "Come where the lillies bloom." They were followed by Rev W. F. Ferrier, who gave quite a lengthy oration. Miss Gamey and Company gave a very nice solo (vocal) with organ accompaniment. Rev. Mr. Dunn spoke at some length, his witty sketches and humorous anecdotes being well received. Mr Strahan gave a recitation, after which the band played "God Save the Queen," bringing the entertainment to a conclusion. The programme was interspersed throughout with music by the band. The receipts, which were in the neighborhood of $65.00, will be appropriated to parsonage improvements. —Com.

GIVE THEM A CHANCE.

That is to say, your lungs. Also all the breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air-passages but the thousand of little tubes and cells leading from them.

When these are clogged and chocked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, croup, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung affections, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup which any druggist will sell you at 75 cts a bottle. Even if everything else had failed with you, you may depend upon this for certain.

37 Hozier Street,
Glasgow, 18th July, 1887.

To Rev. A. Wilson:

Rev. and Dear Sir,—My daughter, Mrs. McBroom, reached home in safety a few days ago, and I have been fully informed of the very great kindness shown by yourself, the members of your church and many other residents of Markdale, to her both before and after the death of her dear husband. I have been much moved by all that I have heard of the warm love cherished and the substantial sympathy manifested to my sorrowing daughter. These generous deeds are to me sufficient proof of the power of the Christian religion in the human heart, and that all things work together for good to those who love the Lord Jesus Christ. As a grateful father I feel thus constrained to express myself, and to return my sincere thanks to you, and through you to the other kind friends who rendered such gracious help to my daughter in her time of need. May the Lord bless and prosper each and all of you.

Yours very truly,
David Millar

Praiseworthy.—"Last summer I was entirely laid up with liver complaint, a friend advised me to use Burdock Blood Bitters, I did so, and four bottles cured me. I cannot praise this remedy too much." John Rivers, Orr Lake, Ont.

Farmer (to new farm hand from the city)—"What hev ye done with all this morning's milk?"

New hand—"Poured it in the well, of cource!"—

Prompt Results.—"I was very sick with bowel complaint. Two physicians did me no good. I tried other medicines but all to no use until I tried Dr. Fowler's Wild Strawberry. The next day I was a different man." Geo. H. Peacock, of Stroud, Ont.

The man who sits down and waits to be appreciated will find himself among mankind's for baggage after the limited express train has gone by.

Broken down.—"After suffering with dyspepsia, kidney disease, loss of appetite and pain in the head until discouraged, I heard of B. B. B., took two bottles and am happy to say I feel as well as ever." Mrs. Rufus E. Merry, New Albany, N. S.

SOUTHERN ASTHMA CURE

Double Treatment in each Package

Instant relief for

ASTHMA AND BRONCHITIS

BY MAIL ON RECEIPT OF PRICE.

SAMPLES, 25c.; REGULAR SIZE, $1.00

Address FULFORD & CO., BROCKVILLE, Ont.

Markdale Standard

"HEW TO THE LINE, LET THE CHIPS FALL WHERE THEY MAY."

SEVENTH YEAR.—No. 361. MARKDALE, ONT., AUGUST 11, 1887. C. W. RUTLEDGE, Proprietor.

—: AT :—

RUSSELL'S

—NOTED JEWELERY STORE,—

FLESHERTON,

will be found the most complete stock of Watches, Clocks, Jewelery, Silverware, Spex, &c., in this part of the country.

Call and see those watches they are selling at $12.00 bearing warrants for three and a half years, while other dealers are asking $15.00 for the same article. P. S. Bartlett, 3 oz. coin silver case for $16.00 while they are selling elsewhere for $17.50. Other dealers cannot compete with us and they know it. We cannot help them being annoyed at our terrible low prices; we must give the public the benefit of our close buying.

☞ Just Note a few prices.

A fine Nickle Alarm Clock for actually only $2.00 bearing a warrant for two years. Your choice of over 20 fine plated chains for only $1.60; Just think of it. Fine walnut clocks from $2.35 upward. Brooches, Ear-Rings, Ladies' Chains, Cuff-Buttons, Scarf-Pins, at equally low prices.

Remember if you want your Watch or Clock repaired properly by a workman, Russell's is the only place.

All orders by mail promptly attended to at

RUSSELL'S Noted Jewelry Store,

FLESHERTON.

Local and Other Items.

NOTICES in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

NOTICE.—Correspondence, communications, Advertisements, &c., must be in this office by noon on Tuesday to insure publication that week.

NEWS is about as scarce this week as Holy water in an Orange lodge.

OSPREY council meets in Singhampton on the 20th.

MR. JAS. SULLIVAN, of Glenelg, has returned from a pleasant trip to Kansas.

THE continued drought is telling seriously on late grain, roots and pasture.

READ R. H. Benson's adv, this week. He has something new in Dinner and Tea sets, call and see him before purchasing elsewhere

MR. WM. CURRIE, of Mt. Forest, was bitten by a dog at Cedarville lately, which will unfit him for work for some weeks.

MISS LEMON, of Thornbury, assisted the Methodist choir last Sunday evening, and was much appreciated.

SPRING wheat is seriously damaged by rust in this district, especially the "Lost Nation" variety, which is very generally sown.

LADIES' who like to see themselves in print, can do so without the fear of unfavorable gossip by dressing in calico and appearing before the mirror.

QUITE a number of farmers finished cutting grain last week and the great majority are through this week in this district. This is certainly the earliest in the history of the place.

We give this week a report of a meeting of the Executive of the Permanent Central Farmers' Institute, which was held in Toronto last week. It will be read with interest.

TWO Orangeville men, driving on a recent Sunday, saw a wild hairy man bathing in the river near Credit Forks. Many other persons have lately seen such an individual wandering about in a nude state.

REV. R. C. BURTON, of the Dundalk Circuit will take Rev. Mr. Buggin's work next Sunday, the latter conducting the anniversary services of Inistioge church.

THE Durham Chronicle has changed hands; a Mr. Mitchell is the purchaser. We extend the best wishes of the STANDARD for its success under the new management.

WE scarcely take up a paper but we see an accident of dogs killing sheep, or biting persons or some other depredation: there should be a dog tax at least every third year, which would thin out useless ones.

ONE evening last week as one of our citizens sauntered along the sidewalk about a pas nine while the moon shone beautifully, he heard a sharp sound as of the snap of a revolver, and on turning saw inside a garden gate, a young lady with a tiny and handsome mustache on her upper lip. He heard her say, "good night" and there was another smack, but by this time he didn't anticipate any danger from the repeater.

WE are pleased to say that our genial and highly respected head teacher, Mr. F. Porter, and wife are visiting at Mr J. H. Clapp's Napanee. We extend the happy couple the congratulations of the STANDARD. May their career be happy and prosperous. Mr. Porter will be on hand to take charge of his school on Monday next, 15th.

WE were informed last week, by a traveller who has visited the largest ports on the continent, that a visit to Sault Ste Marie this summer more than surprised him. He says that no port, not even New York, can approach the "Soo" for importance and grandeur in shipping, in magnitude and scenery. The immense lock, which admits four large vessels at a time, is kept busy 24 hours every day including Sunday, while from fifty to eighty vessels is a common thing to see at once waiting their turn.

THE coming Industrial Fair at Toronto promises to be the best yet held. The harvest being a good one, and harvesting operations so early, will greatly favor an increased attendance from agricultural districts generally, while the low railway rates will have a tendency in the same direction single fair being announced from the opening to the close of the great Show, two weeks.

THE PRESS AND EXHIBITIONS.—At the convention of the International Association of Fair Managers in Toronto last Thursday, Mr. Wm. Heron of Indiana read a capital paper on advertising fairs, in which he contended that the success of expositions everywhere was due mainly to the support received from the press, and earnestly advocated that little, if any, restrictions should be placed on their newspaper friends in dealing with exhibition matters. It would be well if officials connected with exhibitions would take note of this.

A LODGE of Independent Order of Good Templars recently organized in Markdale is prospering satisfactorily. The membership have been equally divided in two parts with a captain for each, this arrangement to remain for three months; a series of entertainments are kept up every lodge meeting, and a certain number of marks allowed for a reading, recitation, song, speech or for the addition of a new member, thus creating a rivalry amongst themselves, and at the end of the quarter the side with the smallest number of marks is to provide refreshments for the whole lodge.

SUDDEN DEATH.—We were pained to learn, on Monday last, of the sudden death of Mr. Alex. Murdoch, a respectable farmer near Walter's Falls, formerly of Euphrasia, near Harkaway. It appears while driving the sulky-rake the upper part of the back of the seat chafed his back, and though medical aid was resorted to, it developed into erysipilas which in less than a week ended his earthly career. He died on Sunday last at the age of 39 years. He was a rugged healthy man and highly respected, and his premature demise has cast a gloom over the community.

THE Owen Sound Poultry Association made an application to the County Council in June for a grant of $100 to aid them in their coming exhibition, to take place next December, but after considerable discussion the motion to make such a grant was defeated by one. As the poultry business is a growing and profitable one to farmers, and the above grant only about five dollars for each municipality, we think it should have been passed. If it had been for a hundred dollars for an excursion to some neighboring port, we have no doubt the County Council would have granted it cheerfully.

THE garden party at the Methodist parsonage on Wednesday evening was largely attended and thoroughly enjoyed. The grounds were brilliantly lit up with artificial light, and the company entered into the various suitable games with a zest, while the ice-cream bar was well patronized. The brass band rendered valuable and appreciated services in "Music from the old tin horn." The Ladies' Aid are to be congratulated for their successful efforts.

LOST OR STOLEN.—A Wallet, containing between fifteen and twenty dollars in bills, also four notes drawn in my favor. Any person finding the same will be suitably rewarded by returning to R. L. Stephen, Markdale.

PROMPT RESULTS.—"I was very sick with bowel complaint. Two physicians did me no good. I tried other medicines but all was no use until I tried Dr. Fowler's Wild Strawberry. The next day I was a different man." Geo. H. Peacock, of Stroud, Ont.

Don't use any more nauseous purgatives such as Pills Salts &c., when you can get in Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters a medicine that moves the Bowels gently, cleansing all impurities from the system and rendering the Blood pure and cool. Sold by all Druggists. tf

SCARCELY a week passes but we notice in one or another of our exchanges a note of warning to farmers, to have no truck with "shoddy pedlars" "lightening rod sharpers" "sickle grinders" &c., &c., at the same time refering to instances of fraud and rascality practiced by those land sharks. Farmers as a rule, are the most cautious class of people we have: and if they choose to speculate in "patent wrights" and "agencies," and buy dry goods wholesale and squander their hard earned wealth, we don't see that we should interfere. When we speculate, and get left, it's not pleasant to be told of it.

REDEEMING POINTS.—Nasal Balm does not irritate or cause sneezing, does not require any instrument for its use, does not have any ill effects, relieves from the first, and one 50 cent bottle will cure an ordinary case, with no other expense attached.

BUSINESS LOCALS.

I shall clear every line of fishing tackle out at cost, Poles, Baskets, &c. W. A. Brown.

LOW'S SULPHUR SOAP should be found with every toilet. It is cleansing and healing.

PHOTOS and all kinds of pictures taken by Jackson, the Markdale photographer, in the finest style of the art. Try him and be convinced.

ALWAYS REQUIRED.—A good cathartic medicine. National Pills will not disappoint you.

FRESH FISH.—Sarjeant Bros., butchers, receive a supply of fresh fish twice a week.

FREEMAN'S WORM POWDERS are safe, sure and speedy to remove worms from children or adults.

FARMERS wanting a first-class Fanning Mill should buy the celebrated Chatham mill, given on trial, W. Jackson, Agent, Markdale.

DR, LOW'S PLEASANT WORM SYRUP is a safe and reliable worm remedy for all worms afflicting children or adults.

CIGARS! CIGARS! Lovers of a good Havana cigar will find that Benson has the finest cigar in town, sold by the box.

KEEP YOUR HOUSE GUARDED.—Keep you house guarded against sudden attacks of colic cramps, diarrhœa, dyspepsia and cholera infantum. They are liable to come when least expected. The safest, best and most reliable remedy is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

School Books.—A new supply of all the authorized text books for common schools at the Medical Hall. A. Turner & Co.

PRAISEWORTHY.—"Last summer I was entirely laid up with liver complaint, a friend advised me to use Burdock Blood Bitters, I did so, and four bottles cured me. I cannot praise this remedy too much." John H. Rivers, Orr Lake, Ont.

DEATHS.

MURDOCK—While on a visit at the residence of her son in Bournemouth, England —Margaret Meldrum, wife of Wm. Murdock, 68 Kent Road, Glasgow. Deceased was sister to Henry Meldrum, Eugenia.

Euphrasia Council.

The council met pursuant to adjournment on July 29th, 1887, members all present, minutes of last session of council read and confirmed. The reeve was appointed to improve road at rock, 27 and 28 side line, con. 6.

Mr. Hurd was instructed to repair crossway west of 3rd line, on the 6 and 7 side line.

A petition signed by R. Carefoot, and others asking for the making of a new road, could not be entertained, on account of the difficulty of making such road at present. The reeve was appointed to improve road at Kerr's hill, side road 21 and 22, and to erect a bridge over the gulley, at lot 22 on third line, Mr. Fawcett was appointed to repair 12 and 13 side line, con. 7. The reeve was appointed to get deviation surveyed around the rock, at lot 27, 11th line. Mr. Hurd was appointed to get a new bridge erected at lot 7, con. 7 over Wiley's creek. Mr. Erskine was appointed to repair bridge on 3 & 4 side line over saugeen river.

Mr. Boyd was appointed to repair 9th line at lot 1. The Reeve's orders were issue on the Treasurer to pay as follows, viz: William Neely, $7.68, taxes paid by him in error. Thos. B. Wilson, $1.00, repairing road scraper. Jas. Stinson, sr., $1.50, clearing water course at Saugeen hill. John Clugston, $6.00, gravel required by pathmaster. James Sparling, $3.00, removing stone 11th line. James Wiley, $1.00, repairing bridge. John Erskine, $6.00, culvert on 9th line at lot 9. Charles Howard, $8.52½, work on town line Collingwood, and Euphrasia and Collingwood councils paying an equal amount. William Reai, $6.80, work on town line, Collingwood council paying an equal amount. Henry Breadner, $3.00, culvert on 18 & 19 side road.

The report of Mr. Boyd relating to work on 9th line, adopted, and the Treasurer instructed to pay for said work as follows, viz.

Robert Mathers, $13.37½; William Martin, $9.00; Jas. Boyd, Jr., $11.50; Samuel Henning, $7.50; Robert Nixon, $500; H. Malcom, $4.37; J. Wright, 4.37½; Joseph Boyd, $9.00; N. Boyle, $4.37½; William Boyle, $5.00; James Boyd Superintendent, $8.75.

On motion being made and seconded the council adjourn until the last Friday in August. ROBERT DULOP, Clerk.

The Annexation Statement.

The Farm and Home, an American agricultural weekly, recently asked its Canadian readers for their opinions regarding "the plan of annexing Canada to the United States." It reports having received nine hundred and ten answers against the idea and two hundred and ten in favor of it. The Farm and Home also gives a table showing the vote for and against by provinces, and the result will prove surprising to Canadians who have watched public opinion closely. The following is the table.

FOR ANNEXATION.		AGAINST ANNEXATION.
Ontario	132	Ontario	70
Quebec	18	Quebec	10
Nova Scotia	60	Nova Scotia	620
Total	210	Total	700

It will be noticed at once that the Farm and Home, which received a large number of replies from Nova Scotia, did not apparently receive a single reply from New Brunswick or Prince Edward Island. There are a good many answers from Ontario, but none from Manitoba. Do the people of the provinces take absolutely no interest in the question, or are the Farm and Home's subscribers strictly confined to the three Provinces mentioned? The strangest feature about the table however is, the comparative votes of the Province of Ontario and Nova Scotia upon the question. A Canadian would have expected a much greater proportion of the replies from Nova Scotia to be favorable to annexation, and a much greater proportion of the Ontario votes to be unfavorable. Nova Scotia at the last Provincial election returned a majority of avowed secessionists to the Legislature, and the object of secession was to get rid of the traiff, thus guaranteeing a profitable trade with the United States. The explanation may be, however, that Nova Scotians, who are in favor of secession from the Dominion are anxious to disclaim disloyalty to Great Britain, which was imputed to them. On the other hand the people of Ontario, who are supposed to be in favor of Commercial Union with the United States, might be expected to be as decided in their denials of a feeling in favor of annexation as the farmers of Nova Scotia who are secessionists. The Farm and Home quotes one Ontario farmer, who says that he is not in favor of annexation but that he is in favor of commercial union, and others who are opposed to political union, but are in favor of reciprocity. It would appear, therefore, that the farmers of Ontario, as a class, are decidedly in favor of closer commercial relations with the United States.

W. A. BROWN

"THE PEOPLE'S JEWELLER"

—DEALER IN—

Fine Gold, Filled Gold, and Coin Silver Cases; with Hampden, Columbus, Waltham and Elgin Movements, in Ladies' and Gents' sizes. Solid 18 k Wedding Rings. Roll Gold Chains, and Jewellery in large variety Beautiful lines in Silverware for presentation purposes. I keep in Jewellers lines the finest and most complete stock between Shelburne and Owen Sound; do business for myself in my own name, and can be held to every warrant I sign. I don't quote prices on Watches "Not in Stock," and then tell a customer wanting Bartlett at $16, "I just sold the last one," I have P. S. Bartlett's, in stock at $17.50 less cash dis., warranted 3 years. I expect to establish more fully every year of business life an unquestioned reputation for Reliability. Straight Dealing. Fine Work and Close Prices.

Watch and Clock Warrants 2 and 3 years covering breakages.

☞ A call to Price or Purchase respectfully solicited.

GOODS BEST QUALITY

Watch Repairing Practically Excellent; Accurate in Finish; Uniform in Price.

W. A. BROWN, - Box 5,

MARKDALE.

FARMERS!

Don't forget there is good work done at the Flesherton

WOOLEN FACTORY

And we are doing all in our power to please. Customers are finding out it is to their advantage to deal with us, our Prices are Low and Our Goods are Reliable and notwithstanding price being cut so close on account of hard times, I intend to reduce the manufacturing prices in nearly every branch, viz., CARDING, SPINNING, WEAVING, &c., &c. Give us a trial and see for yourself.

W. H. FLESHER.

Flesherton, May 30th, 1887.

HOT FLUSHES.

The honey bee is a regular merchant. It cells combs for a living.

Ice is very popular just now, but we can remember a time not six months ago when almost every one was down on it.

The days of the book agent are numbered. A German firm has invented a steel-clad bullet that will penetrate four inches of brass.

An old colored preacher, after exhausting himself on an attempt to describe heaven, wound up thus: "I tell you, my brethren, it is a very Kentucky of a place."

Young Wife (petulantly)—"Well, even if I don't come to meet you every night as I used, what does it signify?" Young Husband—"That we have been married six months."

Kate—"Louise, dear, there's crape on the Van Briskets' front door. Some one must have died." Louise—"Impossible! I'm positive the doctor hasn't been there for several weeks."

Mr. McFaddle—"Let me off at Miketown." Conductor—"We don't stop. This is a through train." Mr. McFaddle—"Thin, playse, sor, will yer sthop long enough fur me to tell Bridget that it's carried through I am?"

"Do you know who that gentleman is, Mary, who is alwayss sitting at the window opposite? He seems to take an extraordinary interest in my movements." "Oh, Lor, Miss! He ain't no gentleman. He's got a wooden leg!"

Only a girl who has run a type writer at four dollars per week and finally marries her employer can enter a dry goods store and paralyze a lady clerk receiving six dollars per week. It's no use for a millionaire's wife to try it.

Miss X.—"Just think, dear. I had a pain in my knee and had to show it to young Dr. Smith." Friend—"And what did he do?" Miss X.—"He bandaged it." Friend—"What result?" Miss X.—"We are to be married in October."

Three Frenchmen who were studying a volume of Shakespeare in their native language endeavored to translate into English the well-known opening to Hamlet's soliloquy—"To be or not to be." The following was the result: First Frenchman—"To was or not to am." Second ditto—"To where or is to not." Third ditto—"To should or not to will."

A Startling Prediction.

Two hundred years ago in China there was just such a craze about natural gas as we have in this country to-day. Gas wells were sunk with as much vim and vigour as the celestials were capable of, but owing to a gas explosion that killed several millions of people and tore up and destroyed a large district of country, leaving a large inland sea, known on the maps as Lake Foo Chang, the boring of any more gas wells was then and there prohibited by law. It seems, according to the Chinese history, that many large and heavy pressure gas wells were struck, and in some districts wells were sunk quite near together Gas was lighted as soon as struck, as is done in this country. It is stated that one well with its unusual pressure, by induction or back draught pulled down into the earth the burning gas of a smaller well, resulting in a dreadful explosion of a large district, destroying the inhabitants thereof. Lake Foo Chang rests on this district. The same catastrophe is imminent in this country unless the laws restrict further developments in boring so many wells. Should a similar explosion occur there will be such an up-heaval as will dwarf the most terrible earthquakes ever known. The country along the gas belt from Toledo through Ohio, Indiana, and Kentucky will be ripped up to the depth of 1,200 to 1,500 feet and flopped over like a pancake, leaving a chasm through which the waters of Lake Erie will come howling down, filling the Ohio and Mississippi valleys, and blotting them out forever.—Am. Paper.

The Afghan Boundary Settled.

After two years of negotiation the Afghan boundary question has been settled. The chief matters in dispute, it will be remembered, were the possession of the Penjdeh oasis, between the Kush and Murghab Rivers, and the Ameer's claim to Badakshan and Vakhan, in the north-eastern portion of Afghanistan. The new boundary gives Turkestan, which is friendly to Russia, 7,000 square miles of territory on the west, claimed by the latter, including the valleys of the Murghab and Kush. Russia's claim to Vakhan on the east and the exclusive control of the Upper Oxus is surrendered. As it was admitted that her claim to the district in the west was well founded this settlement should be satisfactory to the British Government.

Business is Business.

Our fellow-subjects of the Queen in Australia, while willing to make some financial sacrifice to provide the Pacific route from Canada to the East, do not propose to allow their brotherly love for us to interfere with their business interests. The Melbourne Argus says:—"There is no objection at all to abandoning the present San Francisco contract for a Canadian service. On the contrary, Australia ought to make a financial sacrifice to promote the change—a change which means an American route through British territory; but, on the other hand, we cannot afford to check the development of the Cape and Canal routes, which are giving us the magnificent new vessels of the Peninsular and Oriental and Orient lines. Sentiment is sentiment, and we value the Canadian-Australian sentiment highly. But business is business."

A Lucky Guess.

Some time ago a gigantic balloon was inflated with gas near Rothesay, in the island of Bute, but before all was ready it broke away from its moorings, and shot miles into the air. Eventually it burst and fell near a gardener's cottage at Port Bannatyne. The enormous extent of silk which composed the balloon had completely covered the little cottage, suddenly and unexpectedly enveloping it in worse than Egyptian darkness. "Oh, John, John," said the gardener's wife, "it's the judgement day at last, and I've my auld claes on!" "Nonsense, woman," said John, "it's just a disruption somewhere."

MAIDS OF HONOR.

Waiting on Her British Majesty is Anything but a Sinecure.

The maids of honor to the Queen earn every penny of the £300 a year which is their stipend for filling a very difficult position. With the best of intentions and with the kindest heart in the world, the Queen expects so much from herself in the way of physical toil, both for business and pleasure, that she may perhaps be excused for sometimes forgetting that the flesh, especially aristocratic flesh, is weak. The maids of honor are on duty for a month at a time, and at the end of the month they are generally fit subjects for a course of tonic treatment. While on duty they can not call their souls their own. After breakfast, which they take in their own rooms, they have to hold themselves in instant readiness to obey the Queen's summons, which comes the moment Sir Henry Ponsonby quits her Majesty's presence, with the big red morocco dispatch-box, containing his day's work, under his arm. After a brief "Good morning" the Queen suggests a little reading, and the doubtful maid addresses herself to the pile of papers wherein the proper passages for her Majesty's hearing have already been marked by Sir Henry. Through columns of parliamentary debate, leading article and correspondence has the poor lady to intone her dismal way, often having to repeat passages, for the Queen never leaves a subject till she has thoroughly mastered it, and is not at all sparing in her commands to "Just read that again, please." The maid of honor is so busy minding her stops and trying to modulate her voice that she had little chance of understanding a tithe of what she is reading, and yet the moment the reading so over she has to rush off and get ready for a drive with her royal mistress, during which she will be expected to make lucid remarks on the topics she has just read aloud.

After luncheon is the only real time the maids of honor have to themselves, and even that is spoiled for them by the uncertainty as to whether they will be wanted to walk or drive with the Queen later in the afternoon. They must stay in their apartments, for, if by any chance they should be sent for and were not to be found at the moment, their life for a day or two would not be a happy one; so that a stroll in the grounds on their own account is out of the question till after 4 o'clock, when, if the Queen has departed on a drive without them, they know they are free till 6 at any rate. On the Queen's return there is more reading aloud, this time of ponderous works on heavy philosophical subjects, or else the arranging of sketches, photographs, or it may be the charity needlework is brought out in such time as her Majesty goes to dress for 9 o'clock dinner, where, to the relief of the maid of honor, she is not expected to be present. By this time she is not unfrequently faint for want of food, for when not at court she would naturally be finishing dinner at the hour when it is the Queen's pleasure to commence it.

Young ladies do not, as a rule, jump at the post of maid of honor to the Queen until they have given themselves a fair chance of obtaining an "establishment." It is not until season after season has been drawn blank that disconsolate ladies have recourse to the dignity, very much minus the leisure of joining the "Household in It follows that, though by no means the." sear and yellow leaf, the majority of the maids of honor are not in the first blush of budding girlhood. The present senior maid is the Hon. Harriet Lepel Phipps, a cousin of the Marquis of Normandy. Miss Phipps will never see her forty-fifth birthday again. The Hon. Frances Drummond, a daughter of Viscount Strathallan, is thirty-nine. The Hon. Ethel Cardogan was born 1853, which puts to her credit thirty-three Summers, and the Hon. Maud Okeover, a niece of Lady Waterpark, by whose influence she got the appointment, is only twenty-seven—London Letter.

Doherty's Farewell.

"I was in the drill square Royal Engineer barracks. A squad of recruits were at drill, amongst whom was an Irishman named Doherty, over six feet in height. At that time the sergeant-major was Mr. G., who was only five foot four inches. On this day he was seen approaching the squad looking sharply about for some fault. All squared up with the exception of Doherty, and the sergeant-major made straight for him, when the following dialogue ensued. Serjeant-major: "Heads up, that man!" Doherty raised his head slightly. "Up higher, sir!" The head was raised again. The sergeant-major, by standing on his toes, managed to reach Doherty's chin and poked it higher still, with the remark, "That's better. Don't let me see your head down again." By this time all were interested on seeing Doherty staring far away above the sergeant-major's head, when just then a voice from above in a rich brogue said, "Am I to be always like this, sergeant-major: "Yes, sir!" Doherty: "Then I'll say good-bye to ye, sergeant-major, for I'll nivir see ye again."

Brainless.

A tourist at the Curragh was strolling round the outskirts of the camp with a party of ladies and gentlemen, when they found a man laboriously turning a windlass which hoisted from a shaft a bucket filled with rock. The only thing remarkable about the man at the windlass was his hat, the crown of which was cut clear off, allowing the hot sun to pour down on a perfectly bald head, some waggish friends having recommended this arrangement as sure to produce a crop of hair. The gentleman and his party stood watching the man toiling unceasingly at his heavy labour for several minutes, when the kind-hearted visitor spoke up with concern, and said, "My friend, why don't you cover up your head? The hot sun will affect your brain."

"Brain, is it?" cried the man, as he gave the windlass another creaking revolution. "If I had any brains, d'ye think I'd be here pullin' up this bucket?"

He Became Ominously Silent.

She—"I saw you talking to Miss De Ponsonby the other evening, Mr. Cutaway-coat. Are you fond of her? She's an artist, isn't she? Does she paint very well?"

He—"She paints, but not very well. Half of it came off on my coat sleeve."

She—"Where was your coat sleeve?"

He—Becomes ominously silent.

HEALTH.

Bed Time.

This is not a "standard" time for every one that has reached adult life, but should be so for every child under fourteen years of age.

Babies may early be taught to sleep in a quiet, cool, dark room, and if this habit is formed during the first three months of infant life, it is the greatest blessing in the world to the tired mother.

City babies, particularly the first-born in families, are often kept up at night to "see papa," who feels as if he were defrauded of part of his enjoyment in life if baby falls asleep before he comes home from business, and thus baby is robbed of his "beauty sleep" very early in his little life.

At the age of two and even younger, the little ones are kept up, and dressed to see company that has been invited for the evening, and allowed to stay up until after refreshments have been served, said refreshments consisting of food which is very improper for the little folks.

These parents would be horrified if they were told they were abusing their children, and yet they are doing so as surely as if they neglected them in many ways.

Children are taken to evening entertainments, parties, etc., in the mistaken idea that children must have "a good time," when the excitement of the evening causes their pulses to throb and beat, and often sleep is a difficult thing for them to find when the excitement has passed away.

Let seven o'clock be the bedtime for the little ones, and from the five year old to the fourteen year old, fix their hour for retiring at eight, and let that time invariably see them all tucked away in bed, with the good-night kiss of mother, the last episode of their childhood's day. In our reckless waste of our faculties later in life, we too often burn the midnight oil for thrift or pleasure, or, unhappily, sin; so let us for those that are our sacred charges make a firm foundation on which to build the structure of Life, which, to be fair and comely must be substantial with Health, and cemented with good principles.

"Early to bed and early to rise, Makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise."

Airing Beds.

As soon as dressed in the morning, the occupant should open the bed, placing pillows in open windows and spreading out bedclothes to catch the breeze in such a way as to be fully aired; wheeling the bed into position before the windows stripped of every article of clothing, thoroughly shaken up, that the air may penetrate every part of it. Even the boys should be taught to do this, that the busy house-wife, employed with preparations for breakfast, may be saved a trip up-stairs.

The making of beds should be the very last duty of the morning's work, that every trace of the night's emanations may have had a chance to disappear with the fresh breeze and cleansing sunshine. But as essential to health and sound sleep as is this precaution, feather beds and pillows should not be placed in the sunshine, but given a northern, or northwestern exposure, where a stiff breeze is very often to be found of a bright morning.

If placed where the direct rays of the sun may fall upon them, they will be very likely to emit a disagreeable, oily smell, caused by heat drawing from them the oil, which from long use has become rancid.

It is not necessary to state that the constant use of feather-beds and pillows is very unwholesome at the best, but if they must be used, keep from the sun, but air thoroughly every pleasant day. To the other appurtenances of the sleeping-room, bed-clothing, mattresses, and so forth, together with the room itself, it is impossible to give too much sunshine.

Hints.

If a hang-nail seems likely to be sore and turn to a "run-around," soak in strong soda water, as hot as can be borne.

Beware of boils or any eruptions. They indicate that the system is in a low condition, and an infectious disease will be more easily contracted than when the body is in a healthy state.

Coffee, especially the higher grades, in the occasional use, stimulates the bowels to action, but the habitual use of strong coffee gives the secondary effect, and torpidity is the result. Curiously enough, the poorer and cheaper the coffee the less deleterious its character. Java and Mocca may really be poisionous to an individual, while Rio coffee is quite inoffensive.

The hot fomentation is a valuable remedial agent. It is rare to find acute suffering where it is not indicated. It alleviates neuralgia and rheumatic pain. It is good for biliousness, constipation and torpid liver. It relieves colics and flatulence. No well-regulated family should be without a hot water bottle. A wet cloth placed under a hot water bottle will give moisture, if desired. These rubber bottles come in sizes from one to four quarts.

Hints Upon Emergencies.

After all accidents use liquid food, especially milk. Never allow thirst, use ice if nothing else can be procured. In any case of doubt as to the existence of life, insert a needle in the flesh and let it remain half an hour. If the patient is alive, the needle will rust. Ether is a much better anesthetic than chloroform, as the 'atter sometimes causes paralysis of the heart. But if chloroform has been used, and the patient stops breathing, put him on his head. In administering ether, wring out a sponge from hot water, saturate it with ether, hold it to the patient's mouth for a breath or two. Stop, then apply the sponge again. But first of all put vaseline or cold cream upon the patient's face.

SYNCOPE OR SHOCK OR COLLAPSE.—First attend to the circulation. Loosen all garments at the neck and waist, use artificial respiration and apply dry cups to the head. For stimulants use mustard or coffee or brandy and water. In extreme cases inject brandy into the thigh and insert warm water and turpentine into the rectum. Aromatic spirits of ammonia may also be used.

HEMORRHAGE.—These may be from the bowels, kidneys, stomach, or uterus. Nourishment should be given in large quantities. In external hemorrhage, arrest the flow, raise the hands, and apply ice to the back of the neck.

APOPLEXY OR CEREBRAL HEMORRHAGES.—This arises in a rich man from high living, lack of exercise, causing the flesh to change to fat. In a poor man it is caused by starved arteries. Death by apoplexy can be distinguished from disease of the heart, as in the latter case death ensues in a moment, while in apoplexy it is delayed.

CONVULSIONS:—Are chiefly caused by too much or too bad blood in the head. In epiglottis spasms, keep the tongue forward, for if the patient swallows his tongue, there is no hope.

Is it a Piece of a Comet!

From an illustrated paper by William Earl Hidden, in the August Century, we quote as follows: There has recently come into my possession the ninty iron meteorite whose fall to the earth has been observed.

It is, moreover, the first meteorite which seems to evidence a direct connection with a star shower. The mass acquires still further interest from the fact that it is presumably a fragment of the famous comet of Biela.

A brief account of this celestial wanderer will doubtless be of interest to readers.

Astronomers have waited patiently for the fall to the earth's surface, at the time of the periodical starshowers, of something tangible, but until now they have waited in vain.

In looking over a considerable amount of astronomical literature, only one record can be found of the falling of a body to the earth at such a time; this was near Paris, on the 10th of April, 1094, when "many shooting-stars were seen, and a very large one was said to have been found on the ground as a glowing substance."

From the 24th to the 29th of November, 1885, the earth was passing through a train of meteors that proceeded from the constellation Andromeda, and once formed a part of Biela's comet. These meteors are now known to astronomers as Andromedes or Bielids. The maximum of this shower occurred on the 27th, while it was yet broad daylight over America, and at an hour corresponding to 11. A M. at Mazapil, Mexico. Thus, at the time of the fall of this meteorite, ten hours after the maximum number of meteors was observed, the earth was meeting with only the stragglers of the train. It cannot be doubted that the cosmical dust proceeding from the disintegration of Biela's Comet wholly enveloped the earth and was seen as meteors from every part of it. Such was the magnificence of the celestial phenomenon that in some parts of the Eastern Continent uneducated people believed there would be no stars left in the sky.

Of the countless host of meteors which crossed the earth's path on this 27th of November, only one is as yet known to have reached the earth's surface, and this fell near the village of Mazapil, in the state of Zacatecas, Mexico, at about 9 o'clock in the evening. It is of the rare iron-nickel variety, and weighs ten and a quarter pounds troy.

This meteorite was presented to me by Sr. Jose A. Y Bonilla, Director-Professor of the Zacatecas Observatory, who received it, five days after its fall, from the ranchman who saw it descend from the heavens. This ranchman related the strange occurrence as follows translated from the Spanish:

"It was at about 9 o'clock on the night of November 27th, when I went out to feed certain horses; suddenly, I heard a loud sizzing noise, exactly as though something red-hot was being plunged into cold water, and almost instantly there followed a somewhat loud thud. At once the corral was covered with a phosphorescent light, while suspended in the air were small luminous sparks as though from a rocket. I had not recovered from my surprise before I saw this luminous air disappear, and there remained on the ground only such a light as is made when a match is rubbed. A number of people came running toward me from the neighboring houses, and they assisted me in quieting the horses, which had become very much excited. We all asked each other what could be the matter, and we were afraid to walk in the corral for fear of being burned. When, in a few moments, we had recovered from our fright, we saw the light disappear, and bringing lanterns to look for the cause, we found a hole in the ground and in it a ball of light. We retired to a distance, fearing it would explode and harm us. Looking up to the sky, we saw from time to time exhalations or stars, which soon went out without noise. We returned after a little, and found in the hole a hot stone which we could barely handle; this on the next day, we saw, looked like a piece of iron. All night it rained stars, but we saw none fall to the ground, as they all seemed to be extinguished while not very high up."

Upon further inquiry we learn that there was no explosion or detonation heard, and that the mass penetrated the earth only to a depth of twelve inches. This very circumstantial account leads us to believe that this meteorite is the first one to be secured and preserved that has come to the earth during a star shower.

Man's Chiefest Weakness.

Sydney Smith often wished he could sew. He believed one reason why women are so much more cheerful generally than men is because they can work and vary more their employments; and he is on record as saying that all men ought to learn to sew.

At an evening gathering in a pretty American city less than a month ago the writer of these words heard a lady say she always pitied men because they were unable to take up fancy sewing in their leisure hours at home. "My!" she exclaimed, "I couldn't get along at all without my sewing."

To a limited extent all men certainly should know how to sew—not necessarily as an employment, or even as a pastime, but as a part of the practical education which the necessities of the age demand. Even the man of family, whose practical sewing is done for him by the willing and nimble fingers of his loved ones—whose shirt buttons are nursed and tended with alert care, and whose raveled buttonholes are "made as good as new" from time to time—goes sometimes away from home. What annoyances he could avoid, and what economies he could practice during those presumably heart-breaking absences had he been timely taught to skillfully handle the indispensable needle and thread. Had all men learned to sew how many humiliating prints of "old bachelors" pathetically or comically struggling with an off button or a rent garment we should have been spared Even the horrors which that immortal Song of the Shirt celebrates might thus have been mitigated or at least shared.

Moreover, could all men sew, it is more than probable that crime would sensibly decrease, for they would not, surely, exchange their sewing to the saloon; and is not the saloon the cradle of crime? This is [illegible]

So one might go on indefinitely counting the blessings sure to spring from a general masculine knowledge of the art of sewing, ignorance of which has driven many otherwise happy and contented men to marriage by way of defense against abject helplessness in the face of buttonless wristbands and other such bachelor afflictions. Verily, then, if man will but intelligently consider his duty to himself and learn the greatest (because usefulest) lesson of self-reliance he must forthwith learn to sew.

The Wealth of Ancient Mexico.

Though gold in the ore is rich and plentiful in the Mexican country, the inhabitants could not have been aware of any better method of obtaining it than by sifting it from river sands. Notwithstanding the numerous observations of marvelously wrought gold objects in Mexico, Bernal Diaz's own words should establish this fact. Montezuma, he says, informed them that their gold "was obtained from the province of Zacatula, where the earth which contained it was washed in wooden vessels, and the gold-dust sank to the bottom." It was also to be had, he says, in Tustepec, "where it was collected from the beds of rivers." Again, speaking of the expeditions sent out by Cortes in search of mines, he says that Gonzalo de Umbria, who went to Zacatula, reported that there "the natives washed gold out of the sand in small troughs."

If this were the only means employed, it is improbable that the Spaniards saw it in all the instances and in the great quantities that Cortez and Bernal Diaz describe; and that their statements in this regard are grossly exaggerated is evident from the fact that, with the exception of a few small trinkets, not a relic of the beautiful things of which they speak remains. Neither do the chronicles record a very great amount actually gathered by the rapacious conquerors, or, yet all the schemes which his mind could conceive must have been directed to this one object, not for personal greed only but to meet the expectations of the emperor to whom, when he had feared that he was to be deprived of his command, he had promised wealth and treasure. Though torture of the most barbaric description was employed to induce the natives to reveal the riches that they were supposed to hide, no more were obtained; and, in order that the Spanish king and those about his court may afterward understand the absence of the treasure in the kind and quantity which he had led them to expect, Cortes cautiously wrote that it was all lost in that disastrous revolution which first drove him from the city.

The Children's Jubilee.

One of the brightest and happiest features of the Queen's jubilee, recently held in England, was the treat given to the school-children of London. A large sum of money was raised by a subscription opened by one of the London papers and on the day following the regular jubilee celebration thirty thousand little girls and boys gathered in Hyde Park.

They were taken in a certain proportion from all the public schools of the metropolis, and a great many of them came from the most wretched and squalid quarters of the great city, issuing from miserable courts and alleys, from dreary houses teeming with beggarly occupants, from hot and dirty streets.

Possibly many of them had never seen a park, with big shade trees and pretty lakes, before. Many diversions were arranged for their amusement. They were amply fed on cakes, lemonade, and other good things. Punch-and-Judy shows and a hundred other amusing things attracted their attention and laughter. Bands played, and there were sounds of music and merriment all over the park. Each child also was sent home with a little memorial of the day in the shape of a mug.

The Queen herself, and the Prince and Princess of Wales, visited the throng of poor little children, smiling at them, and saying kindly words to them. Surely there was not one among all that multitude who will ever forget the pleasure and fun of the Queen's Jubilee.

In these days much more attention is paid than formerly to the amusements and recreations of children. Not only are the children of well-to-do or wealthy parents provided with amusements in many forms, but public-spirited and benevolent people have established societies for giving pleasure, now and then, to poor children whose parents cannot afford to procure them recreation.

Jemmy and the President.

The following story is told of the individual who has long officiated as the gardener at the presidential mansion in Washington. President Cleveland had heard rumours that the gardener was drunk and uncivil to visitors at the White House, so one bright morning he summoned him into his presence to receive his dismissal. "Jemmy," said the president, "I hear bad stories about you. It is said you are constantly drunk and uncivil to visitors." For a brief while Jemmy was puzzled for a reply. At last he said, "Mr. Presidint, bedad I hear much worse stories about you; but do you think I believe them? No, by the powers—I know they're all lies!"

Cause and Effect.

A certain University was once said to be a learned place from the fact that most persons took some learning there, while but few brought any away with them. So it accumulated.

He Was Willing to Quit.

A good story is told of an interview of the governor of a certain prison with one of the prisoners. Some of the prisoners were at work lathing a room during a recent official visit of the governor, and the latter was inspecting the progress of the work. After contemplating the process for a few minutes, the governor remarked, "See here, my man—you are laying those laths too near together; that sort of work will never do."

The prisoner calmly laid down his tools and said, "Governor, I am willing to be turned off and discharged, if my work don't suit. I never applied for this job or situation; and, if my work isn't satisfactory, I am willing to go."

LOVE'S TRIUMPH.

By the Author of "KATE MASSEY'S FALSEHOOD," "BEATRICE'S AMBITION," "FOR LOVE OR KINDRED?" "A GOLDEN DREAM," &c., &c.

CHAPTER I.

Within a mile of a certain favourite Cheshire watering-place, where everything is new, garish, and altogether unlovely with the exception of the blue waters of the Irish Sea, lies the peaceful and secluded hamlet of Herby. It is situated but a short distance from the sandy shore, almost hidden from view in a slight hollow on the side of a very high and fertile hill, and is surrounded by orchards of apple and pear trees and lovely sweet-scented gardens.

It contains four zig-zag streets, without a yard of level roadway in any of them, forming steep ascents and sudden declivities in a way that severely tries the muscles and nerves of a stranger, but apparently is no inconvenience to the natives. It has quaint, overhanging upper storeys to its houses, with fantastically-carved beams crossing each other and forming diamond shaped panels that are filled in with plaster. It has one large low-roofed inn, a little modernised by the laying down of shiny oilcloth upon the floors, which only want polishing to bring out their rich dark colours, and by many coats of whitewash concealing the red sandstone walls; but such innovations have not deprived it of its old-world memories. Its quaint devices for the comfort of a generation of topers long since passed away, its low panelled rooms and ornamented galleries its deep window-seats and capacious chimney-corners vividly recall the past.

Perhaps the reason why this little hamlet is overlooked by the crowds that year after year seek the health-giving breezes along the esplanade of the fashionable holiday resort so near to it is because it lies so embowered in trees that, were it not for the square tower of its church, one would pass by the meretricious brick and stucco villas on the shore near the painfully new railway-station, and leave the place without ever dreaming that such a quaint village, which time seems to have left untouched for a hundred years, existed within a mile of modern seaside civilisation.

But the ivy-covered cruciform church that has so many secrets hidden beneath its lettered pavement, and the grass-covered graves surrounding its walls, sometimes attract the attention of an exceptionally observant visitor; and thus, although the "madding crowd" does not know of its existence, Herby is occasionally visited by artists who have been "doing" Welsh and Westmoreland lakes and mountains, and by anglers, who sojourn there for the sake of a certain trout-stream that flows through the grounds of the Grange.

Such was Herby on one fair and sunny June morning, when the shadows of the leaves formed a lace-like pattern on the broad red-gravel walk leading to the church, and the shadow of the tower was thrown across the graves. Other shadows too fell upon those grassy hillocks and old half-buried headstones as three persons came out by the vestry door and walked across the churchyard towards a stile that gave access to a narrow lane from which the blue sky was hidden by a canopy of lilac and laburnum trees in full bloom—two men, and a tall slender girl of some twenty or twenty-one summers. The girl's clear-cut oval face was pale, and her beautiful hazel eyes appeared full of sadness. Her dark and delicately-arched eyebrows and long lashes were perfectly black, and formed a striking contrast to her hair, which was soft, fine, silken, and of a pale shade of yellow that it would have been flattery to call golden. She was clad in a tumbled, soiled, and faded gray dress, her straw hat was trimmed with a strip of shabby lace, and her luxuriant hair was carelessly coiled about her shapely head; her small white hands were innocent of gloves, and on the left a broad gold band with a flashing diamond set in it guarded a wedding ring.

The man upon whose arm she was lightly leaning was about twenty-five years of age, and as broad-shouldered and dark as she was slight and fair—a handsome, well-bred man, and a good one, or his noble brow, clear frank eyes, and sweet mouth belied him strangely—a man who would protect his enemy's life with his own, in whose hands any woman's honour would be safe, with a gentle chivalrous disposition that a wicked woman could deceive, a child or a dog would trust.

His handsome sun-burnt face was flushed and smiling as he looked over the girl's shabby hat, and, addressing the person on the other side of her—a fair-haired, blue-eyed young man in the dress of a clergyman—said—

"Well, it was not such a terrible business after all, Bob; and my wild Hyacinth is mine hard and fast, is she not?"

"Oh, yes, the marriage will stand firm enough! It is the clergyman who always has to bear the brunt when it comes out that there has been some informality in the case. It will be six months with 'hard' or a fifty pound fine if either of you drags this before the world with a view of breaking it. I tell you, Glynn, I would not run such a risk for any one but my sister, besides consider my conscience!" replied the clergyman, with dignity.

"Oh, come now—that's too much! A wedding isn't a crime! Is it, Hyacinth?"

The girl raised her white eyelids for a moment, then lowered them again demurely and leaned rather more heavily on her husband's arm, but made no reply in words.

"Well, it is evading the law, you see—and that gives one an uneasy sensation, as if there must be something wrong somewhere; one cannot help feeling where there's secrecy there's sin. You understand?" answered the young clergyman.

"Indeed I do not!" begun Glynn hastily; and he would have poured forth a torrent of words on the subject had not his newly-wedded wife interrupted him.

"I am sorry for this,' she said, looking gravely from one to the other and speaking in a low sweet musical voice. "Bob, you told me—you both told me—that everything was correct and legal. I am sure—with something like a sob—"I would not have consented had you told me so—no indeed!" and two glittering tears showed themselves on the dark fringes of her eyes.

"There, Hyacinth—there, my darling!" exclaimed her husband, in great distress, placing his arm around her and pressing his brown cheek against her fair face. "Why, you're crying—crying on you're wedding-day—so awfully unlucky! Look, Bob, at what you have done with your conscience and your scruples."

Before the perpetual curate of Herby could reply, his sister turned her face towards him, opened her large eyes—so tearful and yet so bright—looked up into his face, and said—

"It is right? It is legal? We are married—are we not? It is not a farce—not one of those mock marriages one reads of in books—ay, and in newspapers sometimes?"

"Good heavens!" exclaimed her husband, his face flushing with sudden anger, his voice shaking. "Can you suspect me of such a wicked trick? Why, Hyacinth——'

She made a gentle gesture with her slim white hand, and smiled at him, though her eyes were grave.

"I do not think you would play me such a trick," she said—"I do not indeed Glynn. But you are a man, and men have deceived women ever since the world began, and will continue to do so, I suppose."

"And you dare to place me in your thoughts by the side of the villains of whose crimes you have read in the newspapers! You forget that I am cheefully risking the loss of a great fortune; that you are as necessary to me as the air I breath; that you are as pure and holy in my eyes as the memory of my dead mother; that you are my cousin; that your brother, whom you know to be ordained participates in the 'trick' as you are pleased to call it! Oh, Hyacinth, I can scarcely believe you are in earnest!" and the young man withdrew his arm from his bride and walked on hastily, hot tears springing to his eyes.

She did not follow him and strive to woo him back to her side, as many a loving girl would have done; nor did she pout her lip and try to look indifferent. The ominous quarrel that was spoiling the first moments of their married life did not disturb her in the least. She raised her left hand, looked at the plain gold ring with its flashing guard, sighed a faint low satisfied sigh and turned to her brother, repeating the very question she had asked some minutes before—

"It is right—legal? Are we married, Bob?"

"Yes. It is a little informal, but it will stand in any court of law in the kingdom—you may be sure of that, Hyacinth. But you will be pretty well sold if you find you've married a pauper—a man without even a profession. And you know what a hatred our usurping uncle has of us all; if he knew Glynn was here, I believe he would disinherit him."

"I know it is a case of risk—a sprat to catch a salmon; but miles and miles of rich and fertile soil by the river Nore, and a stately and ancient castle, the home of our race since Henry the Second gave it to red Glynn Verschoyle, are worth risking something for. I would risk even my life to be Verschoyle of Verschoyle; and her eyes lost their steady calmness and her cheeks flushed scarlet as she spoke. "Yes," she went on, after a pause, "I am willing to run the risk; and, if I fail, I must put up with the consequences."

"Well," said her brother slowly, "the plan is a good one if it only turns out all right; but there is generally a hitch in these things—the secret leaks out, or something."

"This secret will keep, Bob—you will keep it, I shall keep it, and we will make him keep it."

"People in love are generally fools," replied the young clergyman sententiously.

"And do you imagine I am in love with that gaby?" she asked, glancing contemptuously at the tall and handsome young fellow whom a few minutes before she had solemnly sworn to love and honour all the days of her life, and who was now sitting on an old stone stile leading into the lane, and still looking angry and mortified.

"'Gaby' said Robert. "An honourable gentleman, well born and well bred, and one of the kindest, best-hearted plackiest fellows I ever knew! 'Gaby'!"

"I think so," replied the girl coldly; "I should think any man a gaby who, for the gratification of a whim, a fancy for a face that pleases him now, that may displease him a year hence, and that he is sure to grow weary of and hate in time, would risk such an inheritance.

"Oh, Hyacinth," cried her brother, "you—and all of us—ought to be the last to refuse to believe in love! Look at our father—of what he gave up for our mother, and how passionately he adores her and she him, and how happy he is in spite of our shabbiness and poverty!"

"Well, they are exceptions, I suppose," said the girl, with a sneer; but let that slide. If a cool head can keep a secret and force others to do so, this morning's business won't leak out until—well, dead men's shoes, you know, and all that kind of thing. Hush now!"—and her fair clear-cut face assumed its usual expression of haughty calmness.

"I wonder whether you have a heart Hyacinth?" muttered the curate. "It seems to me that you might be chiselled out of a block of stone, for all the human and womanly feeling you display—you are quite unlike the rest of us."

"Heart?" she said, immediately catching his words. "Yes, Robert, I have a heart to be Mrs. Neville—Mrs. Verschoyle Neville, of Verschoyle castle and Shangannon—but I have not the heart to love yonder gaby" I have not the heart to love yonder gaby" —dropping her voice to a whisper as they came close to the stile and her husband rose and approached her.

"Forgive me, dearest," he said feeling heartily ashamed of his outburst of anger; "I ought not to have taken offense at such a—a— trifle. Of course you did not mean it."

She made no reply in words, but she smiled at him, placing her soft white hand in his as he helped her over the stile. Her brother followed, and the three walked down the lane together in the shade of the laburnums and lilacs, crushing beneath their feet the fallen blossoms that almost covered the ground. A little further on a grand old horse-chestnut tree that cast a cool shadow all about it, and towered upwards a pyramid of graceful fan-shaped leaves and white spiky blossoms, seemed to close the path. But on one side of the massive trunk—indeed almost behind it—another stile led into an ill-kept wood, where some of the trees were dying for want of light and air, others were already dead, and all were more or less encumbered with treacherous, clinging ground-ivy that it was apparently no one's business to clear away.

At this stile they paused, Glynn Neville, still assuming the air of an ill-used man, as if, although he had forgiven, he had not forgotten his wife's distrust of him, said—

"This is the limit, I suppose, Hyacinth?"

"I think not," she replied, smiling. I think you might come home with us. I dare say breakfast—if you can call our morning scramble for food by such a name—is going on now; and, if any one saw us together and you did not come in, there would be talking and wondering and questioning on their part, and downright lying on mine—and"—with a little disdainful gesture of the hand—"I hate that."

Glynn, who had brightened visibly during her speech, declared with some warmth—

"Yes, I should like to go up to the Grange very much, dear; I delight in make my own coffee and frying my own trout—in fact, anything except blowing the fire with my mouth."

"As you caught Lil doing the first time that you came," said the curate, glad to find the conversation taking this turn.

"Yes,—the beautiful child! Hyacinth when you and I are rich—five or six years hence—we must take Lil to London and watch the world worshipping her. It would be a crime to let such a flower 'blush unseen' in a Cheshire village, to marry eventually the doctor or"—with a laughing glance at Robert Verschoyle—"the curate."

Hyacinth's lip quivered, and she said with some bitterness in her voice—

"Very well; if that time ever does come, it will most likely come when I am fading and the flower of her loveliness is fairest—a pleasant reflection! Ah, there is my ridiculous parent on the lawn!"

They had now skirted the edge of the wood, and come to another stile leading into nothing more imposing than a large sloping field in which some recently-shorn sheep were placidly grazing. It was most decidedly a field, and was called a lawn only because a large ancient mansion, in a state of partial ruin—with moss-grown roof and walls matted with ivy—stretched with its tumble-down stables and out-offices, across the upper end of it. The old peak-roofed, gabled building had no grace or beauty of its own; and yet it was a fair and refreshing sight to eyes tired with the glare of the sands in the hot sunshine, for a profusion of uncared for, neglected roses clambered over and clung to and ran riot through the ivy everywhere.

The sweet-scented blossoms spread across the little windows, starry sprays of jasmine peeped out between the stiff, formal passion-flowers. Everything but these fair gifts of nature spoke ruin and decay, and a hopelessness that have even led to a cessation of all efforts to keep up appearances. The broad gravel walk in front of the house was so covered with weeds that one ot the sheep was nipping the grass growing between the stones. What had once been a row of stately oaks was now a line of unsightly stumps not more than a foot above the ground and bristling with bushy growths. A broken statue of Amphitrite in a grass-grown shell with a memorial of the time when this field was in reality the pleasaunce of a noble mansion. The broken escutcheon over the hall door—about which the ivy and some white roses were entwined—the ragged embroidered curtain hanging at an open window, the cracked and worn flight of red sandstone steps, the dilapidated, neglected, poverty-stricken aspect of the whole place, was such as is more often found on the banks of the Nore, the Shannon, or the Blackwater, than by the side of an English river. Its appearance would have suggested thoughts of the Court of Chancery, had the fact not been so very apparent that the disorder and neglect were evidently the products of swarming life rather than the desolation of a house of the "Courts,"

Such indeed had been Glynn Neville's thought concerning it when—a month or two before that fair June morning—he had first leaned over the stile by the wood, and looked with disapproving eyes at his uncle's home, little thinking that in this remote, unvisited Cheshire village he should find in his fair-faced, placid, flaxen-haired cousin his wife and his fate.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

The Hottest Place in the World.

The hottest region on earth is tropical Africa, where the mean equatorial temperature of the air is 85° 10', the same equatorial temperature being 820° 94' in Asia, and 809° 96' in America. The great bulk of Africa, to the extent of three-fourths, or even four-fifths, of the whole lies within the tropics. Under any circumstances, therefore, a very high temperature might be expected to prevail on this continent. Its physical conformation favors and intensifies this tendency; the vast expanse of unbroken land in the northern division, the slight elevation of the surface, and the aridity of the Sahara, all tend to make Africa the hottest region in the world. It is pre-eminently the "tropical continent." The extreme of heat is found not under the equator itself but in the neighborhood of the northern tropic, in the Nubian Desert, where food may be cooked by being buried in the sand. The saying of Arabs is, "In Nubia the soil is like fire, and the wind like a flame." On the coast of the Red Sea, the mean temperature of Massowah is 88° and at Mourzouk, in Fezzan, the summer heat reaches 1308° in the shade. It must also be borne in mind that local circumstances increase both heat and cold immensely. Thus Sir J. Herschell observed a superficial temperature of 159° in soil at the Cape of Good Hope; and Sturt says that, on the Macquarie River in New South Wales, "the ground was almost a molten surface, and a match falling upon it was immediately ignited." 140° F. has also been registered at Colorado; and near the Euphrates, Capt. Griffiths found the thermometer standing at 156° in the sun, and 132° in the shade. At Calpee, in the East Indies, the thermometer on one occasion was observed to stand at 150° in the open air half-an-hour after sunset.

Struck with Lightning

Neatly describes the position of a hard or soft corn when Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor is applied. It does its work so quickly and without pain that it seems magical in action. Try it. Recollect the name—Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. Sold by all druggists and dealers everywhere.

CLOTHES WRINGERS, 10 kinds; MANGLES 3 kinds; Washing Machines, 2 kinds. Churns, Carpet Sweepers, Meat Choppers, Trucks, and other sundries. HAMILTON INDUSTRIAL WORKS CO., Hamilton, Canada. Send for article wanted or Illustrated Catalogue.

—1887—

BUY NOW

FOR IMMEDIATE SHIPMENT.

THE OSHAWA MOWERS

They surpass all other mowers in workmanship, quality of material, excellence of construction, and performance of work.

NEW MODEL THRESHERS.

The best threshing machines in America. They do the largest amount of work, and thresh cleaner than any other machines can do the work. In excellence of construction they are unequalled. They are the best made in Canada, and are only equalled by their namesakes in the United States.

PORTABLE ENGINES.—No better agricultural engines are made.

HALL THRESHING MACHINES.—The best in the market for horse-powers.

WOODBURY, or DINGEE, IMPROVED HORSE MOWERS, now the easiest running and best in the world.

Also the CALIFORNIA, PLANET, AND PITTS HORSE-POWERS, of established repute.

Repairs on hand for every machine made.

JOHN LIVINGSTONE, Trustee,

JOSEPH HALL MACHINE WORKS OSHAWA

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships.

Sailing during winter from Port and every hurada and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers fo Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via Halifax and St. John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal, weekly, Glasgow and Boston weekly; and Glasgow and Philadelphia, fortnightly.

For Freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co. Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's N. F., Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans Rae & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; H. A. Allan Portland Boston Montreal.

RUBBER STAMPS, SEALS Stencils, and Burning Brands, &c. Send for Catalogue. BARBER BROS. Co., 37 Scott St. Toronto.

—THE—

Toronto Silver Plate Co.,

MANUFACTURERS OF THE HIGHEST GRADE OF

SILVER PLATED WARES.

TRADE MARK.

ALL GOODS GUARANTEED.

TORONTO.

THE WHITE THRESHING ENGINE OF LONDON ONT.

A FULL SUPPLY FOR 1887.

Wall Paper

MANUFACTURERS.

M. STAUNTON & CO.,

Samples on application. TORONTO ONT.

BABY'S BIRTHDAY.

A Beautiful Imported Birthday Card sent to any baby whose mother will send us the names of two or more other babies, and their parents' addresses. Also a handsome Diamond Dye Sample Card to the mother and much valuable information.

Wells, Richardson & Co., Montreal.

J. L. JONES
WOOD ENGRAVER
10 KING S EAST
TORONTO.

Bicycles!

SEND AT ONCE FOR LIST of Second-Hand Machines,

From $15 Upwards.

New Catalogue Ready 1st April.

A. T. LANE MONTREAL.

MILLER'S TICK DESTROYER.

STOCKMEN, give this valuable preparation a fair trial. It operates promptly and effectually in destroying Ticks and other vermin pests, as well as in eradicating all affections of the skin to which Sheep are subject. Sold in Tins at 35c., 70c. and $1. A 35c. Tin will clean 20 Sheep or 35 Lambs. HUGH MILLER & Co., Toronto.

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you. Address DR. H. G. ROOT,

Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto.

MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO.

MANUFACTURE ONLY

FINEST

Silver Plated Ware.

Artistic Designs, combined with Unequalled Durability and Finish.

HAMILTON ONT.

THE greatest discovery of the present age for Regulating the Bowels, and Curing all Blood, Liver and Kidney Complaints. A perfect Blood Purifier. A few in Hamilton who have been benefited by its use: Mrs. M. Keenan, 192 Robert St., cured of Erysipelas of 2 yrs. standing; Robt. Gornell, 24 South St., daughter cured of Epileptic Fits after 6 years' suffering; Jennie Birrell, 55 Walnut St., cured of Weakness and Lung Trouble: John Wood, 95 Catheart St., cured of Liver Complaint and Biliousness, used only 3 fifty-cent bottles; Mrs. J. Beal, 6 Augusta St., troubled for years with Nervous Prostration, two small bottles gave her great relief. So'd at 50c. & $1.

F. F. DALLEY & CO., Proprietors.

Farmers and Threshers!

USE ON YOUR MACHINERY ONLY THE WELL-KNOWN

PeerlessOil

NINE GOLD MEDALS Have been awarded it during the last four years. Try also PEERLESS AXLE GREASE, for your Wagons and Horse Powers.

Manufactured at QUEEN CITY OIL WORKS, by

SAMUEL ROGERS & CO. TORONTO.

L. D. SAWYER & CO., Hamilton, Ont.

MANUFACTURERS OF

"L. D. S." ENGINES,

WOOD, COAL AND STRAW BURNERS,

PLAIN AND TRACTION,

"Grain Saver" and "Peerless"

SEPARATORS.

"Pitts" Horse Powers, for 2, 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12 Horses.

Tread Powers, for 1, 2 and 3

Eclipse Separators, for Tread & Small Powers.

Send for Illustrated Catalogue

GURNEY'S

Standard Hot-air Furnaces

HAVE NO EQUAL

PRICES TO SUIT ALL DEALERS

THE "BOYNTON,"
" "HARRIS,"
" "MAMMOTH,"
" "MONARCH."

Send for Price List and Illustrated Catalogue.

EVERY FURNACE GUARANTEED

THE E. & C. GURNEY COMPANY, (L'T'D),

TORONTO, HAMILTON, MONTREAL, AND WINNIPEG.

Markdale Standard.

C. W. Rutledge, Proprietor.

MARKDALE, AUG. 11. 1887.

NOTE AND COMMENT.

—Wiarton is to have an $8000 hotel.

—Hanlan and Teemer are to row on Toronto Bay next Saturday, 13th.

—The Manitoba exhibits for the Toronto Industrial Fair will leave Winnipeg on the 27th inst.

—It is estimated that 25,000 people have already passed their summer holidays in Muskoka this season.

—The grading on the Red River Valley railway will be completed, the contractors expect, by the 25th inst.

—The total income of the Methodist Missionary fund of Canada for the past year amounts to the handsome sum of $200,000.

—Chicago papers describe the effects of the drought in the Northwestern States as disastrous in the extreme.

—Mr. Ferguson (Conservative) was elected for South Renfrew last week, making the fifth supporter of the government elected since the general election.

—The Executive Committee of the Central Farmers' Institute of Ontario, which met in Toronto last Thursday, declared itself strongly in favor of unrestricted reciprocity with the United States, and decided to push the work of organization throughout the Province.

—The Convicted Chicago Anarchists have appealed their case through all the courts of the State of Illinois, and the verdict still is that they must suffer the extreme penalty. Their lawyers will probably find means to appeal the case further, and when the scaffold is actually reached by these men many will almost have forgotten what they were condemned for.

POULTRY FARMING.

The poultry business is fast developing into importance and bids fair to be one of the leading branches of agriculture. The demand for eggs is unlimited, and the export is something enormous. The amount paid for eggs in this village for twelve months reached the handsome sum of $3,900.00. A practical farmer near this village informed us that the profits from his hens for a year is $1 each after paying all expenses of their keep &c, What other investment will give as large a return?

It is no wonder the Owen Sound Poultry Show has created so much interest, it having become one of the best in the Province, while the coming show (in December) gives promise of being the best in the Dominion. The Association have engaged for it I. K. Felch, of Connecticut, who has the reputation of being the best poultry judge on the continent, and are making all other preparations accordingly.

FAREWELL.

Rev. Mr. Ward, Incumbent of the English Church of this place, gave his farewell address last Sunday evening to a crowded house, and took his departure on Tuesday for Millbank, 17 miles from Stratford, his new field of labor. Mr. Ward has been a faithful, zealous, persevering man, and for about nine years, labored with indomitable energy for the welfare of his church and congregation, building them up from weakness and disorganization to its present prosperous and well organized state.

Under his supervision, and chiefly owing to his enterprise and perseverance, the handsome and substantial brick church in this place was erected, and is fully paid for: also the neat and well kept surrounding premises are largely due to his taste and diligence in looking after them: then the Maxwell Church has been overhauled and re-painted and its surroundings improved, and now a new edifice is being erected at Berkeley, the cost of which has already been almost provided for. Seldom do we meet with so much practical business tact and Christian zeal in a minister, and it is not to be wondered that the regrets for his departure are strong and universal.

The STANDARD wishes him continued success.

Holland Centre.

STEALING.—The boys in our village are stealing from peoples gardens. Some of them will either get some pease out of a gun, or will have a chance to visit Owen Sound.

Miss Cassie Sargent is up from Toronto spending a few weeks with her mother Mrs. John Sargent.

Carson Price is going to build a dwelling house on the front of his orchard.

Maxwell.

From our own Correspondent.

Very hot weather.

Good for harvesting, though some complain that the grain is ripening too fast.

We regret to hear that Mr. Rich. Sanderson and Mr. Foster Heron are confined to the house by sickness.

Mr. Harry Guy accidentally sprained his leg while working last week and has not been able since to engage in work. Hope to soon see him around.

Our school house has received a thorough overhauling and now presents a far more attractive appearance.

Mr. Wm. Heron has been home from Toronto for some time.

Our neighborhood is improving, selfbinders becoming common now; Mr. Thos. Gamey and Mr. J. Inkster having purchased them.

Flesherton.

From our own correspondent.

The Gypsey's struck our village on Monday last; being fair day some bantering and little horse trading was indulged in.

The fair on Monday was unusually small for August, a few cattle changed hands at good prices.

Our townsman, J. Blackburn, is this week absent attending, as delegate from here, the Grand Lodge of Independent Order of Oddfellows which is in session this week in Peterboro.

Building operations continues brisk here. John Whitton, our enterprising builder, has commenced operations for another handsome brick dwelling on a magnificent site on Church St. this will be the fourth brick dwelling here in the Whitton family; they are good citizens.

A. M. Gibson, Esq., in the employ of M. Richardson & Co., has been off for some few days enjoying holidays.

The regular Quarterly Service of the Methodist Church was held here on Sunday last, there was a large congregation present. Rev. Mr. Shilton delivered a very impressive and instructive sermon.

In the absence of the Pastor. Rev. Mr. McLeod. of Priceville, occupied the pulpit in the Presbyterian church here on Sabbath afternoon. The speaker was so late in arriving that a number of the congregation had left for their homes before the service commenced.

Mr. Daniel Stewart, son of Alex. Stewart, a promising young man and who has been living in Owen Sound for some time, died after a brief illness there on Tuesday last. His remains were intered here on Thursday afternoon—a very large funeral was in attendance. Deceased was a member of the order of Foresters; a few of the brethern were present and performed their last rites at the grave. The bereaved family here have the sympathy of the entire community.

Our township fathers met for transaction of business in council chambers, Town Hall, on Monday last. A petition by W. K. Flesher, Esq., and signed by a number of rate payers praying that in case Mr. Flesher puts in a new roller plant in the Flesherton Flour Mills that said Mill be exempt from taxation for a term of ten years; this was asked because it is believed that said Mill has been paying a much higher rate of taxation for the past few years than she was worth on account of depreciation in value of Stone Mills: by vote in council petition was not granted.

IMPORTANT!

TO all users of Machine Oils, don't forget to call on E. S. MABEE, Sign of the Cross-Cut Saw, Markdale, and ask for the CASTOR E. OIL, it is unequalled by any.

"AURORA"

WATER WHITE OIL,

is equal to American for brillance of light.

Empire Oil Co.,

Refiners & Manufacturer's,

349-75 London and Toron t

MARKDALE CARRIAGE WORKS.

R. McNALLY:—Would hereby announce to the people of Markdale and the public generally that I have moved into mynew carriage shop opposite the Markdale House, where I will manufacture every article in the wagon and carriage line, and having long experience in the business, and by using first class material, I can guarantee satisfaction to every one who will favor me with their order.

Repairing, Painting and Trimming promptly attended to.

A call respectfully solicited,

R. McNALLY, Proprietor

Massey Agency,

Holland Centre.

TORONTO Light Binder wood frame 5 & 6 feet cut

MASSEY Harvester

TORONTO MOWER, one and two horse.

MASSEY MOWER.

SHARP'S RAKE.

A full stock of repairs kept constantly on hand for the above machines

REPAIRS STRICTLY CASH.

Also agent for Hall's patent reversible HayCarrier, Manufactured by Cochrin Bro's, St. Thomas, and Fox Pea Harvester, Owen Sound.

THOS. WILLISCROFT, Agent.

MARKDALE

SAsH and DOOR FACTORY.

Having erected and fitted up in every detail a Sash, Door and Plain Factory, containing all the latest and most approved machinery, everything being new, I am now prepared to turn out

Sash, Doors, Blinds, Mouldings, Hollow Battons,

FRAMES, LATH, FENCE PICKETS, &c.,

And everything needed in the building trade, in a manner second to none in Canada, and having engaged superior mechanics in every department, I would now respectfully solicit public patronage.

Every Effort Made to fill Orders Promptly

PINE LUMBER Dressed and Undressed

Direct from North Shore, all sizes, on hand. Plain and Fancy Turning done

Careful Attention to Orders from a Distance.

303 THOS. McNEA.

R. H. Benson

—OF THE—

BELFAST HOUSE

has opened out this week the following goods viz:

4 Setts 121 pieces complete, Dinner Sett (colored) $15. 5 Setts 98 pieces complete, Dinner Sett (colored) $12. 10 Chamber Setts, 10 pieces (colored) latest pattern only $3.75. 12 Tea Setts, 44 pieces (colored) only $3.50.

As those goods have been imported direct, and bought for cash. I am in a position to sell them cheaper than any House in the country, and as I am making a specialty in Crockery & Glassware, keeping the latest styles and patterns, you can always get suited.

FLOUR & FEED, GENERAL GROCERIES, WINES & LIQUORS, TOBACCO & CIGARS, which will be sold at right prices to suit the purchaser, call and see us and examine our goods and you will go away satisfied.

We will not be undersold by any one in the trade, and as we have had long exprience at the business, we know what we are doing.

Come and see our new Dinner and Tea Setts, something new in Markdale.

R. H. Benson,

MARKDALE.

SIGHT v. BLINDNESS.

N. STANLEY'S

CELEBRATED

English Spectacles

79 BAY STREET, TORONTO CANADA.

—AND—

18 JEWIN STREET, LONDON E. C. ENGLAND.

R. L. Stephen's,

CHEMIST & DRUGGIST, Markdale

Has the Agency for the sale of the above in MARKDALE. No Spectacles in the Market equal them in the EYE PRESERVING QUALITIES they possess, or the GREAT EASE and COMFORT they confer on the wearer.

Their use will in actuality so strengthen the Eyes that it does not become necessary to change them for many years. They are therefore the CHEAPEST.

THEY ARE THE BEST IN THE WORLD

THEY NEVER TIRE THE EYE

AND LAST MANY EYARS WITHOUT CHANGE.

The Sight tests by our New Test Card, same as used by the leading Oculists throughout the world. 357-409

BETTER THAN GOLD.—To those troubled with Kidney and Urinary Troubles such as a constant desire to urinate, shooting, scalding, pains, pain in the back, sediment, &c., &c., Dr. Chase's Liver Cure will be found more valuable than gold. It positively cures. See "Prophet" for testimonials.

STARTLING SLAUGHTER

The knife driven right into the bone.

McFarland is going to sell every yard of summer dress goods at and under cost.

15 cent Check Lustres for 10 cents.

35 " Ottoman Cord for 25 cents.

15 " Cashmerettes for 9 cents.

30 " Stripe Balermos for 22½ cents.

30 " Camlets and DeBieges for 22 cents.

20 " Canvas Clothes for 12½ cts.

37½ " All Wool Lace Stripe (west end cloth.) 25 cents.

NOTE. only a limited number of yds. of these goods are left.

65 cent Ladies' silk mitts for 25c.

27 Ends Colored and Black Satins and Silks under cost.

A variety of remnants of different materials under cost.

2000 doz. Ivory Buttons all shades from 3c, per doz. up.

3 Only handsome Embroidered Dresses $1.50.

Lace Gloves, Parasols, at actual cost.

A good sensible Parasol for 15c.

24 Men's Balbriggan Undershirts and Drawers 30c.

24 Men's Balbriggan Undershirts and Drawers 50c.

60 Youth's and Misses Straw Hats old price 40c. now 20c.

A good useful Table Linen only 20c.

Garter Elastic 2c. per yd.

16 doz. Woman Hose 10c. per pair.

60 pairs Womens Fancy Silk Stitched Hose former price 55c. on the counter now at 25c.

71 Men's Black and Colored Felt Hats old price ranged from $1.00 to $2.00 your choice of the lot for 50c.

5 Cases Men's Long Boots for harvesting at $1.50 per pair.

Heavy Direct Importations are now on the way from the European markets and room must be made for them. Come in and ask for goods as advertised and we will give you some eye openers.

☞ Every article in this column is in stock now. If you want them call on us early after seeing this, that we may not be under the painful necessity of telling you we are sold out.

W. J. McFARLAND,

Direct Importer.

MARKDALE.

CLIPPINGS.

OBITUARY.—Many of our readers
ll remember Mr. Jno. McBride, son
Mr. John McBride living a short stance from Chatsworth. Some-ne ago he graduated at Toronto iversity, taking the degree of B. A. ce that time he has taught in ferent High Schools. Two years o he commenced the study of dicine, and had he been spared other year he would have in all obability finished his course. His mpanions all speak of him being a rial and kind-hearted fellow; but sease and death come alike to all.
e died of typhoid fever in Bradford st Thursday, and his remains were terred in Chatsworth burying ound last Saturday morning.—[O.
Times.

Mr. Robt. Conn, 2nd con., Euphra-a, farmer, who had this year 22 res of fall wheat and other grain in oporation, was through with cutting d getting all his harvest in on Thurs-y, July 28th.—[Flesherton Advance.

A musty cellar is death to milk or eam, but it seems impossible to und it into the heads of some ople. More butter is ruined by d cellars and caves than from any her cause on the farm.—[Prairie rmer.

BE ON YOUR GUARD.

Don't allow a cold in the head to slowly d surely run into Catarrh, when you can e cured for 25c. by using Dr, Chase's Catarrh
re. A few applications cure insipient tarrh; 1 to 2 boxes cures ordinary catarrh to 5 boxes is guaranteed to cure chronic tarrh. Try it. Only 25c. and sure cure old by all druggists. 333 83

IN BRIEF, AND TO THE POINT.

Dyspepsia is dreadful, Disordered liver is isserable. Indigestion is a foe to good sture.

The human digestive apparatus is one of e most complicated and wonderful things existence. It is easy put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad okery, mental worry, late hours, irregular abits, and many other things which ought o to be, have made the American people a ation of dyspepsia.

But Green's August Flower has done a onderful work in reforming this sad businss and making the American people so ealthy that they can enjoy their meals
d be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health:
t Green's August Flower brings health d happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your uggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents.

BROKEN DOWN.—"After suffering with yspepsia, kidney disease, loss of appetite d pain in the head until discouraged, I ard of B. B. B., took two bottles and am appy to say I feel as well as ever." Mrs. harles E. Merry, New Albany, N. S.

Personals.

J. J. IRWIN, Veterinary Surgeon, and wife.
ve been down the country visiting.

Miss CHRISTENA WILSON is home from oronto for her holidays.

Miss, SPROULE has been visiting her son,
r. Sproule, M. P.

Miss EMMA WRIGHT has been enjoying her self at Toronto and Niagara Falls for a week.

Mr. J. R. CUNNINGHAM is home from oronto, We understand he was prostrated th a sun stroke, and came home to recuper-te.

Mr. R. M. Mason, Veterinary Surgeon of Mono Mills, has been visiting friends in Markdale and Walter's Falls.

Miss M. J. Irving of Galt is spending a w weeks with friends here.

Master Spence Wilson is home from Meaford for his holidays.

Master Dadie McDonald, of Toronto, is visiting at Mrs. McDougall's.

Miss Minnie McDonald, of Priceville, is spending a few days in Markdale.

Miss Lemon, of Thornbury, visited friends
Markdale this week.

Miss M. E. Benson is sojourning on the Manitoulin Island.

Miss Minnie Lucas has returned home
ter spending a few weeks in Toronto.

Miss Mary and Master Bert. Casson are pending their holidays in Markdale.

AN OLD FAVORITE.—An old favorite that has en popular with the people for nearly 30 ars is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawerry for all varieties of summer complaints of ildren and adults. It seldom or ever fails cure cholera morbus, diarrhœa and ysentery.

A church social and hugging bee re-ently held in a neighboring village me up in a row. A withered rema-nt of a man, aching for a smack at a rsect 16 or thereabouts, blew in 15c.
and was blindfolded. The manager ran his wife against him and the squeeze
e gave her made her back ache.
hen the bandage was removed and e discovered the swindle, he howled e a wild man, smote the manager on e jaw, and docked the treasurer till e finished.

Oddfellows Pic-nic.

The Markdale C. O. O. F. pic-nic was held, according to announcement, at Bell's Lake on Friday last, where about four hundred assembled to participate in the various amusements provided for the day. Holland Centre lodge of Oddfellows was well represented. A large dancing platform was at the disposal of those wishing to "trip the light fantastic toe," to the delicious music of the Markdale string band. The brass band was in attendance and made the woods echo with sweet and harmonious music which was certainly a credit to the band, and especially to Mr. Mason, the leader. The Steamer "Fairy Queen" was kept busy all day plying the waters from shore to shore, and every trip she made was crowded to the stern with anxious and pleasant looking faces, The most pleasing of all things on an occasion of this kind we think, is a sail over the matchless deep. By the by, there were some incidents of interest and amusement on the way to and from the grounds chief of which was the pedestrians walk home in the gray light of the next morn, and the "break down" of the medicine man's buggy with the edifying expression of our limb of the law "Great Scott, how unfortunate, with the M. D's query, how the d—l will we get home. With the exception of the above accidents everything passed off pleasantly. The committee are to be congratulated for performing their duties so ably, also the lodge for the success of their first annual pic-nic.

AN OPEN LETTER.

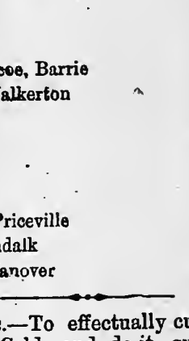
Messrs. T. Milburn & Co Nov. 25th, 1886.

I wish I had used B. B. B. sooner, which would have saved me years of suffering with erysipelas, from which I could get no relief until I tried B. B. B., which soon cleared away the itching, burning rash that had so long distressed me. Mrs. Edward Romkey, Eastern Passage, Halifax, N. S.

Fall Shows.

The following list is as complete as we can procure up to date:

Dominion and Industrial, Toronto,	Sep. 5-17
Western London	Sep. 19-24
Central, Guelph	Sep. 20-22
Stayner	Sep. 21-23
Orangeville	Sep. 21-23
East Grey, Flesherton	Sep. 22-23
Great Central, Hamilton	Sep. 26-30
Great Northern, Collingwood	Sep. 27-30
South Grey, Durham	Sep. 27-28
Tara	Oct. 3-4
Shelburne	Oct 4-5
Clarksburg	Oct 4-5
Central Simcoe, Barrie	Oct 4-7
Northern, Walkerton	Oct 4-7
Derby	Oct 5-6
St Vincent	Oct 6-7
Sydenham	Oct 7
Sullivan	Oct
Artemesia, Priceville	Oct 4
Proton, Dundalk	Oct 6-7
Bentinck, Hanover	Sep 22-23



TAMARAC.—To effectually cure a bad Cough or Cold, and do it quick, use Tamarac Exilir. It strikes at the root of the trouble and gives immediate relief.

Entrance Examination.

The following is a list of the successful competitors at the late Entrance Examination at Markdale.

Name.	School.	Teacher	Marks.
Annie Akins	3 Art.	Mr Sproule	484
Sarah Hogg	10 Art.	Miss Hopkins	478
Emily Hunt	3 Ben.	Mr Edwards	507
Minnie Lucas	Mark.	Mr Porter	406
Jennie Norton	12 Hol.	Mr French	397
L. Robertson	Mark.	Mr Porter	487
M. Thompson	Mark.	Mr Porter	453
B. Anderson	Mark.	Mr Porter	417
B. Coleman	Mark.	Mr Porter	467

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel for purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight alum or phosphate powders sold only in cans, ROYAL BAKING POWDER Co. 106 Wall St., N. Y.

HEAD QUARTERS

—FOR—

Books, Stationery, Fancy Goods, Toys, Wall Paper, &c.

Toronto St. next Door to the Mansion House, Markdale.

A. Dinsmore returns his sincere thanks for the very liberal support accorded him since commencing as above, and hopes by strict attention to business and moderate prices to merit a continuance of public appreciation and patronage. Those requiring

WALL PAPERS

would consult their own interest by examining his stock, consisting of over Three Thousand pieces at from 5 to 75c. per Roll. Sunday Schools requiring Liberary Books will find Hundreds to select from and at such FAVORABLE TERMS as are sure to satisfy.

☞ Note the fact.—That until I commenced business there was no such thing as a special discount allowed to Sunday Schools, or if you wanted Books could not get them unless by sending to Toronto or elsewhere, now your wants can be supplied at your Door and at lower prices than Toronto. I therefore with confidence appeal for public support. A full line of School Books, Stationery, &c., always on hand, also agent for the DOMESTIC PAPER PATTERNS. Agent also for The Harden Star Hand Grenade for Extinguishing Fires. ☞ NOTE THE ADDRESS,

A. Dinsmore.

Voters' List for 1887.

Municipality of the Township of Glenelg, County of Grey.

NOTICE is hereby given, that I have transmitted or delivered to the persons mentioned in the third and fourth sections of "The Voters List Act," the copies required by said section to be transmitted or delivered of the list made, pursuant to said act, of all persons appearing by the last revised Assessment Roll of the said Municipality to be entitled to vote in said Municipality at Elections for members of the Legislative Assembly, and the Municipal Elections; and said list was posted up at my office at Lot 24 Con. 4, Township of Glenelg, on the 20th day of July, 1887, and remains there for inspection.

Electors are called upon to examine the said list, and, if any ommissions or any other errors are found therein, to take immediate proceedings to have the said error corrected according to law.

JOHN S. BLACK,
Clerk of thesaid Municipality
Dated this 20th day of July A. D. 1887.
358-61

New General Provision Store

THE undersigned would hereby respectfully intimate to the inhabitants of Markdale and surrounding country that I've opened up a general Provision store where I intend to keep on hand a general supply of all kinds of provisions such as:—

FLOUR, OATMEAL, CORNMEAL INDIAN CORN, GRASS SEED, OATS, BRAN, SHORTS, CHOPP, SCREENINGS. also a quantity of SEED GRAIN, HAMS, BACON, LARD, &c., in fact everything people want in this line.

Shop one door west of Joe Lamb's Blacksmith shop.

Soliciting a share of public patronage I am respectfully yours,

Jas. Miller
MARKDALE.

STRAYED.

To the premises of Alex. McLellan, lot pt. 60 con, 1st. East T. & S. Road, Holland. A yearling steer, red. The owner can have it by proving property and paying expences.

ALEX. McLELLAN.
359-62 Berkeley, P. O.

FOR SALE.

Cheap for cash, one Milch Cow, span young Mares, one of which has a fine Colt from "Terror," one two-year old Colt (Clear Grit) and one year old Heifer.

559-61 WM. BROWN.

6 PER CENT.

Money loaned on Farm or Town Property at lowest rates of interest. Apply to
R. J. SPROULE,
Conveyancer & Postmaster, Flesherton.

EASY TO USE.

SOOTHING, CLEANSING, HEALING.

It Cures CATARRH, Cold in Head, HAY FEVER.

STOPS Droppings from Nasal passages into the throat and excessive expectoration caused by Catarrh. Sent pre-paid on receipt of price, 50c. and $1. Address FULFORD & CO., Brockville, Ont.

SAY!

Did you ever in your life hear the potato bug sing? Have you seen them when they got up on their hind legs and whoop and holler with joy, holding their feelers to their stomach rolling over and over almost tickled to death? So much so that every muscle in their bodies is vibrating to the fullest extent. In fact they go into convulsions with laughter at the haggard and woe-begone look of the man who buys impure Paris Green.

BUT STRAIGHT BUSINESS

buy your Paris Green,

—AT—

Stephen's Drug Store,

and your bugs will kick straight quick and die.

Use Stephen's Insect Powder, it is the Shoor! Shoorer!! Shoorerest!!! in the market.

HAVE ARRIVED

5 gross of the Celebrated Diamond Dyes.

1 gross of Burdock Blood Bitters.

½ gross of Richardson & Well's Butter Color.

Prescriptions Dispensed day and night,

—AT—

R. L. Stephen's.

R. S. Rae, Tailor.

REMOVED.

In returning thanks to my numerous customers for liberal patronage during the past 14 years in which I have done business in Markdale, and soliciting a continuance of the same, I would also intimate that I have removed to my premises on Mill Street, next door to Stephen's Drug Store, and opposite to the Post Office, where I shall be happy to meet all my customers.

Respectfully Yours,

R. S. RAE,
Markdale

TORONTO HOUSE.

I am offering this week Ready-Made Clothing, and

BOOTS & SHOES

—AT—

astonishingly low prices. Persons requiring a summer outfit would do well to see my stock.

Wm Brown.

NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that any person or persons found trespassing or fishing on the farms of the undersigned will be prosecuted according to law without further notice.

Signed:—

John B. Thibandeau,	Thos. Brady
Edward Brady,	James Brady,
William Brady,	Wm. McCutcheon
John Shears,	Geo. Richardson,
Wm. McNally,	George McNally,
James Elliott,	James Stinson,
Adam Hislop,	Robt Graham.
John Webber.	John Perkins.

OWEN SOUND

MARBLE WORKS

H. B. HARRISON

MANUFACTURER OF

MARBLE AND GRANITE

MONUMENTS & HEADSTONES

Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.

JUST RECEIVED

3 Carloads Finest Variegate Marble

☞ Largest stock in the Dominion select from. Personally selected at the quarries in Vermont. Will be sold at prices which defy competition.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

N. B.—Beware of Monuments and Head stones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered together, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide the imperfections, and called White Bronze.

H. B. HARRISON

ROBT. ASKIN,

UNDERTAKER,

MARKDALE.

FUNERAL FURNISHINGS

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—

FURNITURE

In Stock at bottom prices.

PICTURE FRAMING

Done on short notice.

ROBT. ASKIN.

WM. BREADNER.

Carpender and Builder

GEORGE ST., MARKDALE.

ALL kinds of building and house carpenter work done in the village or country. Call early before the rush comes. 339-52

CARD OF THANKS.

In thanking my customers for their liberal patronage in the past, I have much pleasure in being still able to supply them with the following celebrated machines, viz.

The Watson all-steel two-horse twine Binder.
The Watson Deering Binder.
The Watson Improved Lion Reaper.
The New Humming Mower.
The Humming-bird Mower.
The Watson Daisy Rake.
The Mann Champion Rake.
The Tolten Pea Harvester.
The Mann Broad-cast Seeder and Harrows Combined.
The Champion Combined Drill, Colter & Scott, Oshawa.
The best Plow's and Harrows in the market.
Root Cutters, Grain Crushers, Fanning mills. Land Rollers.
Agent for the Watersou's Co's Machinery and Steam Threshers.
Horse Powers, Wagons Buggies, Democrats, and every implement a farmer requires. Parties regiring anything in above lines will find it to their advantage to call at my new implement house opposite R. McNally's Carriage works, where Mr. R. Robertson will be pleased to wait on customers in my absence.

J.H. CARSON, Agent
148-61 Markdale.

CANADIAN PACIFIC R. R.

TIME TABLE.

—Markdale Station—

GOING SOUTH.	6 47 a. m.	3.52 p. m
GOING NORTH.	12 02 p. m.	9.10 p. m

THE KEY TO HEALTH.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

Unlocks all the clogged avenues of the Bowels, Kidneys and Liver, carrying off gradually without weakening the system, all the impurities and foul humors of the secretions; at the same time Correcting Acidity of the Stomach, curing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Headaches, Dizziness, Heartburn, Constipation, Dryness of the Skin, Dropsy, Dimness of Vision, Jaundice, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Scrofula, Fluttering of the Heart, Nervousness and General Debility; all these and many other similar Complaints yield to the happy influence of BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

Sample Bottles 10c; Regular size $1.

For sale by all dealers.

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, Toronto.

THE BLACK SHADOW.

We were creeping well up to Cape Hatteras when the storm broke. The steamer had made all secure, and there was not even a shade of anxiety on the faces of the officers as they passed to and fro. The storm came with a howl of fury. Out of a clear afternoon sky the hurricane leaped like a hungry wild beast, and in a quarter of an hour the ocean was frothing and foaming and rushing upon itself like a mighty animal driven mad by awful torture. Half an hour after the first leap of the storm women had pale faces and set lips, and children were wailing. An hour later men trembled and looked hollow-eyed.

Fury let loose – the shrieks and screams of 10,000 devils—the bellowing of legions of fierce bulls! It was a grand, big ship, but she was a chip in that huge cauldron of froth, no more than a grain of sand in that roaring, screaming hurricane. She groaned and lamented at every surge; a thousand prisoners seemed beating at her hatches to escape as she lifted wearily over the great seas. Around her iron spars, through her wire rigging, over her and around her screamed the gale, and every breath of it which struck iron or wood sent out a hundred other shrieks.

In the long, wide cabin were gathered 150 people. They were awed—silenced—humbled. The children no longer wailed aloud. The women gasped and choked as families gathered together. Men may fear, but they do not weep. They may feel the terror, but they are dumb.

In the broad light of a June day—with the coast a thin line on the water—with a great world about us—with heaven's sun shining as brightly as man ever saw it shine—men, women and children felt the shadow of death creeping out from behind the sun—advancing with the fury—bubbling up from the depths of the treacherous sea. They felt it, and they crew nearer together. They felt it, and they prayed to God to spare them.

By and by there was a sudden shock. The great vessel lurched heavily, righted herself slowly, and next instant men were shouting in alarm. The shaft had broken. She was helpless.

You have read of the troughs of the sea—the great hollows between the waves. They are the graves of ships, dug by the hands of the howling gale—covered up by the hands of the calm. These graves are never marked. The waters of the sea cannot be written on. There are neither tombstones nor eulogies. In a day the grave has vanished—gone none but the waters can tell where.

And now the steamer's head fell off and we were presently rolling broadside to the hurricane. She was in the trough of the sea, and her grave had been dug. While some of the crew worked to get a drag over the quarter, others went to the boats. They had no heart. Terror was shriveling their courage as paper shrivels in the fire. Fury laughed derisively at the idea. Puny man fighting a hurricane blowing a hundred miles an hour! Mortal man striving to conquer an enraged ocean! No boat could live in the turmoil. No make-shift could bring that groaning, complaining steamer's head back to the wind. When they realized this all hope died out of their hearts. Men crowded together to die in company—some went away te be alone when the last moment came.

There were life-preservers. A few glanced at them and then at the sea. Mockery! A hunter with but a single shot thinking to save his life against the denizens of an Indian jungle! To be smothered in the angry foam—to be buried under tons of rushing water—to be flung about as a toy—strangled, drowned, bruised—swept out to sea a bloated corpse, to become food for sharks!

And now the end was nigh. The merciless waves were pounding at the steamer, breaking, bruising, sweeping away. Did men curse and women shriek? Did men pray and women weep? Did children moan in their awful fright? No! Not a voice was raised—not a murmur heard. Death was coming. The shadow of the terrible hand rested over the boat. There were no cowards, or all were cowards. At the last moment faces grew paler, lips were more tightly drawn, eyes had such a hunted, tortured expression that you felt to pity. Families drew apart from each other, hands were clasped, and there was only a moment to wait. As the steamer reached the crest of a wave she staggered, shook herself, and then fell over on her side. At the last instant, just as she turned, there was one awful chorus of shrieks and prayers and shouts for mercy. Even the howls of the hurricane could not drown that sound, but it was caught up and shattered and scattered, and next moment half a dozen strong men, battling with the desperation of despair for two or three minutes more of life, were the only remnants of the awful wrath. That black shadow had enveloped all the rest.

The Stars.

No more beautiful picture can be seen than the starlit sky presents on a cloudless night when there is no moon to dim the lustre of the stars. The heavens seem to be alive with these glittering points, sparkling like jewels. A few among them are large and brilliant, a greater number are of medium size; the rest, and by far the larger portion, are so small as to be barely visible.

Every star that twinkles in the sky is a sun, a great globe of fire, like our sun, but so far away that it looks like a mere golden point. The largest of the shining throng is Sirius, the bright star that comes up in the southeast on winter nights. It is supposed to be two hundred times as large as our sun, but is so distant that it takes its light sixteen years to reach the earth.

If Sirius were suddenly destroyed it would be seen shining in the sky for sixteen years to come. Many stars are smaller than the sun, while our great sun himself, seen from the nearest star, is only a star of medium size.

It seems almost impossible to count the stars, but this has been done over and over again. The total number visible to the naked eye of an observer endowed with average visual power is less than six thousand.

So accurately has the estimate been made that it is asserted that twenty-four hundred and seventy eight stars are visible in the northern hemisphere and thirty-three hundred and seven in the southern hemisphere. A good opera-glass will bring out twenty thousand. A small telescope will show one hundred and fifty thousand. The most powerful telescopes will reveal more than one hundred millions.

Origin of the Gorge of the Mississippi.

The Falls of Niagara are familiar to all and came to exist through causes natural and easy of explanation, inasmuch as the whole secret lies in the character of the formations over which the river flows, viz., a crust made up of from sixty to one hundred feet of comparatively hard limestone lying in a nearly horizontal position, beneath which is a deep deposit of shales and sandstones. Whenever the river in wearing its channel back reached the point where this arrangement of rocks began, the hard limestone would naturally resist the erosive action of the waters, while the underlying shales and sandstones, offering less resistance, would be rapidly cut away, until a vertical fall such as is now seen would be the result, with a constant recession going on, leaving below the broad canon, walled on either hand by the limestone crowning them.

These few reflections as to the falls and gorge of Niagara, fully demonstrated by forces now in active operation, we shall apply to the Mississippi. Here also a mighty water-way has been cut out by erosion, a fact which is universally conceded, but no definite explanation of the process has heretofore, so far as we have been able to learn, been advanced. It remained for a geology-reading inventor by the name of Robert Bates to suggest a theory which, illuminated with what little investigation we have been able to give it promises to offer a solution of the question, or to assist in its solution. The theory briefly is, that the erosion was accomplished by means of a mighty cataract which began far down the river near its original mouth, and by gradual retrocession dug out the valley-like gorge which is so marked a feature in the upper part of its course, and left the high bluff walls on either hand, at the same time depositing heavy beds of sand at the bottom of the canon, the product of the erosion above, and that St. Anthony Falls are the ever decreasing and receding remnants of the once most stupendous cataract the world ever saw, having a perpendicular descent of perhaps six hundred feet.

How to see the Mountains on the Moon.

Of course, the first thing the observer will wish to see will be the mountains of the moon, for everybody has heard of them, and the most sluggish imagination is stirred by the thought that one can look off into the sky and behold "the eternal hills" of another planet as solid and substantial all our own. But the chances are that, if left to their own guidance, ninety-nine persons out of a hundred would choose exactly the wrong time to see these mountains. At any rate, this is my experience with people who have come to look at the moon through my telescope. Unless warned beforehand, they invariably wait until full moon when the flood of sunshine poured perpendicularly upon the face of our satellite conceals its rugged features as effectually as if a veil had been drawn over them. Begin your observations with the appearance of the narrowest crescent of the new moon, and follow it as it gradually fills, and then you will see how beautifully the advancing line of lunar sunrise reveals the mountains over whose slopes and peaks it is climbing, by its ragged and sinuous outline. The observer must keep in mind the fact that he is looking straight down upon the tops of the lunar mountains. It is like a view from a balloon, only at a vastly greater height than any balloon has ever attained. Even with a powerful telescope the observer sees the moon at an apparent distance of several hundred miles, while with a field-glass magnifying six diameters, the moon appears as if forty thousand miles off. The apparent distance with Galileo's telescope was eight thousand miles. Recollect how when seen from a great height the rugosities of the earth's surface flatten out and disappear and then try to imagine how the highest mountains on the earth would look if you were suspended forty thousand miles above them, and you will, perhaps, rather wonder at the fact that the moon's mountains can be seen at all.

An End to English Coal in the Black Sea.

The new Russian Minister of Finance, Vishnigradsky, seems to be as ultra-protectionist as his predecessor, Bringe. Under his auspices a revision of the iron and coal duties has been taken in hand, of which one of the earliest results will be the complete suppression of the English coal trade with the Russian ports of the Black Sea. Twice during the last few years the tariff has been revised to check the influx of British coal; the measure now proposed, and sanctioned so far as the ministers are concerned, will extinguish the trade altogether. In place of coal from this country, south Russia will draw its supplies for the future from two sources—the Denetz region and the Transcaucasian deposits at Tkvibuli. The latter lie between Poti and Tiflis and have just been joined to the Transcaucasian Railway by a short but very costly branch line that has taken several years to construct. The coal of the Tkvibuli district is of excellent quality, lies close to the surface in great abundance, and is easily worked. Hitherto the only coal competing with the English at Odessa and other ports has been that from the Denetz region, which, having to be conveyed many hundred miles by railway to the coast, has never been able to successfully compete with the English article, in spite of a duty of five shillings a ton in its favor. The Transcaucasian supply, however lies close to the coast, and it is estimated that the carriage from the mines to Odessa will be sufficiently low to enable it to successfully compete with English coal, even with the existing duty. However, to settle the question of foreign competition once and for all time, the Russian Government means to crush out the English fuel, and the rivalry will then lie between the coal from the Denetz and the coal from Transcaucasia.

A Rare Treat.

Not long there lived in the valley of Glenfruin, about three miles from Helensburgh, an old lady who was celebrated for having a famous breed of turkeys. On one occasion she sold one of these to a gentleman called Brown. When cooked and served up at table it was found to be so tough as to be quite uneatable. Meeting the old woman a short time afterwards, Mr. Brown said to her: "What did ye mean, Jean, by selling yon turkey to me?" "What was wrang wi't?" "It wasn't good at all," replied the gentleman. "No guid?" quoth Jean. "It was bound to be guid. It won the first prize for eleven years at 'Eeelensburgh Cattle Show."

Bull Fighting in Madrid.

The amphitheater is an immense place, round like the Roman Colosseum, and the ring is surrounded by "terraced granite," and crowded with galleries. Six bulls were doomed to die for our entertainment, but I only out-stayed the taking off of three of them. It was the last grand bull-fight of the season, and the audience was a brilliant one. The young King and Queen looked down from their box of state; old Isabella was there with her daughters; and adjacent boxes were occupied by lords and ladies of high degree.

The first bull was very meek. His sole desire seemed to be let alone. The picadores, or mounted spearsmen, pricked him with their lances and he looked at them with an injured air, as if he would fain have said: "How can you? I am a well-intentioned bull, and I deserve nothing of this sort." One was divided between disgust at his want of spirit and indignation that a creature so harmless and kindly should be foredoomed to death. He waked up slightly when the banderilleros came in with their darts and their gay cloaks; but all through one felt that he was being butchered to make a Spanish holiday without at all taking his own part, and even the matador, whose office it was to give him his death wound, performed his task a little scornfully, as if it were hardly worth the trouble.

The second bull was a different fellow altogether. As a young fellow on my left expressed it, he was "all there." He had a sullen, determined, desperate nature. He gored two horses to death, literally in an instant, just uplifting them and running them through with his mighty horns. He made sudden plunges at the banderilleros, and he pushed the great matador himself to the end of his resources; but at last he lay there dead, and the team of mules dragged him out of the arena. He was as black as an undertaker's horse; and he had been solemn and indignant and scornfully defiant all the way through.

The third bull was a little red one, as fiery and aggressive a creature as can possibly be imagined. He did not chance to hurt the horses, but he made swift plunges at the cloaked banderilleros, which it took all their skill to escape, and once he even leaped the barrier, and caused a precious consternation among the audience for a moment. This brilliant creature made hot work for the banderilleros, and held even the matador for a long time at bay, but at last he gamely died; the black mules dragging him away as they had done his brothers before him.

By this time I thought I knew enough about bull-fights, and I left the King and Queen and their court to behold the other three combats without me, and went away to walk on the prado and reflect. My sympathies were all with the bulls. They were the only creatures who had no least show of fair play. They alone were doomed with absolute certainty from the start. Even the horses might escape; and at worst their torture was but for a moment. The men were only in just enough danger to make the thing exciting, and there were ninety-nine chances out of a hundred that they would escape scathless; but the bull, let him bear himself never so bravely, was to be made an end of.

The Discoverer of the Congo.

Eight years before Columbus discovered America an old Portuguese sailor named Diego Cam went cruising down the coast of West Africa until he came to a great river on whose south bank he set up a big white stone and carved an inscription upon it celebrating his discovery. It was the mighty Congo, and for many years the famous Pedra Padrao stood on the shore bearing silent witness to the old sailor's acheivement. Years later when all eyes were turned to the new world, the Congo was almost forgotten and when it next attracted notice the Pedra Padrao had disappeared. The spot where it stood has for centuries been known as Padrao Point.

Three or four months ago Baron von Schwerin, the Swedish traveller, heard from some natives of a large fetich stone hidden in the tall jungle grass at some distance from the beach. It was only after long palavers with the chiefs that he obtained permission to visit the revered object. He found, to his delight, the veritable Pedra Padrao, its well known inscription only partially effaced This famous monument of a great discovery will doubtless be treasured hereafter as one of the most interesting relics of the early navigators.

By Rail to Europe.

The Russian project of building a railroad through Siberia to the shores of the Pacific may revive interest in Mr. Helper's "backbone" railway among the mountain chains on the American coast of the same ocean. Should these prospective lines meet at Behring Strait the time made by Phineas Fogg in his famous trip around the world may be shortened a good deal, The fervid imaginaton which has foretold even a "bridge" across the strait to connect these projected railways is much in advance of the age, but some sort of connecting journey could easily be imagined which, at the right season, might not have greater terrors than the trip across the British-Channel. Thus the dream of many would-be traveller who longs to see Paris or Rome without the risk of a week's seasickness could be realized. Still, so far as comfort goes a railroad journey through Alaska and Siberia would hardly be as attractive to most people as that by ocean steamer, and taking also the chances of detention a traveler intent only on going at top speed might often have cause to lament not taking Phineas Fogg's ocean routes instead after all.

What Jimmy Wanted to Know.

"If there is anything about the lesson you do not understand," said a Sunday-school teacher who had been explaining the crossing of the Red Sea, "just name it and I will endeavor to make the matter clear."

"Jimmy Williams wants to ask a question," said Tobe Green.

"Very good. What is it that you wish to know, Jimmy?" questioned the teacher suavely.

"Where was Moses when the light went out?" sang out Jimmy in a squeaky voice.

Settled.

Little Johnny, to visitor: "I will tell you a secret if you won't tell. Sister Emily is engaged to Mr. Whyte. I heard mamma and Sis talking about it. The secret is that he doesn't know it himself yet."

Unintentionally Saucy.

Even the most disagreeable of minor incidents at sea have their use in promoting rapid acquaintance and good-fellowship. He is a truly polite and good-natured man who finds no "oredit in being jolly" under all nautical circumstances, and amply deserves th heart liking of his fellow-passengers. Says a passenger on board a ship just leaving Aden:

Outside the harbor there was a pretty stiff breeze and some swell. As the ship drew out to sea, she began to roll a little.

Things promised to be lively, if the motion increased, bottles looked insecure on their bases, and plates began to slide.

Suddenly the ship gave a heavy roll, and I seized my plate and glass, one in each hand just in time to save them. All along the table crockery and glass gave way, emptying their contents into their owners' laps.

The lady on my left, who had been in the act of pouring sauce out of a bottle, feeling herself going back, abandoned her trencher, threw out her arms to save herself, and clutched at my shirt front with the hand that held the Worcestershire sauce bottle neck down.

I couldn't expostulate, and I couldn't let go my own dinner to remove the hand, so for the space of three rolls, that bottle was held hysterically against my bosom, until the last drop had run out.

There was a collecting of senses, and gathering together of fragments that remained. My neighbor recovered herself, and removed the now empty bottle, apologizing profusely, in the utmost confusion, while I protested that it was of no consequence whatever, quite unavoidable, an every day occurrence; it had often happened to me before, and I always liked it. All this with the horrible liquid trickling down my bosom.

"Well, I didn't think much of their essays," commented a much-bustled young lady as she left a high school commencement, "but their dresses were quite as pretty as those seen on the stage last year."

A Pleasure Shared by Women Only.

Malherbe, the gifted French author, declared that of all things that man possesses, women alone take pleasure in being possessed. This seems generally true of the sweeter sex. Like the the ivy plant, she longs for an object to cling to and love—to look to for protection. This being her prerogative, ought she not to be told that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the physical salvation of her sex? It banishes those distressing maladies that make her life a burden, curing all painful irregularities, uterine disorders, inflammation, and ulceration, prolapsus and kindred weaknesses. As a nervine, it cures nervous exhaustion, prostration, debility, relieves mental anxiety and hypochondria, and promotes refreshing sleep.

Lace pins of translucent enamel flower with centres of brilliants, are favorites with the fair ones.

When everything else fails, Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy cures.

Silver flasks are in great demand. Very small ones, capable of holding a gill, are carried by ladies.

"What Drug Will Scour These English Hence?"

Wicked Macbeth, who murdered good King Duncan, asked this question in his despair. Thousands of victims of disease are daily asking "What will scour the impurities from my blood and bring me health?" Dr Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will do it. When the purple life-tide is sluggish, causing drowsiness, headache and loss of appetite, use this wonderful vitalizer, which never fails. It forces the liver into perfect action, drives out superfluous bile, brings the glow of health to the cheek and the natural sparkle to the eye. All druggists.

In lace pins the latest design is in the form of a twisted rope, the ends of which are tied with gold wires. Another represents a boom, with teetle-block and rope.

Whenever your Stomach or Bowels get out of order, causing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, or Indigestion and their attendant evils, take at once a dose of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Best family medicine. All Druggists, 50 cents.

Said the poet as he offered his manuscript to the editor: "This is timely for the occasion and I think will fit." "Yes," said the editor as he eyed its dismal length, "surfeit."

Free! Free!! Free!!!

A Book of Instruction and Price List o Dyeing and Cleaning to be had gratis by calling at any of our offices, or by post by sending your address to R. Parker & Co., Dyers and Cleaners, 759 to 763 Yonge St., Toronto. Branch Offices: 4 John St. N., Hamilton; 100 Colborne St., Brantford.

PUDDING SAUCE.—Beat together four teaspoonfuls of sugar and two ounces of butter; stir in a teacup of boiling water; flavor to taste.

A ton of Spooner's Copperine, the anti-friction box metal for journals, shafts, &c., was shipped the other day to British Columbia, together with a car-load of machinery from Peterboro.

Sponges are very abundant in the Australasian seas; especially is this the case with the horny or highest form of sponges.

M. V. LUBON'S

CURE FOR DRUNKENNESS.

Trial bottles sent to any address by express, secure from observation, on receipt of $1.00. Address all orders to M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. East, Toronto, Canada.

When a Chinaman desires a visitor to dine with him, he does not ask him to do so; but, when he does not wish him to stay, he says, "Oh, please stay and dine with me!" The visitor will then know he is not wanted.

YOUNG MEN suffering from the effects o early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted, also MIDDLE-AGED and OLD MEN who are broken-down from the effects o abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and READ M. V. Lubon's Treatise on Diseases of Men, The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address M. V. Lubon, 47 Wellington St. E. Toronto, Ont.

Begging is prohibited in Berlin. Every stranger, upon arriving in the city, must have his name recorded at a police-station, and no one is allowed to take up his residence without a definite occupation and satisfactory evidence of the ability to follow it.

People who are subject to bad breath, foul coated tongue, or any disorder of the Stomach, can at once be relieved by using Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, the old and tried remedy. Ask your Druggist.

Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness and Hay Fever.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research has proved this to be a fact, and the discovery of a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrhal deafness and hay fever are cured in from one to three simple applications made at home. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of stamp by A. H. Dixon & Son, 305 King Street West Toronto Canada.

It has been computed that the damage done to the vineyards of France by the phylloxera amounts to £800,000,000 sterling.

WANTED—5,000 AGENTS—Male and Female. Large profits. C. W. DENNIS, Toronto.

PATENTS For Sale—Illustrative catalogue free. R. Chamberlin, Toronto.

NO MORE PIMPLE—USE FAIRY FACE POWDER, best in the world, 25c. a b.x. GUIMON, 29 Versailles St., Montreal.

GOOD LIVE AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY County in Canada. Address, FERRIS & CO., 87 Church St., Toronto.

CONVERTIBLE WIRE BASKET, BEST SELLING novelty in Canada. Great reduction to agents. Sample by mail thirty cents. CLEMENT & Co., Toronto.

AGENTS AND CANVASSERS wanted for Male or Female, whole or spare time, on salary or commission. Industrial Union of B.N.A., 45 Arcade, Toronto.

DR. WM. ARMSTRONG, Dermatologist. Specialty, Skin diseases, Scrofula and all diseases of the blood. All cancers cured that are curable, without the use of the knife. Office hours, 9 to 12 a.m. and from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m., Sabbaths excepted. 28 Dundas Street, Toronto.

SPOONER'S COPPERINE 'Babbitt—Anti-fibrous Anti-friction Box-metal for journal bearings in machinery. Guaranteed copper mixed. Supplies every requirement. Ask your hardware dealer for it. ALONZO SPOONER. Patentee and Manufacturer. Port Hope.

PATENTS PROCURED in Canada, the United States all foreign countries. Engineers, Patent Attorneys, and experts in Patent Causes. Established 1867. Donald C. Ridout & Co., Toronto.

THE BOILER INSPECTION and Insurance Company of Canada. Consulting Engineers and Solicitors of Patents. TORONTO. G. C. ROBB, Chief Engineer. A. FRASER, Sec'y-Treas.

BEAVER LINE OF STEAMSHIPS, Sailing weekly between Montreal and Liverpool. RATES OF PASSAGE:—Saloon, Montreal to Liverpool $40, $50, and $60; Return Tickets, $80, $90, and $100—according to steamer and accommodation. Intermediate and Steerage at lowest rates. For further particulars and to secure Berths, apply to H. E. MURRAY, General Manager, 1 Custom House Square, Montreal, or to the Local Agents in the different Towns and Cities.

ALBERT COLLEGE, BELLEVILLE, ONT. Chartered 1857. Over 4,000 Students since.

Diplomas awarded in Collegiate Course, Commercial Science, Penmanship, Music, Fine Arts and Elocution. Large classes prepared yearly for matriculation in Arts, Law, Medicine and Theology.

In '86, out of 6 candidates for Second-Class Teachers' Certificates 4 were successful. Results equally good in other departments. Full term begins Tuesday, Sep. 6, '87. Send for circular. Address REV. W. P. DYER, M.A., Principal.

COMPOUND OXYGEN—THE CONSERVATOR of health, the enemy of disease; heals the Lungs, Re-builds the Broken Down Constitution of young and old. Home treatment, sufficient for two months. Inhaler and all complete, sent by express for $12. Moved my office from 73 King West to 41 King East. MRS C. STIDMAN FIEROE. Four years established in Toronto. 32 Office Treatments for $1. Send for circular.

M'CLASKEY SEPARATORS. Manufactured by David Darvill & Co., under supervision of patentee. Guaranteed perfect. Will be sold at Sacrifice Prices for Cash. Immediate delivery. WM. A. GUNN, Box 143 London.

ILLUSTRATED CIRCULARS free. Something new and interesting. Send at once if you want the best. CANADIAN BUSINESS UNIVERSITY & SHORTHAND INSTITUTE, Public Library Building, Toronto. THOMAS BENGOUGH, President; CHAS. B. BROOKS, Secretary and Manager.

WESLEYAN LADIES' COLLEGE HAMILTON, CANADA. The First of the Ladies' Colleges—Has graduated over 260 ladies in the full course. Has educated over 2,000. Full faculties in Literature, Languages, Music and Art. The largest College building in the Province. Will open on Sep. 7th, 1887. Address the Principal, A. BURNS, D. D., LL. D.

Awnings! Decorated Window Shades, &c. Wholesale and Retail, at the CANADA GOLD MEDAL TENT MANUFACTORY, 70 King St. West, Toronto. NATIONAL MANUFACTURING CO.

H. Williams, FELT AND SLATE Roofer. Manufacturer and dealer in Tarred Felt, Roofing Pitch, Building Papers, Carpet and Deafening Felt, READY ROOFING, Etc. 4 Adelaide St. E., TORONTO.

Water PURE LIVING STREAM AUGERS, bore 20 feet per hour. Also Rock Drills—Hand, Horse, or Steam Power. Send for Catalogue. Laidlaw Manufacturing Co., HAMILTON, ONT.

ASSESSMENT SYSTEM.

The Mutual Reserve Fund LIFE ASSOCIATION

The largest and most prosperous open Assessment Association in the world—desires active representatives in every section of Canada; liberal inducements. It has full Government Deposit, and under the supervision of Insurance Department at Ottawa. Correspondence solicited. Address, J. D. WELLS, General Manager, 65 King Street East, Toronto.

THE NATIONAL ELECTRO & STEREOTYPE CO. 23 ADELAIDE ST. E., TORONTO. All classes of fine work. Mfrs. of Printers' Leads, Slugs and Metal Furniture. Send for prices.

Dairy Salt, FOR BUTTER, ETC. NEW Importations.—Higgins' Eureka, Wastington and Ashton Brands, in large or small sacks. Also Rice's Canadian Salt. Write for prices. JAMES PARK & SON. Wholesale Produce Merchants Toronto.

CONSUMPTION. I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer. Give express and P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto

tarrhal Deafness
Hay Fever.
generally aware that these that they are due to the in the lining membrane of ses Microscopic research
o be a fact, and the result is been formulated whereby and hay fever and kindred le applications made at home, ng this new treatment is sent by A. H. Dixon & Son, to Canada.
computed that the neyards of France by ounts to £800,000,000
A. P. 267.
0 AGENTS—Male and its. C. W. DENNIS, Toronto.
Sale—Illustrative descriptive rue free. R. Chamberlin,
PLE—USE FAIRY FACE
the world, 25c. a box.
MON, 29 Versailles St., Montreal.
AGENTS WANTED IN
nada. Address,
CO., 87 Church St., Toronto.
WIRE BASKET, BEST
nada. Great reduction to rty cents.
CLEMENT & Co.,
S AND CANVASSERS wanted.
r spare time, on salary or ion of B.N.A., 45 Arcade, RONG, Dermatologist
in diseases, Scrofula and all All cancers cured that are se of the knife. Office hours, m 1:30 to 4:30 p.m., Sabbaths
Street, Toronto.
COPPERINE 'Babbitt—No
journal bearings in machinery mixed. Supplies every rdware dealer for it. ALONZO, s and Manufacturer, Port Hope OCURED in Canada, the U.S. oreign countries. Engineers, experts in Patent Causes.
d C. Ridout & Co., Toronto INSPECTION and ompany of Canada,
neers and Solicitors of Patents,
ORONTO.
gineer. A. FRASER, Sec'y-Treas OF STEAMSHIPS,
between Montreal and Liverpool
:—Saloon, Montreal to Liverpool Return Tickets, $80, $90, and mer and accommodation.
ge at lowest rates. For further secure Berths, apply to ral Manager, 1 Custom House r to the Local Agents in the ties.
LEGE, BELLEVILLE, ONT.
57. Over 4,000 Students enrolled d in Collegiate Course, Commer-anship, Music, Fine Arts and es prepared yearly for matricula-edicine and Theology.
of 6 candidates for Second-Class es 4 were successful. Record
r departments. Full term begins
Send for circular. Address
. W. P. DYER, M.A., Principal.
XYGEN—THE CONSERVATOR
e enemy of disease; heals the e Broken Down Constitution ne treatment, sufficient for two l all complete, sent by express for ce from 73 King West to 41 King
JDMAN FIEROE. Four years to. 32 Office Treatments for $13.
SEPARATORS. Manufactured by
, under supervision of patentee.
Will be sold at Sacrifice Price ce delivery.
M. A. GUNN, Box 143 London.
CIRCULARS free. Something new and interesting. Send at e best. CANADIAN BUSINESS
ORTHAND INSTITUTE, Public
oronto. THOMAS BENGOUGH, Presi-
CKS, Secretary and Manager.
LADIES' COLLEGE,
LTON, CANADA.
Ladies' Colleges—Has gradun the full course. Has educated ulties in Literature, Languages, largest College building in the on Sep. 7th, 1887. Address the
S. D. D., LL. D. gs! Decorated Window Shades, &c.
Wholesale and Retail, at the CEL-
ENT MANUFACTORY, 70 King St.
TIONAL MANUFACTURING CO FELT AND SLATE Roofer.
turer and dealer in fing Pitch, Building Pal Deafening Felt, READY
4 Adelaide St. E., TORONTO.
PURE LIVING STREAM.
r AIGERS, born 20 feet
ck Drills—Hand, Horse, or or Catalogue.
Manufacturing Co.,
HAMILTON, ONT.
ENT SYSTEM.
l Reserve Fund
SOCIATION
prosperous open Assessment ld—desires active representa-
Canada; liberal inducements.
Deposit, and under the superpartment at Ottawa.
ited. Address,
WELLS,
General Manager,
g Street East, Toronto.
al
RO & STEREOTYPE
ST. E., TORONTO.
ork. Mfrs. of Printers' Leads ture. Send for prices.
y Salt,
TTER, ETC.
-Higgins' Eureka, Washing-ands, in large or small sacks.
t. Write for prices.
RK & SON.
oduce Merchants Toronto.
MPTION.
for the above disease; by its use worst kind and of long standing l, so strong is my faith in its
TWO BOTTLES FREE, together
ATISE on this disease to any
P. O. address.
A. SLOCUM,
Yonge St., Toronto

HOUSEHOLD.

The Development of Boys.

seems to me that the key to the wise opment of boys is their confidence; that and hold it, and you hold your boy.
boy once feel that he can come to you any trouble, great or small, and you ave him from committing follies which ll regret forever. When a mother says r boy, "I want to know your worst your best," and is discreet in her coun-she will not only protect him but hen him. A great deal of mischief is by making mountains out of molehills.
boy is so unfortunate as to be without her, let him seek the counsel of some and motherly woman. If a boy has a and selfish mother, let him respect all she has suffered and shelter her his love.

reat many of the trials with boys arise improper diet. The next reform ld be table reform. Food is a moral . Hot spices and over-rich food are nts, and growing boys and girls are corrected for some display of temper is directly traceable to the table.
growing body requires an immense nt of fuel; it should be varied, simple nutritious. Don't lecture your boy be is fretful. Don't exasperate him;
m, and hold him by your love and pa-
. Make his interests your interests, are your troubles with him. Nothing boys more good than a sense of respon-y; they like to be trusted, and that is ay to make them worthy of trust.

Our Boys.

e tired mother, when nightfall comes,
thelp drawing a long sigh at the sight r boys' torn jacket and trousers; and ching head may whirl as with gleeful they come trooping into the room in -and-tumble fashion. But with what g tenderness does she not only endure e noise, but sympathize in the sport, if e a true mother! Somewhat such feel-as these, which are put into verse, she in her heart:

"Boys will be boys'—but not for long.
Ah, could we hear about us this thought—how very soon our boys
Will learn to do without us.

How soon but tall and deep-voiced men
Will bravely call us 'Mother';
we be stretching empty hands
From this world to the other!

More gently we should chide the noise,
And when night quells the racket,
tch in but living thoughts and prayers
While mending pants and jacket."

A Word for Romping Girls.

st women have a dread of them. Mothould rather their little daughters were d anything else than romps. They say em: "Be very quiet now, my dears.
t run or jump, and be little ladies."
if a healthy child could be still; as if uld take time to walk or step over what in its way; as if it could fold its hands lap when its little heart is brimful of
It is absurd and wrong, because it is tural.

ildren, girls as well as boys, need exer-indeed they must have it to be kept in lthy condition. They need to expand r chests, strengthen their muscles, tone r nerves, develop themselves generally.
this exercise must be out-of-doors too.
is not enough to have calisthenics in nursery or parlor; they need to be out e sunshine, out in the wind, out in grass, out in the woods, out-of-doors ywhere, if it be no bigger than the city ppose they do tan their pretty faces—be brown as a berry, and have the quick and strong, than white as a lily, complain of cold feet and headache.

ppose they do tear their clothes, suppose do wear out their shoes, it does not try other's patience half so much to mend it does to watch night after night a rious, sick child; and it does not drain ther's pocket half as quick to buy shoes does to pay doctors' bills.

Cooking Recipes.

ED POTATOES.—Put cold potatoes into hot butter, add salt and pepper fried enough, add a little cream, then
e.

T CAKE.—Two cups of sugar, two cups ur, one cup of cornstarch, one cup of ter, whites of five eggs, one teaspoon of m tartar and one-fourth of a teaspoon of

OAN STARCH CUSTARDS.—Put a pint of in a frying pan, let it come to the boil-point, then add a pinch of salt and two spoonfuls of corn starch. Serve with r and cream.

CAKES.—One quart of flour with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder mixed it, add a tablespoonful of lard or butter, e salt and water enough to make the
. Bake in a hot oven twenty minutes.

GER SNAPS.—Boil slowly for fifteen utes two cups of molasses; add one-half of butter, cool and add two spoonfuls old water, one heaping teaspoonful of , one teaspoonful of ginger and flour to

FRIED ONIONS.—Have frying pan hot, put a good sized piece of butter (or meat fry-after frying meat), put in the onions
; sprinkle with pepper and salt, and in just a little hot water, cover closely, ook twenty minutes; add a teaspoonful flour in a little milk and when it boils it dy to serve.

CHOCOLATE CUSTARDS.—One fourth of a of chocolate, one pint of boiling water, eggs, one quart of milk, one-half cup of sugar, two teaspoons of vanilla. Dis-the chocolate in a very little milk, stir the boiling water and boil three min-
. When nearly cold add the beaten
, stir into the milk, flavor and pour in cups, set in boiling water and bake

CHOPPED PASTE.—One quart of flour, cups of butter, one tablespoonful of ar and one-half tablespoonful of salt; do wash the butter; put all together in a pping tray and chop until thoroughly ined; then add cold water (or iced water) make a stiff paste, which will take less an a cup of water; roll out once and ce in the ice chest to harden.

RIBBON CAKE.—Two cups sugar, one cup tter, four eggs, one cup milk, two and half cups flour, three teaspoons of bakg powder. Take two-thirds of this and in layers, and to the third remaining one tablespoonful molasses, one cup chopped raisins, one-half cup currants one piece citron chopped fine, teaspoon each of cinnamon, cloves and nutmeg. Put the layers together with jelly or thin frosting.

BAKED APPLE PUDDING.—Fill a three-quart earthen dish with pared and quartered apples: sprinkle on these one cup of sugar, a little cinnamon, fresh butter the size of a small egg and one-half cup of water; cover and bake thirty minutes. Roll a piece of chopped paste into a strip about two inches wide that will reach around the pudding dish; roll the remainder to cover the dish. Take the pudding dish from the oven, slip the strip of paste between the apple and the dish and put on the top crust; return to the oven and bake one hour Serve with creamy sauce.

RIBBON JELLY.—Ribbon jelly is made by pouring different colored jellies, one over the other in layers. Yellow jelly from lemons, oranges, red fruit jellies, dark jellies from blackberry juice, green jelly, made by putting in a little spinach juice to white currant jelly, or any light jelly. Crimson jelly, made by using a little cochineal powder. Each layer or ribbon of jelly must be very hard or frozen before the other is poured in. After it is frozen it is cut in slices. It can be turned out of the mold whole on a fine stand, to show the different ribbons, and cut on the table.

Whole fruits, such as strawberries, currants, slices of pineapples, oranges, etc., can be frozen in layers of jelly. Turn it upside down upon a stand and serve.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. Henn is so thorough a sailor, and so fond of the Galatea as a home, that she had been ashore but four times since April. Her diversions are fishing and training a pet raccoon which she caught in Florida.

Mr. George W. Childs, of Philadelphia, put his hand into a pocket-book which seems always open and full, and organized practical relief on his own account for sick children, during the terrible period of heat, by sending them to the sea-shore.

The London Times announces that photography in colors is now an accomplished fact; that after three years of study, experiment, and chemical research, a Mr. Mayall, of New Bond Street, has produced several colored photographic portraits, without the aid of hand-work or brush, which possess the brilliancy and delicacy of highly finished minatures in oils.

When the Corean revolt took place about two years ago Mr. Kim Ok-kun, a prominent liberal politician of Corea, was banished to the Ogasawara Islands, after having vainly sought exile in Japan. Recently it was proposed by his friends to raise subscriptions in order that he might escape from his island prison. Now it is understood that some generous patron has furnished him funds to come to the United States.

Ex-Railroad Commissioner Cone is one of the great landholders of California. His possessions in Tehama County include 70,000 acres, and one may ride for twelve miles along the Sacramento River without leaving his lands. He has several thousand acres in wheat, and about 1400 acres in various kinds of fruit. This great domain he oversees in person, as he understands thoroughly every branch of farming and fruit-growing.

The wife of the Viceroy Li, of China, recently paid a visit to the foreign hospital for women at Tien-Tsin, and showed much sympathy with the poor patients. When she came out her chair was surrounded by crowds of wretched-looking women and girls who begged for alms. Lady Li ordered her attendants to distribute money to all alike. The incident is regarded as noteworthy, as Chinese dignitaries heretofore have paid little heed to charity.

Some fivescore of representative men and women of both hemispheres bear testimony in Mr. Edward W. Bok's Memorial Book to their sense of the worth and influence of Henry Ward Beecher. A more remarkable cloud of witnesses, and one whose elemants differed so widely in all things else save their affinity for Beecher, could hardly have been brought together. It will help posterity to understand the many-sided character of the great pastor of Plymouth Church to have these sympathetic tributes to his memory illustrate his life.

Recently a fund of £1000 was raised in England for the relief and comfort of Father Damien, the priest who has charge of the Hawaiian leper settlement at Molokai, and who has a fallen victim to the dreaded disease. When the money was received the father expended it for clothing and supplies for the lepers under his charge. This has led to an inquiry into the disposition of the government appropriation for the lepers. The last Legislature voted $100,000 for this purpose, and last year $34,000 of this sum was spent. As there are only about 700 lepers, this would seem to be ample for their maintenance.

King John and the Italians.

The news comes from Aden that King John is tired of penning the Italians up in Massowah, and he desires the mediation of Queen Victoria in the quarrel that he and his white neighbors are engaged in. King John evidently expected to scare the Italians away from the Red Sea coast, but after they had been there two years, and had repeatedly announced that they were there to stay, they could not leave at the command of a half savage prince without appearing ridiculous, and so they have been preparing to fight it out. They have been free to retreat by sea, but on the land side they have for some months been cooped up in Massowah, and with fresh supplies of troops and munitions they are now supposed to be preparing to scatter King John's dusky soldiery now camped round the little neck of land that joins Massowah to the mainland.

The Italians have repeatedly declared that they have no covetous designs upon any part of Abyssinia. If they can convince King John of their sincerity it is likely that he will leave them alone to work out their destiny in East Africa, a destiny which offers no alluring prospect of any speedy returns for the immense outlay they are making.

When a bashful young man finds himself in company where there is a creamy infant of ten months, the expression of his face, when the proud mother thrusts her tender offspring at him with the remark, "Baby, kiss the nice gentleman," may be imagined, but it cannot be counterfeited.

SCIENTIFIC AND USEFUL.

A warm bath will often be found a valuable measure in cases of sleeplessness.

Recent investigations have dispelled the common belief that freezing purifies water.

An ink that will write on glass is made from ammonium fluoride dissolved in water and mixed with three times its weight of barium sulphate.

By careful experimenting M. Bloch has determined that it takes 1.72 of a second longer to hear a sound than to see a sight, and 1.21 of a second longer to feel a touch than to see a sight.

Dr. Doremus says that the lightest tissues can be rendered uninflammable by dipping them in a solution of phosphate of ammonia in water. It will be found impossible to set the fabric so treated on fire.

The buzzing sound of a locomotive boiler at times is caused by the circulation of the water in the boiler, and only occurs when the pressure of steam is comparatively low. At higher pressures this sound will not be heard.

Malleable brass is made by forming an alloy of thirty-three parts of copper and twenty-five of zinc. The copper is first melted in a crucible which is loosely covered, after which the zinc, which has been purified by sulphur, is added.

M. Vallin, a French chemist, has invented an improved kind of cement, possessing durability and the cold appearance of marble, so that a wall set with it not only becomes impermeable to moisture, but can be polished and made beautiful.

One who claims to have tried it says that rubber may be fastened to iron by means of a paint composed of powdered shellac steeped in about ten times its weight in concentrated ammonia. It should be allowed to stand three or four weeks before being used.

Doors formed of two thick paper boards, stamped and molded into panels and glazed together with glue and potash, and then rolled through heavy rollers, are coming into use. They are better than wood in that they will not shrink, swell, crack or wrap. They are made waterproof with a mixture.

Printed matter may be copied on any paper of an absorbent nature by dampening the surface with a weak solution of acetate of iron and pressing in an ordinary copying press. Old writing may also be copied on unsized paper if wet with a weak solution of sulphate of iron mixed with a simple solution of sugar syrup.

A correspondent of the Engineer mentions that two telegraph operators, a male and female, both otherwise healthy subjects, are being treated in Berlin for a newly developed ailment, namely, the dropping off, one after another, of the finger nails. Professor Mendal attributes this curious affection as the result of the constant jar caused by hammering and pushing with the finger ends in working the Morse system of telegraphy.

VARIETIES.

Very few people know that, as the violet was the chosen flower of the Napoleons, the scarlet carnation was the chosen flower of the Stuarts. To this day mysterious hands yearly deposit at Frascati and in St. Peter's at Rome, where lie the remains of the Cardinal of York and other members of the House of Stuart, wreaths of scarlet carnations.

Blankets manufactured by the Navajo Indian women of Arizona are sought as curiosities by tourists. The squaws card the wool, spin the yarn, and weave the blankets with the aid of sharp-pointed sticks. It requires, according to the size of the blanket, from thirty days to four months' time to make one. Hence they are very valuable. So skilfully and firmly are the blankets made that they will shed water for twenty-four hours before they will leak.

This is the way in which sparrows are made useful in Germany. Long troughs, placed under the eaves of houses, are occupied by the sparrows in building their nests. When the young are hatched, and the mother goes away to procure food, wire screens are placed over them, with interstices large enough to permit the passage of food in to the young, but too small to allow them to escape. As soon as they are large and plump they are killed, and make a very acceptable article of food.

The emu appears to be curiously exceptional as regards domestic division of labor. Mr. Alfred Bennett, who has studied the habits of these birds, states that the hen begins laying about the end of October or beginning of November, and in about six weeks completes the brood of twenty or more eggs. In the meantime the cock begins to sit, and the eggs subsequently laid are deposited at his side by the hen; he then stretches forth his foot and draws them under him. He not only hatches the eggs, and does all the subsequent nursing, but has to thrash his wife continually, as she attacks him furiously, and would apparently kill the chicks if she could get at them.

Negroes in England.

Colored people are apparently very popular in England. There does not seem to be any prejudice against them on account of their color. There are not many colored people in London. The few that I have seen from time to time are invariably in the company of white people and association with them upon a footing of perfect equality. I saw the other day upon Regent street a negro girl, black as a coal, walking along leaning upon the arm of a fashionable, well-dressed Englishman, who seemed perfectly charmed and contented with his dusky companion. In the same way I have seen white women, respectable in appearance and dress, walking in public leaning upon the arm of negroes. Frederick Douglas, when he was here, said there did not seem to be any prejudice in England against the negro on account of his color. The other day I visited the Temple; there I found a negro reading up for an examination. I was told that his color would not stand in his way in the slightest degree, when he came to be examined for admission as a member of the English bar.—Correspondent of N. Y. World.

The bull-dog in the play, whose part was to seize the villain by the throat and hold on for dear life, succeeded the other night in Buffalo in dragging from under the player's collar the piece of liver which coaxed him on, and, taking it before the footlights, he sat down and quietly ate it, while the villain escaped.

FOREIGN NOTES.

Experiments have been made to light the British busses with electricity.

Since the accident in the Theatre Comique, the provincial theatres in France have only empty galleries.

He had been calling on her regularly for a long time, but would never state the object of his visits. Last night he mustered up sufficient courage. "Will you be my wife?" he asked, simply and earnestly. "Yes, Henry, I will," she replied, all in a tremor of blushing excitement. "Ah, thanks," he said. "I bet Charlie Brown a packet of cigarettes that you would say 'yes.'"

The priest of Canicatti, a large town in the province of Girgenti, Sicily, recently caused to appear beside him in the pulpit a young man whose face was blacked, whose head was furnished with two large horns, and who had a long tail from the end of which crackers went off. The priest informed his flock that this figure was the devil, and a great panic ensued. Women and children present at this unseemly comedy were injured in the crush.

In Algeria there is a small stream which the chemistry of nature has converted into true ink. It is formed by the union of rivulets, one of which is very strongly impregnated with iron, while the other, meandering through a peat marsh, imbibes gallic acid, another ingredient in the formation of ink. Letters and other manuscript matters are satisfactorily written with this singular natural compound of iron and gallic acid.

Those who know Africa unite in discrediting the story of Stanley's death; but popular feeling is that there is likely to be something in the rumor. A strange part of it is that a report of Stanley's death was being whispered around in city circles on Wednesday, whereas Beuter's dispatch from St. Thomas containing the statement did not reach London until Thursday. It is recalled with an indefinable sense of mystery, that on three previous occasions fatalities in Africa have been known somehow in the city of London before the press news arrived in the regular channels—the death of Prince Imperial in 1879, the shooting of James Carey in 1883, and the death of Gen. Gordon in 1885. How the intelligence is thus obtained is a secret, and this is probably at the bottom of the fear now that, despite all the maps and the explanations of African experts, there is something in the report.

The cholera in Sicily and Calabria is of a more virulent type apparently than Italy has known since 1884. Thus far only sporadic, incomplete reports are obtainable, but, as the spread of the infected area is incessant, we are likely soon to hear a good deal of it. The strongest phase of the thing is that it should reappear for the third consecutive year, practically on the same territory, which hitherto has been unheard of. Physicians in London are growing nervous about the possibility of the plague getting a foothold in the metropolis, owing to the unprecedentedly favorable conditions. During the heated term of the past six weeks the weekly deaths from diarrhea in the London district have gone up by leaps from 9 to 312 of this latter number 265 being infants under 1 year of age. The Lancet points out that one of the surest precursors of cholera in a given district is the tendency to diarrheaic fatality, and urges the utmost vigilance.

Russia now follows Germany in rescinding the order forbidding the exportation of horses so that the last remaining sign of a Spring war scare vanishes. As for the complications which induced that scare, they seem about the same as they were Prince Ferdinand continues not to occupy his alleged throne in Bulgaria with success and the Germans and French keep up their war of arrests on the frontiers with great pertinacity. The latest series of seizures in Germany are of more than usual importance. Eight Alsacian soldiers in the Mainty garrison have been arrested. Correspondence with M. Derouledes, of the Patriotic League was said to have been found on them. If this is the case the men of course will be shot. A proceeding which makes something of a stir is the mysterious rumor from Metz that a party of German officers from the garrison there went in citizens' clothes to Nancy on the 14th to watch the French fete review of troops, and nothing has been heard of them since. The belief in Metz is that they were recognized and imprisoned, but nothing of that sort is reported from Nancy.

Cool.

Partly civilized countries carry out, with perfect composure, the most revolting methods of punishment. It can hardly be subject for wonder that the office of executioner has become one to be generally loathed, when we consider what it sometimes involves. The Pall Mall Gazette gives the following account of the interview of a traveller in China with the three imperial executioners:

Through our guide, we told the head executioner that we wished to see the instruments of his calling, and thereon he produced a short, very heavy, two handed sword and a long knife. We naturally put the question, "How do you use this sword? Where is the block?"

"We don't use a block. We make the prisoners kneel in two rows facing one another, and bending their heads down. Then I take the sword and chop one on each side, and the heads fall off; so on, till they're all done, as you'd switch the tops off green weeds with your walking stick."

"But you don't always chop off a head with one blow?"

"Always."

"What is the knife for?"

"For the ling che, or 'death by many cuts.' We tie the culprit who is condemned to this death to a cross, and we commence by cutting off the eye lids, ears, nose and so on, ending by sticking the knife into the heart. The cuts vary in number from eight to hundred and twenty, according to the heinousness of the culprit's crime."

"How many persons have you executed in a day?"

"I have chopped twenty heads off in two minutes."

"Gentlemen, give twenty cents each cumshaw" (a synonym for the Egyptian baksheesh) "to the executioners," said the guide, which we gladly did, to escape the staring of the head butcher's eyes, which had a villainous cast; and so ended our interview with these high executioners of the great Chinese Empire.

VOODOOISM.

Some of the Strange Beliefs of the Southern Negro.

In spite of the constant intercourse of the negro with the white race the former has never relinquished the fetishism that clings to its Christianity and forms a strange compound of religion and superstition. What a negro does believe is hard to tell. No one ever knows and he never clearly understands his belief himself. Signs and omens, incantations and superstitious charms peculiar to the savage have been amalgamated into their religious observations to such an extent that their worship appears to be a Christian simplicity of faith—their real belief a constant reliance to the fate expressed in every unexpected accident. Over the door of every log cabin that stands in a cornfield or tobacco patch is seen a rusty horse shoe suspended from a nail, and you rarely meet a negro man who does not carry in his vest pocket the left hind foot of a rabbit as a kind of mascot. For a hen to crow is the sign of death in the family and the ambitious fowl generally ends up by gracing the dinner table If a rooster stands with his head in the door and crows, it is the sign of the coming of a sister; if his tail is first it means news of a death. A rabbit crossing one's path entails misfortune unless the charm be broken by an immediate return home. To leave a row of seed half planted is bad luck; to pick up a pin or to put one's stockings on wrong side out is good fortune. The appearance of bubbles on the surface of a cup of coffee means a present of money. For the palm of the hand to itch, if one "scratch it on wood, get something good." If the nose itches a visitor is soon coming; if on the left side a gentleman; on the right a lady.

An important personage among the negroes, and one who holds about the same position as the medicine man of the Indians, is the reputed conjurer. She is generally an old woman living alone in her cabin, surrounded by her powerful charming working herbs, and is greatly feared by her neighbors. Like the witches in Macbeth, she is supposed to concoct strange messes from outlandish ingredients, to be able to put anyone under a spell, or induce a lingering disease and death. There is no wonder, consequently, that she is an object of fear and veneration.

One of her spells is given by administering the dried head of a scorpion, which being taken unconsciously in food generates a new species of the living animals in the body of the unhappy victim. Some of the charms are supposed to induce sleeplessness, others the withering up of a limb, and others strange diseases. One of the most potent is that of taking the dust from a foot-print, mixing it with pepper and some unknown powders, then replacing the earth on the spot from which it was taken. It is said that one treated thus is unable to stay long at one house, but Salathiel-like, wanders from one place to another constantly.

Negroes have a great respect for Sunday, which is inspired partly, I suspect, from their dread of doing any work on that day. To cross one's legs or sing on Sunday is regarded as a heinious crime; but to "lift" chickens from a neighboring henroost is an insignificant offense. I remember hearing of a band of colored men who "got religion" and had to relinquish music as sinful. Among the converts at a recent revival were many boys who were afterwards found to be addicted to the incurable vice of playing ball and marbles. Shocked at such evidences of depravity in his flock the sable preacher hurled against them the anathemas of excommunication. The experiences of those who get religion are often wild tales of imaginary adventures in Heaven of the lower reigion, and surpass Baron Munchausen for lofty flights of imagination among the improbabilities.

When a camp meeting is in progress the nogroes are in a state of great excitement and flock from miles around the country to hear the preacher's passionate harangue.

When worked up to the highest pitch of religious enthusiasm they are often frantic from excitement and continue in this state until they fall from exhaustion. On awaking from the fainting fit brought on by nervous prostration they relate the wonderful tales of their adventures in supernatural worlds.

Taken all in all, the religion of the average corn-field darkey in the Southern States is as strange a compound as one would wish to see.

Life on the Moon.

There is reason for thinking that the moon is not absolutely airless, and, while it has no visible bodies of water, its soil may, after all, not be entirely arid and desiccated. There are observations which hint at visible changes in certain spots that could possibly be caused by vegetation, and there are other observations which suggest the display of electric luminosity in a rarefied atmosphere covering the moon. To declare that no possible form of life can exist under the conditions prevailing upon the lunar surface would be saying too much, for human intelligence can not set bounds to creative power. Yet, within the limits of life, such as we know them, it is probably safe to assert that the moon is a dead and deserted world. In other words, if a race of beings resembling ourselves, or resembling any of our contemporaries in terrestrial life, ever existed upon the moon, they must long since have perished. That such beings may have existed is possible, particularly if it is true, as generally believed, that the moon once had a comparatively dense atmosphere and water upon its surface, which have now, in the process of cooling of the lunar globe, been withdrawn into its interior. It certainly does not detract from the interest with which we study the rugged and beautiful scenery of the moon to reflect that if we could visit those ancient sea-bottoms, or explore those glittering mountains, we might, perchance find there some remains or mementoes of a race that flourished, and perhaps was all gathered again to its fathers, before man appeared upon the earth.

Now is the time of year when Love's young dream gets jolted all out of shape because the hammock lets go.

A young lady was married the other day and a newspaper account of the event was headed: "Planned in July." "Attached in August" will be the fate of those who come later in the season. Likewise, some will be "Spliced in September," "Orange-flowered in October," "Nuptialised in November" and "Doubled in December."

Jas. S. Freeborn,

—M. D., Ch. M.; L. K. & Q. C. P. I.—

Doctor of Medicine and Master of Surgery Victoria. Univ. Licentiate of King's and Queen's College of Physicians in Ireland. Member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Ont. Formerly acting Surgeon of B. Battery, R. C. A. Quebec. Late resident of the Rotunda Hospitals, (Lying-in & Gynæcological) Dublin.

—OFFICE—

STEPHEN'S DRUG STORE.

Drs. Sproule & Brodie,

—PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS,—

MARKDALE.

DR. SPROULE'S office Turner's Drug Store

DR. BRODIE'S office Mathews block.

P. McCullough,

BARRISTER, SOLICITOR, &c

OFFICE—OVER McFARLAND'S STORE,

MARKDALE.

Money to Loan.

MASSON & MASSON,

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, &c.

OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block, Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week.

J. MASSON, Q. C. S. MASSON. W. MASSON.

N. B.—Private and Company's funds to invest at from 6 to 8 per cent

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

WILLIAM STUART,

KIMBERLEY,

Issuer of Marriage Licences. Money to Loan on Real Estate at low rates.

A few Farms for sale. Terms easy.

NOTICE.

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.

will visit Markdale for the practice of his profession on Thursday and Friday following the first Monday in each month, and at Flesherton the following day, Saturday.

MARKDALE HOUSE,

MARKDALE. - - ONT.

J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

ISAAC STINSON.

Builder and Contractor

In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.

Estimates given. All work guaranteed.

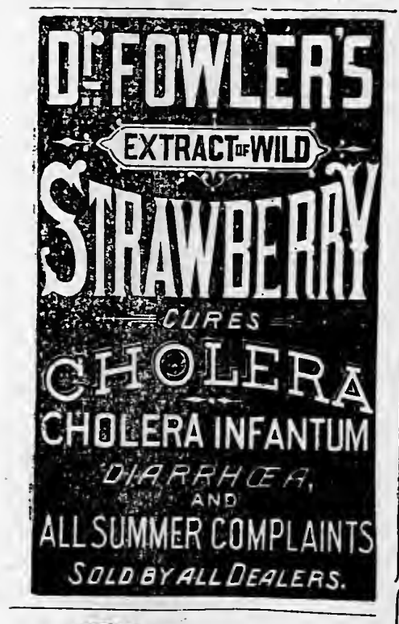
Orders by mail promptly attended to.

329 Residence, MARKDALE.

W. C. RICHARDS,

BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT, Markdale.

124ly



R. J. SPROULE,

FLESHERTON.

Conveyancer, Appraiser, Valuator and Money Lender. Deeds, Mortgages, Leases and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice; Charges very low. Apply to

R. J. SPROULE,

Money Lender & Postmaster, Flesherton.

HAVE YOU

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Jaundice, Headache, Dizziness, Pain in the Back, Costiveness, or any disease arising from a deranged liver, DR. CHASE'S LIVER CURE will be found a sure and certain remedy.

NATURE'S REMEDY

The unqualified success of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure in Liver Complaint rests solely with the fact that it is compounded from nature's well-known liver regulators, MANDRAKE AND DANDELION, combined with many other invaluable roots, barks and herbs, having a powerful effect on the Kidneys, Stomach, Bowels and Blood. 500,000 SOLD

Over one-half million of Dr. Chase's Recipe Books were sold in Canada alone. We want every man, woman and child who is troubled with Liver Complaint to try this excellent remedy.

SOMETHING NEW. GIVEN AWAY FREE

Wrapped around every bottle of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure is a valuable Household Medical Guide and Recipe Book (84 pages), containing over 200 useful recipes pronounced by medical men and druggists as invaluable, and worth ten times the price of the medicine.

TRY CHASE'S CATARRH CURE. A safe and positive remedy. Price, 25 cents.

TRY CHASE'S KIDNEY AND LIVER PILLS. 25 cts. per box.

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS

E. GOMARSON & CO., Sole Agents, Bradford

Markdale Roller Mill.

FARMERS HAVING No. 1 WHEAT and preferring flour from their own wheat, can get it by bringing twenty bushels or more.

Flour always on Hand

Flour $3.00 to $4.30 per. bbl.

SHORTS, per ton - $12.00

BRAN, " - 10.00

The highest market price paid for Fall and Spring wheat.

J. W. FORD.

Pubic Notice.

To all whom it may concern.

I R. L. Stephen the Druggist of Markdale have been appointed agent for JOHNSON'S celebrated Tonic and nervine. JOHNSON'S little liver Pills, and JOHNSON'S all healing White Ointment. The nervine is the very best in the market, in all diseases caused by poverty of blood, for Nervousness, Hysteria, and the PALENESS of Complexion so often noticed in female's, loss of appetite and general debility. In conjunction wth the Liver Pills, it is he very best for all diseases arrising from Topid liver or bad stomach

The White Ointment is the very best in the market for Salt Rheume, Barbers Itch, Pimples, Chafs, Burns, Scalds, and all Skin diseases of a scrofulous nature. Try these fine remedies and you will not be disappointed.

For sale at R. L. STEPHEN'S the druggist Markdale, Ont.

WM. G. GUTHRIE,

Plain & Ornamental Plasterer

MARKDALE.

Arches, Cornices, Centre Flowers, and all kinds of plain and ornamental plastering executed at cheapest rates. Calsomining Lime Washing and Repairs promptly attended to.

365

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of

School Furniture.

Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness, wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.

181 ANDREW McGILL.

MONEY TO LOAN.

ON real estate security, at low rate of interest, no commission charged. Business Strictly Confidential,

J. S. BLACK,

190 Pomona, P. O.

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT No. 24, con. 4, N. D. R. Glenelg, 100 acres, will be sold cheap and on easy terms of payment, for further particulars apply on the premises, or by letter to

J. S. BLACK,

190-tf. Pomona P. O.

Markdale Woolen Mill.

Custom Carding, Weaving, Fulling, Dyeing and cloth dressing, done in a workmanlike manner and on very short notice.

First Class Cotton Warp

supplied at the lowest possible rates.

A call solicited.

Terms strictly cash or wool.

Sept. 28, 1886 F. J. RITCHIE.

IT IS A WELL KNOWN FACT

—THAT—

McCOLL'S

"LARDINE,"

is the best known, and most reliable MACHINE OIL in the Dominion; Farmer's, Thresher's and Mill Owner's, will find it decidedly to their advantage to insist upon getting the "Genuine Lardine" when they ask for it, owing to so much inferior oil being sold under the same name by unscrupulous dealers. We are the sold manufacturers of the "Genuine Lardine" every barrel branded.

McCOLL BRO'S, & CO.

For sale in Markdale at Haskett Bro's Hardware Store. 347-73

British Worm Syrup!

British Worm Syrup!!

THE BEST FOR CHILDREN

—AT—

H. PARKER'S,

DURHAM.

Collingwood and Georgin Bay Line.

Royal Mail,

In connection with the Northern and North-Western R'ys, and the Grand Trunk R'y.

Str. PACIFIC, Captain P. M. Campbell.
Str. ATLANTIC, Captain R. D. Foote.
Str. NORTHERN BELLE, Capt. W. J. Bassett.

The fine new Steamers "PACIFIC" & "ATLANTIC" will run as follows during the season (weather permitting.)

Leaving Collingwood at 1 p. m.; Meaford at 3 p. m.; Owen Sound at 8 p. m.; and Wiarton at 11:45 p. m.; every

Wednesday and Saturday.

For Killarney, Manitowaning, Little Current, Kagawong, Gore Bay, Spanish River, Serpent River, Algoma Mills, Blind River, Thessalon, Bruce Mines, Hilton, St. Joseph's Island, Garden River, and Sault St. Marie.

The Saturday Steamer only will call at Cockburn Island.

MACKINAW.—During the summer season the above steamers will continue the trip on to the Island of Mackinaw making six full days of a round trip at a cost of $12.00 only including meals and berth.

For information as to freight and fares. Appply to any Agent of the above Railways, the Pursers on board the steamers, or to the Great Northern Transit Co., Collingwood.

THOS. LONG, CHAS. CAMERON,
Secretary. Manager

New Tailor.

Will Stoddart, late of England and Jersy City, U. S. begs to inform the citizens of MARKDALE and surrounding community, that he has opened a TAILORING SHOP over Mr. W. J. McFarland's Store, where he is prepared to do all work entrusted to him in the Latest and Nobbiest Styles; as I will inspect all work before leaving the Shop, customers may rely on having work turned out first-class in every particular; trusting that I may receive a fair share of the public patronage

I remain,
Faithfully your's,
WILL STODDART.

Markdale, March 14th, 1887.

BE SURE & GET YOUR

PUMPS,

—FROM—

J. T. QUINN,

MARKDALE,

He makes as good a pump as there is in the market, and at the lowest possible prices, besides it is so convenient for getting repairs besides when buying from a distance.

Have some style about you and support home enterprise by buying from Quinn.

WE WANT!

100 GOOD MEN at once, to sell for the Fonthill Nurseries (largest in Canada over 465 acres) steady employment and no lost time, liberal commission or salary, best advantages; splended outfit furnished free any pushing man can succeed. Apply for terms to,

STONE & WELLINGTON,
Toronto, On

PROF. LOW'S SULPHUR SOAP is a delightful toilet luxury as well as a good curative for skin disease,

FARM FOR SALE.

Being lot 5, south east quarter of 6 and west half 6, con. 11, Euphrasia, will be sold cheap and on easy terms, also Saw Mill on lot 5, in good running order. For further particulars apply to

JAMES STINSON,

358-61* Markdale

WEAVING.

Having returned to Markdale, in order to be more convenient for my customers, I beg to announce that I am now prepared to do all kinds of Custom Weaving. Residence old stand, opposite Presbyterian Church.

318 ARCH. BOYD.

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT 181 con 3 west of T. & S, Rd. Artemesia, 50 acres, about 20 acres clear of stumps and stones, balance good hardwood bush. Five miles from Markdale and four from Flesherton. For further particulars apply to A. S. Thompson, Flesherton P. O. or J. J. Thompson, Orilla.

342-ft

The Markdale Standard

Is issued every Thursday, by

C. W. RUTLEDGE, Markdale, Ont.,

TERMS—$1 per year in advance; $1.50 if not paid within six months.

Professional and business cards one inch space and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3 MO.
Whole column	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
Half column	27 00	15 00	10 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00	6 00
Two inch space	7 00	4 00
Three inch space	10 00	5 00

Casual advertisements 8 cents per line first insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.

Editorial notices, or notices in local column 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents each subsequent insertion.

Stray animals &c, advertised 3 weeks for $1

No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid except at the option of the publisher.

JOB PRINTING.

THE STANDARD office has a splendid equipment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. All orders filled with dispatch.

Markdale Church Directory.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

Services every Sabbath at 10:30 a. m. Sabbath School at 2:30 p. m. Prayer Meeting every Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. Rev. A. Wilson, Pastor; A. McFarland, S. S. Superintendent.

CHRIST CHURCH.

Services every Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p m. Rev. Jas. Ward, Incumbent. Sabbath School 2:30. W. J. Ford, Superintendent.

METHODIST CHURCH.

Services every Sunday at 10:30 a, m and 7 p. m. Sunday School at 2:30. Prayer Meeting every Thursday evening from 8 to 9, Rev. Geo. Buggin Pastor; G. S. Bowes. S. S. Superintendent. Ladies' Aid in connection; Mrs. T Hill, Secretary.

Strangers and visitors always welcome

Parties desiring sittings will apply to C. W. Rutledge, Pew Steward.

Society Directory.

Markdale C. O. O. F. No. 78. meets every alternate Monday evening at 8 o'clock in their Hall, Rae's block. Visiting brethren welcome.

Markdale A. O. U. W. No. 141 meets in their Hall, Rae's block, every alternate Monday evening at o'clock. A visit from brethren of neighboring lodges solicited.

MARKDALE L. O. L. No. 1045 meets in their Hall on Friday on or before full moon each month. Thos. Elliott, Master; W. J. Blakely, Secretary.

Victoria R. B. Preceptory, No. 282, Meets in Lodge Room of Markdale L. O. L. No. 1045, first Friday in each month. Visiting Sir Knights always welcome. Jas. Brodie W. P.; Thos. Elliott, Registrar.

Post-Office Directory.

MARKDALE.

The P. O. will be opened from 8 o'clock a. m. to 7 p. m. every working day.

Mails closed as follows, viz:

C. P. R., going North, 11:40 a m, and 7 p m
" " South, 3:30 p m, and 7 p m

TRAVERSTON.

Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday 12:30 noon.

HARKAWAY.

Friday, 12:30 noon.

For registered letters and money orders, fifteen minutes earlier than above. The P. O. will be open on Holidays from 9 to 9:30 a. m., and half an hour after mails arrive.

W. J. MCFARLAND, P. M.

Directory.

MARKDALE VILLAGE OFFICIALS.

Police Trustees—E. Davis, A. Turner, and S. J. Coleman.

Public School Trustees—B. Coleman, J. Lyons, W. A. Brown. B. Coleman, Sec.

COUNTY OFFICIALS.

Judge, H. McPherson, Owen Sound.
Deputy-Judge, S. J. Lane, Owen Sound.
Sheriff, C. H. Moore, Owen Sound.
Clerk of Peace, W. Armstrong, O. Sound.
Clerk, John Gale, Owen Sound.
Treasurer, S. J. Parker, Owen Sound.
County Warden, N. Reid, Owen Sound
Registrar, N., R. McKnight, "
" S., Thos. Lauder, Durham.
Revising Barrister, North, Judge McPherson, Owen Sound.
Revising Barrister, South & East, Judge Lane, Owen Sound.
M. P., North, Jas. Masson, Owen Sound.
M. P., East, T. S. Sproule, M.D., Markdale
M. P., South, Geo Landerkin, M. D., Hanover.
M. P. P., North, D. Creighton, Owen Sound
M. P. P., East, Capt. Rorke, Clarksburg.
M. P. P., South, John Blyth, Orchard.

DIVISION COURT CLERKS

No. 1. John Stephens, Owen Sound.
" 2. David Jackson, Durham.
" 3. Thos. Plunkett, Meaford.
" 4. Thos. J. Rorke, Heathcote.
" 5. J. W. Armstrong, Flesherton.
" 6. John McDonald, Chatsworth.

Monthly Fairs.

Orangeville—The second Thursday in each month.
Dundalk—Tuesday before Orangeville.
Flesherton—Monday before Orangeville.
Markdale—Saturday before Orangeville.
Durham—Third Tuesday in each month.
Chatsworth—Monday before Durham.
Holland Centre—Saturday before Chatsworth
Priceville—Monday before Durham.
Hanover—Monday before Durham.

COMMERCIAL U

Farmers asked to sink differences.

MEETING OF THE EXECUTIVE OF THE CENTRAL FARMERS' INSTITUTE—AN ORGANIZATION OF INSTITUTE ORGANIZATIONS PUSHED—AN OVERWHELMING EXPRESSION OF OPINION IN FAVOR OF COMMERCIAL UNION.

A meeting of the Executive of the Permanent Central Farmers of Ontario was held Thornbury at the Walker House. The following were present: Valancey E. Fuller, Hamilton, Donald Campbell, Nelson; J. H. Simcoe; James Cochrane, Kilsyth, Pettit, Grimsby, and T. Shaw, Elm.

The following resolutions were adopted:

"Resolved, that the secretary be instructed to issue a circular to the president secretary of each institute on our list, stating that at a meeting of the Executive committee held on the 4th of August it was the unanimous opinion of such committee each institute should defray the expenses their delegates at all annual or other or special meetings of the Central Farmers' Institute; and whereas, it is necessary to provide funds to defray the expenses of members of the Executive Committee attending meetings throughout the province also for printing and other sundry expenses, the Executive Committee recommend that each institute pay into the treasury the sum of $12 to meet such expenses exclusive of the expenses of next annual meeting, and that all such institutes having paid $12 be entitled to representation at such annual meeting. It is also resolved that the amount payable by each institute be paid not later than February 11th.

ANNUAL MEETING OF INSTITUTES.

"Resolved, that each institute be required to hold its annual meeting between the 1st January and the 5th February in each year, in order that there may be uniformity in that at such annual meetings delegates be appointed to attend the annual convention of the Permanent Central Farmers' Institute to be held on the first Tuesday in March, 1888, each institute being entitled to send two deligates to the annual convention.

The President and Secretary were instructed a committee to press upon the Government of Ontario the advisability of increasing the annual grants to institutes from $30 to $50.

The President and Secretary were also appointed a committee to take steps to promote the organization of an institute in each electoral district in the province in which there has not been already formed.

Mr. Shaw, secretary, reported that over two institutes have passed resolutions in favor of Commercial Union, that those not held meetings, that five have not been heard from, and that one—that of Morrisburg—has passed a resolution against Commercial Union. The Morrisburg Institute will hold another meeting to consider this question.

On motion of Mr. Woolley, seconded by Mr. Cochrane, the Executive decided to take steps toward the formation of an organization in each electoral district in which Farmers' Institutes have by vote declared in favor of unrestricted reciprocity, or Commercial Union, between Canada and the United States.

FARMERS ASKED TO UNITE.

On motion of Mr. Cochrane, seconded by Mr. Campbell, the following resolution was adopted:—"That a circular be addressed by the president and secretary to each Institute which has declared in favor of the removal of all restrictions to trade between the United States and Canada, asking them to take steps to have all the farmers within their territory canvassed at the earliest possible moment to ascertain their views with reference to the above question, and that forms be furnished them by the secretary headed as follows:—"We believe that it is necessary for an agricultural community that those directly interested in agriculture unite firmly and cordially to promote their interests, and by so doing to help forward other legitimate interest in the country, since successful agriculture is the basis of true Canadian prosperity. We believe that the removal of all trade restrictions between the United States and Canada would be the greatest attainable boon for the farmers of Canada. We believe the occasion so urgent that men should sink minor differences and agree upon united action to obtain the boon of unrestricted reciprocity or Commercial Union. Therefore we agree to promote by our votes and influence in every legitimate manner the attainment of this object. Therefore we will, until unrestricted reciprocity shall be obtained, lay aside minor political differences and make its attainment the primary object in electing to our representative bodies only such men as will make it their essential platform" the numbers so pledging themselves to be forwarded to the secretary of the Permanent Central Farmers' Institute at the earliest convenience of the secretaries of the different institutes."

It was then ordered that 4,000 copies of the paper read by Mr. Shaw at the inaugural meeting of the Central Institute be printed and that 100 copies be sent free to each Institute reported to the secretary before September first.

The committee then adjourned.